WE THANK OUR IMITATORS! They've had their chance—and they've failed! Practically every Exhibitor in the country who has shown "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin," has been watching the course of our imitators to see if he should play the imitation—or repeat "The KAISER." Today that question is settled for all time. Our offices are being swamped with requests for repeat bookings. And a great percentage have already shown "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin," three—four—and five times! Surely, this is the most remarkable appreciation ever given any production in the history of Moving Pictures. Wire your nearest JEWEL Exchange for either your booking, or your repeat, without fail today.

COMING!
A Brand New CHARLIE CHAPLIN
Comedy
"TRIPLE TROUBLE"
NOT a Reissue—NOT a Rehash
But a NEW Film
ESSANAY-CHAPLIN BRAND
To the Exhibitor:
In "Triple Trouble" we are offering you a NEW Charlie Chaplin picture in its entirety. Essanay made this picture with Chaplin when he was at the zenith of his laugh-making powers.
Realizing that the value of Chaplin films were steadily increasing, Essanay held this film in its vaults until the most opportune time for release, which we believe to be NOW.
There has been only one NEW Chaplin film in several months. The public is eager for new Chaplin comedies and will welcome "Triple Trouble" with open arms.
Yours truly,
Essanay Film Mfg. Company
Geo. K. Spoor
President.

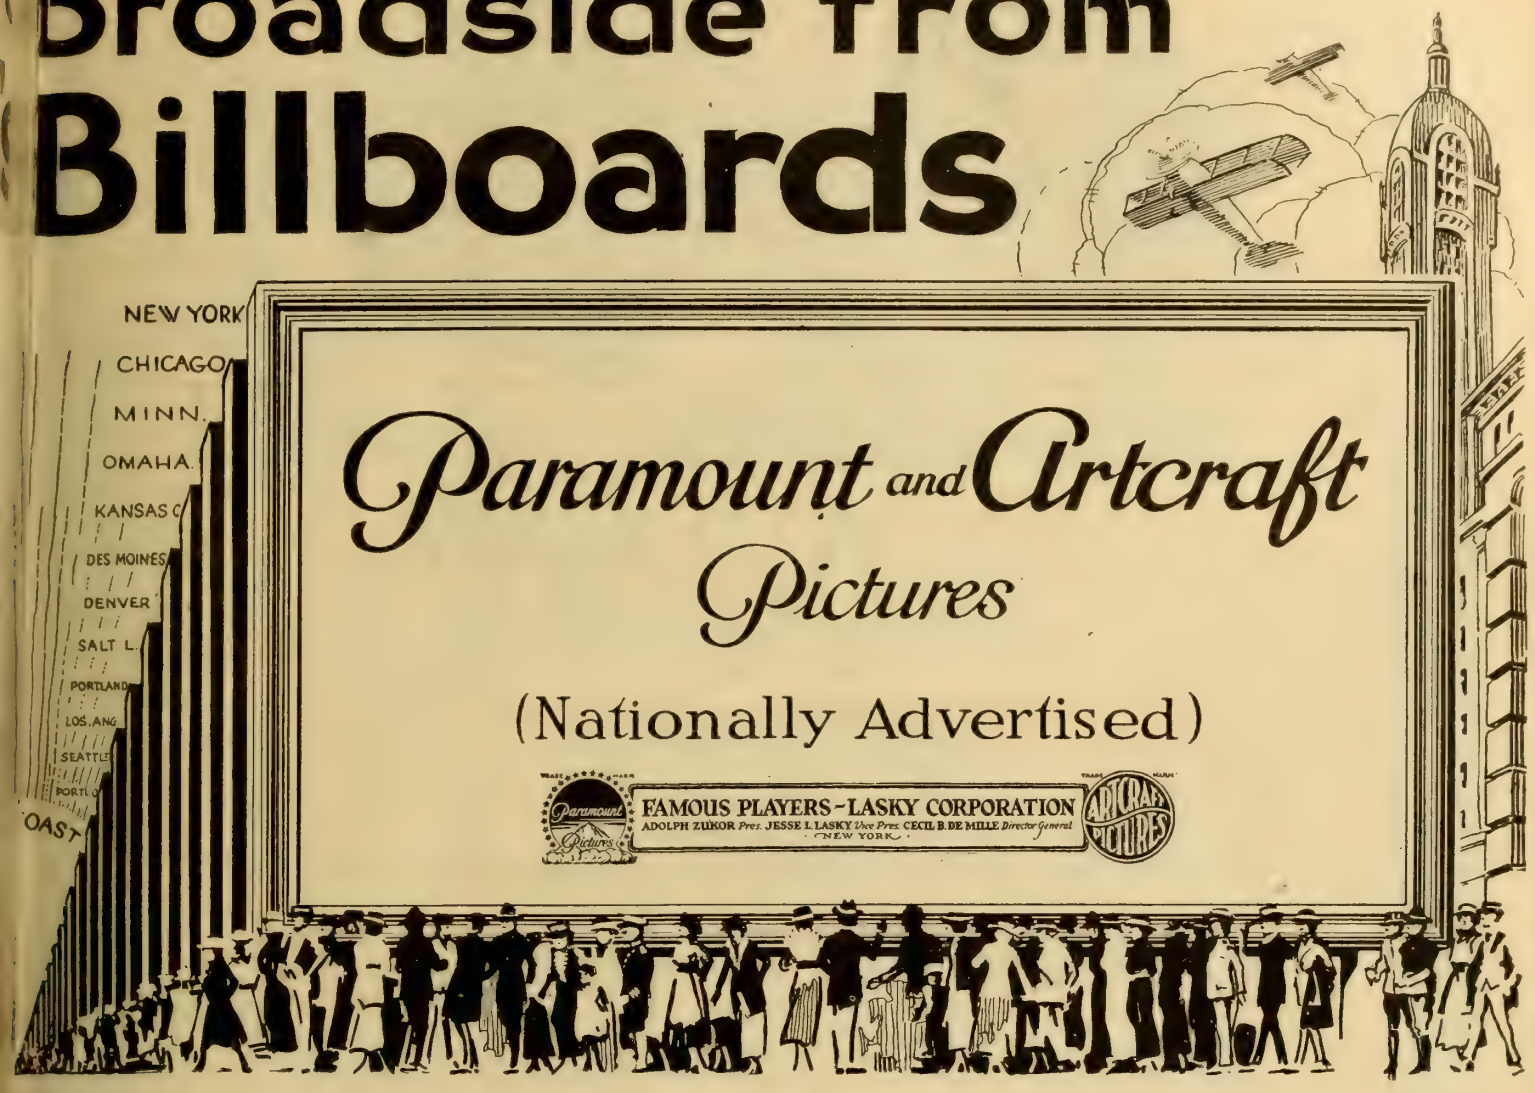
ARTCRAFT PICTURES

Advertised Like a Circus,



A MIGHTY four-color message is going to strike home this week in America's cities. It will sell Paramount and Artcraft Pictures to all men, women and children who have eyes to see them.

Billboards everywhere you look, in all the big towns, including such cities as:

Boston	Portland, Ore.	New York City	Spokane
Brooklyn	Buffalo	Philadelphia	Washington
Cincinnati	Detroit	Tacoma	Cleveland
Chicago	Minneapolis	Milwaukee	Kansas City
St. Paul	St. Louis	Des Moines	Omaha
Atlanta	New Orleans	Dallas	Salt Lake City
Denver	Butte	San Francisco	Los Angeles

They're going up now, to work for every exhibitor

Broadside from Billboards

From Coast to Coast

EVERY Paramount or Artcraft star will be there on the thousands of 24-sheet stands that will cover the country. Extra displays will shout from every corner the message that will send more crowds into the theatres that show Paramount and Artcraft Pictures—and say so.

They'll create a new, irresistible demand for Paramount and Artcraft Pictures. The crowds will be looking in front of your theatre for the trade-marks they see on the billboards.

If you're "There" the trade-marks will be there, displayed in your lobby, and the crowds —happy, contented, glad-they-came crowds will fill every seat in your theatre.

This is only ONE of the big things the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is doing to create added business for the exhibitor.

More coming! Watch for the announcements.

She was Independence itself; therefore when she and her father agreed to disagree she went to the big city to make her own living. Her father said "We'll make her marry the man we want her to by having her fall in love with him; we'll put him in the same house with her as fellow boarder and let proximity do the rest!" Did it work out that way? It did'nt, but she got enough excitement to last her the rest of her natural life!

This Ghost Carried a Gun!

He walked at the right time; he rescued the beautiful maiden in distress; he put the villains to flight; he adds the final knockout punch to a picture where the star, as always, shines, where comedy delightfully intermingles with forceful drama.

THE NAME OF EVERY THEATRE WHICH EXHIBITS

PERSHING'S CRUSADERS

THE FIRST U.S. OFFICIAL WAR FEATURE

will be published in this Roll and the United States Government Division of Films will present a handsome "Victory Screen Pledge" to its proprietors to be used for lobby display and as a memento of their patriotic action.

Names preceded by an asterisk (*) are the week's supply of newcomers on the Honor Roll.

If you have contracted for "Pershing's Crusaders," the name of your theatre positively will appear in this roll. It may be two, or even three weeks afterward, as it takes time to pass the contracts through various departments.

Little Talks with Foreign Buyers—No. 16

By

President

"ADVERTISE!"

"MADE IN AMERICA" on a film is to all the world a mark of excellence. So many thousands of dollars have been spent in improving American films—making them photographically perfect, technically correct and giving them the finest acting talent to be had—that foreign publics prefer American pictures to any other. And the American producers have been wise enough to go out and secure stories of international appeal, as against those with the old, strictly national appeal. Small wonder that YOUR audiences enjoy every one of them! A good American picture is as sure of success in Paraguay as in Pennsylvania! Foreign distributors should stimulate their exhibitors to give American films the utmost publicity available. Encourage them to put out plenty of advertising matter, to buy space liberally in the local press and to persuade the editors to run attractive departments of picture news. The big word in picture exhibiting today is, ADVERTISE!

ROPED!

Here is a new way to capture Western badmen—
Guaranteed successful if done as

Anita King
"The Outdoor Girl"

does it in her swift "Votes for Women" photo play entitled

"PETTICOATS and POLITICS"

a timely comedy-drama in which Miss King demonstrates the "superiority" of women by winning a "Sheriffship" and a husband as well

A clean and fascinating photo play that will dispel that "tired" feeling

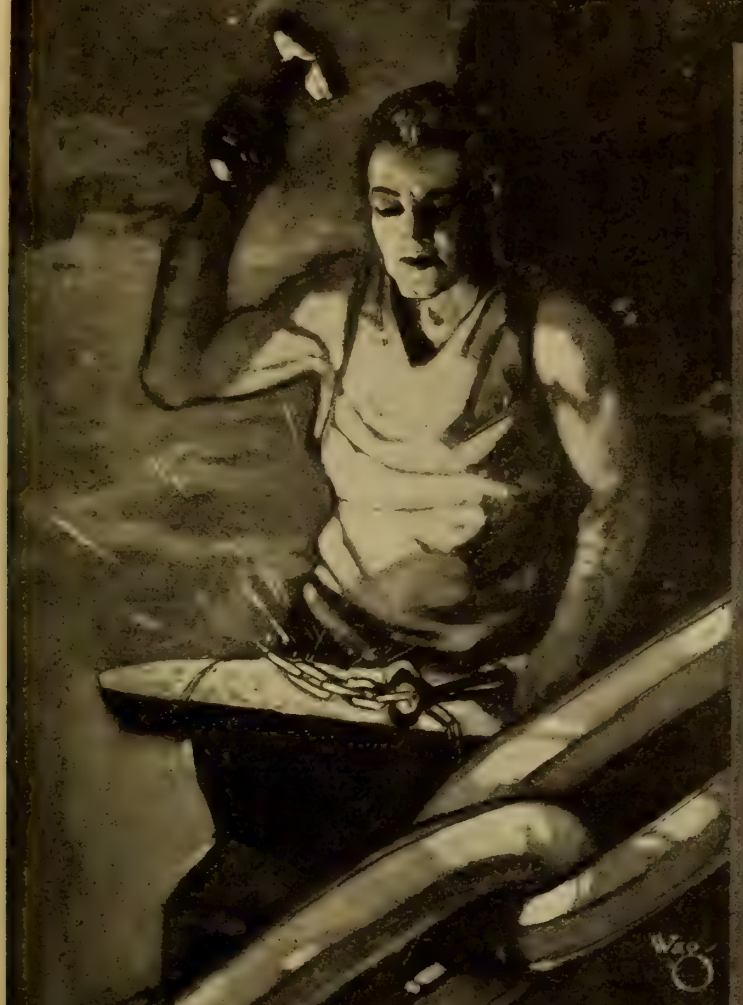
See it on Wednesday and Thursday

ALHAMBRA THEATRE

Believing that we can make our advertising space of value to the exhibitor we are devoting it to practical demonstrations of the exploitation and advertising angles of the pictures we are distributing.

For example, the ad. above represents one advertising and selling angle of the first Plaza picture "Petticoats and Politics."

It brings out Anita King's athletic ability, the Western atmosphere, and one exciting incident in the picture.



We have made provisions to supply the above ad. in suitable sizes (single, double, and triple column) to any exhibitors wishing to make use of it. The electros we will supply may be obtained in either 65 screen for newspaper work or finer to suit any purpose.

In our effort to make Hodkinson Service mean more than just pictures we shall be glad to receive any suggestions you may have.

Forging A New Link

Mr. Jesse D. Hampton's announcement that the distribution of his new productions with J. Warren Kerrigan will be handled through the W. W Hodkinson Corporation adds another to the list of producers who realize that the Hodkinson Principles of Independence, fair dealing, equitable prices and genuine service to the exhibitor are the finest kind of foundation stones to build upon.

"Hodkinson Service" now consists of—

J. Warren Kerrigan Productions, personally supervised by Mr. Jesse D. Hampton.

Paralta Plays featuring Bessie Barriscale, Louise Glaum and Henry B. Walthall.

Douglass Natural Color Pictures, the crowning achievement in motion photography in natural colors, invented by Mr. Leon F. Douglass of "Victor Phonograph" fame. Initial production "Cupid Angling" with Ruth Roland.

Plaza Pictures starring Anita King and Kathleen Clifford. First productions "Petticoats and Politics" with Anita King and "Angel Child" with Kathleen Clifford.

This expansion of Hodkinson Service means more than the doubling of an output. It indicates the Hodkinson Co-Partnership Plan is bearing fruit and receiving such actual and physical support from the industry as to make possible our rapid and continuous expansion.

BESSIE BARRISCALE

IN

"Maid O' the Storm"

By

J. GRUBB ALEXANDER and FRED MYTON

Produced under the personal supervision of

ROBERT BRUNTON

Directed by Raymond B. West

As "Ariel," Bessie Barriscale is seen in the role of a little waif in a fishing village of Scotland, whose destiny is shaped by the falling of an aeroplane from the sky. How the little girl falls in love with the young aristocrat who is injured in the crash, and how she follows him to London, where she becomes the idol of that great city, presents Miss Barriscale in one of the most convincing roles in which she has appeared.

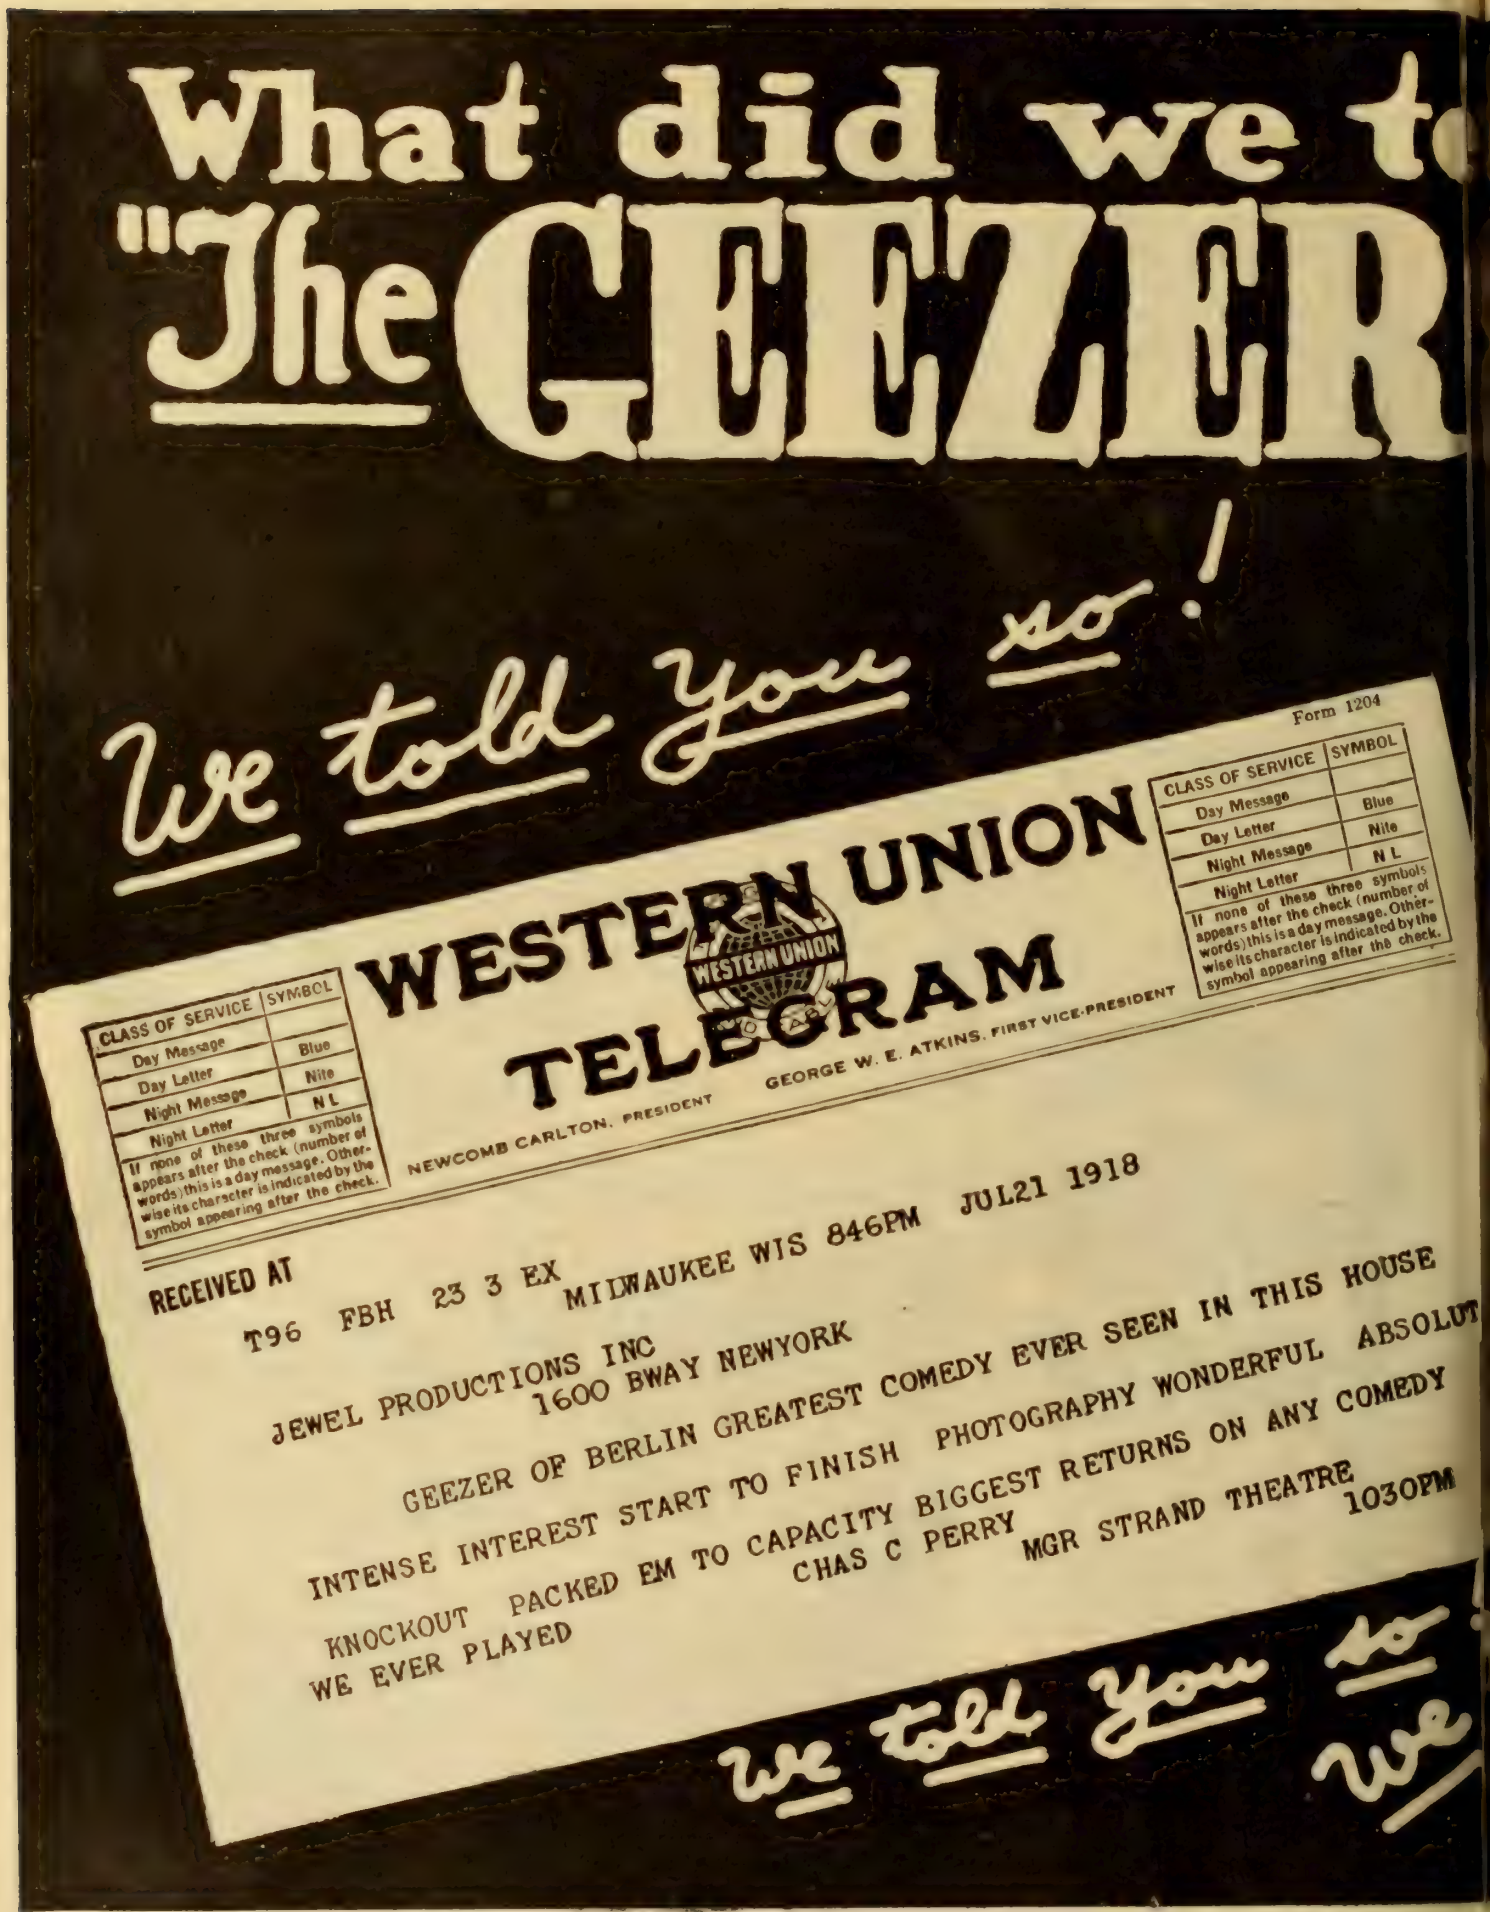
EBONY COMEDIES

Colored people are funny. If colored people weren't funny, there would be no plantation melodies, no banjoes, no cake walks, no buck and wing dancing, no jazz bands, no minstrel shows and no black-face vaudeville.

And They Are Funny in the Studio

Here Are Real Colored People in Pictures!

The Janitor
A Reckless Rover
Some Baby
Mercy, the Mummy Mumbled
Luck in Old Clothes
The Porters
When You Hit—Hit Hard
A Black and Tan Mix Up
Are Working Girls Safe?
A Busted Romance
Spooks



This novelty brings to the screen the inimitable humor of the race in a weekly comedy release that amuses in a most characteristic manner.

Every showhouse ought to have a day for EBONY COMEDIES—the kind that make people laugh.

"The Great Love"

In Seven Reels

IN A STRANGE STORY BROUGHT OUT BY THE CYCLONIC EVENTS OF THE DAY—

We Have Tried At All Times to Give You Our Best

ASIDE FROM THE CAST OF WELL KNOWN PLAYERS IN OUR LITTLE PLAY WE HAVE SOME OF THE MOST FAMOUS SOCIETY WOMEN OF ENGLAND, INCLUDING QUEEN ALEXANDRA, LADY DIANA MANNERS, PRINCESS OF MONACO, ELIZABETH ASQUITH, COUNTESS OF DROGHDA, COUNTESS OF MASSARENE, HON. MRS. MONTAGUE, MISS VIOLET KEPPEL, MISS BETTINA STUART WORTLEY, LADY LAVERY, APPEARING IN BEHALF OF WAR CHARITIES.

Again we have the pleasure of picturizing MR. HENRY WALTHALL, to whom we owe a debt of gratitude for so many exquisite performances in the past, including the Little Colonel in "The Birth of a Nation," also,

MISS LILLIAN GISH, who created a real sensation as The Girl In "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," where her acting proved to be a revelation.

ROBERT HARRON, whose acting is so natural that it conceals acting, is again with us.

ROSEMARY THEBY, who plays in splendid contrast on the thunder theme opposite the part enacted by Miss Gish.

GEORGE SIEGMANN, who is remembered as Silas Lynch in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" and Von Strohm in "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," also plays an important role, also GEORGE FAWCETT, the eminent character actor, GLORIA HOPE and MAXFIELD STANLEY.

WE HAVE DEVOTED THE SAME CARE AND ATTENTION TO "THE GREAT LOVE" AS WE DID TO "HEARTS OF THE WORLD"

"THE GREAT LOVE" is timed 14 minutes to the reel, with seventy-five turns to the minute on the Sixth Reel.

The same people who arranged the famous music for "HEARTS OF THE WORLD" also arranged the musical score for "THE GREAT LOVE," and a copy is sent with every print.

WE SEND "THE GREAT LOVE" TO YOU WITH ONE HOPE—THAT IT WILL BRING YOU SUCCESS.

RELEASE DATE, AUGUST 12th BY ARTCRAFT
SINCERELY,

D W Griffith

All the Griffith Productions are Directed Personally by Mr. Griffith and carry the Griffith Trade Mark—"DG"—on the border line of the Main Title.

D. W. GRIFFITH'
"The Great Love"

IN SEVEN REELS — RUNNING TIME ONE HOUR AND THIRTY-EIGHT MINUTES

A Beautiful Love Story Against a Background of the Cyclonic Events of Today—Taking Place in the Great Amphitheatre of the World's Struggle.

LOVE—THRILLS—COMEDY—ROMANCE

The Splendor of Great Hopes, Desires. The Glory of the Courage of the Human Heart.

See how Jim Young, of Youngstown, Pennsylvania, matches skill and brains against a Prussian Plot to wreck the city of London.

See the sailing of the great fleet of Zeppelins; the swirl of the German air squadrons sweeping the sky and the glare of bursting shrapnel.

See how noble women of England are fighting side by side with our heroine in our little play.

Extraordinary as it may seem—a story taken from actual events.

Glories—thrills—excitement—on the stage of now, where Fate, the Greatest Director, is putting on the most magnificent drama the world has ever seen.

The Music for Every Scene in "THE GREAT LOVE" Is Timed to the Second.

Lillian Gish

LILLIAN GISH has proven that she is not only beautiful, but as a dramatic actress in the art of real acting, so natural that it does not appear to be acting, she stands unsurpassed.

You have seen her in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" and in "HEARTS OF THE WORLD," where she proved a revelation.

SHE IS NOW TO BE SEEN IN

"The Great Love"

A Drama of Today

A FEW NOTES FROM THE GREAT PAEN OF PRAISE SOUNDING FROM EAST TO WEST.

"This Gish is a comely thing and intrigues me. As the heroine of Prof. Griffith's movie, she reveals herself as its most spectacular feature."

GEORGE J. NATHAN.

"Lillian Gish is exquisitely sympathetic. Her emotions stand forth with expressions as eloquent as they are silent."

NEW YORK HERALD.

"The acting of Lillian Gish as the simple little peasant girl, as the budding woman, then the dementia of extreme suffering, back to normality and happiness, EXCEEDS ANYTHING I HAVE EVER SEEN ON STAGE OR SCREEN."

ANNA MOODY LAWRENCE, Chicago Post.

"Lillian Gish scores as the heroine of the sweetest, most sublime appeal. There is something DIVINE about her portrayal of the Girl of France."

WASHINGTON HERALD.

"She plays fine and subtle harmonies upon the heart-strings of all who watch her."

PHILADELPHIA PUBLIC LEDGER.

"Lillian Gish possesses a beautiful tragic mien which puts her among the foremost dramatic stars of all time."

FLORENCE LAWRENCE, L. A. Examiner.

A six-reel photoplay accompanied by a lecture on the vital problem of "SAVING THE CHILDREN OF OUR COUNTRY."

Approved by the Government. They urge "this work, which is of great value, be carried on throughout the country; there is no more constructive way to bring this important question before the public."

The film and lecture answer the title question—what a woman needs most for her health and happiness and completeness of her life is children. On this theme a film of absorbing interest has been built and it has proven exuberant in the public interest that it has aroused and it has drawn packed houses wherever it has been shown.

WILLIAM FOX NEW POLICY

READY FOR SEASON 1918-1919

CONTRACTS TO BEGIN SEPTEMBER 1ST

TO EXHIBITORS OF AMERICA:

In fixing the policy of Fox Film Corporation for next season I have carefully considered the requirements of the trade and the demands of the public.

Every owner of a motion picture theatre has a problem. Our policy has been arranged to give the best service and to enable the exhibitor to make a handsome profit. Our 1918-1919 productions are the best the Corporation has produced in its five years in business.

FOUR BIG TIMELY PICTURES

We have produced four pictures on a big scale which we are confident will create prestige and big box office receipts for every exhibitor who books them.

1. WHY AMERICA WILL WIN! Based on the life of General Pershing. This intimate romantic story of General Pershing's rise from a barefoot Missouri lad to the command of the American Army in France, is a carefully prepared, authentic life history of the famous soldier. You will see Pershing on the Missouri farm, later as a school teacher, his life at West Point, as an Indian fighter, in the Spanish War, U. S. Military Attaché in Japan, taming the Moros in the Philippine Islands, on the Mexican frontier and later in England and France. Staged by Richard Stanton. Seven reels.

2. QUEEN OF THE SEA, with Annette Kellerman. A sub-sea fantasy in six reels. A wonderful scenic conception in which Miss Kellerman displays daring in aquatic stunts. The story and supporting cast are in keeping with the tone of an Extraordinary Production. QUEEN OF THE SEA is bound to repeat box office records created by "A Daughter of the Gods." This picture will be released on a rental basis.

3. THE PRUSSIAN CUR. Staged by R. A. Walsh. Enacted by a big cast, including Miriam Cooper and based on revelations made by Captain Horst von der Goltz, confidential agent of Ambassador Count von Bernstorff, and conspirator against the United States who was condemned to die as a spy in the Tower of London in 1915. Captain von der Goltz was released to testify against the Welland Canal dynamite plotters in the United States Courts, and his amazing exposures are recited in a thrilling manner under the skillful handling of Mr. Walsh. THE PRUSSIAN CUR reveals the Kaiser's plots against America. For the first time it lays bare the schemes of the Kaiser and his agents in destroying factories, creating opposition to the Government, purchasing of newspapers, crippling of ships and the attempt to interfere with the Draft.

4. WHY I WOULD NOT MARRY. A striking, timely, morality picture produced along unique, unusual lines, with a box office appeal for men, women and children. The story is that of the most beautiful woman on earth who had seen all phases and conditions of high life; who knew men of all classes; whose whims and caprices had been satisfied in the most luxurious manner. The reason she would not marry is graphically picturized and lends itself to colossal box office possibilities. Six reels.

In a few weeks we will announce the release date of the Theodore Roosevelt film, "Put the Flag on the Firing Line."

STANDARD PICTURES

There will be 26 Standard Pictures released during the season beginning September 1st, 1918. No cost is too great for Standard Pictures. Among the stars who will appear in this group are Theda Bara, William Farnum and others.

VICTORY PICTURES

There will be 26 Victory Pictures in which Tom Mix, Gladys Brockwell, George Walsh and others are grouped.

EXCEL PICTURES

There will be 26 Excel Pictures in which Virginia Pearson, Peggy Hyland, Jewel Carmen, Jane and Katherine Lee and others will appear.

SUNSHINE COMEDIES

There will be 26 Sunshine Comedies produced under the masterful supervision of Henry Lehrman.

MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS

There will be 52 Mutt and Jeff Cartoons released at the rate of one a week.

Our Branch Managers now have full details and will be pleased to explain our policy. We advise you to get in touch with them.

WILLIAM FARNUM DE LUXE PRODUCTIONS

The popular appeal of William Farnum is as wide as the joys, sorrows and aspirations of human hearts. As the peerless portrayer of all that is fine and strong in American manhood, he commands a motion picture patronage that is absolutely certain to fill every theatre in which he appears.

Now, to "Les Miserables," "True Blue," "When a Man Sees Red," "Rough and Ready," "The Bondman," "A Soldier's Oath," and many other sterling productions, Mr. Farnum has added four great romances by Zane Grey, America's foremost writer of Western novels. These stories have been read by millions. They have been advertised in every town and city. Millions want to see the plays.

The William Farnum De Luxe Production scheduled for release in September is:
RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE, by Zane Grey.

This stirring tale is universally recognized as one of the greatest Western stories ever written. As "Lassiter, the Avenger of the Utah Border," Mr. Farnum has scored the supreme character achievement of his career. "Riders of the Purple Sage" is as big as the West itself. Its showing will be one of the outstanding film events of the coming year.

"Riders of the Purple Sage" will be followed by its gripping sequel, "THE RAINBOW TRAIL," and later by "THE LONE-STAR RANGER" and "THE LAST OF THE DUANES." To this wonderful Zane Grey series will be added other Farnum attractions of surpassing interest and drawing power.

THEDA BARA SUPER-PRODUCTIONS

For the filming of these splendid photodramas, William Fox has taken as his slogan, "The Best That Brains and Money Can Make."

Theda Bara stands today at the top of her profession—universally acclaimed as the foremost screen interpreter of feminine emotions. Her name has become a synonym for big, stirring, money-making productions, and her list of powerful dramatic roles includes the greatest classics of the world.

During the season of 1918-1919, Miss Bara will appear in eight new Standard Pictures. These plays will be the strongest attractions that William Fox can find for her in history, literature and present-day life.

The Theda Bara Super-Production scheduled for release in September is:

WHEN A WOMAN SINS, by Betta Breuil.

This vivid drama pictures a passionate soul's wild struggle for love against the restrictions of her stifling environment. When her untamed impulses batter down the walls of convention and bring upon her the scorn and contumely of the world, she defies smug opinion and goes the wanton way. But at last comes love and the balm of regeneration.

"When a Woman Sins" will be followed in October by THE SHE-DEVIL, by E. G. Hopkins, a vivid story of a charming vixen's escapades in Paris and Madrid.

SEASON 1918–1919

VICTORY PICTURES

THIS superb group of attractions has been established because the achievements and the vast popularity of Gladys Brockwell, Tom Mix and George Walsh make a step forward and upward absolutely necessary. In answer to the demand of exhibitors and public that these stars be shown in more pretentious productions, William Fox now offers his first three Victory Pictures.

GLADYS BROCKWELL in KULTUR, by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred. Myton.

Who started the World War? A new angle of this vital question appears in the strange romance of Emperor Franz Josef's beautiful favorite, who played into the hands of the Huns. In this amazing, intimate revelation of love, scandal and secret politics, Miss Brockwell scores the greatest popular triumph of her career.

TOM MIX in FAME AND FORTUNE, a dramatization of Charles Alden Seltzer's famous novel, "Slow Burgess."

Better even than "Ace High," "Western Blood" or "Cupid's Roundup," this is Tom Mix's greatest photoplay achievement. It has been produced on a scale of magnificence that guarantees a sure-fire run. "Fame and Fortune" places "the greatest cowboy actor" among the five biggest drawing cards on the screen.

GEORGE WALSH in I'LL SAY SO, by Ralph Spence.

"Smiling" George Walsh, the dashing, good-humored, devil-may-care author of hair-raising dramatic escapades! In this breezy story of love, adventure and war, he is sure to go "over the top" with a smashing, full-house triumph.

SEASON 1918-1919

EXCEL PICTURES

EXHIBITORS are demanding something more than "program" pictures. They are demanding special attractions, played by stars who have pronounced ability and popularity in some definite type of screen production.

William Fox, recognizing that this demand means a general toning up of the motion picture art — higher, stricter standards — has raised Virginia Pearson, Peggy Hyland and Jewel Carmen into a special series of Excel Pictures. Other well known players will be added to this group.

First releases of these popular stars in their new series will be:

VIRGINIA PEARSON in QUEEN OF HEARTS, by Harry Hoyt.

A gripping drama of mystery, love and crime. The heroine's father has been murdered. Three men who desire the hand of his daughter are suspected. Who is guilty — and who wins? The unravelling of this gripping tale is sure to be a big puller with the crowds.

PEGGY HYLAND in MARRIAGES ARE MADE, by E. Lloyd Sheldon.

Sweet, winsome Peggy Hyland in another of those appealing romances that have won her millions of admirers! A story of love that had its way through the trapping of German spies. Brimful of punch, action, thrills and surprises.

JEWEL CARMEN in LAWLESS LOVE, by Max Brand.

Miss Carmen is everywhere hailed as one of the most beautiful and talented young actresses on the screen. "Lawless Love" shows her in an absorbing, rapid-fire drama of a brave girl, a cad and a big, fighting man of the West.

Jury Declares Sunday Shows Are Necessary

After Lexington Court Fines Ben Ali Theater $2, Two Other Defendants Secure Change of Venue and a Jury Acquittal Which Upsets Previous Interpretation of Blue Laws—Battle Not Over

Lexington, Ky., July 24.

IN the cases against the Phoenix Amusement Company, and J. H. Stamper, Jr., of the Orpheum Theater, a jury in Magistrate Charles P. Dodd's court late yesterday afternoon found the defendants not guilty, declaring that under present war conditions picture shows on the Sabbath constituted a necessity, and were not a violation of the old blue laws which clearly set forth that only work of a necessary nature shall be done on the Sabbath.

The jury was composed of G. N. Sharpe, E. P. Harrison, C. D. Calloway, Clarence Stivers, George Marrs and W. H. Boggs.

Following this decision Al Combs, of the laymen's committee, stated that the committee would probably bring further actions against the theaters, and an effort made to try the cases in another magistrate's court, and if no satisfaction was secured the cases would probably be taken before the circuit court.

In the three cases tried the exhibitors won two in Magistrate Dodd's court and lost one in Magistrate Boone's court. The latter refused to hear any evidence relative to whether pictures were necessary or not on the Sabbath, and merely considered evidence showing that the theaters operated on Sunday.

Churchmen Score Preliminary Victory.

The churchmen of Lexington have scored the first victory in the fight to establish the legality of Sunday shows, but indications are that both sides will make repeated trips across "The Marne" before either side will become firmly entrenched. Both sides are bringing up their heaviest artillery and reinforcements, and a decisive legal battle is about to take place.

A jury was finally secured in Orville C. Boone's Magistrate's court. During the trial the court would listen to nothing concerning the necessity of Sunday shows, but merely the question of whether or not the statutes had been violated, and established the fact that the law as written had been violated. The jury returned a verdict of guilty in the case of the Ben Ali Theater which was tried separately, and a fine of $2 was imposed by Magistrate Boone, who had the privilege of fining $2 or $50, but placed the minimum.

Under the law as written each ticket sold would constitute a separate offense, and on a minimum basis of $2 for each offense the churchmen could make the situation hard for the theaters.

The question of whether or not the business operated constituted a Sunday "necessity" failed to get to the jury, as the court contended that the only question at stake was whether or not the house was open for business, and whether business was actually transacted, as the ruling of the Court of Appeals in the Capital Theater case, of Frankfort, was very clearly presented. Therefore, he refused testimony of several persons representing the defense.

Attorneys Ask for Change of Venue and Get It.

R. J. Colbert, attorney for the Phoenix Amusement Company, operating the Strand Theater and attorney George C. Webb, representing Manager J. H. Stamper, Jr., of the Orpheum Theater, when the cases were called against those two concerns, asked for a change of venue, claiming that they couldn't expect a fair trial before Justice Boone. An affidavit was filed by Mr. Colbert for John B. Elliot, of the Phoenix Amusement Company, in which the latter stated that he did not believe he could secure a fair trial in the court following the experiences of the Berryman Realty Company, owners of the Ben Ali Theater in the previous trials. It was alleged in the affidavit that Magistrate Boone had overruled the challenge of the defendant on this case, where a juror served who had both formed and expressed opinions in advance which were unfavorable to Sunday operations. It was also alleged that the court refused to consider any evidence whatsoever except as to the mere fact of whether the theater was operated on Sunday, not as to whether work of an unnecessary nature had been done on the Sabbath. It was further alleged that at the conclusion of the evidence Justice Boone had his instructions already prepared and submitted them to the jury refusing all instruction of defendants, and not permitting the jury to consider all of the facts of the law in the case. It was claimed that under such conditions a fair trial could not be expected.

Justice Boone transferred the cases to Magistrate Dodd, stating that he didn't consider the affidavits sufficient to require him to transfer the cases, but that he didn't care to sit in the cases under the circumstances of the men figuring that they couldn't get a square deal at his hands.

When the cases were called on Magistrate Dodd's court attorneys for the commonwealth objected to all testimony except that proving actual operation of the houses, but Magistrate Dodd heard the witnesses regardless of the objections raised.

The principal testimony for the defense was rendered by Capt. J. W. Harding, commander at Camp Buell, Lexington, who held that Sunday theaters were absolutely necessary as soldiers must have recreation, such as the theaters afford.

Capt. F. W. Hersgler, in charge of the army recruiting stations for the Eastern Division of Kentucky, gave similar testimony.

Woman Pleads for Sunday Shows for Girls.

Mrs. A. P. Harrison, of Lexington, chairman of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, honorary vice president of the Woman's Committee of the National Council of Defense, and chairman of the Kentucky Division of the Y. W. C. A., in charge of the Hostess House building at Camp Zachary Taylor, Louisville, testified for the defense. Mrs. Harrison stated that from her long experience as a civic leader she felt that Sunday amusements were necessary for girls on the Sabbath, and that picture shows are helpful for girls who work during the week, and therefore necessary for the good of the community.

The prosecution presented several witnesses who testified that they had purchased tickets and attended the shows on Sunday.

Richard C. Stoll, counsel for the defense, in making a statement said moving pictures are developers of morale among the people, and that the best way to develop morale at this time is to keep the people amused, and that at Camp Taylor, Louisville, the Government operates both picture theaters and vaudeville shows on Sunday to keep the soldiers interested, and that the commercial theaters are running war slides, and their houses are used by the four minute speakers even on Sunday to aid in war work.

The defense is endeavoring to prove that Sunday shows are a necessity, and should be classed as necessary labor, which is permitted on the Sabbath under the old blue laws. The prosecution is making no attempt really to fight this angle, and is relying merely on the fact that the theaters were open on Sunday, and that according to the Court of Appeals this constitutes unnecessary work on the Sabbath. However, that decision was some time ago and was not in a city where there is a military camp.

The outcome of the cases is set forth at the opening of this story.

Sunday Shows Legal in Philadelphia

Circuit Court So Decides, Provided Only They Are Properly Licensed Under Borough Law.

ONE of the most important decisions handed down in Pennsylvania was delivered by Judge McLaughry in the Circuit Court at Mercer, Pa., in the case of Farrell vs. Adler, Leslie and Stahl. The decision states that Sunday shows are legal under the Pennsylvania statutes providing they are properly licensed under the borough law. Judge McLaughry ruled that the boroughs are self-governing and that matters pertaining to the licensing of amusements comes properly under the borough's governing powers.

In the decision the Judge ruled that the act of May, 1915, provides sufficient power be vested in the boroughs to permit such operation if the proper license has been granted, and that the entire matter is outside the court to interfere.

The decision came as the climax to a case which grew out of litigation raised over a year ago, on the operation of motion picture shows in Farrell on Sundays. The borough authorities permitted their operation, but the case was appealed by various taxpayers on the ground that the State law forbade Sunday shows and that the local authorities were exceeding their authority in granting permission to operate on Sunday.

This decision of Judge McLaughry is the first definite ruling of the kind and will undoubtedly put a quietus upon anti-Sunday crusades from a legal point of view throughout the State. The motion picture men of Sharon have made application for Sunday license to the borough authorities, and upon advice of counsel will open their shows to the public in a short time. Farrell and Sharon are industrial towns close together and the exhibitors feel that a sweeping victory has been won for them.

Movements favoring Sunday operation in other industrial sections will undoubtedly take form in the near future and it is believed that it will not be long before the Sunday idea becomes general. The three defendants in the case at Farrell have fought a hard fight and credit must be rendered them for taking the initiative in a matter which may have such far-reaching consequences.

M. A. Sybert, who is one of the oldest exhibitors in West Virginia, and who operates the Park at Moundsville and the Midway at McMechen, is candidate for State Senator of West Virginia. Mr. Sybert is the type of exhibitor who should succeed in his aspirations, as he is clean-cut and will merit the consideration of the better element in the state. He has taken active part in anti-censorship agitation and should prove a valuable asset to the business in the state if elected.

Sunday Committee Gets Request for Aid

Believed Situation in Several States Indicates Prospects of Obtaining Legislation Favorable to Picture Interests.

AT a meeting of the Sunday Opening Committee, held July 25 at the offices of Chairman Adolph Zukor, consideration was given to a request from representatives of the Ohio exhibitors who are about to launch a state wide campaign in the hope of securing the necessary legislation to legalize the showing of motion pictures on Sunday.

The committee designated Peter J. Schaefer, newly elected president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America and first vice president of the National Association, to attend a meeting at Columbus, during the week, for the purpose of investigating the situation and reporting his recommendations to the committee.

The Sunday Opening Committee in addition to Chairman Zukor is composed of President William A. Brady, Walter W. Irwin, Lee A. Ochs and P. A. Powers, with Frederick H. Elliott as secretary. Reports presented at the meeting indicate there is a good opportunity to secure the enactment of new legislation permitting the theaters to be open on Sunday in several states where there has been conflicting decisions and differences of opinion as regards the enforcing of local regulations by the authorities.

The committee believes that changes which have been brought about due to war conditions will materially aid in the opening of theaters on Sunday.

It was stated at the meeting that George B. LaBarre, Director of Public Safety, Trenton, N. J., has recommended to the city commissioners that the motion picture theaters should be allowed to be open on Sunday.

Sunday motion picture exhibitions are now legal in the State of Pennsylvania if properly licensed under the laws of the governing municipalities, according to a decision which has just been handed down by Judge J. A. McLaughry at Mercer, Pa. The decision in the Pennsylvania case supports the contention of the motion picture interests in New York State which endeavored to secure the passage of a bill during the last session of the legislature at Albany providing for local option as regards the opening of the theaters on Sunday. This bill was passed by the Assembly, but was held up in the Senate.

The Sunday Opening Committee is preparing to make a survey of the situation existing in the various states and plans to render co-operation wherever possible in the hope of securing legislation where necessary. The members of the committee are enthusiastic over the outlook and believe that the public and the press generally will welcome the inauguration of the state wide campaigns.

Ontario Men Get After Long Contracts

President Bailie of Exhibitors Association Gunning for Exchanges Which Encourage Them.

PRESIDENT A. BAILIE of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario has launched an offensive against those exchange companies in Canada whose policy is to encourage the signing by exhibitors of long-term contracts for service without the privilege of cancellation after a state period.

This summer a number of Canadian distributing companies have advertised arrangements for the supplying of pictures by the year and Bailie has attacked these companies. He has had a warning sent out to exhibitors' associations and individual exhibitors as a part of his campaign. In his letter Bailie warns all exhibitors not to sign any contract that does not contain a thirty-day cancellation clause.

"You might as well hand over your theater now if you sign up for a year without the privilege of cancellation," said President Bailie. "A great many exhibitors are inclined to consider long-term contracts because of the reduction in rates for quantity booking. But a man is a fool to tie himself up for a solid year without reserving the right to change his service if he wants to. It's like this: the exhibitor may get a good rate for pictures this year, but if all the exhibitors signed long-term contracts with one of two or three large companies the 'independent exchanges' would be out of business next year and then the big concerns would have the exhibitors at their mercy."

President Bailie has taken a strong stand in the matter. His letters have reached Montreal, Winnipeg and other distant cities, while nearly every exhibitor of Ontario has received his official warning. Bailie stands as a protector of the smaller exchanges, of which there are a number in Toronto. He claims that their existence means much to the welfare of the theaters.

This is practically the first occasion that the Ontario association has sought the co-operation of exhibitors in other Provinces of the Dominion.

Provincial Organization Establishes Headquarters.

Another development in the circles of the Ontario association has been the establishment of permanent headquarters in Toronto of the provincial organization. Thomas Scott, the new secretary and manager of the association, has opened a permanent office in the clubrooms of the organization at 137 Yonge street. Incidentally, he is arranging to undertake the sale of provincial war tax tickets to all exhibitors. The government allows a commission on the sale of these tickets, and it is believed the organization will reap quite a revenue from this source in the long run.

A number of members of the Ontario association have also made inquiries regarding the formation of a booking circuit or circuits. Secretary Scott has been looking into the matter, but no definite steps have yet been taken. A number of members are anxious to see the association take on the distribution of various productions now controlled in the United States by organizations of exhibitors.

Objection has been raised to the many requests received by exhibitors by private citizens for the presentation of special slides or trailers advertising various campaigns and coming events. President Bailie has announced his intention of arranging for the approval of these slides and trailers by the Ontario association before they can be shown in a theater.

"America's Answer" Rousing Appeal to Patriots

Second Feature by Government Shows Where and How Men and Money Have Been Applied to Crushing the Hun.

"AMERICA'S ANSWER" to Hun barbarism was pictured at George M. Cohan's theater, Sunday evening, before an invited audience and began its extended engagement, formally opened to the public, Monday evening. As a matter of fact there will be few seats available to the single ticket purchaser for some time—the house has been sold out to various organizations and societies for weeks.

The Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, is handling this second release of Government production on its own account, along lines of promotion dictated by good showmanship and handled by real showmen. Charles S. Hart, director of the division, has surrounded himself with high-class men, such as George Bowles, Willard Coxey, Wallace Monroe plus practically all of the McCarthy forces that "put across" "The Birth of a Nation" with such undisputed success.

Engagements in all of the large cities will be played with local patriotic societies co-operating with the Division of Films; and in this manner the greatest number of people in the shortest possible time will see with their own eyes what has been done with some of the billions the public has contributed in Liberty Loans; see hundreds of Yanks pass in review before their very eyes, as the soldiers of Liberty march to the front trenches and come to grips with the wild Hun.

Sunday night's audience was enthusiastic to the limit of applause and cheers. Much as he will dislike the publicity, credit is due to S. L. Rothapfel for framing an appropriate and stirring musical score and in fulfilling the minutest details of the presentation and environment in a manner that reflected advance showmanship. Mr. Rothapfel conducted the orchestra and collected the modicum of personal credit that was his just due. "Roxey" registered one hundred per cent, with none to deny him.

Picture Will Make You Dig Deeper.

You who have contributed to Liberty Loans and are buying W. S. S. stickers should see "America's Answer." It will make you "dig deeper," and impel you to urge your neighbor to do likewise. The wondrous accomplishments of the Government—servant of the people—in placing 1,250,000 men on foreign soil, to date, are visualized in an astonishing manner.

We have, for instance, read that a million-dollar refrigerating plant has been built; that docks have been constructed, that munitions and guns have gone over—but in these days of "big figures" to read is not to see, as you actually do, in "America's Answer," the astonishing things that have been accomplished. For miles the traveling camera discloses docks, double tracked and alive with men and machinery; acres and acres of steel construction appear as the refrigerating plant is built; engine boilers arrive on flat-cars and are hoisted by traveling cranes, skidded across the vast expanse of a great locomotive works and land on the wheels and truck that await them.

How the men are fed, how their food is prepared and transported right into the front-line trenches; what has been done in the matter of hospitals and the care of the convalescent; the march of soldiers, swinging along in lines that reach beyond the vision of the camera; lumbermen hewing trees and sawing them into planks in great mills built by Uncle Sam; hosts of horses; scores of motor-trucks, arriving boxed up ready to crank and "go to it"; trench digging and actual trench conditions of warfare; piles of shoes, hats and clothing sent back to French villages to be repaired and restored—there seem to be no end to the details pictured in these reflections of the wonderful things our Government has accomplished.

"America's Answer" gives the death blow—the final wallop—to any germ of thought that motion pictures may not be essential in this world war. In no way under God's heaven, or by any other ingenuity of mankind could the work done 3,000 miles away be presented in absolutely convincing record to the individual American who has contributed the money—and the men. HILL.

Washington to Safeguard War Negatives

Call Also Comes From Capital for Men to Aid in Compiling Pictorial History.

FIREPROOF storage vaults are to be built in Washington by the War Department to safeguard the valuable collection of photographic negatives and the thousands of feet of motion picture films of the European War. The vaults are all to be located in one building, but between each vault there will be constructed fireproof walls. The doors of the vaults will also be fireproof. The vaults are to be so constructed as to provide proper ventilation and a fairly even temperature will be maintained.

Heretofore the films have been stored in various places around Washington because no suitable place has been provided for their safekeeping. As thousands of dollars have already been spent in making the films and the photographic negatives, and many more thousands of pictures and enormous footage in moving picture films are yet to be taken, the need for fireproof storage became more manifest. The pictures are secured in the United States and in Europe for the purpose of historical record under the direction of the historical division of the General Staff.

The Signal Corps of the Army is at present anxious to fill an urgent need for a large number of men to engage in the compilation of a pictorial history of the war. In an announcement from the War Department it was stated that about sixty more lieutenants and as many sergeants, first class, are to be selected for this work, and for a short time, until the immediate needs are met, some commissions will be given to men direct from civil life whose experience is ample to justify this procedure. Other men will be sent temporarily to the Signal Corps School of Photography at Columbia University, in New York City, where they will be taught, not how to take pictures, but rather what kind of pictures to take. Many of the men commissioned will become staff officers of army divisions and as such will be in charge of the work of making a pictorial history of the activities of that division from the time of organization through active participation in the conflict.

The Signal Corps states that the successful newspaper photographer represents most nearly the type of man needed. A military photographer must possess a generous amount of initiative and originality, for he will have to act as his own "boss," his own director, and dig up the type of picture that really tells the story.

Appointment to this service will depend entirely on the man's previous experience. Application can be made and full particulars obtained by addressing the office of the Chief Signal Officer, Photographic Section, Arcade Building, Washington, D. C.

Will Rogers Coming to the Screen

Rope Thrower and Wit Now Performing at Goldwyn Studio in Rex Beach's "Laughing Bill Hyde."

WILL ROGERS, the rope thrower and shrewd wit from Texas, who from the day of his debut on the stage in New York by many has been considered the biggest individual favorite of America's largest city and beloved of country-wide vaudeville audiences, has lent his talents to the screen. Rex Beach and Goldwyn Pictures Corporation have won him over and Rogers is now at work in the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee in the name role of "Laughing Bill Hyde," one of Rex Beach's stories, announced for release in late September.

"I felt with regard to 'Laughing Bill Hyde,'" says Rex Beach, "that there was just one actor on earth that I wanted to see the hero of my story and that actor is Will Rogers. I believe, as does Samuel Goldfish, that he is going to be a huge success on the screen. The role he is now playing is himself—without a change.

"I think that Rogers is the most natural and human player on the American stage today. He has the shrewdest wit and wonderful diffidence that is irresistible. And, incidentally, we are providing him with the surest-fire role that a player could have for his screen debut. Mr. Rogers didn't want to become a screen star. And of course he is not leaving the stage for a day, but is simultaneously appearing in Ziegfeld's 'Follies' and acting in 'Laughing Bill Hyde.' Willard Mack has written the scenario of this story, and I feel that he has done the most brilliant scenario that has ever been made for the screen adaptation of one of my novels."

"Laughing Bill Hyde" is being directed by Hobart Henley. Will Rogers is in his fourth season as a featured player in Ziegfeld's "Follies" and the "Midnight Frolic" and is under contract to be starred next year in a stage play.

Moving Picture Theater as War Aid

Theater Owner Declares Part It Has Played Entitles It to Special Consideration in the Scheme of Taxation for War Purposes

THE Moving Picture World is in receipt of a thoughtfully written communication from M. E. Comerford, a theater owner of Scranton, Pa., which should command attention of theater owners generally. It is Mr. Comerford's belief that, in view of the important function that has been and is to be performed by motion picture theaters in aiding the Government in the dissemination of information and in the direct selling of Liberty Bonds, that an additional burden which might impair its usefulness to the Goverment should not be placed upon it. Mr. Comerford suggests that, in the absence of a national organization of the trade to properly present the status and claims of the motion picture theater to the Ways and Means Committee, a meeting of theater men should be called to prepare such a statement as will impress the committee. As this matter is in the hands of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry any multiplication of representation would be confusing. Aside from that suggestion Mr. Comerford's argument is of value and is printed here:

Editor Moving Picture World, New York

Dear Sir: It seems necessary at this time when a new war revenue bill is being framed to have this measure so shaped in its application to the moving picture business as to most fully conserve the war purpose of the Government and yet not impose undue burdens of tax upon the theaters.

The moving picture theaters have two distinct elements of usefulness for the Government in this war. One is the means provided to produce direct revenue. The other and by far the more important service, is the widespread publicity of necessary war information these places of amusement afford. Since the United States entered this war every moving picture theater in the country has been at the disposal of the Government and the service thus rendered along the publicity line is at least equal to that given by any other agency. In this relation the moving picture business stands somewhat in an exclusive and unique position as a patriotic influence being the only element which can bring the animated forms of Government officials and others and great scenes of war acts vividly to millions of people daily.

In view of this fact and the contemplation by the Government representatives are making of these theaters any tax levies imposed should be so adjusted as not to interfere with the war publicity utility of the business. This is entirely aside from any consideration which might be given to the proprietors from the standpoint of profits. It simply comprehends the two essential elements with which the agents of the Government and the people generally are most concerned, necessary war publicity and war revenue.

Great Patriotic Stimulus.

It will be generally admitted that even from the standpoint of war revenue producers the utility of the moving picture theater far exceeded in the matter of stimulating action in others any amounts which may have been derived by a direct tax on the houses or the income of the owners. Hence it follows that any move which will tend to lessen the attendance at these theaters by imposing added war tax upon the proprietors and forcing them to shift the same to the public will produce two distinct disadvantages for the Government. One will be the partial destruction of this very essential publicity agency and the other a possible reduction in the amount of revenue to be derived from this source by driving out of business a large number of the theaters thus taxed.

It is the patriotic purpose of every moving picture theater proprietor in the country to render maximum war service to the Government and to that end free use of all such houses have been given for Liberty Loans, Y. M. C. A., Red Cross, Knights of Columbus, and other campaigns. "Four Minute Men" have been and are now using these theaters as a very essential means of bringing pointed and necessary facts about the war to million of people daily. The food and fuel administrators have direct information from their departments flashed upon thousands of theater screens many times each day and every patriotic move and propaganda undertaken by Government agents, including enlistments, selected draft work and other moves and patriotic lines handled by bodies of citizens, have been to a great extent carried successfully forward by the means of publicity and assemblage furnished by these theaters.

Give Congress Information.

Members of Congress having in hand the great work of shaping this new war revenue measure with the helpful guidance of the President and the Secretary of the Treasury are certainly determined to be fair and just with every business in the country. But their work is mammoth in character, embracing many thousands of industrial, commercial, and other lines of action, and involving the gathering of sums of money totaling many billions of dollars. It is impossible for any body of men having this gigantic task in hand to comprehend the detail elements of every business involved. Hence it is the patriotic duty of all citizens to give the members of Congress and the Congressional committees such assistance with relation to their several lines of trade as will enable them to construct a revenue measure which will meet every necessary war demand and entirely conserve and protect essential features.

This duty is specially incumbent upon those associated with the moving picture theaters. This vast business represents investments of several million dollars, directly and indirectly, furnishes profitable employment for tens of thousands of people in its varied divisions, and is now the greatest educational, as well as the leading amusement element of the nation. There are facts connected with it the members of Congress now shaping the revenue bill should know, and they can obtain this information only from those who are intimately acquainted with every phase of the business. I suggest that steps be taken at once to bring to the attention of Congress the relative elements of the moving picture business as the same apply to publicity and revenue, so that while the latter phase is being considered the other part will not be injured. There is a proper balance between these conditions which, when maintained, will give our Government the full benefit of this great publicity afforded by the moving picture theaters, saving the same for all proper war measures, and yet making the direct revenue just and equitable. This can be properly brought before the committee of Congress by a representative delegation of moving picture people. As there is no national body from which a committee of this kind might now be named, I suggest that a meeting be held in some suitable place in New York or Philadelphia within the next two weeks to be attended by moving picture theater owners and others engaged in any branch of the business from which a committee could be named to care for these interests at Washington in connection with the framing of the new revenue bill.

It must be understood that this committee will have a patriotic mission to perform, and that the purpose of this move is to aid the members of Congress and the committee in framing such parts of the new revenue bill as may apply to the moving picture business by giving such necessary facts as will insure the maintenance of the essential publicity feature of the theaters, as well as secure the proper amount of war revenue.

Who will second my proposition to have this meeting held and a committee named for the purposes mentioned here?

Sincerely yours,

M. E. COMERFORD.

Scranton, July 20, 1918.

Famous Players Prepare Release Schedule

It Covers First Six Months of Coming Season—Company Issues Handy Booklet.

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has prepared a schedule of releases, according to the stars, covering the first six months of its new year commencing September 1. From this announcement the exhibitor can lay out his exploitation plans for the next half year and is in a position to advertise the appearances of the various stars at his theater.

The star release plan for September which has been prepared is as follows: On September 1 there will be released three productions starring John Barrymore, Elsie Ferguson and Wallace Reid; September 8, Ethel Clayton, "The Hun Within" (a Paramount-Artcraft special) and Lila Lee; September 15, Douglas Fairbanks, Marguerite Clark and Dorothy Dalton; September 22, Fred Stone, Shirley Mason and Vivian Martin; September 29, Mary Pickford, Charles Ray and Enid Bennett.

Accordingly the company will start off its first month with fifteen feature productions to be released in September; October twelve, November twelve, December fifteen, January twelve and February twelve.

In connection with this schedule, Walter E. Greene, managing director in charge of distribution, said: "The announcement of our stars release schedule for six months of the new year starting September 1 is in itself highly significant. It marks the placing of our big industry on a level with other great business enterprises in the systematic handling of its product and finally it comes as a result of thorough understanding and absolute organization on the part of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation."

To facilitate matters for the exhibitor in checking up his booking schedule and referring to the Paramount and Artcraft releases for the season of 1918-19, the corporation has prepared a handy booklet which will be distributed to its patrons. The booklet can be used as a complete guide on the releases of this company including the new productions, the "Success Series" and the short films. Half of the book has been ruled off and left blank so that the manager can list his bookings and fill in various other details, for which ruled space is provided.

SEVENTY-NINE STARS IN WORLD FILM FLAG.

World Pictures has already found it necessary to make additions to the huge service flag which was recently unfurled at the home office in New York. When this flag was hung out a few weeks ago it had seventy-seven stars. Since then two more World employes have joined Uncle Sam's service and their stars have been placed on the flag. These are Jacob Strather, porter at the home office, and Louis Amacher, an employe of the Seattle office.

Hustling Hard to Win That Trophy

First National Managers Speeding Up Salesmen in Effort to Win Bronze Tablet to Be Awarded by the Moving Picture World to Exchange Making Highest Percentage of Bookings Within Its Territory for "Pershing's Crusaders."

EVIDENTLY C. E. Hoolah, manager of the A. H. Blank Enterprises, handling the First National releases through Iowa, Nebraska and Kansas, is set upon getting that handsome trophy to be awarded by the Moving Picture World to the exchange making the highest percentage of bookings for "Pershing's Crusaders" within its territory. He backs up his telegram, printed last week, with a letter in which he offers additional details and writes:

"There is no use waiting for the names to go on the bronze tablet. Here they are: C. E. Holah, manager; S. F. Goldflam, Ralph Holmes, A. Kahn, J. R. Collins, Harry Weinberg and Eddie Bonns, salesmen.

"We have thought it over and have decided that you may as well have it engraved right now, because Des Moines is going to get it eventually, so why not now?"

We'd like to oblige Mr. Holah, but we cannot send the trophy to him yet. You see, some of the other exchanges might find it out and quit hustling, and with every exchange manager in the country extending himself it would be a shame to check their ardor by sending the tablets now. That trophy is going to stay right here in New York until after September 1, and to judge from some of the letters received it may not go to Des Moines at all, for more than Mr. Holah seem confident that they can clean up their territory by the end of August. It begins to look as though the winner would have to book all the houses in his territory and then run in some schools and churches, not to mention Granges and Sunday School picnics for good measure.

New York Is Right in Line, Too.

Carey Wilson, of the New York State branch, is doing special advertising to the exhibitors on behalf of the film, and he is being aided by Jack Von Tilzer, Herman Kram, B. Levine, Leo Burns and S. M. Spedon, working out of New York City, with Irving Hanower and George R. Jermain hustling up Buffalo way. Mr. Wilson isn't talking much, but he generally gets what he goes after, and he has gone on record as being after that trophy for his own private office. He has a lot of ground to cover, but he knows how to have it covered and the cans for the "Crusaders" are not getting all dusty on the shelves—quite the reverse.

C. R. Beacham, manager of the Atlanta Exchange, announces that he is going to go after the prize. He doesn't ask that it be sent him right now, but he has a couple of real salesmen in William Sharp and Leo G. Garner, and they are working already.

Harry Weis, of the Central Film Co., Chicago is also in the running with A. C. Fox, Malcomb Williams, George Gordon, I. M. Schwartz and S. Keeley, getting after everyone in Illinois. He has a lot of territory to cover, but to judge from the Chicago papers Indianapolis is not going to be the only 100 per cent. plus exchange. Like Carey Wilson he is going in for special advertising and has extra salesmen on the job.

Sol Lesser, chairman of the California division, United States Official War Films, a branch of the State Council of Defense, is not going to let the trophy go to a commercial exchange if he can help it. The offices of the California division, at 191 Golden Gate avenue, look like a political headquarters on the eve of election. "Pershing's Crusaders" was exhibited at the Columbia, San Francisco, for two weeks under the direct supervision of the Government, and is now being shown at the smaller city houses. In Oakland the Kinema ran it for a second week because one week was not enough. Governor Stephens and Benjamin Ide Wheeler, president of the University of California, were present at the Kinema the opening day. It is being booked up rapidly throughout the state. Just as a sample of what they are doing out there, the earlier short lengths and the five-reel, "The Remaking of America," were given eighty-seven bookings the week of July 21, and the "Allied War Review" is already booked in sixteen of the large houses.

Reserve Officers March to Show in Pittsburgh.

Pittsburgh sent "Pershing's Crusaders" off to a wild hurrah at the Rowland and Clark theaters. The 500 members of the Reserve Officers Training Camp at Camp Carnegie marched the four miles to the theater on the opening day and were cheered all along the route. At the theater they did a drill that was received with another demonstration, and then they took their turn at cheering when the picture was shown. Pittsburgh has not announced what it is going to do—but it's doing it, none the less.

It's the same story all over the country. The film almost books itself, but this publication wants to see the film go into every possible house, and to that end the offer of a trophy was made, not so much as an incentive as to show its appreciation of the efforts made on behalf of the Government. Booking this film should be something more than a moneymaker to the exhibitor; it is the patriotic duty of every exhibitor to show to his patrons the results of Government preparation. German propaganda still continues, less patent, perhaps, than before the prison camps were established, but the more baffling because of that very insidiousness. The pacifist, too, has not learned his lesson and continues to talk pessimism. The film is a direct answer to both of these. It does not tell what may be done. It shows what has been done, and shows it in the most unmistakable manner.

We have the authority of William A. Brady for the statement that President Wilson himself regards the motion picture theater as a valuable adjunct to the press; perhaps an aid even more valuable than the newspapers, since the graphic appeal is so much more powerful. The motion picture theatres have done their bit on the loan drive and other movements, and they can be a powerful factor for good in bringing to the public the larger facts about the war. And in doing this they can clean up as they can clean up with no dramatic feature.

Even were no trophy offered we believe that patriotism and professional pride alike would supply the incentive to intensive bookings, but with something tangible to work from, something substantial to represent the achievement, we hope that the drive will be made even more successful, and the beautiful trophy it is planned to present the winning exchange is well worth the effort. That the exchanges share this belief is proved by the letters and telegrams coming to this paper and to the headquarters of the First National.

June Elvidge Makes A Regular Suggestio

It Is That Producing Companies Send All Left-over "Stills" to Soldiers and Sailors.

June Elvidge, the World Pictures star, who is at present making "The Love Wraith," a Paul West story, under the direction of Travers Vale, is devoting all her spare time to welfare work for the hospital ships of the United States. Miss Elvidge is sending books, magazines and stills of scenes from moving picture features to these vessels, and her work is appreciated if the letters she is receiving are any criterion. She suggests that the producing companies gather up all the "stills" left over after their pictures have had their run and ship them to the different hospital bases, cantonments and naval bases both here and abroad. She has been informed by a number of sailors and officers on board our destroyers in foreign waters that these pictures help to while away many an hour that would otherwise be tedious and tiresome. It seems that the boys in many instances recognize in some exteriors locales familiar to them and with interiors they weave stories that had their inspiration from these photographs. Another favorite divertissement when off watch is to act the scenes shown in these photos.

CAREWE IS LOCKWOOD'S MANAGING DIRECTOR.

The affiliation which Edwin Carewe recently made with the Metro-Yorke Company, the producers of the Lockwood features distributed by Metro, carries with it the title of managing director. The title means that in addition to being the director of the Lockwood subjects Carewe has the business affairs of the organization under his management. Carewe is now putting on "Pals First" as his first effort with the company.

"Mitt Me" Luncheon for Division 5

Campaign for Summer and Fall Opens with Introduction Meeting at the Hotel Astor July 31.

DIVISION 5 of the National Association wants to be known as "Big 5" instead of the fifth wheel of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. For that reason there has been arranged a luncheon at the Hotel Astor for July 31, to be known as a "Mitt Me" luncheon. It has several unique features.

One of the discouraging features which has retarted the work of this group, or rather prevented it from ever starting, is the fact that the members of it do not know each other. It is impossible to arouse much enthusiasm in a body in which only twenty or thirty come to meetings, and in which meetings are held as infrequently as twice a year. Most organizations meet at least once a year at the annual meeting, but even the privilege was denied to the bulk of the membership of Division 5, owing to the fact that the annual meeting was held in Boston.

At an informal gathering of the directors of the group called recently by Chairman John C. Flinn it was decided the first step to efficient work was to undertake some plan whereby the members of the group might meet each other and become acquainted. After some discussion and several meetings a "Mitt Me" luncheon was arranged to take place at the Hotel Astor on July 31 at 12:30 o'clock, the luncheon to cost each individual $2. The Yacht room has been engaged for the purpose, and Chairman Flinn, Secretary Elliott and other speakers will outline the work which the division is expected to perform during this coming year.

The luncheon arrangements are in charge of Thomas G. Wyley and James L. Hoff, who promise that Mrs. Astor will spread herself on this occasion to give every man who attends a good square deal. It is expected at least a hundred or a hundred and fifty will be present, and each one will be tagged with his proper locker number on entering the Yacht room. He will then be taken in hand by the "Mitt Me" committee, who will perform the initiatory ceremonies upon him.

Directors' Advisory Board Calls for Scrips

Division of Films Auxiliary Asks for Stories that May be Used in Government Work.

THE Advisory Board of Motion Picture Directors, Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, is very anxious to obtain stories suitable for production in motion pictures. All stores submitted must be written around themes that will be helpful to the United States and her Allies in various forms of war work.

Suitable subjects would be such as would have the effect of speeding up labor in shipyards, munition plants and other forms of Government work, stories that would be of material assistance in Liberty Loans, War Saving Stamps and other drives and stories that could be utilized to advantage in the foreign work of the Division of Films.

It is recognized by the United States Government that the motion picture is one of the most effective means of reaching the people of any country. Not only will these pictures be shown in the United States but also in every Allied country and every neutral country. The board is particularly desirous of obtaining good stories that fit present day conditions in Russia, Italy, Mexico and Central and South America. It is hoped the best writers in America will respond to this call.

Bare plots in brief synopsis form are all that is required. All plots submitted will receive careful and immediate consideration by experts and those accepted will be given the finest production possible by the foremost producers in these United States

Submit all stories to James Vincent, secretary Advisory Board, Division of Films, Times Building, New York City.

Hodkinson Names Release Dates for Plaza

"Petticoats and Politics," Anita King's Initial Subject is Set for August 26—"Angel Child" September 9.

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation announces that its new brand of Plaza pictures will be ready for distribution the latter part of August. "Petticoats and Politics," Anita King's initial production, will be released August 26, and "Angel Child," starring Kathleen Clifford, is set for September 9. Prints of "Petticoats and Politics" will be in all the General Film branch offices by August 9.

Anita King, who has won the sobriquet of the Outdoor Girl because of her athletic prowess and wholesome, breezy personality, has a story especially written for her talents in "Petticoats and Politics." Unlike the tailor-made play, this Plaza picture, from the pen of L. V. Jefferson, has action aplenty.

"Angel Child" is another comedy. Kathleen Clifford proves an adept in the portrayal of children, the role of Glory Moore being that of an innocently mischievous, prank-loving youngster. "Angel Child," as her doting father calls Glory, is such a trial to her mother she send her to boarding school, where, in turn, she is an even greater trial to the principal.

Following Plaza releases will be Anita King in "Whatever the Cost," by Leslie T. Peacock, and Kathleen Clifford in "The Divided Law."

Forthcoming Paralta plays for distribution by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation are Louise Glaum in "A Law Unto Herself" and Bessie Barriscale in "The White Lie" and "The Heart of Rachel." J. Warren Kerrigan will be presented in his first Jesse D. Hampton production, "The Swamper."

Ellen Cassity

ELLEN CASSITY has returned to New York with a coat of California tan after finishing work in two motion picture productions supporting Baby Marie Osborne. Before leaving the coast Miss Cassity was compelled to decline an offer by W. A. S. Douglas, president of the Diando Film Corporation, of a contract calling for her appearance in six more pictures. Her business interests in the metropolis and the fact that her mother is ill made it imperative for Miss Cassity to return east.

Ellen Cassity.

When her mother recovers Miss Cassity plans to resume activity before the motion picture camera in New York. A southern girl noted for her beauty and grace, she has been in the public eye in some capacity ever since early childhood—as singer, artist's model, musical comedy actress and screen player. And of them all she professes to be fondest of pictures.

In 1915 Miss Cassity decided upon a stage career. A theatrical manager, a friend of her family's, advised her to try it. She came to New York supplied with letters of introduction to Klaw and Erlanger, George Tyler, Cohan and Harris, and other big producers. On her arrival Miss Cassity was met at the Pennsylvania Station by a lawyer whom her mother had known for years. He drove her to a Broadway hotel for luncheon. In the dining room at the same time was Florenz Ziegfeld, who at first glance was so impressed with Miss Cassity's beauty that he obtained an introduction, and within the hour had signed her for a part in the "Follies" of 1915.

Thus, upon her stage debut Miss Cassity was given a singing part. She made good in it, and shortly afterwards received the opportunity to understudy the lead in "Pal's First," with Tom Wise and William Courtenay. Later, when the play went on tour, Miss Cassity became the leading woman. Her next engagement was as prima donna with Raymond Hitchcock in "Words and Music."

Miss Cassity is twenty-three years old. She is devoted to outdoor sports and drives a motor car, rides a horse and swims like an expert. In her two pictures for Diando, "Evidence" and "My Lady of the Beanstalk," she had strong supporting roles. She makes her home in New York with her mother, Mrs. Catherine Brown, at 165 West Eighty-third Street.

No Theater Organ in Porto Rico

Many Opportunities for Improving Exhibiting Conditions in Island, Says Alexander Goldman.

AN interesting story of film conditions in Porto Rico has been brought back to this country by Alexander Goldman, manager of the Universal Film Manufacturing Company's exchange in that island possession, who has just returned home for a brief visit.

As pictured by the Universal representative, Porto Rico is the land in which the film man who yearns for "the good old days" can find exactly what he pines for. It is the land of shows thrown together at the last minute, sans advertising, sans proper music and with a complete disregard of all the principles of good showmanship considered vitally necessary in this country.

"All told," declared Mr. Goldman, "there are about sixty-seven theaters on the Island of Porto Rico. And the largest cities from a moving picture standpoint are San Juan, Ponce, Mayaguez and Arecibo.

Alexander Goldman.

"When I tell you that to date there isn't a single house on the entire island seating six hundred; that there isn't a single organ in any of the theaters; that people don't know what an open air theater is—in spite of the marvelous climate; that the majority of exhibitors do absolutely no advertising and that the newspapers don't even think of soliciting their business, you will obtain an idea of prevailing conditions.

"With but very few exceptions, the moving picture theaters in Porto Rico are in exactly the same stage of development as were the theaters in this country fifteen years ago. In the main they are located in what were formerly stores, stables and, in fact, any place wherein chairs, a screen and a machine could be placed.

"The houses all contain three classes of seats, boxes, luneta and grada. The boxes command the highest prices, the luneta, which corresponds with the orchestra, the next best, while the grada, or gallery, is the cheapest.

"Incidentally, the grada is located back of the screen, so that the fans are compelled to read the subtitles backward. Some of these people are illiterate and because they cannot read, attend the theater in groups accompanied by one individual who is able to read the titles to them. All of the titles, so far as Universal is concerned, are printed in English and Spanish.

"The boxes cost $1 each and seat four people. Orchestra seats bring 25 cents, while the gallery seats cost ten cents. In some theaters they are as low as 5 cents. Matinees are few and far between and then only on an occasional Sunday, because the majority of the people work seven days a week.

"The most progressive showman on the island is Antonia Arias, who owns six theaters, one of them the beautiful eight-hundred-seat Broadway, just being built at Ponce. Arias, incidentally, uses the entire Universal and Jewel output. Serials are easily the most popular pictures now shown in Porto Rico.

Islanders Averse to Open Air Theaters.

"That no attempt should have ever been made to establish open air theaters was one of the things that afforded me a considerable degree of wonderment during my first few months in Porto Rico. For a long time I was unable to ascertain the reason therefore, until it was apologetically explained to me that the people are inclined to be a bit superstitious and for this reason hesitate to sit unprotected in the full glare of the moon. Tourists will no doubt recall noticing that it is a common custom for the people to carry umbrellas and sunshades for the express purpose of shielding themselves from the moon's rays.

"There is no such thing as 'playing a picture' down in Porto Rico. Orchestras prevail, but these play anything which strikes the fancy of the conductor. The people are passionately fond of music, and for this reason I predict that when an organ is installed in one of the better class houses and the exhibitor sees that his organist follows the picture, as is the custom in this country, he'll reap a harvest.

"Recently we ran 'The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin' and the picture created a sensation from one end of the island to the other because it was put on in much the same fashion as at the Broadway theater, New York. We gave the production some real advertising; got Governor Arthur Yager and his staff to attend a special presentation, and so by the time we were ready to show the picture to the public we simply sat back and cleaned up. It was about the first time really high class showmanship, as it is understood here in the States, was attempted in Porto Rico.

"The Government is trying very hard to get the Porto Ricans to use the English language to the extent where it will become the language of the island. It of course is being taught in the public schools. Incidentally, Universal from the very first seconded the Government's efforts in this direction by running all the titles in its films in English as well as Spanish, as I mentioned a little while ago. Recently another distributing organization saw fit to follow suit, but all the rest run Spanish titles only."

Speaking of the manner in which the exhibitors book their shows, the Universal representative declared that a common practice consists in booking at 4 o'clock in the afternoon the show that is to be presented at 6. The mere matter of advertising it bothers the exhibitor not at all, the accepted method consisting of a ballyhoo made up of a band and polesigns. Announcements made by a man on horseback are also considered the proper thing.

Mr. Goldman is probably the youngest exchange manager in the industry, having attained his majority only last May. It is just five years since he entered the employment of the company as office boy at the home office.

Century and L-Ko Companies Expand

President Stern Reports the Force Engaged in Production Has Been Doubled.

SO great has been the demand for the comedies put forth by the Century and L-Ko Comedy companies, reports Julius Stern, president of these organizations, that the force engaged in production work has been increased more than 100 per cent. Among the many recent acquisitions to the Century and L-Ko producing staff are Directors Charles Parott, Vin Moore, Charles Avery, Jimmy Davis and Craig Hutchinson.

The artists recently placed under contract are Billy Armstrong, Harry Gribbon, and May Emery, all of whom were formerly with Mack Sennet; Babe Hardy, whose work with the King Bee aggregation of fun-makers elicited favorable comment; James Donnelly, a former Keystoneite, and Phil Dunham, who will be remembered for his work in L-Ko comedies a year or so ago.

Two new cameramen also have been added to the roster. They are Robert Walter and George Robinson.

Mr. Stern also reports that as the result of the comments he has received from exhibitors on Chai Hong's fun making ability he has placed this Celestial comedian under a long-term contract and will feature him as "Charlie from the Orient."

ASCHERS TAKE BIG WORLD CONTRACT.

The claim of World Pictures that staff organization properly co-ordinated means maximum efficiency seems to be conclusively demonstrated by the results of a recent private showing in Chicago of "The Beloved Blackmailer," with Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley starred; "Merely Players," with Kitty Gordon; "To Him That Hath," with Montagu Love; "T'other Dear Charmer," with Louise Huff, and "Just Sylvia," with Barbara Castleton. As a result of the impression created by these features, Ascher Brothers, beginning September 1, will present World Pictures in twenty-eight of their houses. Incidentally this is the third largest booking controlled by any one firm in the United States.

Davis Brothers Sure Enough Old-Timers

For Over Thirty Years San Francisco State Right Men Have Been in the Amusement Business.

AMONG the men identified with the film business in San Francisco perhaps none are better known than Sam and Mo Davis, who form the personnel of the firm of Davis Brothers, 187 Golden Gate avenue. Living in San Francisco for more than thirty years, they have always been actively connected with the amusement business, as musicians, theater owners, advertising experts, and now as handlers of state right films.

Several years ago, while conducting a chain of moving picture houses of their own, they engaged in the producing business and one of their early productions, which attracted much attention at the time, was enacted at the Presidio, with the assistance of Army officials. They also made the famous picture of the great prize fight of Ad Wolgast and Battling Nelson, copies of which are still prized, and which netted them a lot of money.

Sam Davis.

In the great fire that swept the city in 1906 Davis Brothers lost a theater on Market street, which had been opened at great expense but nine days before. Following the catastrophe they opened the Davis theater, the first dramatic and musical attraction house built after the fire, the roof of which was of canvas. Here Kolb and Dill, of musical comedy and moving picture fame, played a twenty-three week engagement, and other notable attractions occupied the stage until the building of permanent theaters. At that time the Examiner published a full page interview with Davis Brothers, written by Thomas Nunan, who is still the dramatic editor of that paper. This article, which was a most original one, with drawings by Igoe, a famous cartoonist, attracted attention at the time.

The members of this partnership recall with greater interest their early acquaintance with men now famous, but who in those days were filling minor positions. Among these are J. J. Gottlob, now owner of the Columbia theater, San Francisco's leading house, who was treasurer of the old Bush Street theater, where David Warfield, the great actor, was an usher at the time that Sam Davis was the orchestra drummer. They recall the days of stock companies, when William A. Brady was a bad actor and leader of the supers, training them in mob scenes and playing small parts.

Mo Davis.

The well known Jesse Lasky is the subject of an interesting story of years ago. One of the Davis brothers was secretary of the Musicians' Union and was visited by a relative of young Lasky who had learned to perform on the cornet and who lived in San Jose, where his father conducted a shoe store. The relative, an aunt, begged the assistance of the Davis brothers in securing the admission of the young musician, dwelling upon his great ability as a cornetist. He was admitted, but his modesty and retirement prevented him from getting many jobs. Discouraged with his prospects he wrote a musical act, with his sister as a partner, and came to the Davis boys with photographs of the act, made up as Hussars. Thus began the career of Jesse Lasky, who once tried his fortune at music, and who is now one of the leading producers of moving pictures in the world.

Davis Brothers themselves did considerable changing about and while exhibitors developed the poster idea for advertising. Before posters were made for films they gathered tons of pictorial paper, reviewed their pictures before putting them on exhibition, selected pictures to fit and added the titles with a brush. Afterward they originated the poster business, renting mounted posters to exhibitors, and in this were very successful, despite the violent opposition of many film exchanges which used every effort to prevent them from securing advertising paper. Later this business was sold to the Western Poster Company and Davis Brothers are now in the state rights field, handling both large and small subjects and holding their own in a business in which they were California pioneers.

Personnel of the Fox Directors

Producers of Company's Pictures Will Work Under Instructions to Spare No Reasonable Expense.

"NO motion picture is greater than its director" is the policy which the Fox Film Corporation has followed in the past, and it will continue to be the rule during the year 1918-19, according to a statement by the corporation in announcing its program for the coming year. Pointing to the directors of its film as a corps d'elite among motion picture directors, the Fox corporation asserts that during the coming year these directors will be given every means to produce even better pictures than they have in the past.

These men are J. Gordon Edwards, who directed "Cleopatra," "Salome" and twenty-six other William Fox productions; R. A. Walsh, creator of "The Honor System," "Woman and the Law," and what is considered the greatest picture, "The Prussian Cur"; Frank Lloyd, who made "Les Miserables," and who the coming season will film some of what are designed to be among the greatest pictures ever made; Richard Stanton, whose patriotic play, "Why America Will Win," is expected to be the box-office sensation of the year; Edward J. LeSaint, Lynn Reynolds, Edmund Lawrence, Harry Millarde, Kenean Buel, Carl Harbaugh, Robert Thornby, and Henry Lehrman, creator of the famous Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedies.

These men have been chosen because they are close students of screencraft, are men of vision and imagination and they have at their disposal the practically unlimited resources of the Fox corporation.

When the plans for the coming year were formulated these men were instructed by the Fox corporation to make pictures during the season of 1918-19 that would surpass any pictures that had ever been made before. In their hands will be placed the best stories that money can buy and in translating these stories into celluloid they have been told to spare no reasonable expense.

Mr. Edwards, in all probability, will continue to direct Theda Bara's super-productions. This star and this director form a strong motion picture team.

R. A. Walsh will continue to produce that type of big productions which has won him his reputation.

"Why America Will Win," just completed by Mr. Stanton, is large in scope, and daring in execution.

In Mr. Lloyd and William Farnum the Fox organization has a combination which it believes cannot be beaten.

Lynn Reynolds directed Tom Mix in "Fame and Fortune," which will be the first Mix release under Victory Pictures; Harry Millarde has just completed a picture with Peggy Hyland as the star, entitled "Bonnie Annie Laurie"; Mr. LeSaint's "Kultur," starring Gladys Brockwell, has just been finished and this director is now at work on "The Strange Woman," which will be an early Brockwell Victory Picture release.

Thornby, Lawrence, Buel and Harbaugh are all directors whose works have stood the test of meeting public approval, and in 1918-19 it is expected they will continue to show the same growth that has marked their endeavors in the past. Henry Lehrman, of course, will continue to make the Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedies.

Hall Goes to Division of Films

Screen Telegram Releases Its Editor to Government for Duration of War.

RAY L. HALL, supervising editor of the Screen Telegram, has been released to the Committee on Public Information for the duration of the war by James M. Sheldon, president of Mutual. Terry Ramsaye, director of publicity for Mutual, has assumed in addition to his other duties that of managing editor of the Screen Telegram. Mr. Hall becomes production manager for the Division of Films.

The Screen Telegram has recently been moved from Chicago to New York, its staff reorganized and its scope broadened. Its excellent screen value, a feature since its inception, is assured to its patrons by the fact that it is being produced in the laboratories of the Paragon Films. Mr. Hall joined the staff when it was decided to bring the publication east, and took charge of the general reorganization of the department.

In his new position Mr. Hall will have direct supervision of the Official War Review, a weekly screen review of the war made up of the official films of the United States, British, French and Italian governments. To this task he brings long experience in the editing of news reels. He will also have supervision of the feature films issued by the Division of Films and of other pictures.

Much of this work consists in gathering and compiling films in America to be shown in other countries through the foreign agencies of the Committee on Public Information. Mr. Hall in addition to his film experience has a wide experience in newspaper work, having served for a number of years in the news departments of various press associations.

At the close of the war Mr. Hall is expected to rejoin the staff of the Screen Telegram.

Many Subjects Slated for Miss Young

Actress Returning to New York to Complete Plans After Series of Ovations on Journey.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG is now on her way east and will arrive in New York about the time this is printed. She comes after a triumphal tour of the western coast, which is said to have been an ovation from start to finish.

Miss Young comes to New York to go over plans of productions under the management of Harry Garson, who is also on his way east in connection with his various business interests. Miss Young has just completed what she considers her best picture, "The Savage Woman," adapted by Kathryne Stuart from Francois Curel's celebrated novel of the same name, and which is said to be one of the most costly pictures that has ever been released on any regular program.

Miss Young's next picture will be a film version of "The Man Tamer," adapted for screen purposes by Kathryne Stuart. This will be followed by "Cheating Cheaters," one of the most valuable stage properties that could be secured for presentation in pictures, and said to have been obtained at the highest price ever paid for screen rights. Following "Cheating Cheaters," Miss Young will produce "The Road Through the Dark", by Maud Radford Warren, and Marah Ellis Ryan's "The Soul of Rafael," which by the way, is the first story by this authoress to be seen on the screen.

Miss Young will return to California in three weeks to continue her production work. She will establish a permanent home there, and in all probability will shortly start work on the plans for her own studio in Pasadena. Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Kimball, Miss Young's father and mother, have already purchased their home in Los Angeles, and are residing there at the present time.

Geraldine Farrar Reaches Wyoming

Goldwyn Star Rides in Day Coach and Passes Out Cherries and Chocolates to Fellow Travelers.

FAR from fatigued by the twenty-five hundred mile journey from New York to Cody, Wyoming, Geraldine Farrar has arrived in the Far West as fit as if she had motored from her home to the Goldwyn studios in Fort Lee, and is now in the midst of "The Hell Cat" in the country once the stamping ground of the pioneer Buffalo Bill.

At one stage of the journey, when it was learned that it was impossible to obtain a drawing room for the Goldwyn star, she urged Director Reginald Barker not to put himself to needless trouble about it, declaring she would enjoy riding in the day coach with everybody else. And she did.

With the temperature at 100 in the shade the prima donna chatted with every stranger who recognized her and passed cherries and chocolates to everyone in the car.

Crossing the Bad Lands of North Dakoto, and at every station in Montana, word had somehow came that Geraldine Farrar was on the train. She was quick to seize the opportunity to greet everyone, either from her table in the dining car or from the platform, and when still another change was necessary at Frannie, Wyoming, the Goldwyn star held laughing court on the railroad tracks, surrounded by her company, in the center of a circle of bags and boxes, cameras and tripods.

When Cody was finally reached, Geraldine Farrar and Lou Tellegen, who accompanies his wife, were received at the Hotel Irma by Mrs. Irma Cody Garlow, daughter of Buffalo Bill and proprietress of the quaint hostelry.

World Pictures to Shorten Titles

Will Restrict Them to Fewer Letters for Benefit of Sign and Newspaper Advertisers.

WORLD FILM, having consulted with a large number of exhibitors, will endeavor whenever possible to shorten the titles to such pictures as they produce as will make it possible for the exhibitors to display them on the electric signs in front of their theaters. The motion picture theaters throughout the country are rapidly installing electric signs, and as the space on these advertising mediums are limited as regards the number of letters that can be employed it becomes necessary to shorten titles of features. If there is any value in a title, then advantage should be taken of it. The space on these signs generally permit of the name of the star, and if the title of the picture is not too long it also can be displayed. The original title of Madge Evans new picture, which will be put in work on August 1, was "The Latch String Hangs Out." To make it possible for all theaters to use both the name of the star and the title of the picture, it will be released as "Snug Harbor."

In regards to newspaper advertising, where an exhibitor has contracted to use a certain amount of space each season he will be benefited by this change of policy, as a title of an average length of ten or fifteen letters can be displayed to greater advantage than one of twenty to thirty letters. The same amount of space is used but the letters are larger and carry further.

OPERATOR HAS FILM CLEANING INVENTION.

Ed F. Shue, who is the operator in the home office projection room of World Pictures, has just completed a valuable invention for cleaning films of dirt and oil while rewinding. The device is simple but very effective. It consists of two spools on a slightly movable arm. Each spool carries a ribbon of muslin tightly wound around the spool. The film is threaded between the two spools and as it is rewound the oil and dirt is wiped off on the muslin. The movable arm prevents any breaking of the film. The device is appealing forcefully to those theaters who desire to return film to the exchanges in the best possible condition.

Laemmle Shows Exhibitor How It's Done

Universal to Make Picture Designed to Uncover to Showman the Problems of the Manufacturer.

A CAMPAIGN, nationwide in scope and having for its express purpose the enlightenment of the exhibitor to a realization of the problems which confront the organization which produces and releases the subjects he uses, is about to be initiated by Universal.

Universal's idea is, frankly, to get into even closer touch with the exhibitors than it has hitherto been. Believing that the time has come when both producer and exhibitor should get together and share each other's problems and for mutual benefit generally this organization is now putting the final touches to the campaign which it believes will help bring this about.

To this end Harry Levey, manager of the industrial department of Universal, was recently instructed by Carl Laemmle to prepare a film which would place before the exhibitors in every community in the land the story of the whys and wherefores back of the company's product. Every phase of the producing and releasing ends of the moving picture industry will be filmed, and in this manner the exhibitor will be given an opportunity such as he has never had before of seeing for himself the inside of the manufacturer's business.

Starting with the purchase of the original story the picture shows how it is shipped into scenario form. Then comes the planning and the building of the interiors, the construction of props and the making of wardrobes, after which follows the actual filming of the production at Universal City and the touches given it before it is shipped to New York, where the final O. K. is given it.

In the home office at 1600 Broadway awaits the committee, composed of all the Universal department heads, which passes upon the pictures released by that company. The manner in which this committee works will be shown, after which will be presented every detail of the developing, printing, titling, editing and cutting in the laboratories at Fort Lee, New Jersey.

Sending the completed prints to the numerous Universal exchanges throughout the country will next be presented in animated form. The exhibitors will thus be enabled to see the enormous exchange system and the intricacy of the machinery which supplies him with the pictures he presents. In this manner there will be brought home to him the disturbance that is caused whenever a show, scheduled to be sent to another exhibitor, is not returned promptly.

There will also be incorporated in this Universal subject the making of a news weekly. The system which enables the editor of the Universal Animated Weekly, Universal Current Events and the Universal Screen Magazine to keep in touch with his correspondents the world over will be carefully explained, while of unusual interest will be the manner in which an event of importance is almost immediately put into film form.

In dwelling upon the details of this get-together plan Mr. Laemmle declared that it is simply in line with the program determined upon at the convention of his company's salesmen, which recently took place at Chicago.

"We have not as yet decided upon a title for the picture," said President Laemmle, "nor are we prepared at this time to divulge the manner of distribution. Suffice to say the plan already decided upon will be thoroughly tested before it is put into effect on a nationwide scale. That it will go a long way toward enabling our organization to obtain the fullest co-operation of the exhibitors in our effort to solve some of the problems now confronting us is my firm belief."

Famous Players Has New Projection Room

In Same Building With Home Office, It Is Equipped With Latest Devices.

WHAT is undoubtedly one of the largest and best appointed private projection rooms in New York has recently been completed and is now in daily use at the offices of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. The new room is located on the ninth floor of the building at 485 Fifth avenue and is 15 by 35 feet in dimensions. Twenty-eight opera chairs have been installed, placed in five rows, each row being set slighty above the row in front of it, affording an unobstructed view of the screen. The seats, of extra large size, are upholstered in Spanish leather. The screen, which is approximately twenty feet from the first row of seats, is nine feet in width by seven in height. The pictures are projected from two new Simplex machines.

The room is finished in a rich brown color, the walls being wainscoted and trimmed with oak and painted in imitation of Spanish leather, with a conventional border design. Heavy gray velour curtains hang at the windows, which are of orange glass, while a gray velvet carpet covers the floor. The semi-indirect lighting system is used, the light being shed from six lamps hung from the ceiling. Those above the seats, sufficiently shaded, are kept lighted during the showing of a picture to enable reviewers to make notes if they so desire. In addition there are floor lights which make it possible for one to find a seat easily and without danger of stumbling on the steps. The room is equipped with an intercommunicating telephone directly connected with the operator's booth. A ventilating system is now being installed which will furnish thirty cubic feet of fresh air to each person every minute.

Author of Serials Picturesque Figure

GILSON WILLETS, who is now a member of Pathe's scenario staff in New York, has written twenty-five books, some of which have been best sellers in their day. "The First Law," one of his most successful volumes of fiction, forms the basis for the picture of the same name in which Irene Castle stars and which is released by Pathe as a regular program feature July 28. Mr. Willets wrote "Hands Up," the Ruth Roland serial, the first episode of which will be released August 18. He will be remembered as the author of the first motion picture serial, "The Adventures of Kathlyn," and also of the other big one, "The Mystery of the Double Cross," which was adapted from his novel and which is still a good seller. Mr. Willets might be described as a world citizen. Althqugh born in old Manhattan and the descendant of one of the earliest mayors of the city, he has spent half his life seeking adventure in foreign lands. He used to be a commuter between New York and London, for many years crossing the Atlantic twice a year.

Gilson Willets.

In addition to writing the final episodes of "Hands Up," he has finished plays for Baby Marie Osborne and Frank Keenan, both to be filmed on the coast this winter. He is now at work on a new drama for Fannie Ward.

LIEUTENANT KAUFMAN IS MARRIED.

Lieutenant Albert A. Kaufman, who for three years was studio manager of the Famous Players Film Company previous to joining the photographic division of the Signal Corps, was married Thursday, July 18, at Washington, D. C., to Miss Rita A. Krone of New York. The bride is a well known screen player, having appeared in an important role in "The Song of Songs," an Artcraft picture in which Elsie Ferguson was starred.

Associate Justice Siddons, of the Supreme Court of the District of Columbia, performed the ceremony, which took place at the home of Capt. Louis Mack. Although a military wedding it was a quiet affair and was a complete surprise to even the most intimate friends of the couple.

PATHE CLUB OUTING SET FOR AUGUST 25.

Governors of the Pathe Club announce that the annual midsummer outing will be held Sunday, August 25. Executives and employes of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in New York City comprise the membership of the club. Provided a suitable steamer can be chartered, a trip up the Hudson with these attendant delights is the present plan for the day. The governors thought they had a steamer already chartered, but the government commandeered it the other day. Now they are around shopping for another ship.

Stewart Pictures Go to First National

Louis Mayer to Distribute Productions of Former Vitagraph Star Through Exhibitors' Circuit.

INTEREST attaches to the announcement that the new Anita Stewart productions will be distributed by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc. The final approval of the legal details whereby this arrangement was definitely affected occupied a large part of the time of the circuit directors during their recent session in New York. Speculation regarding the star's future, particularly from the distribution angle, will therefore be set at rest.

It was known for some time that several of the big companies desired to secure the services of Anita Stewart upon the expiration of her contract with Vitagraph. Louis B. Mayer, the executive head of the Anita Stewart Productions, Inc., did not attempt, however, to give serious consideration to these offers until he had adjusted his differences with Vitagraph.

Upon giving the matter final and deliberate consideration, Mr. Mayer decided to accept the offer submitted by the First National executives. No time will be lost in providing Miss Stewart with a suitable vehicle for her debut on the circuit, and it is expected that this event will take place within about two months. Louis B. Mayer has issued the following statement regarding the closing of releasing arrangements with the organization that has successfully handled so many big box-office attractions of late:

"In looking over the general field of distribution, I soon became convinced of the soundness of the policy upon which the First National Exhibitors' Circuit has been built. It has seemed to me and my associates to be the logical outgrowth of the growing demand of successful motion picture exhibitors to purchase their own productions under circumstances that will guarantee the making of feature films at the highest quality and provide star, producer and distributor with the maximum of income on the time and money invested. It seems to me the most direct way of reaching the public and the quickest and surest way of getting returns, for it stands to reason that if the leading exhibitors cannot secure films under circumstances which guarantee them superior quality as well as assured profits, then the whole future of the business will be affected."

"No proposition laid before the directors at their recent meeting met with more unanimous or enthusiastic indorsement than the deal with Louis B. Mayer to handle the new Anita Stewart productions," said Manager J. D. Williams of the First National. "All members of the circuit know through past experiences how high Miss Stewart stands in the regard of the film going public, and as soon as the plan whereby her services could be secured for a series of superfeatures was submitted no time was last in coming to terms.

"I can say without exaggeration that the amount of money set aside for story material and for direction will in each case amount to a higher percentage of the production cost than has ever before been appropriated for a series of motion pictures. Mr. Mayer has decided to secure the services of one of the most experienced and highest salaried directors in this country. We confidently believe that Anita Stewart will add several new and brilliant chapters to the history of American screen art during the coming year."

Metro Holds Third Annual Convention

Thirty-six Representatives, From All America, Assemble in New York to Talk Business and Play.

METRO'S third annual convention occupied two days of business and as many nights of pleasure Friday and Saturday, July 26 and 27. The Yacht Room, at Hotel Astor, was the scene of the business sessions and Coney Island, Sheepshead Bay, a closing banquet at the Astor and an evening at the Midnight Follies furnished the frolics.

Friday, at 11 a. m., the branch managers and special representatives assembled at the Astor to begin the business sessions. Metro's plans for the coming year were freely discussed embodying the announcement that fifty-two all star series subjects would be produced and released, along with twenty-six screen classics as special issues through Metro service. The matter of salesmanship, service to exhibitors, publicity and general co-operation were discussed by executives.

J. Robert Rubin, secretary and general counsel of the corporation; William E. Atkinson, general manager; Harry Cohen, special representative, and Joseph W. Engel, treasurer (who made the trip from Los Angeles to attend the convention), addressed the delegates Friday morning, and in the afternoon William L. Sherrill, whose "My Own United States" is a screen classic; Arthur James, director of Metro publicity, and Richard A. Rowland, president of Metro, made the speeches. Saturday morning the delegates again assembled at the Astor and cleaned up the business part of the mission that brought them to Broadway.

Friday evening all hands repaired to Tappan's Hotel at Sheepshead Bay, to indulge in a "shore dinner," and much other frivolity, winding up at Coney Island, where the well known chutes were shot—and everything. Herman Lanz was leader of the party Friday evening, with Harry Cohen specialty publicity promoter and booster for "To Hell With the Kaiser." The Old Boy would have been there Friday evening if Cohen had been given full swing of affairs.

The Saturday night banquet was a big affair with Mr. Reubens presiding and Joseph Engel making the principal speech. After the "eats" all hands hurried to New Amsterdam theater roof to enjoy the "Midnight Follies." In addition to the executives associated with Metro's head office E. M. Saunders, of Boston; Cresson E. Smith, Chicago; Joseph Unger, of Regal Films, Canada; Harry Lustig, San Francisco; S. A. Shirley, special representatives for the Middle West, and exchange managers from all Metro branches participated in the sessions.

Canadian Managers Defend Action

When Complaint Is Made Against St. John Exchangemen Margetts Convinces Halifax Authorities No Boycott Has Been Committed.

AN interesting situation has developed in St. John, N. B., in connection with the Exchange Manager's Association. It is said all the exchanges except the Mutual joined the association. Also it is alleged by an exhibitor that those using the Mutual service had their films from other exchanges canceled and thus practically boycotted the Mutual exchanges and the exhibitors using the service.

This happened in Halifax and an exhibitor complained to the Government, which promptly investigated the affair. G. A. Margetts of the Canadian Universal, who is now president of the Exchange Manager's Association, went over to Halifax and convinced the government that there was no intention on the part of the association to boycott anyone, but that any exchange had the right to refuse to supply films when it deemed best.

Talking with G. A. Margetts in St. John he says: "The Exchange Manager's Association is endeavoring to work justice between the exhibitor and the exchange," says Mr. Margetts. "It is not refusing to supply anyone with service unless there is a good reason."

A meeting of the Exhibitors' League was held in Halifax at which General Manager Basil Horsfel of the Mutual and F. G. Spencer of St. John were present and a resolution was passed asking the Exchange Manager's Association to allow its constitution and by-laws to be known and in effect to promise that there should be no combination boycotting or blacklisting and that no maximum or minimum price should be fixed.

In St. John W. C. Smith was using the Mutual films and he was unable to get films from the other companies, it is charged. He made plans to handle the General Film Company's output and this, with the pictures of the K. E. S. E. gives him a good service. The offices of the old Metro have been rented, and Mr. Smith showed your correspondent his order sheet which already contained a great many orders.

Famous Players Start Billboard Drive

Will Post in Every Important City Twenty-four-Sheets Exploiting Plays and Players.

AUGUST 1 will witness the inauguration by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation of a huge billboard advertising campaign in the interest of Paramount and Artcraft pictures which, it is declared, will be the biggest of its kind ever launched by any organization in the industry. The campaign will be conducted through one of the largest and best known billposting firms in the United States and will cover every important city in the country.

The bulk of the advertising will be of twenty-four-sheet size, and in design and workmanship will be the finest examples of the lithographic art. The posters will be in four colors, and will exploit individually every Paramount and Artcraft star, together with the productions in which they appear. As supplementary displays smaller posters will be utilized in every available place.

Fox Has Large Plans for 1918-1919

With Two New Brands, Victory and Excel, Corporation Will Issue a Total of 185 Productions of Varying Lengths During Coming Year—Some of the Greater Things Company Aims to Do.

Will issue six classes of productions releases.
Big Timely Pictures	4
Standard Pictures	26
Victory Pictures	26
Excel Pictures	26
Sunshine Comedies	26
Mutt and Jeff	52
Standard Pictures
Theda Bara	8
William Farnum	8
All-Star Casts	10

Victory Pictures and Excel Pictures to be confined to standard works of best writers and to plays that have had successful runs.

Principal stars—Theda Bara, William Farnum, George Walsh, Gladys Brockwell, Tom Mix, Virginia Pearson, Peggy Hyland and Jewel Carmen.

Big releases include a war production, a picture based on the life of General Pershing, an Annette Kellermann submarine phantasy, and a picture based on the life story of the most beautiful woman in the world and her problem.

TWO new groups of pictures with six stars, the details of releases on three other groups and the announcement of a number of big timely pictures, including a Theodore Roosevelt production, one big war subject made under the direction of R. A. Walsh, a picture based on the life of General John J. Pershing, a submarine phantasy and a picture based on the story of the most beautiful woman in the world are described in the statement of 1918-1919 policy issued by William Fox.

William Fox, Head of Big Producing Organization.

The two new groups are Victory Pictures and Excel Pictures and the policy of expansion involved in their inauguration, it is declared, will be characteristic of all Fox activities during the forthcoming season. Mr. Fox is quoted as being of the opinion that the war will continue to result in a general bettering of conditions in the motion picture trade and as believing it to be the duty of the producer to assist the exhibitor in meeting the expected increased demand for high grade pictures.

During the season beginning September 1, Mr. Fox will issue six groups of productions, all except two series to be on a basis of twenty-six releases a year. The groups are big, timely pictures, Standard pictures, Victory pictures, Excel pictures, Sunshine comedies, and Mutt and Jeff Animated cartoons.

There will be no specified number of the big, timely pictures. No release dates will be announced at this time for the pictures already completed, and additions to the present list will be made strictly on a quality basis after the productions have been completed and passed upon by a reviewing board. Releases will not be as a group but as individual attractions, on the open market, or otherwise as may be decided later. Announcement has thus far been made of this group. These are:

"The Prussian Cur," produced by R. A. Walsh. This production has a large cast, including Miriam Cooper and Captain Horst von de Goltz, who is responsible for the story and who has revealed minute details of the system inaugurated by Ambassador von Bernstorff for crippling America's war industries. The picture is said to be a complete expose of the Kaiser's operations in the United States.

"Why America Will Win," which was staged by Richard Stanton and is based on the life of General John J. Pershing, who is America's hero of the hour and who is certain constantly to be more and more strongly in the limelight as the endless battle on the Western Front progresses.

"Queen of the Sea," featuring Annette Kellermann, is heralded as a bigger and better production than "A Daughter of the Gods." It is radically different, it is declared, from any other picture ever made—so different that its originators describe it as a "submarine phantasy."

"Why I Would Not Marry" is the title of the picture which is said to be based on the life of the world's most beautiful woman.

Other Big Productions.

Mr. Fox during the coming season will complete a picture based on Theodore Roosevelt's story, "Put the Flag on the Firing Line" and also will exhibit "Salome."

The latter is a Theda Bara super-production. It was made in California under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards. Arrangements have been completed for showing this picture in the principal dramatic theaters of the largest cities of the country at $1 top prices. "Salome" will not be released on a rental basis until 1920.

All booking arrangements are in the hands of Samuel F. Kingston, who has offices at the headquarters of the Fox corporation, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. Details are not available at branch offices of the company.

Winfield R. Sheehan, General Manager.

Standard Pictures.

The new season for Standard pictures, which are now just a little more than one year old, will begin September 1. These productions will be released, as heretofore, on a basis of twenty-six a year, with Theda Bara and William Farnum as the principal stars. Each of these actors will produce eight pictures and the ten others will be productions of a big timely nature with all-star casts.

The first Standard Pictures release of the season will be the William Farnum de luxe production, "Riders of the Purple Sage." This is a dramatization of one of Zane Grey's best western novels. The production was made in Utah and in the Grand Canyon of the Colorado, in Arizona. Mr. Farnum and his director, Frank Lloyd, with a large company, spent nearly two months away from the studios in Los Angeles making the exteriors for this production.

Another Zane Grey story, "The Rainbow Trail," will furnish the basis of the second William Farnum release of the season. This is a sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage," and while both stories are complete within themselves, the connection is said to be such that one will become an important factor in the success of the other.

Miss Bara's first two productions will be "When a Woman Sins" and "The She Devil." The former, it is announced, affords this actress another opportunity for the creation of a great vampire role. The story, moreover, is one of regeneration.

"The She Devil" is reported to be materially different from anything Miss Bara hitherto has done. It is the story of a domineering coquette, playing her will on her many admirers. She falls in love with an artist who visits her Spanish mountain town and tries to induce the artist to take her to Paris. He declines, but the girl, after being captured by bandits, escapes, and goes to Paris, where she creates a sensation. She eventually wins the artist's love, but only after the two have been taken by bandits and have had narrow escapes with their lives.

Victory Pictures.

Victory Pictures will be released on a basis of twenty-six productions a year under a group contract, the first release being early in September. This new series will alternate with Standard Pictures.

The first of these pictures will be "Fame and Fortune," which is a dramatization of "Slow Burgess," a very recent novel by Charles Alden Seltzer, who is one of the most popular fiction writers of today. Tom Mix appears as the star in this production and the Fox management pronounces it unquestionably the best picture that Mix has yet made. It is declared to be exceptionally strong in love interest and in feats of dare-deviltry.

James E. MacBride, Assistant to General Manager.

Miss Brockwell's first picture in the Victory series will be "Kultur," based on Germany's intrique in Austria. Her second will be "The Strange Woman," by William J. Hurlbut, a dramatic production in which Elsie Ferguson starred for a season in New York. This story also has been novelized and the sales of the book are reported by the publishers to have exceeded a million copies. Mr. Fox desires to give exhibitors who contract for Victory Pictures the advantage of the very best stories available.

George Walsh's debut as a Victory Picture star will be in a play directed by his brother, R. A. Walsh. It is reported that the Messrs. Walsh will work in combination as star and director in a number of Victory Pictures, in which connection it will be remembered that these two have not yet produced a picture which exhibitors everywhere have not been willing to pronounce a winner. The present production, "I'll Say So!" has been completed and is said to abound in the sort of daring stunts that have made George Walsh famous. It is described as a thrilling patriotic drama, involving a story of love, adventure and war.

Excel Pictures.

Excel Pictures, the other new trade mark brand, also are to be released on a basis of twenty-six productions a year, alternating every other week with Victory Pictures. The arrangement of releases provides the opportunity for exhibitors to run a week stand with Standard or Victory Pictures and an alternation of Excel Pictures.

The idea of William Fox in deciding upon the inauguration of Excel Pictures, it is announced, was to afford greater opportunities to the stars in this group and to give exhibitors a better grade of strong productions than would have been possible under any other arrangement. Special directors who have achieved success in motion picture work have been selected to carry out this phase of the new policy and have been assured they will be provided with the very highest type of strong, human interest stories. All of the stars selected are well known to exhibitors and have won recognition through merit. All of them have completed their first releases and it is expected that the announcement of titles will be made shortly.

Sunshine Comedies.

Henry Lehrman's Sunshine Comedies will be released by Mr. Fox during 1918 and 1919 on a contract basis. The same care that has been taken in the past to make these offerings distinctive and of standard-setting quality will be exercised throughout the coming season. The most careful censorship is maintained, not only from the comedy standpoint, but from the standpoint also of wholesomeness.

Mutt and Jeff Cartoons.

The Bud Fisher Mutt and Jeff animated cartoons are to be continued as William Fox releases during the 1918-19 season. These 500-foot subjects, released weekly, are rapidly extending their territorial bounds, according to the distributor, and now are being shown in practically every city and town in the country. They are being strongly and profitably featured by the Rialto theater on Broadway and by many other first class houses in New York and elsewhere. Their popularity which has been steadily increasing, has taken a jump, it is explained, since Bud Fisher went to Europe and began sending back sketches and cartoons of conditions in the war zone. These "war issues" have a favorable effect upon audiences, and particularly on those persons who have sons at the front and who have not previously thought of conditions there as possibly having a lighter side.

Policy.

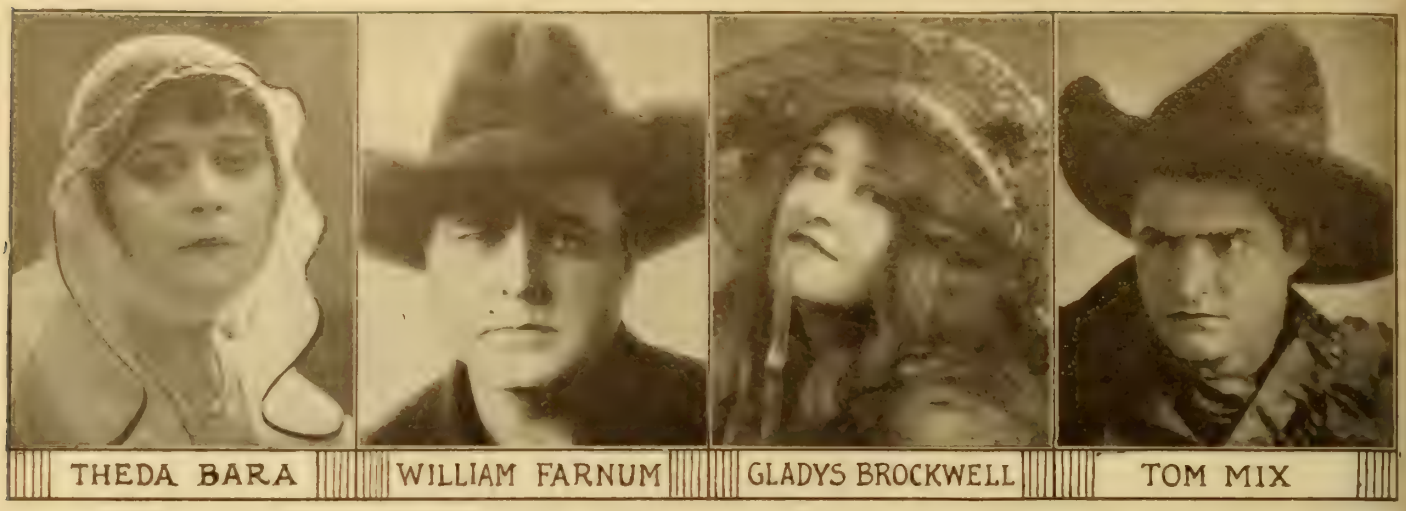
In a policy statement he has issued to exhibitors, Mr. Fox emphasizes the fact that his productions always have first been made with a view to filling his own requirements as the owner of a chain of theaters extending from the Atlantic seaboard to the Mississippi River. This becomes a more important consideration every year because of the constantly increasing scope of his activities as an exhibitor. His best guarantee of good service is the fact that he is manufacturing primarily for himself, and selling merely to afford to other exhibitors the service he himself was unable to obtain until he took the initiative in providing it.

Victory Pictures is New Fox Brand

These Will Be Issued Fortnightly and Will Feature Gladys Brockwell, George Walsh and Tom Mix.

AFTER months of preparation, careful planning and a thorough investigation of exhibitors' demands, the Fox Film Corporation announces that a big and important part of its policy for 1918-19 will be Victory Pictures. These will be made by three stars—Gladys Brockwell, George Walsh and Tom Mix.

The plans for these productions call for twenty-six subjects, to be released at two-week intervals. The first will be released early in September. It will be Tom Mix in "Fame and Fortune," a swift-moving Western drama that is based on the popular magazine story, "Slow Burgess," by Charles Alden Seltzer.



The second will be Gladys Brockwell in "Kultur," a powerful drama based on German intrigue in Austria.

The third will be George Walsh in a picture which bears the title of "I'll Say So!" This is a breezy story of the love and patriotism of a young American, and will be followed by Tom Mix in "Mr. Logan, U. S. A."

In announcing Victory Pictures, the Fox corporation declares that this series is the logical development of the company's policy to meet the demand of exhibitors—a policy which has been adhered to throughout the history of the corporation. It has been estimated that the Victory Pictures series will give a great flexibility and thus enable exhibitors better to satisfy their patrons.

The stars who will make these pictures during the coming year have not been taken, willy-nilly, from the regular stage, regardless of their ability as screen players; they have grown up and developed in the William Fox organization, and their popularity is based on good, solid achievement and honest, intelligent work.

Now, for these three players William Fox has plans in his 1918-19 policy that will give them greater opportunity to display the talents that have brought them success. A variety of plays expected to meet every taste is the aim in arranging the productions. Negotiations are now nearing completion for the purchase of a number of well-known literary works, and announcement of these will be made from time to time.

Portray Pershing in "Why America Will Win"

Fox Production Based on the Life of the Commander of America's Forces in France.

THE announcement comes from the William Fox offices that Director Richard Stanton has completed "Why America Will Win," and that it will be ready shortly to be shown to the public. The picture is based on the life of General John J. Pershing, commander of the American Expeditionary Force in Europe, and is promised to be a sensational success.

Seldom is the biography of a great man published before he dies. "Why America Will Win" was produced not merely as an answer to the vital question, but also to give every American a true insight into the character and life of the world's greatest military commander.

The old adage that truth is stranger than fiction is exemplified in this picture. The inventive mind of the ablest dramatist could not have invented more thrilling incidents than those through which General Pershing has actually lived.

Director Stanton and his assistants spent months in investigating the facts of the events in which General Pershing has played an important part. His birthplace, the scene of his early schooldays, as well as the fields of his later victories, were combed to obtain the settings and the true atmosphere necessary to portray the events with vivid realism.

So great a period of the world's military history did General Pershing's activities cover that an exact replica of every known weapon from the Malay kriss and the Moro bolo to the monster tanks and the still more monstrous seventy-mile cannon of the Germans had to be made for this picture.

The keynote of "Why America Will Win" is victory. Every event, every campaign that this man has planned and fought has resulted in victory.

The Fox studios created six armies to picture the battles of the different decades. It was necessary to reproduce the courts and palaces of the rulers of the great countries of the earth with true exactness to form settings for the many historic events.

"Why America Will Win" shows the human side of General Pershing, the man, the husband and the father.

Gladys Brockwell with Fox Three Years

Player Selected to Appear in Victory Pictures Is An Industrious Worker.

I ARRIVED at the studio at 8 o'clock and met Gladys Brockwell. I understand she is always the first one you meet out here. She begins work every morning at 8 o'clock and quits at 6 o'clock and she's just the same at 6 o'clock as she is at 8—a sweet, good-humored girl."

That was a tribute to Gladys Brockwell recently written by a visitor to the William Fox studio at Hollywood, Cal., and in writing it the visitor unwittingly gave the secret of the splendid success which has led William Fox to put her in Victory Pictures.

Gladys Brockwell is a motion picture actress who takes her work seriously. And taking it seriously, she puts every ounce of her energy and thought into the making of better Gladys Brockwell pictures. The result is that since joining the William Fox forces her popularity has grown steadily and consistently until demand for her pictures became so insistent that William Fox was obliged to put her in Victory Pictures.

The first of these Victory Pictures to be done by Miss Brockwell will be "Kultur," a drama based on German intrigues in Austria. The second will be "The Strange Woman," a picturization of the great stage success of William J. Hurlbut, which in its original version, ran a year on Broadway.

Miss Brockwell first appeared in motion pictures in 1913 and has been with the William Fox forces on the West Coast for three years. The initial production she made for Mr. Fox in point of time was "The Honor System." This photoplay was not released, however, until after Miss Brockwell had appeared in several other films. Consequently she enjoyed the unique experience of having become well known before her first picture.

Miss Brockwell had important roles in "The End of the Trail," and "Fires of Conscience." She gave such splendid performances in each of these productions that Mr. Fox elevated her to stardom in "Sins of Her Parent," and she has been starred ever since.

Three Fox Stars Featured in Excel

Second of New Brands Will Exploit Virginia Pearson, Jewel Carmen and Peggy Hyland.

ONE of the big phases of the 1918-19 policy of the Fox corporation will be Excel Pictures. This series will be released on a basis of twenty-six a year and the standard of excellence is guaranteed by all the resources of the William Fox organization. The stars announced for these pictures are Virginia Pearson, Jewel Carmen and Peggy Hyland, all three of whom have won reputations since joining the Fox forces.

Miss Pearson, Miss Hyland and Miss Carmen have already completed the first of their Excel Picture releases, which will be offered to the exhibitors early in September. Miss Pearson has just finished "The Queen of Hearts," under the direction of Edmund Lawrence. Miss Hyland made "Marriages Are Made" under the direction of Carl Harbaugh and the first Excel production by Jewel Carmen is "Lawless Love," a stirring Western play based on "Above the Law," by Max Brand, which appeared in one of the popular magazines.

Decision to put these three Fox stars in Excel Pictures is a result of a canvass of the exhibitors of the country. In announcing Miss Hyland as one of the stars of these pictures the Fox corporation points to numerous letters from exhibitors the burden of all being that they like Miss Hyland, they like her plays and they want to get more of her pictures.

George Walsh a Popular Favorite

Young Man Strives to Portray That Which is Cleanest and Best, Avoiding the Morbid.

BY being chosen one of the three stars who will make Victory Pictures for William Fox, George Walsh, described as the "human thunderbolt," has added another chapter to the story of his career in motion pictures. His success and his rapid climb are notable, yet on analysis there is nothing remarkable about his success. His record of achievement is based on the foundations of hard work, close study and a mind alert to every phase of his art's progress.

The reason for Walsh's popularity is his wholesome, optimistic way of acting. He typifies all that is cleanest and best in young America and Americans love to see him on the screen, because Americans like that type of young man—fresh, resourceful, humorous, athletic and quick-witted. That is the kind of an actor George Walsh is and that is the kind of play he produces. There is never anything morbid, or risque, or dubious in the plays that Walsh enacts.

Looking back over his most recent productions—"The Kid Is Clever," "Brave and Bold," "Jack Spurlock—Prodigal," "Pride of New York," "This Is the Life" and "The Yankee Boy"—one is struck with the uniformity of this player's success. It has been a good, healthy success, steady and consistent.

A younger brother of R. A. Walsh, director of "The Honor System" and other big successes, George Walsh brings to his work a thorough knowledge of screen technique. He also has the benefit of a remarkable physical development, due to his life-long love for athletics.

Mix Has Made Hit in Fox Pictures

When Manufacturer Saw His First "Bit" He Sent Word to West Coast to Make Him a Star.

TOM MIX in Victory Pictures! Less than a year ago William Fox saw Tom Mix in a comparatively minor role in one of his pictures. The absolutely new, fresh and unhackneyed style of Mix's acting at once struck the manufacturer, and as soon as telegraph wires could carry the message West Tom Mix was a star.

That was only a few months ago, and Tom Mix's name soon appeared on the list of stars making Fox Special Features. Mix, under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, was put in a play called "Cupid's Round-Up." It went over big. This was followed by "Six-Shooter Andy," and from all over the country letters of commendation began to pour into the Fox office. Then followed "Western Blood" and "Ace High." Tom Mix was made.

Tom Mix, cowboy, soldier, Texas ranger, has never known what fear is, and when he went into motion pictures a few years ago he brought to his work the same daring and sensational riding that had been his life-habit.

Tom Mix recently completed his first production that will be released as a Victory Picture. It is called "Fame and Fortune."

Mix is now at work on another production in Hollywood, which will be a Victory Picture. This is "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," and in it Mix is said to have a play that is even better than "Fame and Fortune." In addition two books by Charles Alden Seltzer have just been bought for production by Mix. These are "The Two-Gun Man" and "The Coming of the Law." Both of these books will be filmed for Victory Pictures.

"The Prussian Cur" a Film Epic

Reviews in a Dramatic Way World Events of Fifty Years, with Particular Reference to the Hun in America.

THE PRUSSIAN CUR" is a film epic that goes back through half a century of history and reviews every important phase of the World War. It also is a startling exposé of the workings of German spies and propagandists in the United States, and depicts Horst von der Goltz, the man who hatched the Welland Canal plot, reenacting in person the enemy outrages which have alarmed and maddened the whole country.

The action opens with a dramatic contrast between peace-loving America and war-mad Germany. Abraham Lincoln, at the close of the Rebellion, congratulates a reunited nation on the birth of a new freedom. But in Europe, a few years later, Wilhelm I of Prussia, having crushed France in the War of 1870, plans with Bismarck and his Junker nobles to build a mighty military empire.

And so, as the years pass, the German youths are trained for war. Then comes "The Day," and the Hun, being fully prepared, runs his steel through the heart of Belgium. The Kaiser, Von Hindenburg, Von Tirpitz and their war chiefs decree ruthlessness on land and sea.

In America, our people going on their ways of peace, are warned by Ambassador Bernstorff that the Lusitania will be sunk. His warning is scorned, the liner departs, and hundreds of innocent lives are lost. Eventually Bernstorff is sent home, President Wilson delivers his war message to Congress, and the United States and Germany plunge into war.

But Bernstorff has left behind him an "invisible embassy," a powerful system of espionage and propaganda, headed by Otto Goltz (Capt. Horst von der Goltz), and Wolff von Eidel. These and their agents burn factories, wreck trains, damage aircraft, stir up labor troubles, poison public opinion, report vital secrets to Berlin.

Yet the nation starts. Great factories forge the sinews of war. New ships slip down the ways to carry men and materials to Europe. The youth of America flocks to the colors. Working for the Red Cross, selling Liberty Bonds, knitting, saving, toiling for victory. American men, women and children "carry on" in the name of humanity. Our fleets hunt down the submarines, and an endless line of transports lands our boys "over there." All this is the background for the accompanying dramatic story.

Aims and Men Behind Fox Pictures

Outline of Company's Basic Principles and Sketches of Its Chief Executives—List of Exchange Managers.

IN its fourth year as a producing and distributing company, the Fox Film Corporation, announcing its policy for 1918-19, points to its record of achievement as justification of the aims it affirmed when the corporation was formed. These aims can be summed up in two sentences:

Making and selling motion pictures must be conducted on the sound principles which obtain in any other business.

The motion picture business cannot live unless exhibitor as well as producer gets a fair share of the profits.

The Fox Film Corporation has always contended that there is no difference in the making and selling of films and the manufacture and sale of shoes, or ships or sealing wax; principles which have obtained in the manufacture of other goods must prevail in the manufacture of films.

Following this principle the Fox Film Corporation has barred from its organization the get-rich-quick methods which have proved the undoing of numerous film companies

H. F. Campbel, N. E. Dist. Manager, Boston.

Clyde Eckhardt, Chicago District Manager.

Paul C. Mooney, Cleveland.

S. Dembow, Jr., Atlanta, Ga.

Thos. W. Brady, Buffalo.

E. H. Wachter, Dallas.

and also the criminal extravagance and wastefulness that have given a certain section of the film industry a bad name among business men. Everything in the organization, it is contended, is based on efficient and sane handling of product, material and personnel.

Probably the biggest asset the corporation has is its president, William Fox. A genius for showmanship, Mr. Fox gives to the Fox Film Corporation the benefit of his long and thorough experience in the theatrical business. This experience enables him with marvelous accuracy to forecast the tastes and wants of the public, so that Fox films shoot to the mark of public approval.

Robt. Churchill, Denver.

And something that makes the Fox corporation unique among motion picture producing concerns is that Mr. Fox is an exhibitor himself, and the films he makes must be such that will prove profitable to him in his capacity of theater owner. The owner of thirty-odd theaters all over the east, Mr. Fox has just recently taken over a theater in St. Louis, and plans are afoot, it is said, for his acquisition of other playhouses throughout the country. So when the Fox corporation makes a picture Mr. Fox sees to it that that picture is what an exhibitor wants. That the pictures are of this type is attested by the success with which he has shown them in his own theaters.

C. E. Penrod, Indianapolis.

The executives of the Fox Film Corporation are all men of large affairs and of proven ability. Their training is not limited to the film business alone. In bringing them into his organization Mr. Fox has realized the importance of having executives who will give the corporation the benefit of training in other lines of endeavor.

Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox Film Corporation, is probably one of the most far-seeing, resourceful men in the business to-day. Long a newspaper man of varied experience, he also has the added advantage of having been prominent in the affairs of the biggest corporation in the country—the corporation of the city of New York. As secretary to Police Commissioner Waldo, Mr. Sheehan showed a thorough grasp of the intricate problems of city administration, demonstrated that he was a leader of men and a builder, and proved that he had the necessary vision to do big things in a big way.

Edward S. Flynn, Minneapolis.

In Herman Robbins, assistant general manager, the corporation has a man who has a thorough knowledge of every angle of the film industry, a man of ideas and proved capacity for directing big affairs.

A shining example of Mr. Fox's policy of surrounding himself with men of affairs is James E. MacBride, assistant to the general manager. Mr. MacBride, who recently joined the organization, resigned as civil service commissioner of New York City to become associated with the William Fox forces.

Although he was drawing a large salary from the city he received such a flattering offer from Mr. Fox that he felt obliged to accept. He has had a wide experience in advertising and publicity work. He won distinction as the manager of the remarkably successful campaign of John F. Hylan for Mayor of New York.

Field Carmichael, Detroit.

The executives of the sales forces of the Fox film Corporation have been picked because of their thorough knowledge of exhibitors' wants and ambitions. Most of these men have grown up in the Fox corporation and have won their positions on their merits as salesmen.

The district managers are Harry F. Campbell, stationed at Boston; Clyde Eckhardt, at Chicago; George Mann, at Los Angeles, and Paul C. Mooney, at Cleveland.

The branch managers in the United States are Sam Dembow, Jr., Atlanta; William Shapiro, Boston; Thomas W. Brady, Buffalo; Harry W. Willard, Chicago; Lester Sturm, Cincinnati; Sidney Abel, Cleveland; E. H. Wachter, Dallas; Robert Churchill, Denver; Field Carmichael, Detroit; C. E. Penrod, Indianapolis; C. W. Young, Kansas City; Morgan A Walsh, Los Angeles; Edward S. Flynn, Minneapolis; Allen S. Moritz, New Orleans; Louis Rosenbluh, New York City; Sydney Meyers, Omaha; Jack Levy, Philadelphia; Frank C. Burhans, Pittsburgh; Joseph B. Roden, Salt Lake City; W. J. Citron, San Francisco; Albert W. Eden, Seattle; D. M. Thomas, St. Louis; C. F. Senning, Washington, D. C.

C. W. Young, Kansas City.

The Canadian managers are Maurice West, Montreal; Benjamin Rogers, Toronto, and Joseph Leiberman, St. John, N. B.

The sales policy of the Fox Film Corporation is a simple one: Fair and square merchandising based on the principle that the exhibitor has some rights and that the business cannot live unless everybody concerned with it gets his fair share of the profits. This policy has been the rule ever since the foundation of the company, and that it has been successful is proved by the growth of the Fox business.

Louis Rosenbluh, New York City.

Salesmen of the Fox organization throughout the country have been schooled in the idea that the customer is not a victim, but a friend. This, it is pointed out by the Fox announcement, is not the short, quick way to motion picture success; but the Fox Film Corporation is content to take the long and sure way. Such will continue to be its sales policy of 1918-19 and for the years to come.

Fox to Feature Real Literature

Company Will Make Special Effort to Secure the Best Novels and Plays for Screen Production.

THE coming season will see produced by William Fox some of the most famous stories and plays written in the last few years, according to an announcement

F. C. Burhans, Pittsburgh.

W. J. Citon, San Francisco.

D. M. Thomas, St. Louis.

C. F. Senning, Washington, D.C.

Maurice West, Montreal.

Benj. Rogers, Toronto.

from the Fox offices. This is merely the execution, it is stated, of William Fox's belief that none but the best books of the most popular authors should be shown in motion pictures.

Having already completed "Riders of the Purple Sage," William Farnum is now at work on "The Rainbow Trail," sequel to the "Rider" story. Both of these plays are picturizations of books by Zane Grey, the author of popular western novels.

So successful was "Riders of the Purple Sage" when shown at a private screening in New York that William Fox immediately purchased two more of Zane Grey's books. These are "The Last of the Duanes" and "The Lone Star Ranger," and each of them has sold into the millions of copies in book form.

For Tom Mix Mr. Fox has also bought a noteworthy list of books. These include "The Two-Gun Man" and "The Coming of the Law," by Charles Alden Seltzer, and "The Highgrader," by Robert McLeod Raine. Mr. Seltzer also wrote "Slow Burgess," a popular magazine story.

Another well-known literary work which Mr. Fox has just bought is "The Strange Woman," the stage success of William J. Hurlbut, which ran a full season on Broadway a few years ago and later toured the principal cities of the country. "The Strange Woman" will be an early release of Gladys Brockwell's under the Victory Pictures banner. This play is considered peculiarly fitting for Miss Brockwell's talent and methods, and in film form is expected to be one of the really big productions of the coming season.

"Buchanan's Wife," one of the most popular of the novels of the late Justus Miles Forman, who lost his life when the Lusitania was sunk, has been bought by William Fox and will soon be started in work. Which of the stars will handle this story has not yet been announced.

In commenting on this phase of the Fox corporation's contemplated activities for 1918-19, an official of the corporation said:

"It is the policy of the company to buy the best books and short stories and the most successful stage plays for production on the screen. The reason for this is plain: Stories that have appeared in the magazines or in book form, or plays that have already established a success, have a merit that has proved itself. In producing them we know that they have the advantage of a wide circulation in their original form—whether it be in book form or as a stage play. Added to that is the prestige of the authors, all of whom have a devoted following of admirers.

"Thus in producing well known stories we give the exhibitor something that has already made a name for itself. We give him the works of writers who are widely known. This policy has two distinct advantages. In the first place it insures a story that is worth while—if it were not worth while it probably would not have been produced by the magazine of the theatrical producer—and it helps the exhibitor market the picture which he has bought.

"Besides the stories which we have already bought there are several for which negotiations are now pending. Announcement of these purchases, when they are completed, will be made shortly. But you may rest assured that the policy of the Fox Film Corporation to go into the literary market for its plays is an established one and one that will be continued."

Fox Publicity to Be of Common Sense Type

Will Mark Several Radical Departures, Such as Have Been Dictated by Practical Showmanship.

IN planning its publicity campaign for the season of 1918-19 the Fox Film Corporation announces it has made several radical departures which have been dictated by practical showmanship and a common sense conception of the word "service." For each of the pictures that will be issued during the coming year careful plans have been laid, to the end that every help and every suggestion given to exhibitors for the exploitation of Fox pictures will be of definite assistance.

The publicity aids, it is stated, are such as every exhibitor can and should use, and in preparing them the idea has been constantly kept in mind that they must meet the acid test of bringing in profits to the exhibitor.

For the great R. A. Walsh production, "The Prussian Cur," there has been prepared a specially beautiful fifty-two-page press book, profusely and strikingly illustrated. This press book contains a carefully prepared biography of Captain Horst von der Goltz, the confessed German spy, who appears in the picture. This biography is written so that it can be syndicated in the newspapers of the country. There is also a letter from Von der Goltz. Other newspaper material contained in the book includes a list of Hun crimes, composed by an investigating committee of Congress; a statement on spies by President Wilson, and an imposing array of exclusive stories, gathered after months of investigation, regarding Prussian spy activities in America. In addition to this there are attractive advertisement cuts, of which mats are available; striking posters and lobby displays and an impressive poster on the Kaiser, of which 1,000,000 copies have been prepared for distribution throughout the country.

An extraordinary amount of publicity material is at the service of exhibitors who book "Why America Will Win," the production based on the life of General Pershing. Exhibitors will have the benefit of a 35,000-word story of the career of the commander of the American Expeditionary Force, which will run in 100 of the principal newspapers of the country. This story was written after months of inquiry by trained investigators, who searched files of the War Department and other sources for accurate material about the life of the American leader. This syndicate story is accompanied by exclusive pictures of General Pershing and various incidents in his life, and is calculated to bring into every American home the strong personality of the leader of the American soldiers abroad.

In addition to that the press book on "Why America Will Win" contains exclusive copyrighted photographs, which newspapers are guaranteed to use. Another syndicate story, this one composed principally of unusual photographs, gives a brief text covering the high lights in Pershing's career. This story is to be sent to newspapers everywhere, so that when "Why America Will Win" is given to exhibitors Pershing's name and Pershing's deeds will be on every American's lips. A beautiful sepia toned photograph of General Pershing, suitable for framing, has also been prepared and 1,000,000 copies will be distributed. Besides all these great aids for exhibitors there will be an extraordinary number of cuts, mats, lobby displays and paper for use.

For "Queen of the Sea" there has been prepared a big press book, containing among numerous other things articles on health and beauty, how to be thin and a series of lessons on how to swim, all written by Annette Kellermann, who is the star of the production. Besides this there is a special prepared circus herald and a large supply of mats, electros, lobby displays and paper.

Beautifully illustrated press books have been prepared for the William Farnum productions, "Riders of the Purple Sage" and "The Rainbow Trail," and in addition to these there is a combination art book profusely illustrated, on these two productions. This art book contains photographs of the principal scenes in the two plays, with text on the characters William Farnum portrays in each, the friendship of Farnum and of the author of the novels, Zane Grey, and the gripping love interest contained in both productions. Stories of the plots of the great photodramas are also given.

For the Theda Bara super-production, "When a Woman Sins," which is the story of the regeneration of a modern vampire, a sixteen-page press book has been prepared. This contains several pages of type and cut advertisements, pages of scene cuts, both one and two-column, notices and numerous stories that will make good materials for the photoplay pages of newspapers.

A special design of press book has been prepared for each of the Victory Pictures. In a new form, this book will contain an exceptionally large number of helps for exhibitors in exploiting the productions of Tom Mix, George Walsh and Gladys Brockwell.

For the Excel Pictures the Fox News, in new and more attractive dress, will be issued bi-weekly, each number being based on one of the pictures in this series.

Besides all these helps the Fox Film Corporation will give enlarged service direct to newspapers throughout the country, through the mailing of still photographs the William Fox Press Service, mats and other material which is calculated to increase the prestige of Fox stars and productions.

FLY SWATTERS NOW PART OF THE PROPS.

"Held up for twenty minutes by a fly" is the entry made in his day book by Charles J. Brabin, who is directing Emmy Wehlen in her forthcoming Metro production, "His Bonded Wife," which will be an early release. This persistent insect kept buzzing about Miss Wehlen's face. Every time it was driven off, and the star prepared to resume work, buzzzz—and back came the pest again. At the end of twenty minutes, however, it was successfully "swatted."

Funkhouser Case Drags Out

Trial Commission Has Tried to Prevent Indorsements of Major's Efficiency from Getting Into the Record.

THE week ending Saturday, July 27, has been the slowest yet in the trial of Major Funkhouser and his aids before the city civil service commission. The defense attempted to show by the evidence of Alderman John Richert, chairman of the council finance committee, that the major had conducted his office along efficient lines and that the city council had hampered his work to a certain extent by failing to provide sufficient funds for his office. The civil service commission, under President Frazier, had prevented this earlier in the trial by ruling Mr. Richert's opinion out altogether, and Mr. Richert had left the stand.

On Tuesday, July 23, after an hour's lively tilt between Funkhouser's leading counsel, Jno. S. Miller, and President Frazier, Mr. Richert was recalled to the stand and after much wrangling his opinion as to the major's efficiency was put into the record. It reads as follows:

"In all matters with which I came in contact, it is my opinion that Major Funkhouser's administration was efficient."

Most of the week's proceedings were confined to Major Funkhouser's aids, Joseph A. Feeney, former morals inspector, and Manager of Properties Borland, with whom we have no concern.

On Wednesday, July 24, Acting Chief Alcock testified that under Major Funkhouser vice and crime were rampant. At this juncture Attorney Lyle for the defense added: "And we want to show what the major did to suppress it and the commission won't let us."

Referring to such daily wrangles, of which that just quoted is only a sample, the Chicago Daily News, July 25, had the following statement:

"According to President Charles E. Frazier, the commission is anxious to conclude the testimony and speed up things in general as much as possible. Nevertheless, it is a matter of record that much of the commission's valuable time is lost in attempts to frustrate the defense's efforts to obtain indorsements of the efficiency of the three defendants from witnesses who came in contact with the second deputy's office."

In a former issue the same paper made the following editorial statement, under the heading given here:

The Issue in the Funkhouser Case.

"Certain rulings by the city civil service commission in connection with the charges now being heard against Major Funkhouser, the suspended second deputy superintendent of police, have surprised and perplexed many citizens who are interested in the case. Its bearing on the whole question of honest and impartial administration of the laws relating to public order and public morals is so direct that the hearing is of very special importance to the community.

"Citizens who view the case in its true light are compelled to think that the one issue to be determined by the investigators is this: Was Major Funkhouser a faithful, efficient officer and did vice conditions show improvement under his supervision of questionable resorts of various kinds? Trivial and technical charges against the second deputy superintendent of police fade into insignificance beside this fundamental question. Yet the civil service commission appears to hold this view that evidence in regard to the vice situation in Chicago before, during or since Major Funkhouser's administration is irrelevant and immaterial to a determination of the issues of the case."

Ike Van Ronkel Joins Goldwyn

One of the Oldest Exchange Men in Chicago, He is Known by Exhibitors Throughout the Middle West.

IKE VAN RONKEL has been appointed manager of Goldwyn's Chicago office and took charge Monday, July 22. He succeeds H. J. Bayley, resigned, who has been offered the management of another Goldwyn office.

Mr. Bayley was formerly branch manager for V-L-S-E in Cleveland, Omaha and Minneapolis for two years and was manager of the Chicago office of that organization for some time after it was taken over by Vitagraph.

Ike Van Ronkel is one of the best known exchange managers in the Middle West. Everybody familiar with the history of moving picture exhibition and distribution in Chicago knows that he has been prominently connected with the business from the start. He was among the few early exhibitors in the city who opened picture theaters in 1906. He opened his own exchange, the American Film Service, in 1907, and sold it to the General Film Company in 1910. At that time the offices were in the old Trude building on North Clark, near Randolph, and at present the ground forms part of the site of the big modern City Hall square building.

Mr. Van Ronkel was afterward manager of the General Film Company's office at 429 South Wabash avenue for five years. When that office, was closed he joined the Laemmle forces, remaining until April 1918, when he resigned. Since then he has been taking a well-earned rest, until the offer made by Goldwyn attracted him into harness once more. Besides the Goldwyn program for the fiscal year beginning September 1 appealed to him so strongly that he could not resist.

Mr. Van Ronkel expresses himself as being thoroughly in accord with the Goldwyn policy, one of the leading tenets of which is "The exhibitor is always right." No changes will be made in the staff of the Chicago office except the adding of a few additional salesmen. Assistant Manager W. E. Banford will retain his position as right hand office man.

Riviera Theater Is Nearly Completed

In Heart of North Side and Seating 2,600 Persons, It Will be Opened in September by Balaban & Katz.

SOME time ago, in these columns, it was stated that a fine new theater in Broadway and Lawrence avenue, which was nearing completion, would be taken over by Balaban & Katz, managing directors of the Central Park Theater.

This house was intended originally for stage attractions and variety entertainment exclusively, but Messrs. Balaban & Katz have already remodeled it so that it will be especially suitable for the presentation of moving pictures. It will not, however, be devoted exclusively to pictures, as it has just been announced that other entertainment of artistic merit will be combined with the film program such as refined vaudeville specialties and tableaus. A large stage has been built for this purpose.

The theater has been named the Riviera, after the famed Italian resort. The fine location of the house, in the center of the great and fashionable North Side district, insures attendance of the best type, providing the programs are suitable; but there is no fear on this point when Balaban & Katz have charge. The mixed program already referred to has been decided upon by them, after a close investigation of amusement requirements in the neighborhood, and when one recalls their great success with the Central Park Theater, on West Twelfth street, there is no doubt of their ability to meet conditions in the new field.

The Riviera will be opened early in September. It seats 2,600 persons, and an orchestra of forty carefully selected musicians will furnish the music.

George Kleine System Items.

"The Unchastened Woman" had a remarkable week's run at The Playhouse, considering the sweltering weather. Its satisfying qualities proved a strong advertising factor in its favor, as all who viewed it passed it along favorably to their friends and acquaintances.

George Kleine arranged a variety program of short-reel subjects for Chicago, for the week of Sunday, July 28. The program is headed by "Triple Trouble," Chaplin's popular new comedy. Another strong number on the program is "In the Fog" (Edison), in three reels, which is being shown for the first time, the script being based on Richard Harding Davis' story of that title. There is also a one-reel photoplay by Edison, taken from one of the O. Henry stories.

The Kansas City (Mo.) branch office of the George Kleine System was entirely consumed by fire Wednesday, July 24. The Kleine exchange was in the Ozark Building and the Fox exchange was on the floor immediately below it. The fire started in the Fox quarters and spread so rapidly that both exchanges were complete losses in a short time. Nothing was saved, all the films on hand being wiped out.

Felix Feist Visits Chicago.

Felix Feist, general sales manager for the World, spent a brief vacation of four days in Chicago last week, at the country home of Aaron J. Jones, at Flossmore. He enjoyed himself so thoroughly in the country and in driving between Flossmore and the city that he had little time to call on any of his many friends in the city. He returned to New York Tuesday afternoon, July 23.

Mutual Buys Selig's "A Hoosier Romance."

"A Hoosier Romance," based on James Whitcomb Riley's story, and produced by William N. Selig under the direction of Colin Campbell, has been purchased by the Mutual Film Corporation for release in the near future. This widely read Riley story has a rich comedy vein which is happily retained in the Selig film version.

"America's Answer," Second United States War Film.

The second official American war film, "America's Answer," will begin an indefinite run in this city at Cohan's Grand Opera House, Monday night, July 29. This film is in eight reels and it tells the story of the arrival in France of the first half of the big American army now fighting there. It shows the landing of the soldiers from the transports and their advance to the first line trenches; the building of hundreds of miles of railroad in France; the erection of great docks, storage warehouses and railroad shops. In these railroad shops the spectator sees the assembling of hundreds of American built locomotives and much of the other vast work done to maintain our forces.

It is said that the eight reels of this second war film have been assembled from over 30,000 feet of film, which was made by order of General Pershing, under the direction of the General Staff, and photographed by the Signal Service Corps of the American force in France.

"Me und Gott" on State Rights Plan.

H. Y. Romayne, president of the Romayne Super Film Company, Los Angeles, spent a few days in the city last week while on his way to New York in the interests of his six-reel feature "Me und Gott," which he is releasing on the state rights plan. He gave a special presentation in the exhibition room of Universal in the Consumers' building, Wednesday morning, July 24. Among those present were Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the Rothacker Film Manufacturing Company; J. L. Friedman of Cleveland Players; E. M. Vandawalker, Jr., vice-president Doll-Van Film Corporation; Nate Ascher, of Ascher Bros., and Harry Weiss, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer.

This feature is unlike any other war films of this type, as the action is confined to America chiefly and the characters to loyal subjects of this country. Windham Gittens directed the production.

Mr. Romayne left for New York Thursday, July 25, where he will make headquarters at the Hotel Astor for about ten days.

W. R. Scates Leaves General Film Co.

W. R. Scates, one of Chicago's oldest and ablest exchangemen, who has been manager of the Chicago office of the General Film Company for the past two years, resigned that position Saturday, July 20. He has been succeeded by G. N. Montgomery, who has been traveling salesman for the Doll-Van Company for some time past.

Camera Works While Bullets Fly.

Most likely the third United States war film will include the pictures referred to in the following paragraph from a recent war dispatch, which appeared in the Chicago Tribune, and which recites the great bravery of an officer who took a moving picture, close up, while bullets were flying like hail around him:

The advance of one American unit is preserved for posterity through the bravery of a movie man—an officer. He advanced ahead of our lines before the infantry charged, coolly set up his camera, and clicked off a few hundred feet of film as the men stormed the German positions. One scene shows our men attacking a machine gun in a church tower with the Boches, panic stricken, trying to get their gun into action. The operator's audacity was amazing.

"It wasn't anything," he added modestly. "The folks back home ought to be able to see Yankees whipping the Germans."

Petrova's Chicago Success in Selling W. S. S.

Mme. Olga Petrova worked wonders during her brief stay in Chicago when she sold over $20,000 worth of war savings stamps. More than half of these were sold at the Metropolitan theater after Mme. Petrova sang her latest song, "Freedom for All Forever." Mme. Petrova's next scene of action will be St. Louis.

Louman C. Mann's pictures of Illinois soldiers in camp at Camp Logan, Houston, Tex., taken shortly before the boys left for France, were recently shown at the Woodlawn, Olympic, and other large houses in the city, with great success. The photography is clear and the action excites and holds attention. The men are shown in camp work of various kinds and the pictures were taken sufficiently close so as to make the faces of the men clearly recognizable by their friends. These films should be preserved for future showing long after the camera man and the men shown in them have passed away.

Picture Theaters to Aid in Suffrage Drive.

Women ward leaders in Chicago are moving heaven and earth these days to secure the signatures of voters for a Senate suffrage petition, requesting that body to pass the Susan B. Anthony suffrage amendment. These ardent women workers are now organizing a great moving picture theater drive in aid of this worthy petition, and it is hoped that exhibitors in Chicago, generally, will assist in every way possible to make the drive a success. Throughout the state the women are putting forth their best efforts, and moving picture theaters in every town and hamlet can accomplish great things by joining heartily in the campaign.

Metro's Chicago Manager Attends Convention.

C. E. Smith, Chicago manager of Metro, was in New York last week attending the convention of branch managers of his organization, held at the Hotel Astor, Friday and Saturday, July 26 and 27.

New Chaplin Comedy in Big Demand.

Merle E. Smith, general manager of the George Kleine system, states that "Triple Trouble," the new Chaplin, two-reel comedy is in great demand, the bookings being made with a rush. The comedy will be shown at the Castle and the Playhouse theaters for a week's run at each, beginning July 28.

Films for Soldier and Sailor Boys.

Mrs. Jane S. Johnson, secretary of the Division of Films, in connection with the Bureau of Public Information, came in from New York last week and spent several days visiting Camp Grant, at Rockford Ill., and the Great Lakes Training Station, to learn just what kind of pictures the soldier and sailor boys like best. While in Chicago, Mrs. Johnson made her headquarters at Pathe's branch office, where Manager Rogers assisted her in every way possible. Exhibitors generally should know that the "Official War Review" a one-reel weekly release, exclusively handled by Pathe, and produced by the Bureau of Public Information, gives the latest film news at the fronts, in the battlefields in France and Italy.

Select's New Series in Good Demand.

Ben W. Bedell is back again in harness as assistant manager of the Chicago Select office, after a strenuous vacation on an Iowa farm. He reports that Select has started taking contracts on their new series for 1918-19 with very flattering success.

SCREEN NARROWLY ESCAPES NEW STAR.

During the past week W. M. Gladish, representative of The World for Toronto, Can., and vicinity, visited New York, principally for the purpose of trying out his new car on a long journey. While here he visited many places of interest, including several of the studios. While at Famous Players-Lasky they were taking some "test" pictures of several candidates for screen prominence. Mr. Gladish was rejected before he even asked to be photographed, because his features were declared to be too classic to register well upon the screen.

"Your regular face is all right," said the director who was busying himself with the tests, "but your camera face is all wrong." Considerably discouraged, Mr. Gladish went back to tell the folks in Toronto how close he came to being a Caruso of the screen. The incident ruined his vacation.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

Los Angeles Likes Government Film

"Pershing's Crusaders" Going Big at Alhambra—"Smashing Through" Finishes Second Week at Superba.

"PERSHING'S CRUSADERS," which opened at the Alhambra on Sunday, July 14, is arousing great enthusiasm. The big patriotic production is being presented in an elaborate manner, and has the co-operation of Women's Clubs and various patriotic organizations.

Monday, the day after the opening, a big parade headed by the Naval Training School band of forty-six pieces, marched through the downtown streets. One hundred patriotic mothers of sons in service was the big feature of the pageant. Monday, July 22, was known as Future Crusaders' Day, and every newsboy in Los Angeles was given free admission to the theater.

A special lobby display is used at the Alhambra, and a heroic copy of the Statue of Liberty is placed in front of the lobby near the curb. Special music is used for the production and the film has been playing to packed houses since its opening, and Manager Miller of the Alhambra says there is no indication of any lessening of interest in the subject. The engagement of the Crusaders will be indefinite at the Alhambra.

"Smashing Through" has just finished its second week at the Superba and proved a formidable rival to "Come Through" recently shown at that house in box office receipts.

Carl Ray, new owner of the Miller theater, spent last week in Wyoming looking after his theatrical interests in that state.

B. C. Steele, manager of the Symphony theater, has been joined by his wife from the east, and with Baby Steele, the Steeles have set up housekeeping in Glendale.

The Alhambra theater, under the management of the firm of Miller, Leonhardt and Bosely, has contracted to use the entire output of the Sherry service.

Clune's Auditorium to Quit Pictures.

After "Salome," the Theda Bara Fox spectacle, has finished a run beginning September 2, at Clune's auditorium, the big house will be closed to screen productions and legitimate attractions only will be shown. According to Bert St. John, manager of Clune's, twenty-six weeks of regular stage productions have been booked to begin in September. It is nine years since the Auditorium has been used exclusively for regular stage shows.

Graumans to Produce Films.

An announcement has been made by Sid Grauman to the effect that he and his father, D. J. Grauman, will shortly incorporate as film producers. A studio has been selected, which will be used until a new plant can be erected, and production will begin in the near future. The two Graumans will be the sole owners and sole financial backers of the concern, which will be called the Grauman Feature Players Company. From four to six films will be made each year.

Mr. Grauman says that while he does not contemplate employing any particular big star, he intends to select the best screen talent procurable. He will lay particular stress on the directorial end of the productions, and will depend largely on the director and the story making the star, instead of the star making the play. Timeliness will be the slogan of the company and the first production will have a war background. The Grauman films will be distributed on the States right plan.

Film Folk Help at Sailors' Benefit.

Film players helped to make a success of the big benefit given for the sailors of the Submarine Base, at the Hotel Alexandria on July 20. Many stars were present and all worked with the same enthusiasm that has always marked the efforts of the screen people in patriotic events of all kinds. The big entertainment lasted from 3 o'clock in the afternoon until midnight, and every minute of the time was filled with music, songs, dances, stunts, acts, sketches, and the very best work of all those who participated in the big event.

Kerrigan Making Own Films.

J. Warren Kerrigan has established himself in the old Selig studio in Edendale, and is now making pictures on his own account. His new quarters are historic, and his stage was the first glass stage ever built in California. Bernard Warde, son of the famous tragedian, Frederick Warde, is directing the new series of Kerrigan pictures, and Jesse Hampton is the personal representative and manager of the star.

"Fatty" Arbuckle Moves to Glendale.

Lou Anger, business manager for Roscoe Arbuckle, has made arrangements with W. A. S. Douglas, president of the Diando studios in Glendale, for the production of at least one picture at that plant, the entire Arbuckle company of players expecting to begin work on a new comedy by July 22. Although the agreement is to make only one picture at Diando, it is probable the comedian will produce other pictures at the plant.

Gale Henry Forms Company.

Gale Henry, who has just returned from a three months' vacation, has organized her own producing company and will make a series of comedies such as gained fame and prestige for her during her long engagement with Universal. Miss Henry has rented space at Diando studios, in Glendale, and under the direction of Bruno J. Becker will begin immediately on her first production. Milburn Moranti, who supported the comedienne in both her Universal and L-Ko productions, has been engaged to play the principal male roles in the new comedies.

Mme. Yorska Coming to Los Angeles.

Mme. Yorska, one of the sensational stars of the dramatic world for the past two years, will come to Los Angeles and begin making films at the Brunton studios under the management of the Matzene Feature Film Company.

Griffith Makes Big Deal.

The largest deal in states rights territory ever made was closed when George Davis, manager of the Alcazar theater, San Francisco, associated with Sol Lesser of the All-Star Features Company, purchased from D. W. Griffith the exhibition rights to eleven states west of the Mississippi for "Hearts of the World."

The territory includes Texas, Oklahoma, Arkansas, Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin. Lesser and Davis paid $250,000 for the rights to these states.

Julian Eltinge to Head Studio.

Arrangements have been made between Julian Eltinge and Fred J. Balshofer whereby Mr. Eltinge will be at the head of a studio where screen adaptations will be made of "The Fascinating Widow," "Cousin Kate" and others of the Eltinge regular stage successes.

Mr. Balshofer has gone to New York to complete the details of the partnership. It has not yet been decided whether the Eltinge films will be sold on the open market or released through the Metro distribution system.

Mrs. Charles H. Christie Dies.

Mrs. Charles H. Christie passed away on the night of July 16 at the Methodist Hospital in Los Angeles, following an operation for stomach trouble. Mrs. Christie was the wife of Charles H. Christie, business manager of the Christie Film Co., and their marriage, which occurred in London sixteen years ago, was the happy culmination of a romance begun in childhood. Mrs. Christie, who was a woman of lovable personality and broad culture, will be remembered for her particular interest in all things humanitarian and for her many acts of kindness and charity. She was actively identified with the farmerette movement and prominent in patriotic work of all kinds.

Mr. Christie has the deep sympathy of his many friends and acquaintances in his bereavement. Funeral services for Mrs. Christie were held at the Christie residence in Hollywood on Saturday, July 20, and interment was at the Hollywood cemetery.

Actor's Body Brought to Los Angeles for Burial.

The body of Ray Russell, formerly a member of the Keystone Comedy Company, was brought to Los Angeles last week for burial. Mr. Russell died suddenly in New York, where he was filling a vaudeville engagement. His parents reside in Los Angeles, and the actor began his career with local dramatic and film companies. He was 31 years old.

New Editorial Head for Triangle.

Dr. Daniel Carson Goodman, who has just been made head of the scenario department for the Triangle studios at Culver City, California, has been connected with the literary side of film making since the early days. Dr. Goodman was with D. W. Griffith for a long time and constructed the continuity for many of the early Griffith successes.

In addition to being a continuity expert Dr. Goodman is an author of considerable attainments and has a number of novels and short stories as well as numerous photoplays to his credit. His latest work along the scenario line is "The Mayor of Filbert," an adaptation of the novel of the same name by Charles F. Stocking. This story has just been finished at the Triangle studio by Director Christy Cabanne, and Goodman is at work on another play which Cabanne will begin filming immediately.

On Their Way to Berlin.

W. A. S. Douglas, president of the Diando company, is closing up his business affairs in order to join the ranks of Uncle Sam's army.

Jack Holloway, director at the Diando studio, is emulating his chief's example, and has enlisted also.

Hugh R. Wood, scenic artist at Diando, has gone with a party of fifty Los Angeles Englishmen to join the English army. Wood came to the United States twelve years ago from London. He has been married three months.

Norman Manning, former studio manager at Diando, left two weeks ago to join the Royal Air Force in Canada.

Billy Franey, former Triangle-Keystone comedian, paid the old "lot" a visit the other day, and incidentally let his former associates see how he looks in Uncle Sam's uniform. Franey is stationed at Camp Fremont.

Rubbernecking in Filmland

Personally Conducted by Giebler.

LADIES and Gentlemen, the buildings we are now approaching are the Brunton studios, so called after Robert Brunton, the big mogul of the establishment.

The Brunton plant is not only one of the most modern and completely equipped studios on the West Coast, but is one of the most unique because of the methods under which films are made here.

To make you understand the methods that obtain at this place we will compare it to a modern apartment house where apartments containing such conveniences as speaking tubes, dumb waiters, Philippino hall boys, and vacuum cleaners may be leased.

The Brunton studios are operated somewhat after this plan. If any of you want to engage in the fascinating and sometimes profitable business of film production all you will need to do is hire a tall and handsome leading man, a good serviceable blonde of the star type, an ingenue and a villain, secure studio space here the same as you would rent an apartment —and commence.

You will find a complete costume department where costumes from king's to beggar's may be secured, and property rooms that can produce furniture of Louis the Quince, the Grand Rapids, and all intermediate periods.

A staff of competent writers is confined in the little cottage in the center of the foreground ready to do your bidding. And if you do not have a full complement of thespians you may have your choice of an assortment of villains with or without natural mustaches, heroes with various kinds of wavy hair and sport shirts, leading ladies, ingenues, juveniles, and character people.

In fact all the appurtenances, animate and inanimate, of movie making will be placed at your disposal. For rates apply at office.

You will observe as we walk through the spacious grounds of this place the magnitude of it. The long and handsome brick buildings to the left are the executive offices of the different companies producing pictures at this plant, which includes the Haworth Company, with the celebrated Japanese actor, Sessue Hayakawa, at its head; a company of Pathe players starring Frank Keenan; an organization with Louise Glaum as its star, and Bessie Barriscale and her company.

Five of the largest glass stages on the Coast will be available when the plant is all complete, and eight other companies are planning to secure space here.

We will go in here and watch a company at work.

The young man in this scene is Herbert, sometimes called Herb, Heyes. Herb was lately with the William Fox players in support of Theda Bara. Now he is leading man for Miss Barriscale, the star of the piece you are watching, which is called "The Heart of Rachael."

The little lady with the sundown tresses acting with Mr. Heyes is Gloria Hope. Yes, lady, her hair is natural titian in color.

Ella Hall is the other small person, and the man to the right is the celebrated villain, Hershell Mayall.

The man with the papers is Howard Hickman, the director. You will note that he does not wear puttees, but in spite of this he has produced some splendid films.

Mr. Hickman Enjoys Rare Prerogative.

Talking to Mr. Hickman is Bessie Barriscale, in real life his better half. All married men should enjoy this scene very much. Mr. Hickman is enjoying a prerogative enjoyed by few husbands. As director of the play he is enabled to give orders and have them obeyed by his wife.

Mr. Hickman, like many other celebrated people of the film world, including Christy Cabanne, Fannie Ward, and your humble servant, hails from Missouri.

The large trees that border either side of the street as we proceed to our next stop and temper the rays of the celebrated California sunshine are the well known eucalyptus, of which sixty-seven varieties are found in this state.

The eucalyptus yields telephone poles and wood for the grate that ranks next to asbestos as a fire resister. The pungent odor that assails your nostrils is caused from the acorns of this tree, which fall to the ground and are crushed by the feet of passing pedestrians. These acorns are also used in the manufacture of portieres and other art work, which is sold to Eastern tourists after being varnished. The oil of eucalyptus is valuable for sprains, bruises, brights disease, botts and housemaid's knee, and may be bought at all drug stores.

Wilshire Uniquer Than Studios.

We are now in Wilshire, the aristocratic and purse proud section of Los Angeles. There are no movie studios in this delectable neighborhood, but you will see movies being made here, and if the methods prevailing at the studio we have just left struck you as unique, what you will see shortly will seem uniquer.

The residence immediately in front of us is the home of one of the richest denizens of this bailiwick of the rich. As you will observe the house grades well up in the mansion class. It has twenty-five rooms, five baths, and a Jap who is constantly employed in cutting the grass of the spacious lawns.

This house, my friends, is being used as a stage for a moving picture play now being produced by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley. The large machine on the lawn is an electric transformer used to secure the illumination necessary when pictures are shot indoors. All of the interior scenes of the Weber-Smalley pictures are made in this manner.

This plan has two advantages. It gives the scenes a naturalness that would otherwise be hard to get, and it gives many of our plutocrats—some of whom are sadly oppressed by the income tax collector—a chance to earn an honest and thrifty penny, and helps him meet the high cost of aristocracy these parlous times.

We will now step inside for a brief inspection.

The well-built man hanging the picture and saying things under his breath as all men do when they hang pictures is Phillips Smalley, husband of and co-director with Lois Weber, whom you see with the manuscript, which is the scenario of the play, in her hands.

The handsome young lady all dolled up in evening clothes and reclining on the chaise longue is Mildred Harris.

Mildred is leading lady in the play, whch is called "Orange Blossoms." She is supposed to find herself with glad clothes on and surrounded by luxury for the first time in her life, and is registering "not being used to it, but liking it very much."

No, lady, the blue paint on the end of Miss Harris' nose and on the point of her chin will not show in the picture. The cerulean hue to the young lady's features is an example of facial camouflage familiar to every make-up artist of the screen.

The handsome chap is Lewis J. Cody, leading man to Miss Harris, and the other young lady is Helene Rosson, who has an important part in the film.

The company has been in this house for a week, and will stay another week. The family that owns the house are away traveling, and if they should return unexpectedly they would have to live in the basement or the attic until the picture is finished.

That will be all for today, but before we drive away gaze upward to yonder window on the left. This window, which is twenty-two feet from the ground, will be jumped out of by the frail and beautiful girl you just saw upstairs with the evening gown and the bluespot on her nose this evening at dusk at the climax of an exciting scene.

It is indeed sad that the life and limbs of our fairest film stars are thus daily endangered to give us a passing thrill with our movies.

Heart Interest Stories of Week

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due.

One day recently while Donald Crisp, of the Lasky plant, was directing a scene from a high platform and tripping around in his usual blithesome manner he got too close to the edge of the platform and tripped off—and sustained a shock to his dignity and also a badly sprained wrist.

The next day every paper in Los Angeles carried a story of the accident, with Fred Stone as the hero.

Crisp says that he would have gladly allowed Fred Stone to fall off the platform for him, but as Stone never volunteered, and Crisp was compelled to do it himself, he feels he ought to have the credit for the stunt.

Almost——

Alma Rubens, Triangle star, and Franklyn Farnum, sometime with Universal, but later with Metro, and both of them well known in film circles, were united in the holy bonds of matrimony on the 18th of July, at—

Just then the phone bell rang, and a message from the Triangle offices, which spoiled the best little heart interest story of the week, was poured into my unwilling ear.

Please correct statement that Alma Rubens and Franklyn Farnum are married" was the message. "They are engaged, but not married—yet."

Studio Shorts.

Dorothy Dalton has come back from New York with five trunks of rainbow hued gowns, some of which will appear in forthcoming Ince-Paramount productions.

Henry Otto director of "Cadine" and other features, is now at Triangle in charge of the William Desmond pictures.

Taylor Holmes is expected at Triangle on July 22. His director will accompany him, and the pair expect to begin immediately on their first Triangle feature.

Vera Lewis and her band of workers for the Stage Women's War Relief made a tour of the Los Angeles cafes last week gathering in large and small sums of money for the cause.

Frank Elliott, former leading man for Theda Bara and Clara in the stock exploits for Mae Murray in "The Scarlet Shadow," now being filmed at Universal City. Royden Keith, musical comedy juvenile, is also in the cast.

Sylvia Breamer left Los Angeles on July 15 for New York, where she will take a leading part in J. Stuart Blackton's film version of "Getting Together."

Polly Moran, for the past three and a half years a Mack Sennett comedienne, has severed her connection with that organization. Miss Moran will go to New York on shopping and other business, then return to Los Angeles to make a sailing date for Australia, where she will begin a long vaudeville tour.

Helen Leslie, wife of Director Jacques Jaccard, of Universal City, is critically ill in a Los Angeles hospital.

Mrs. Charles M. Schwab and party, during their stay in Los Angeles, were entertained at the Lasky studio by Mary Pickford and her mother, Mrs. Charlotte Pickford. The visitors displayed keen interest in scenes being made for a special feature under the direction of Cecil B. DeMille.

Clarice Duncan, seven years old, and just recently from Australia, is the most recent "find" of the Ince directors. Clarice is appearing in a Dorothy Dalton picture.

Leo Pierson is working in the new Harry Mestayer picture being filmed at Triangle.

Stanhope Wheatcroft, with the Maude Adams company on her recent Western tour, and formerly with the Fox organization in the East, has been engaged by Thomas H. Ince for a prominent part in a forthcoming picture.

Owing to the prolonged illness of Molly Malone, leading woman for Eddie Polo in "The Lure of the Circus," Eileen Sedgwick has been engaged to substitute, the script having been rewritten by William E. Wing to meet the altered situation and to prevent any interference with the original plot.

John Gray, title writer at the Sennett plant, has left that company.

Vivian Martin has returned after a two months' vacation at Lake Louise, Canada, and will begin work at once on a new picture at the Morosco studio.

Joseph W. Engle, treasurer of Metro, left on New York last week.

Sessue Hayakawa, upon completion of "The Temple of Dusk," presented little Mary Jane Irving with ten War Savings Stamps in recognition of the splendid work she did in her part in the picture.

A Red Cross Tea with one of the female stars in charge will be a weekly feature at the Triangle studios. Alma Rubens was hostess at the first tea, which brought a very respectable sum to be turned over to the Motion Picture War Service Association.

Thurston Hall is a new player on the Universal lot. He is being featured with Priscilla Dean in "The Magnificent Jacala."

Virginia Lee Corbin has been chosen as mascot for the Stage Women's War Relief.

Al Ray, brother of Charles, is playing the opposite lead in Enid Bennett's new Ince-Paramount feature, "When Do We Eat?" being directed by the star's husband, Fred Niblo.

George H. Perry, who was publicity chief for the Panama-Pacific Exposition in San Francisco, arrived in Los Angeles recently to handle half a dozen concerns for Ben Hampton at the Brunton studios.

Fannie Ward made a personal appearance and an address at the Symphony theater on the first night's showing of her feature, "The Yellow Ticket."

Grace Travers, of the Morosco dramatic stock company, has been engaged to play a part in Bessie Barriscale's new picture, "The Heart of Rachael."

According to Will M. Ritchey there is a real panic at the American studios for stories for filming purposes.

Alfred Whitman leaves the Vitagraph company this week. Al's reason for leaving is that he has received a flattering offer from another producer.

G. M. Anderson and a number of his players made a trip by motor to San Francisco last week, making side trips on the way back into the country in search of locations to be used in the picture to follow "The Son of a Gun."

Christy Cabanne spent last week at Santa Ana filming exteriors for "The Mayor of Filbert."

Douglas Fairbanks has been drafted by Secretary McAdoo to make a propaganda picture to be used in exploiting the forthcoming fourth Liberty Loan. Doug, assisted by Ted Reed, is now working on the scenario. Bull Montana will appear in the film.

Anna Q. Nilsson has been engaged to take part in "The Vanity Pool," a Universal special production with Mary MacLaren and Thomas Holding.

Jack Holt, who has been supporting the Ince feminine stars, will transfer his supporting activities to the Clara Kimball Young studio, and will appear opposite Miss Young in her next feature.

William Desmond has made himself a present of a new touring car.

Lihou Stops Over in New York

Erker Brothers' Executive Was One of the Boosters for St. Louis at League Convention.

HARRY G. LIHOU was a recent visitor to New York. Mr. Lihou has charge of the motion picture apparatus and supply department of the Erker Brothers Optical Company, St. Louis, distributors for the Simplex projector in Eastern Missouri and Southern Arkansas.

Mr. Lihou was a member of the delegation from St. Louis, who attended the convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America in Boston, and was one of the most energetic workers in behalf of the plan to have St. Louis named as the convention city of the league next year.

For the last eight years Mr. Lihou has been associated with the Erker Brothers Optical Company, and for some time has managed the supply department. This end of the business represents a constant and consistent growth from small beginnings, until now there are fourteen men employed in his department.

Mr. Lihou makes a practice of keeping in personal touch with the exhibitors in his territory, either through flying trips made by himself at short intervals or by the visits of four men in the office whose journeys are timed to meet the requirements of special occasions.

A revised catalog containing 144 pages, the largest issued by the company, will be ready for distribution to exhibitors in about three weeks. Mr. Lihou explains that a much larger edition was made necessary by the increased volume of business.

An advertising slide department, which is under the direct supervision of Mr. Lihou, requires the services of nine persons, including a photographer, printer, artist and card writer.

LIEUTENANT PROCHET TALKS TO ADVERTISERS.

Lieutenant M. M. Prochet of the Sixth Italian Fortress Artillery, now representing the Italo-North American Commercial Union in this country, was the guest of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, Inc., at the luncheon held Thursday, July 25, at Keen's. About twenty-five members of the association turned out to greet Lieutenant Prochet, who with his associates was instrumental in bringing before the public the remarkably interesting series of Italian war pictures.

The members of the organization were so keenly interested in the remarks of their guest that they invited him to attend the luncheon to be held the following week at Rector's and to talk to them during the screening of a special performance of "Italy's Flaming Front," which will be given for the association immediately following the repast through the courtesy of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

BAILEY MANAGING GENERAL AT OMAHA.

A. S. Bailey, formerly Goldwyn manager at Denver, has been appointed manager of the General Film Company's Omaha exchange. Mr. Bailey succeeds F. R. Martin, acting manager of the branch, who resigned to enter the National Army.

Facts and Comments

WHAT happened to the War Service Committee appointed at the Boston League convention for the purpose, presumably, of defining the attitude of the League on the matter of the activities of its members in relation to the war? Committees reported and reported, but nothing was again heard from the War Service Committee and, singularly enough, no one seemed to be interested sufficiently to ask if it had anything to offer. Here was a great opportunity for some budding statesman to slip over a patriotic wheeze, but no one, not even a member of the committee took advantage of the opportunity. It would not be fair to question the patriotism of any member of the committee, not even the chairman, who comes from Rockland, Me., yet he had nothing to report. Why this omission? Are there no patriots in the League?

SPEAKING of the League reminds us that the American Exhibitors' Association is going to meet in Chicago from September 3 to 7 at the Hotel Sherman. All branches of the trade are invited to participate and prominent men of the industry are to address the various sessions. This has the sound of a regular convention of the motion picture industry and ought to encourage exhibitors to attend. No one knows so much about his business that he cannot learn something from others. If Mr. Rembusch and his associates who are guiding the destinies of the A. E. A. will plan their meeting upon a high-class platform, procuring capable speakers who have a genuine message to carry to motion picture theatre owners and managers, they will have performed a real service to the industry.

IT is probably unnecessary to discuss the question of amalgamation of the two exhibitor organizations. That question never was a topic of discussion on the floor of the Boston convention, though now and then an individual expressed the hope that the unification of the organizations would follow in the natural course of events. However, there has been practically no change in the control of the National League and some of the leaders have intimated that no overtures would be made to the A. E. A. Further than that a strong opposition is developing to those same leaders in the League itself, which may place that organization in the position of the negligible minority—a minority too small to command attention or respect. This is unfortunate at this time, since there is great need for unity of action among exhibitors.

INFORMATION received from the committee working under the direction of Adolph Zukor, which plans to align the full force of the motion picture industry behind the drive for the fourth Liberty Loan next September is to the effect that it is building a strong organization. Beginning with the producers the plan contemplates a series of propaganda pictures of short length in which the several prominent stars will appear. These will be printed in large numbers and supplied to picture theatres. All producers are invited to participate in this feature of the plan. Later the committee will announce the details of the plan which embraces the exhibitors of the country. It is hoped that every company, every star and every theatre manager will prepare at once to do their allotted task and to do it to the best of their ability. The committee has explained in its announcement that all negatives must be in its hands not later than September 1. There should be no laggards.

NO one who heard the Hon. T. P. O'Connor express his unqualified belief in the educational value of the motion picture at the banquet given in his honor in Boston failed to respond to that expression with the most hearty approval that the occasion permitted. Mr. O'Connor is too big a man and too ripe in experience to speak lightly, or for popular acclaim, when talking upon any subject publicly. What he said of pictures as an educational force was the sum of his observation and intended to impress his hearers of the potentiality of the medium for the dissemination of knowledge over which they presided and the development of which was within their control. Citing his own experience he said he learned more about the war in Italy in two hours from the screens than he would have learned from a hundred columns of newspaper stories or a dozen books. "A cinema hall with every school" is the way he summed it up. When has a stronger message been delivered to motion picture men?

"Give Us Action"

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

THERE is an interesting bird known as the "chicken," the one that is after corn, not coin, the one creature we eat after death and before it is born, which has a habit of hopping around after it loses its head. It represents a low form of what is known as "impulsive action," and, strange as it may seem to the unitiated movie fan, this is often supposed to be the essence of intense drama, especially that kind in which pistol-play becomes associated with vigor of movement.

Impulse is the force behind most exhibitions of emotion.

Exhibitions of emotion form the compelling quality of what is commonly known as "Continental Drama."

It has been deemed the essential in grand opera and most plays of Latin origin, whether geneficent or malicious, just or unjust, and it is oftenest shown with us in that red-hot response to unrestrained human energy, that outburst of primitive feeling, known as melodrama.

The movie fan does not really mean "action."

It is only a means to an end.

To be at all dramatic an ultimate end must be in view.

Take the case of an embittered surgeon, whose family life has been forever ruined, who finds himself alone with a patient, face to face with the murderer of his happiness, now lying helpless, completely in his power to torture, to kill, or to save. The scene becomes most tense when the two men look into each other's eyes, both motionless.

Silent self-control, not action at all, is what often appeals most powerfully to the imagination.

Violent weeping on the screen is rarely effective.

How about the tense and dry-eyed silence of a bereaved young mother, staring at the empty cradle and the little articles of dress her loving and patient hands have wrought for her baby?

Far more effective in all forms of screen drama than demonstrative emotion is that which is seen to be under tremendous restraint.

Voluntary action springs from a base.

That base in all cases is the human mind.

Far more powerful in effect, especially on English speaking audiences, is an entirely different form of action than the impulsive.

It is known as deliberative action.

It is much more decisively individual.

We are all very much alike so far as the primitive exhibitions of emotion are concerned, the weakest response to impulse. In the varying degrees of self-command we show lies the secret of our differing natures, the charm of varied human characterization.

Each man is a "Hamlet" in the bigger field.

He is a battleground of forces within him.

He weakens when he yields to inclination.

He wins out when he is guided by reason.

The struggle with self furnishes the most interesting dramatic material in the world. The loose rein allowed animal instincts in the Latin form of drama may do for people of limited education, but most Americans who attend the theater have been instructed in schools and disciplined by hard experience. Opinions among our people are very definite and firm, as has been proved in contempt for German propaganda, and that national strength of character should be taken into consideration in presenting plays inteded to interest our people.

Deliberative action is much more social.

In overcoming the mastery of mere impulse, in consulting the conscience as to what is due others, in exercising that powerful motive force, the human will, to decide the dramatic contest within, it brings us to a readjustment of wrongs committed, to a finer understanding of one another, and to a social solution of problems vexing existence so far as our relations with one another are concerned.

We elect happiness as a great object in life, therefore the finest dramatic action is that deliberately directed toward our social progress.

The Man Behind the Story

By Robert C. McElravy.

WISE producers of moving pictures regard the author and his story as a legitimate part of the overhead expenses. But there are still occasional untried producers who feel that they can make pictures without buying the story or hiring a continuity writer to put it into shape. Ideas are free and it seems ridiculous to spend real money for them. Acting on this theory, an incredible amount of money is wasted every year by hopeful producers who have not yet learned the ropes.

A feature film was exhibited not long since which had been constructed by one of the best continuity writers in the business. It was an excellent production—up to a certain point. At this point there was a curious break and the story rambled on to a weak and unsatisfying finish. The fact was made known later that the manager of the company, not liking the original close, had altered it to suit himself, and in so doing had thrown the conclusion of the story out of proportion and almost ruined it.

Some months ago another feature was shown which met with little success. The intention had been good, but the story failed to register. In this case the producer, a man new in the business, had been seized with an idea and attempted to make the production himself. The effect he had desired to get was not there and he could not account for it.

Such failures as this are due to inexperience. Art takes no account of titles—a man may be manager, or even president of a producing company, and still not have the qualifications for making pictures. If he has attained any position of such eminence in the business world, he is not likely to be constituted of the whimsical stuff that authors and scenario writers are made of. He may be seized by a worthy idea and have every reason to believe it will succeed, only to meet with failure in the end, because he lacks the training necessary to get it over.

When a producer wants a story he should look to an author to supply it. An author is a person who writes stories. He may be young or old, rich or poor, known or unknown, but he has studied his job. He is not always to be judged by the things he has got into print; his published product may not represent his best self. But if he is an author he knows how to construct a story. He has been through at least part of the early trials of the amateur and knows what to avoid in telling a story as well as what to put in. He can make a plot follow through to its logical conclusion.

In other words, the author knows how certain ideas will react upon the public; more than this, he knows how to take a given idea and make it react favorably, which is the thing desired above all else. An idea may be good in itself and yet affect an audience unfavorably if poorly set forth.

In the early days of moving pictures the producer and his director could get their heads together and juggle a few ideas into shape, with the knowledge that almost anything would go. They had also at their command, at low prices, many excellent stories which the authors had not put into the form demanded by the magazines. But good stories are scarcer now.

There are, naturally, many producers who know how to put stories together themselves, and we suspect these are the ones who usually have some trained author or scenario writer do the detail work for them. They know the difficulties of the task, the skill and judgment it requires to create humor or drama without offending good taste or good morals. They have learned, too, that it is one thing to have an idea in one's own head and quite another to be able to impart it to an audience in story form.

After all, the safest and least expensive way to get results, even where generous prices are paid, is to buy the story from the author, for that is his particular stock in trade. In studying the successful productions of the day one generally finds a modest author and an even more modest continuity man lurking somewhere in the background.

Secretary Baker's Shrewdness

WHENEVER any member of the nation's government, from President Wilson down, makes a decision or issues an order there are always a considerable number of persons and newspapers who do not hesitate to say "What a blunder!" Not so long ago the Government, speaking through its executives, expressed itself in favor of the motion picture industry, praising its usefulness in these war times and later classing it as one of the essential industries. The other day Secretary Baker, again speaking for the Government, classed organized baseball as a non-essential and declared that men engaged in that form of sport came under General Crowder's "work or fight" rule. Commenting upon Secretary Bakers' action the New York Evening Sun said:

> Secretary Baker's ruling that baseball is a non-essential occupation under the "work or fight" order of General Crowder is a blunder and an injustice. It is a peculiar kind of equity which would hold the ball player to the order yet exempt the "movie" star and the chorus boy.

If the editors of the Evening Sun had made a simple comparison between the ball player, meaning organized baseball, and the movie star, meaning the moving picture industry, they would have come to the same conclusion, no doubt, that was reached by Secretary Baker. To begin with "organized baseball" is not a popular sport in the sense that it is patronized by the people generally. A limited number of games are played in a limited season to an exceedingly limited number of patrons. The "movies" includes many thousands of theaters giving amusement daily to millions of people and reaching the most remote places in the land.

Probably not more than five thousand men are employed by "organized baseball," while more than 200,000 find employment in the "movies."

About thirty million dollars will have been contributed in the way of taxes by the "movies" during the first year of the war levy. We have no figures on "organized baseball." Beside that millions of Liberty Loan bonds and War Saving Stamps have been sold through the direct efforts of the moving picture industry.

Today the most valuable form of amusement for our soldiers and sailors wherever they may be is the "movies."

Today the most potent form of propaganda employed by our Government here and abroad is the "movies."

It is quite probable that Secretary Baker had all these things in mind when he made his ruling which the Evening Sun characterizes as a blunder.

Two Problems

TWO problems of the greatest importance to motion picture theater owners will presently be presented. They are censorship and Sunday opening. So familiar are these subjects to theater men that no explanation is necessary here. The only matter to be considered now is how to combat them successfully. In states where Sunday shows are barred and where official censorship exists efforts should be made to repeal the laws which have established these conditions. In states where such laws do not prevail a fight must be made to keep such restrictions off the statute books. The matter is a serious one and cannot be lightly disregarded.

Now is the time to begin. Do not wait until the date for the legislature in your state to convene is at hand; begin now. First learn what the candidates for legislative office think about censorship and Sunday opening. If they are with you do what you can to support them. Do what you can to secure the nomination and election of men of liberal convictions. Be prepared.

Work of this character should not be done haphazard. In every state you should have a strong organization to present your case and to back it up with numbers and influence. Pick your strongest men to put in the front of the fight and support them unanimously.

It is for such work as this that the picture theater men in every state should have an organization that is one hundred per cent. efficient. Put aside all petty jealousies and competitive fights and get together with a determination to win against the forces of bigotry which are already organized against you.

Make no mistake, there will be a fight on in every state where censorship and the closed Sunday does not now prevail. What plans are being made in your state?

ROSTER OF ROLIN MEN IN SERVICE.

A new service flag with eleven stars was hoisted to the peak over the Rolin studios in Los Angeles the other day by Hal Roach, president and director general. The roster: Herbert Brodie, Naval Reserve, San Pedro, Cal.; "Slim" Voorhies, Coast Artillery, Fort MacArthur; J. B. Roach, brother of the chief of Rolin, with the 47th Regiment, U. S. E. F., now "over there"; Walter L. Adams, acrobatic actor, in the Aviation Corps, Kelly Field, Texas; "Sandy" Roth, U. S. N., Mare Island, California; Clyde Hopkins, actor, with Signal Corps in France; Lige Cromley, Corvallis, Ore., in Government school of gasoline engines; Ray Kellerman, former purchasing agent, with Engineer Corps in France; Charles Stevenson, in training at Camp Kearney, California; Joe Matice, Aviation timer searcher, Vancouver; Max D. Hamburger, cook at the Presidio, San Francisco.

The Virgin Islands

Illuminative Studies of American Possessions in the Carribean Sea.

WHAT we believe to be the most informational pictures of the Virgin Islands yet given to the public are contained in some 8,500 feet f film recently acquired by Joseph R. Miles, E. S. Manheimer and C. P. Winther through an expedition sent to these islands under the management of Mr. Winther. These pictures which will shortly be placed on the market through the medium of the regular exchanges, of which further announcement will be made later, give a definite idea of the social as well as the industrial life of these islands.

The individual islands covered are St. Thomas, St. Croix, St. Kitts, Dominica, Martinique, St. John, Tortola, Keeves and the British possession Barbados. Scenes at St. Thomas include the harbor which is used as a naval base, the marine graveyard, and the loading of coal by native women, the castle of Bluebeard and an old Danish fort. A loyalty parade and a zulu dance are other interesting features.

Tortola, a small island where fishing is the chief industry gives splendid fishing scenes in which huge gray fish are caught in great numbers. Tropical birds which nest in the crevices of the rocks are also shown.

Santa Cruz or St. Croix as it is sometimes called, is the richest and most productive of these islands. Scenes in Frederickstedt are shown and also sugar cane plantations, a sugar factory with a detailed illustration of the making of the sugar; cattle being shipped to Porto Rico, scenes of the home of a native, and last but not least the annual planter's picnic.

St. Johns which is three miles distant from St. Thomas is an old slave island and an ancient resort of pirates, on which the ruins of once beautiful estates are to be seen. The chief industry of the island is the manufacture of Bay Rum from the leaves of the Bay tree. The gathering of the leaves and the distilling and preparation of the Bay Rum for shipment is shown.

Martinique is interesting for many reasons and the film contains splendid views.

In Dominica Mount Diablo and the town of Rosseau are also shown.

St. Kitts with its ruins and historical memories and Barbados a British possession are also shown.

One of the characteristics of the natives of the Virgin Islands is their instinctive love of dancing. The dancing of the bambaloo, a dance common to the natives is given a featured position in one of the reels of the picture.

Rivoli Features Cannibal Pictures

A Most Remarkable Series of Tribal Pictures Reveals Habits of Man Eating South Sea Islanders.

FIVE thousand feet of remarkable films were featured at the Rivoli Theater, New York City, during the week of July 21. These films secured by Martin Johnson, whose exploits in the Solomon and New Hebrides Islands in the South Pacific were noted in our columns of last week, reveal to us in a startlingly realistic manner that savage humanity in a cannibalistic state still exists. They are entitled "Among the Cannibal Islands of the South Pacific."

In order to get to the Solomon and New Hebrides it is necessary to journey to Sydney, Australia, and from here set sail for the points mentioned. Stopping at Honolulu on the way we find the festival of Kamehameha in full swing. From here we go to Samoa landing at Pango Pango the most beautiful harbor in the world. Closeups of Samoan types and dances are interesting. Continuing on our way we come to Tulagi a trading post on the Solomon Islands. Elaborate canoes one of which we see starting off on a journey often carry warriors as far as 100 miles from home to prey on other tribes. The people of these islands know little or nothing of clothes, and follow peculiar customs such as the wearing of necklaces of human teeth. A dance of unmarried women, and a war dance are interesting features of this part of the picture. From the bush regions of the Solomon Islands came pygmies to the shores to look in wonder on the strange white people.

The little island of Malaita has some 80,000 inhabitants. Cocoanut trees form the only vegetation. A stone wall divides the island giving two parts to the men and one part to the women. From here we go to Leaneuwa where lives a brown haired race. The festival of the devil-devils in which the unmarried women are led before the devil-devils (images) to determine their fitness for marriage, and a ballet dance following are unusual features.

From here we journey to the New Hebrides where on Vao Island are to be found 400 naked cannibals who are kept in check only through fear of the British war ship which visits the island at intervals. Next came Malekula Island and Espiegle Bay where the party took on four native men as interpreters and started off for Big Numbers and the domain of chief Napagate a cannibal with 60 wives. Landing at Big Numbers it was found that the natives were armed with guns which they obtained from white traders. They also had cartridges which they saved to shoot stray whites in the back. There were also some pygmies here; and the chief garment of these people consisted of a belt of bark.

Information regarding the distribution of these films can be had from the Martin Johnson Film Company, Inc., 516 Candler Building, New York City.

"Official War Review No. 5" (Pathe).

THIS number contains much that is new and informing. The scenes taken in Palestine, where the British forces are shown crossing desert stretches with camels, and dragging big guns through the sand, are the best yet shown from that region. The disastrous effects of air raids are pictured, an inspiring parade of the Allies in Milan; also views taken from an aeroplane and the honoring of the American flag in France.

"British Guiana" (Post Film-Pathe).

This number gives a series of views taken in Guiana, in the northern part of South America. The native industries are pictured, showing the cultivation of sugar cane and the threshing of the rice crop. Close-ups of native women with their babies make a good feature, also the views of native jewelry.

"The Unblazed Trail" (Mutual-Outing-Chester).

One of the most beautiful of the Outing-Chester series is "The Unblazed Trail" which takes one on a camera trip over a portion of the Canadian Rockies. The scenes are presented entertainingly and include one or two bits of comedy such as a runaway horse whose ultimate destination we are left to conjecture. One of the points of interest shown is Pyramid Peak. A glacier formation wonderfully photographed is a real delight. This portion of the film has been tinted in a manner to add realism. Mount Bryce and Mount Columbia are also shown in the distance. Some beautiful cloud scenes and the climbing of a mountain wall complete an entertaining picture.

"Paris the Beautiful" (Beacon).

An excellent idea of the beauties of Paris can be obtained from this film which presents among others the following points of interest: The Place de la Concorde, Le Grand Palais, the Jardin des Tulieries, the Tour Eiffel, the Arc de Triomphe, Statue of Gambetta, the Louvre, the Chamber of Deputies, and the oldest bridge in the city.

"Roping a Canadian Lynx" (Allenbaugh).

One of the Bob Bakker series known as "Roping and Photographing Wild Animals" exhibited at the Rivoli during the week of July 14 showed in an interesting manner the capture of a Canadian lynx. This animal puts up a teriffic fight before he is roped and muzzled and shouldered for a tramp to the Bakker ranch. It is then placed in a crate ready for shipment to the zoo.

"Clothing the Allied Wounded" (Universal).

The eighty-second issue of the Screen Magazine takes us to the cutting department of the Atlantic Division of the American Red Cross. Here we see the garments for the wounded being cut from a pattern at the rate of 216 thicknesses of cloth at one round of the machine used for this purpose. The pieces are packed in bundles of five and ten for shipment to the Red Cross auxiliaries to be sewed and prepared for the journey to the hospitals in France.

"Slipping Geraniums" (Universal).

The scientific side of the slipping of geraniums is shown in the eighty-second issue of the Screen Magazine. A healthy plant with stocky branches is selected, from which cuttings are taken and buried in a 1½ inch depth of sand. After five weeks they are ready for potting in small pots, from which they must be lifted into larger pots as their growth requires.

"Shoe Sins" (Paramount-Bray).

The crime that has been committed by ill-fitting shoes against the beauty of the nation is illustrated in the 130th release of the Pictograph. These pictures have been taken in collaboration with the Life Extension Institute and are of unlimited value as a lesson in the proper dressing of the human foot for health's sake.

Shaw Finishes Second South African Picture

American Producer Has Completed "The Rose of Rhodesia" and "Thoroughbreds All"

From Our Special Correspondent.

GREAT strides have been made in the film producing business in South Africa during the past few months. The new Harold Shaw Film Productions, Ltd., has already finished its second release, while the first subject, entitled "The Rose of Rhodesia," has been shown to large audiences throughout the Union under the management of Messrs. Fishers Bioscopes, which firm is handling the sole rights for the exploitation of all Shaw productions in South Africa.

"The Rose of Rhodesia" has been favored with most excellent press reports in every city where presented, while public opinion has been most enthusiastic. There is little doubt that great care must have been exercised by Harold Shaw in the training of the native actors who portray leading roles in the production, and who have all received most flattering press criticisms. The scenic backgrounds introduced in "The Rose of Rhodesia" are of the most beautiful character and depict some of Africa's most delightful spots. The second release of the Shaw company, entitled "Thoroughbreds All," is of entirely different theme to the company's first effort, and is claimed to be one of the finest locally produced photoplays yet offered to the cinema world.

Owing to the extreme difficulty of securing raw stock the company has deemed it advisable to forward the negatives to London where Henry Howes will arrange for the necessary number of prints to be completed.

African Films Produces Eight-Reel Zulu War Story.

The African Films Productions, Ltd., Johannesburg, recently completed its splendid subject, "The Symbol of Sacrifice," an eight-reel Zulu War drama. This production has been enthusiastically received by the South African public, but it is feared the film will not carry the same appeal to oversea cinemagoers as it has had to South African audiences. The native actors in "The Symbol of Sacrifice" are excellent and a few of the superior race are quite competent too. Mabel May, for example, is natural and convincing in her part of the Dutch girl. As a feat of organization, photography and arrangement the film certainly reflects credit upon the producers, but as a drama the film lacks "punch." The film is, perhaps, too lengthy and could be easily condensed to about six reels, but apart from this defect nothing but praise can be said about the general quality of the production.

Apex Taken Over by African.

Things in the exhibiting business generally continue to run smoothly. Nothing of special incident has occurred recently, save perhaps the announcement made some two weeks ago regarding the absorption of the Apex Film Company by the African Films Trust Ltd.

Prior to the Trust acquiring the Apex Company's assets there was much competition in the film business generally, but as things have now turned out the Trust has to compete solely against the enterprise of Messrs. Fishers' Bioscopes, an independently controlled firm consisting mainly of three brothers, Joe, Harry and Julius Fisher, who have organized a remarkably successful business in the exploitation of big productions throughout South Africa.

Among the films which the Fishers have handled have been "The Submarine Eye," "Rasputin, the Black Monk," "Parentage," "She," "I Believe," "Lest We Forget," "Mother" and "Enlighten Thy Daughter." The latter film created a great uproar in South Africa, and was the subject of a great deal of controversy regarding the question of its suitability for public exhibition. As a result of great publicity Messrs. Fisher were unable to cope with the tremendous business, capacity houses being recorded in every town or village where it was exhibited.

Exhibition Business Booming in South Africa.

There has been a boom recently in cinema theaters being enlarged, and several houses in the large towns have been rebuilt to accommodate the crowds who nightly visit the popular entertainment.

Fishers' Bioscope Absorbs the Tax.

Exhibitors in the Cape Province have been greatly concerned recently on the occasion of the imposition of an amusement tax on admission tickets. The tax imposed is stated as follows. Where the admission does not exceed 6d, 1d; 1s6d, 2d; 3s, 3d; 5s, 6d; 7s6d, 9d; 10s, 1s.

The additional tax has been placed on the admission prices by the Theaters Trust, who own all the cinema theaters in Cape Town, with the solitary exception of Messrs. Fishers' Bioscope. In the case of the latter firm the tax is being paid by themselves, thus relieving the public of this extra charge. Naturally the public are reticent regarding the action of the Trust in making them pay the tax, with the result that patronage is falling off, and it is extremely likely the Trust will feel disposed to withdraw the additional charge on the admission tickets, it being considered that their annual profits warrant their paying the tax.

Big Films for South Africa.

A big event in the trade was the announcement that "Intolerance" was to be exhibited in South Africa. This masterpiece is now being shown to large audiences in Johannesburg, where it is causing a sensation. Among the other outstanding subjects which art shortly to be exhibited may be mentioned "The Barrier," "The Crisis," "The Auction Block," "The Zeppelin's Last Raid," all of which are handled by the African Films Trust, Ltd., and "The Cross Bearer," "Romeo and Juliet" (Metro), "Lest We Forget," "Raffles, the Amateur Cracksman" and "Inside the Lines," these being controlled by Fishers' Bioscopes.

The film "Civilization" is now being presented to the South African public by the Super-films Syndicate, a new independent firm formed in Durban for the purpose of exploiting the production in question.

George Smith Returns from New York.

A. George Smith, manager of the African Films Trust, Ltd., recently arrived direct from New York where he has been on business for the past twelve months, in connection with the placing of the African Films Production's "De Voortrekkers" on the market, besides supervising the buying department of the Films Trust.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Careless Proof Reading.

EVIDENTLY none of the proof readers on the Trenton (N. J.) Evening Times ever goes to a picture show, and apparently the Trenton exhibitors do not care a whoop what happens to their advertising. Not long ago this careful sheet had one of the theaters offer "Barbering" instead of "Barbary Sheep," and now it takes liberties with the name of Marguerite Snow. Either the Trenton exhibitors are impossibly bad writers or the Times has an exceptionally inefficient staff of proof readers, for even a printer should know that "Nitrate" is not the name of a human being, even though sad experience has taught us that many printers are impossibly bad.

There is no excuse for poor printing, however, for it is up to the advertiser himself to read copy of all advertising matter, and he should turn in his copy in time to make certain that the proof can be gotten back to him. Printing offices, like all other industries, are laboring under the disadvantage of having lost some of their best men through the draft, and it is more than ever important that each exhibitor should read his own proof and make certain that the names are correctly given, that titles are properly spelled and that the display is all that can be given in the space. Insist upon having proof and read every word in it. The public does not make allowances. It merely presumes that the house manager does not know his business and loses faith in his judgment, which apparently is unbacked by knowledge. It pays to be fussy about proof reading, both in the paper and the house-front signs, for the sign painter is apt to be worse than the printer as a speller.

Quit the Pictures.

A. C. Raleigh, deviser of light effects for lobby and house-front display, has left the pictures temporarily and is newspaper cartooning for the Standard, Butte, Mont. Mr. Raleigh had been with the Jensen and von Herberg interests for some time, but seems to think that a run in the newspaper field will be a change for a time. We hope someone coaxes him back to the theatrical end, for his tips on light effects are worth while having, and one does not devise light effects while doing comic strips.

Philadelphia Programs.

We are going to miss Jay Emanuel's contributions from this department, for Jay's were the only ones that came in of their own accord, but Jay is selling film to exhibitors instead of to audiences now, and we miss his practised touch. Evidently there have been other changes, for Arthur Graver now signs as manager of the Ridge Avenue. He advertises Intolerance at a flat fifteen cents and offers a return of admission to any dissatisfied patron. A person who is dissatisfied with Intolerance at three nickels should not get his money back. He should be sent to the asylum.

The Manheim (respectfully referred to The Rambler as in the Old Doc Muck class) uses the back of a post card to print its program on, one of the colored portrait cards. The fact that this reverse side is printed up with the matter required by the postal regulations does not bother the management in the least. It merely uses a blacker ink and prints over the printing, making a rather messy looking job.

The Chestnut Hill gets out a good looking job, well laid and printed. It uses a very pale blue stock and prints in black that really is black and not gray. Cuts are used where possible, and these are well printed up because the stock is good. Some of the text is good, but a little of it is too stiff. Here is one that might be used for almost any feature:

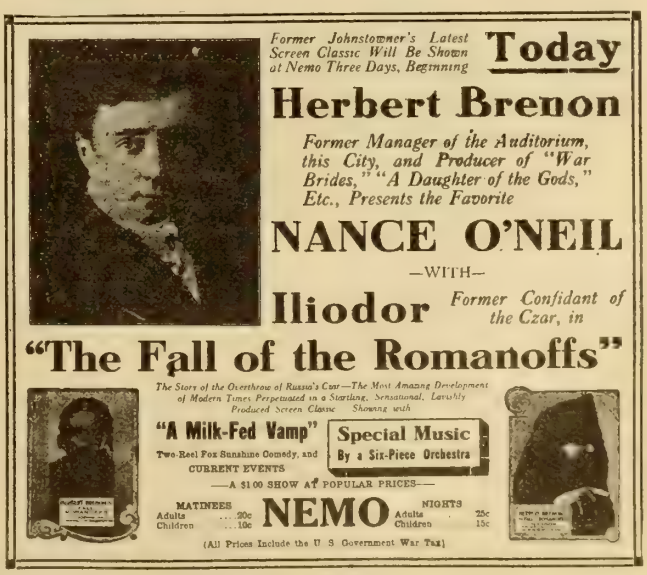
> A substantially constructed story of rare excellence, blending a tense plot, superb action and perfect photography.

It is applied to Blue Jeans, but it gives no idea of that or any other play. It is merely a nice looking collection of words. They are perfectly good words and nicely put together, but they do not mean a darned thing to the patron who wants to know about Blue Jeans. You get a better idea of "A Daughter of Destiny" from this extract:

> The famous international tragedienne in a new triumph. More dramatic than "Madame X." As different from the "blood and thunder" movie as opera is from ragtime. We urge you all to see this remarkable feature.

This means something, if not very much. There is some argument here with which to coax the reader up to the box office, but The Auction Block, which has been a best bet in so many houses merely gets:

> A modern problem play told in forceful yet dignified manner. The value of this moral lesson can only be appreciated when seen.



Do you think that would get your own or anyone else's fifteen cents? It does not even mention the fact that Rex Beach wrote it and that it is big and colorful and spectacular. It is throwing money into the sewer to pay rental on this play and do no more with it.

Philadelphia has several double-faced programs which cover two houses, but the Grand and Jackson apparently run the same program of film at both houses, for the program carries the two house names and uses but one list of attractions. This is something new, but probably would puzzle a stranger moving into the neighborhood, though evidently they are strictly neighborhood houses.

The Park and Jefferson joint program is not as bad as the first one, but the management seems indifferent to titles, particularly articles, and offers "Freedom of the World" instead of "For the Freedom of the World," "Woman and the Law" instead of "The Woman and the Law," and a lot of similar breaks merely because the full title will not go on one line. This is a sloppy sort of way to get out a program. Sometimes even where there is room the article is dropped as "Corner Grocer" instead of "The Corner Grocer," and "Journey's End" instead of "The Journey's End." But this is not as bad as "Land Leaper" instead of "The Landloper," "The Interpreter" for "The Interloper," and "Believe Me, Xeleneppe," instead of "Xantippe." They must have an Esquimaux typesetter and a Chinese proof reader in the office where this botch is set. There is no excuse except plain laziness for not having titles right. A line reads that the program is subject to change without further notice. It should certainly be changed.

Local Fame.

L. W. Barclay sends in some advertising for the houses in Johnstown, Pa., which he represents. Most of them are along the lines recently commented upon, but one, a five tens, capitalizes the local fame of Herbert Brennon, who used to manage a theater in that town.

The Fall of the Romanoffs is a little aged, but it still is new where it has not been shown, but we cannot quite see "A Milk Fed Vamp" teaming up with the tragedy. We think with really heavy plays the effect would be better were the comedy omitted.

Another Hippodrome Ad.

Here's another of Harold B. Franklin's advertisements for the Hippodrome, Buffalo, with the frame in Benday. The large cut shows how the advertisement looks. There is comparatively little to fight through the summer months but it will be seen that the cut stands out from the rest on the page, besides it is the display of the sister house right along side to the right and yet it has only a thin border instead of a solid black. It is characteristic of the "ads" given managers that of the two cuts shown in this reproduced half page neither is in the least suggestive of the story of the play. In one Hart is seen trying to club another man with a section of a horse, and in the other he has a gun stuck into his own redroit, but, as usual, the story is about the reforming influence of love for a good woman. An action still is not enough. It should do a distinctive still, yet it is to be presumed that Mr. Franklin picked the best he could get with the result shown.

Tarzan Over the Border.

John C. Green, the veteran manager of the Temple, Galt, Canada, bit it up strong for Tarzan of the Apes. He booked it for a week and started in the Saturday before with six solid columns of advertising, followed with large displays each day of the run, and from one to two columns of press notes, and he showed it at 25 cents including the war tax. It was the second showing of the film in Canada at that, but he did not ask top prices on that account. The way to clean up on the big stuff is not so much to charge fancy prices as it is to advertise like a circus and put it at a price that will let them all come. Four patrons at a quarter a head are better than one person at a dollar. There are more persons ready to spend a quarter than there are men and women with dollars for amusement, and you have sent from your house four personal press agents in place of one. That is what counts on a run. Outside of New York the dollar top picture is seldom practicable. It is better to make a smaller price and draw a larger crowd, for the crowd is an advertisement in itself. Mr. Green knows.

Rather Small Type.

A. Powell, of the Rex, Chicago, sends in his first program. It is a four-page, 5½ by 7 inches, and we think that Mr. Powell runs too much to six-point type with a rather small letter for its size, and uses too much of it. It is better to use a few easily read lines than to have much descriptive matter that most persons will not read. The front page, for example, carries seventeen lines of six-point 4½ inches wide. A six-point face cannot easily be read in a line so long. Where it is used to this extent it would be better to set it in two columns thirteen ems wide. It can be read much more easily and will suggest readability much more strongly. The cut can only suggest the arrangement, but if you have a similarly wide line, make a mental note to set it in double column. The inside is made up on the lines made familiar by Philadelphia programs, with three boxes across the top and one long one below for the chief feature. This is a good arrangement and here there is only one bank of too wide small face. This matter of proportioning the width of the line to the size of the type is too often ignored. Six-point should never be run much more than two inches wide—three at the outside, and if many lines are used, it is better to space out with leads. The leads will waste one line out of four, but it will make the remaining three lines far easier to read, and therefore more persons will be apt to read them. Eight-point is hard to read in lines of more than three inches, and at least ten-point should be used for anything much longer. Not less than eighteen-point should be used for a cross-page line, and here a twenty-four point would be much better. The text is good, and, better displayed, would pull business, but to pull, it must be read and it would take an S by 10 to give this the proper display. Either the size of the program should be increased or the lines condensed. In a four-pager it is generally better to use condensed lines rather than a reduced face.

Be Specific.

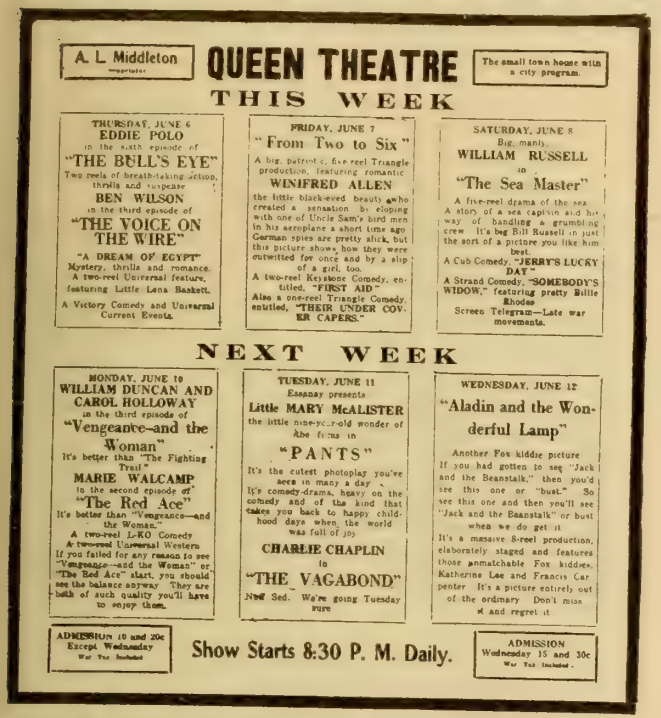
When you complain that you get no help from the manufacturers in the ads put out don't merely make the statement. Put in a bill of complaint and tell wherein the service falls short. Tell us how you, in particular, have been unable to obtain good, and perhaps in time we can educate the company press men. For some strange reason the companies do not use as press men people trained to advertising methods, but more generally employ theatrical press men who work along the lines they know, which seldom are along motion picture lines. Then, too, there is the tendency to appeal to the first-run exhibitor, who pays the most money for service, and who needs help the least, rather than to the little man who needs help most that he may be able to afford the (to him) expensive features.

Make Advertising Help.

Don't think that because you have no sign painter in town you have to do without the services of one. Get hold of some clever boy with a talent for lettering, provide him with the materials and let him practice with your announcements. Probably it will be better than you can do, and in time you'll find that your displays are better and at small cost. There are a lot of half-grown boys in the small towns who could do excellent work if given some encouragement, and who could be started upon a real job through your efforts. And in the meantime you'll have the entire populace of a small town watching Johnny Jones improve, and all the time they'll be watching his work and reading your announcements. For the cost of a little paint, some cloth and lumber, and a book of alphabets, you can get a permanent local attraction. Think it over then see what you can do.

Spruce Up.

No exhibitor has a lobby so small that he cannot make it attractive, and at small cost. Paint—even yet—costs little as compared with results, and you can at least have the place look clean. Then go a step further and fix up a little. Try and make your house look like a theater and not like a half-reformed livery stable. It costs more thought than cash, but it pays cash in return.



Use a Scheme Book.

If you have not already started a scheme book, start one now. Get a cheap invoice book, and with some home-made tabs make it self-indexing. Have a space for layouts, another for lobby suggestions, one for stunts, and another for program matter and catchlines. Paste in well-arranged ads whether they advertise pictures or not. Look them over now and then when you find inspiration slow. You'll often get a hint that will be worth while. And remember that the space does not matter. You may get an idea for a page from a four-inch single column or find the suggestion for a two fives in a full-page display. Don't trust yourself to be able to always do the right thing at the moment it is needed. Be ready with these suggestions to meet the time when you cannot think of something just right.

Mr. Middleton's Ideas.

Lately we showed a full page used by A. L. Middleton, of the Queen, De Queen, Ark. Here is a quarter-page from the same source, covering part of two weeks. The space used is four tens, and in this six changes of program are adequately announced to the country patrons. Each section gets its own hair-line panel and yet is held to the rest by the covering lines and the twelve-point border. It is a neat utilization of the space and worth while saving for a model. In his house program Mr. Middleton announces the installation of a new projection machine and invites his patrons to come and visit his "machine room," which is a much more important title than "projection booth." He makes it plain to the reader than he has bought the machine to make the show better. That's what counts. Most persons know that a machine is required in order to run a show, but few realize that a good machine increases their enjoyment. We never get complaints from Mr. Middleton that business is rotten or that he is being killed by the war tax. He has to hustle harder, but he keeps on going. That is the right way to face the present situation.

Used Real Title.

Evidently the management of the Dayton theater, Dayton, Ohio, does not share the Universal's idea that it pays to buy a valuable book title and then use some other name for the production. They ran The Doctor and the Woman the other day and apparently figured that more of their patrons were familiar with Mrs. Rinehart's work than were acquainted with the Big U, for they made the stronger play on the original title. The space is four twelves, easily the largest display in the paper, and it stood out like a brick house on a prairie. The other display is a three tens for Ruggles, and this was another clean-up. Both ads use very little white space, but both are laid out so as to be readable. It is not merely a jumble of type, but an orderly arrangement that makes for reading. Mark M. Gates, the [illegible] director is assisted by Urlin G. Perrill in the press work.

A Good House Organ.

Edgar E. Duncan gets out a real house organ for the Colonial, Lincoln, Nebraska. It is only a 9 by 12 four-pager, but it [illegible] efficient as twenty-four pages would be because it is so well edited and made up that every line gets read. It carries three 13 em. columns to the page, and two-thirds of this is reading matter. Some of it is miscellaneous, but the rest is film stuff so written and framed that it reads more like gossip than it does as advertising for the coming attractions. It is one of the best handled house organs coming to this desk in a long time. It should be a full hundred per cent. efficient.

Good For Decker.

We wish we had the space to give a ringing article on the motion picture's place in war times written by Charles Decker, of the Majestic, Grand Junction, Colorado, but it would take up too much of the department. Perhaps Mr. Decker will send you copy if he has any left. It takes up rather more than two columns of the Movie Fan, and tells just where the pictures get off in the present day scheme of things. It points out that pictures are being used by almost every branch of the Government for the purposes of instruction, and that the Government itself is making pictures for public exhibition. It dwells on the President's own fondness for the photoplay as evidenced by his frequent attendance at the theater with Mrs. Wilson, points out the help the pictures and its players have given the Liberty Loan and other drives, and the entertainment value of films in cantonments and back of the trenches, tells of the aid given the spread of the conservation programs, and then gets down to figures. It gives the details of war tax payments for the first seven months of the admission tax, showing that the theater has contributed $2,596.77 on admissions alone, in addition to buying $2,500 worth of bonds and contributing $382.39 to the Red Cross through the medium of two unsolicited benefit performances. It's as clean cut and forceful a presentation of the facts as we have seen, and it puts the theater in its proper light before the patron and convinces him that the support of the picture theater is a patriotic duty, as well as a source of pleasure. Mr. Decker has done unusually well even for him. Follow his lead. Make your own patrons realize that your house is something more than a money-making amusement device. Force them to accept the picture theater as a factor in the affairs of life. They will respect your house and yourself more and see the whole situation in a new light.

Stamps For Admission.

Goldwyn publicity tells of an excellent idea in the stunt of J. B. Stone, of the Bonita, Canton, Ga., in requiring a war stamp as admission to "For the Freedom of the World." This is a good scheme where you are willing to tie up your funds (though it is possible to cash in the stamps right now), but to do any good the money is tied fast, though at an excellent interest. A variant of the idea might be to fix an admission of fifty cents and throw in a war stamp free, or offer an admission price of twenty cents for the attraction or forty cents for the admission and one stamp. The linking of stamps and purpose plays is an excellent one, and there are many ways in which this may be done without tying up the entire receipts.

Metro's Private Hell.

For the showing of "To Hell with the Kaiser" at the Broadway theater, New York, Metro made an unusually ornate lobby display. There was a throne platform with the chair overturned and the crown and sceptre on the floor, and a display of war relics and unusually good painted enlargements in the lobby richly hung with red cloth. You got so much of an eyeful in the lobby you did not really need to go to the auditorium, but inside one of the stage boxes was dressed to represent Metro's idea of hell, which was quite edifying. The pictorial display was one of the most ornate since the Fox art gallery in the lobby of the Lyric for the run of Annette Kellermann in "A Daughter of the Gods."

Paste Them Up.

Commencing next week we shall caption the cuts used in this department. It will make it easier to paste these up in your suggestion book without a lot of letter press that is not strictly germane. Try starting a book if you have not one already. It will help you much.

HELP FOR THEATRE MANAGERS

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT (Conductor of Advertising for Exhibitors in the Moving Picture World

A TEXT BOOK and a HAND BOOK. It tells all about advertising, printing and paper, how to run a house program, how to frame your newspaper advertisements, posters or throwaways, how to make your house an advertisement, how to get matinee business, special schemes for hot weather and rainy days. Practical plans that have helped others and will help you.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

A Denial.

Ralph C. Freeman, business agent for Local Union 171, Pittsburgh, Pa., sends following wire:

> Your article July 20 just read. Wish to make denial of charges made against committee Pittsburgh operators which went to Washington to interview Colonel Warren. Wish to further say that we went there for the same purpose as did you yourself, doing our utmost to have operators decorated exemption. Anything you heard to contrary wish to state is absolutely untrue. Letter follows explaining our actions in full.

Telegram was dated July 13, but at this writing, July 21, no letter has been received. All I can say is that my statements were based on what Colonel Warren himself told me, also they were supported by statements from others who were there on the same mission. There was, however, this error. Colonel Warren said it was Pittsburgh projectionists, others said the Pittsburgh union sent the committee. You will note that in my article I said in one place, "If the Pittsburgh union had anything to do with the matter, etc." Well I had, in view of the fact that the Colonel himself had not named the men as coming from the union itself, intended to cut out the first reference to the union and merely say "Pittsburgh projectionists." I added the latter reference, but in the confusion forgot to change the first. It now appears that it really was a union committee. To Brother Freeman I would say that, conceding committee to come from the union, there was absolutely no error made by me. If the Pittsburgh local has a grievance it is with Colonel Warren. I think I violate no confidence in saying that our international president was informed the same as was I. If an injustice has been done the local I am both sorry and glad—sorry because an injustice is always bad, glad because the local did not do the thing it was charged with. As for myself, I had very much more than ample grounds for my criticism of the Pittsburgh men.

Fort Hamilton, Ontario.

G. S. Adams, Hamilton, Ontario, who shoots pictures at the Lowe theater screen, writes at some length, explaining some of the things I criticized with regard to the Lowe projection installation. It seems there is an impression that I blamed him for the location of the motor generator sets. Nothing of the sort! That perfectly idiotic blunder was perpetrated by a New York man who made the installation. It is by accident I said this, but the N. Y. office cut it out, thus, by inference, placing the blame where it did not belong. Says his manager remarked, when issue of paper containing account of my visit, arrived: "I hear Richardson raked you over the coals," and then admitted he had not himself read the aforesaid account. Let me assure that the manager in question was not himself present to hear what I had to say that night, although it was of paramount importance to HIM and to his theater. Also let me say I did NOT roast the projection of Lowe's theater. I simply pointed out a few errors, even as I have done in hundreds of other projection rooms. Brother Adams says he leaves very dark walls before his eyes, by reason of light contrast and the fact that he must light incandescent to thread up, etc., in changing from a too-dark a condition to bright light. There is a lot in that. Black projection room walls ARE correct from the projection standpoint, except under certain conditions, which do not obtain to any appreciable extent in theaters; but their use presumes, as I have repeatedly pointed out, the use of care and intelligence in other matters. For instance, the projector light ray should be entirely enclosed, as they have it in San Francisco and some other western cities. There should be an automatic light for carbon setting located inside the lamphouse, as per figure 127, page 302 of the handbook. It also presumes the use of a low c. p. lamp for threading, etc., if a lamp be used at all. Personally the writer did not when operating care for light when threading, except for placing film-end under clip in lower reel, and for this he had a 2 c. p. bulb attached to under side of machine table, shaded to throw rays down. The use of light in threading is very largely a matter of habit. Adams' scheme of subdued lighting is excellent, provided the observation port be not less than two feet square, but so long as ports of lesser dimensions be used, any light in the projection room interferes with the projectionists' view of the screen. My criticism of things in the Lowe projection room was entirely friendly, except for the motor generator set matter, and that was not at all up to projectionist Adams. Adams concludes his letter with an invitation to visit Hamilton again, says the entire membership of the local union joins in extending best wishes and asks if I will be home should he visit New York this summer.

Most likely not, as I shall sojourn by the seaside, at Point o' Woods, South Lyme, Conn., during July and August. Or at least that is present plan. I am sorry, brother Adams, for I would enjoy having you visit us. Adams also says that the morning I left Hamilton the secretary of the local, brother Fred Baldassari, was put into uniform and is now over-seas. Adams says "This is a personal letter, and not for publication," but I am sure he will forgive the use of such items therein as I have selected. I shall be more than pleased to visit Hamilton again when opportunity offers.

Illuminated Clock Face.

W. S. Turnpaugh, San Antonio, Texas, has the following to say:

> In answer to the article on clock face illumination, issue of June 22, believe I am in position to be of some assistance, as I have for a number of years used that which I am about to describe, and it really is the only first class clock lighting arrangement there is. First, remove the clock face, or dial, and paint it a jet black with flat paint having no gloss. Next, have the numerals painted thereon with some good "size," similar to that used by sign painters for applying gold leaf. Let the size set until it is "tacky" to the feel, and then apply either gold powder or gold leaf. When dry dust off surplus powder. If powder is used, with feather duster. This leaves very brilliant numerals on a black background, and they show up wonderfully well when the light is thrown on. It is essential, however, that the light be so confined that it will illuminate only the actual clock face, as any light thrown outside tends to destroy the contrast.
> There is another thing which has been written of by you; also it has been more or less covered in other ways, but in my ramblings I find so much of it that I wish you would jump on it with both feet, like any loyal American would jump on the Kaiser did opportunity afford. I refer to the mercury arc rectifier and three wing shutter combination. Many of those I have talked with on this subject say they use the three-winger because the rectifier makes direct current. There was a man who went to Corsicana, Texas, to set up a machine who insisted on installing a three-wing shutter. The projectionist in charge, who had worked under me, refused to allow the shutter because rectified current was being used. The installer was Harry Sorrenson, so the projectionist told me; also, a man named Earl Decker persisted in this same thing at the same theater. Now my dope on this is that the rectifier only makes a current which is direct as to its direction of flow, and not a continuous current in the strict sense of the word, also that the alternations are still very apparent after rectification, and that when the three-winger is used, the regular A. C. flicker is produced when the machine is run at about 60. I could go to considerable length in citing projectionists of prominence who use this combination, and the only objection to using the two-winger is that when friend manager wants slow projection the shutter action is too evident.

As to the clock face, I have advocated the same thing for more than three years, except that instead of gold leaf or bronze powder I recommend plain, flat white paint. Never tried the gold, but if gold or bronze powder be used it is a job for the sign painter, as it also is with white paint for that matter. As to the rectified current, you are entirely correct in assuming it to differ from straight direct current, but you are in error on two counts, I think. True, the rectifier itself changes only the direction of flow, but there is a function of the reactance connected with the device which you seem to have overlooked, and this function is extremely important, since it "flattens out" the curve so that as a matter of fact the voltage line is very nearly straight. It is therefore quite permissible to use a three-wing shutter with A. C. rectifiers. But for this peculiarity of the reactance your contention would be entirely correct. I would suggest that if you will write to the General Electric Company, attention Mr. Russell, Rectifier Sales Department, Schenectady, New York, telling him I referred you to him and ask for an explanation of the reactance action he will supply it. Your other error is in saying "A. C. Flicker." There is such a thing, of course, but it is so rapid that only a supersensitive eye could detect it. The thing which occurs with A. C. and a three-winger is not a "flicker," but a flashing of the light. It will be dim and then flash up again, due to wings of shutter getting into and out of synchronism with one side of the alternations. This usually only occurs at a speed considerably above 60, but may be at almost any speed, because cycle frequency varies pretty widely; also it changes with every change of the generator speed, due to lack of perfect engine governing, or to belt slippage. Your theory is all right, brother Turnpaugh, but you have overlooked some of the facts. However, the man who never made a mistake never made much of anything else either. I will modify by saying it is possible there might be some slight effect with rectified current and the three-winger, but it would, I am sure, be too slight to be discerned by the ordinary person.

We Have Ruined Him.

A good brother writes in as follows:

> Some time ago you suggested to a brother who used a Six-A how he might remedy a trouble he was having at the end of each reel projected, said trouble being the stripping and tearing of sprocket holes, et cetera. You suggested lubrication and the use of double five-inch-hub reels, which same could be had from the United Theater Equipment Corporation. Having experienced like trouble, I found it was not a lack of lubrication, but an insufficient spring braking of the upper reel, together with poor, unbalanced reels. Remember that the reels sent out by the exchanges are only used as carriers to the present up-to-date theaters. Now with regard to the double reel: A large size magazine nicely takes a 14-inch reel, but I learn that there is no such animal as a 14-inch reel with a 5-inch hub. On the strength of your article, I ordered 14-inch reels with 5-inch hubs and received them with the small wooden hubs. They were damaged, and I returned them and ordered 14s, all metal, with the credit slip. As a final result I now have heavy, unbalanced and wiggly reels, all through the influence of your department.

And we thus discover the fact that we are really not perfect. The letter was a personal roast, marked "not for publication," but by leaving off name and location there can be no objection, and I want to prove to you that we really are human, hence sometimes err. But we cannot recollect having given any such advice. Would like to know the date and page. And, anyhow, if the good brother ordered five-inch hubs and accepted something else, that surely is not our fault. Had he demanded what he ordered or return of his money, and return was refused, I would gladly have undertook the contract of making it real interesting for the party making such refusal. Ripping of sprocket holes at upper sprocket may be due to more than one thing. I doubtless gave the advice which seemed to apply to that one case. You must remember that letters are seldom published in full, and maybe the sentence which decided me in giving the advice named in that case was omitted from publication. In the handbook we try to give advice which fits all cases, but in the department each case may, or may not stand by itself. I only wish the reels sent out by exchanges were used as carriers only. They usually are not fit even for that. The fact is, however, they are used for projection in a majority of theaters, and in some pretty high class ones too. It should not be, but is. And there you are.

Elbert Condenser Mount Wanted.

C. J. Gallagher, manager, Charlottetown, Prince Edwards Island, writes:

> Will you kindly inform me as to where I can buy the Elbert Condenser Mount? Have two Power's Six-A projectors. Bought "Morelite" condensers from United Theater Equipment Company, but the projector mounts are not made to hold meniscus biconvex lenses, and the breakage is too costly. We break an average of one every two weeks. "Morelite" gives better results, but under the conditions we are obliged to use the ordinary condenser.

We have not been advised recently as to whether or no the Elbert mount is still available. However, in order to save you time I will myself drop the former manufacturers a line requesting that they ship you a set C. O. D. if they are still on the market.

Projectory.

Walter C. Michel, New York City, offers the following:

> In connection with section "B" of your article, June 29 issue, I would like to submit the following: It will be readily granted that the name, or designation, of the room from which pictures are projected should be easily pronounced, easily remembered and scientifically correct; also, if feasible, one word would be better than two or more. It is possible to meet all those requirements by coining a word, and that word is "Projectory."

Granting the fact that the proposed word is all brother Michel says, still I, personally, do not like it very well. This department has for many years used the term operating room, but recently we have switched to "projection room" as being equally or even more correct, and at the same time better sounding. Projectory sounds to me just a bit stilted. I do not believe it could be brought into general use. But we nevertheless thank the brother for having submitted the idea.

Condenser Breakage.

Will H. Thurston, Hay, New South Wales, Australia, is having trouble, as follows:

> Can you help me out of my difficulty? Have trouble with condensers breaking as fast as I put them in. They usually crack before a single programme is finished. Have Pathe Exhibition projectors, which have condenser located outside lamphouse, with arc inside. Have tried several suggested remedies, but the lenses still break. As last resort am writing you, enclosing stamps for reply.

In the first place, English or Canadian stamps have no value here, as all mail emanating in this country must bear U. S. stamps. As to the trouble, I can only name the most probable cause; I do not remember whether the Pathe Exhibition lamphouse has an air-tight or ventilated condenser mount, or whether or no there are vent holes in the lamphouse walls immediately around its edge. Presumably not, as to latter. First, make certain that the lamphouse vent holes are all open, so that lamphouse will have ample ventilation. Lack of ventilation sets up high temperature inside the lamphouse, hence heats the lenses very much hotter than they should be. Second, be certain your carbons are large enough for the current you use, see pages 285-6-7, third edition of handbook. Otherwise there will be excess heat and probable flaming, which is apt to crack the lenses. Third, be certain you have the right condenser combination (see chart, March 17, 1917, issue) so that arc is not too close to lens. Fourth, see to it that your arc (rear) lens either touches the metal of the holder evenly all around, or is separated from it entirely by strips of thin sheet asbestos. Fifth, if you use projection room wall fans be certain they do not blow directly on the condenser, or that there is no strong air current flowing over the condenser mounts. There are occasional freakish cases of condenser breakage. Had a case once myself. One lamphouse broke lens after lens. Did everything I could think of, but without result. Finally put in another lamphouse and trouble stopped instantly. Don't ask me why this was. I don't know. It was a freak case, without any apparent explanation. Oh, by the way, if the Pathe mount carries the lenses in a metal ring and they fit too snugly the lenses may bind and break from that cause.

Book on Projection Lenses.

C. F. Lewerenz, Chicago, who says he has copy third edition of handbook, wants a book treating especially on projection lenses.

I know of no such book, though Optic Projection, by Simon Henry and Henry Phelps Gage, contains much valuable subject-matter on lenses, projection and otherwise. Its price is $3. Address Professor Simon Henry Gage, Ithaca, N. Y.

There is also an article by Alfred S. Cory, in the just-issued Transactions of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, which deals with projection lenses. Doubtless it will interest projectionists. Here is a sample passage: "As a concrete instance of the existence of these astigmatic deviations, and departure from strict planeity of the image-field, the Petzval type of projection objective shows a noticeable degree of astigmatism, or curvature of field, or both, at 5 per cent. from the axis, etc., etc." This will no doubt prove very helpful to the projectionist. The proceedings may be had by addressing C. Francis Jenkins, 712 Eleventh street N. W., Washington, D. C., 25 cents.

Split Phase.

A. C. Stewart, Salt Lake City, arises to remark:

> Right here is where I expose my colossal ignorance. Rotary converters for motion picture work are made for both single and polyphase circuits. Now, as a converter has a synchronous motor action, and as a single-phase motor cannot start and come up to synchronous speed without the application of some external source of power, the same as single-phase induction motors, I would like to know the method employed for starting converters.

Very simple. A method known as the "split-phase", is employed. It would require too much space to explain the exact details. Any competent electrician in your city can make the matter clear. You are displaying no "colossal ignorance," brother, and anyhow lack of knowledge is no disgrace, provided one seeks diligently to equip himself with that which he lacks. Only the foolish hesitate to ask questions when asking will improve their store of knowledge.

The Proper Presentation of Pictures Musically.

SONGS AS THEMES.

AT THE demand for themes in picture settings becomes more urgent and also more exacting, the light intermezzo or serenade, the dreamy waltz or cavatina, is forced into the background and the song theme takes a more prominent place in extolling the virtues of the heroine. The essential attributes of a theme must be melody and rhythm. These are always found in songs because the lyrics compel rhythmic measure, and melody is what brings the song out of the ruck and places it as a "hit."

There are many kinds of songs which should be classified under separate heads in the leader's library. Those used for themes are: classic, which includes works of the masters and near-masters found in concert and recital programs; light opera arias, and popular songs, sometimes called by the discourteous "Shoo-fly music." The classic might be divided into two sections, listed as concert songs and grand opera arias. The latter class is not used extensively, and with a corner of its own would not receive the rough handling incidental to a search for choice concert numbers.

Such themes as "Asthore" Tretere, "Still as the Night," "For All Eternity" Mascheroni, and the two famous numbers by Tosti, "Good-bye" and "Serenade," should be found in the concert song group. These are only a few examples, but indicative of the wide field from which one can choose. "Asthore" is a plaintive theme with a touch of sadness in it that makes it adaptable to the many situations that arise in the forlorn life of a troubled heroine. Of course it could not be used on all occasions for its melancholy trend would prohibit its fitting a pleasant part. Its best results are to be gained by applying it as a theme to one who is absent and homesick.

"Still as the Night" carries the idea of steadfast and undying love and will fit many of the principal roles of the screen drama. "For All Eternity" holds a similar sentiment, while Tosti's "Good-bye" bids a hopeless farewell. The latter can frequently be used advantageously as an incidental melody as well as a splendid theme. It is impossible to review the thousands of excellent songs which can be made to enrich the orchestral accompaniments to pictures, but there should be no difficulty in determining, in a general way, the proper interpretation of songs if the words be carefully read. Inasmuch as the words are not to be found in the orchestration it may be necessary that the musical director buy the song itself. Let him do so. For the additional expense of thirty cents he will receive more than due compensation by an accurate rendition of a song that may be well known to the theater patrons. We can tolerate the poor playing of pieces adapted to the organ or orchestra but the "killing" of a song stirs up murder in one's heart and the desecration is not soon forgiven. It is always the wisest course to refrain from playing any song with which you are not thoroughly conversant.

Of the better known grand opera arias the most familiar themes are "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" from Samson and Delilah, "The Toreador's Song" "Habanera," and the Don Jose aria from Carmen, "Valentine's Song" from Faust and the "Spring Song" from Mignon. The use of these numbers should depend entirely upon the likeness between the screen actor and the opera principal, taking into consideration also the intensity of dominant emotions prevailing in the scenes. The task of fitting pictures with themes from the operas is a ticklish one. If properly chosen it enhances the musical setting immeasurably, but if the leader is a poor guesser that number becomes a thorn in the musical flesh of the auditors, pricking them at every appearance.

Under the heading of grand opera arias should be filed all those popular duets, trios, quartettes and sextettes which sometimes can be used to advantage. Those hackneyed "hit-hers" like the "Trio from Faust", Quartette from Rigoletto and "Sextette" from Lucia should only find the light of day when that day is so wet and rainy that the patronage has completely crippled the cash box. Aside from the fact that these "hurdy-gurdy" favorites have traditional associations that never bar them from depicting new ideas, no one wants to sit through a picture which they have paid to see and be regaled with tunes that they frequently pay to be rid of. Have some consideration for those who pay at the wicket. You may not have played the Faust Trio for some months, yet the organ grinder that very morning chose it as his piece de resistance for the neighborhood.

It has been shown how careful a musician must be in using operatic selections, and the same precautions must prevail in playing operatic songs. This axiom must be constantly before him: Never portray musically an emotion contrary to that represented by the screen action.

Light opera arias usually carry a title that is significant of the general feeling of the song. They are known by their titles as well as by their melodies, and the masses of musically unwashed can invariably call them by name. Therefore it becomes comparatively safe to select light opera numbers by their titles. The principal motif in Friml's "Auf Wiedersehn" is a song by the same name which, freely translated, means "Until we meet again." The title holds in itself the suggestion of parting with the hope of a safe return and could be applied to a heroine who, in the early stages of the picture plot is torn from her lover and after many adventures returns to him, usually in the last reel. This number can be used as an incidental selection to fit any scene denoting the sad farewell.

Going back into one of the older operettas, we find a fine example of thematic material in that song from Dolly Vardon, "As We Met in Lover's Lane." The melody is light, but reminiscent of a great love, and the fact that there appears the line, "a rose, a glove remind me," makes it most suitable for a scene showing the hero fondling a flower or glorifying a glove that once belonged to his sainted sweetheart.

For pictures which hold little dramatic intensity but lots of heart interest, light opera arias can be made to serve as effective themes.

Musical comedy numbers can be regarded in the same light as light opera, and owing to their popularity are always prime favorites as themes. Use them not too often and they become a verdant oasis in the desert of heavy music. They may be catalogued with light opera selections or placed under a separate listing, according to the ideas of the musical director.

Popular music depends upon the sentiment expressed in the lyrics of the song for its adaptability as a theme. The ballad style is used for features, while the lighter numbers can be fitted to comedies and pictorial reviews.

There is a strong tendency prevalent in the average audience to hum or sing with the orchestra when they are playing something very familiar. Herein lies a danger in using popular songs for themes. The orchestra leader cannot afford to embarrass some patronage by providing a vehicle of annoyance in the shape of a catchy song which is sure to be whistled.

The type of song to be found listed under popular songs should conform to such numbers as "Wait 'Till the Cows Come Home" (from Jack O'Lantern, but not light opera), "A Long, Long Trail," "Wait 'Till the Clouds Roll By," "Blue Bird," "Fancy Me Fancying You," and the perennial crop of song "hits." These can be made to serve a purpose as incidental music to the feature as well as being splendid material for light comedy dramas.

There is also a group of sacred songs that can be requisitioned frequently to good purpose. Of late, the religious aspect of pictures has been strongly developed and subtitles inserted which suggest certain hymns or sacred numbers. Beside the usual hymns, "Rock of Ages," "Nearer My God to Thee," "Lead Kindly Light," etc., there are splendid orchestral arrangements of "The Lost Chord," "The Palms," "The Holy City," "Onward Christian Soldiers" should be classed under matches as it has officially become the marching song of the Red Cross Society.

Let us not forget folk songs and patriotic numbers. They are closely related and yet must be listed separately for reasons of practicability. In the former group we find "In the Gloaming," "Seeing Nellie Home," "Suwanee River," "Old Kentucky Home," "Just a Song at Twilight," and many others of fond memory.

Nothing is more effective than these touching old ballads. They become the spice with which to flavor the musical interpretation of the picture, reaching the hearts of the listeners and bringing the tears to their eyes.

There is a strange peculiarity about the acceptance of these folk songs by the average audience. They are better known than any other form of music, yet they are listened to with bated breath. No whispering nor humming desecrates their sublimity. On the other hand, as a class, it stands alone as an exception to our general rule regarding the choosing of material for picture settings. We have found that no number should be used that will, by its influence, detract from the picture. Every folk song has to everybody a significance gained through hearing it during a crisis of their career. It is forever closely associated with that epoch in their life and its repeated hearing brings back the sadness of bygone days. Yet, in spite of the contradiction of dominant emotions, and because the song has become part of themselves the folk song can be used with telling effect as a theme. Its possibilities are more numerous as incidental music, but if treated sparingly as a thematic motif, it will touch the hearts of the auditors and impress the picture strongly in their minds.

Patriotic songs should be subdivided into three classes, viz.: Amercan (T), American (N), and Foreign. The bracketed T and N represent Traditional and New. In the former division we have such songs as the "Star Spangled Banner," "Columbia, the Gem of the Ocean," "America," Dixie," "Marching Through Georgia," "The Battle Hymn of the Republic," and many others of a similar nature. Under the second heading we note "Over There," "Where Do We Go from Here," "Keep the Home Fires Burning" and "Pack Up Your Troubles in Your Old Kit Bag." This field of song is at present well cultivated and the crop seems constantly increasing. Keep right up to the minute with patriotism, shown by your careful selection of appropriate pieces. In the third division you will have "The Marseillaise" and other National hymns, as well as a few that are semi-patriotic and characteristic of the country.

Patriotic selections are always required in the animated magazine portion of the exhibitors' program, and at the present time find a place in the feature quite frequently. There are a few rules relating to the playing of national airs which should be closely adhered to.

1. Never change the tempo to try to fit the screen action. Play the number according to its traditional time.

2. If your scene be long never repeat the number, but select something else into which you may segue.

3. Never play parts or phrases of "The Star Spangled Banner." It is disrespectful.

4. Do not "over-do" the playing of this class of music.

The subject of song themes has been merely touched upon, for its magnitude carries many tentacles, the following of which would lead us far afield. We have tried to suggest a few of the possibilities in the thematic treatment of songs that may start a line of thought in the leader's mind, bringing greater results than we could possibly anticipate.

Music At the Rivoli.

During the week of July 14 the Rivoli offered its usual excellent program. Hot weather does not effect the bill at this theater, for Mr. Rothapfel always believes in giving value for value received, and is not prone to make the elements bear him out in an alibi.

The overture—La Forza Del Destino, by Verdi—was rendered in a masterly fashion by the Rivoli orchestra under the guiding hand of Erno Rapee. Mr. Rapee seems to have the orchestra under complete control, and they respond quickly to his rather choppy shoulder and arm beat. The finale was exceptionally fine in its dramatic abruptness.

The opera, "The Force of Destiny," was based on "Don Alvar," a Spanish drama by the Duke of Rivas. It was first performed at Petrograd in 1862. The opera as a whole does not rank among Verdi's greatest successes, but several numbers from it, notably the overture, have been favorites in the concert room. A revised version of the opera was brought out in 1869.

Martha Atwood sang "In an Old Fashioned Town" accompanying herself on the piano. We know that she sang, for we saw her in a beautiful setting, and heard the tinkling of the piano sometimes accentuated by an explosive tone, but this is not sufficient evidence that she was singing. We sat three rows from the front, and could not hear a word, so the best that we can do is to blame the acoustic properties of the house and let it go at that.

The animated pictorial personally edited by Mr. Rothapfel showed the fine touch of the artist in its musical interpretation. During the funeral of our late ex-Mayor Mitchel the sounding of "taps" was most effective and correctly timed.

The singing of "The Marseillaise" by Desere La Salle was wonderful. Coming before the audience dressed as a French peasant of the days of the Bastille's fall with a scythe in his hand he literally tore into that inspiring song and brought the audience to their feet with his fervor. His voice is by no means mediocre. He has a well placed tonality, and his enunciation is both clear and resonant. A pretty feature added to the song was a historical synopsis of the taking of the Bastile thrown upon a small screen behind the singer, but not obscured by him. When the refrain was repeated the audience joined in lustily and made it a regular family affair. Another evidence of the desire for community singing.

The feature was well fitted, and the piano playing effects were carried out with a degree of art that raised them from the commonplace. Our old friend Joe Littau was responsible for the dainty touch. All the way through the music was most appropriate and the synchrony splendid.

The playing of selections from "The Fortune Teller," by Herbert, was well done, and carried with it a fine spirit. The Happy Hooligan comedy and the usual organ solo completed a fine show.

Musical Suggestion Synopsis.

DECIDING KISS, THE (Bluebird—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato Expressivo. Suggest "Legend"—Friml, "Berceuse"—Schytte, or "Tendre Aveu"—Schutt.

This is one of those sweet little stories of the country girl who conquers New York. The dramatic values are not very intense, and the music needed will not necessary be heavy. Long numbers will suit this picture better than short ones. You will need some waltzes and light intermezzos besides a quantity of melodious andantes. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Universal exchange.

GLORIOUS ADVENTURE, THE (Goldwyn—Five Reels)—Theme—Andante. Suggest "Twilight"—Ceseck, "Clair de Lune"—Thome, or "Extase"—Gannes.

Here you will find a dramatic picture with all the elements of excitement which means fast screen action. You will need big stuff of a dramatic nature, you will need a big harry and furioso, you will need some agitatos, and a few deep pathetics. Note the big strike scene and the quarrel. The atmosphere is entirely American, so that you will not be restricted in your musical selection. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Goldwyn exchange.

HELL'S END (Triangle—Five Reels)—Theme for Mary—Andante. Suggest "Kathleen Mavourneen."

The atmosphere of the picture is that of the lower east side Irish and with a bit of Irish-American. The feature is very dramatic, and you will need the usual number of agitatos, hurrys, and dramatic tensions. There are two fist fights to fit musically, and many scenes of squalidity. On the other hand society scenes are encountered, and the contrast should be well marked in your setting. A splendid number that can be effectively used in this picture is "Old Timers," published by C. Fischer. It is a compilation of old popular songs hits such as "Sweet Rosie O'Grady," "Sidewalks of New Yorks," "Maggie Murphy's Home" and such songs of our childhood. Try to get a previewing of the picture, because the Triangle does not include cue sheets in their service to exhibitors.

HER MOMENT (General Film—Six Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "Katinka"—Friml.

This picture has three distinct atmospheres which must be well marked in the music. First we find the plot developing in the Balkans This should be represented by music of a Hungarian character. Then we have the story transferred to Arizona and the "wild and wooly." Western music will fit nicely. Last we have New York City, which means neutral music of American type. The story is dramatic, and you will need some misteriosos and agitatos. The selections from Katinka show will be found very adaptable to certain scenes in the early portion of the picture, and if rightly timed should bring in her theme at her introduction. Information regarding cue sheets is not available.

MARKED CARDS (Triangle—Five Reels)—Theme for the heroine—Andante. Suggest "Serenade"—Moskowski, "Twilight"—Ayer, or "Souvenir"—German.

The character of this picture is society drama wound around the devotees of the card game and gambling den. You will need some great stuff in certain portions of the picture, while in other parts the action calls for but light music. You will need an agitato for the quarrel, followed by a hurry in which there should be a shot effect. For the big trial scene it would be well to use a long pathetic andante selection. No cue sheets are available.

ONE DOLLAR BID (Paralta—Five Reels)—Theme.

This is a picture in which we find the atmosphere of Kentucky and its horses, mint juleps, and fine women. It is a dramatic feature, and much can be made of it musically. The use of the theme should be handled judiciously, as the hero is continually in the foreground, and the musical setting cannot well be composed of theme alone. There is a fine opportunity for light children's music while Toby is telling the youngsters stories. There will be found room for some fine misteriosos, a big agitato, a hurry when the sheriff is shot, some pathetic music, and a waltz intermezzo for the garden party. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paralta exchange.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN (Paramount—Five Reels).

Everybody knows the play called "Uncle Tom's Cabin." We have all seen it many times, and if we do not know it by heart we should. Knowing the plot and being assured that the screen production follows the play very closely or the book more closely you will have no difficulty in fitting this picture. Be careful of the theme treatment, and make it marked as to which character you are trying to portray by it. Miss Clark plays two roles, and they must not be confused in the minds of the people. If your orchestra can handle a double theme it would be advisable. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount exchange.

WINNER TAKES ALL (Bluebird—Five Reels)—Theme.

The character of this picture is one of fighting love, if one could so call it. Two phases are continually in the foreground, either love or a fight. Therefore gather together your "mushy" stuff and alternate with hurrys and agitatos. You will need also a couple of misteriosos and one or two pathetic numbers. The scenes are quickly changed, and you will require short selections to meet this need. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Universal Film exchange.

Leaders' Service Bureau.
Questions Answered—Suggestions Offered.

Q. What division of instruments and what number of each would you consider best for a seventy-five piece symphony orchestra?

A. Seventy-five instruments is symphony proportion, and should hold all the families of strings, wood-wind, brass, and percussion. We would suggest the following ratio: Strings, 18 1st violins, 12 2d violins, 10 viola, 6 cello, 4 bass. Wood-wind, 2 flutes, 2 clarinets, 2 oboes, 2 bassoons, 1 contra bassoon, 1 cor anglais. Percussion, 1 tympani, 1 trap drum, 1 big drum. Brass, 3 cornets, 3 trombones, 4 horns, 1 baritone horn, 1 tuba. Owing to the fact that few of the concert numbers are arranged with cor anglais, contra bassoon, and baritone horn it would be wise to leave them out and add to your first violins.

Q. What is your opinion regarding the playing of music from the German composers?

A. We cannot tell from the form of your question whether you desire advice or simply wish to know our position in the matter. Personally, we would use nothing that emanates from Hunnish origin. Your library may be in such a shape that it would curtail your usefulness if you discarded all German music. In this case we would suggest that the very old composers such as Johann Sebastian Bach and his contemporaries might be permissible, but Strauss, Wagner, et al., will not raise you in the esteem of your patrons.

A New Method of Obtaining Dye Tone Images by the Use of Copper Ferrocyanide as a Mordant.

By J. I. CRABTREE.

Communication No. 72, from the Research Laboratory of the Eastman Kodak Company.

NOTE: The patent rights to this method are being secured by us, but it may be freely used for toning motion picture film manufactured by the Eastman Kodak Company.

ALTHOUGH numerous methods have been worked out for toning lantern slides and motion picture film by replacing the silver image either wholly or partially by a colored inorganic compound, owing to the limited number of colored inorganic compounds available, only a very incomplete range of tones can be obtained in this way.

It has long been considered that if the silver image could be converted into a compound capable of fixing or mordanting a dye in proportion to the density of the image, that this would be the ideal method of toning. Accordingly numerous experimenters have made a deliberate search for such mordants (See B. J. 1911 P. 607) and first worker to evolve a practical process was Traube, who took advantage of the mordanting action of silver iodide for certain basic dyes and obtained dye images by first bleaching the silver image to silver iodide in a suitable bleaching bath, and then immersing the bleached and washed image in a solution of the dye. When producing dye images in this way, it is necessary either that the dye shall not be absorbed by the gelatine readily, or that it will easily wash out again in order that clear highlights may be obtained.

Owing to the relatively high opacity of a silver iodide image when produced in an emulsion of average grain size, the dye images obtained in the above manner exhibited very little color when projected so that it is necessary to remove some of the iodide without removing the dye by fixing in a solution of hypo containing tartaric acid and other salts, which renders the dye insoluble. If all the iodide is removed in this way the residual dye image is usually too thin for projection though by only partially fixing, tolerably good tones are obtained. The action of the hypo is, however not proportional, attacking the highlights more than the shadows, so that double tones are obtained.

In view of the above objections to the Traube process, experimenters have attempted to secure transparent tones directly without subsequent fixing, the most recent process being that of Miller (U. S. Patent 1090088), which consists in bleaching the silver image in a mixture of potassium iodide and iodine containing an excess of potassium iodide, with a view to producing a transparent modification of silver iodide capable of mordanting in the usual way.

The following experiments are the result of a systematic search by the author for mordants other than silver iodide which would give a transparent image on projection.

The Mordanting Action of Copper Ferrocyanide.

As a result of numerous experiments it was found that an image containing copper ferrocyanide, obtained by toning in the usual copper toning bath exerted a powerful mordanting action and was capable of producing excellent dye images.

The usual copper toning bath consists of a solution of copper ferricyanide dissolved in a suitable solvent such as a solution of an alkaline salt of citric, tartaric or oxalic acids, together with other salts. On immersing the silver image in such a bath the silver reacts with the copper ferricyanide and is converted into silver ferrocyanide, while copper ferrocyanide is formed simultaneously in combination with the image.

$$4\,Ag + 2\,Cu_3(Fe(CN)_6)_2 = Ag_4Fe(CN)_6 + 3\,Cu_2Fe(CN)_6$$

On immersing this image in a solution of a suitable basic dye a composite image is obtained consisting of a mixture of silver, silver ferrocyanide, copper ferrocyanide and the dye. The copper ferrocyanide may be removed from the toned image by treating with a solution of caustic soda when an image consisting of silver ferrocyanide and silver is left, and in turn the silver ferrocyanide may be removed with a 10% solution of hypo leaving an image of copper ferrocyanide with more or less silver. On immersing the separate copper and silver ferrocyanide images thus prepared in the dye bath after well washing only the copper ferrocyanide was found to exert any appreciable mordanting action.

The method of procedure was to first tone the silver image in the copper toning bath, wash, and then immerse in the dye bath until the desired color was obtained. The nature of the tone was found to depend on the following factors:

The Nature of the Copper Toning Bath.

The formula for this is given under "Practical Instructions."

Although many of the usual formulae for copper toning will produce a dye image, it is necessary that the toned image should be as transparent as possible so as to eliminate the necessity of subsequent fixing. The formula appended gives very transparent tones.

Nature of the Positive to Be Toned.

This should be free from hypo so as to remove any possibility of the image being reduced by the ferricyanide in the toning bath. When toning in the copper bath little or no intensification takes place, though as certain dyes, such as methyl violet, are very heavily mordanted, it is necessary to choose a positive somewhat thinner than the average according to the degree of intensification produced during dyeing. Full details are given under "Practical Instructions."

Time of Toning.

The time of toning determines the proportion of copper ferrocyanide in the toned image, which reaches a maximum in from 10 to 15 minutes. If only pale tones are required the image is toned for only 2 or 3 minutes in the copper bath, while, if a full tone is required, the copper toning is carried to completion.

Time of Washing After Toning.

It is necessary to wash sufficiently long for the soluble copper salts in the toning bath to be removed, otherwise the dye would be mordanted on to the highlights and stain them. Usually 10 minutes is sufficient, though prolonged washing does no harm since the copper ferrocyanide is insoluble in pure water.

Nature of the Dyes Employed.

In general, only basic dyes are mordanted, and only those which do not readily dye gelatine and which are mordanted by copper salts are suitable for toning by this method. The following dyes have been found satisfactory:

Tannin Heliotrope,
Thioflavine,
Victoria Green,
Methyl Green,
Methylene Blue,

and the following dyes manufactured by the National Aniline & Chemical Co., Inc., New York City:

Safranine,
Chrysoidine,
Methyl Violet.

Dyes manufactured by different makers differ somewhat in their behavior towards gelatine and towards mordants, so that it is necessary to make a preliminary trial with each new sample of dye.

Concentration of the Dye Bath.

Only a very weak dye bath is necessary, and this should not be stronger than 0.1%. A stronger bath gives badly stained highlights, necessitating long washing to clear them while with a weaker bath the dye is absorbed very slowly or not at all.

The Effect of Adding Acid to the Dye Bath.

The addition of acid to the dye bath has the effect of increasing the rate of dyeing in some cases and of decreasing it in others; in the case of the dyes given above the addition of acid appears to diminish the rate of absorption of the dye by the gelatine, so that by using acid, a stronger solution may be employed without the highlights being stained. If the concentration of the dye is increased to any great extent beyond the amount stated, stained highlights are obtained.

Time and Temperature of Dyeing.

The amount of dye absorbed by the image and therefore the strength of the tone varies with the time of dyeing, reaching a limit in from 5 to 10 minutes. The time of dyeing is also slightly affected by changes of temperature, though slight changes are of no moment.

Time of Washing After Dyeing.

This varies according to the degree of staining of the highlights and the fastness of the dye to washing. In the case of the examples below, only a mere rinse in pure water is necessary to clear the highlights, though if the highlights are stained they may be cleared by washing in a 0.2% solution of acetic acid. Too high a concentration of acid in the wash water should be avoided, otherwise reticulation and trilling of the gelatine is liable to occur, especially if the temperature is above 70°.

Effect of the Size of the Image Grain on the Transparency of the Tones Produced.

The transparency of the tones is determined by two factors:

(a) The nature of the copper toning bath. The composition of the bath recommended has been so adjusted as to give the maximum transparency.

(b) The size of the silver grains of the image to be toned.

Previous investigators appear to have ignored the effect of the grain size on the transparency of the toned image. Experiments were made with emulsions of varying grain size, and it was found that with lantern slide emulsions of very fine grain, such as give warm tones by direct development very transparent images were produced after toning and dyeing as above without any subsequent fixing whatsoever.

However a toned image for purposes of projection should not be too transparent, otherwise it lacks brilliancy, so that the tones obtained on say the "Standard Slow" lantern slide plate, and on Eastman Motion Picture positive film by the following methods are satisfactory.

Stability of the Dye Tones.

The dye tones recommended proved to be fast to light, no change in color being noticeable after exposure to a quartz mercury vapor lamp for five hours at a distance of eighteen inches.

British Notes

By J. B. Sutcliffe.

THE American super-film, "Joan the Woman," is being exhibited at Drury Lane theater in succession to Sir Thomas Beecham's opera season.

The general experience of exhibitors both in London and in the country confirms their anticipation that the compulsory closing order, ordering the termination of theatrical and moving picture exhibitions by 10:30 p. m. is making no material difference either to the pleasure of patrons or to box office receipts. The regulation makes the exhibitor responsible for having his theater cleared by half past ten and its object, one of simple necessity, is the further conservation of electrical and coal gas energy.

The many and conflicting orders issued under the Defence of the Realm provisions to exporters of films to the Scandinavian countries would, if collected, fill a portly volume. The reason for these is obvious. In no other countries has enemy propaganda by moving pictures been so complete and thorough and for some time now evidence has not been lacking that the Germans have been buying up as much film base as possible from their near neighbors for the extraction of nitro-cellulose camphor and other ingredients used both in the manufacture of raw film stock and explosives. That junk has been at premium is evinced in a circular I have seen from a Stockholm address offering $5 a reel for used film, whereas it can be purchased in London by the hundredweight at little more. But the latest order to exporters issued by the Government ought to effectively check any serious outgoing of film stock to countries it is intended for application. In return for every shipment of film, be it 500 or 5,000,000 feet, a corresponding amount of used film is now to be given in exchange. The transactions will be supervised by consular officials in the countries concerned.

The exhibition of important multi-reel feature films at stage theaters, opera houses and municipal institutes still remains a thorn in the side of the English exhibitor, particularly in the provinces. A few months ago the principle was condemned in Liverpool as inimical and dangerous to the showman's interests. More recently the Exhibitors' Association at Sheffield resolved, the outcome of the showing of Selig's "Garden of Allah" at an "outside" hall, to refuse to entertain in the future any film booked to be previously shown at places other than recognized picture houses. Now, a case is hanging fire in the courts where an exhibitor is suing his exchange for compensation through his headliner, being advertised to appear at a neighboring music hall simultaneous with his theater, although booked to him exclusive. It is a vexatious point that is constantly recurring.

The Kinema Commission which under the presidency of the Bishop of Birmingham made exhaustive inquiries last year into the status of the moving picture, recreatively and intellectually, and subsequently published a report, is to work in co-operation with the Board of Trade in deciding upon any future legislation affecting the industry. The combination is a source of gratification to all those sections of the trade since the publication of the commision's findings has effectually removed the nauseating aspersions of purient cranks flung at the moving picture show a year ago. The conduct of the commission at the many inquiries is furthermore a guarantee of fairness for the trade and careful consideration of its interests. At the same time its impartiality in the public eye is preserved by the extended sponsorship of the National Council of Public Morals. One of the first questions to be investigated in collaboration with the Government officials is censorship before any recommendations are made, voluminous evidence of plans used in foreign countries will be considered.

Upon the application of the Famous Players Film Co., Ltd., a judiciary order has been made for the winding up of a publishing company, the Yachtsman, Ltd. This was denied and a libel action against the film company for making a charge of blackmail was tried last November and dismissed with costs in their favor. The publishing company had failed to pay these costs and consequently the compulsory order was made.

The Government, at the instigation of the confectionery trade, has confined the sale to the public of chocolate and sweet meats to recognized storekeepers. Australian Notes

By Thomas S. Imrie.

Sydney, N. S. W., Australia, May 16, 1918.

THE Goldwyn photoplay-concerts at the Sydney Theater Royal have proved very successful, and J C. Williamson, Ltd., has decided to conduct similar entertainments at its theaters in the other State capitals.

All Goldwyn features are run for a season of two weeks before being transferred to the other metropolitan houses, and a full attendance each screening at the Theater Royal are proof of the popularity these pictures enjoy within the metropolitan theaters.

Although several local productions are under way, none have been released for two months. Roland Staveley's "The Enemy Within" has met with big success, and the American rights have been disposed of. A film version of Henry Fletcher's widely read novel of Australian bush life, "The Waybacks," is to be given its premiere at the Town Hall, Sydney, during the present month.

Another Sydney concern has nearing completion a filmization of the famous stage comedy-drama, "Struck Oil."

Washington Public Tires of Sex Plays

Manager Morgan of Savoy Theater Says What Is Wanted Is the Clean Play of Lighter Type.

WASHINGTON'S public is getting tired of the type of plays the plots of which are wrapped mainly around the running or escape from ruin of terribly virtuous women and the continued vamping of vamps who would do better work if employed in a munitions factory. Go to any theater where such pictures are being shown continuously and you can hear such comments as these and many more. To get a line on what the people really want, the correspondent of the Moving Picture World in Washington asked a number of prominent exhibitors for their opinions, among them Joseph P. Morgan, manager of the Savoy Theater and connected with Harry M. Crandall in many local enterprises.

"We find from actual experience, coming in contact with the people, that they are pretty tired of these morbid, sex problem plays, pictures of the underworld," said Mr. Morgan. "It has been demonstrated very conclusively to us that what is wanted is the play of the lighter type—clean pictures, light dramas with comedy enough running through them to help relieve the heavy situations.

"It seems as though, in Washington, about every six months the desires of the people as to what they want in the line of films change. With national conditions as they are, they do not want morbid plays, they want the type that helps one forget the war. As a cue to just what kind of pictures the people want, all we have to do is to stop and think who are the stars who get us the most money and what kind of pictures they work in. For instance, Fairbanks, Pickford, Clark, Chaplin—there are many more—has anybody ever seen them in heavy pictures? Fairbanks made one drama and stopped.

"We hear from our patrons every night. We see our box office returns and we know what pays best. If the manufacturers will make the kind of pictures a majority of the motion picture fans want, they need never fear censorship; such pictures will automatically eliminate any thought of censorship. We have taken the matter of popular pictures up with the manufacturers on a number of occasions. They have told us that while one locality might want these light pictures, the exhibitors in other territories held opposite views. In turn we have discussed this proposition with the many visiting exhibitors—there are many here each week—and we find that most of them hold exactly the same views as we do."

Metro Men Visit Los Angeles

Joseph Engel Host to Western Managers, Who Plan to Boost "To Hell with the Kaiser."

MANAGERS of Metro exchanges west of Chicago were visitors to Los Angeles as guests of the corporation for three days last week. They made the journey from their respective home offices at the invitation of Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of Metro Pictures Corporation, who planned a "get-together" meeting of the exchange heads primarily for an interchange of ideas, but also with a view to complete co-operation in the great advertising and distribution campaign in behalf of the Screen Classics, Inc.'s super-production, "To Hell with the Kaiser."

The Metro exchange managers who responded to the invitation were Charles Klein of Denver; A. B. Lamb, Salt Lake City; Charles Stern, Seattle; L. Rickert, San Francisco, and Harry Lustig, general district manager. They were shown about the City of the Angels by H. G. Ballance, manager of the local branch, and his assistants, R. G. Turner, B. F. Rosenberg and Bert Lubin.

Fox To Increase Admissions This Fall

Says It Was a Mistake to Do So a Year Ago, Because Insufficient Money Was in Circulation.

WILLIAM FOX expressed the opinion last week that he believed the coming season 1918-19, starting September, would be the most successful year in the history of the Motion Picture Industry. He backs this opinion by increased volume of productions made under his supervision by Fox Film Corporation. He further gives evidence of his optimism by expending a greater sum on each production as compared with last year.

"I want to give American exhibitors my reasons for feeling so keenly that we will have big business and good profits during the coming season," said Mr. Fox. "In England when the war started, August, 1914, the motion picture theaters felt the crash perhaps to a greater extent than any other class of entertainment. Disturbed conditions caused many motion picture houses to shut down. The tremendous army that Great Britain raised mobilized many of the leaders of the motion picture profession and their employes. Alterations and repairs could not be made because of a shortage of labor and materials. Zeppelin and aeroplane raids and the darkened streets created unrest among the public, and they did not patronize the picture houses.

"This panicky condition in the picture business throughout England during 1914 continued during the first year of the war. However, with the strength, confidence and great patriotism of the Britisher, conditions soon took a more normal, cool aspect. The English exhibitors accepted conditions on their face value. The public again began to patronize the theaters. The result was that the second year of the war, or the season of 1915-16, proved to be a highly prosperous, healthy, profitable year for the exhibitors in that war-torn country. Every picture house, almost without exception, made a handsome profit. The third year of the war showed greater box office receipts, more patronage and better conditions than ever in the history of the industry. For example, before the war in England, the admission prices in the average picture theater were from 6 to 18 cents. These same houses to-day have a scale of prices ranging from 12 to 60 cents.

Mistake to Increase Prices Last Fall.

"Last September exhibitors throughout America showed a tendency to increase their admission prices. I was among the picture theater owners who increased my scale at the box office. I now frankly admit that this was a mistake. The time was not ripe last fall to jump admission prices because the cash was not being freely circulated. Since last September the public has liberally subscribed to Liberty Bonds, War Saving Stamps and various war charities. A large part of this money came from people of wealth who had the money in banks. These billions of dollars have been expended by the Government for various necessities of war. This money has found its way into the pockets of the working man. The working man liberally distributed his money among his family, who in turn spent it for necessities and entertainment. The women of America earned more money by their labors during the last year than they have ever earned in ten years before. The result is that to-day everybody in America has money to spend and thus to the progress, ingenuity and advance in production of motion pictures we have mobilized a 100 per cent army of patrons. Therefore with this great increased circulation of money exhibitors will find their public willing to patronize and to spend during the coming year. This condition was not in existence a year ago because at that time everybody was curtailing expense, foodstuffs had advanced in price and money was not in circulation. Now, everybody jingles cash in their pockets.

"I feel that this fall the proper time has arrived to increase admission prices. I intend to increase my scale of admissions. As I stated before, I did so last September, but was forced to return to my old scale because there was no great amount of money in general circulation. Now, however, I am of the strong opinion that the time is ripe to increase admission prices, and therefore I am again going to advance the box office scale. This time I am confident that the public will accept the increase cheerfully and that my business and my patronage will go forward."

Film Offerings At New York Theaters

Programs for Week of July 28 at Some of the More Prominent Local Picture Theaters.

BLANCHE BATES, playing also in "Getting Together," at the Shubert, appeared for the first time upon the screen at the Strand Sunday as star of "The Border Legion," in which Hobart Bosworth is featured. Another important opening was the presentation of "America's Answer," shown publicly for the first time, Monday evening at George M. Cohan's theater. Government pictures produced at the direction of General Pershing. Here are some of the bills New Yorkers will enjoy during the week ending August 3:

STRAND.—Blanche Bates and Hobart Bosworth, in "The Border Legion," a Zane Grey story directed by T. Hayes Hunter. The Christy comedy is "This Way Out"; the Allied War Review is featured, and specialties will engage Meleta Donconia, violinist; Herbert Waterous, basso.

RIALTO.—Sunday afternoon Charles Ray opened in "A Nine o'Clock Town." Additional offerings include a Bruce Scenic and a Mack Sennett comedy, with specialties by Annie Rosner, soprano, and Oesere La Salle, baritone.

RIVOLI.—Douglas Fairbanks, in "Bound in Morocco," opened Sunday, with a Post travel picture, a comedy subject with Greek Evans and Gladys Rice offering vocal solos as additional factors in the bill.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—Anna Q. Nilsson, in "Heart of the Sunset," first half; with Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, in "Passing of the Third Floor Back" to fill the week.

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—David Wark Griffith's "Hearts of the World" continues its long run indefinitely. The engagement began April 4.

BROADWAY.—Mary MacLaren, the girl who became an overnight star in "Shoes," presents another sociological picture under the title of "Bread." "To Hell With the Kaiser" terminated a four weeks' run last Saturday night.

PROCTOR THEATERS.—125th street, Douglas Fairbanks in "Say! Young Fellow"; 58th Street, Sessue Hayakawa, in "The Bravest Way," also presented at the 23d Street.

B. S. MOSS THEATERS.—"Mothers of Liberty" and "One Thousand Dollars" fill the week, in alternating halves at the Regent and Jefferson.

SYMPHONY.—Dorothy Phillips, in "The Mortgaged Wife."

SAVOY.—Douglas Fairbanks, in "Say! Young Fellow."

Picture Stars To Help "The Lights"

Screen Favorites Will Take Part in Annual Show of Famous Theatrical Club.

SEVERAL of the best known stars of the screen at present in New York have been asked to assist "The Lights," famous Long Island theatrical club, with their annual show at Castles-by-the-Sea, Long Beach, Friday night, August 2, and also at Far Rockaway, Saturday night, August 3. This will be the fourth year The Lights have given a show at Castles-by-the-Sea, but never before have they tried to obtain the help of the photoplay fraternity.

Alice Brady has been asked to be present, and will probably be there, accompanied by her voice. June Elvidge will also be present. Emmy Wehlen, of Metro, another star who shines just as luminously when she lifts up her voice, has also been invited to attend. Montagu Love, World star, and famous story teller, will also be there. Virginia Pearson and her husband, Sheldon Lewis, also have been invited, and every effort is being made to have Kitty Gordon attend.

The show will be given under unique conditions. Over twenty of the best known vaudeville and musical comedy stars will take part in the show.

Mrs. Castle's Future Undecided

A note has been received by the Moving Picture World from the secretary of Irene Castle. It definitely denies that the famous dancer is to retire from the screen. The statement follows:

"Irene Castle is not retiring from the screen as has been reported, nor is the rumor that she is to appear in vaudeville with a new dancing partner correct. Owing to unforeseen delays in getting overseas it is barely possible that she will transfer her war work to overcoming German propaganda on this side of the water. Several suggestions from those in charge of this work have been made, and it is not yet settled as to whether her reappearance before the public will be in the nature of a stirring Patriotic Film now under consideration or by a tour of the larger cities, in a vehicle especially prepared for the purpose of offsetting the German subtleties in this country. A remarkable scenario has been developed along these lines written by a prominent newspaper woman."

Out at the Rothacker Plant

By James S. McQuade

President Watterson R. Rothacker Gives Interesting Interview Concerning Present Activities and Future Plans

I MADE a call one afternoon last week on Watterson R. Rothacker, president of the big, modern plant bearing his name out on Diversey Boulevard. I must confess that there was just the spectre of a lingering fear, which, like Banquo's ghost, would not down, that I might find things somewhat dull out there, for the great war has cast its shadow on many of the big film plants in the country. The spectre was thoroughly downed, however, after a few minutes' conversation with my old friend Rothacker.

Watterson R. Rothacker.

Indeed, I was soon convinced, in a way that was most unexpected, that Mr. Rothacker was a very busy man and his office a very hive, for the telephone broke in on our conversation most persistently. These calls were not confined to business men in the city, as several were from far-out cities in the Middle West, from men engaged in manufacturing industries, some of whom made appointments to meet Mr. Rothacker when they arrived in Chicago with the object of contracting for the making of industrial subjects that would advertise their products. Here was a practical demonstration, without Mr. Rothacker's aid, that was both satisfying and gratifying.

But an account of the present activities of the Rothacker plant, as revealed during our conversation, will be more to the point. I found that a very interesting and important industrial subject had just been finished for the United States Fuel Administration, having been made under the personal direction of Major Edward C. Schmidt, of the fuel conservation section, Washington, and of L. R. Pyle, fuel supervisor of the Soo line of railways at Minneapolis. This subject is in one reel and will be released by the Fuel Administration in August.

Film for Railway Firemen.

The film shows in the clearest manner the best way to get the highest value of coal in firing locomotive engines, and it also shows the great waste that results from the customary and imperfect methods of firing now in practice. It is for use especially among the firemen of the railways of America, and a special showing will be given through the agencies of the United States Fuel Administration throughout the country for the special benefit of firemen.

Inspection at the Tank.

Film to Aid Salvation Army in France.

Just now several short films are being made of the big pageant recently held on the Armour estate at Lake Forest, on the North Side, in aid of the Salvation Army's devoted women workers near the battle front in France. A grand reproduction of the pageant given in the Auditorium July 27 in the interests of the Salvation Army war drive, the entire proceeds to be devoted to the Salvation Army's war activities.

Perforating Department.

The short films of the pageant now being made at the Rothacker plant will be used to advertise the real pageant at the Auditorium, and Mr. Rothacker has donated them to the cause. Jones, Linick & Schaefer, the Ascher Brothers and Alfred Hamburger ran the films in their houses during the week of July 22 so as to give the Auditorium pageant wide publicity. The spectacle shows Greek dances, artistic costume tableaus, etc., in which Chicago society girls participated for the benefit of the cause.

Twenty Industrial Films Now Under Way.

"Fully twenty industrial subjects are now in progress," said Mr. Rothacker. "These include the production of steel by the Illinois Steel Company, the manufacture of agricultural machinery, special photoplays advertising pianos, piano players, household utensils, etc. We are just finishing a big multiple reel subject, featuring all the activities of the Western Electric Company's plant at Hawthorne, Ill. Another, just finished, shows the entire process of making vinegar for the H. J. Heinz Company, Pittsburgh.

Activities in Photoplay Production.

"We will start a series of single reel, refined comedies on September 1 at our Chicago studios for a Chicago organization, the name to be announced later.

"About October 1, I expect to release personally a series of travelogues covering all parts of the world and a weekly single release of the magazine type, which will include scientific, educational and entertaining topics. These subjects will strongly feature various helpful aids in winning the war. They will be released probably through the open market, although I am seriously entertaining at present propositions from several big distributing agencies."

Series of Six-Reel Features Contemplated.

Mr. Rothacker incidentally stated that it is very probable he will produce a series of six-reel features, on which work will begin late this fall. He has had the project in mind for some time, but the pressure of other business has retarded progress in the matter.

"These features will be signally marked by good stories, competent direction and well-known and popular photoplayers," said Mr. Rothacker. "The productions will be made at the Chicago plant and the distributing plan will be announced later."

Mr. Rothacker at this point remarked that the photoplaylet department reports great progress in the production and distribution of short films, posed from life and used for general theater advertising.

"Naturally the war has made serious inroads on the working staff of our plant," Mr. Rothacker concluded. "Twenty-two men have already joined the colors, but our organization has been maintained so as to meet all demands. There has been no interruption at any time."

Mr. Rothacker will leave for New York for a two weeks' stay the first week in August. He will make his headquarters at the Hotel Biltmore.

A Few Remarks De Luxe by Doris Kenyon

The Featured Player in "The Inn of the Blue Moon" Tells About Stars She Has Met.

Jotted Down by Edward Weitzel.

THE star of "The Street of the Seven Stars" is not the seventh daughter of a seventh daughter, although she has lived in "The Inn of the Blue Moon" and has had her horoscope cast by a Coney Island astrologer—at regular rates. She admits, however, she has seen more than seven stars at once—seven times seven and a few more besides. It happened the day her father strapped a blanket on the old mare down on the farm and she started off to deliver a fresh-laid chocolate cake to the Ladies' Aid Society for her mother—referring, of course, to Doris Kenyon and not to the horse. Her remarks on the adventure explain it thus:

Doris Kenyon.

"I was about twelve years old when I landed in the middle of the street of the seventy-seven stars. I always loved horses and learned to ride without a saddle before I was ten. Our farm was about two miles from the village, and when mother told me she wanted me to take a cake to the church I made up my mind that old Mollie should carry both of us. I got father to fasten on the blanket, lead Mollie to the side of the house, went in and got the cake, climbed on to the mare safely with my burden and started on a slow walk down the road. The cake was in a basket, and I got along all right until just before I reached the church. A male being was the cause of my downfall."

"What was he? A male vampire?"

"No, a little freckled-nosed boy, who called after me: 'Bet yer 'fraid tu make th' old plug gallop.'"

"Did you take the dare?"

"I did—to mine and the cake's undoing. I hit Mollie in the side with my heels and shook the reins. She started suddenly into a trot, the basket struck her on the neck and frightened her, and the chocolate cake was under me when I landed on my back in the middle of the street. I'd heard of daylight fireworks, but I'd never seen any before. They were all of one kind though—shooting stars."

"What about your new De Luxe picture, 'The Inn of the Blue Moon'?"

"It was written by Louis Joseph Vance, and is the first story designed by a prominent author for screen production before being published in several magazines and in book form."

"What's your part?"

"Twin sisters. One is reared in the city; the other in the country. A lot of her scenes take place on a farm. We use all sorts of live stock in the picture, and I have to ride a horse—"

"And carry a chocolate cake to town?"

"No, thank you! I've seen my share of shooting stars."

"What about the other kind?"

"I'm fond of them, of course. I started with Alice Brady in 'The Rack,' and such a funny thing happened—"

Doris Keynon stopped as suddenly as the mare started and smiled in a reminiscent sort of way.

"Perhaps I hadn't better tell you about this. Anyway I'll not tell you his name. But when I was sixteen I went to a matinee in Syracuse—that's where we used to live—and was very much smitten with the hero in the play. My chum dared me to go around to the stage door with her and tell the handsome leading man how perfectly grand we both thought him."

"You accepted this dare also it is safe to assume!"

"Indeed I did! We were a couple of silly young things, but our hero was real nice, only before we fairly got started talking to him his wife joined the party and that rather put a stop to our flow of compliments. I never expected to see him again, and he walked over and shook hands with me the morning I went to my first rehearsal at the World studio. He was a member of the cast."

HULETTE SUBJECT SELECTED FOR "Y" HUTS.

Among the pictures selected for showing in the Y. M. C. A. entertainment huts in France is "Waifs," a Pathe production in which Gladys Hulette is starred.

The fact that Miss Hulette is the wife of Captain William Parke, Jr., of the Royal Flying Corps, who is now detailed on duty in France, ought to lend added interest to this picture when the Yankee boys see it.

ZECCA AND FRANCONI RETURN.

Ferdinand Zecca, director general of productions, and L. E. Franconi, head of the film editing department of Pathe Exchange, Inc., returned to New York last week, after a stay of nearly three weeks in California. During their absence Messrs. Zecca and Franconi visited the studios of Astra, Diando, Rolin and Anderson-Brunton Company, whose product is released by Pathe.

Universal Employes Stage Ball Game

Final Score Still in Dispute, But Pitcher Nat Rothstein Is Credited With a Most Generous Delivery.

THE employes of the Universal's home office and laboratories had their annual outing at Donnelly's Grove last Saturday. As usual the most important event was the ball game, in which the laboratoryites beat the home office. The strategy of the H. O. was to allow the laboratory to score a few runs in the first inning and then to shut down on them and beat them in the home stretch. The opening of this campaign developed as planned, but that was only part of the campaign which developed that way.

Nat Rothstein, the most genorous pitcher who ever hurled the pill, permitted the factory eighteen runs in the first two innings, but the development of the runs which would beat the Jerseyites was sadly at variance with the expectations. When the game finished the home office had only amassed the two scores, and the number that the laboratory got will doubtless be a matter of argument all the rest of the summer.

However, the five hundred people who crowded into Donnelly's eating rooms were very little disturbed by the outcome of the game.

There were a number of athletic events, including races between the exchange and the home office and the different divisions of the laboratory. There were also two contests for girls, one a ball throwing contest and the other a fifty-yard dash. Both of them were won by Celia Witcoe.

The arrangements were under the immediate direction of Clarence Jack, who managed the entire affair.

Kirkpatirck Promoted by Mutual

ARTHUR S KIRKPATRICK has been appointed to the post of assistant general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation by President James M. Sheldon, who by Mutual precedent carries also the title of general manager. Mr. Kirkpatrick thus succeeds to the post previously occupied by Denis J. Sullivan, whose resignation was announced last week.

Mr. Kirkpatrick, formerly a representative and branch manager for the Mutual in various western territories, was called into the home office of the corporation and made a member of the executive staff about one year ago, working there as assistant to Mr Sullivan. "This experience, plus the thorough experience of selling in the field has particularly fitted Mr. Kirkpatrick for his present functions and duties with the Mutual," said President Sheldon, announcing the appointment.

Arthur S. Kirkpatrick.

Mr. Kirkpatrick has been in the service of the Mutual Film Corporation for about three years, having worked in the capacity of salesman and as branch manager. His experience as salesman is wide, having covered during that time practically all of the Western territory for Mutual and finally having been appointed as branch manager at Portland, Oregon.

Prior to Mr. Kirkpatrick's connection with the Mutual Film Corporation he was with the United States Steel Corporation at Chicago, there being engaged as chief civil engineer.

Having been for a time interested in the motion picture industry as a fan, he decided to enter it as a business and became connected with the Metro Pictures Corporation, there getting his first experience in the industry. After a period with the Metro Pictures Corporation he entered the employ of Mutual as salesman, shortly afterward being appointed branch manager of Portland. His ability was soon recognized and resulted in his being transferred to Chicago.

Mr. Kirkpatrick has covered practically all of the territories that are served by Mutual, and in this way has acquired a thorough understanding of conditions and territories as they exist.

St. Louis Exhibitors Visit Studio

Boosters Who Landed 1919 Convention Look Over Goldwyn Plant and Meet Stars.

FOUR St. Louis exhibitors whose efforts at the Boston convention of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America were largely responsible for bringing next year's gathering to the Mound City were guests of Goldwyn in New York July 15. The St. Louis boosters are Thomas J. Lavin, of the Melba theater; Edward Pohlmann of the Bridge theater; Joseph Mogler, owner of the Mogler and Bremen theaters, and Lewis V. Stephens, of the Juniata theater. They were accompanied by Charles F. Hatfield, secretary and general manager of the St. Louis convention and publicity bureau, a part of the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce.

The visitors were driven to the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee, N. J., and escorted through the various buildings by

A. Lehr, manager of productions. All four exhibitors are Goldwyn customers and were eager to meet the stars of the productions then present. They were cordially greeted by Madge Kennedy, Mae Marsh and Mabel Normand. Later they had the pleasure of seeing the three artistes at work on their coming releases.

"It's our first visit to a motion picture studio and it surely repaid us for making the trip to the big town from Boston," said Mr. Lavin, spokesman for the party.

The visitors were photographed in one of the sets for Madge Kennedy's latest picture, "The Kingdom of Youth." Having seen and enjoyed everything at the studio, they motored back to New York, where they were the guests of a Goldwyn executive at dinner.

HODKINSON SERVICE HAS BIG WEEK IN CLEVELAND

The W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, distributors of Paralta, Plaza and Douglas Natural Color pictures, had a banner showing in Cleveland, Ohio, the week of July 21. Paralta plays ran a week in three different theaters.

The Standard theater, a downtown house, played Louise Glaum in "Shackled," to full houses. The Metropolitan theater, with a very large seating capacity, found that J. Warren Kerrigan is proving their biggest drawing card. The feature was "One Dollar Bid." At the Knickerbocker theater Bessie Barriscale did a capacity business in "Patriotism."

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

THE cold shock that struck New York last week brought the coldest inhabitant into the newspapers with comment upon the phenomena. The dean of cracker-box strategists assembled at Wick Tilton's general store left the world war flat on the lot and took up the more immediately essential work of getting the thermometer back to its senses.

Ladies appeared on New York's Broadway muffled in furs, reinforced by heavy veils, with double-thick strips across their mouths to protect their lungs from the sharp winds that whistled shivery Arctic tunes as they blew down the subway kiosks after the manner a small boy makes music in the neck of a bottle.

Shop girls who could not afford the more expensive furs snatched cats from the back fence and appeared at the "Employees' Entrance" arrayed comfortably in stoles, capes and neck pieces, varying in shades from the explosive "Black Tom" to the more demure and domesticated maltese and tiger-striped nomads of the mews and alleys.

Frost formed on the glass domes of moving picture studios at Fort Lee Kugel to such depth that there was danger of the productions then under way being touched with it. Experts examined them, but so thick and penetrating had the frost become that there was sharp conflict of opinion. Not until the pictures are released and the critical reviewers get a crack at them will it be definitely known as to just how seriously the frost penetrations will affect the results.

Harry Reichenbach, now known as the "Snow Bank Columbus," in succession to his previous moniker, "The Silver King," was ever alert and up betimes with cardboard signs, ready mounted, to decorate the snow piles that accumulated in Longacre Square. "Tarzan's Successor" was all he could announce, as the official title of the new production had not been registered at the patent stunt office.

Rivoli-Rialto Rothapfel experienced a remarkable "strike" among the actors then appearing at the house farthest north. The cold wave went above the Longacre timber line with cutting keenness, and the actors impersonating the natives of the Cannibal Islands refused to go on.

They claimed that in consenting to appear so near the frost belt in the heart of a New York summer they were assured that July was just the time for cannibal actors to disport in their native costume—a nose ring, reinforced by a splinter of orange-wood. Having dressed in accord with managerial guarantees the South Sea Islanders shivered until the audience could hear the head cannibal's nose ring.

Late in the week the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Cannibals intervened and compelled the projectionist, who had replaced an operator in the booth, to thicken up the light and give the shivering man-eaters more heat.

The far-famed and fifth industry has not experienced such a chill since the days of the Patents-Co.-In-Its-Glory. Old Doc Garfield never put the ice on so thick in January's coal-minus Mondays.

"How cold is it?" snorted the president of the Manufacturing company.

"Colder'n Percy Waters," snapped the vice-prexy as he slammed the communicating door between offices.

During the worst of the cold wave phenomena hundreds of ladies protected their shivering forms by throwing over their shoulders long military capes, containing enough thick woolen cloth to make three suits of clothes for any of their men folk. These capes were tightly clasped at the throat, high collars extending above the ears of the suffering creatures.

With these thick military capes and heavy furs the ladies of Manhattan and the Bronx managed to present an outward appearance of uncomfortable warmth. The check girls at the principal moving picture theaters did a February business in checking winter-weight clothing for the society girls who came in off the street to escape the withering blasts that came right from Baffin Bay to chill New Yorkers in a surprise attack.

"Snow" fell at numerous picture theaters fronting on Broadway to such an extent that officials entrusted with authority suffered severe muscular strain in shoveling it out. At one theater the treasurer discovered that the war tax drawer contained an amount many times in excess of the gross sale of admission tickets.

INTERVIEWED in his office at the Payhouse the best president the N. A. M. P. I. ever had shivered out a few reminiscenes as he swatted the snow from his heel-length sealskin ulster.

"Just back from Boston," he said. "Thought Boston was cold, but this puts a crimp in all records. Reminds me of the first time I played Boston when I was a young fellow getting together my first dollars. My daughter was with me in Boston last week, but she was not with me when I first went there with 'The Bottom of the Sea.'"

Mr. Brady paused long enough to turn the contents of an ink bottle into his throat. "Gotta have a little moisture on my tonsils or the cold will crack 'em off," said he in explanation.

"Back to Boston," he resumed. "I carried three cars of scenery on ten tickets and made the big set in the piece look like the bed of the river a hundred miles due east of Sandy Hook. It was in January and a cold belch came down from Greenland and froze that scenery so stiff it was a solid mass of under-water.

"To get it off the stage I had to saw it out in chunks. I gave fifteen wagon loads of this ice to the Watch and Ward Society. They took it over to the Howard Athenaeum, where Sam T. Jack's Lily Clay show was running the hottest opposition I ever experienced in my career as a theatrical showman and moving picture producer.

"This darned ink well is dry," said Mr. Brady as he jabbed a pen into the neck of the bottle preparatory to signing a check for Alice Brady's share.

"No, it's froze," he concluded.

The Waldorf-Astoria Airdome, at Fifth avenue and Thirty-odd street, turned to advantage the cold wave that suddenly smashed business into a retreat, following that with a rout. In winter—regular winter—the place is conducted as a rink. The management shoved the seats into one corner, flooded the asphalt and got out the ice skates to profitable advantage.

Taking Advantage of "Opportunity."

SHOWN at the Strand by Goldwyn last week, "Opportunity" depicted "Smiling Bill" Parsons camouflaged in the oil business. His next-door neighbor, being in on Bill's game, poked fun at him in one sub-title as follows:

"I see you are home 'oily' this evening."

The expression will do all right for native-born Manhattan Islanders, for the language is spoken by them as by none others anywhere. "Oily" means early in native New York parlance, just as "early" means oily in that strange tongue.

New York's second best playground (we hold first for the Palisades) is "Cooney" Island to the natives. They generally take their "goil" down on the "Thoid" avenue line.

There is no "flawr" in the native's system. Their "woid" is as good as any "lawr" you ever "sawr," and if you dispute them they'll punch you on the "jawr." In the "foist" place New York natives have their own lingo.

Their "poil" is always a "boid," and so on, ad lib.

In the last place they are native New Yorkers.

The Redemption of Justin Fair.

THERE should be joy in this written proof of contrition bubbling from the heart of Justin Fair, publicist for Pathe photoplays and players. With the "still" produced elsewhere on these truthful tablets he sent this confession. It is worth perusal right through to the concluding interrogation point:

"Here is a pretty still," writes Justin, "which you will note is from that great drama "The Terrible Face," which will never be released by Frank A. Keeney—not while he's sober.

"Having listened for fifteen long, lean years to actors telling me how publicity should be done I once decided that if the actors I have known could write publicity better than I that I was dodgummed sure I could act a whole lot better than they.

"So—I ventured.

"But I was wrong.

"Mayhap it is that actors can write publicity (although I still listen to their chatter with the uplifted eyebrow, the sniffing nostril, the sneering lip and the surly smile—you know, the frosty-eye stuff), but I do admit now that I am a bad screen artist.

"Somehow I don't register well.

"When the stills came I detected serious defects.

"Why did I not remember to pull up my pants for instance? See how they hug my knees—tight-like? Why did I not dye my hair with some good one walnut juice and then curl it up—Bushman-like?

"And above all, why did I edge away from my beautiful star like I did?

"I cannot say! But this I vow.

"Your chastened friend shall never act again.

"Use the still in Rambles? Well, why not?

"I'd be a bat publicity shark if I asked you not to use it. What?"

He was fined ten dollars, notwithstanding the alibi that Johnnie handed out. "That won't go," said the judge. "Ten dollars or ten days."

"Take the car," said Johnnie.

Demand of Art Turns Two Heads.

Edward Coxen, leading man, who plays opposite Bessie Barriscale in "A Wife's Conscience," the star's latest Paralta production, is normally brunette. And Baby Mary Jane Irving, who also has an important part in the picture, was given by nature beautiful golden-brown locks of a light shade.

But the needs of a story must be catered to irrespective of nature's choices in shade of hair or personal choice either. The whole story hinges upon the little girl having dark locks, and so her mother had to color them for the part. And equally important in the story is it that Edward Coxen as the husband have hair as blonde as that of his wife herself.

So Coxen, let it be known—hero of many a picture drama with his raven locks—had to use peroxide or something of that sort.

Take heart, though, girls!

It is said around the studio that he looks more handsome than ever.

Two Up-to-Date Houses

The Royal of San Francisco and the Progress of Oakland.

JUST as examples of what may be considered pretty complete equipment, we are briefly describing and illustrating some of the features of two Pacific coast houses. They certainly serve to demonstate most forcibly how far the modern temple of the screen has progressed since the days of the store show.

130-Foot Projection Here.

It is hard to beat the progressiveness of the coast theaters, and the Royal theater of San Francisco, Cal., is not to be outdone. The management has endeavored to provide every facility for making their patrons comfortable while enjoying the pictures. They have succeeded splendidly.

Sixteen hundred persons can find easy, commodious seats in the large well ventilated auditorium. A large fan driven by a 5-horsepower motor furnishes an ample supply of pure fresh air while a 5-foot Ventura fan exhausts the impure vitiated air. An American Photo Player Co. organ, the blower of which is operated by a 5 horsepower Westinghouse motor, furnishes the music.

The pictures are projected a distance of 130 feet upon a flat-white screen, 16 feet by 21 feet. A full non-flickering current at the arc is maintained for projection. This supply of power is obtained from a 72 ampere Westinghouse motor-generator complete with two ballast resistors, magnetic control and transfer switch. A switchboard gives a direct-current breakdown service from a 3-wire direct-current supply circuit. Two Simplex machines, operated by 1/6 horsepower motors, are used for projection. There are also a Power dissolver, a Power spot light, and a motor-driven rewinder. A glimpse at the accompanying pictures will show the up-to-date equipment and the arrangement of which the management of the Royal theater is justly proud.

Modern Electrical Equipment a Feature.

The Progress theater of Oakland, Cal., has certainly lived up to its name in laying out and equipping its building. Its auditorium comfortably seating eight hundred visitors is a beauty.

The management has installed a complete ventilating equipment, providing pure fresh air at all times. A continuous change of air is had by means of a three horsepower blower and a 12-inch Ventura Fan.

Three 6-A Power's projectors driven by 1/6 horsepower motors are used for throwing the pictures a distance of 117 feet from a Hill Wonder screen 18 feet by 24 feet. Power is secured for this from a 55-ampere Westinghouse motor-generator provided with two ballast resistors, and necessary control switches. On the switchboard in addition to the meters and other equipment provision is made for supplying direct-current break-down service in emergency. In the operating room there are also a Power's Dissolver, a motor-driven rewinder, three arc controls for maintaining constant current at the arc automatically and three speed regulators. All the equipment is conveniently arranged and well adapted to first class productions. Part of the equipment is shown in the accompanying illustration.

METRO'S "KAISER" CONTINUES AT BROADWAY.

On account of the continued capacity audiences at the Broadway, M. Kashin, the director of the theater, has arranged with Metro Pictures Corporation to extend indefinitely the engagement of Screen Classics, Inc.'s seven-part super-feature, "To Hell with the Kaiser," in which Lawrence Grant is featured as the Kaiser and Olive Tell plays the American heroine.

This will make the second time that the engagement of this unusual and elaborate picture has been extended at the Broadway. It opened originally for a limited engagement, but so many thousands of persons were turned away during this period that the management obtained an extension from Metro. Since then the attendance has been heavier than ever in spite of the hot weather, so this week, M. Kashin resolved to keep the picture going until all who want to see it have an opportunity.

Indian Notes

By S. B. Banerjea.

E. H. DUCASSE of the Bijou Grand, Calcutta, has just opened a bioscope theater, at Darjecling. The opening performance was attended by the Governor of Bengal and party, and was a decided success.

I hear that Mr. Ducasse will have a permanent theater at Bombay. His twice-a-week change of program at the Royal Opera House has proved a success.

At his Calcutta theater, the following films have been screened: "She Came Back," "Romance of Billy Goat Hill," "His Picture in the Papers," "The Voice of Conscience," "Camille," "Vanity," and several British films of no merit whatever.

* * *

H. Seal, son of the renowned philosopher Dr. B. N. Seal, recently went to the Bijou and bought a rupee ticket. As no seats were available, he changed his ticket for a two rupee ticket, but he was not allowed to take his seat as he was not wearing European dress! Mr. Seal protested but in vain. In disgust he left the place. As may be expected, this little incident has created a sensation. Mr. Seal has been advised to bring a suit for damages against the authorities of the Bijou. Mr. Madan owns some four theaters in Calcutta, but he has no rule excluding Indians from the two rupee seats because they have no European dress on. I have not yet heard of any Indian gentleman being excluded from such purely European-owned theaters like the Empire or the Theater Royal, because of their native dress. The Bijou authorities are now advertising to the effect that Indian gentlemen, who wishes to sit in the Dress circle, should don European costume. This is adding insult to injury. Certain persons talked of boycotting the Bijou. Considering the fact that of late, this theater has not been screening films of merit, I should not be surprised if I saw a falling off of patrons. Miss Bromley has lately been appointed secretary and manager of Bijou. I trust she will be able to show an all-round improvement before very many days are over.

At the Elphinstone Picture Palace we have seen the following: "Youth's Endearing Charm," "Her Greatest Performance," "Get Rich Quick Wallingford," "The Cigarette Girl," "Temporal Power," "Shopwalker," "Barber's Shop," "Mater Dolorosa," "Frou Frou," and several British films.

Madan has secured exclusive Indian rights in the following films, which will be screened in one or other of his theaters shortly: "Woman's Fight," "The Strange Case of Mary Page," "The Scarlet Runner," "Secret Kingdom," "Vengeance and the Woman," "The Woman in the Web," "Perils of the Girl Proprietor," "The Girl and the Game," "The Lass of the Lumberlands," "The Railroad Raiders," "The Secret of the Submarine," "The Diamond from the Sky," and sequel.

I have seen his program for the next few weeks and must say he has some excellent food for us.

At the Albion and Nipon theaters, "The Great Secret" has run its course. It was witnessed by hundreds.

At the New Cornwallis "The Mysteries of Myra" has just been completed. It is one of the most exciting serials that I have ever seen, and I trust its sequel will prove equally interesting.

I have advised more than once in these columns, that film manufacturers, who cannot resist the temptation of introducing Indian scenes, etc., should make a point of consulting some responsible Indian regarding the same and not depend on Europeans or Americans of the "subjanta" (all-knowing) type for information. "The Mysteries of Myra" is a case in point. In it, "Brother Haji," a musselman, has been made out a Hindu. There is no such word as "Kundalind" in any Indian language. "Um Pari Hum" is delightful! The manufacturers of this film should have been present at the Cornwallis to hear the uncomplimentary language that was used by a number of persons when the above "expressions" were screened. I have referred to this matter, by way of advice, and trust it will be accepted in a friendly spirit.

The Picture House authorities have shown "Max Wants a Divorce," "The Net," "A Study in Scarlet," "The Pillory," and "The Black Crook." Their Saturday Prize shows are being well patronized.

The Kidderspur Cinema Palace people are now screening "The Broken Coin." They have an all-comic program on Fridays.

The authorities of the Bioscope theater are now showing "The Million Dollar Mystery." They have also screened "Facing Eternity" and a number of American films lately.

At the Theater Royal, we have seen that delightful film "The Old Kentucky Home," and several American films.

At the Calcutta Empire, we lately saw "The Life of Lord Kitchener." I confess this film failed to satisfy me and many of my friends, whom I asked to see it.

The Simla Palace cinema people have exhibited a number of interesting films, to crowded houses, during the last few weeks.

The Murree Hill cinema is doing a roaring business. As may be expected, it is mainly patronized by soldiers.

The same remarks apply to the two Jubbulpur cinemas. In regard to these theaters, I have one complaint to make. The seating arrangements for the four and the eight auna ticketholders are very bad. These can easily be improved without incurring much expense.

At the Eldorado (Bombay), "Jimmie Dale" is being screened. This film has already been shown at the Presidency theater of Calcutta.

At the Majestic (Bombay), several American films have been screened, of which "The Girl and the Game" deserves mention.

The authorities of the New Alexandria have screened "Straight Shooting," "The Eternal City," "The Crimson Stain Mystery," and "Panopta" to crowded houses.

At the Imperial, "The Seven Pearls" is now being shown to large crowds. I trust Madan will arrange to screen this interesting film in one of his Calcutta theaters.

At the Bombay Empire, "The Devil's Assistant," "The Square Girl," and several British films have been screened.

At the Kohinoor (Karachi) "Payme" is now being shown. "The Gray Ghost" will be started shortly. "The Sirens of the Sea" and "Sorrows of Satan" have already been screened.

The Emperor of the same city is screening "The Crimson Stain Mystery." Its authorities have arranged to exhibit "Neil of the Navy" and "Exploits of Elaine."

The Wellington (Madras) cinema authorities are now exhibiting the new Protea serial.

"The Mystery of the Double Cross" is being shown at the Lahore Empire.

At the Excelsior, the new "Exploits of Elaine" is being screened to good houses.

A new cinema theater will be opened at Karachi shortly. It has been named the Star cinema. I wish its management all success.

A fire broke out at the Calcutta Empire, the other day. Owing to the prompt action of the fire brigade, not much damage was done. Some 100,000 feet of cinema films were destroyed. The total damage did not exceed $4,000. The loss was covered by insurance.

* * *

Prof. Ram Moorti, popularly known as the Indian Hercules, has had a complete cinema record of all his wonderful feats of strength, recently taken by the Elphinstone Bioscope people. This film, which is one of the first of its kind, will be sent to America for exhibition at an early date. It clearly demonstrates what wonderful things can be performed by the power of breath only

Recommends Changes in Export Regulations

National Association Asks Elimination of Paragraphs C, D and F, Which Are Declared Detrimental to Allied Interests.

THE National Association of the Motion Picture Industry in a communication addressed to the War Trade Board, Washington, D. C., has presented the viewpoint of the industry in respect to the new rules and regulations covering the export of motion pictures under date of July 8th. This communication goes fully into the whole question and makes definite constructive recommendations for changes desired by the industry in the regulations as recently promulgated.

A strong plea is made to exclude from the operation of the rules and regulations those motion pictures exported to Allied countries and their dependencies. As regards shipment of motion pictures to neutral countries, the changes and recommendations made are all with a view to simplifying the administration of the rules and making them more workable from a standpoint of the industry.

In asking for the complete removal of paragraphs c, d and f of the agreement which under the rules must be signed by the recipient of motion pictures in the foreign country, the following reasons are assigned.

We respectfully submit that these paragraphs be eliminated because they are inconsistent and interfere with the carrying out of the understanding arrived at between the Committee on Public Information and the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry (copy attached hereto), looking to the dissemination in the broadest possible manner, in all neutral countries, and more particularly those bordering on the Central Empires, of American motion pictures to the greatest possible extent necessary because of their educational and propaganda value to the cause of the United States.

Producers Would Co-operate with Government.

It is the express desire of the Committee on Public Information that every means be taken to bring to the peoples of all countries throughout the world the ideals and ideas of America. It is conceded that no other means of communication approaches in efficiency the motion picture for furthering these desires, and with that end in view the producers of motion pictures have taken the necessary step to co-operate in the broadest way for the accomplishment of these purposes. Any attempt, therefore, to limit the showing of American films strictly to those in sympathy with America, and preventing their exhibition to those to whom their messages are particularly directed, will render inefficacious the wise and commendable plan of the Committee on Public Information.

It is earnestly believed, therefore, that the continuation in force of the rules and regulations as at present framed will have a result exactly opposite from that intended; that we should welcome the showing of American films to the greatest extent possible, even in theaters in neutral countries, which may, from time to time, show films which originated in enemy countries; and that the elimination proposed of Paragraphs C, D and F, will not be detrimental to the interests of the United States and its allies, but, on the contrary, will more fully and completely accomplish the purpose desired, and overcome the evil effects arising out of propaganda film of Teutonic origin.

Paragraphs Operate Against American Trade.

The obligations imposed upon the recipient by Paragraphs C, D and F, in order to hereafter obtain any American motion pictures would bear very harshly upon the American manufacturer and exporter if Great Britain, rFance and Italy were not under obligation to put in force identically similar conditions in respect to any and all motion pictures hereafter exported from those respective countries; it is self-evident that as soon as it becomes known that such an obligation must be assumed by consignees in order to obtain American motion pictures, they will, to the extent possible, immediately take steps to secure the greatest possible supply of English, French and Italian films, to the great detriment of the American manufacturer and injury of our American export trade. From information received, we have reason to believe that steps are already being taken to obtain from these countries the largest supply of films possible in order to forestall the effect arising out of the regulations where, for any reason, it is believed doubtful that the recipients will be able to conscientiously sign and carry out the agreement in its present form. We urge, for this further reason, immediate action upon this subject.

In considering our request for the elimination of these clauses, permit us to bring strongly to your notice the very great difference between the export of any ordinary article of merchandise, as contra distinguished from the export of motion picture films. It might be entirely possible and practical to put in force such a regulation in regard to articles required for general use or consumption, such as clothing, food, or raw materials of any kind which, in the hands of the distributor or ultimate consumer, might be thereafter utilized for the aid and comfort of the enemy; but the motion picture exported is intended merely to be used for the entertainment, amusement, education and enlightenment of the people in the countries where shown, and they cannot be used for any other purpose whatosever.

Exporters Elect Permanent Officers

David P. Howells Is Chosen President and Dr. W. E. Schallenberger Treasurer.

A MEETING of the Film Exporters of America, Inc., was held at the Hotel Astor July 25. There was an attendance of about 30 members. Owing to the absence of David P. Howells, C. L. Chapman of North American Motion Pictures, Inc., acted as chairman of the meeting.

The permanent organization was effected. Mr. Howells was elected president and L. R. Thomas of the North American, and Joseph R. Miles, first and second Vice-presidents; Dr. W. E. Schallenberger of the Arrow Film Company, treasurer; Sidney Garrett of J. Frank Brockliss secretary and Harry G. Kosch attorney.

The committee appointed to confer with the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry reported that in accordance with instructions from Mr. Kosch, then acting secretary, a communication had been addressed to the N. A. M. P. I. requesting terms upon which that body would accept an affiliation and a reply had been received from Mr. Elliot, the secretary, that at the annual meeting of the Association at Boston the new Executive Committee had been authorized to take this matter up with the Film Exporters of America. At the time of the meeting, no further communication had been received from the executive committee of the N. A. M. P. I.

The question of the one-half cent tax on film for export was discussed and Mr. Kosch explained the situation to the meeting. He was thereupon instructed to take this matter up with the Commissioner of Internal Revenue and the Attorney General. Mr. Kosch has left for Washington for that purpose.

The next meeting will be held on August 8, at 12:30 noon, at the Hotel Astor.

FILM MEN SECURE RELIEF FOR FILM EXPORTS.

As the result of a conference held in Washington with Lord Reading, British Ambassador to the United States, in which the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry was represented by President William A. Brady, Paul H. Cromelin and David P. Howells, a modification has been secured in the ruling in regard to the restriction of film shipments to Great Britain wherein the amount of space actually allotted is now increased from 200 to 500 cubic feet per month.

The following letter has just been received by President Brady from Richard Crawford, secretary of the British Embassy in Washington:

> "Dear Sir:—With reference to my letter to you of the 19th instant I am now instructed by the Ambassador to acquaint you that the amount of space actually allotted for the transport of Motion Picture Films is 200 cubic feet. In view, however, of the representations made by the deputation of your Association Lord Reading has now made arrangements whereby this allotment will be extended to 500 feet per month.
> RICHARD CRAWFORD."

The meeting referred to was secured by T. P. O'Connor, M. P., who is the film censor of Great Britain and who presented President Brady and his associates to Lord Reading. The committee was accompanied by George Creel, chairman of the Committee on Public Information.

The members of this committee feel elated at the success of their labors as the space which they have sought has been granted.

This announcement was made at a meeting of the exporters and heads of the export departments of the producing and distributing companies held at the offices of the National Association July 29.

America Leads in Film Publicity

Cromelin Favors Campaign to Break the Apathy of European Newspapers Regarding Moving Pictures.

PAUL H. Cromelin, president of Inter-Ocean Film, is behind a campaign of education that has for its chief aim getting important foreign newspapers to give films the same proportionate news space they secure in the American press. He quoted an article in the London Post that comments on the apathy of European newspapers, thusly: "Whole pages are devoted to theaters and music halls, but hardly a column to the pictures, although the latter advertise also." Mr. Cromelin says that this unfortunate conditition obtained just as thoroughly in America up to five years ago, but was changed by united exhibitor action.

"American exhibitors get tired of the poor news recognition," he states, "when trade writers like Sargent and Johnston pointed out that baseball, which did little or no advertising, received pages to the 'sticks' given pictures. These men, being journalists themselves, made the important disclosure that the newspaper readers who 'counted'—the sort that bought the wares of the advertisers—were of the six that doesn't read ball news—but would be interested in picture news. In other words, the newspapers were overlooking their own interests in overlooking the exhibitor's! No fact could be plainer.

"Well, it is this simple fact that we want the foreign cinema man to get before this press. We want him to tell the local publisher that a well-conducted department of motion picture news will be the biggest asset his paper can have, not only as a stimulus to its exhibitor advertising but to its own circulation. Picturegoers are a buying class everywhere, and I think the foreign newspaperman can be won."

Glucksmann Closes New Deal

Secures Exclusive Rights on Several Balboa and W. H. Productions for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Chile.

JACOBO GLUCKSMANN, manager of the New York buying office of Max Glucksmann, has just acquired the exclusive rights for Argentina, Uruguay, Paraguay and Chile on the following Balboa subjects: "Jackit, the Hoyden," "The Angel Child," "The Broken Vow," "Petticoats vs. Pants," "Whatever the Cost," "The Locked Door," "Marylee Mixes In," "Sallie O'," "Wanted, a Brother," "No Children Wanted" and "Little Miss Grown-Up." He also purchased for the same territory four W. H. productions entitled "The Painted Soul," "The Cup of Life," "The Mating" and "The Reward," all of them with Bessie Barriscale.

Mr. Glucksmann also reports that the Simplex projectors are in great demand at present among the exhibitors of Argentina, Chile and Uruguay. Since Max Glucksmann secured last year the exclusive representation of the Precision Machine Company in South America Simplex projectors have been installed in some of the best theaters of Argentina and they have impressed the local exhibitors and operators with their reliability and efficiency under actual working conditions.

In regard to films dealing with the present war, Max Glucksmann, through his exchanges in South America, has been handling many of the propaganda pictures put out by the different Allied governments, and the Montevideo office of the firm has just been designated by the British authorities to distribute the Official British War Films within the Republic of Uruguay.

EXPORT AND IMPORT HAS NEW OFFICE.

The Export and Import Film Company is now comfortably settled in the attractive suite of offices formerly occupied by the Russian Art Film Corporation in 1110 and 1111 Godfrey Building.

This suite is known to be one of the best equipped in the building, is tastefully furnished, and its Japanese reception room is the haven of scores of foreign buyers these sultry days, for the news has spread in export circles that next to the Export and Import projection room its Japanese reception room is the coolest place in town.

DR. HESPE WORKING FOR CUSTOM HOUSE.

Dr. H. C. Hespe of Newark, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of New Jersey, has been awarded the contract for the projection and inspection of export films for the Custom House Department. He is fitting up the old quarters of the Universal at 115 East Twenty-third street, New York, with eight machines and screens. He expects to start the projection by August 5. It is said there are 5,000,000 feet of film awaiting the critical eyes of the inspectors.

Here's the Low-Down on Tom North

Anderson Uncovers Some of the Performances of Film Man In Seattle, Showing Why He's Looked Upon as Regular Fellow.

TOM NORTH dropped into Seattle last week out of a clear sky. Nobody had any idea he was coming or he would have been met at the station with a brass band, just to remind him of the big circus stunts he used to pull when he was northwest manager of V-L-S-E. His many Seattle friends were very sorry to learn, however, that he was not to be permanently located there, but would proceed in a couple of weeks to San Francisco, where he is to establish his headquarters as western division manager for Pathe.

Men who knew Mr. North's preference for the Pacific Coast have been surprised at his long stay in New York, and they prophesied that as soon as he got a chance at a position worthy of his efforts he would return to the West. Evidently he has been pulling the wires pretty hard, for it was only three months ago that his appointment to the eastern division managership of Pathe was announced.

It was during his sojourn in Seattle as northwest V-L-S-E manager that Mr. North put this city on the map, so far as the film business was concerned, and incidentally put his own name in the mouths of film men from coast to coast. He gained greatest national recognition through the publication of his house organ, "Pals," which was probably the most successful film paper ever published by a branch office. Seattle and the Pacific Northwest, however, knew Mr. North by his unusual advertising stunts. Those were the days when an aeroplane was so uncommon in Seattle skies as to cause everybody to stop in the streets and stare and busy men in offices to rush to the windows and look out at it.

Even Located an Aeroplane in Seattle.

When "The Battle Cry of Peace" opened at the Moore theater Mr. North had an aeroplane deliver the paper for it, dropping it on the heads of the gaping crowds in the streets. At the opening of Charlie Chaplin's burlesque of "Carmen" at the Rex theater, Mr. North and Mr. Hamrick, the Rex manager, arranged a big parade of boy imitators of Charlie, led by a band and followed by several autos. The parade wound up in a downtown park, and the boys who were considered the best imitators of the great comedian were presented with prizes. The affair received several front page write-ups in the Seattle papers, and the whole city was talking about it.

Again, during the showing of "The Island of Regeneration," at the Liberty, Mr. North advertised for parrots like those in the picture. The whole lobby of the Liberty was filled with parrots brought from homes, from ships, from stores, from every part of the city.

During the big snow in February, 1916, when street car service was tied up for several days and all traffic was greatly hindered, the resourceful V-L-S-E manager engaged an Alaska dog team that happened to be in the city to deliver film for him. This attracted a great deal of attention and was eventually explained in the newspapers. These are just a few samples of the kind of advertising that Mr. North used to do to help his exhibitors get the business.

Suggested Renting Circuit for Canadians.

Mr. North's constructive and aggressive type of mind has been shown in bigger things, however. When Canadian exhibitors were having trouble getting films because of the length of time it took to send them back and forth from the film exchanges in the United States he suggested to several of them that they get together and form a circuit, so that they could rent film for three months at a time. In this way exhibitors in Winnipeg, Calgary, and the other Canadian cities of the Middle West and the Pacific Coast were able to get features which the exchanges had been unable to let them have as individuals. This plan is still in operation in Western Canada and a similar one has been adopted in Alaska.

The V-L-S-E exchange building at 415 Olive Street, Seattle, was the first building erected for an exchange exclusively in the United States. It was Tom North's idea, and he made it an event in Seattle as well as film history. The mayor of the city laid the cornerstone, and a big crowd attended the ceremony. ANDERSON.

A CHECK AWAITS F. H. DECKER.

The Motion Picture Department of the Y. M. C. A. inquires the address of F. H. Decker, formerly of 80 Fifth avenue. The post office returned a letter sent to this address. As the missive was accompanied by a check Mr. Decker possibly may share the anxiety of the Y. M. C. A. to have the inquiry answered.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard

I DON'T know when we have had a more timely or better directed picture than that given us here by the only George Cohan in "Hit-The-Trail-Holliday," a rouser full of pep, and the best yet for this popular player. I hold no brief for prohibition, but it strikes us that this is a big idea cleverly worked out, and is making a hit with all audiences —rightly. Splendid plea for temperance, great titles and G. C. constantly "on the go." Dear old Russell Bassett in this, I believe, his last picture, will be looked for again by fans who do not know that he has hit the long trail. Marshall Neilan inspires confidence, but he has outdone himself here in detail and settings. Young Barthelmess is good as usual. The temperance convention was some scene, with its types and Georgie doing the Billy Sunday act.

"Gismonda" masquerading as "Love's Conquest," with Lina Cavalieri doing the heroine, a part created by the late Fanny Davenport in which she starred the country, went strong here, with the high brows especially, as it is a costume play good to see occasionally. The Exeter held capacity audiences in the evening, as they enjoy the standard stage successes, and of course, it is a delight to see this star. Well do we recall Melbourne MacDowell's work as Almerio. Young Foote, while not so robust, nevertheless was pleasing. In tragic intensity this grips all through, and we wonder how the lion was made to behave so well, for it seemed some tussle between him and hero. Splendid photography and Cavalieri faces the camera with confidence. We anticipate seeing her next picture, "A Woman of Impulse," as I for one have not yet seen her husband Muratore on the screen.

My what a picture—"A Doll's House," the Ibsen stir-up play, when first shown. Elsie Ferguson will carry anything, and here she more than fills the part. Of course, patrons not familiar with the subtleness of the author on the woman question will rebel at the ending. One fan said "Nice mother to leave those kids. Say, they ought to give us another scene with mother repentant." So it goes. In this picture we have two local favorites—Ethel Gray Terry, daughter of Lillian Lawrence and Warren Cook, whose make-up was most deceiving, for I saw him on the same program in "All Woman" driving a country gig in a small town scene and looking the part. What got us strong in "The Doll's House" was the dancing of Miss Ferguson, always a delight in that line of work. Producer Tourneur adds another gem to his crown, for the shots, atmosphere and indoor scenes were a delight to the eye. Picture different, therefore refreshing, because so.

I saw a good Triangle at the Fenway, "Who Is to Blame?" and was glad again to see Jack Livingstone, one of the rarely good leading men, possessing attractiveness combined with versatility. Fine human play, but the real star was Jack Abbe, the Jap valet, who held attention from the start. Play unique in spots, well handled, and what good scenes we get picturing Japan! Rarely have we had a more artistic silhouette than at the close, with the Jap seated in his rickshaw in his native land, after his sacrifice to save the soul of his master in U. S. A. Play has its moral, too, and good to show anywhere at any time.

"The Lesson," corking picture with a lesson indeed, on hasty marriages and how to find a way out, to say nothing of the example of being independent through a nice little business "on the side," unknown to stingy hubby. There was a good bit of comedy furnished by Walter Hiers the rotund, but the best work was put over by Tom Moore, who earned his reward and sent us all out of the house satisfied. Fine picture for any community.

The Vitagraph picture "Find the Woman," inspired by O. Henry, is especially strong and has a good suspense to it. Here we get also a strong cast in Alice Joyce, Arthur Donaldson and Jessie Stevens. The Fenway, where this was shown, put on "Ace High," great for Tom Mix, whose stunts are hair raising but not along slapstick order (perish the thought!). I was asked by a man if those chaps could get their lives insured, for he certainly did the seemingly impossible, and what a wonderful horse he owns! James O'Neil's make-up was a sight. Why so much bush of a beard? This is a melodrama, full of comedy and a relief to the males in front, who don't seem to care for the "sob" or love stuff.

"Viviette," good picture pleasing to all, and little Martin has quite a bit to do here. Harrison Ford again plays opposite, but does not hitch up with the dainty heroine, who in spite of her size actually cares for the cave man type, impersonated by Eugene Pallette, cast as the brother, and such a contrast! There were some original situations in this worth while.

* * *

For a kid picture commend me to "A Daughter of the West," featuring Marie Osborne, who does clutch us, and compels attention of all. To my mind the coon is the one that attracts us more as his work is natural. Why they do not give his name in the cast is a mystery, however, we have seen him before, and somewhere I have the name. Matters not, since personality is what counts. For a Pathe featuring these kids there was too much melodrama, and we liked it the least of all the Mary Sunshine pictures put out with this little play.

Sunny Sammy is probably the name of the lad.

"God's Man," too long by two reels, but all through it illustrated the power of mind over matter strongly, and what an indictment New York "white lights" get here. Henry B. Warner has a hard part, commendably done as we always expect. The picture is a bit depressing, the titles too long. Here we had a trio of contrasting types in Warner, Walter Hiers and Edward Earle, who seemed out of his element. Here, too, we get a lot of opium smuggling stuff and uncanny situations attending same, but what got us strong was the burlesque scenes around the cloakroom and hat check fiends, those pests encountered everywhere. Though overdone it was good stuff.

Nazimova, a magic name, sure to call out a large attendance of those who are devotees of the speaking drama in which she shines. On the screen she is animation personified, and as my friend said "no wonder she keeps so slim." In "Toys of Fate" a great opportunity is given her and isn't she well supported! I found our old friend Rasputin the Monk, so well done by Edward Connelly, and as usual —rascally again. Charles Bryant, hubby of the star, is making good in the pictures, this one being classy and full of action. I like especially the titles and the gypsy scenes. Great photography!

"For Sale," for little Hulette and Creighton Hale, made a hit here, and no wonder as it had some new situations, though one was a bit risque. However, it was pretty good melodrama, and the house seemed to like it. At same theater I saw "The Soap Girl," good preachment on snobbishness, and a lesson in democracy. Here we had a novel plot with little Gladys Leslie making good, and wasn't her dad a scream! This was a bit overdone, however, at times, by Frank Norcross, but we had to laugh when he asked the grand dame to "sit down and have a drink." Julia Swayne Gordon, ever a picture of dignity, took her medicine like a sport when the tables are turned on her. On the program we had "The Kaiser's Shadow" and didn't like it a little bit, as this German spy business is done too much and gets on our nerves. The public wants pictures in lighter vein these days, as most of us have connections in the service and want to be diverted from war. The splendid weeklies give us the real stuff of a patriotic and educational character, and we are indebted to the screen for bringing home to our vision something the printed page can never do.

"The Venus Model" caught us strong, and seems the best of the Mabel Normand pictures. We laughed heartily over the bit of slapstick in the first reel in her glide down the chute and its attendant business. This is the right sort of a picture for everybody. Alec Francis has a strong part. Here is demonstrated that brains tell in business, and are not restricted to the male sex. Mabel did keep the ball rolling (into the money till).

Dear directors can't you make the young heroines stop the silly mannerism, putting the tips of the thumb and forefinger together especially when carried to the lips? It means nothing, and is getting altogether too common. We usually get this at the hands of the ingenue country lass, but when your announced stars do it habitually, it gets on our nerves and we want to rap their knuckles. In "All Woman" Mae Marsh perpetrates it too often. However, this picture is good, and will be popular anywhere because it has melodramatic twists and a good temperance plea, to say nothing of the influence mild and vigorous of the girl. A bit of comedy in first reel caused a big laugh when Mae in dressing the dolls pulls the hats down over the eyes of the male ones at a critical time. Young folks will like this picture.

Among several good pictures seen within the week, are "Up Romance Road" directed by Henry King with William Russell well supported by Mutual players. Fine atmosphere and somewhat of a thriller with a lurid plot involving German spies. "Runaway Romany," released last year, was seen for the first time at the Exeter, and with Marion Davies—some beauty, as all know who have seen and heard her on the stage. Splendid picture, the star supported by Matt Moore, whom we do not see often of late; Ormi Hawley, Gladden James. "Joe" Kilgour and Pedro De Cordaba, all dependable. Here the press agent comes into his own, the part well done by young James. Strikes me Pathe has a good seller in this, as it is full of action not overdone. Plot not new yet one that goes over well with such players.

Big Contracts for Three Theaters

Strand, Rialto and Rivoli Sign Up for Total of 121 Weeks of Famous Players-Lasky Service.

THE largest contract ever negotiated by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation with the three big pre-release houses of New York, the Strand, Rialto and Rivoli theaters, as well as the largest ever entered into by the respective management of those theaters with any producing or distributing organization, have been announced.

These contracts involve the booking of Paramount and Artcraft feature productions for eighty-six solid weeks in the Rialto and Rivoli, forty-three weeks for each, and thirty-five weeks in the Strand. This total of 121 weeks' bookings insures, according to the schedule plans of the Famous Players-Lasky for the year commencing September 1, not only at least one Paramount or Artcraft feature each week of the year in one or another of the three big Broadway picture palaces, but nearly every week there will be at least two and in the majority of weeks three being shown simultaneously.

In addition to the feature productions booked, the Rialto and Rivoli have contracted for forty-six Paramount short subjects and the Strand for sixteen.

MARGUERITE CLARK HAS WAR ROMANCE.

The engagement of Marguerite Clark, star of Paramount pictures, to First Lieutenant H. Palmerson Williams, U. S. A., of New Orleans, was announced Thursday in New York by Miss Cora Clark, of 50 Central Park West, sister of the player. Miss Clark met her future husband in New Orleans last winter, toward the close of her tour of the west and south in behalf of the Liberty Loan.

The father of Miss Clark's fiance is head of the Williams Lumber Company of Paterson, La., with large business throughout the South, and the family is prominent in New Orleans, where they make their home. On account of the uncertainty of Lieutenant Williams' assignment, no arrangements for the wedding have yet been made.

J. LOUIS MENGER DEAD.

Announcement of the death of J. Louis Menger, president of the firm of Menger, Ring & Weinstein of 306 West Forty-second street, New York, is made under date of July 6. Mr. Menger was the first to engage in the manufacture of lobby display frames for motion pictures in 1907, when he made a large number for the Kalem Company. At that time the factory of the company was in West Twenty-fourth street. While located there Jacob Ring joined Mr. Menger and the firm became Menger & Ring. Later, the business of the company expanding, the present location on Forty-second street was taken, and again the company enlarged its personnel by admitting Samuel Weinstein.

Mr. Menger was a man of considerable artistic ability and was held in high respect by all who came in contact with him.

MISS LEITZBACH LEAVES FOX FILMS.

Miss Adeline Leitzbach, the playwright-scenarioist, for the past year a member of the scenario staff of the Fox Film Corporation, has severed her connection with that organization to complete two plays for the legitimate stage, "Apple Blossoms" and "The Trail to Happiness," already contracted for by New York managers for production next season. Miss Leitzbach, who is considered an authority on all things pertaining to the screen, is by no means going to desert the silent drama and is already considering several offers to join the scenario departments of well known film concerns, when she shall have completed the dramas in question.

"OUR BRIDGE OF SHIPS."

The United States Government, Division of Films, Committee on Public Information, will shortly issue through the General Film Company another important war picture, which will further serve to show the tremendous progress that the United States has made in providing for its soldiers' needs in the European struggle. The new release is in seven reels and is entitled "Our Bridge of Ships." It will, it is announced, be the first comprehensive pictorialization of what America has accomplished in its shipbuilding program. Scenes in several of the leading shipbuilding plants will be shown; the busy thousands of workers, the colossal machinery by which the labor of creating ships is expedited, the ships in various stages of completion and the thrill that goes with America's new Leviathans of the seas as well as the smaller ships that will help Columbia to "bridge the sea." America's warships, including torpedo boats, submarines and the tiny "chasers" will be shown, and Uncle Sam's success in keeping a constant stream of men and supplies going to France will be stimulatingly visualized. What this success means is illustrated by the fact that soldiers are now going abroad at the rate of 300,000 a month and during the month of June a million tons of freight were landed in France.

BELGIAN OFFICIAL FILMS REACH NEW YORK.

W. Lindsay Gordon, director of publicity and official photographer to the Belgian Military Mission, announces that all of its official war film and photographs are obtainable to all interested in the motion picture or lecture field. "We are just in receipt of some wonderful films and photograghs direct from the front showing the Belgians in their most recent battles," said Mr. Gordon. We feel sure that the American public will be greatly interested in seeing these pictures. Major Leon Osterrieth, chief of the Belgian Military Mission in the United States, is to be congratulated upon the selection of Mr. Gordon, as director of publicity and official photographer, as his years of amusement experience and photographic work makes him the right man in the right place. The New York office of the Belgian Military Mission is at 207 West Thirty-fourth street.

WORLD-WIDE DISTRIBUTION FOR "SMILING BILL."

The Goldwyn Distribution Corporation announces completed arrangements for the distribution of "Smiling Bill" Parsons' Capitol Comedies throughout many foreign lands in addition to the United States. In the United States "Smiling Bill" Parsons' pictures are distributed through Goldwyn's exchange in twenty principal cities and in Canada the Monarch Film Company, Ltd., will distribute his productions. Prints of his pictures are now being forwarded to Goldwyn exchanges in other foreign lands and "Smiling Bill" will soon greet foreign audiences in all his comedies.

"Ghost of the Rancho" Leads Pathe Week of Aug. 11

PATHE announces another Bryant Washburn picture as the leading feature on its regular program to be released August 11. "The Ghost of the Rancho" is a five-part comedy-drama, and Washburn has a delightful leading woman in this picture in the person of Rhea Mitchell.

Bryant Washburn, who will be remembered for his performance in "Skinner's Dress Suit," "Skinner's Baby," "Twenty-one" and "Kidder & Ko," plays the role of a scion of a wealthy family, who has paid a whole lot more attention to the cabarets and such gayeties of life than he has to the moot problem of getting on in the world in the usual way.

The comedy element is supplied by Toto and Clarine Seymour in "Do Husbands Deceive?"

The Official War Review, which comprises Government battlefield pictures from American, British, French and Italian cinematographers at the front; the Post Travel Series, dealing with "La Guira to Caracus," and semi-weekly issues of the Hearst-Pathe News complete this program.

General in August Issues Five Wolfvilles-O. Henrys

AN unusually attractive list of Broadway Star Features is promised for the month of August by General Film Company. Three O. Henry stories and two Wolfville Tales will be released during the month. Included in the list is "The Marquis and Miss Sally," the initial release, which is the first Western O. Henry story to be produced in several months. Patricia Palmer and William Lester, who have been featured in the Wolfville Tales, are the leading players in this new O. Henry story.

"The Marquis and Miss Sally" is said to be one of the most sprightly and entertaining stories of the series, and is featured by one of O. Henry's big surprise climaxes which provides a big punch for the film story. A strange note of cowboy romance runs throughout the story.

Other O. Henry stories carded for August release by General Film are "Springtime a la Carte" and "A Bird of Bagdad," both featuring Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres. The two Wolfville releases are "The Jest of Talky Jones" and "The Widow Dangerous," both exceptionally interesting Western stories.

"Triple Trouble" Opens in Chicago.

"Triple Trouble," the new Charlie Chaplin comedy, which was produced when Chaplin was with Essanay, but just released, is reported to be booking rapidly by the George Kleine releasing system. It opened for a week's run at the Castle theater, one of Chicago's loop houses, on Sunday, July 28, and several first runs have been arranged in other large cities.

The play is strictly up to the minute, touching on the world war, with considerable humor at the expense of the Kaiser. Chaplin, though a humble janitor, is instrumental in preventing German spies getting hold of the formula for a "wireless explosive" which they are trying to steal.

Bebe Daniels Signs Again With Rolin.

Bebe Daniels, the chic, black-eyed beauty who plays with Harold Lloyd in the Rolin one-reel comedies, has been in the show business seventeen years. She was born in Dallas, Texas, January 14, 1901, and started on the road with her father's company when only ten weeks old.

The other day she signed a contract for her third year with Rolin.

Player and Her Director Seek Court Atmosphere

NORMA TALMADGE and Director S. A. Franklin last week began work on the concluding scenes of "Her Only Way." Following the precedent in Norma Talmadge productions the Select star and her director have been attentive spectators at sessions at the Tombs and other courtrooms in New York in order to make a faithful reproduction for a big courtroom scene.

One of the moments of greatest importance in Miss Talmadge's new picture occurs in the crowded room of a New York divorce court. Hundreds of extra people have been required to provide a realistic setting. Several of the more important characters are played by people who are well known to the moving picture public.

Eugene O'Brien will again be seen as Miss Talmadge's leading man, while other important parts will be played by Ramsey Wallace, Jobyna Howland and A. E. Warren.

It is believed the new picture will be distributed some time next month.

Fine Exteriors in "Young America."

Many beautiful outdoor scenes are now being taken for "Young America," the George K. Spoor feature taken from the Cohan and Harris stage success. These elaborate exterior settings greatly enhance the beauty of the picture. One of the scenes is taken on the estate of Colonel A. L. Bournique in Highland Park, Ill. Col. Bournique is a retired army officer, and at present is at the head of the Illinois Volunteer Training Corps. His home and grounds are used in the picture, as well as his famous poultry yard. The colonel is a chicken fancier, and has many prize fowl. As it was necessary to use a fine breed of chickens in the story the poultry yard was made use of even to the robbing of his "hen coop."

Another of the beautiful scenes is taken in a suburban park, and two hundred children are employed. The children are at play after school, when the village bad boy forces the goody-goody boy, who is pro-German, to climb a flag staff and kiss the American flag much to the joy of the children.

The play, which is in seven parts, is rapidly nearing completion, and will be released in the near future.

Norris Story for Miss Barriscale.

Kathleen Norris' widely read novel, "The Heart of Rachael," has been selected for Bessie Barriscale's next Paralta play, and the filming of the production is at this time under way at the Brunton studios in Los Angeles, California.

It is a story of society life, in which the author has delicately but effectively exposed its pettiness. Like her other works, it is intensely human, and the type of story that is especially suited to Miss Barriscale's talents. The production is being made under the direction of Howard Hickman, and will be distributed when completed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation through the exchanges of the General Film Company.

Arbuckle Assumes Role of Cafe Kitchen Boss

AT his studio at Long Beach, California, Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle has completed his Paramount-Arbuckle comedy for August release. The title is "The Cook." Arbuckle assumes the role of the boss of a kitchen of a beach cafe, and the ingenious contrivances which he employes to make the cuisine game easy promise to meet the appreciation of every housewife. Of course there is a ludicrous and highly entertaining plot, in which "Fatty" as an ardent lover has his troubles with persistent rivals.

Luke, the famous terrier, who recently had his contract renewed to appear in Paramount-Arbuckle comedies at a salary of fifty bones a week, has a strenuous and exceedingly useful role, playing the part of a friend in need on more than one occasion.

The heavyweight comedian is assisted by Buster Keaton, Al St. John and Alice Lake. Arbuckle himself directed the picture.

Pre-Bookings for "Inside the Lines."

Much interest has been aroused among exhibitors by the announcement that World Pictures will, on August 26, release "Inside the Lines," with Lewis A. Stone, star of the original stage production, in the stellar role. This big production will be released on the regular World program.

Exhibitors are realizing that this production should prove to be one of the moneymakers of the year, and because they realize this fact they are sending many applications for pre-release showings of the picture to the World. Present indications are that "Inside the Lines" will be more extensively shown on pre-release bookings than any offering in some time. Marguerite Clayton is seen in support of Mr. Stone.

Art Scenes in "Flower of the Dusk."

Art scenes of great beauty in connection with Viola Dana's Metro feature, "Flower of the Duck," have been conceived and executed by Henri Menessier, art director of international reputation, and John H. Collins, who has directed the production. The picture is a screen version of Myrtle Reed's novel of the same name, published by G. P. Putnam's Sons, and star and director have succeeded in capturing the elusive charm that, together with its unique story, has given the book a widespread vogue.

The idealistic scenes in "Flower of the Dusk," which have had the special attention of Mr. Menessier and Mr. Collins in collaboration, are those in which Guy Coombs as Lawrence Austin visualizes the past romance which has illuminated his whole life.

Harold Lloyd Comedy on All War Program

MANY theaters throughout the country are using on an all-war program "Kicking the Germ Out of Germany," the Harold Lloyd comedy in which Harold does awful things to the German general staff, to say nothing of canning the Kaiser.

Lighter subjects, however, occupy Lloyd's attention in the summer program to be released by Pathe. The schedule as now drafted is August 4, "That's Him"; August 18, "Bride and Gloom"; September 1, "Two Scrambled"; September 15, "Bees in His Bonnet."

Lewis to Retire from Stunt Stuff.

Sheldon Lewis states that the present serial starring Miss Leah Baird will probably be his last appearance in serial pictures. During the past several years Mr. Lewis has been almost continuously at work in serials, and many times his life as well as limbs have been in more actual danger than some of his screened acts portrayed. His exploits and adventures as the "Clutching Hand," "The Iron Claw," etc., have made his name familiar. The coming Leah Baird serial should add to his laurels.

When the last scene is pictured Mr. Lewis will engage only in straight dramatic roles on the screen and legitimate stage.

First Field Comedy Released August 6.

Elinor Field, the comedienne selected as the leading woman in Strand-Mutual comedies, makes her debut as a star in "What Will Father Say?" scheduled for release by Mutual August 6.

The picture deals with the difficulties of a bride and groom, married without parental consent, in winning the blessing of the bridegroom's father. It's a clever skit of the type which has made the Strands so popular.

The topical release of the same week is "A Dam Catastrophe," seventh of the Outing-Chester series of one-reel adventure pictures. The subject deals in the entertaining manner of the Outing-Chester releases with the habits of the beaver. The release date is August 11.

DOROTHY DALTON'S return to the fold from her recent peregrinations in the East has been signalized by a resumption of work on the part of the Ince star in Paramount pictures. Her new picture deals with aspects of the great war that are, however, subsidiary to the love story that runs through the story. The synopsis was written by the well-known publicity expert and scenarioist, H. H. Van Loan, and the continuity was prepared by C. Gardner Sullivan. R. William Neill will direct, with Bert Seibel assisting.

A new leading man—Edmund Lowe—has been secured for this picture, in whom Mr. Ince believes he has discovered a splendid actor, combining goods looks with talent. Thomas Guise has returned to play a role in this picture. Others in the cast are B. Sprotte and Fred Starr. Save for a child Miss Dalton has the only feminine role.

Tefft Johnson to Direct Madge Evans for World

TEFFT JOHNSON, a director of many well known screen successes, has been engaged by World Pictures to direct Madge Evans in "Snug Harbor." Work on this picture will start at the studio at Fort Lee, N. J., on August 1.

Mr. Johnson was born in Washington, D. C., and educated at Georgetown College. After having played twelve years with David Belasco, supporting Mrs. Leslie Carter in "Heart of Maryland" and Blanche Bates in "Under Two Flags," and other Belasco successes, he became a screen actor. He has appeared in productions of Edison, Vitagraph, Fox, and other companies. As a director the most notable of his efforts were disclosed in "The Turn of the Road" and "The Writing on the Wall." He directed the famous Bobby Connolly series of one-reel comedies. He also produced a series of juvenile comedies familiarly known as "Sonny Boy."

Tefft Johnson.

It was because of his understanding of child psychology that World Pictures feels elated in securing his services to direct little Miss Evans in her next picture.

"The Great Love" Set for August 12.

D. W. Griffith has put the finishing touches on "The Great Love," the first of his productions for release through Artcraft Pictures, and it has been scheduled for initial presentation August 12.

Eleven Directors Push Production for Metro

ELEVEN directors are busily engaged in preparing multiple-reel features for Metro Pictures Corporation, in the firm's east and west coast studios. The roster is a brilliant one, including Edwin Carewe, Albert Capellani, John H. Collins, Charles J. Brabin, Herbert Blache, Wilfred Lucas, Ralph W. Ince, John Ince, Harry L. Franklin, E. Mason Hopper and William S. Davis.

Several big productions have just been completed in both studios, with Maxwell Karger, manager of productions, supervising the output at the New York centre, and George D. Baker in charge at the firm's Pacific coast studio. Other pictures are approaching completion, with still others in the full swing of production. Ethel Barrymore, Viola Dana and Edith Storey are the stars who have just completed feature pictures in the eastern brace of studios at 3 West Sixty-first street and at the Biograph studio, while Harold Lockwood, Bert Lytell, May Allison, Anna Q. Nilsson and her co-star, Franklyn Farnum, have finished photoplays in the west.

The productions thus made ready for release in Metro's All-Star Series are "Our Mrs. McChesney," starring Ethel Barrymore, directed by Ralph W. Ince; "Flower of the Dusk," with Viola Dana as star, directed by John H. Collins; "Shadow and Substance," starring Edith Storey, with Herbert Blache directing; "A King in Khaki," a Screen Classics, Inc., production starring Harold Lockwood, directed by Fred J. Balshofer, president and general manager of the Yorke Film Corporation; "Boston Blackie's Little Pal," starring Bert Lytell, directed by E. Mason Hopper; "The Return of Mary," a starring vehicle for May Allison, Wilfred Lucas directing, and "In Judgment Of," co-starring Anna Q. Nilsson and Franklyn Farnum, directed by William S. Davis. These differ widely in theme and handling, and illustrate Metro's policy of providing a well-balanced program.

De Grasse in Glaum Play.

Samuel De Grasse has as the heavy lead one of the strongest parts in the current Louise Glaum-Paralta Play. Mr. De Grasse will be remembered as Jenkins in "Intolerance" and as Charles Sumner in "The Birth of a Nation." In this picture he takes the part of the villain, who for a period of twenty years is a German agent in the Champagne district of France. The picture has a war background, never brought into prominence, however; and Hurt van Klassner, the character represented by Mr. De Grasse, is the man to whom Berlin has intrusted its preparedness and spy plans upon a certain district of the soil of France in 1894.

Charlie Ray Has Comedy Role in "A Nine o'Clock Town"

IN Charles Ray's newest Paramount picture, "A Nine o'Clock Town," which was produced under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince and which will be released August 5, the star will have the advantage of the support of a quartet of clever actresses: Jane Novak, who will have the chief feminine role; Dorcas Matthews, an Ince favorite, with a decided penchant for portraying young women who snap their fingers in the face of convention; Gertrude Claire, for several years prominently identified with Ince "mothers" and the like, and Beverly Travers, a young actress, who will be seen in the role of a corset model, a new style of screen "vampire."

"A Nine o'Clock Town" has to do with the experience of a bright and "wise" young fellow—the part played by Ray—who, after a brief experience in a New York mercantile house, returns to his home town to show his father how his department store ought to be conducted. It is a story that is along decidedly original lines, it is said, and the chief part offers Ray a capital chance to display his talents as a light comedian of undeniable cleverness.

Victor L. Schertzinger, Ray's director, wrote the story.

Pathe to Release a Washburn.

"The Ghost of the Rancho" is the title of the next Bryant Washburn release by Pathe. It is the feature of the program released August 11.

"Inn of the Blue Moon" Goes to Public August 11

HAVING made her debut before the public in her first production at the head of her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., Doris Kenyon will appear on August 11, according to the present schedule, in "The Inn of the Blue Moon." The first release was "The Street of Seven Stars," by Mary Roberts Rinehart. "The Inn of the Blue Moon" is by Louis Joseph Vance and was written especially for Miss Kenyon.

In this picture she is called upon to assume the dual role of twin sisters, one of whom is a girl brought up in the country in the simplest manner, and the other a society girl in New York's fast set, surrounded by every luxury. The parts offer Miss Kenyon a remarkable opportunity for the display of her well-known versatility.

The story is decidedly a romantic one, with numerous amusing mix-ups due to mistakes in identity by reason of the remarkable resemblance of the twin sisters. All of Miss Kenyon's pictures are being released through the William L. Sherry Service.

Harry Carey in an Owen Wister Story Leads Universal

HARRY CAREY, in a story by Owen Wister, heads the list of Universal productions scheduled for release during the week of August 12. Carey's vehicle, "A Woman's Fool," is the photoplay adaptation of "Lin McLean," one of the most popular romances of the west written by Wister. It is to be released as a special attraction and will come to the exhibitor in five reels.

A Pat Sullivan cartoon, entitled "How Charlie Captured the Kaiser," heads the comedy releases for the week and is by all odds one of the funniest offerings issued by Universal in a long time. This cartoon is a full reel in length and for plot, suspense and sustained action will more than hold its own.

"Give Her Some Gas," the Lyons-Moran Star Comedy, ought to be of universal appeal. It concerns the fortunes of a young couple who invest in a second-hand flivver which they undertake to run sans gas, experience and cash. By the time the fool-killer takes a hand in the proceedings laughs galore have resulted.

"Don't Flirt," with Marcia Moore in the stellar role, is the Nestor for the week. In humorous fashion it points out the fact that things are not always what they seem and shows what befalls two flirtatious young men who allow appearances to deceive them. In the supporting cast are Ernie Shields, Ed Sedgwick, Ed Baker and Jane Bernoudy.

With the issuance of "The Muffled Man," the second episode of "The Brass Bullet," the action of this newest Universal serial gets well under way.

The title of the Bluebird for the week has not been decided upon, although the feature is completed, cut and sub-titled. An announcement concerning the name under which it will be released will be made shortly.

Issue 37 of the Universal Animated Weekly, Issue 84 of the Universal Screen Magazine, and Issue 66 of the Universal Current Events will be released during the week.

Oakdales Are Well Received.

Advance bookings and inquiries for the Oakdale Productions featuring Gloria Joy have been enthusiastic, General Film Company announces. "The Locked Heart," the first Oakdale to be released, has been booked for the Loew houses in New York City. Other important bookings in New York are reported by Branch Manager J. A. Hammell, while other managers are reporting that their facilities for handling the Oakdale series will be taxed.

One feature of the Oakdale Productions, which is said by General Film to be winning the approval of exhibitors, is that the stories are of a clean and wholesome nature and yet strongly dramatic. Excellently balanced companies appear in support of the child star.

"No Children Wanted," the second release in the series, presents the child star in a sympathetic and highly entertaining story of domestic life, for which General Film predicts unusual success.

Goldwyn Names First Six Releases Under Star Series

GOLDWYN believes in starting a thing. Lee Baker, Marie de Wolfe, Jenny Dickerson and others.

Goldwyn springs a surprise with the announcement that Will Rogers, an unrivaled entertainer and an unparalleled personality in the American theater, is already at work in Rex Beach's great story, "Laughing Bill Hyde." Many producers have tried to lure Rogers to the screen and never before have they had a chance of success. But Rex Beach insisted on having Will Rogers for the name role of his story "because," says Mr. Beach, "Will Rogers is Laughing Bill Hyde, just as he stands, without make-up. All that we will do is to take his personality just as he is known across the country and put it into film." This first big Beach production is being directed by Hobart Henley and the scenario is the work of Willard Mack, editorial director of Goldwyn. "It is the best scenario ever made of one of my stories," says Mr. Beach. "I think Bill Mack is a wonder."

In the cast are John Sainpolis, Clarence Oliver, Mabel Ballin and Joseph Herbert.

There is never a chance of a mistake when Mae Marsh has a story that is a combination of romantic and emotional drama. This she has in "Hidden Fires," which also is directed by Hobart Henley. Here again she is has the kind of material that was enthusiastically approved—the wistful, beautiful type of story like "The Cinderella Man" and "Polly of the Circus." Rod La Rocque is Miss Marsh's leading man in "Hidden Fires." Other players are Alec B. Francis, Jere Austin and Florida Kingsley.

Metro Completes Three All-Star Series Features

THREE of Metro's most anticipated photoplays saw completion last week. First is "Our Mrs. McChesney," the screen adaptation by Luther A. Reed, of Edna Ferber's famous stories, starring Ethel Barrymore and directed by Ralph Ince. Miss Barrymore is surrounded by a large and notable company. Included in her company are several of the original members of her stage version of "Our Mrs. McChesney," by George V. Hobart. Huntley Gordon, Lucille Stewart, Ricca Allen, Wilfred Lytell, John Daley Murphy and Walter Percival are in the cast.

Edith Storey in "Shadow and Substance," and directed by Herbert Blache, assisted by Edward Lawrence, is the next on the list. "Shadow and Substance" is a virile drama of the northwest, by Lois Zellner, and in addition to being a story replete with action and human interest, is one calling for unusual sets, some of splendor, some of picturesque quaintness, and with its exterior scenes showing beautiful scenery. In Miss Storey's company are Joseph Kilgour, Frank Mills, George Stevens, Baby Ivy Ward, Lilie Leslie, Tomonato, Matilda Brundage, Augusta Perry, Harry Linson, Ben Walker and John Cohill.

"Flower of the Dusk," the well known Myrtle Reed novel scenarized by John H. Collins, which is Viola Dana's current starring vehicle, is also practically completed. Mr. Collins has also directed the picture. Prominent in the company are Guy Coombs, Howard Hall, Alice Martin, Bliss Milford, Charles Sutton, Maggie Breyer, Mrs. L. Ford, Jack McGowan and Margaret McWade.

"Waifs" to Be Released August 4.

"Waifs," with Gladys Hulette and Creighton Hale in the leading roles, will be released by Pathe August 4. Walter Heirs, a popular screen character actor, appears in support of the co-stars.

"Waifs" is a story of New York, and concerns the misadventures of a rich heiress, who tires of the stern discipline of her home and goes into the world to make her own way. How she is rescued from a predicament in which her inexperience plunges her by a newspaper reporter and how this event evolves into a delightful romance is the basic plot of the play.

"A Law Unto Herself" Soon Ready.

In Louise Glaum's Paralta play, "A Law Unto Herself," Miss Glaum will be surrounded by Samuel De Grasse, Joseph J. Dowling, Edward Coxen, Irene Rich, Elvira Weil, Burwell Hamrick, George Hackathorne, Peggy Schaffer and Jess Herring. Work on the production is progressing rapidly, and it will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation the middle of August.

Hayakawa Finishes "The Temple of Dusk," His Second

WORK on "The Temple of Dusk," second of the Sessue Hayakawa feature productions, has been completed by the Haworth Pictures Corporation, and the picture is now in the cutting room. The picture is regarded as in every way equal to Hayakawa's first production, "His Birthright," which is scheduled for release on September 1. The third picture of the series of eight, for which no name has as yet been selected, is now in work.

Hayakawa believes "The Temple of Dusk" epitomizes all that is best in interracial drama, and is confident that the play will be popular with American audiences because it holds the mirror up to both American and Japanese character, and permits both to see themselves as others see them.

Two well known young women are in the cast. They are Jane Novak and Sylvia Breamer. With Lewis Willoughby they play the leading roles. There are twelve geisha girls and eight Japanese actors aside from Hayakawa in the production.

The story was written by Frances Marion and directed by James Young.

"Fixing the Faker" (Ebony).

High speed humor, with a number of clever new comedy touches, is to be found in the newest Ebony Comedy release, "Fixing the Faker," according to the General Film prospectus. This is said to be one of the best of the new series. Names of other subjects now in the course of production are to be announced shortly.

The Ebony Comedies are proving popular with exhibitors looking for summer program novelties, General reports. Inasmuch as the new series promises an even higher grade of comedy, General Film anticipates a lively demand for the comedy novelties during the fall months.

Sept. 2 Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel," by Tex Charwate, directed by Reginald Barker; Sept. 9, Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl," by Tex Charwate, directed by Charles Giblyn; Sept. 16, Tom Moore in "Just for Tonight," by Charles A. Logue, directed by Charles Giblyn; Sept. 23, Madge Kennedy in "The Kingdom of Youth," by Charles A. Logue, directed by Clarence G. Badger; Sept. 30, Rex Beach's great story "Laughing Bill Hyde," directed by Hobart Henley; Oct. 7, Mae Marsh in "Hidden Fires," by J. Clarkson Miller, directed by Hobart Henley.

Miss Farrar's first production to be released under the Goldwyn imprint is a dramatic, present-day story of New York and Monte Carlo. It is an emotional, modern drama, a fast, full-of-action melodrama and a society drama all rolled into one. Under her new auspices Miss Farrar is surrounded and supported by an exceptional cast. Herbert Rawlinson, himself a star of long standing, is leading man. Violet Heming has the other important feminine role and other big parts are played by Hassard Short, Percy Marmont and Maude Turner Gordon.

Mabel Normand returns to the broad comedy that made her famous for her first Star Series production. "Peck's Bad Girl" is the ideal type of vivacious, animated, happy-go-lucky story that Mabel Normand's tremendous following desires to see her have. In the cast are Earle Foxe, Corinne Barker, Ryley Hatch and other favorites.

Goldwyn believes that Tom Moore, the company's first made star, is going to be one of the surprises of the year in his screen debut in "Just For Tonight." The company is in the unusual position of having been forced by exhibitor demand to star Moore. His success as leading man to three Goldwyn stars was so great that the exhibitors everywhere insisted that his popularity entitled him to be starred in his own right. Lucy Fox, a comparative newcomer in pictures, is Mr. Moore's leading woman. Others in the cast are Henry Sedley, Ethel Grey Terry and Maude Turner Gordon.

Madge Kennedy's reputation and drawing power attained new heights with "The Service Star," and it is being further increased with "Friend Husband," which may be an ironical title—and may not. Supporting Miss Kennedy are Tom Moore,

Pathe "All Set" for Release of "Hands Up"

With the approaching release of the first episode of the new Pathe-Astra serial, "Hands Up," for which August 18 has been set as the positive date, Pathe's advertising and publicity departments got their second wind this week, and launched the national advertising and publicity campaign in good shape.

Among the aids for exploitation of "Hands Up" are bill-posting campaigns in 450 cities, serial publication of the novelized version in one of the leading fan magazines, the publication of the serial in large city newspapers, and heralds, broadsides, and campaign books printed in several colors.

Pathe reports the advance bookings of "Hands Up" to exceed all its records. A special sales-reel in which are included some of the thrills contained in the first two episodes has been sent to the thirty branch exchanges, where it may be viewed by exhibitors. "Hands Up" is being made at the Astra studio in Los Angeles, with Ruth Roland starring, George Chesebro as her leading man, and a good supporting company.

Frank Keeney Releases Second Calvert Picture

THE Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation has just released its second picture, "Out of the Night," by E. Lloyd Sheldon, and will shortly place on the market a third, "Marriage," by Guy Bolton. All of the Keeney pictures thus far produced star Catherine Calvert.

William L. Sherry, who is distributing the Keeney pictures, reports good returns from "A Romance of the Underworld," the first Keeney release, as well as from "Out of the Night." Business has been good, he says, in spite of the hampering effect of hot weather. In several theaters in Brooklyn and elsewhere "A Romance of the Underworld" has been called upon to repeat. Its drawing power, Mr. Sherry says, has been demonstrated practically everywhere it was shown.

The Keeney forces have completed a fourth picture, "The Girl With a Past," by the late Paul Armstrong, from whose well-known drama "A Romance of the Underworld" was adapted for the screen.

Fannie Ward Picture for September.

Pathe announces a late release date for "A Japanese Nightingale," the most ambitious effort of Fannie Ward. This picture will be released late in September, according to present plans. Large sums of money were spent in staging the subject.

Fox Planning Campaigns for Bigger Film Sales Abroad

SEVERAL campaigns in foreign countries to increase the volume of Fox films sales abroad are under way. The foreign department has just taken over almost an entire floor in the corporation's offices in the Leavitt Building at 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York. It is an elaborate place, with the executive offices leading off from a beautifully furnished reception room.

At the present time the Fox corporation has five branch offices in South America, with the prospect of others in the near future. Development of the market in Central America is also under way.

Abraham Carlos, general representative of the Fox Film Corporation, will start soon on an extensive trip which will probably cover Cuba, Porto Rico, Mexico and Central America. This trip is in answer to numerous queries from film men in Central American and Cuban cities for increased facilities for getting Fox films. Mr. Carlos will be accompanied by Aquileo Calvo, who has recently been placed in charge of the Latin-American activities of the corporation.

Another Fox representative is traveling down the west coast of South America, cities in that part of the continent having expressed a wish for more Fox films.

Reports from Fox agents all over the world have assured the foreign department that the coming year will be the most successful in the history of the corporation's foreign trade. The goodwill Fox plays have already established has resulted in an enormous demand. Satisfaction of this demand has been assured, despite the limited cargo space, by the foresight of the foreign department, which has taken every precaution to see that foreign exchanges receive their films on time.

Country Village at Goldwyn Studio.

The Goldwyn studio lot adjoining the main building at Fort Lee, N. J., on which were set the big circus scenes in "Polly of the Circus," starring Mae Marsh, and which later was the site of the artistic reproduction of the Greek-Egyptian temple of Alexandria in Mary Garden's "Thais," has been transformed into a prosperous country village. Stores of every description, a bank, a village hall and a large hotel, set along granitoid sidewalks, have been built for Mabel Normand's newest Goldwyn Picture, "Peck's Bad Girl," by Tex Charwate.

A force of fifty workmen labored day and night for three weeks before the unusual and tremendous motion picture set was completed. The erection of the big hotel and the laying of sidewalks took up most of their time. The scarcity of asphalt furnished the biggest problem, delivery of it being held up owing to the shortage of labor at the asphalt works in Southern New Jersey. To hurry the work Goldwyn studio officials hired ten coal trucks to deliver the desired amount of asphalt.

"The Love Swindle" (Universal).

Universal announces that Edith Roberts' second vehicle as a Bluebird star will be "The Love Swindle," formerly called "The Doings of Diana." In her second feature Miss Roberts appears as Diana Rosson, who possesses a will of her own plus a fortune which enables her to disregard the mandates of her aunt, who is inclined to regard the modern girl as heading straight for perdition.

Supporting Miss Roberts are Emanuel Turner, Leo White and Clarissa Selwyn. The subject will be released the week of August 5.

Triangle Shows War Romance and Crook Story Aug. 4

FOR the first release on the program for the week of August 4, Triangle presents a picturization of the war romance, "The Price of Applause," which was produced under the direction of Thomas N. Heffron, and features Claire Anderson and Jack Livingston.

This picture is described as a psychological story. Livingston plays the role of a poet, Karl, a weak individual whose highest aspiration is to seek the admiration of the crowds, which for a time he easily obtains. But the price advances, and when his poetic orations will no longer call forth the esteem which he seeks so cheaply he becomes a boastful though thoughtless patriot, winning approval through his dramatic appeal for the fight for Democracy. Doris Schroeder scenarioized this story, which was written by Nina Wilcox Putnam and Norman Jacobson. C. H. Wales was the cameraman.

"Alias Mary Brown," Triangle's second release for the week of August 4, was written and scenarioized by E. Magnus Ingleton. It will serve to introduce Triangle's new leading man, Casson Furgesson, who is featured in this production with Pauline Starke.

It tells how Dick Browning, son of a wealthy man, becomes an accomplice of a notorious gang of crooks when he is driven to desperation by the unscrupulous men who have robbed his father. In a spirit of revenge, stimulated by the hardships which his mother was compelled to endure before her untimely death, Browning manages to get even with the men who caused his downfall. The climax of the story is reached when Dick, in the West marries the runaway daughter of one of his father's former foes. She works out his reformation, and in the end they reap the happiness of a clean conscience.

"The Girl from Bohemia" Irene Castle's Last Astra

THE Girl from Bohemia," to be released by Pathe August 25, may mean the retirement of Irene Castle from the screen. Her plans for the future are indefinite, as is pointed out in a personal statement on another page.

This is the last of the Castle series made by Astra for Pathe, and Mrs. Castle has been quoted in the newspapers recently to the effect that her return to either the stage or screen is a matter she does not care to discuss.

It is stated that she is going to France.

"The Girl from Bohemia" will have the advantage of a wide distribution of publicity stories which were sent out recently by Pathe, and which have appeared in nearly every large Sunday newspaper in the United States. The stories, while confined to a recital of Mrs. Castle's war activities, will help a whole lot in drawing patronage to the box office to see "The First Law," released July 28 by Pathe, and "The Girl from Bohemia."

Unusual Set for "L'Occident."

Some of the most beautiful and unusual sets ever built in any motion picture studio are those which Screen Classics, Inc., has provided for Mme. Alla Nazimova in "L'Occident." This is the great play by Henri Kistemaecker, the scenario for which has been made by June Mathis and Albert Capellani. Mr. Capellani, assisted by Henry Kolker, is also directing the artiste.

The theme of "L'Occident" reveals an attempted blending of the inherent traits of the east and of the west with the consequent results. Mme. Nazimova plays Hassouna, the Arabian girl, while her husband, Charles Bryant, is the Captain Cadiere who brings so many influences to bear in the life of the young oriental.

For one portion of the play a city of Tangiers, true to atmosphere, was built. The art drawings, as for all of the sets in "L'Occident," are the work of the celebrated French technical director, Henri Menessier. The actual building of the set is under the direction of E. J. Shulter.

"Waifs" Rich in Mystery.

In "Waifs," the Gladys Hulette picture released by Pathe August 4, there is a fine flavor of detective story mystery that is carefully worked out. "Waifs" is one of the last pictures made by Miss Hulette, who has been lately called "the perfect ingenue."

Caruso's Screen Debut Will Be in "My Cousin"

ENRICO CARUSO, the world's greatest tenor, who was recently announced as the latest acquisition to the stellar ranks of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, has started work at the Fifty-sixth street studio on the first of the two Artcraft pictures in which he is to appear. Elaborate preparations had been made for the production by Director Edward Jose and his staff of assistants to the end that when the tenor was ready for the camera the filming of the first scenes moved with rapidity and smoothness.

The picture in which Caruso will make his first appearance on the screen is from a story by Margaret Turnbull, titled "My Cousin." It is a romance of that section of New York City known as Little Italy, and contains a charming love story. Caruso has a dual role, first appearing as Tomasso Longo, a poor artist, who makes plaster casts. Tomasso is in love with Rosa Ventura, and not the least element in the charm which he holds for Rosa lies in the fact that he is a cousin of Caroli, the great tenor, whom he has not seen since childhood. But his claim to the relationship is scorned by Lombardi, a jealous rival, who nearly succeeds in winning the girl away from the poor sculptor. Not until the great Caroli himself (also played by Caruso) appears to identify his cousin is Tomasso able to prove his honesty and once more establish himself in the wavering affections of Rosa. Carolina White, well known as a concert and operatic singer and an actress of talent, has the role of Rosa; while in the supporting cast are Henry Leoni, Emily Calloway, Salvatore Fruito and Bruno Zerato, Mr. Caruso's secretary. William J. Scully is acting as assistant to Director Jose and Hal Young is at the camera.

Pauline Frederick started last week on the production of "Paid in Full," her next Paramount picture following "The Shadow of the Rope." The picturization of the Eugene Walter play is being made at the Fort Lee studio of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, Emile Chautard directing. A fine cast has been chosen to support Miss Frederick. Robert Cain has the part of the weakling husband, Joe Brooks. Wyndham Standing will be seen as Jimsy Smith, while the role of Captain Williams, the old seadog, who is the nearest approach to a villain which the piece affords, has been given to Frank Losee. Jane Farrell and Vera Beresford appear respectively as the mother and sister of Emma. The scenario is the work of Charles Whittaker.

One of the biggest sets erected at the Fifty-sixth street studio in many a day is that representing the interior of a fashionable city club, in which a number of scenes were shot last week under the direction of Marshall Neilan for "The Three Bears," Marguerite Clark's new picture.

At Fort Lee Billie Burke and company, under Chester Withey's direction, are making the final scenes for "In Pursuit of Polly," the rollicking comedy by Izola Forrester and Mann Page, which will be Miss Burke's Paramount release for August 19. A realistic fire scene was staged, which will furnish only one of the many exciting moments of this novel comedy-drama.

"Roped and Tied" Is Two-Reeler.

Evidence that Universal is paying special attention to its short subjects is evidenced in "Roped and Tied," a two-reel western drama scheduled for release on August 17. Featuring such players as Neal Hart, Eileen Sedgwick, Joe Rickson and Lola Wright, the newest Universal short subject is full of dash and vim that went so far toward popularizing the subjects some years ago. It tells the story of the adventures that befall Dide Lewis, a wealthy young cattle baron who comes to Hell Gate, Montana, in search of recreation.

Universal's Drive Against Yellow Dogs Is Now On

THE drive against the yellow dogs that harass the Government conducted by the Jewel Productions, Inc., under the auspices of Anti-Yellow Dog Clubs throughout the United States is on in real earnest. It is reported from the national headquarters of the Anti-Yellow Dog Club in New York City that approximately a million boys between the ages af ten and twenty years have already been enrolled in squads of boy detectives and supplied with membership cards and all the necessary literature to carry on the campaign. A badge designed for the leaders of the boy detectives will be issued within the next few days, and then visible evidence will be had of the spread of the movement.

The idea suggested by Henry Irving Dodge in his story, "The Yellow Dog," has not only been taken up by the boys of the country, but by big organizations of men and women in all parts of America. The largest of these is the Associated Ad. Men's Clubs and the Rotary Club. Both of these organizations have formed subsidiary clubs known as the Yellow Dog Clubbers Club. They have issued membership cards on which Mr. Dodge's rules defining the Yellow Dog have been revamped to read as the "Ten Demandments" of the Yellow Dog Clubbers Club. They have also issued a button picturing a yellow dog in full flight followed by a tin can and a club. These cards and buttons have been supplied to all members of the Ad Men's Clubs and to the different branches of the Rotary Club.

In addition to these national organizations the drive on the Yellow Dog is being conducted along the lines devised by Mr. Dodge in nearly every city in the country under the direction of patriotic societies or public spirited private individuals.

In the middle west Masonic bodies headed by the High Twelve Club, of Danville, have joined the movement in an association known as the Yellow Dog-Catchers' Association. This association has issued a "report card" to its members on which the definitions of yellow dogism have been condensed and arranged so that each Yellow Dog met by a member of the "Catchers' Association" can be reported to the club and the nature of his offense recorded.

Hulette-Hale Comedy-Drama Heads Pathe for August 4

PATHE'S program No. 210 for release for the week of August 4 is headed by a five-part comedy drama, "Waifs," with Gladys Hulette and Creighton Hale as co-stars. Marjorie Whitney is a very pretty and very independent daughter and only child of a multi-millionaire. Her father is not long on discipline, and the consequence is that his pretty little girl is headstrong and boss of the palace in which she lives.

The comedy element on the program will be furnished by a one-reeler in which Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels share honors in one of the best rapid fire farces that this popular couple have as yet appeared in. Of course there is no plot, for that would spoil everything, but Bebe is as agile and beautiful as ever, and young Lloyd displays some new ideas in the way of slapstick that brand him as the leader in the refined rough-house school, if this paradox may be permitted.

The Official War Review No. 6 will be released August 4, as will the Post Travel Series No. 8, which has as its subject "Venezuela." Patrons of photoplay theaters will find the Venezula reel unusual. In this film are shown the beautiful cities with magnificent buildings, zoological gardens, universities, and every adjunct of metropolitan life.

Hearst-Pathe News No. 64 and No. 65 will be released on this program.

Ethel Clayton's Picture Is Version of "Leah Kleschna"

THAT Ethel Clayton has been supplied with an unusually powerful vehicle for her advent in Paramount pictures is the conclusion of all who have watched her work in the picture at Hollywood and who know the story. "The Girl Who Came Back" is the title, and it is an Americanized adaptation of "Leah Kleschna," the famous stage play by C. M. S. McClellan. Beulah Marie Dix did the film version.

Miss Clayton appears as a girl who is the daughter of a thief and who has been brought up to believe her profession an honorable one in which she should take sincere pride. Her reformation and the coming of a real love into her darkened life is the theme of a story that is said to be dramatic.

Elliott Dexter is leading man and Theodore Roberts plays the father. Robert G. Vignola is director, assisted by Lou Howland. C. Edward Schoenbaum did the camera work.

"Money Mad" Is Mae Marsh Story.

Mae Marsh, usually seen in charming situations in her screen plays, is disclosed in any number of tense moments in her newest Goldwyn Picture, "Money Mad," to be released August 25. But of course they are relieved by smiles of her own particular kind.

Steger Gets Rare Shots In the Nation's Capital

BY obtaining special permission from the United States Government to photograph scenes in the Army and Navy building and Senate building in Washington, Julius Steger, who is directing Marion Davies' second Select picture, "The Burden of Proof," accomplished the hitherto impossible since this country's entrance into the world war. During the work in Washington Mr. Steger was also fortunate in obtaining a new view of the National Capitol from the windows of the Senate building. This is the first time the Capitol building has been photographed from this angle, and picture patrons throughout the country will enjoy a new view of the nation's principal building.

Work has now been completed on the Washington scenes for Miss Davies' new picture, and Miss Davies and her company will go to Newport for the exterior scenes, which take place in that city.

"The Burden of Proof" is a live story of love and intrigue, the action of which takes place mostly in Newport and Washington. In the staging and direction of the most important scenes Mr. Steger has been assisted by Fred Hearn, who also has a prominent part in the photoplay.

The date of release of the picture has not been announced.

Universal to Make Anti-Rum Film.

The merciless eye of the moving picture camera has been turned upon the activities of old John Barleycorn and his sins are to be revealed via the moving picture screen. Information telling of the additional blow given to Old Man Booze has just come from Universal in the form of an announcement which states that the Industrial Department of that company is to produce a one-reel film for the Federated Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The picture is to be called "Strengthen America," and will not only reveal liquor's effect upon its users, but will also deal with this evil from the economic standpoint. The latter angle will be founded on facts and figures collected by Charles Stelzle, author of "Why Prohibition?" and the man who will act as general manager of this campaign for the church organization.

Lillian Walker to be Starred in Eight Productions

THE formation of a large producing combination, having as its purpose the production of pictures for distribution on a copartnership or co-operative basis, was revealed this week through the announcement that the first of a series of eight pictures in which Lillian Walker is to be starred is now being filmed at the Thanhouser studio under the direction of Edward Dillon.

Lillian Walker.

The series produced by the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation will be but one of the unit's, it is understood, of the new combination. It is known the productions of three additional stars have already been contracted for, and it is said that the new organization will include several well known producing firms which have heretofore been classed as "independents."

The Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation has taken offices in the Bankers Trust building, 501 Fifth avenue. It has at its head as president and general manager Lester Park, who has been largely instrumental in the formation of the new producing combination.

Mr. Park has been extremely active for more than a year in furthering a closer relationship between exhibitor and producer. As both a distributor and producer of pictures he has had an extensive experience.

In the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation he has surrounded himself with a working staff including, in addition to Mr. Dillon, the director, Fred Wilson as production manager, Don O'Brien as assistant director, and Bert Carber as technical director.

Miss Walker will be presented only in those plays which will give full scope for her inherent charm and attractiveness. They will be of the bright, sunny quality to which she is so well fitted temperamentally, and which allow ample play for those characteristics, including her famous dimples and smile, that have contributed so materially to her popularity.

The first of the series of eight pictures which Miss Walker is now doing is an adaptation by Roy Sommerville of a widely known comedy drama which had a New York and country-wide run of unusual extent. Miss Walker is supported by a carefully selected cast of players.

Love to Begin on "Driving Power."

Montagu Love, under the direction of Oscar Apfel, begins work next week at the World studio, at Fort Lee, on "The Driving Power," the story of which was written by Harry O. Hoyt. Mr. Love in this picture will be called upon to creat another unique character to hang in his gallery of screen creations.

In "The Driving Power" World Pictures has a story of unusual dramatic tensity dealing with politics of a metropolitan center where the will of the people expressed by their voice at the polls is suborned by a political boss whose word is law. Dying, he calls his son to his bedside and bequeaths to him all the power he possesses. The son is built of different stuff and determines to rid the city of the political incubus which has throttled the will of the people and he destroys the machine that has controlled the municipality for many years. In doing this he brings his father's shame into the limelight. All of which is done for a woman's love.

Hutchison Back in Form.

The accident from which Charles Hutchison just recovered has assuredly not affected his nerve. Director Joseph A. Gordon states that the serial-going public will be astonished by the nonchalant daredevilishness of this leading man.

Climbing up the walls of burning houses, jumping from runaway autos and leaping across roof tops where a misstep meant death are only a few of the really dangerous hazards which Mr. Hutchison undertakes in the coming serial starring Leah Baird.

The day after his return to the studio one of his feats was the means of attracting a crowd of several thousand onlookers. With the pursuing Sheldon Lewis hot on his trail, Hutchison scales the face of a ten-story building—all under the eagle eye of the camera.

That particular scene was staged down in Wall street and Hutchison evidently was taken for the "Human Fly," who has performed similar hazardous feats on the face of office buildings downtown.

Kerrigan Story Nearly Ready.

F. McGrew Willis, author of J. Warren Kerrigan's latest Paralta Play offering, "A Burglar for a Night," has provided Mr. Kerrigan with one of the most congenial roles that well-known star has had since he deserted the speaking stage in favor of the celluloid records of romance and adventure. The production will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation in the early part of August. Kerrigan is called upon to portray the character of a young New Yorker, Kirk Marden, the son of the rich Daniel Marden, controller of the destinies of a railroad that his business rivals want to wrest from him.

Lois Wilson will be seen as the heroine. Mr. Kerrigan also will have the support of Charles French, William Elmer, Robert Brower, Herbert Prior, Lydia Yeamans Titus and Arma Roma.

Worsley Working on Fourth Paralta.

Wallace Worsley since joining the Paralta forces has become identified as the director of all of the productions in which Louise Glaum has been seen as the star. At the Brunton studios in Los Angeles, where Paralta Plays are being produced, Miss Glaum has completed three productions under Mr. Worsley's direction and is now working on the fourth. The plays thus far released include "An Alien Enemy," "Shackled" and "Wedlock," which was released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation the early part of July.

"Winning Grandma" (Pathe).

Pathe announces the release of another Baby Marie Osborne picture, "Winning Grandma," to be released in August. Smiling Sammy, the little colored lad, who is almost a screen star in his own right now, has a prominent part in the festivities set forth in "Winning Grandma." The play is one very aptly suited to Baby Marie, and will cement her hold upon the large following she already has.

Pathe Reports Great Demand for War Films

THE big offensive drive, in which American troops have played so spectacular a part, on the west front in France since July 12 has multiplied the public demand for war films, according to Pathe, and instead of being shelved the war pictures of a year ago even are being sought by exhibitors.

The big news from France concerning the achievements of American soldiers, the taking of prisoners and enemy supplies, has whetted the public appetite for pictures taken on the front. For instance, the final episode of "Britain's Bulwarks" is released July 28, but many exhibitors have only just started showing this war picture, which is in twelve parts and runs twelve weeks.

This feature, coupled with the Official War Review, the Government reel, and the excellent war pictures contained in the semi-weekly Hearst-Pathe News constitutes a war picture program that in many cases is being advertised as the star feature, with the usual play as the second attraction. Every print of the "Whispering Wires of War," a one-reel special, is working, it is reported.

Gail Kane's First of Eight for Mutual Is "Love's Law"

GAIL KANE'S return to the screen after a six months' absence will be in a series of eight special productions to be made by Gail Kane Productions, and released by the Mutual Film Corporation at intervals of six and eight weeks, beginning with September 1. The first release is "Love's Law."

Miss Kane has done some extraordinary work in semi-comedy roles, and her new pictures will give her a chance to display an aptitude for acting of this type, although they will in no sense of the word be comedies.

"Miss Kane has a tremendous box office drawing power, and her new pictures are being produced to deliver the most there is in her name to the screens of the country," said James M. Sheldon, president of the Mutual, in announcing that the Kane productions would be released as specials.

Courtney Foote appears with Miss Kane in her first picture, a five-reel story of how a girl of birth and talent rose above her environment and won professional recognition and a husband. It is laid in New York today.

George Bunny Resembles His Well-Known Brother

THE motion picture fame of Bunny, cut off by the death of the illustrious John, peer of screen comedians of his day, bids fair to be revived by the deceased funmaker's brother, George Bunny, if the latter's work in support of Madge Kennedy in "Friend Husband," her latest Goldwyn Picture, can be taken as a criterion.

No one who remembers the inimitable John Bunny and the peculiar style that so endeared him to comedy lovers the world over can fail to see in George Bunny almost an exact counterpart of his famous brother. George is not so stout as John, but otherwise the resemblance is remarkable.

In "Friend Husband" George Bunny has a role that would have well fitted the talents of his brother. In fact, Bunny was engaged for the part because he resembled the dead comedian both facially and in his ability to make big comedy capital out of a not unusual situation.

William J. Kelly in Metro Picture.

Olive Tell has as her leading man for her initial picture as a Metro star William J. Kelly. In "Secret Strings," which in its original form was a short story from the pen of Kate Jordan, later was converted into play form and now has been scenarioized by June Mathis for Miss Tell, Mr. Kelly has the role of that extremely fascinating species, the high class crook.

To the portrayal of this character Mr. Kelly brings a consummate artistry born of an active association with and experience in the best our stage offers to-day. In all, Mr. Kelly has played 253 parts.

Although a newcomer to Metro Mr. Kelly is not unfamiliar with work before the camera, having co-starred with Jane Grey in "When My Ship Comes In," and also in "Romance" and "The Woman's Resurrection," two William Fox screen productions.

Sylvan Settings for Madge Kennedy.

"Friend Husband," the newest of the series of Goldwyn Pictures, in which Madge Kennedy is soon to be seen, is a different sort of photo-romance in several ways. The star herself is different, the plot is decidedly out of the ordinary and the production is uniquely beautiful. For the first time since Madge Kennedy made her debut on the screen as a star for Goldwyn Pictures Corporation she is given the opportunity to act in wonderful settings.

Scenario Editor's Wife Refuses to Be Barred

"HEART OF GOLD," in which Louise Huff will star as her third World production, was written by Lucy Sarver, wife of Charles Sarver, the World scenario editor, and the manner in which the World secured this story is unusual and interesting.

Knowing that her husband would not recommend the purchase of her story, Mrs. Sarver, through a friend, submitted the manuscript direct to the World president. So impressed was the president with the merits of the tale that he purchased it at once, and without the knowledge of Mr. Sarver, had the continuity prepared, the duplicate copies made and the production got in shape for handing over to a director before Mr. Sarver was informed of the purchase.

It is also interesting to know that all the officials of the World company are highly pleased with "Heart of Gold" and consider it a most delightful and effective story.

Gus Metzger Comes to New York Jewel.

Gus A. Metzger has come out of the west to take charge of Jewel's New York City Exchange. Metzger is a pioneer in the film business of Oregon. Northwest exhibitors have known Metzger since the days when the industry was in its infancy. Coming to it from a successful career as an exhibitor, he joined the Film and Supply Company of Oregon, which was taken over by the Universal and recently became Universal Film Exchange, Inc. Since the first Jewel Production was released last fall some thirty Jewel offices have been established in the United States. The summoning of Mr. Metzger from the Portland office to New York is a signal recognition of his successful handling of those features in the northwest territory.

"That Devil, 'Bateese'" (Universal).

"That Devil 'Bateese,'" a five-reel Bluebird which affords Monroe Salisbury an opportunity to return to the type of role which originally brought him popularity as a Universal star, will be released by that organization during the week of August 12. In the supporting cast are Adda Gleason, Lamar Johnstone, Lon Chaney and Andrew Cobson.

Betzwood's First Production Features Chinese Star

Lady Tsen Mei Appears in "When East Meets West," Directed by Ira M. Lowrey—Louis Bennison in "Sandy Burke," a Novel Western Comedy Drama, to Be Second Offering of This Company.

THE attention of exhibitors who are looking for "something new" is invited by the Betzwood Film Company to their initial release, "When East Meets West," starring Lady Tsen-Mei, said to be the only female Chinese star appearing in films.

This production was directed by Ira M. Lowrey, who also produced the patriotic success, "For the Freedom of the World," and its star has long been known on the vaudeville and concert stage. This picture is announced as having a "different" story destined to give the jaded optiences of movie auditoriums that something new they are continually crying for.

No expense is said to have been spared by the producers in making a real feature in every respect. The interior settings of Chinese homes are claimed to be marvels of richness of carvings and ornamentation, while the exteriors were taken on a beautiful estate near Philadelphia, a replica of a real Chinese garden in the flowery kingdom.

In Lady Tsen-Mei the Betzwood Company feel that they have an unusual find, and a star with unusual dramatic ability. The supporting cast includes Robert Elliott as a young American who temporarily succumbs to the lure of Oriental femininity; Ben Hendricks, Jr., in the dual roles of Prince Kang and Ba-tu; Herbert Horton Patte as a designing German diplomat whose tricks are upset by Princess Tsu, and Neil Moran as Minister Emmons, together with the following Chinese players: Lai Mon Kim, Joe Chong, Rosie Moey, Lee Poy, Edward Lee and Gilbert Leong.

David Cancagni, who has appeared with a number of prominent producers, is responsible for the camera work, and it is promised that his work in connection with that of William Cooper, in charge of the plant, formerly the Lubin studio, has developed something unusual in photographic quality.

The story of the production was written by J. Allan Dunn, and scenarioized by Russel E. Smith. These two writers are also responsible for the first screen vehicle for Louis Bennison entitled "Sandy Burke," also being produced by the Betzwood Company, and which will be their second release.

It is also claimed that in "Sandy Burke" a different type of Western comedy-drama will make its appearance. Mr. Bennison is well known for his stage work in "Johnny Get Your Gun," also in "Damaged Goods" and "The Unchastened Woman." The Betzwood Film Company believes that exhibitors, when they have seen "Sandy Burke," will realize they have been presented with something new—exclusively Bennison.

In Mr. Bennison's support are Virginia Lee, Echlin Gayer, who was the "Duke" in "Johnny Get Your Gun"; Alphonse Ethier, Herbert Pattee, Phil Sanford, Andrew Bennison, Lucy Beaumont, and little Naudia Gary.

"The exhibitors' demand," says Mr. Lowry, "for something new and big is entirely justifiable, and we are prepared with our releases to silence the patron who says they are all alike."

Rolfe Signs Director and Prominent Players

MUCH activity is manifest in the offices of the Rolfe Productions, Inc., and plans are now under way for the new Houdini serial. The announcement has just been made of the signing of Margaret Marsh, who is one of the best known screen stars in the business. Houdini is said to have personally selected Miss Marsh because she seemed to be the one who had all the qualifications necessary for the part he had in view.

"I want this to be a 100 per cent. picture," stated B. A. Rolfe, president of Rolfe Productions, Inc., "and I rely a great deal on Houdini's showmanship and judgment in the matter of cast as well as sets and atmosphere."

Miss Marsh has been in pictures for a number of years, and has been starred by many of the leading companies.

Ruth Stonehouse is another stellar light added to the rapidly growing forces of this organization who are now at work in the new serial written by Messrs. Reeve and Logue. Miss Stonehouse has been engaged to play an important role in support of Houdini.

Miss Stonehouse is one of the best known leading women in the picture business, and has an extensive following. She has been featured by several of the leading producers, and was selected by Mr. Houdini.

Mr. Rolfe also announces the signing of Burton King to direct the forthcoming Houdini serial.

Mr. King has been busy casting and making plans to begin production at once. He has had a great deal of experience in producing serials, and feature productions with well known stars.

Mr King has spent the greater part of his life in the theatrical business, and has been starred in a great many productions on the stage, one of them being "Strongheart."

William Haddock has been engaged as assistant to Mr. King.

First Sherman Production Follows Book Absolutely

HARRY A. SHERMAN, president of Sherman Productions, Inc., has arrived in New York with a print of "The Light of Western Stars" to arrange for its distribution. This production is a film version of Zane Grey's widely read novel of the same title, and Dustin Farnum appears in the leading role. It is said to represent an outlay of one hundred thousand dollars, and has been five months in the making.

Mr. Sherman states that he is a believer in absolute authenticity in the adaptation of books to the screen, and that as a result of having conducted a chain of picture theaters he has found keen disappointment evidenced by audiences in the distorted versions of certain picturized novels. He therefore determined in entering the production field to insist on this point. As a consequence, in filming "The Light of Western Stars" the director was under orders to follow the text of the book absolutely, the scenes were filmed at the exact locations described by the author, and for the star he selected Dustin Farnum, to whom the author referred in the first chapter as representing the type of hero portrayed.

Work on this film was started in February, and it was necessary for the company to visit the neighborhood of Tucson, where for several months they lived in tents and by auto visited the various locations described by Zane Gray. Their ramblings also took them to El Cajon, New Mexico; La Osa, Mexico, and thence to old Pueblo. On their final stage they reached a point in the interior of Mexico, eighty miles from the nearest railroad, where many scenes of solemn grandeur and views showing the vastness of the cactus wilderness were secured.

Gaumont Speeds Up News Reel Service

WHEN the Gaumont Company decided to distribute its news service through independent exchanges it announced that its semi-weekly newsreels, the "News" and "Graphic," would always be first on the screen. One of the best developing and printing equipments in the United States, and a big force of skilled laboratory assistants made it possible to promise the shipment of the News and Graphic on Tuesdays and Fridays, a day ahead of the release of other news-reels.

The success of these, the only newsreels issued on state right market, is said to have made it necessary to double the number of copies of the News and Graphic, but in spite of this the printing and shipping have been speeded up and now less than a half day is required to print, pack and deliver them to the post and express offices.

As might be expected, Tuesdays and Fridays are days of hustle around the Gaumont plant. On these days the employes assemble at an unusually early hour. At 9 o'clock the last mail of the morning is received, the latest minute news-negatives are rushed through the developer, the reels assembled, a corps of inspectors project them to see that every scene is correct and in order. They are quickly packed and addressed and rushed to the depots by fast autos.

The studios and laboratories of the Gaumont Company are situated in Flushing, Long Island, New York City and just across the river from the Manhattan section, where the depots are located.

While transportation just at this time is subject to delay because of war conditions, postal and express officials realize the necessity of "speeding the news," and are cheerfully doing all they can to facilitate the rushing of these important carriers of news events.

"Inspiration" to Be Reissued

ANNOUNCEMENT is made by the Arrow Film Corporation that they will reissue the feature photoplay "Inspiration," in which Audrey Munson, the well known model, appears in the leading role. This production is being reedited and retitled, and will be released on the state right market under a new main title, which has not yet been selected. A wide campaign of exploitation has been devised in connection with this attraction.

This organization also secured under competitive bidding at a forced sale "The Sunset Princess," which they announce is being offered to state rights buyers at a small margin of profit. This picture is in five reels, and is an adaptation of the poem, "Yellowstone Pete's Only Daughter," by Wallace Coburn, who also appears in the production. Margery Daw is the featured player.

Ruby de Remer Appears In New Graphic Picture

RUBY DE REMER has been engaged by Director Ivan Abramson for an important role in his new production, "Ashes of Love," which he is making for Graphic Film Corporation. This is not the first time Miss de Remer has appeared in an Abramson picture, as she enacted a minor role in "Enlighten Thy Daughter."

The cast of this production is headed by James K. Hackett, and includes such well known players as Effie Shannon, Mabel Julienne Scott, Paula Shay, William Davidson, and Hugh Thompson.

Frank Hall Announces Policy of Fixed Rental Prices

Forms Producers' Distributing Corporation and Will Release Twelve Features a Year at Cost of Ten, Twenty and Thirty Dollars Each, Depending on Age of the Subject.

FRANK HALL announces the formation of the Producers' Distributing Corration, a concern based upon contracts with directors who are experienced in the making of successful attractions. The feature of this policy is the promise to furnish exhibitors who contract for the year's output of twelve special productions with subjects of exceptional box office value at the fixed rental prices of ten, twenty, and thirty dollars, depending upon the age of the subject. Under this plan Mr. Hall announces he will book pictures that will rent readily for big prices at a top price of $30.

To protect contract holders against having to accept features that do not come up to their expectations a clause enables them to cancel their contract upon "two pictures notice."

Mr. Hall states he can see no reason why, as soon as a successful extra attraction makes its appearance on the market, the exhibitor should be made to pay a rental price for it which keeps him from enjoying a fair share of the profits. As an exhibitor he has long contended that it is not right to place the exhibitor who books a special picture in a position where he is compelled to strain every nerve to make it do a big box office business and realize very little benefit outside of the advertising it gives his theater.

Believing that one big special picture a month can be handled more effectively by an advertising and selling force than a larger number, the Producers' Distributing Corporation has arranged for twelve attractions for the coming year. Six of these have already been contracted for, and the announcement of the director who will be responsible for their production and the name of the first subject is promised at an early date.

Shepard Says "Mickey" Has All Elements for Success

H. J. SHEPARD, of the W. H. Productions Co., makes the following statement: "The elements that predestine the success of any picture are prominent in 'Mickey,' viz: Pathos, humor, love, adventure, incident, and detail.

"The sad and melancholy incidents make the greatest demand upon Miss Normand's artistry. Her methods are natural, simple and unaffected, and the supporting company is apparently impelled to follow the example she sets. The acting is never overdone, but is always convincing, leaving the beholder unconscious of the way in which the sympathy has been aroused. 'Mickey' is full of fun and frolic and laughter. The variety of the humor is so great and its introduction so frequent that it prevents the play from ever growing tiresome or dreary. The humorous element is used as an excellent foil to the pathetic, and the balance is perfectly maintained.

"It has been said that no story is entirely satisfactory unless it has 'heart interest.' That element and its development to a final happy consummation is perfectly achieved. 'The course of true love never runs smoothly'—and certainly in 'Mickey' it is beset with trials and tribulations. Probably no photoplay has yet been produced that is so filled with adventure and thrills as 'Mickey.' Fatalities seem to be avoided by a hair. Time after time one feels that the very greatest climax possible has been reached only to witness a little later some accident or adventure which easily supercedes all its predecessors. The unusual quality of the incidents shown in 'Mickey' are both astonishing and noteworthy. It is said that genius consists in the capacity for taking infinite pains, and, if this is so, 'Mickey' is certainly a work of genius. Such elaboration of details has been shown in 'Mickey' as has never before been thrown upon the screen. It is used with such skill that it never obtrudes itself into the big scenes. Nevertheless it is the small things which makes 'Mickey' the perfect picture that it is."

Many Picture Men View "The Hand of Vengeance"

WHAT the Gaumont Company considers to be quite a tribute to their new serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," occurred recently when a number of well known motion picture producers and distributors were shown the first episode. So interested was the audience that they insisted on seeing the entire serial, which is not yet ready for distribution, and it was gratifying to the officials to watch these men viewing with interest the entire twenty reels in unfinished form, with rough titles, untinted prints, and scenes not yet trimmed to proper lengths.

Garson Issues Denial

IN a recent issue of a motion picture trade publication there appeared a statement to the effect that Ernest Shipman had secured the selling rights to the Blanche Sweet picture, "The Hushed Hour." Harry I. Garson, under whose management this picture was made, and who controls the rights thereon, has issued denial of this statement, and requests that this erroneous impression be corrected.

"What Does a Woman Need Most?"

In the advertising section of this issue of the Moving Picture World will be found an announcement of a picture made by Mrs. J. W. McDonald, of Lincoln, Neb., which seems to have attracted no small attention in that city and other towns in Nebraska where it has been shown. The title of the picture is "What Does a Woman Need Most?" and it deals with the subject of the care of children and the needs of the mother during the period of child bearing. On this theme Mrs. McDonald has built up a work of great interest which has received the commendation of the highest government officials at Washington in the words: "This work, which is of great value, should be carried on throughout the country, believing that there is no more constructive way to bring this important subject before the country."

The subject was first publicly shown in Garman's Rialto, Lincoln, and packed the house to its limit. Mrs. McDonald gave a lecture in connection with the picture.

Third Gloria Joy Is Released.

Gloria Joy makes her third appearance this week in an Oakdale production, "Miss Mischief Maker," a five-part drama. In this delightful vehicle with its lighter domestic touch, the seven-year-old star makes her most striking claim to stardom. In fact, General Film expects this picture to add to the popularity of the series. "Miss Mischief Maker" presents the little star in novel and amusing complication. The little comedienne involves an entire family in the most laughable difficulties and trials when she sponsors a false "Duke" as a promising entry for the hand of the daughter of the family.

Novel Three-Sheet for Jesters.

Owing to the high cost of materials, and the demand by many exhibitors for compo board lobby stands, William Steiner states he is making the three sheet used for Jester Comedies, featuring Twede-Dan, in such a manner that the exhibitor can use them in the regular way, or make up his own cut-out at a small expense, and have a permanent lobby display.

Gaumont News Shows Captured German Trophies

Miners Working to Prevent Coal Shortage, Army Pigeons Making Record Flight, Views of Big Shell-Making Plant, Enemy Mines Destroyed by Two-Pounders, and Other Interesting Items in This Company's New Reels.

GAUMONT NEWS NO. 18 shows guns and equipment captured from the Germans, including a wrecked "Taube"; also a picture of the S. S. "San Diego," which was sunk off Fire Island. Eight people are killed in a trolley wreck at San Francisco when a street car runs wild on a hill and turns over. The boys from the Harvard Radio School, Cambridge, give an exhibition of a new game called the "Chariot Race." Coal miners are shown working at top speed to prevent a repetition of the coal shortage. Army pigeons make record flight from Kansas City to Chicago. At Camp Devens they have a novel way of teaching the boys how to navigate the big army trucks over all kinds of roads.

Gaumont Graphic No. 17 shows the inside workings of one of Uncle Sam's big war plants where shell cases are made, including the stages of its development from a copper plate to the finished shell cases.

The official picture of the National Coal Association give an idea of how the coal miners are working so that we may have coal when we need it. 12,500,000 tons in a single day is their new production record. Other interesting subjects include the French War Pictures. Enemy mines destroyed by a two-pounder, which makes a spectacular splash when a hit is recorded. In Washington work is being rushed on Uncle Sam's biggest office building. In Chicago premier swimmers stage patriotic water carnival. Mexican editors attend review of our sailor boys at Goat Island.

First "Ralph Ince" Film Will Be an Adaptation

THAT the plans of Associated Pictures, Inc., are rapidly maturing to the production point is stated by Herbert Lubin, an executive of the new organization. The selection of the initial story has been made. The scenario is an adaptation of one of the well known American novels, the author of which has personally prepared the film version, but the author's name and the title will be kept secret until the finishing touches have been given to the production.

Under the brand name of "Ralph Ince Film Attractions" all of the features made by this organization will be directed by Ralph Ince, who, under special arrangement, is to direct Ethel Barrymore and Hale Hamilton in two pictures for the Metro Pictures Corporation. Following the completion of these films he will undertake the production of the first Ralph Ince Film Attraction.

Louis Joseph Vance will take an active part in the preparation of the first Ince picture, and is now busily engaged in that particular work.

Much Interest Aroused By Tourneur's New Film

KEEN interest is being manifested in Maurice Tourneur's first independent production, a screen adaptation of Cecil Raleigh's and Seymour Hicks' Drury Lane melodrama, "Sporting Life," which will soon be offered to the public.

Hiller & Wilk, Inc., who will handle this production, have received numerous letters from exhibitors who want to play "Sporting Life," which is one of the most famous melodramas ever produced at the Drury Lane theater in London. It has been screened by Mr. Tourneur, who also produced "The Whip," likewise a Drury Lane production, which turned out to be one of the most successful melodramas ever filmed. Many exhibitors who played "The Whip" have written to Hiller & Wilk, Inc., as well as a great many who did not, and letters of inquiry have been received from England, Australia, and India.

The big scene of "Sporting Life" is said to be a reproduction of an international prize fight before the London National Sporting Club. This fight takes place in a big London playhouse, and Mr. Tourneur reproduced the theater, galleries, balconies, boxes, stage, and pit, with the fighting platform erected in the front of the pit. Every seat is occupied, the aisles jammed. Another big feature of "Sporting Life" is a reproduction of the famous Derby race, which is the great English racing event.

The cast of "Sporting Life" includes the Binney Sisters, Willette Kershaw, Ralph Graves, Warren Richmond, Clara Beyers, Charles Craig, and Charles Eldridge.

"Still Alarm" Exploited by Means of Novel Stunt

THE First National exchange, Denver, employed a novel stunt in connection with exploitation of "The Still Alarm," the Pioneer Film Corporation's feature which they are handling in that territory. By arrangement with the local authorities a series of thrilling stunts were performed by the fire department in front of the America theater. The result is said to have been very successful in attracting patronage to the house.

According to reports from this exchange a great many bookings are being received on this production, and extra prints have been ordered to take care of the demand.

In New York, "The Still Alarm" has been booked by the Loew, Keith and Proctor, Fox, and other big circuits, and also played to big business at the Hippodrome in Baltimore during a week's run.

Ernest Shipman Secures Several New Productions

REPORTS received from Ernest Shipman indicate that he has been very active during his stay in Los Angeles. Not only has he opened an office at that point to be maintained in connection with the one in New York, but he has made arrangement with a number of manufacturers to handle their productions on state rights market, including the first Al Jenning's production, "The Lady in the Dugout," the Corona Cinema feature, "The Curse of Eve."

Mr. Shipman also announces that the second Francis Ford release, "The Island of Intrigue," has been completed, and that territory on the first production, "Berlin via America," is almost entirely sold. The fifth William H. Clifford production of five reels featuring Shorty Hamilton, "A Prisoner of War," is also finished, while a series of one-reel poem picture plays by Bill Stringers will be released monthly through Mr. Shipman's New York office. Territory on the two-reel Josh Binney comedies have been closed out, which disposes of the only comedies handled by the Shipman organization.

Novel Sub-Titling for Fifth Petrova Picture

OFFICIALS of the Petrova Picture Company feel that in the fifth special Petrova production, "The Tiger Woman," they have a film the artistry and smoothness of which will be commented upon by exhibitors and the public. It is claimed to have one of the finest sets of pictorial titles ever seen on the screen.

Originality and beauty is claimed for the main title. Following a photograph of Madame Petrova with outstretched arms on which is carried the usual preliminary wordings, the film then dissolves into a revolving drum effect on which, as it turns, is a foreword illustrated from time to time, with descriptive scenes fading in and out.

The subtitles are said to be the work of artists who have striven to merge the scenes and reading matter into a composite whole. This production is announced for release within the near future.

Blanche Sweet Will Appear in Eight Pictures a Year

BLANCHE SWEET is now in New York for a brief visit after having completed her first picture under Harry I. Garson's management entitled "The Hushed Hour." Miss Sweet expects to return to the Pacific Coast in about three weeks, when she will begin work on her next picture, "Told in the Hills," which is an adaptation of Mary Ellis Ryan's successful novel. Following this feature, which will be made in the Sunset studio, she will be seen in a film version of Rupert Hughes' magazine story, "The Unpardonable Sin." It is announced that she will be featured by Mr. Garson in eight productions during the current year.

Three Stars Appearing in Moon Comedy Films

SUNSHINE FILM, INC., announces that Moon comedies have been booked by the Loew and Keith circuits, as well as 150 other motion picture theaters in New York. Emil Harder, who is president of the company, also directs all of the productions. This company has three comedy stars, Lola Venus, Funnyface Ascott, and Shorty Alexander, and the two latest offerings, which are being disposed of on state rights basis, are "Their Downfall," with Lola Venus in the role of a policewoman, and "Their Unexpected Job," a story dealing with the anti-loafing law.

"Successful Pictures Built, Not Made," Says Abramson

ACCORDING to Ivan Abramson, director general of the Graphic Film Corporation, a successful picture is built, not made. The theme is the foundation, the situations and climaxes are the building material, the story is the architect's plans by which they are put into place, the director is the master builder, and the cast the artisans whose work adds beauty and durability to the structure.

Mr. Abramson's latest production is "When Men Betray," featuring Gail Kane, and he is now engaged in making "Ashes of Love."

Clara Kimball Young Given Great Ovation

Select's Star Received by Enthusiastic Throngs Wherever She Appears in Spokane —In Seattle Miss Young and Admiral Coontz Lead Parade of 5,000 "Jackies" with Five Bands, Opening Victory Carnival—Talks with Moving Picture World Man.

By S. Clark Patchin, E 1811 Eleventh Ave., Spokane, Wash.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG, captivating, smiling, courteous, and enthusiastic captured Spokane audiences with a dash fitting to any military organization and in a manner that any king or queen could be proud of when she spent July 18 in Spokane. She made three appearances at the Liberty theater, where "The Claw," in which she was starred, was being presented, this arrangement having been worked out by Manager Sam W. B. Cohn, of the Liberty. He also arranged a private dinner party in honor of Miss Young and her party at the Davenport hotel, where Miss Young was given the state suite.

During the afternoon she appeared at a Red Cross benefit arranged by society matrons of the city at the home of Mrs. John Finch. A short vaudeville performance was given here, and Miss Young was introduced to the audience by Mayor C. M. Fassett. Here, too, the actress won her way quickly into the hearts of her audience.

Capacity Audiences Greet the Star.

At each appearance at the Liberty, Miss Young was greeted by capacity audiences, and at times people were crowded out to the curb line waiting for the next performance so they could get into the house. She was given great ovations in the way of applause at the theater, also upon leaving the house. Standing room was taken both inside of the house and in the lobby, so that a passage way had to be made to permit her to return to the hotel after the performances. She was given automobile trips about the city during the day. W. S. Gilbert, leader of the four-minute speakers for the city and county, introduced her at the theater.

Miss Young's future pictures are to have happy endings, because she does not believe the picture public wants her to "die" at the end of each offering, according to her statement.

Talks with World Man.

While Miss Young and Mrs. Rudolph were having a visit with Larry Trimble, director of the Washington Motion Picture Corporation, and Edward Horn, a photographer of that company, which has its plant in Spokane, I was introduced to the star, whose reception I shall not soon forget, for she immediately makes one feel at ease, and informed me that Mr. Trimble directed her in her first picture. Miss Young then told of her trip starting at Los Angeles then to San Francisco, where she aided the navy recruiting mission by speaking and helped open a room for the Red Cross. From there she proceeded to Portland, Ore., where she also appeared in the navy recruiting mission interests, the result being 185 enlisted men, and from there she went to Seattle, Wash., where she had played in stock before going into the pictures about eight years ago. Here she was greeted by large audiences at the Coliseum, where many of her former friends gathered to see her. She and Admiral Coontz led a parade which opened the victory carnival arranged for by Seattle society women, the aim being to raise funds for a hospital. There were 5,000 jackies, five bands, and an escort of youmanettes carrying guns in the line of parade, which proceeded to the big arena, where $3,500 was raised toward the hospital fund the first night.

Speaks in Interest of W. S. S.

At Tacoma she was again greeted by capacity audiences, and made two appearances in the Colonial theater, where she spoke in the interest of the Thrift Stamp campaign. Admiral Coontz praised her work in Portland and Seattle, saying she had greatly aided the recruiting work.

Clara Kimball Young

Miss Young impresses one with her particular type of beauty inviting admiration. She radiates enthusiasm, and local papers referred to her both as "the pretty moving picture actress" and "a handsome woman." While none of them ventured to guess at her age she is twenty-eight, and is not a bit ashamed of it. But why should she be, for she does not look it, and Mr. Trimble and Miss Young talked frankly of the first picture when Miss Young was little more than 19. "I am not a bit ashamed to tell my age, and do not think any woman should be," declared the star.

Addresses 500 in Hotel Lobby.

"I only wish I were a man so I could don a uniform and get into the first line trenches," declared Miss Young to an audience of fully 500 men and women who gathered in the lobby of the Davenport hotel, where she was given an ovation. "I am here to talk about Thrift Stamps," she continued. "Why don't you business men subscribe to the limit as you should, that's what I would like to know. You have business ability enough to know that Uncle Sam is offering a wonderful investment in his Thrift Stamps. Isn't that a lot better than taxing you and not even giving you your principal back? Then you get four per cent. interest on the stamps.

"I am moving my residence from New York City to California, and I expect to visit this beautiful city once or twice a year regularly."

Gets 55 Navy Recruits at Theater.

"In Portland, Ore., where I talked a few days ago, the navy enlisted 185 men, and 55 of these were enlisted at the theater where I talked. The others joined the ranks the following day. I am very proud of this record because the officer in charge told me that Portland had been combed for months before for volunteers. I have spoken every time a navy or marine officer has requested me to, and I have never turned down a request to speak for any of the campaigns, including the Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., Armenian, Y. W. C. A., Liberty Bonds, or Thrift Stamps, for my heart is in the war to the limit, and I want to do my utmost instead of my bit.

"Spokane looks good to me. I love this city from what I have already seen of it, and the Davenport hotel is one of the finest in which I have ever had the pleasure of stopping. I am certainly going to return to this city many times after I take up my residence in California, where I have my own production house."

Leaves for New York.

Miss Young and her party arrived at 7.15 a. m., and left the following morning en route to New York direct. This queen of the screen was accompanied by Harry Garson, her manager, and Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Rudolph, Mr. Rudolph being her publicity man.

What Dallas Exchange Men Are Doing.

Cliff Reed, of the United Theaters Company of America, who was former Dallas Mutual manager, and H. G. Morrow, former First National manager of Dallas, but now with the United Theaters, are in New York for a few weeks.

H. G. Underwood, president of the Matinee Film Company, of Dallas, is spending his vacation in New York.

Jimmy Kelly, of the General, is back in Dallas, after making a trip to San Antonio and Austin, where he found business good.

E. C. Leeves, formerly with the United Theaters Corporation, has joined the sales force of the First National in Texas and Oklahoma territory.

Rent Too High; Theater Closes.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The Alhambra theater at Beaver Falls has been closed by Frank D. Hart, under whose management the theater thrived for about two years. Mr. Hart developed the theater from an occasional road-show house to a prosperous theater proposition showing moving pictures exclusively, and, with its capacity of 1,300, it was doing well. The theater was closed because of an excessive rental asked by the owner. It may be opened by other parties who, it is understood, have been negotiating for the place.

Smith Takes Over Greenfield Theater.

The Greenfield theater at 709 Greenfield avenue has been taken over by Edward Smith, a former Bloomfield exhibitor. The house seats about 300, and has been closed for a few weeks.

B. & B. Theater Sold.

The B. & B. theater on Beaver avenue, north side, has been sold by C. F. Michaels to two business men of the north side who will open it in a week or so after remodeling is completed.

Liebman Buys Wilkay Theater.

The Wilkay theater at Parade street, Erie, Pa., has been sold by C. A. Powell to Mr. Liebman, of East Pittsburgh, who assumed active management last week. The house is a prosperous one, and should enjoy good patronage under the new owner's management.

Columbia Theater Being Rebuilt.

The Columbia theater in Erie, which recently burned down, is being rebuilt as rapidly as possible, and will be ready for business again about the 1st of September. The theater is owned by the Columbia Theater Company, of which Mr. Potter is manager.

Clark with Stilwell Theater Company.

SPOKANE, WASH.—H. W. Clark, who has been advertising manager for the Goldstein-Lubin company, which has many branches in the northwest, has been appointed assistant manager of the Stilwell Theater Company. This announcement was made by C. E. Stilwell, president of the company, which has a string of theater in Spokane and two in Colfax, Mr. Clark succeeds E. P. Coffey, who has gone into the field for the "Eyes of the World."

Mr. Stilwell is busy with improvements and plans for his chain of theaters. In the Class A he is putting in a pianoplayer which is a combination of pipe organ and piano, the same as the instrument he has in the Casino. He has taken a long lease on the Unique theater building, where he has operated a theater for some years and got his start in the moving picture field, and will thoroughly remodel and redecorate the place. He will increase its seating capacity from 325 to 500.

Mr. Stilwell now owns both moving picture houses at Colfax, having recently taken over the Bungalow theater there, with J. S. Nelson as manager.

Spokane Brevities.

Mary Garden in "The Splendid Sinner" at the Clemmer played to good sized audiences for three days, starting July 14 at the Clemmer theater. Among other good drawing cards of the same week in Spokane picture houses were Bill Hart in "Sea Wolf," at the Liberty; Fatty Arbuckle in "Good Night Nurse," at the Clemmer; Frank Keenan in "The Stepping Stone," at the Majestic, and "Intolerance" at the Lyric.

Dailies Give Much Space to Griffith Film

"Hearts of the World" Gets Plenty of Publicity in Toronto Newspapers Before Starting Its Four Weeks' Run at the Allen Theater—Amount Surprises Local Film Men, for Publications Are Most Conservative.

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO, ONT.—"Hearts of the World" had one of the biggest advertising campaigns ever seen in Canada before it was presented for the first time at the Allen theater, Toronto, on Saturday, July 27. Toronto newspapers have always been classed as ultra-conservative, but they cut loose with the Griffith special in a manner that opened the eyes of the local film fraternity. One of the big stories was an interview from Sheriff Lemieux of Montreal, chairman of the Board of Censors for the Province of Quebec. Lemieux had returned from an official visit to France and the western front. When he came back he saw a private screening of "Hearts of the World." His comment was timely and appropriate.

Another interesting detail is that the W. C. T. U. of the dominion thinks so much of the Griffith feature that it has deigned to ask for the privilege of selling flowers in the lobby of the Allen theater during the four weeks that it is scheduled to be presented at this house. This step was recommended by the dominion president of the W. C. T. U. because she saw the feature at Clune's Auditorium, Los Angeles, and liked it so much that she gave it her official approval.

Two of the new Allen theaters in eastern Canada have reached the stage where they require the direct attention of the decorators and furnishers. The work of decorating the Allen theater on Notre Dame de Grace, Westmount, Quebec, and the Allen theater in Lachine, Quebec, has been placed in the hands of Clarence Davis, department manager of the Robert Simpson Company, Limited, Toronto, who has supervised the decoration of many theaters in all parts of Canada.

The Allens will have at least five new moving picture theaters opening simultaneously in different parts of Canada. This will be early in the fall, and the houses are located at Westmount, Lachine, Toronto, Edmonton and Regina.

World Man Quotes Laemmle's Talk.

The Toronto representative of Moving Picture World recently was called upon to "deliver an address" at trade conventions in Toronto and Baltimore. Being a moving picture man at heart he held up the motion picture business as an example of the way things should or should not be done. Referring to the subject of the falling off of business at different times of the year in almost every retail selling field he seized the opportunity of freely quoting Carl Laemmle's "State of Mind" talk, which was published in the August 3 issue of the World.

Tanguay Auditorium's New Manager.

An important change has taken place at the Auditorium theater, the most important house in the city of Quebec. Joseph Tanguay, formerly manager of the Victoria theater, has been selected to conduct the management of the Auditorium. He will assume his new duties early in the fall. This has taken a load of worry off the mind of H. E. Pauet, owner of the Auditorium, and he has been spending a real vacation on the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Official French Film for Specialty.

Sheriff Lemieux of Montreal, chairman of the Board of Censors for the Province of Quebec, recently received an official film from the government of France, entitled "Women of France." The picture met with his formal approval, and he turned it over to the Specialty Film Import, Limited. The latter company, which handles Pathe releases in Canada, has undertaken to provide English subtitles for the picture and to release it throughout the country.

Metro Closes Branches in Canada.

Although the Metro franchise in Canada was acquired by Regal Films, Limited, some months ago the Metro branches in the dominion have just been closed. This development occurred when the Regal made formal announcement of its plans and policy for 1919. Metro releases were included in the Regal subjects for the first time on that occasion and shortly afterwards the Metro offices were moved to the Regal branches in Toronto, Montreal and elsewhere.

Gronau Leaves Canadian Universal.

Announcement has been made that Ed Gronau is no longer associated with the Canadian Universal in Montreal. Gronau had been with the Universal for a number of years, and he severed the connection in order to make new and important arrangements for himself.

Delegates Return from Convention.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—Although slightly disappointed at the outcome of the National Exhibitors' League Convention which resulted in the election of Peter Schaefer, of Chicago, for the next national president the Philadelphia delegates and Judge J. O'Donnell returned from Boston in the best of spirits, and expressed themselves as completely satisfied with the new president. To say that the Philadelphia contingent enjoyed their stay in Boston is putting it mildly, according to the reports from the recent arrivals. The boys had a royal good time, and they certainly admit it. A delightful treat was the excursion on the steamer to Nantasket Beach which finally ended with one of those famous cabaret dinners. Albert E. Brown, in company with his wife and party, Sam Blatt and L. Goldstein, had a wonderful trip in their respective automobiles while making the journey back and forth. Many stops were made en route, but one in particular was at Narraganset Pier in Newport, where 5,000 graduates from a nearby military training camp were heard singing several patriotic songs at the completion of their graduation exercises. By good fortune Harry Ernst, son of H. Ernst, Sr., the manager of the Fairhill Palace in Philadelphia, was seen among the boys who were graduating soon to take their place in Uncle Sam's army.

Victoria Runs Metro Film for Week.

Edgar Wolf, the popular vaudeville manager who was recently appointed in charge of the Victoria, one of the largest motion picture houses in Philadelphia, was seen last week, and said that he was highly pleased with his new position. Announcement was made that beginning August 5 the Metro's sensational production, "To Hell with the Kaiser," would be presented for an entire week.

Philadelphia Shorts.

Frank W. Buhler, general manager of the Stanley Company, besides attending his regular duties of directing a large number of picture theaters, is at present attending to the booking of Sablosky and McGuirk's vaudeville houses until the latter return from their vacation.

Herbert Effinger, the president and manager of the Strand theater, has inaugurated quite a novel and up-to-date arrangement whereby he has been successful in circulating ice-cooled air through the house, which is delighting the large patronage of his beautiful theater.

San Francisco Has New Producing Company

G. M. Anderson, of "Broncho Billy" Fame, Herbert Rothchild, A. M. Rosenstirn and Judge I. M. Golden Organize Golden Production Company Here—Studios Located in San Mateo County.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Golden Production Company, a million dollar moving picture corporation, with studios in San Mateo County and the head office in San Francisco, has been formed following the arrival of G. M. Anderson, of "Broncho Billy" fame. Anderson will be the directing genius of the new film corporation, and will also be one of the actors in the film productions, which will be limited to eight complete photodramas a year. Three San Franciscans are interested with the moving picture star in the venture. They are Herbert Rothchild, A. M. Rosenstirn, and Judge I. M. Golden. In regard to chosing San Francisco as a producing field, Anderson said, "Our corporation will spare no expense to give the best to the public, and I have selected San Mateo County for our studios. There the climate is ideal for the taking of pictures. In a comparison of the climatic conditions we have learned that there were but eight days' difference last year between Los Angeles and San Francisco."

Supply Man Off to War.

F. J. Alberti, 100 Golden Gate avenue, who handles National carbons and theater specialties, has left for Fort McDowell, and will shortly be in a Pacific Coast training camp getting ready for the trip "over there." He has left the business in charge of his sister, Miss M. E. Alberti, and orders are being cared for as in the past.

First Marion Davies Film at Strand.

"Cecilia of the Pink Roses," the serial of which has been running in "The Call" has been secured by the Strand Theater for showing during the latter part of July. This is the first picture produced by the Marion Davies Film Company, and it was released by the Select Pictures Corporation.

Educational Talks in Movie Houses.

The Alameda County Educational Association has asked the Oakland Board of Education to request proprietors of moving picture houses to permit brief lectures to be given during performances on the value of education as a social, moral and economic force, as well as for the furtherance of war work. The request was referred by the board to the committee of the whole for a report at the next meeting.

Theater Sales are Numerous.

A number of moving picture theaters in San Francisco and vicinity have changed hands of late through the offices of the United Theater exchange among these being the following: A one-half interest in the Varsity theater, Berkeley, from J. Hill to R. Edmonds; the World theater at Gilroy, from A. Weker to Brooks and Stickley; the Strand theater at Los Gatos, from Wolf & Thompson to L. H. Killingsworth, and the Hayes theater, of this city, to F. A. Ross.

Select Office May be Moved.

Plans are being considered for the removal of the offices of the Select Pictures Corporation from the third to the fourth floor of the Easton building at 985 Market street. The location under consideration would give this branch much more space than it now occupies and permit of an ideal arrangement of the offices. Long term contracts for the renewal of Select service and coming and going fullness has increased to such an extent that the present quarters are becoming crowded.

War Demands Bring About Changes.

Myron J. Lewis, manager of the San Francisco office of the Famous Players-Lasky Corp., has been spending most of the past month at Los Angeles, where he is taking the place for the time being of J. J. Halsted, who has enlisted in the army. During the absence of Mr. Lewis his duties in connection with the San Francisco office are being cared for by J. J. Patridge. W. W. Vaughn, formerly director of publicity for this branch, but recently promoted to the sales force, is making his initial trip on the road.

Shipping Clerk Turns Operator.

Fred Blote, formerly shipping clerk for the Pathe Exchange, Inc., has left to accept a position as operator at the Verdi theater on Broadway. The scarcity of operators, many of whom have accepted work in shipbuilding plants, led him to make the change.

P. B. Jacobus, vice-president of the American Photo-Player Company, is making a brief visit to the Cincinnati factory. On his way he stopped at Van Nuys and inspected two Robert-Morton organs which were destined for Minnesota.

S. S. Abrams will assume the factory duties at the Berkeley plant during the absence of Mr. Jacobus.

N. B. Jacobus, a demonstrator of the Fotoplayer has enlisted in the army, and is now at Camp Lewis.

Frank Bourgeois, manager of the credit department, is enjoying a vacation in the Yosemite Valley, one of California's wonder spots.

San Francisco Briefs.

T. F. McCullough, formerly of the Jewel theater, has joined the sales staff of the Mutual exchange.

Philip Carrie, of the Motion Picture Operators Union, has joined the army.

Ed H. Linnell has purchased a motion picture outfit, and is now touring the towns and mining camps of Shasta County.

Haas Handling "Berlin Via America."

WILMINGTON, N. C.—It was inadvertently stated in these columns that the Universal Film exchange at Charlotte, N. C., was handling "Berlin via America" throughout the Carolinas. This was the result of a confusion of names, as this state rights subject is being handled direct by Otto Haas, of the Ottoway theater, Charlotte, who controls rights to his production throughout the Carolinas.

Wathne Re-enters Film Business.

Theater men of Wilmington, N. C., had the pleasure the second week in July of shaking hands once again with Fritz B. Wathne, prince of good fellows, and one who knows the film game upside down. Wathne has been out of this territory since 1915, when he opened the Washington exchange for International Film Service. The Carolina territory will be covered by him in the future in the interest of Paramount-Artcraft, he having accepted the position made vacant when Henry Randall answered a call to the colors in July.

North Carolina Short Items.

Mr. E. D. Craver, together with Mrs. Craver and children, of Charlotte theater fame, are spending some time at Wrightsville Beach being guests at the Oceanic hotel.

Otto Haas, of the Ottoway theater, Charlotte, N. C., returned home this week from Wrightsville Beach after spending several weeks at the Oceanic hotel.

Apfel Goes to Wilmington for Scenes.

Wilmington.—Director Oscar Apfel and Assistant Director Flood, of the World Film, left Wilmington, N. C., July 11, after spending two weeks in the swamps adjacent to that city shooting scenes for Montagu Love's new picture, "Pirate's Gold." Dorothy Green is co-starred with Mr. Love, and all told there were about twenty in the company that has been sojourning in that Southern sea-port city for the past two or three weeks. On the banks of Town Creek River, a narrow but deep winding stream which runs through the mammoth cyprus swamps of Brunswick near here, Director Apfel erected his gypsy village. Other scenes of "Pirate's Gold" were shot on beautiful Greenfield Lake at Lakeside Park, Wilmington, one of the most beautiful natural lakes in the South, with its low-overhanging cyprus trees bedecked to the very waters edge with Southern gray moss.

Stoeffel a Resourceful Manager.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.—The other evening at the Plymouth theater something went wrong with the juice at a critical moment and the light faded entirely. The operators were unable to remedy the situation immediately, so Joe Stoeffel, the manager, mounted the stage. After offering to refund the price of admission he told the audience a funny story or two and then proposed that they have an impromptu entertainment by members of the audience. He invited a soldier to come forward and sing. The latter did, and several others followed. In a short time Joe had a score of soldiers from the audience on the stage singing patriotic songs and telling stories of camp life. The thing was a hit. When the projection machine was again ready for business Joe asked the audience if they wanted the picture to continue immediately or wanted to go on with their home-made minstrel show. They decided that there was more fun in the latter, and considerable amateur talent in the audience was given a chance to show what they could do. As a net result Joe says that out of the audience of six or seven hundred people not more than a dozen—eleven, to be exact—stepped out to the box office and demanded their money back. The whole thing merely goes to prove that Joe is a resourceful and versatile showman, ready for any emergency.

Two More Stars in Temple Flag.

Two more stars have just been added to the Temple theater service flag. There are now seven stars on the flag, which hangs in prominent view in the body of the house. The stars represent the following Rochester boys now in the service of their country and former employees of the Temple theater: J. Earl Pitcher, Edward J. Lawler, Michael Stubella, Arthur Gessel, Peter Salmon, Earl R. Myers and William Kurtz.

Taylor Booking for Triangle.

"Hub" Taylor, former Pathe representative here and probably one of the best known film men in this part of the state, is now the chief booker in the Triangle offices at Buffalo.

Empire Running Heavy on Comedies.

Manager Greenstone of the Empire theater is offering an almost exclusive bill of comedies during excessively hot weather, which Rochester has been having lately. "Laughing has never made any one warm," says Mr. Greenstone, "and certainly with the cooling breezes and the comedies it ought to be a decided relief to get away from the hot and dusty pavements."

Moore's Theaters Aid Patriotic Fund.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Moore theaters, the Garden and Strand, and the National theater have been quite successful in their work of collecting for the British and Canadian patriotic fund. Last week they obtained $1,632. Sergeant Guy Empey and Fairfax Naulty made the appeals. This fund is to be used for the maintenance of the wives and dependent families of men resident in the District of Columbia, who are accepted at the office of the British and Canadian recruiting mission for service in the British Army.

Italian Ambassador Sees War Films.

The official Italian War Films, shown at Poli's theater by Sidney B. Lust, created a great deal of interest during the week. Prominent officials of the War Department, members of Congress and others interested from an official standpoint in the progress of the war, and the Italian Ambassador, with other representatives of the Italian Government, viewed the films. The pictures take well at this time in view of the great work the Italians are doing in driving back the Austrians.

Extols Work of Film Companies.

The Department of Labor is telling the general public of the good work being done by Gaumont, Pathe, Vitagraph, Universal, General, Metro, Goldwyn, Triangle, Mutual, World and Perfection in cooperating with the Farm Service Division of the Employment Service in the drive for maximum food production. The Department states that "Virtually every motion picture theater in the country, the estimated total patronage being 60,000,000 persons, is now enlisted in the campaign of the United States Employment Service of the Department of Labor to supply labor to the farms. The film producers are releasing to their subscribers, trailers calling upon all those who possibly can to volunteer for harvest work and other forms of emergency farm labor."

Biron in Control of the American.

David Biron, who operates the Liberty theater, has secured from Harry M. Crandall the control of the American theater. It will be his intention to make a great many changes in his acquisition, and will redecorate the front as soon as possible.

New Orpheum Theater Improved.

THE new Orpheum has received many summer improvements during the past few weeks, including new auditorium lights, and the poster and photo frames have been newly painted. C. N. Parker, of Niagara Falls, the owner of the theater, was in this city during the past week placing many improvements in his comfortable neighborhood house.

Linton Attending Convention.

W. H. Linton, owner of the Hippodrome theater, this city, and also the Richmond in Herkimer and Hippodrome, Little Falls, is attending the exhibitor's convention being held in Boston all this week.

Ball Resigns from Hippodrome.

Joe Ball, who has been manager of the Hippodrome, has resigned to take up the management of another house in a distant city. Mr. Ball was the first manager to introduce motion pictures in this city.

Front of Hippodrome Embellished.

The front of the Hippodrome theater has been greatly improved by the erection of a number of Menger & Ring Company's poster frames. They are stationary, and very attractive. A large frame holding a banner has been placed in the air over the sidewalk in front of the house, and in this the title of the daily star and feature is placed.

Filmdom Trade Notes of Week from Indiana

Jury Disagrees; Francis Discharged.

GREENSBURG, IND.—William Francis, proprietor of two local motion picture theaters, who was arrested about a month ago charge with desecrating the Sabbath because he had operated his theater on Sunday, was discharged in city court Wednesday, July 11, after a jury had failed to agree on a verdict. The jury was discharged by the court after it had been out several hours.

In disagreeing the jurors were divided on the legal point of law which permits the operation of places for religious or moral purposes, and there was no evidence submitted to show that Francis was guilty of showing pictures of an immoral character.

Chief of Police Meek, who filed the affidavit against Francis, has announced that if even Francis attempts to operate his theaters on Sunday again he will file other affidavits against him. The first arrest grew out of the efforts of the Greensburg Ministerial Association to abolish Sunday shows. Greensburg is one of the few Indiana cities which does not permit the exhibition of Sunday motion picture shows.

Overhauled Theaters Open.

Richmond.—All spick and span, the Murray and Murrette theaters, which have been undergoing a general overhauling for the last few weeks, were reopened to the theatergoers of Richmond last Wednesday night under the management of the People's Theater Company, of Chicago, of which A. F. Brentlinger, of Fort Wayne, is the head. The company recently leased the theaters from J. G. Murray, who has retired from the business. Capacity crowds attended the reopening.

Novelty Under Strand Management.

Evansville.—The Novelty theater on Main street, near Seventh street, has been taken over by the Strand theater management, and will be operated as a high grade motion picture theater. Manager Russell, of the Strand, says the new theater will be ready to be opened under the new management in about ten days.

Johnson Sues Bruner.

Indianapolis.—Robert Johnson, who says he has a part interest in the Washington theater, a motion picture house on Indiana avenue, has brought suit in the circuit court here against Richard Bruner, also part owner of the theater, asking for the appointment of a receiver. Johnson alleges in his complaint that he and Bruner are partners, and that Bruner has repeatedly refused to permit him to share in the profits.

Rumsey Resigns as Operator at Luna.

Lafayette.—Carl Rumsey has tendered his resignation as motion picture operator at the Luna theater here, and will leave next week to become a traveling salesman for the Duncan Meter Works. He will travel through the Northwest. Mr. Rumsey has been in charge of the motion picture machines at the Luna since the theater was opened.

Morse Visits Film Trade Board.

Ted Morse, who opened the St. Louis branch of the Select Pictures Corporation about a year ago, was a visitor at the St. Louis Film Board of Trade this week.

George W. Trendle, of the J. H. Kunsky Enterprises, Detroit, spent the week of July 15 in New York arranging his bookings for the coming season.

W. G. Underwood, of the Specialty Film Company, of Dallas, Tex., was a recent Detroit visitor on his way east to buy state rights pictures.

Frank Wadlow, of the Virginia Park theater, Detroit, left July 15 to spend two weeks in New York City.

McCormick Praised by C. S. Hart.

Indianapolis.—The S. R. O. sign was in constant use at the Circle theater all this week during the presentation of Douglas Fairbanks in his current farce, "Say Young Fellow." Fairbanks is quite a favorite here. S. Barret McCormick, managing director of the theater, has arranged for Olga Petrova to appear in person at the Circle on Tuesday, July 23, in connection with the presentation of "The Life Mask," in which Madame Petrova is featured.

Mr. McCormick has received a letter from Charles S. Hart, director of the war division films issued by the Committee on Public Information at Washington, in which Mr. Hart complimented him on the wonderful and efficient advertising campaign used during the presentation of the official war picture, "Pershing's Crusaders," which was shown at the Circle a few weeks ago.

Exhibitors Face Two Lightless Nights.

Exhibitors received notice this week that two lightless nights a week probably will be established in Indianapolis before the close of the summer. Preliminary details of the order to conserve fuel by the elimination of lights were issued by Alex R. Holliday, acting federal fuel administrator for Indiana. No specific date was given for the order to become effective, but the message said that the curtailing of unnecessary lighting will go into effect shortly.

Vought Books "Over the Top."

Columbia City.—B. J. Vought, manager of the Lyceum theater, at this place, has juse returned from Chicago, where he booked the Vitagraph picture, "Over the Top," for presentation here August 7 and 8. Mr. Vought tried to arrange with the city officials to exhibit the big picture at the city hall auditorium, which will seat a larger number of people than the theater, but the percentage of the gross receipts asked by the city authorities was too great, Mr. Vought said. The picture will be shown at the Lyceum.

McKinney Gives Free Picture Shows.

Washington.—D. A. McKinney, who recently purchased the park concession at Eastside Park, in this city, from Harry Palmer, has arranged for the exhibition of free motion pictures as one of the main attractions. Just what effect the exhibition of free pictures will have on the trade at the downtown motion picture theaters remains to be seen.

Manager Maurice Entertains Soldiers.

Lafayette.—Two bushels of peaches were distributed among soldiers who were guests of Manager Maurice at a special showing of "My Four Years in Germany" at the Luna theater, last Tuesday, by John Shamiya, a Syrian fruit merchant, whose place of business adjoins the theater. As the soldiers from Camp Purdue, at Purdue University, filed out of the theater Shamiya met them on the outside and gave each a peach.

Show Films Depicting Child Sports.

South Bend.—Motion picture films illustrating various activities suitable for children's playgrounds were shown at the LaSalle theater Thursday and Friday. The pictures were filmed by the Ford Motor Company, of Detroit, and were brought to the LaSalle through the efforts of F. E. Wolfe, municipal recreation director of South Bend.

Charge Portland Exhibitors Sublet Films

Matter Brought Before Northwest Film Board of Trade—Organization Takes Action Against Offending Picture Men.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE, WASH.—Several Seattle film concerns have brought to the notice of the Northwest Film Board of Trade the fact that two or three exhibitors in Portland have been subletting film booked for their own theaters alone and have been receiving pay for it. One or two of them actually went so far as to "bicycle" the film from one house to another in the same evening. The matter of collection for the films thus used without authority has been placed in the hands of counsel of the Board of Trade, and the members of the organization have agreed not to sign any more contracts with the offending exhibitors until the bills are paid.

Kleine Picture Breaks Town Records.

Bellingham—The showing of "The Unbeliever" at the American theater in Bellingham on July 4 broke all records for motion pictures in that town. The box receipts were $1,010.20. Fred Walton, the manager, decided he was fully justified in his recent expenditure of $6,500 on the improvement of the lobby and foyer alone. That same day in the patriotic parade in Bellingham "The Unbeliever" float designed by W. J. Drummond, Seattle Kleine manager, and Mr. Walton received the first prize.

Pershing's Film at the Metropolitan.

"Pershing's Crusaders" has been placed by the Exhibitors' exchange in Seattle at the Metropolitan theater, a legitimate house, where it is playing to very good business.

E. J. Fisher Elected Secretary.

The Washington Theater Managers' Association met on July 2 and elected Edward J. Fischer secretary to take the place of George Ruge, who resigned in order to be ready to answer his call in the draft, which he expects very soon. Mr. Fischer was also appointed as delegate to the National Convention in Boston.

Picture Stars Visit Seattle.

Seattle picture fans have been all "a-flutter" for the last few days over the arrival of Madame Petrova and Clara Kimball Young within three days of each other. Madame Petrova came on Saturday, July 13, on her tour of the country taken for the purpose of selling War Savings Stamps, and Clara Kimball Young arrived on Tuesday, July 16, on her own recruiting tour of the Pacific Coast cities. Madame Petrova appeared twice at the Liberty theater, where she received a great ovation. At each performance she made a very clever and touching speech and sang a patriotic song, then she and her manager, Bob North, collected pledges for $13,919 worth of War Savings Stamps. Before arriving in Seattle, Madame Petrova had sold during her tour $300,000 worth of stamps. The first $1,000 worth subscribed for in Seattle was pledged by J. G. Von Herberg, managing director of the Jensen and Von Herberg houses in Seattle. Madame Petrova left Seattle Saturday night for Minneapolis, making the first big jump of her journey homeward.

Clara Kimball Young made her appearances to motion picture fans at the Coliseum Tuesday afternoon and evening. She was received with great enthusiasm. On Tuesday evening her auto was escorted through the streets of the downtown section by several companies of navy men, and she afterward addressed a large gathering at the skating arena, obtaining 150 recruits for the navy. In Portland, where she visited just previous to her Seattle visit, she obtained 55 recruits. She left Wednesday morning for Tacoma, and proceeded Thursday to Spokane.

Publicity Manager "Pulls" Good Stunt.

Rippy's Cafe on Pike street, Seattle, owes some very handsome decorations to the fact that it is the official downtown eating place of the motion picture trade. An entire wall has been covered with photographs of Artcraft and Paramount stars and Mack Sennett bathing girls, all in fine panel frames. The idea was suggested and worked out by V. J. Kennedy, publicity manager at the Seattle Artcraft-Paramount office.

Exchange Personals.

C. D. Beale and Alex Singelow are the newly appointed salesmen for Kleine in the Washington and Oregon territories.

W. J. Drummond, Northwest Kleine manager, left this week for Montana to look over the new territory which came under his jurisdiction with the closing of the Salt Lake City office.

H. G. Rosebaum, manager of the Artcraft-Paramount office is in Spokane this week.

J. E. Madson, formerly office manager of the Seattle Mutual exchange, and well known in film circles, is now in training at Camp Lewis.

Seattle's film row is to lose three of its best known film men to the military training camps this week. They are S. P. Peck, assistant manager of the Exhibitors' Film exchange; Emil Nelson, booker at the Universal office and Harry Arthur, Jr., of the De Luxe Feature Film Company.

Exhibitor Personals.

W. E. Tebbetts, of the Alhambra theater, Portland, paid a very pleasant visit to Seattle exchanges this week. Other out-of-town exhibitors who visited film row were W. H. Connors, Folly theater, Stanwood; W. G. Ripley, Western Amusement Company, Aberdeen; Mrs. W. Malone, Charleston; Mr. and Mrs. L. L. Williams, Orpheum, Snohomish; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. Stannard, Gem and Wenatchee theaters, Wenatchee; C. E. McKee, Orpheum, Everett.

Making Shows More Interesting.

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Fred Dolle, manager of the Alamo theater, Louisville, in a recent interview stated that the exhibitors could make their shows far more interesting if they could arrange with the local newspapers and associated press to get any big news which might break after the evening newspapers were off the streets and before the morning papers could be obtained. In many cases the news is of much interest, but not big enough to warrant the newspapers in getting out an extra. On one or two occasions lately Mr. Dolle has received advance news during the evening shows, and has flashed such matter on the screen with excellent results. He believes that in event the theaters could arrange to flash big stuff on the screens during the evening hours it would make the show more interesting and thereby hold attendance better at the night shows.

Walter Trusner Dies in Service.

Louisville—Walter Trusner, 21 years of age, formerly a well known moving picture operator of the Falls Cities, including Louisville, New Albany, and Jeffersonville, died on Wednesday, July 17, at a hospital in France of pneumonia. Mr. Trusner enlisted in August, 1917, in the navy, and was a second class seaman attached to the transport Erny. The news was telegraphed to Mrs. Trusner by the War Department. He is survived by his mother and two brothers, Edward and James Trusner. He was born in Salem, Ind., lived in New Albany for several years, and enlisted at Cincinnati. His death marked the first reported loss of any man connected with the picture business of the Falls Cities, although there are a number under the colors.

Theaters Run Sunday, Despite Decision.

In spite of the decision against the Ben Ali theater for operating on Sunday the theaters are continuing Sunday operations. Alfred Combs, representing the Churchmen's Committee, stated that he had about thirty charges against each house, and would secure more, and expected to continue trying the houses on one case and then another.

Mr. and Mrs. Dolle on Vacation.

Fred Dolle, of the Alamo theater, has gone to Graham Springs, Ky., where he and Mrs. Dolle will spend a three weeks' vacation.

Build Picture Theaters Near Camp.

Reports have been heard for several days past to the effect that the new artillery cantonment proposed for West Point, Ky., and later for Stithton, Ky., would be moved elsewhere due to high land values. However, recent advices from Washington, while not official, report that the Stithton location has been definitely settled upon. The site at West Point, it was learned, was subject to overflow during high water in the Ohio River. Several moving picture concerns have located site at West Point and Stithton for picture houses in event the camp goes in, as it will have a capacity of 55,000 men, with no theaters within twenty-five miles.

Court House Now a Picture Theater.

Shelbyville, Ky.—The court house was converted into a moving picture theater during the showing of the Ambassador Gerard picture, "My Four Years in Germany."

McArthur Resigns from Regal Films.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—H. H. McArthur, formerly of the Metro and recently manager of the Regal Film Company, has resigned his position here and will go to Charlottetown to manage a theater there. He has leased the townhall auditorium, a large place, and suitable for a motion picture house. The other theater in Charlottetown, the Prince Edward, is under lease to F. G. Spencer of St. John.

Holds Benefit for French Red Cross.

Another fine performance was held in the Imperial theater this week, the occasion being an appeal for the French Red Cross. The theater was leased for four performances and pictures were shown, local talent assisting in the entertainment with tableaux and songs. The Vitagraph picture "For France" was used, Manager Golding showing it on the following day. The Specialty Film Import, with their usual generosity, gave a beautiful colored scenic which was much enjoyed. A large sum of money was raised for the cause and the enthusiasm was great, as it was the night of the reception of the news that the French and Americans were doing so splendidly at the front. W. C. McKay of the St. John Opera House allowed some of his vaudeville to take part in the performance, and asked for girls attired as Red Cross nurses to collect in his theater. A picture of the Y. W. P. A. usherettes at the Imperial theater was published in the Toronto Saturday Night with an explanation of their patriotic work.

Use Zoo Animals with "Tarzan" Film.

CINCINNATI, O.—Some rather striking publicity stuff in connection with the engagement at the Grand Opera House of "Tarzan of the Apes" was aided materially by the fact that the Cincinnati Zoo is one of the finest in the world. The management of the Grand, at the suggestion of the representatives handling the picture, used some influence with the Zoo authorities, and managed to secure the use of some tropical animals and birds for the engagement. Properly placed among the tropical foliage in the lobby of the theater, these added exhibits lent an atmosphere which did splendid work for the picture, with its jungle scenes and characters.

Manager Libson Shows "Cleopatra."

The reappearance in Cincinnati of Fox's great spectacle, "Cleopatra," featuring Theda Bara, so soon after its recent initial appearance in the Queen City at the Grand, at high prices, was a pleasant surprise for picture fans, and Manager Libson was the envy of brother exhibitors on account of his success in securing the picture for exhibition at popular prices. The regular Walnut admission charge of 15 cents prevailed.

Work on Palace Progressing Rapidly.

Work on the big Palace theater on Sixth street is progressing rapidly since the foundations were put in. Scarcity of labor and some difficulties connected with the movement of materials have hampered progress somewhat, but the work is being pushed with all possible speed, in order that the building may be completed as early in the winter as possible. It is not now hoped that it can be finished in the fall, as was originally intended.

Frank Hines, Operator, Dead.

Frank Hines, one of the first moving picture operators in Cincinnati, and a charter member of the local organization of operators, died on Friday, July 12, after a brief illness. His funeral was attended by nearly every operator in the city, being set at an hour when most of them could get away.

Intersperses Picture Program with Songs

The innovation introduced by the management of the Lyric theater in the form of song numbers interspersed through the moving picture programs seems to have met with the approval of the public, judging by such comments as have been heard, and by the fact that the feature is being continued. While the effort which was more or less general several years ago among exhibitors to add something to their attractions in the way of vaudeville numbers was long ago dropped as inadvisable, the Lyric idea is to give patrons a little change by the presentation of popular songs rendered in clever style, and the applause which the singers receive shows that the idea is liked.

Navy Department Thanks Serkowich.

H. Serkowich, secretary of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of the Chamber of Commerce, as well as of the Associated Film Exchanges of the Chamber, has been doing splendid work for the Government ever since the United States entered the war, and is still so engaged, in addition to giving his usual expert attention to the work of the organizations named. Aside from aiding in naval recruiting, both in person and by his influence, especially among the moving picture theaters, and doing some other work for the Navy which has been highly successful, Mr. Serkowich has guided the operations of the Four-Minute Men in a way which has helped them and has been very acceptable to the exhibitors as well. He has been honored by the heartily expressed thanks of the Navy Department, in which his patriotism and energy are warmly referred to.

New Second Vice-President a Baltimorean

National League in Convention at Boston Elects J. Louis Rome, Counsel for Maryland Exhibitors' League, and Prominent Exhibitor, for the Office.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

BALTIMORE, MD. J. Louis Rome, counsel for the Maryland Exhibitors' League, and one of Baltimore's most progressive managers, who has charge of the Broadway theater, 509 South Broadway, and the Baltimore theater, 3205 Fait avenue, has been elected second vice-president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America.

Mr. Rome is well known to the trade in Baltimore. He is originally from Philadelphia, but has been in Baltimore for twelve years. He attended the Baltimore City College here and graduated from the University of Maryland Law School. Besides his activities in the moving picture field he has a good law practice.

Mr. Rome has been connected with the Broadway theater as manager for three years. Prior to this time the Broadway had been in other hands, and had been destroyed by fire. He was one of the organizers of the new company which rebuilt the structure.

J. Louis Rome.

It is stated that when his name was placed on the ballot for the office at the National Convention which was held in Boston from July 16 to 20 he was unanimously elected.

Frank A. Hornig, president of the Maryland Exhibitors' League, and Louis A. De Hoff, secretary of that organization, who, with Mr. Rome, acted as delegates to the convention, were greatly pleased with the manner in which the Boston exhibitors received and entertained the delegates from all over the country to the convention.

Louis A. DeHoff, who is manager of the New theater, 210 West Lexington street, was named on the War Service Committee, and Frank A. Hornig, who is manager of the Horn and Royal theaters, of Baltimore, was placed on the Committee of By-laws and Finance.

Baltimore Brevities.

Word has been received by John T. Ford, co-proprietor of Ford's opera house, from his son, Frank M. Ford, that he has arrived safely on the other side. About the time war was declared young Ford enlisted in the army, and was assigned to the 104th Military Police at Camp McClellan.

Charles Young, who before becoming a member of the 18th Company, 154th Depot Brigade at Camp Meade, was known in Baltimore as a vaudeville and moving picture theater singer, died on Saturday, July 20, at Camp Meade after an illness of about 10 days.

Victory Rally at Garden.

A patriotic mass meeting and entertainment was held at the Garden theater, Lexington street at Park avenue, to celebrate the victory of the Allied forces over the Huns on Sunday night, July 21.

The show was given by Charles E. Whitehurst, president of the Garden Theater Company, and arrangements for the affair were made by L. A. DeHoff, his photoplay supervisor. It is understood that Mr. Whitehurst said the show was given so that the people might see what the boys "over there" are actually doing.

There was a program of several entertaining features, and moving pictures of the "American Battle Front" and "Fighting on the Italian Front" were shown. The public was admitted free of charge, and a large number of people took advantage of the opportunity to see pictures of the fighters of the various nations.

Cleveland News Letter

Stork Theater to Open in August.

CLEVELAND, O.—The only large new theater so far to be built in 1918 in Cleveland is almost completed, and will open the early part of August. This is the Stork theater on Lorain avenue, which seats nearly 1,000.

This house has been a source of speculation among exhibitors on the west side for months. Several wanted to lease it, and put in bids to the owners, but the man who finally got the lease is Howard Reif, owner of the Ridge theater in the same neighborhood. Reif took a fifteen-year lease on the house at a total rental of $130,000. The building itself cost about $75,000.

Exhibitors Are Slow in Slide Returns.

A deplorable condition has resulted in Cleveland exchange poster departments, especially in regard to the return of slides.

One exchange manager said he visited 50 theaters in a week and went into the booths of each one, where he found a total of about 800 slides. About one-third of them were for patriotic campaigns, while the rest were for features which the theaters had ran.

Roberts Managing Finishing Plant.

J. N. Roberts has purchased an interest in the Mounting & Finishing Company, Sloan building, Cleveland, and is now in charge of the plant.

Mr. Roberts formerly was manager of the Wertsner mounting plant, Cleveland, but has been in New York for several months. Besides mounting his company is making cut-outs for lobby display and special work.

Erdmann with Famous Players.

George W. Erdmann, who recently left the Cleveland Foursquare office, has accepted a position with the Cleveland exchange of the Famous Players-Lasky Company. He is now on the road doing special work.

Detroit Leads in First-Run Picture Shows

Six Big Theaters Have Already Signed Up for Initial Showings—Opening of Fall Season Will Probably Witness Eight.

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Bldg., Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—From the increased number of first-run houses in Detroit next season it looks very much as if no good pictures need go begging for first-run showings. The Madison, Washington, and Adams theaters will shown first-run pictures, changing weekly. These are John H. Kunsky houses. The Broadway-Strand, owned by Messrs. Garson and Gleichman, will again show first-run pictures, changing weekly. The Majestic, now closed, will reopen sometime in August with big first-run pictures. M. W. McGee continues as the managing director. The Regent, Woodward, and the Boulevard will adopt a new policy of first-run pictures. There is considerable talk of the Colonial theater, Woodward, and Sibley going to first-run pictures under its new ownership. The Detroit opera house, if it is not torn down, will probably continue showing pictures, and they will be the first-run kind.

The number of theaters showing first-run pictures next season puts Detroit in first rank as the leading theater city in the country. New York has only three first-run exclusive picture theater—the Rialto, Rivoli, and the Strand. Chicago has practically none, while most of the larger cities have only one or two. Think of Detroit with six first-run theaters as a positive certainty, and the probability of there being eight.

The Regent theater, Woodward and the Grand Boulevard, Detroit, which was operated last season as a combination vaudeville and picture house, will start September 1 with first-run pictures only. This is the announcement just made by Charles H. Miles, the lessee.

Mr Miles will have a 50-piece symphony orchestra, and already he has engaged Ward J. Hutton, who for three years led the orchestra at the Majestic theater. Mr. Miles has also engaged Henry Santrey, who sang for nearly two years at the Majestic theater. He will remain at the Regent for an indefinite run. Santry was a tremendous hit at the Majestic, and he should prove equally popular at the Regent. Mr Miles has not decided as to the prices, but the policy will be one matinee daily and two shows at night, with performances continuous on Sundays.

Colonial Theater Changes Hands.

The Colonial theater, Woodward and Sibley streets, Detroit, seating 1,700, and one of the most beautiful and modern photoplay houses in the country, has been leased by Frank Farrington to Lou and Lou Cohen and Herman Warren, effective the 1st of August. The lease, which is for the entire building, including stores and offices, runs for twenty-eight years, and the net rental the first year is approximately $18,000, with a graduated scale for the balance of the lease period. The present policy of the Colonial is daily change, with popular prices.

Messrs Cohen and Warren now control the third largest chain of theaters in Detroit, being exceeded only by John H. Kunsky Enterprises and the Woodward Theater Company. Besides the Colonial they operate the Globe theater on Grand River, the Coliseum on Greenwood, and the Rex on West Fort street. Ben Cohen and Herman Warren will give the four houses their entire attention. The third partner, Lou Cohen, is in France with the Motor Truck Division of the American Expeditionary Forces. Offices of Messrs. Cohen and Warren will be on the third floor of the theater building, from where they will transact all their business for their chain of theaters.

Exhibitors' Directors Board Meets.

A meeting of the Board of Directors of the American Exhibitors' Association, of Michigan, was held at the Hotel Tuller, July 23. A number of matters were discussed. There was also a meeting of the stockholders of the Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, of Michigan, for the purpose of getting the stock paid for in order that the unit can be thoroughly established. Among those present from out of town were W. S. Butterfield, of Battle Creek, and Charles Seaman, of Grand Rapids.

Riley of Colonial Theater Resigns.

T. C. Riley, house manager of the Colonial theater, Detroit, and former manager of the Grand Circus theater, has tendered his resignation, and will devote most of his time in the future to getting recruits for the United States Navy.

July Draft Hits Film Business.

The July draft has hit the film business hard. Among those who were either called or enlisted were the following:

Dave Palferman, office manager of the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, who went to Camp Custer.

Ray Branch, formerly with the Universal, and at one time in the theater equipment business, went to Camp Custer.

Forrest Little, shipping clerk of Metro, went to Camp Custer.

George Davidson, booker at the Madison Film exchange, went to Camp Custer.

C. B. Stuart, recently with the Universal, is now with the Engineer Corps at Camp Custer.

Leon Welsh, motion picture operator of the Ferry Field theater, went to Camp Custer.

Joseph A. Parthan, bookkeeper at the George Kleine exchange, joined the navy.

Michigan Small Items.

Bert Weddige, of the Michigan Motion Picture Supply Company, Detroit, has just taken the Michigan agency for Minusa Screens and Hertner Transverters. In addition, Bert represents the Simplex and National Carbons, so that he has a strong line of merchandise.

C. H. Weeks, brother of George Weeks, assistant manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange in Detroit, has affiliated with the same branch as traveling representative.

Lipp and Cross, of Battle Creek, have placed a $5,000 order with the United Theater Equipment branch in Detroit for Powers machines, Velvet Gold Fibre screen, and other equipment for their new house and their other chain of theaters.

Paul J. Schlossman, of Muskegon, was in Detroit recently, having toured in via Chicago. He reported excellent July business. Mr. Schlossman operates the Regent, Majestic, Rialto, and Elite theaters in Muskegon, and the Robinhood, of Grand Haven, Mich.

George Towle and William Seifert are now affiliated with the Strand Features, Detroit.

The Standard Film Service, Detroit, has purchased the state rights on the Kerrigan reissues, short-reel subjects.

Minneapolis News Letter

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Petrova Nets Big W. S. S. Sale.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN. — Mme. Olga Petrova has departed from the Twin Cities leaving an impression that will not wear off for a long time, and the War Savings Stamps are about $18,000 richer. Due to a change in train schedules Mme. Petrova did not arrive in Minneapolis until Tuesday, July 16, at midnight. The next day she spoke and sang six times in the Twin Cities, reviewed a detachment of jackies, watched a special ten-oared cutter race at Lake Calhoun, and visited with friends. At noon the star addressed an open air meeting at Rice Park, St. Paul, selling about $2,600 worth of stamps. From the park she went to the St. Paul New Garrick, where she spoke, sang, and sold about $2,200 worth of stamps. Leaving the St. Paul Garrick the star went to the Minneapolis New Garrick, where she spoke, sang, and sold about $5,100 worth of stamps. From the New Garrick she was escorted to the Dunwoody parade by a detachment of jackies, a naval band, and letter carriers. At the parade over six hundred jackies passed in review. Following the review she sold a thousand dollars worth of stamps in about five minutes, and proceeded to the lake to see the boat race. After returning from the lake she lunched and spoke to overflow houses at two performances at the Minneapolis New Garrick adding $5,000 more to her local stamp records. She wound up her day's work by selling over $3,750 worth of stamps at the St. Paul New Garrick. "Tempered Steel" was shown at both Garricks during Mme. Petrova's visit.

First National Exchange Moves.

The First National Exhibitors' Circuit exchange moved its offices from 719 Hennepin avenue to the fourth floor of the Film Exchange building July 19. In the future the First National will conduct its business entirely separate from the local Universal exchange, whose offices it has shared since the circuit was formed. E. R. Pearson will continue as First National manager, and will add several new men to his staff of workers.

W. F. Bowman Called to Colors.

Walter F. Bowman, advertising manager for "Amusements," Northwest trade weekly, and one of the best known film workers in the territory, will answer Uncle Sam's call July 26. Mr Bowman will report to Camp Wadsworth, S. C.

Draft Board Reclassifies Proctor.

Ralph O. Proctor, district manager for Pathe, who has been in and around Minneapolis so often that he has become "one of the boys," has been reclassified in the National Army draft, and has been called to Chicago for examination preparatory to leaving for camp.

Breezes from Film Town.

Harry Hellweg, former Metro booker, has joined the road staff of the Universal exchange.

Alex Bernstein, booker for the Kleine exchange, reported to Camp Wadsworth, S. C., for National Army duty July 22. Alex is to be succeeded by his sister.

Arthur Solle, booker for the Friedman Film Corporation, has also joined the National Army at Uncle Sam's request. He will be succeeded by Izzy Friedman.

Thomas Burke, manager of the Westcott, is still another local film man to rally to the colors during the last few days.

Lynn S. Card, representing the United States Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, closed a deal with Manager Frank Thayer, of the Supreme exchange, recently whereby the Supreme will distribute U. S. productions throughout the Northwest. The pictures to go under Supreme direction are "Nine-Tenths of the Law," "The Crucible of Life," and "Just a Woman."

Buffalo News Letter

Buffalo Exhibitors Observe Order.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—After their rigorous training last winter in regard to lightless nights Buffalo exhibitors experience little difficulty in observing the United States Fuel Administrator's latest orders that theater, advertising and other signs must not be illuminated on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of each week. Last winter an occasional exhibitor failed to observe the no-light rule and was either warned by the authorities to fall into line and obey the law or instead had his electricity cut off for a few evenings. It is not expected that there will be any wilful infractions of the latest ruling in the moving picture business.

Brink Anxious to Get the Kaiser.

Earl R. Brink of Buffalo didn't require many "setting-up" exercises to give him the bearing of a real soldier. He was in the picture of health when he left this city recently to join the colors. A late picture of Earl appears herewith. He was formerly booker and assistant manager of the Famous Players-Lasky exchange, Buffalo, under D. J. Savage. Private Brink joined Company G, 304 Ammunition Train, as inspector, etc., of motor trucks at Camp Meade, Maryland.

"They are all packed and ready for overseas, and no doubt they are on their way by this time," wrote his father from Chicago. "Private Brink is in good condition and feels fine and ready for the Kaiser."

The young man's father, Howard F. Brink, was formerly sales manager of the Famous Players-Lasky Company, Buffalo. Mr. Brink, Sr., is now manager of the William L. Sherry Service at Chicago. He reports business very good for this time of year.

Carey Wilson Visits Buffalo.

Carey Wilson, who covers east of Utica for the New York office of the First National Exchange, Inc., was a Buffalo visitor. He was here in connection with the official Government war film, "Pershing's Crusaders."

Thirteen Houston Censors Now Deadheads

Council of Texas City Makes It Pretty Soft for Baker's Dozen of Truly Good and Says It Will Soak Any Exhibitor from $25 to $200 Who Says Them Nay, Nay.

By Phil E. Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Texas.

DALLAS, TEX.—Down at Houston managers are not permitted to collect the war tax from the members of the board of censors. The Houston City Council at a recent meeting passed with the emergency clause an amendment to the ordinance creating the board of censors providing a penalty for the refusal on the part of any theater manager to admit a member of the board without charge. This means that members of the board may enter theaters at any time in the course of their official duties without the payment of war tax. The penalty provided is a fine of not less than $25 and not more than $200. There are eleven members of the board, but any three may hold a hearing and render a decision which is binding unless an appeal is taken.

Arrives Safely at a Foreign Port.

Mrs. Roy Brockman, manager of the Queen at McKinney, has received a message saying that her husband has reached a foreign port safely. Roy Brockman and his brother, T. S. Brockman, formerly conducted the Queen at McKinney, but when the call for men came he joined the colors and was sent to Camp Travis at San Antonio, Tex. He was sent overseas after a short training.

Unique Lobby Display at Old Mill.

Manager LeRoy Bickel, of Metro, Dallas, got back to town after a visit to his mother up in Indiana in time to see the magnificent manner in which Hulsey's Old Mill theater put on "To Hell with the Kaiser." The Old Mill lobby was a unique symphony in simulated hell fire, the work of a local painter with a big fund of imagination.

Racing to Get World Trophy.

Managers Douglas Hawley, of the Dallas exchange, and Jack Brainard, of the Oklahoma exchange, First National Exhibitors' Circuit, are running a race with each other in addition to the national race for the Moving Pcture World trophy on the biggest booking of "Pershing's Crusaders." Each expects to have his photo, together with that of his salesmen, in the World as the winners.

Interesting Texas Brevities.

C. J. Musselman, of the Grand at Paris, has returned from an automobile trip to the seashore at Galveston. He stopped at Dallas long enough on his way home to book "Pershing's Crusaders" for an early run.

Auditor L. T. Pellerin, of the Dallas office, First National Exhibitors' Circuit, is back from Oklahoma City, where he installed C. H. Isom as chief bookkeeper.

Tom Gaines, of the Best at Hillsboro, was in Dallas this week with his usual ideas of prices for big features unmodified.

T. R. Barnard, of the Star at Cooledge, filled his house to capacity recently when he booked "My Four Years in Germany" by using plenty of paper in the rural districts around his town. They came to town on foot, in wagons and autos, he says.

Pictures in Parks.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Free moving pictures are being shown in the parks of Nashville each night, with the exception of Sunday; this practice to be continued under the auspices of the city park commission until September 14. The pictures are being distributed among the various parks, a portable projection machine being employed to make the changes.

Navy Recruits Entertained.

Nashville.—Manager Harry Sudekum, of the Princess theater, recently entertained a consignment of fifty young Tennesseans who volunteered in the navy at his house. They were given a reserved block of seats in the theater, and were enthusiastic over the hospitality of Mr. Sudekum prior to their departure for a naval training camp at Newport, R. I.

Memphis Theater Sold.

Memphis.—The Lincoln theater, a negro moving picture house of Memphis, has changed management, and is now on the string with the Grand and Daisy theaters. Several improvements have been noted in its plan of operation, as well as the program of pictures offered. The Lincoln has been enjoying good business, and has furnished splendid entertainment for the colored people during the summer months.

Clarksdale House Thrives.

Memphis.—Manager Utley, owner of the new Marion theater at Clarksdale, Miss., which is one of the finest in the South, declared recently that his house was enjoying a splendid business since being opened. The theater is located on the ground floor of a new office building, and every item of comfort and quality has been observed toward making it a first class show house.

Tops War Pictures.

Nashville. — "Pershing's Crusaders," booked at the Fifth Avenue theater for the week of July 22, was probably the most talked-of war picture appearing in Nashville since the outbreak of the European conflict. Extensive advertising coupled with talk on the streets brought capacity houses each night.

A special orchestra was engaged at the Fifth Avenue for the production. Full double-page advertisements appeared in the Sunday papers. This picture was one of the select few shown in Nashville which was covered in a criticism by a staff member of the newspapers. Critics gave the film a splendid boost.

New Show Signs.

Nashville.—New signs are appearing along Nashville's film row. At the Elite a new arrangement for lobby display has been brought out by the Crescent Amusement Company. The side columns of the lobby have been encased in glass much on the order of a photographer's gallery. Pictures of portrait size have been exhibited, and have attracted much attention.

At the Fifth Avenue, operated by the same company, the old sign showing the name of the house has been removed and a new oval-shaped affair installed, with a changeable feature which permits the film star's picture to be shown over the sidewalk in electric light, and with room underneath for the title of the picture.

The Princess theater also has a new sign in process of installation, which will add much to the attractiveness of exterior decorative effect.

"MICKEY"

W. H. Productions Ready with Eight-Reel Feature Starring Mabel Normand.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

THE very morning this typist looked at "Mickey" in the projection room of W. H. Productions, Mabel Normand had been fined $2 by Judge House for violating traffic regulations in trying to learn the details of running an automobile while she used the English side of the thoroughfare. Spurning the opportunity for further publicity, Miss Normand was sparing of her remarks to the reporters to this very limited extent:

"I was so scared I didn't know what to do." This from the lady we saw doing breathlessly venturesome "stunts" during the progress of "Mickey" created a problem to wit: How did Miss Normand keep her face straight in conveying the terror at driving an automobile at shank's pace while being "snarfled" into the mysteries of "auto driving"?

In "Mickey," Miss Normand plainly defines and illustrates the word "thrill" as applied to motion pictures as she swirls along from cliff to cliff in a mountain range of recklessness. So much has been written about "Mickey" in line of advance heralding that a little more can do no possible harm. On the contrary these expressions may aid the picture-showman in sensing what "Mickey" may mean to his coffers by the grace of its power.

"Mickey" is a digest of the science of producing motion pictures. It has everything imaginable that might be conceived by the most inventive producer past or present, to put "thrills" into films and project "punches" upon the screen. Probably a third of the footage is devoted to opportunities for Miss Normand to breeze through scenes of genuinely laughable incidentals. She proves herself the feminine and artistically concentrated essence of a Chaplin-Fairbanks combination of humor and agility.

She is as lively as a cluster of hair-springs, supple as a rubber band, and as charming as the pretty girl she is might rightfully be expected to be. "Shinnying" up trees, romping over jagged rocks, rolling down a rugged hillside, running and leaping like a mountain goat from crag to crag, and take high dives in "altogether" illusions that any Kellermann might turn her head to envy. Then commences the transition to Mabel Normand the sensational.

Mickey, the Normand character, becomes a Cinderella—with a "kick." She takes the "worst of it" like a swimmer breasts a billow, and comes back at her antagonists with liberal interest. Preyed upon by covetous and distant relatives who believe at first that she is rich only to later conclude that she's poor, Mickey takes matters as they come, and wins the man she loves without much more than half trying.

Further along when time comes to end the film because films must end—there is an intervening "fight" for the possession of Mickey's "personality" that is a splendid example of direction. Incidentally, Miss Normand defends herself on the keen jump, climbing poles, clambering over roofs whizzing down the shingles, and swinging off by her hands to dangle until her brave hero comes to the deadly rescue.

There are mad races between trains and motors rattling "chases" on horseback an ear-filling ballroom scene, and everything else that is known to filmdom—even to having some "eats." "Mickey" is motion picture epitomized and mighty good motion pictures as well.

"The Story" "Great Scott!" Is it to be expected that an eight-reel story must be told here? The W. H. Productions have the films handy, and the exhibitor who likes to satisfy his patrons and give them healthful measure would be wise not alone to see the story, but the feature itself to show the things that motion pictures stand for in their best representations.

Mabel Normand in "Mickey" is all we have been led to expect—and then some.

"SCANDAL MONGERS"

Reissue of Former Lois Weber Production Presents Vital Subject, But Recalls Early Methods.

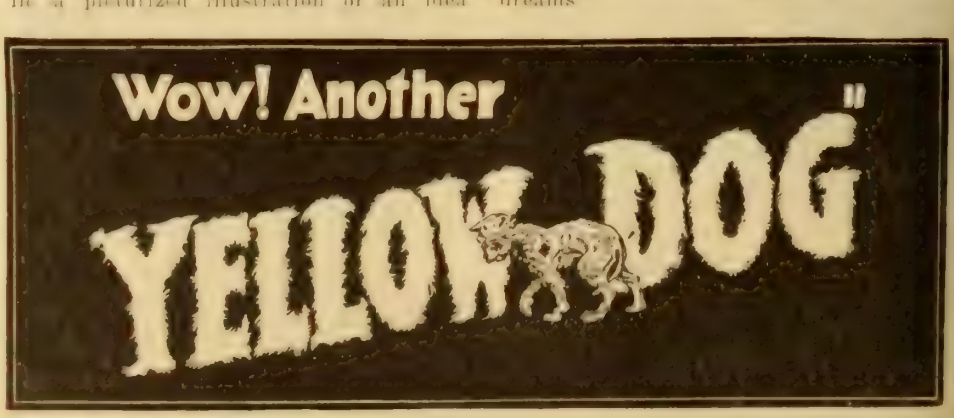
Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald

IN reissuing the former Lois Weber success "Scandal" under the title of "Scandal Mongers" the Bluebird Photoplays, Inc., is presenting to the public a picturized illustration of an idea which will bear repeating. It is difficult at the same time to give the accurate review of a production which must of necessity face the criticism which a lapse of years with its accompanying changes and strides toward perfection of picture production brings. "Scandal Mongers" at the time when it was produced, some three years ago, was considered one of the best, and was written and produced by a talented feminine director who since that time has worked and advanced.

To those unfamiliar with the idea of "Scandal Mongers" which, by the way, tells its story in its name, we will say briefly that the story consists of incidents which reveal the unspeakable harm wrought by the manufacturer of gossip. The breaking up of happy homes and the creation of tragedy through its influence are the high points of the story.

"THE DREAM LADY"

Bluebird Adaptation of Margaret Widdemer's Novel "Why Not?" Features Carmel Myers.



Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald

THE five-part Bluebird production, "The Dream Lady," is based on a pleasant idea, and is an adaptation of Margaret Widdemer's novel, "Why Not?" Elsie Jane Wilson directed the picture, with Carmel Myers playing the leading role, supported by Thomas Holding, Kathleen Emerson, Harry V. Meter, Philo McCullough and Elizabeth Janes. To make the best of a story of this sort in picturized form would require elaborate means, for the reason that its lure is more or less fantastical. The Bluebird version will, however, be found pleasing, for it would be impossible for the average person not to be interested in making dreams come true.

The story tells us of a young girl who has lived with a grouchy old uncle who at his death left her a small inheritance. This inheritance she immediately cashes in at the bank, buys herself the little house on the edge of a wood, for which she has always longed, and becomes what she herself terms a "professional realizer of dreams." Here she not only tries to make her own dreams come true, but also finds pleasure in making other people realize their fondest dreams. A touch of drama is brought into the story when she leads a friend astray in the choice of an investment. This latter incident is associated with the realization of her love dreams.

"A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT"

Blue Ribbon Vitagraph Production Features Pleasing Cast of Characters.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE value of an underlying idea in a story is demonstrated in this five-reel Vitagraph number, adapted from a narrative by Wallace Irwin and directed by David Smith. In this case one of the leading characters, Professor Antree, believes in an old Pagan law that when a man's life has been saved by another, the life thereafter belongs to the man who saved it. While the action of the plot itself is quite conventional, so far as the various incidents are concerned, there is always this idea back of it all which exerts a steady pull on the interest.

Briefly stated, the hero, Allen Spargo, and Professor Antree both love Theresa Kane. Allen, after winning her promise of marriage, goes west to make his fortune. He is injured in a mining accident and a western girl, through jealousy, writes Theresa that he is dead. Theresa is finally prevailed upon to marry Antree. Allen appears on the scene just after the ceremony. Theresa immediately deserts Antree and flies west to join Allen. Antree follows and threatens to kill Allen, but the latter, who had once saved Antree's life, exhibits the paper in which Antree announced himself as Allen's bond-slave, according to his own strange belief. Antree later upsets a canoe, in which they are seated, permitting himself to drown while Allen saves Theresa.

The plot is both odd and unusual, and while it places the hero in a rather unheroic attitude, it grips the interest of the observer until the very end. The fight in the mine is well staged.

The cast is a proficient one throughout. Alfred Whitman plays the part of Allen, Nell Shipman appears as Theresa and Juan de la Cruze portrays Professor Antree.

"A SOLDIER'S OATH"

William Farnum Featured in Five-Part Fox Special Interprets Tragic Role.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE military character of the five-part Fox special, "A Soldier's Oath," while it does not, strictly speaking, belong to any particular period, gives it an air of appropriateness at the present time. William Farnum is intrusted with the title role, a heroic character, which he is so well able to interpret. The picture was directed by Oscar Apfel, who also collaborated with Mary Murillo in the writing of the tragic story, and is of the sort to arouse interest and enthusiasm in the majority of audiences.

According to the story a French soldier bids farewell to wife and child to follow the flag of France to the battlefield. During one of the engagements he not only accomplishes some daring rescues, but is intrusted by a dying count with some family jewels which he has been carrying on his person. Giving his oath that he will deliver them safely to the count's heir he goes at the first opportunity to his own home and gives them into the keeping of his wife. A villainous character looking through the window watches the hiding of the jewels in the wall, and on the soldier's departure enters, kills the soldier's wife and steals the jewels. The husband, accused of the murder of his wife, is sentenced to life imprisonment. His sentence is later commuted because of a heroic act on the occasion of a prison fire, and through the course of events he comes face to face with his daughter, who has been adopted by a nobleman and who is about to be married against her will to the man who murdered her mother, now posing as the heir to the dead soldier's estate. The revealing of the man's crime leaves the girl free to marry her lover, and lifts the shadow from the character of the father.

"BEYOND THE SHADOWS"

Five-Reel Triangle Subject Features William Desmond in Story of Northwest.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS entertaining five-reel number was adapted to the screen by Charles J. Wilson, Jr., from a story by Ralph R. Westfall, and directed by J. W. McLaughlin. It excells in its depiction of the atmosphere of the Northwest, some extremely beautiful locations being shown, and the photography by Steve Norton is one of the strong features of the production.

The story itself is interesting and holds the attention, but it lacks suspense, and the dramatic material suffers from loose construction. It is probable that the picture attempts to show too much. If it had followed up a less number of incidents there would have been less jerkiness in the action, and the suspense would have been greater.

William Desmond appears as the hero, a youth named Jean, who undertakes the difficult task of free trading in the fur country, pitting his strength against the crooked company dealers. His own brother, Horace Du Bois, is numbered among the latter under an assumed name. Josie Sedgwick appears as Eleanor Wyatt, an orphan girl, who marries Horace, and later falls in love with Jean.

Many Indians appear in the cast of players and do some interesting work. No opportunity has been missed in giving a picturesque turn to the events, and the chief charm of this subject is in its splendid local color. The dramatic moments, while suffering from a lack of proper continuity, are enjoyable in themselves. The general fight at the settlement in the latter part of the story is well-staged.

"HANDS UP!"

First Installments of New Pathe Serial Appeal to Eye and Imagination.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

NOT only promise but performance as well may be found in the first episodes of this Astra-Pathe serial, "Hands Up!" The first number consists of three reels, and the second and subsequent installments will run two reels.

The story and settings are remarkable for their imaginative and picturesque attributes. This certainly marks another step forward for the adventure serial, and the tale, which was written by Gilson Willets, adapted by Jack Cunningham, and directed by James Horne, lends itself splendidly to the purpose. It is colorful, and contains abundant action. To be sure, the long arm of coincidence gets in some sweeping effects at times, but when has the romantic adventure tale been circumscribed by hampering probabilities to any great extent?

Ruth Roland appears as Echo Delane, a young magazine writer, who steps off a train in southern California, sent to collect material for an article on a band of Incas occupying the Mission of Sirocco. She meets the hero, "Hands Up!" manager of a nearby ranch, and asks him to take her to the mission. He does so, and the girl finds herself at once in the midst of all sorts of thrilling complications. She has the mark of the Rising Sun upon her brow, and the Incas think she is the girl of prophecy they have been expecting. This same mark also distinguishes her as the lost heir of the Strange ranch later along.

Some splendid pictorial effects have been achieved in the sun-worshipping scenes in the hall of the Incas. The scenes attending the sacrifice have been effectively staged, and there is fine suspense in the action itself.

One of the principal features of mystery connected with the story is the Phantom Rider, who seems destined to play an important role as it proceeds.

"FEDORA."

Famous Players-Lasky Production Features Pauline Frederick in Strong Role.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

PAULINE FREDERICK runs the emotional gamut in this five-reel Paramount offering. She does a notable piece of screen work as Fedora, heroine of Victorien Sardou's play of the same name. Her facial expressions in this number are worth the careful study of ambitious moving picture performers, since she carries one situation after another by the changing reflections in her features. Conflicting love and hatred, with love finally rising triumphant over the baser passion, form the chief motive of the play, which once served as a vehicle on the legitimate stage for Fanny Davenport and Sarah Bernhardt.

At the beginning Princess Fedora Romanoff is in love with Count Vladimir. The latter, unknown to herself, is entangled in an affair with Vanda, the wife of Count Ipanoff. The latter, learning of this, shoots Vladimir in cold blood. Fedora and Vladimir's father, chief of police of St. Petersburg, determine upon revenge.

Fedora follows Count Ipanoff to Paris, where she meets him in company with other Russian exiles. She wins his confidence and he even confesses his crime to her. She sends word of the confession back to Russia, which results in the execution of his brother and the subsequent death of his mother. But when she learns why Ipanoff killed Vladimir, all of Fedora's passionate hatred turns to love. Ipanoff at first despises her, since her interference led to the death of his brother and mother, but he in turn learns to forgive.

This strong dramatic material makes excellent subject matter for the screen, and has been given a well-balanced production by the director, Edouard Jose. Jere Austin, as Count Ipanoff, supplements agreeably the part of Fedora, and Wilmuth Merkyll is also effective as Vladimir. The settings and costuming are in pleasing accord with the story.

"THE FALLEN ANGEL"

Jewel Carmen Gives Pleasing Portrayal of Sister's Sacrifice in Five-Part Fox Special.

Reviewed by Margaret I. Macdonald.

THE Gouverneur Morris magazine story, "You Can't Get Away With It," forms the basis of the five-part Fox special for July 28, "The Fallen Angel." Jewel Carmen, the featured member of the cast, gives a fine portrayal of the role of a girl who sacrifices her good name for the sake of her dependent sisters. The production is well directed and leaves little to be desired in this respect. There is a question, however, as to the wholesomeness of the story. It runs as follows:

Three girls are left almost destitute by the death of a father who had provided them during his lifetime with every luxury. The most energetic of the three, burdened with providing a livelihood for the family, working at six dollars a week, finally becomes devitalized from her too heavy task and falls a prey to her employer, already a married man. His proposition of a home and luxury is presented to her in a rather unusual way, in which he warns her of the fact that if she accepts his proposal she must be willing to bear the contempt of society; in other words, "she can't get away with it." The time arrives when his prophecy comes bitterly true, and the death of the man, which occurs shortly after the blow falls, leaves her free to go abroad and start life anew. Here romance enters her life only to be struck dead. The moral of the production is in a sense saved by the unhappiness of its ending.

"BACK TO THE WOODS"

Mabel Normand Makes Good in Goldwyn Comedy-Drama.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

NOT since the days of her memorable Keystone efforts has Mabel Normand displayed her individual talent more satisfactorily than she has done in the five-part Goldwyn production, "Back to the Woods," which was released July 28. The story on the contrary is rather insipid, nor has the production been helped by its subtitles. The latter are numerous, and are often lacking in interesting or humorous quality. Miss Normand, however, is "there with the goods." Herbert Rawlinson in the role of a young novelist does good work. The construction of the picture is satisfactory. In fact, the director has done well with meagre material.

As the story runs the daughter of a rich lumber merchant in the hope of meeting a real man with whom she can fall in love undertakes to teach school in a country town owned by her father. She conceals her identity as the daughter of the lumber merchant, and is lured to the cabin of a young novelist, where she is led to believe that he means to assault her only to find out that she is being used as a model for a character in his novel. In retaliation for this she reveals her identity to the lumbermen, and also presents an order to them from her father to be used in time of emergency, and which states that they are to obey her commands. In the rough-and-tumble time that follows the novelist is shot, and is cared for by the young school teacher in a fit of remorse. The affair ends with their betrothal.

"THE GHOST OF THE RANCHO"

Lively Five-Reel Pathe Play Presents Combination of Drama and Humor.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel subject produced by the Anderson-Brunton Company from a story by Arthur Henry Gooden features Bryant Washburn and Rhea Mitchell. William Worthington adapted and directed the number.

The tale is amusing and entertaining throughout, and winds up with a ghost episode, but it is not of the sort that will shock sensitive observers. The ghost is far too human for that, and even holds up the principal villains at the point of a gun.

Bryant Washburn, always an agreeable player in the lighter roles, is in this instance cast as Jeffrey Wall, grandson of a millionaire. Jeff has been playing fast and loose with life, having a good time in the cabarets and enjoying himself generally. His grandfather puts his foot down on this procedure, and Jeff promises to be good after he has given just one more party. At this affair he falls in love with a girl dancer. Later a shooting occurs, and Jeff takes French leave to catch the supposed murderer.

The hero's adventures follow swiftly upon this action. He finally arrives at a ranch which afterward turns out to be his grandfather's. He again meets the girl of the party, who has returned to her country home and become telegrapher at the station. The ghost episode occurs at a nearby ranch, where the supposed murderer, a Mexican, and his followers hold forth.

The action of the opening reels is rather disconnected at times, but the story clears up well, and is free from the obvious.

"BOUND IN MOROCCO"

Artcraft Has Found Another as Good As the Others for Douglas Fairbanks.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

WHATEVER the town is in Morocco where Allan Dwan placed the scenes and action (accenting the action) for the latest Douglas Fairbanks ridiculously amusing offering it was built for Fairbanks, and when "Doug" had finished with it there was every indication at hand that the gentle Hun had lately retreated from the immediate vicinity.

The opener of the piece is a cleverly devised trick to awaken quick interest. Fairbanks is bound arms and feet to a prison wall, and two ferocious looking Moroes have just hurled a bomb, with lighted fuse, at the Fairbanksian feet. It sizzles and burns in threatening disaster to the best pair of acrobatic "understandings" in the picture business. This item starts the interest immediately, and then the plot is revealed.

Fairbanks is scurrying across the hot sands in an American motor chased by a Moroccan "desert cop." The more he is chased the more he fractures the sand-speed regulations. Douglas shows up in a little town where life instantly becomes nothing but adventure speeding upon the heels of adventure. There is an American girl to be saved—and Fairbanks saves her.

"Saves" must be considered strictly in the sense that Fairbanks would do such things. The plot thrusts her into tight squeezes, and Fairbanks vaults swings, jumps, chases, and tosses her out of them time after time. In the end he has loaded the girl and her mother into his trusty Ford, and they "dim out" amid clouds of sand. Then comes another "nifty" trick of direction immediately following the title, "One Hundred Years Later"—there is a flash of an exceedingly quiet corner of a cemetery.

Hail to the men who supply Fairbanks with "vehicles"! They are a clever bunch of originators. Hail to Fairbanks! He is going to achieve the greatest of American amusement records—he will outlive "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"THE BORDER LEGION"

Adaptation of Zane Grey's Novel Features Blanche Bates.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Zane Grey novel, "The Border Legion," on which the T. Hayes Hunter production of the same name is based, lends to the screen a bevy of characters of more or less primitive instincts. Blanche Bates appears in the feminine lead, and if one must be frank the camera has not been kind to the star, nor does the role of Joan Randall, the woman for whose love the hillsmen fought, stand out as effectively as that of Jack Kells, played by Hobart Bosworth. Eugene Strong playing Jim Cleeve, a ne'er-do-well miner, also makes good. Others of the cast are Horace Morgan, Russell Simpson, Arthur Morrison, Bull Montana, Richard Souzade, and Kate Elmore.

The story of "The Border Legion" follows a brief space in the career of a young woman in a Western town whose lover, indolent and lacking in what the West deems manly qualities, is spurned by her. In desperation he rides away and becomes one of a bandit gang. The girl follows him, and in so doing is captured by Jack Kells, one of the most merciless of mountain bandits. After shooting his two partners he claims the girl for himself. He is in turn shot by her in a struggle for mastery, and is afterward cared for by her until the arrival on the scene of Jim Cleeve, with whom she escapes. After pursuing the pair with the purpose of giving up the girl in revenge to envious associates he finally resolves to protect her, and is killed for his pains. The production is a stirring one, and is presented in good style.

"THE BELOVED BLACKMAILER"

Five-Reel World-Picture Presents Entertaining Subject of Light Comedy Type.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

AN agreeable vein of light humor runs through this pleasing subject, which features Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley. The story, which is rather slight in plot, wins favor from its pleasant tone throughout and some laughable comedy business. It was written by Harry O. Hoyt and directed by Dell Henderson.

Carlyle Blackwell appears as Bobby Briggs, a pampered youth of really sturdy physique, but whose mother is determined to make an invalid of him. This has a touch of human nature about it, and awakens at once the observer's interest in Bobby's future.

The youth, when in college, had gone in for football and there formed his acquaintance with Spike Grogan. The latter had been certain Bobby would make a good player, but Mrs. Briggs interfered, and from that moment her son began to decline physically. When the story opens Spike is in charge of a training camp for men, and Bobby's girl, Corinne Norris, puts up the funds to induce Spike to kidnap the hero and make a man of him. Spike consents to this course, and soon has Bobby in charge. A number of good comedy stunts are brought out in the scenes at training quarters.

Evelyn Greeley is pleasing in the role of Corinne. In the closing scenes Bobby proves his manhood by saving her from the advances of a city rounder named Wesley Martin.

There is a Wall street end to this narrative in which Bobby's father and the girl's are financial rivals, but when the match is made known their hatred ceases. Others in the cast are W. T. Carleton, Isabelle Berwin, Charles Dungan, Jack Drumier, and Rex Macdougal.

"MAMMON AND THE ARCHER"

Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres Appear in Pleasing Little Comedy-Drama.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

HOW wealth ingeniously applied in a roundabout manner proved an effective aid to cupid furnished the theme of this delightful two-reel Broadway star feature, which is an adaptation of one of O. Henry's short stories. Edward Earle as Richard Rockwell and Agnes Ayres as Helen Lantry are the leading players, and their efforts serve to confirm the pleasing impression created in previous offerings from the pen of this prolific author.

Richard is in love with Helen, but her mother wishes her to marry a society leader, Richard's father having made his money as a soap manufacturer. A trip abroad is arranged, and Helen arranges to meet Richard and have him drive her to the station. Richard is downcast, saying the ten minutes time that will be spent in this trip is too short to arrange an affair of a lifetime. His aunt gives him his mother's wedding ring as a talisman. En route to the train an unprecedented traffic blockade occurs. Helen, of course, misses the train, and Richard wins her hand. Auntie says it is the ring that is responsible; father only smiles, but it develops that he has paid one of his men to bribe street car motormen, truckmen, and taxicab drivers to bring about the traffic tie-up.

The production is well photographed, and has been excellently directed by Kenneth Webb. Others in the cast include Herbert Fortier as Richard's father, Mrs. Ester Banks as Aunt Ellen, and Jane Jennings as Helen Lantry.

"A SUCCESSFUL ADVENTURE"

May Allison as a Maid Brings About the Reconciliation of Two Brothers Long Estranged.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

THIS production probably will prove entertaining to the average audience, due, however, to the attractive personality and delightful work of May Allison rather than to the story, which lacks consistency. It was directed by Harry L. Franklin, and released by Metro in five reels on July 15.

Two brothers years before become estranged over the love of a girl who became Virginia's (May Allison's) mother. A legacy is left to Virginia provided she brings about a reconciliation. To do this she secures a position as a maid in her rich uncle's home, and soon establishes herself as the practical ruler of the household. There is a love affair between Virginia and her uncle's adopted son, Perry, who believes that he loves an adventuress until the climax is brought about by this woman attempting to steal a secret code book. This is frustrated by Virginia, who has slipped away to attend a masquerade. Perry perfetrates her disguise, and follows her home, arriving in time to rescue her from the companion of the adventuress. Virginia declares her real identity, through a ruse the two brothers are brought face to face, and all ends happily.

Frank Currier gives an excellent portrayal of the wealthy brother. Edward Connelly as Virginia's father gives a conventional interpretation of a Southern gentleman in straitened circumstances. A good bit of character work and one responsible for much of the humor is the portrayal of an old nego "mammy" by Pauline Dempsey. Harry Hilliard is satisfactory as Perry. There are many attractive settings and beautiful exteriors, and the photography is excellent.

Comments

A CORRECTION.

The first comment published on page 589 of our issue of July 27 was through error incorrectly titled "Her Moment." This should be "The Locked Heart."

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE DREAM LADY (Bluebird).—A five-part adaptation of the novel, "Why Not?" by Margaret Widdemer. The picture features Carmel Myers with a competent cast, and is a pleasing although not elaborate interpretation of the story which deals with making dreams come true. A full review will be found elsewhere.

SCANDAL MONGERS (Bluebird).—A reissue of the Lois Weber production, "Scandal," of three years ago. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

FEDORA (Paramount), August 12.—A strong five-reel screen version of the famous Sardou play, with Pauline Frederick in the title role. Miss Frederick's performance is a notable one, reflecting as it does some of the fine possibilities of the screen in emotional roles of this type. She is assisted by a strong cast. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE FALLEN ANGEL (Fox Special), July 28.—Jewel Carmen is featured in "The Fallen Angel," and again proves her right as a member of her profession. The story tells how a young girl sacrifices herself for the sake of her dependent sisters. A full review will be found elsewhere.

A SOLDIER'S OATH (Fox Special).—A five-part military drama featuring William Farnum. The picture was directed by Oscar Apfel, by whom it was also written in collaboration with Mary Murillo. The story covers a tragedy in the life of a soldier who is entrusted by a comrade with the safe delivery of family jewels. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT (Vitagraph), July 27.—A five-reel subject based on a story by Wallace Irwin and directed by David Smith. Alfred Whitman and Nell Shipman play the leading roles. The plot is unusual, and holds the interest closely. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE PRECIPICE OF HORROR (Vitagraph), August 5.—Episode No. 4 of "A Fight for Millions." This number is full of exciting action. Bob, a prisoner of Lawless and his gang, turns a neat trick by getting control of the cabin with his friends, locking the bandits outside. The subsequent fight for possession is well staged. Jean makes a jump over the edge of a precipice at the close, using an improvised parachute.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

THE DEMON, July 22.—Edith Storey is starred in this interecting comedy drama of the Corsican Hills. It provides good, warm weather entertainment. The plot is light, and the subject has been treated in a serio-comic vein, almost a burlesque. There is considerable humor, attractive scenes, and good character work. Miss Storey again demonstrating her ability and versatility.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 41 (Mutual), July 21.—The items of this issue include some splendid scenes on coal mining in Pennsylvania. Other scenes of interest show survivors of the wrecked U. S. Warship San Diego after landing, drilling for oil along the Californian coast, a rodeo at San Jose, Cal., and New York cricket men playing crack players of British War Mission.

SHE ALMOST PROPOSED (Strand), July 30.—A Billie Rhodes comedy in which a frameup on the part of the lover's father, mother, and sister causes a lively roundup which almost makes the young lady propose. Finally she gets in the game herself and pretends to elope with her lover's friend. A wedding party at the minister's home with a breathless bridegroom is the result. Mildly entertaining.

THE WHITE WILDERNESS (Outing-Chester).—Some beautiful scenes in the vicinity of Mount Washington showing a party of mountain climbers ascending this venerable mountain. Sport scenes showing the party on a snow-shoe run to lake placid are amusing, and are followed by skating, curling, skiing, and tobogganing. One of the features of the picture is a ride with the camera man down a toboggan slide.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW NO. 5 (Pathe), July 28.—This diversified number contains much that is new and interesting. It begins with close-ups of General Foch and his staff, then shows the British fighting in Palestine, the effect of air raids in various parts of France, scenes taken from an aeroplane, a parade of the Allies in Milan, and honoring Old Glory in France. An inspiring number.

BRITISH GUIANA (Post Film—Pathe), July 28.—This gives scenes from the British colony in the northern part of South America, where the production of sugar and rice are among the chief industries. The film also gives attention to the interesting baby crop, which also flourishes here. The natives are seen worshiping according to the Hindu rites which they observe.

WAIFS (Astra-Pathe), Aug. 4.—A five-reel subject of the light comedy type, featuring Gladys Hulette, Creighton Hale and others. The story is fresh and pleasing, with a good vein of humor in it. It concerns a young girl who runs away and outwits her father and his rich friend, who desire her to marry the latter's nephew. The number makes a good subject of the kind.

DO HUSBANDS DECEIVE? (Rolin-Pathe), Aug. 11.—A "Toto" number, with amusing knockabout moments, though not much plot. Toto appears as an alleged policeman and tries to capture a crook known as Limousine Larry. The knockabout is the strongest feature of this average number.

THE BRIDE OF THE SUN (Astra-Pathe)—Episode No. 1 of the new serial, "Hands Up" in three reels. This introduces the observer to Echo Delane, a young magazine writer, who visits a Mission in Southern California to get an article about a band of Incas. She is mistaken for the girl of prophecy and narrowly escapes being sacrificed by the sun-worshippers. The hero, "Hands Up", saves her. The story is concisely set forth and gets a splendid start. It has an abundance of picturesque color and contains many thrills. Ruth Roland and George Chesebro play the leading roles.

THE MISSING PRINCE (Astra-Pathe)—Episode No. 2 of "Hands Up". In this number Echo Delane narrowly escapes death at the hands of the sun worshippers. The hero saves her, but she falls again into the hands of the Incas. The Phantom Rider saves both the girl and the hero from death. He then kidnaps the girl and Prince Pompos. Echo is believed to be the last heiress of the Strange ranch and the story is concerned in the rivalry of Judith, her cousin, who desired to inherit the ranch herself. The events are exciting and well staged.

W. H. Productions, Inc.

MICKEY—In this presentation W. H. Productions offer Mabel Normand as star in a sensational melodrama blending comedy and pathos excitement and thrills in measures of exquisite skill that lends to the stirring climax of an engaging story. "Mickey" has everything that a motion picture may embrace. It is a marvel of the science of direction and production. Elsewhere in this issue is a further review.

William L. Sherry Service.

OUT OF THE NIGHT (Keystone)—A six-part adaptation of E. Lloyd Sheldon's story, directed by Jerry Kirkwood. Catherine Calvert and Herbert Rawlinson are the featured members of the cast. The production is in many ways an intensely artistic one. A full review will be found in last week's issue.

Triangle Film Corporation.

BEYOND THE SHADOWS (Triangle), July 28.—A five-reel subject, from a story by Ralph E. Weetall, featuring William Desmond and Josie Sedgwick. The story deals with life among the Indians and fur traders of the Canadian Northwest. The number contains some remarkably attractive locations, set forth in clear sharp photographs, but is weakly constructed as a dramatic act. Released at length elsewhere.

THE WAITERS' BALL (Triangle-Keystone)—A re-issue of one of the funniest of Fatty Arbuckle subjects. Fatty appears as conducting restaurant and some of his efforts at "food control" would make Mr. Hoover jealous. In the later scenes at the ball he appears in a lady's ball gown, which is removed from his portly figure during a general mixup. This contains many laughs and will easily stand another showing.

Universal Film Company.

THE LION'S CLAWS NO. 17 (Universal Special), July 27.—"The Well of Horror" is the title of this episode which is thrilling in the extreme. The escape of the victims of the lion worshippers from the well into which they have been thrown forms the basis of the episode which ends with their arrival in safety at the British post. A tremendously entertaining number.

THE LION'S CLAWS NO. 18 (Universal Special), Aug. 3.—"Beth's Triumph, or the Doom of Rej Hari," is the title of this number which takes Beth and associates to England, whence they are followed by Rej Hari in quest of the proclamation. He is shot down by Bath in the midst of a general melee in which underhand methods of Rej Hari are revealed.

THE TRAIL OF NO RETURN (Western), Aug. 10.—A two-reel western subject, by G. Shelly Sutton, featuring Neal Hart, Babe Sedgwick and Joe Rickson. This has some fresh, unusual plot complications and is unusually strong for this type of film. The hero invades a bandits' lair in the mountains and rescues the girl under exciting circumstances. A strong subject.

DON'T SHOOT (Lyons-Moran), Aug. 10.—An amusing episode of a bridegroom held up by a crook on the eve of his wedding. The crook reforms at the request of his girl and pursues his victim to pay back the money. A double wedding follows. This has plenty of action and the plot is slight, but laughable.

THE BRASS BULLET (Universal Serial), Aug. 19.—Episode No. 1 of this new serial with Jack Mulhall, Juanita Hansen, Chas. Hill Mailles, Joseph Girard and Ashton Dearholt in the cast. The hero, a young playwright, is confined in a sanitarium by mistake. He escapes to Treasure Island where the heroine, a young heiress, is about to be made the victim of a kidnapping plot. This is brisk and exciting in action, pleasingly staged, and promises to be entertaining.

World Pictures Corporation.

HEREDITY (World Picture), Aug. 5.—A five-reel story in which the leading character, a girl named Nedda, inherits the courage of her noted ancestor, who once saved the life of his king. The West Side views of lower Manhattan are particularly good in the opening scenes. The later dramatic moments are full of interest, but not so convincing at times as the opening incidents. Madge Evans and Barbara Castleton, combine to create the very interesting character of Nedda.

"The Brass Bullet" Is Fast.

Gathering speed with each episode "The Brass Bullet" hits up a pace in its third chapter which lives up to the promise of its predecessors. Universal intends to spare no expense in the staging of this to be considered story, judging from the elaborate settings used and the amount of property destroyed. Ben Wilson, who is directing this serial gives evidence of his mastery in building up the suspense required.

The third episode is entitled "Locked in the Tower."

Lois Wilson in Kerrigan Support.

J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Burglar for a Night" will have Lois Wilson for his leading woman once more. She will have a role that will offer her manifold opportunities to distinguish herself. The character that she portrays is that of the ward of a railroad president, of a versatile miss who can do almost anything in the athletic line—anything from running her own sailboat to being about the most charming bit of femininity imaginable.

Fashion Show in Metro Film.

One of the final scenes of "Our Mrs. McChesney," Ethel Barrymore's shortly to be released feature, filmed at Metro's Sixty-first street studio, was a veritable feast for the eye inasmuch as it was the exact replica of a fashion show in New York City, and what is more, was an actual exhibition of the advanced styles for our coming season. Among the costumes displayed were evening wraps, evening gowns, afternoon frocks, dinner gowns, debutante's frocks and many others, every one a creation.

"A Hoosier Romance" Set for August 19.

"A Hoosier Romance," the Selig production to be released August 19 by Mutual as a special, is the first of the poems of the world-famous poet, James Whitcomb Riley, that has ever been produced as a photoplay.

From the list of Riley's works on which he owns the photoplay rights Mr. Selig selected "A Hoosier Romance" for first presentation on the screen. It was done with Thomas Jefferson, Harry McCoy, and Colleen Moore in the cast under the direction of Colin Campbell.

Edna Goodrich's Picture Finished.

The first of Edna Goodrich's new series of features for Mutual, "Her Husband's Honor," a domestic drama from the pen of Maibelle Heikes Justice, is to be released on August 5. The story was chosen from a collection of plays submitted for Miss Goodrich as the one best suited to her requirements. The plot deals with a young wife's determination to save her husband from impending ruin. Burton King directed.

New England Bookings for "Hypocrites."

Bookings for George Loane Tucker's screen version of "The Hypocrites," starring Elizabeth Risdon, have been so numerous and important as to indicate a repetition of the triumph scored by the stage play twelve years ago, General Film Company announces this week. The demands for "The Hypocrites" is particularly strong in the New England territory. According to J. D. Levine, manager of the General's Boston branch. Two important engagements reported from Boston were a week's showing at the Boston theater beginning July 21 and a week at Fay's theater in Providence, beginning July 28.

Toto Finishes New Comedy.

Toto, the Pathe-Rolin comedian, completed "The Great Water Peril," his one-reel comedy, in jig time, for he has been loaned to the Orpheum circuit, the "big-time" string in the West, for vaudeville purposes for a few weeks. Shapely and happy-go-lucky Clarine Seymour helps a whole lot in "The Great Water Peril," which will be released in September by Pathe.

The Toto comedies in the meanwhile line up as follows: July 28, "Beach Nuts"; August 11, "Do Husbands Deceive?" August 25, "Nipped in the Bud"; September 8, "The Happy Daughter."

General Film Supplying Sailors.

General Film service is being used to provide entertainment for a number of United States warships stationed in southern waters, according to word received this week from the Atlanta branch. A contract for supplying the Dorothea, the service including 6ft reels every two weeks, was awarded after the Government had received bids from nearly a dozen companies. General Film's bid was selected, according to a Government official, "for price, for service and for courteous attention."

Professor Arnold .....Walt Whitman

Directed by Thomas N. Heffron.

The Story: Karl LeBarron, fond of notoriety, posed as a pro-German, and when the Lusitania was sunk said he was going to France, though not really intending to do so. Carried away by the determination of his friend Marcosson he reached the battle line, lost his nerve, and by a ruse was captured as a German and sent to a British prison camp. Later he learned that America had entered the war, that he was mourned as dead, and his poems had made him famous. Desperate he escapes and returns to America. A friend advises him not to reveal his identity, but to join the army and fight for the U. S. Still hesitating he meets a comrade of the prison camp and succeeds in wiping out a nest of spies in a dramatic manner.

The Story: In a quaint New England village live Ambrose North and his daughter Barbara. He is blind and the child is a cripple. They are cared for by Miriam, her mother's sister. Her great friendship is with Roger Austin, who lives across the way. Barbara's mother committed suicide when the child was but two years old, and North fears she did so because he failed to make her happy. In reality she killed herself because her love for Roger's father was too strong to be withstood and she feared dishonor. She left letters with her sister, explaining her action; but Miriam, herself in love with North, withheld them and does not give them to North and Barbara until the latter's twentieth birthday. Barbara reads her own letter and then that to her father, suppressing the facts and inventing a letter, assuring North of her great love. Later North is cured of his blindness by a great surgeon, who also relieves Barbara's lameness. The child dresses herself in her mother's clothes and is found by her father just after he has read the real facts in the letter. The shock prostrates him, and she persuades him that she is the spirit of her mother come to assure him of her love. He dies happy in the thought, and Barbara and Roger find in their own lives the happiness and love denied their parents.

Feature Viola Dana, who plays the dual role of Constance North and Barbara North, and Jack McGowan as Roger Austin.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Tragedy in New England Home Life Turned to Rejoicing in the Course of True Love.
Quaintly Original Story of American Home Life Convincingly Pictured.
Rattling the Family Skeleton Results in Rending the Clouds of Unhappiness.
Another "Best Seller" Gets Into Moving Pictures and Brings Delight.
Popular Novel Picturized in Vivid Scenes and Realistic Episodes.
The Dark Shadow of Tragedy Lifted by Force of Constancy and Love.

Advertising Angles: There are two strong angles to be worked here—the popularity of the star and the favor in which the Myrtle Reed novels are held by young readers. Capitalize both in all advertising and hook up with the booksellers in a display of the Reed novels. Play it up strong for a clean-up.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released August 12.

"THE HOUSE OF MIRTH"

Metro Presents Katherine Harris Barrymore in a Powerful Photoplay Adaptation of Edith Wharton's Famous Novel of That Title.

Cast.

Lily Bart	Katherine Harris Barrymore
Lawrence Selden	Henry Kolker
Bertha Trenor Dorset	Christine Mayo
Augustus Trenor-Dorset	Joseph Kilgour
Gerty Farish	Lottie Briscoe
Simon Rosedale	Edward Abeles
Nettie Struthers	Pauline Welch
Mrs. Hatch	Maggie Western
Mrs. Penniston	Nellie Parker-Spaulding
Ned Silverton	W. D. Richter
Percy Gryce	Sidney Bracy
Jack Wade	Kempton Greene
Butler	Morgan Jones

Directed by Albert Capellani.

The Story: Lily Bart, a New York society girl, has been left an orphan with an income too small to keep up her end in the circles to which she has been accustomed. She goes to live with her aunt, Mrs. Penniston, who is constantly urging the advantages of a marriage for money. She smothers her real love for Lawrence Selden, a young lawyer, and frankly avows that she intends to marry a rich man. She sets her traps for Percy Gryce, the most desirable match in sight. She is coveted by Gus Trenor-Dorset, who pretends to speculate with her small funds; but his wife, overseeing the check he hands her, becomes jealous and plots to expose Lily, though she herself has enjoyed a mild affair with Selden, and is in the midst of a more violent one with Ned Silverton. Gus tried to "collect" from Lily, who has gone to his home expecting to give his wife the letters she wrote Selden, and she rushes from the house. Mrs. Dorset learns of the visit and publicly denounces her. To escape a hateful entanglement with Simon Rosedale she attempts suicide, but here the story takes a twist different from that of the novel and a different ending is provided.

Feature Katherine Harris Barrymore as Lily Bart and Joseph Kilgour as Augustus Trenor-Dorset.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Passion for Comfort, Ease and Fine Raiment Brings Society Girl to Brink of Ruin.
Marrying for Money Often Means That Recompense Is Hard Earned.
Social Intrigue and Malice Furnishes Sinews of War in Jealous Fight.
Exposing Some of the Moral Failings of Queens in High Society.
Shedding the Light of Exposure Upon the Intriguers of Society.
Sensational Episodes Inspired by Thrilling Photoplot.

Advertising Angles: The novel was widely discussed when it first appeared, and is still read. It might help to announce that a new ending has been provided without telling what that ending is. In the original story Lily kills herself. Call attention to the unusual cast, including, as it does, so many well-known names, and appeal to the literary societies. Announce the film in the library, and try to get the book stores to work with you. They will at least give you window space.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released August 5.

"HER HUSBAND'S HONOR"

The Mutual Film Corporation Presents Edna Goodrich in the Story of a Wife Who Saved Her Husband from the Consequences of Another Man's Wrong.

Cast.

Nancy Page	Edna Goodrich
Richard Page	David Powel
Tato Usaki	Thomas Tommammato
Lila Davenport	Barbara Allen

Directed by Burton King.

The Story: David Davenport, president of the Davenport Construction Company, has persuaded his secretary to indorse his notes to cover some financial gaps. When the crash comes the secretary, Dick Page, is held in part to blame for the irregularities and faces destruction with his employer. His wife, Nancy, feels that some danger threatens and persuades Dick to confess. He tells her that unless the plans he shows her can be sold to the Japanese government he must face a jail sentence. Usaki, the agent of the Japanese government, has been flirting with Nancy, and she uses her appeal to him to dispose of the plans direct for a sum sufficient to cover Dick's obligations. Usaki demands her favor as a bonus to the deal, and Dick comes just in time to save her.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Wife's Heroic Sacrifice Saves Honor of Her Weak and Cowardly Husband.

Cowardly Husband Permits Wife to Make Supreme Sacrifice.
Gripping Story of Villainy and Intrigue Involving Coward-Husband.
Wife Puts to Shame by Her Sacrifice a Weakling Spouse.
Engaging Story Involving a Domestic Tragedy Narrowly Avoided.

Advertising Angles: Hang your appeal on the star, her attractiveness and rich dressing. Tell the men she is unusually beautiful and tell the women she is wearing next season's styles. For country towns use "Don't indorse another man's paper" for an attractor, and tell that Dick's troubles came from indorsing his boss' notes. For the cities use the Japanese for the secondary appeal, warning women against flirtation with men who do not understand our customs.

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six sheets. Banner unmounted. One, two and three column cuts and mats. Program cover cut. Lobby display, 11x14 and 22x28. Press sheet.

"WAIFS."

Pathe Presents Gladys Hulette in an Astra Production of the Story of a Girl Who Wanted to Pick Out Her Own Husband—and Did.

Cast.

Marjorie Whitney.....Gladys Hulette
Marjorie's Father.....J. H. Gilmour
Fitzjames Powers.....Creighton Hale
Elmer Poindexter.....Walter Heirs

Directed by Albert Parker.

The Story: Marjorie Whitney is the only daughter of a multi-millionaire, who longs to see her the wife of Elmer Poindexter, the nephew of his former business partner. The girl rebels and runs away to New York, where she is found by detectives hired by her father. Old man Poindexter suggests that she be permitted to have her way and for the nephew to keep an eye on her, and if they are thus thrown together they may fall in love with each other. But this arrangement goes awry, and Marjorie is attacked by a convict from whom she is saved by Fitzjames Powers. How the young couple overcome parental objections and visited equal justice upon the righteous and unrighteous provides an entertaining story with a surprising denouement.

Feature Gladys Hulette as Marjorie Whitney and Creighton Hale as Fitzjames Powers.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Headstrong Daughter Gets Even With Her Father By Running Away to New York.
Small Town Girl in Big Town Life Finds She Doesn't Fit.
Running Away from A Forced Marriage Girl Runs Into Happiness.
Bright and Breezy Story Filled With Thrills and Surprises.
Oddly Contrived Plot Brings New Developments to the Screen.
Refreshing Romance of Love and Adventure That Leads to Happiness.

Advertising Angles: The star will prove better advertising material than the story. Make the best use of her name and recall some of her other successes in which she has played your house. As to the story tell that this is one in which the matchmaking parents are outwitted and the girl marries a man of her own choice instead of her father's selection incognito.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color; also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

Released August 4.

"A NINE O'CLOCK TOWN"

Thomas H. Ince Presents Charles Ray as the Story of a Country Boy Who was "Trimmed" by a City Vampire but Who Came Out All Right in the End.

Cast.

David Clary.....Charles Ray
Katherine.....Jane Novak
John Clark.....Otto Hoffman
Mrs. Clary.....Gertrude Claire
The Dame.....Catherine Young
The Model.....Dorcas Mathews

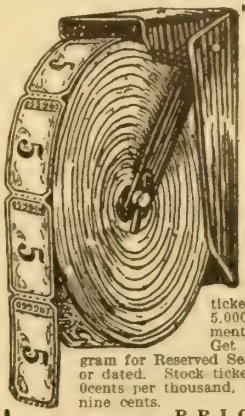
Directed by Victor L. Schertzinger.

The Story: David Clary, working for his father in a small town "Emporium," is fired because of his progressive ideas. He goes to the city, but has an unpleasant experience with a vampire who steals his watch. Meantime his father's business is on the decline, so he sends for David, who now determines to try out his advanced ideas. He hires a corset model, a brass band, etc., and announces a big sale. The vampire comes to town, agrees to return the watch if he will call on her. He does so, but a man claiming to be her husband attempts to blackmail David. Fortunately the corset model recognizes the man as her husband, so David is left to marry his sweetheart, Katherine, after having sold the "Emporium" for a large sum, been appointed manager thereof and hired his father as his assistant.

Feature Charles Ray as David Clary and Jane Novak as Katherine.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Country Boy Becomes City Chap and Goes Home to Lift the Lid Off the Old Town.
When the Home Town Got too Small for the Village Cut-Up.
Bringing City Ways Into a Country Town and Living to Regret It.
Hilarious Results of a Country Boy's Conquest of a Big City.
High Life in an Average Small Town's Social Circles.
Fast Moving Comedy Drama with Heart Interest to Provide the Punch.

Advertising Angles: The personal popularity of the star should be made use of through portraits and the heavy displays of his name. If your town has a curfew law hook that into the advertising campaign. Get some jeweler to make some display of clocks and ask "Why are all these clocks stopped at nine?" Some days later explain, "Because they are to advertise Charles Ray in A Nine O'Clock Town at (house and date)." Get the drygoods store to collaborate with you in an advertisement along "bargain sale" lines, having a special sale that starts at 9 o'clock and runs until 10, with a matinee ticket to every purchaser of a stated sum. Play up the star in the newspaper advertising.



Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

"THE PLUNDERER."

William Fox Presents William Farnum In a 1918 Version of One of His Greatest Earlier Successes.

Cast.

Bill Matthews.....William Farnum
Dick Townsend.....Harry Spingler
Bully Presby.....Wm. Riley Hatch
Old Bells Park.....W. J. Gross
Dave Thompson.....Geo. De Carlton
Pedro .....Henry Armetta
Joan Presby.....Claire Whitney
Lily Meredith.....Elizabeth Eyre

The Story: A young man is left a gold mine and he goes west to work it. He finds that the man who has a claim next to his wants his mine. This man uses desperate means to separate the youth from his land. Attempts at murder are nothing to him. The youth does not bother this man or his aids until a friend of the youth is killed. Then the fight begins. Bill Matthews appears and downs twenty miners. This is one of the stirring moments in the play that works up to a striking climax.

Feature William Farnum as Bill Matthews and Claire Whitney as Joan Presby.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Rugged Fists and Resolute Will Win Against Heavy Odds in Gold Fields.
Gripping Story of Romance and Adventure in Western Wilds.
Fighting for a Fortune Love Intervenes to Decide the Battle.
Picturesque Scenes and Thrilling Incidents Carry Forceful Play.
Manliness and Courage Win Happiness Against Tremendous Odds.

Advertising Angles: Dwell upon the fact that this is one of the six Fox productions that were found worthy of reproduction in improved form. Tell your patrons that if they liked the story before they will find the new version even stronger. Take plenty of newspaper space and play up the fight in which Farnum beats twenty miners. Advertise "Fight to-night at (house). Big Bill Farnum versus the rest of the mining camp. Don't miss it." Get this on big type posters and paste all around town in the early morning.

Advertising Aids: One three and six sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14, and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special order at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

A SOLDIER'S OATH.

William Fox Presents the Sterling Player, William Farnum, in a New Version of One of His Earlier Successes, Greatly Strengthened and Improved.

Cast.

Pierre Duval.....William Farnum
Mavis, his daughter, at 5.....Kittens Reichart
Margot.....Dorothy Bernard
Duchess D'Auberg.....Louise Thatcher
Duke D'Auberg.....Benjamin Marburgh
Count de Morave.....Henry A. Barrows
Lazare.....Herman J. Herbert
Raoul de Reyntiens.....Walter Connolly
Jacques.....Will Lois
Mavis, at 8 years.....Alma Frederic
Sister Superior.....Louise Mackin
Pere Crisset.....Louise V. Hart
Mavis.....Anna Findlay

The Story: Pierre Duval, a French soldier, discovers Count de Morave mortally wounded. Before he dies the count gives Pierre certain jewels and papers and asks him to transmit them to the owner, the young Vicomte Raoul de Reyntiens. Pierre hides the treasure in a strong box, which already contains a necklace given to his wife, Margot, by the Duke and Duchess D'Auberg. Lazare, a war correspondent, kills Pierre's wife and loots the strong box. Pierre is arrested and sentenced to life imprisonment for murder. Mavis, Pierre's daughter, is taken into the home of the D'Aubergs. Years later Mavis falls in love with the penniless Vicomte de Reyntiens. Lazare, who, on the strength of the stolen papers, is posing as the Count de Morave, also pays court to Mavis, and gives her some of the jewels, including the necklace which the D'Aubergs had given her mother. Pierre is finally liberated. Finding his daughter he sees the necklace, identifies it as his wife's, and retribution is visited on Lazare.

Feature William Farnum as Pierre Duval.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Photo-plot Land in France Where Pershing's Crusaders Are Fighting Democracy's Battles.
William Farnum in Another Manly and Heroic Role.
Tremendously Forceful Drama of Great Human Interest.
Gripping Drama of Brave Hearts and Giant Strength.
Soldier of France, Unjustly Accused, Brings Honor to His Flag.
Great Military Drama Made Tense by Gripping Love Theme.

Advertising Angles: In playing these Fox reissues lay great stress upon the fact that these are the pick of past successes, improved through careful editing and additions. If you have played it before emphasize the fact that the new story is even stronger. Use paper as freely as you can afford.

Advertising Aids: One, three and six sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14, and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special orders at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

"THE LOVE SWINDLE"

Bluebird Presents Edith Roberts in the Charming Idyl of a Girl Who Wanted to Marry and a Man Who Would Have Naught to Do with the Idle Rich.

Cast.

Diana.....Edith Roberts
Dick Webster.....Emanuel Turner
Trotwell.....Leo White
Diana's Aunt.....Clarissa Selwynne

The Story: To escape the attentions of one of her many fortune-hunting suitors Diana Rosson, a wealthy young girl, goes to her country home, only to find it in the possession of two tramps. They attack her, but her screams bring to her aid Dick Webster, an automobile agent. A terrific storm is raging, and Diana and Dick keep house until it abates. Diana loves Dick, but he cares nothing for the idle rich and refuses to reciprocate her love. So Diana tells Dick that she has a poor sister and sends him to her with money. But when Dick arrives he finds a girl the image of Diana. He falls in love with the girl and it is not until they are well started toward marriage that Diana is forced by circumstances to tell Dick that she is not Diana's sister, but Diana herself. It was only a trick to get him to declare his love.

Feature Edith Roberts as Diana and Emanuel Turner as Dick Webster.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Pretty Girl Imprisoned by Dan Cupid for Trying to Cheat the Man She Loved.
Dual Personality of Pretty Girl Gets Fond Hearts in Bad Tangle.
Sensational Outcame of a Pretty Girl's Mad Prank.
Fleeing from Unwelcome Attention Pretty Girl Flies Into Fateful Adventure.
Heroism and Heart 'nterest Combine to Make Gripping Photoplay.

Advertising Angles: The best angle to play up in this story is the man who did not want to marry an idle rich. Tell how it took one of the idle rich to trap him into matrimony. The rather thin story will not give much chance for advertising, so do what you can along the lines of "Why wouldn't you marry a millionairess?"

Advertising Aids: One design, each one, three and six sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts, in three sizes. Scenes cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.

"THE DEATH DANCE"

Select Pictures Presents Alice Brady in a Startlingly Real Story of Society and the Cabaret.

Cast.

Flora Farnsworth.....Alice Brady
Philip Standish.....Mahlon Hamilton
Arnold Maitland.....H. E. Herbert
Cynthia Maitland.....Helen Montrose
M. Boresky.....Robert Cain
Mme. Boresky.....Rita Spear
Jones.....Charles Slattery
Doris Maitland.....Nadia Gary

Directed by J. Searle Dawley.

The Story: Arnold Maitland becomes embittered when he learns that his wife is in love with Boresky, a cabaret dancer. He goes to the restaurant to have it out with Boresky, but becomes a victim to the charms of Flora Farnsworth. He makes a wager that he will win Flora within a month. Having given her a musical education he plans to take her abroad, so that his desertion may be used by his wife as grounds for a divorce, since he does not wish to use his evidence against her. Maitland is mortally wounded the night before he and Flora are to sail, and he gives her the evidence papers. Flora then becomes Boresky's partner, while Cynthia, Maitland's widow, tiring of her old paramour, decides to get Philip Standish in her meshes. Boresky falls in love with Flora, but she promises to marry Standish. Cynthia, insanely jealous, persuades Boresky to kill Flora, but she is saved by Philip and Boresky kills himself.

Feature Alice Brady as Flora Farnsworth and Mahlon Hamilton as Philip Standish.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Story of the Stage Leads Through Baffling Plot to Suprise Finish.
Lure of the Stage Leads Pretty Girl Into Strange Adventures.
Seeing Life Behind the Footlights in Clever Photoplay.
Mysteries of the Stage Revealed in Gripping Photo-plot.
Alice Brady Seen in Her Latest and Greatest Screen Success.
Baffling Plot Holds Interest for Lovers of Sensational Pictures.

Advertising Angles: Offer this as an inside picture of the real life in the cabarets. Play up the wager made by Maitland, but do most of the publicity on the star since she will better repay press work than the rather trite story. Recall her earlier plays and her success in them,

Directed by Robert Ensminger.

The Story: Bab, the shoemaker's daughter, becomes the friend of Tom Wellsley, who is afraid to return home as he has disobeyed his father. The newsboys place stolen fruit in Tom's pocket and he is sent to prison. Bab takes his place as a newsboy. Tom escapes from prison and joins a gang who plan to rob. He refuses to go with them and finds work on a farm. Bab, searching for him, locates the gang and with them goes to rob the Wellsley home, meets Tom's father and the two become friends. One day while out riding they discover Tom. Bab brings about a reconciliation and wins a big brother.

Feature Gloria Joy as Bab Fanning.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Great Juvenile Drama, Replete With Thrilling Episodes and Surprises.
Story of Two Children Who Win Victory Over Disheartening Odds.
Unjust Laws Defeat Their Purpose by Vicious Enforcement.
Boy and Girl Venture Into Life's Battle With Poor Equipment.
Girl Heroine in Story of Adventure Wins Way to Happiness.
Most Interesting of Photoplays Have Juvenile Principal Players.

Advertising Angles: If you have played the other Oakdale productions, center your advertising upon the clever child and announce that she gets an exceptional opportunity in this play. If you can command the services of a clever child arrange with the local paper to have her sell papers on a prominent corner for the benefit of some war charity. Dress her as a boy and post a placard "She is selling papers for the ——— Fund. Gloria Joy in Wanted—a Brother, sold papers to take her playmate's place. See what happened in the play at (house and date)." If the town is too small for the paper-selling stunt arrange with the dealer handling the city papers.

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six sheets. 11x14 lobby displays. Slides. Press sheet.

"A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT"

Vitagraph Presents Nell Shipman and Alfred Whitman in a Unique Blue Ribbon Feature Involving an Unusual Point of Honor.

Cast.

Allen Spargo.....Alfred Whitman
Theresa Kane.....Nell Shipman
Lemuel Antree.....Juan de la Cruze
Professor Kane.....Jake Abraham
Mrs. Kane.....Mrs. Buskirk
Kate Leonard.....Patricia Palmer
Jerry Pitkin.....Jack Wetherby
Manager Red Dog Mine.....Al Garcia

Directed by David Smith.

The Story: Allen Spargo, engaged to Theresa Kane, goes west to make his fortune. He meets Kate, who intercepts his letters and writes Theresa that he is dead. Theresa finally consents to marry Antree, a student of ancient law. Allan reaches the church just as the ceremony is finished, and finds that Antree is the man whom he has rescued from death and who has, according to ancient custom, pledged himself to be Spargo's bond-slave. Theresa follows Spargo and finally the three meet. Antree threatens to kill Spargo, who reminds him of his pledge, and Antree purposely upsets a canoe and is drowned in the rapids.

Feature Alfred Whitman as Allen Spargo and Nell Shipman as Theresa Kane.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Fulfilling a Strange Code When Self-Sacrifice Brings Happiness to a Rival.
Bitter Rivals in Love, One Man Becomes the Bond-Slave of the Other.
Rugged Story of Western Life, Embodying Love and Sacrifice.
Malice and Deceit Nearly Wrecks the Happiness of Two Lives.
Battling Against Intrigue True Love Wins a Happy Victory.
Red Blood and Manly Courage in Relentless Battle for True Love.

Advertising Angles: Feature the players in your advertising and present forcefully the situation in which Antree finds himself. Offer the problem of the man who feels himself the bondman of another when he finds that other loves the woman he has just married. Ask what the reader thinks Antree will do. Use cards with the same proposition to accompany the window displays and work up as much speculation as possible. Make capital of the fact that the story is by Wallace Irwin, a well known writer.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.

Released July 29.

"THE DEMON"

Advertising Aids on this five reel Metro picture were published on page 1477 of the June 8 issue. "The Demon" is now scheduled for release on July 22.

"MAID O' THE STORM"

Paralta Plays Presents Bessie Barriscale in the Dramatic Story of the Girl Who Set Out to Make Herself the Social Equal of the Man She Loved.

Cast.

Ariel.....Bessie Barriscale
Franklin Shirley.....George Fisher
Abe Strohman.....Herschel Mayall
Andy MacTavish.....Joseph J. Dowling
Mrs. MacTavish.....Myra Davis
Peter Winkenmulder.....Nick Cogley
Jules Picardo.....Howard Hickman

Directed by Raymond B. West.

The Story: Ariel, a waif of the sea, grows to womanhood on the Scottish coast. An airplane is wrecked nearby and she nurses the occupant, Franklin Shirley, a London aristocrat, back to health. He returns to England, and Ariel, determined to be his equal, follows. In London she finally meets Abe Strohman, a theatrical producer, and through his help becomes a star. Shirley attends the opening performance, but fails to recognize her. As a vampire she seeks to win him, but realizes she does not want him in that way. She then goes to Strohman's apartment. In the meantime Shirley learns that the girl to whom he was engaged has eloped with another, and immediately goes to Ariel, and the two find happiness.

Feature Bessie Barriscale as Ariel and George Fisher as Franklin Shirley.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Fantastic Story of Youthful Love Strengthened in Adversity.
Original Photoplot Filled with Thrills and Adventures.
How the Rescue of a "Bird Man" Brought Happiness to Dreary Life.
Rustic Girl's Adventures in London While Seeking Fame.
Thrills and Adventure Coupled with Impelling Love Interest.
How True Love and Constancy Won Long Battle Against Adversity.

Advertising Angles: This story is best advertised through newspaper work. Tell the foundation of the story in your advertising as well as in the press notices, withholding the ending. Refer to Ariel as "the girl who bet and lost—but won." Make the bet the foundation of the first newspaper display. Try and arrange for some window displays of the stills in addition to those in your lobby.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.

"MARYLEE MIXES IN"

General Film Presents Clever Little Gloria Joy in an Oakdale Production in Which She Proves the Practical Value of Her Charity Endeavors.

Cast.

Marylee Depue.....Gloria Joy
John Cromwell Depue, her father, Neil Hardin
Emily Depue, her mother.....Ethel Ritchie
Della, her maid.....Ruth Lackaye
Jones, a factory hand.....Charles Dudley
Mrs. Jones.....Mrs. Pepprell
Dr. Baxter, slum physician, Daniel Gilfether
Organ grinder.....Frank Erlanger
Gladys Bracken, newspaper woman, Nell Hollman

Directed by Bert Ensminger.

The Story: Marylee's wealthy father owns tenements in the slums, while her mother is interested in "charity." At a fancy ball Marylee begs money from the guests and decides to take it immediately to the poor, so she slips out of the house. In one of the tenements she finds a woman very ill and stays all night trying to help her. The next day she dances and sings in the street to collect more money, and by the time she is found she falls victim to the same disease as the poor woman, due to poor sewerage system. Her father, his eyes finally opened, promises to improve all his properties, while her mother learns the meaning of real charity.

Feature Gloria Joy as Marylee Depue.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How a Little Girl Brought Complete Reformation in Her Father's Sociological Ideas.
Child of Riches Creates a Clean-Up in the Slums of Poverty.
Convincing Drama of Sociological Conditions in Great Cities.
Little Girl Turns Reformer and Cleans Up Her Home Town.
Singing and Dancing Sprite Brings Sunshine Into Blighted Lives.
Little Girl "Brightens the Corners" and Redeems Her Father.

Advertising Angles: The theme of this story has been used so often that it would be best to concentrate upon the angle of the practical value of the child's charity efforts without mentioning much of the story. Tell that her mother was a fashionable Lady Bountiful, but that Marylee went right to the heart of things.

Advertising Aids: One each one, three and six sheets. 11x14 lobby displays. Slides. Press sheets.

"ALIAS MARY BROWN"

by three unscrupulous associates. The shock finally kills Dick's Mother, and in revenge he joins a band of crooks. In the character of Mary Brown he has many daring escapades and gets even with the men who robbed his father. A dramatic incident throws him with the runaway daughter of one of the men. This girl later becomes his wife, and in the far west finally works out his reformation after her father has died leaving them in plenty.

Feature Casson Furgesson as Dick Browning and Pauline Starke as Betty.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Son Devotes Adventurous Life to Bringing Retributions to His Father's Enemies.
How a Wrecked Fortune Made a New Man of a Careless Youth
Dramatic Incidents Abound in Fast-Moving Story of Adventure.
Mystery Story Carries Thrills and Exciting Episode to Happy Conclusion.

Excitement and Adventure Give Keen Interest to Mystery Plot.

Advertising Angles: Get out a throwaway headed "It takes brains to make a good thief," and then go on to tell how the college boy took the law of vengeance into his own hands. Work along the same lines in the newspapers hinting at the clever contrivances used by Dick Browning but telling only enough to pique curiosity. Get some pictures of Mr. Furgesson and display them with a card "Known to the police as Mary Brown. See alias Mary Brown at theatre and date of ten other different stories.

"DOING THEIR BIT"

William Fox Presents the Clever Little Lee Kiddies in a Patriotic Story With a Punch and a Pull.

Cast.

Michael O'Dowd ..... Franklyn Hanna
Bridget McCann O'Dowd ..... Gertrude LeBrandt
Patricia ..... Beth Ivins
Miles ..... Alex Hall
Janie O'Dowd ..... Jane Lee
Kate O'Dowd ..... Katherine Lee
Mrs. Velma Vanderspent ..... Kate Lester
Alfred Caesar Vanderspent ..... William Pollard
Mrs. Mary Flynn ..... Aimee Abbott
Jerry Flynn ..... Jay Strong

Directed by Kenean Buel.

The Story: Patrick O'Dowd loses his life on the battlefield, and the two tiny tots are sent to a rest home in America. Their aunt favors a match between her daughter Patricia and Alfred, a decadent son of a society leader. However Patricia loves Jerry, a workman in the factory. Jane and Katherine are accidentally locked up in the factory one night when along comes Miles the O'Dowds' pampered son who intoxicated has been persuaded by two pals to let them into the factory. The kids recognize the men as the ones who attempted to signal to a submarine on the trip to America and expose them. Miles, his patriotism newly awakened, overcomes the spies with the aid of Jerry who appears on the scene. Miles and Jerry enlist, while Alfred is drafted after his mother has tried to keep him at home by falsifying his birth certificate, the lie exposing the plot. Jerry wins Patricia.

Feature Jane and Katherine Lee the Fox "Baby Grands."

Program and Advertising Phrases: Lee Kiddies "Baby Grands of the Screen" Reappear in Patriotic Photoplay.
Two Petticoat Patriots Lend a Hand to Uncle Sam.
A Play to Shame the Slacker and Win the War.
Cleverest Kiddies in Screendom in Their Best Photoplay.
Laughter, Tears and Inspirations to Patriotism in Newest Photoplay.
Tandem Tots of Screenland Thrill Patriots With Inspiring Play.

Advertising Angles: If there is a recruiting station in your town you can probably get the co-operation of the recruiting officer to the extent of the loan of some of his men or the establishment of a recruiting branch in your lobby. If there is no recruiting station your postmaster can tell you where you can obtain recruiting posters for lobby work. In the newspaper work play up the cleverness of the children. Appeal to the children of your town to do their bit, taking a cue from the Lee children. If you know some woman who is a born organizer you may even start a kiddie club for doing their bit, hooking up with the war stamp drive, and have weekly morning meetings in the theater.

Advertising Aids: One, three and six sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special order at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

Released August 4.

Simplex

It doesn't pay to make counterfeit Simplex parts

Reason No. 1

Unless they are very accurately made, and of the finest materials, they hurt the quality of the projection; and that's the very thing Exhibitors use the Simplex for.

Reason No. 2

To make Simplex parts as we make them, and as they ought to be made, requires an immense outlay for special machinery; and such an investment is not warranted because (a) the Simplex seldom needs repairs, and (b) mighty few Exhibitors could be inveigled into using counterfeits.

To the Wise this reveals one of the strongest reasons for using the Simplex: the Machine that's so excellently built and that needs so little repairs that it doesn't pay to imitate even its smallest parts.

And Besides, this tells something of the character of the men who sell the Simplex, men who sell the acme of projection without the slightest hope of making a nice additional profit on repairs.

The character of Simplex Projectors, Parts, and Distributors can't be imitated

Sure Fire Helps to Success

The CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO., publishers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and CINE MUNDIAL, the leading trade papers devoted to the Motion Picture Industry, are also publishers of the only library of practical text books dealing with the cinema art adapted to the every-day needs of those already engaged in the business or about to engage in it.

These text books, six in number, have been written by men carefully selected for their proven knowledge of the subjects to be covered, being almost without exception veteran members of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S editorial staff; entirely without exception these men are at present actively engaged in the motion picture business—they are not dreamers or theorists.

Each text book has been written to provide real help to the individual who reads it—consistent with the unswerving policy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD—a genuine "Dedication to Service."

Motion Picture Handbook

for Managers and Operators

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Third Edition

The most complete, exhaustive and instructive work ever published on the projection of moving pictures. Contains complete instruction with detail illustrations on all leading makes of American projection machines and practical information on wiring, lenses, carbon settings, screens, theatre equipment, etc., etc. 700 pages and over 300 illustrations, $4.00, postage paid.

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A real help and business builder for exhibitors, theatre managers and owners. It tells all about theatre advertising, type, printing and paper, house programs, lobby displays, newspaper advertising, posters, heralds, etc., etc. 300 pages. $2.00, postage paid. P. S.—Mr. Sargent conducts a weekly department in this same style in the Moving Picture World, which contains many up-to-date business-getting ideas.

Motion Picture Electricity

By J. H. HALLBERG

An up-to-date work on the electrical equipment of picture theatres by a practical electrical expert. Contains chapters on electricity, D.C. and A.C. current, resistance and resistance devices, electric service, wiring, lighting, etc. Also contains practical suggestions and all necessary reference tables on wire sizes and capacity, weights and measures, heat units, etc., etc. 260 pages, illustrated. $2.50, postage paid.

Modern Theatre Construction

By EDWARD BERNARD KINSILA

Our newest book is one that will fill a long-felt want to those contemplating the building of a theatre. This is a very complete and exhaustive work by an architect with many years of practical experience in theatre and studio construction. Fully illustrated, with considerable data as to requirements, construction cost, building laws, etc. $3.00, postage paid.

Technique of the Photoplay

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Third Edition

Complete instruction in photoplay writing, including study of plots, how to obtain and how to develop; writing the synopsis; studio requirements; script preparation and marketing; technical terms; examples of actual scripts in facsimile typewriting, etc. 400 pages. $3.00, postage paid.

Screencraft

or the Making of a Photoplay

By LOUIS REEVES HARRISON

A comprehensive and thought-provoking treatment of the subject in a series of chapters, similar to a university course of lectures, by a successful writer of photoplays. Also contains a complete working scenario and several sample pages of manuscript. 150 pages; illustrated. $2.00, postage paid.

WHITE A.C. SPECIAL

MOTION PICTURE CARBONS
FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

Silent operation of the arc and flickerless screen illumination is a reality with the use of White A. C. Special carbons on alternating current. Complete elimination of these disagreeable features of the old A. C. arc has made the alternating current arc a much more efficient light source.

White A. C. Special carbons give a pure white light of high intensity so necessary for even screen illumination and perfect definition.

It is absolutely unnecessary to invest a single cent in extra equipment to obtain excellent low cost projection. Simply replace the old A. C. carbons with White A. C. Specials.

Uncle Sam is Pleased with U. T. E. Service and Power's Cameragraph

The primary considerations with the War and Navy Departments in the projection of motion pictures are—SERVICE and EFFICIENCY.

It did not take Uncle Sam long to find out, through the efforts of the officers of the above departments, that the combination of the service rendered by United Theatre Equipment Corporation and the efficiency in projection produced by Power's Cameragraph establishes what is termed "PERFECT PROJECTION," with the highest degree of CONSERVATION in both man power and fuel, because U. T. E. service avoids delay and trouble and the Power's projector gives a picture of GREATER BRILLIANCY with LESS POWER applied at the arc than any other motion picture machine.

As a result, Uncle Sam is glad to place his orders with U. T. E., and the following letter is further proof of our DISCRIMINATION in selecting the HIGHEST CLASS machines and accessories for motion picture projection:

U. S. S. PENNSYLVANIA

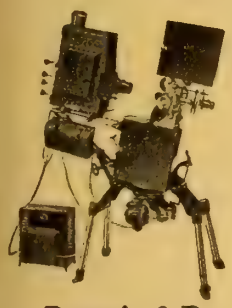
July 15, 1918.

United Theatre Equipment Corp.
New York City, N. Y.

Dear Mr. Hornstein:—

The Power's 6-B machine, which was installed on board the U. S. S. Pennsylvania, as well as the Power's No. 6 Road Equipment, are doing wonderful work.

The boys are surely enjoying the pictures projected by these machines, and I wish to state that I have never operated any machines which worked so admirably as these two.



Projection is, beyond a doubt, as good as the finest in any of the largest theatres throughout the country.

These machines deserve much credit for the way in which they hold up after being subjected to concussion and vibration caused by heavy gun fire.

With the kindest regards of the writer, I am

Very truly yours,

"TRIPLE TROUBLE"
NOT a Reissue—NOT a Rehash
But a NEW Film
ESSANAY-CHAPLIN BRAND
To the Exhibitor:
In "Triple Trouble" we are offering you a NEW Charlie Chaplin picture in its entirety. Essanay made this picture with Chaplin when he was at the zenith of his laugh-making powers.
Realizing that the value of Chaplin films were steadily increasing, Essanay held this film in its vaults until the most opportune time for release, which we believe to be NOW.
There has been only one NEW Chaplin film in several months. The public is eager for new Chaplin comedies and will welcome "Triple Trouble" with open arms.

HARRY CAREY is, beyond all question, the most human of Western character actors on the Screen today—which means that he is the most profitable for the Exhibitor. His latest production is "HELL BENT," directed by Jack Ford and rich with those inimitable effects which every one who knows HARRY CAREY will go miles to see.

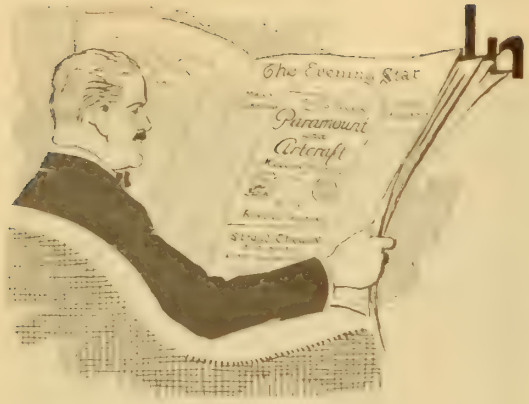
WHEN DOROTHY PHILLIPS' name goes up on your front your every patron knows that they'll see a real actress in real drama. "THE MORTGAGED WIFE" is a play with a punch—a UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTION by reason of its tremendous intensity, sumptuous sets and the superb acting of one of the most popular figures in Pictures.

THE reason why "SMASHING THROUGH," with Herbert Rawlinson, has made so much money for Exhibitors is simply because Star, Story and Staging are of the very highest type. This is a UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTION of speed—action—power—and a love story of very much more than the usual appeal.

UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTIONS

MAE MURRAY has never, in all her carer, had a finer vehicle for display of her unique talent than "THE BRIDE'S AWAKENING." Supporting cast, staging, direction—in this really sumptuous production have been carried out regardless of expense. But this is the only way in which a picture can become a UNIVERSAL SPECIAL ATTRACTION.

PRISCILLA DEAN! A national favorite, starring in a Production whose wonderful double-exposure photography is one of the marvels of the Screen. See this amazing picture at your nearest Universal Exchange, and your admiration will be equally divided between Actress and Direction. Book "The TWO-SOUL WOMAN" for something different.



FIRST IT WAS "SHOES"—then "Saving the Family Name"—then "The Mysterious Mrs. M."—then "Idle Wives"—now it's "THE MODEL'S CONFESSION." And Mary MacLaren was never more exquisite than in this Picture, on which money has been lavished without stint. UNIVERSAL FILM MFG. CO., Carl Laemmle, President, 1600 Broadway, New York.

Your Own Eyes!

GOLDWYN agrees with the exhibitors of America in the choice of Miss Farrar's future stories. We asked for and received exhibitor help and advice in selecting her material.

Goldwyn called upon and conferred with several hundred exhibitors in large and small cities to obtain in advance the stamp of box-office approval for her six coming productions.

The result of this co-operation between star, producer and exhibitor is dramatic and powerful productions created and made by three great specialist elements all working together in the joint cause of art and profit.

Texans are sturdy, keen, hard-headed business men. They "want to know" before giving their support to anything. Confidence, sincerity and principle appeal to them strongly.

These are some of the reasons why the "tying in" of Texas to the Hodkinson Co-Partnership Plan has gone ahead with such rapidity.

Texas is only one sample of what is happening throughout the Union. Every day sees the Hodkinson Co-Partnership Plan doing something—developing and growing.

New product, new representatives and new co-partners mark the mile stones of our progress.

Produced under the personal supervision of
ROBERT BRUNTON

Directed by Ernest Warde

in the role of Kirk Marden, J. Warren Kerrigan will be seen as the son of an American railroad magnate; the embodiment of the American spirit to fight for right and fight fair. In the Orient he meets William Real and befriends him. Upon their return to America he learns that his father is about to be ruined by a business rival. How he steals not only the papers that had been obtained through intrigue, but also the heart of a beautiful girl, presents Mr. Kerrigan in one of the most virile roles that he has ever interpreted.

Not father and son, but

YANKEE and HUN

LOCKED in a struggle to the death—the ex-Prussian guardsman, the Kaiser's spy, and his American-born son!

Physically disqualified, yet "doing his bit" for his country, the boy has untwittingly installed an explosive wire in the big munition factory. And at any moment the lights may be turned on!

The fight the race against time—the failure of his weak heart—the explosion!

Too late—yet in defeat lies victory! Under the stars he registers the vow of the loyal American citizen, to avenge "with my life, if need be" the wrongs that people of his blood have done.

And on the other side of the war-torn world, his comrades go "over the top" in the greater fight for democracy. The climax of Wyndham Gittens' stirring six-reel production.

Selling Yourself = A War Time Duty

IT is right that the motion picture industry should be classed as an essential industry.

But it is not right, simply because it has been so classed, that it should continue to permit inefficiency, extravagance and waste to run amuck within its doors.

The Affiliated Distributors' Corporation was created primarily to save the exhibitor money. It makes possible, however, even a greater saving to the Government.

When you sell yourself, as you do under the co-operative booking plan of the Affiliated, you not only save for yourself the high cost of film selling, but you save the Government man power, and the use of capital for other purposes.

If all motion pictures were booked on this plan, hundreds of film salesmen, shippers and other film employees would be released to other useful industries, and millions of dollars would be saved the exhibitor, the public and the exchanges to help the Government win the war.

The Affiliated will be ready within the next thirty days to begin saving money and man power.

Have you arranged to get your share of this saving? If not, get in touch with the National Director of the Affiliated in your territory at once, or send for the booklet, "The Exhibitor Dominant."

WILLIAM FOX NEW POLICY

SERVICE and profit to the exhibitor will be the William Fox slogan during the season of 1918-1919. The greatest selection and the best productions in the history of the William Fox organization are assured.

FOUR BIG TIMELY PICTURES

These productions are of such tremendous importance—bear so strongly on the events of the hour—that merely to mention them is to prove their power to produce profits for exhibitors.

1. WHY AMERICA WILL WIN! Based on the life of General Pershing—an intimate, romantic, carefully prepared, authentic story reaching back to the American general's barefoot days and showing him on the farm, as schoolmaster, in West Point, in Japan, and as a fighter in the Philippines, Mexico and France. Staged by Richard Stanton in seven reels.

2. QUEEN OF THE SEA, with Annette Kellerman. A six reel, sub-sea phantasy, featuring Miss Kellerman in daring aquatic stunts amid settings of surpassing beauty. A sure fire box office winner. To be released on a rental basis.

3. The PRUSSIAN CUR. Captain Horst von der Goltz, for ten years a secret agent of the Kaiser, is one of the principal characters and makes amazing disclosures of the conspiracies of Ambassador Count von Bernstorff and of the dastardly plots for the destruction of American factories, for subsidizing newspapers, for interfering with the draft and for crippling ships, wrecking trains and throttling governmental war activities. Staged by R. A. Walsh and enacted by a large and remarkable cast, including Miriam Cooper.

4. WHY I DID NOT MARRY. A morality picture that is both striking and timely and produced along unique lines, giving it a powerful box office appeal. It is the life story of the world's most beautiful woman—a pet in the lap of luxury. Her reasons for refusing to marry make a most graphic and absorbing story with stupendous profit possibilities.

In a short time William Fox also will announce the release date of the Theodore Roosevelt film, "Put the Flag on the Firing Line."

STANDARD PICTURES

Twenty-six Standard Pictures are to be released during the coming season. These will be the greatest productions in this classic series. There will be eight releases each by Theda Bara and William Farnum and ten all-star productions.

VICTORY PICTURES

Twenty-six Victory Pictures will be released. This group includes Tom Mix, Gladys Brockwell, George Walsh and other foremost stars of the screen.

EXCEL PICTURES

Twenty-six Excel Pictures will include releases by Virginia Pearson, Peggy Hyland, Jewel Carmen, Jane and Katherine Lee and others.

SUNSHINE COMEDIES

Henry Lehrman, the master director of this type of production, will produce twenty-six Sunshine Comedies.

MUTT AND JEFF ANIMATED CARTOONS

Bud Fisher's Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons, the cleverest pictures of the sort on the market today, will be released at the rate of one a week.

Full details of the William Fox plans for the 1918-1919 season are now in possession of Fox Exchanges throughout the world. Any branch manager will be pleased to explain the policy. Get in touch with the nearest branch office now!

William Fox Will Film Four Zane Grey Stories

RIDERS OF THE PURPLE SAGE will be followed by its absorbing sequel, THE RAINBOW TRAIL, another massive Western production filmed in the Grand Canyon of Arizona and the home of the ancient cliff dwellers. After these remarkable pictures will come two more equally powerful Zane Grey subjects: THE LAST OF THE DUANES and THE LONE STAR RANGER.

Each of these pictures has had nation-wide advertising through the popularity of Zane Grey's novels. Millions of copies of the books have been sold. They are productions strong in love interest—tense in dramatic power. They are released to all exhibitors booking Standard Pictures.

VICTORY PICTURES

They're booking fast! American Exhibitors meant what they said when they asked William Fox to show in more pretentious productions. The remarkable achievements and wonderful popularity of these stars are growing every hour. Victory Pictures are the biggest buy in the film market today.

TOM MIX, GLADYS BROCKWELL, GEORGE WALSH

GEORGE WALSH in "I'LL SAY SO," by Ralph Spence. The amazing experiences of a youth who wanted to enlist but couldn't—a devil-may-care, dashing, smashing, breezy romance that has a whole life-time of upsets in its five reels. Action that keeps audiences in an uproar and makes you proud of your box office.

TOM MIX in "FAME AND FORTUNE," dramatized from Charles Alden Seltzer's "Slow Burgess," the novel of the hour. The fastest, snappiest, liveliest, best Western picture ever made—a veritable cyclone that will drive crowds stampeding into your theatre.

VICTORY PICTURES

Stars who are on the up-wave of popularity—stars who will earn more money for you every time you show their pictures—stars who are making the sort of productions the public wants—stars with the life, enthusiasm and pep of youth—these are the ones William Fox has chosen for his new Victory Pictures.

GLADYS BROCKWELL in "KULTUR," by J. Grubb Alexander and Fred Myton. The story of the tragic beginnings of the great world war—the strange romance of Emperor Franz Josef's beautiful favorite, whose intrigue played Austria into the hands of the Hun and upset the peace of the world. Startling and intimate memoir of a court favorite of today.

We are perfectly willing to let you be the judge as to the merits of

RUTH ROLAND

in the sensational Pathé Western serial

HANDS UP

as an attraction for your house. Everything has been done that money and brains and skill can do to make this a phenomenal success. Ask your Pathé exchange to screen the first episodes for you . . . Consider them carefully. Note the acting, the action, the sets, the production, the direction and the story. . . . And then take out your fountain pen and write on the dotted line!

Produced by Astra. Directed by Jas. W. Horne. Written by Gilson Willets

RELEASED AUG. 18TH.

"You said she'd be here! Where is she?"

Some reasons why

RUTH ROLAND in HANDS UP

the cyclonic Pathé western serial, is an excellent booking proposition for you

1—The star: for four years she has been one of the most popular of all screen players.

2—The story: written by Gilson Willets, it presents something new in idea and development.

3—The production: produced by Astra, the company which made some of the most strikingly successful photoplays ever released—the Pathé serials "The Fatal Ring" & "The House of Hate," among others.

4—The direction by James W. Horne: smooth, finished and able.

5—The national advertising: billboards all over the country will carry the magnificent 24 sheet advertising this superb production.

6—The sensational nature of the serial: it is full of thrills—of exciting situations and suspense.

—repeating faster than its imitations are booking!

FAR from being sore at our imitators—we thank them for the extra money they're making us and our staunch friends, the exhibitors. Because in many cases, the value of the third, fourth and fifth repeat on "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin" was not established until the Exhibitor had seen the imitations. There wasn't any question after that as to the biggest net—the surest profit—and today all reports from our exchanges show that "The KAISER" is repeating faster than its imitations are booking. Get this triumphant original now while the getting is good. Get it today.

MARTIN JOHNSON'S PICTORIAL TRIUMPH
"Cannibal Isles of the So. Pacific"

They provide a wonderfully novel attraction for all classes of theatres for they are films that are most extraordinary, interesting and instructive.

—R. W. B.,
Exhibitors' Trade Review.

These are remarkable pictures and probably the most unusual that have ever been taken for they were secured at unnamed risk of life.

—Motion Picture News.

This extraordinary showing the like of which has never been flashed on screen, is entitled "Isles of the South Pacific." The most unusual and bewildering [illegible] ever gone of perfection.

—Miss Russell, Billboard.

Quite as thrilling as a Robert Louis Stevenson story.

—New York Tribune.

There is no doubt about a "feature" classification of a feature picture of the accepted type as a relief, and the more so when such a novelty as the Cannibal Isles picture can be secured.

—Dramatic Mirror.

Besides being a distinct novelty, these pictures are of unquestioned educational value. They form a rare combination of entertainment and instruction and are strongly recommended as a unique attraction at any type of film theatre.

—D. G. Watts,
New York Telegraph.

No pictures of travel could be more interesting.

—Evening Telegram.

These pictures are Mr. Rothapfel's pride of the week. Thanks! Yea, Roy, and Yea, Lady!

Here is the best of reasons for the movies' existence.

—S. J. Kaufman,
Evening Globe.

In many ways it is a remarkable travel picture.

—New York Herald.

Exceedingly interesting and instructive are these remarkable motion pictures.

—Brooklyn Eagle.

Pictures of less merit have been shown under other auspices at four or five times Rothapfel's prices for many years.

—New York Call.

It is a safe prediction that many of those who don't think they would like Mr. Johnson's pictures will find themselves absorbingly interested if they will just go and look at them.

—New York Times.

The Rivoli program makes no over statement in announcing these pictures as [illegible] remarkable.

—T. E. Oliphant, Evening Mail.

"Cannibal Isles of the South Pacific" a remarkable cinema.

—New York Sun.

A succession of scenes of sustained and enthralling interest.

—New York Review.

A most startling series of film presentations.

—Motion Picture World.

I thoroughly enjoyed this offering, which was presented this week at the Rivoli for the first time anywhere, and the audible expressions of the many of cash customers that sat around me was conclusive evidence that they were interested and entertained.

Given intelligent specialized exploitation, this should go big.

Hatrick and Hubbell Return from Front

Representatives of Committee on Public Information Carry Camera from Alsace to the Sea—Stage in Paris Big Showing of "America's Answer to the Hun"—Former International Official Talks of Experiences

THE gratitude that war-stricken France feels toward the United States for her participation in the great world war was made evident when the first American war film, showing the activities of the American Expeditionary Forces in France, was presented at the Gaumont Palace on June 26. The French newspapers devoted columns of space to the exhibition, and one enthusiastic writer closed his story by stating that the show was converted into a love-feast for the French and American people.

"America's Answer to the Hun," the title of the film, was produced and presented by E. B. Hatrick and C. J. Hubbell, who were sent abroad last March by the Committee on Public Information for the purpose of gathering film with the American Expeditionary Forces and issuing the product in Europe. They have just returned to this country after an exciting trip that took them with all the active divisions in the line and also gave them an opportunity of seeing and photographing some of the enormous work being undertaken by the United States Government back of the lines.

"Few people," said Mr. Hatrick, in speaking of his experiences, "can appreciate what France has suffered in this war. For four years she has been bleeding. Her men have died by the thousands; her villages have been destroyed. America is in it; England is in it and has been from the start; but the war has been fought on the soil of France, and their suffering is far greater than that of any other nation with the exception of Belgium. While the morale of the French people is wonderful, it is only natural that after four years of this bloody struggle they become tired.

"Last spring, during the great drive against the British in the north, there were many anxious days. Then the Hun began shelling Paris with his big gun, and while this did very little material damage it reminded the Parisians that he was knocking at the gates of Paris. America had been in the war a year, and while our Government had been carrying on a great deal of work to care for the immense army she was transporting to France few people outside the Government officials knew of it. Then came the drive on Paris the latter part of May, when the Boches broke through the line between Soissons and Rheims. But he came too late.

When France Knew America Was in the War.

"Uncle Sam had been pouring a large number of troops into France, and two divisions were thrown into the gap at Chateau Thierry. Here the advancing Hun was stopped the first week in June. The effect was marvelous. For the first time all France realized that we were actually in the war; that our men were up there bleeding and dying like their own soldiers. We had been holding portions of the line for nearly a year and had done some good work, but this was different. Our troops had actually gone in and stopped the drive on Paris.

Scene at Gaumont Palace at Showing of "America's Answer to the Hun."

"Two weeks later the committee had the first showing of 'America's Answer to the Hun' in Paris. The great amphitheatre, which had been kindly donated by M. Leon Gaumont, was packed from the pit to the roof. Marshal Joffre, Ambassador Sharp, Lord Derby, the British Ambassador; James Kerney, head of the Committee on Public Information in Paris, and many other notables filled the boxes. Sections were reserved for the American Red Cross, Y. M. C. A., the press and other organizations connected with the army, and one section was occupied by wounded marines who had been in the Chateau Thierry fight.

"An American military band, surrounded by a bower of flowers and palms, occupied the center of the stage and gave popular American and French airs while the house was being filled. A French orchestra supplied the music during the projection of the film. Between the first and second parts a touching incident took place when, after the American band had finished playing, the French musicians stood up and showered them with roses.

Film Carried Men from Ship to Trenches.

"The film itself was made from a dupe negative, the original having been shipped to the War Department in Washington. It carried our troops from their arrival at the seaports in France up to the front-line trenches, and also showed the enormous construction work behind the lines. The last reel was made up almost entirely of the Chateau Thierry material, all of which was made by Mr. Hubbell, including the picture of the shelling Chateau Thierry Near the end of the reel was a picture of President Wilson, with an excerpt from one of his famous messages. There had been wonderful applause all during the showing of the film, but when the President's picture appeared the French people got up and cheered. It certainly made one feel proud to be an American.

Mr. Hatrick Garbed for Danger Zone.

"Arrangements were made with the Pathe and Gaumont companies for distribution throughout France of this picture. Copies were also sent to Switzerland and to the committee's representative at Rome. I also took a copy to London, where it had its first public showing on July 27, and arrangements were made to distribute it throughout the British Isles by the British Ministry of Information."

Mr. Hatrick and Mr. Hubbell visited every division in the line while in France, but his most exciting experience occurred at Chateau Thierry, where he was sent by general headquarters. His party arrived there some time before our troops, and the pictures secured at this place show the roads filled with refugees on their way south, the French and British wounded, the arrival of the American troops, including the marines, the shelling of Chateau Thierry, etc.

Program at First Showing of "America's Answer to the Hun"

The work of gathering motion picture film and still photographs with the American Expeditionary Forces all comes under the jurisdiction of the Signal Corps, and in speaking of this work Dr. Hatrick said: "There are a number of good operators in France now attached to the Signal Corps, some of them privates, some sergeants and some commissioned officers. In some cases the commissioned officers are not as good as the privates, but we must remember that we were expanding an army from 180,000 to over 2,000,000 in a little more than a year, and these conditions are likely to creep in. One of the great faults with a number of the cameramen was due to the fact that they were all too eager for quick promotion without doing the necessary work to earn it.

Carry Your Camera as the Doughboy Does His Rifle.

"At the outbreak of the war commissions were given to a number of cameramen, some of whom were in the draft age. Later on the War Department ruled that commissions would not be given to men of the draft age until after they had enlisted and were found worthy of a commission. As a result a number of men enlisted, and when they did not get commissions the first week they felt sore. We must all remember that the first function of an army is to fight. Everything else is secondary. There are a great many boys in the infantry carrying rifles and fighting in the trenches that occupied as high a station in life as cameramen and earned just as much money. Cameramen are needed in this war. The Government needs film and needs photographs. I have this message to convey to all cameramen: If you are drafted and on account of your special ability are transferred to the photographic division of the army, or if you enlist voluntarily as a private in the photographic division, carry your camera like the doughboy does his rifle. You may find now and then an officer in your line of work that doesn't know as much as you do about it, but that isn't going to harm you. Compare yourself, not to the incompetent officer, but to the competent private and do with your camera what he is doing with his rifle."

Mr. Hatrick was formerly secretary of the International Film Service and had charge of the Hearst-Pathe News reel, and Mr. Hubbell was a cameraman employed on the staff of the Hearst-Pathe News.

Alice Brady to Return to the Stage

Taking Stellar Role of "Forever After," However, Will Not Interfere with Select Contract.

ALICE Brady has ever been an energetic young woman. This is a fact long since proved, but by way of additional evidence in support thereof is the recent announcement that Miss Brady will shortly return to the speaking stage in the stellar role of "Forever After," a new play by Owen Davis, which William A. Brady will present for the first time at Long Branch on August 12.

Miss Brady, it develops, discovered that the business of being one of the screen's most successful stars did not take quite all of her time; there were on occasion a few hours in the evening when she wasn't occupied. This would never do. Also having been away from the stage for some three years, she entertained a desire to hear her own voice. At this juncture Mr. Brady came along with the suggestion to his daughter that "Forever After" was a play after her own heart. Miss Brady read, agreed, and action was immediate.

Miss Brady's return to the stage is made possible through permission from the Select Pictures Corporation, to which she is under contract—and will in no way affect her work before the camera.

Show That You Are a True American

Earn a Diploma from the Government by Exhibiting "Pershing's Crusaders" and Help Your Exchange Earn the Beautiful Bronze Trophy Offered by This Publication to the Most Alert Booking Office—Incidentally You'll Make Money

EXHIBITORS know that a good lobby display is half the fight in getting them in. Here's a chance to get a lobby display that will be important, permanent and attractive, and at the same time you can clean up more money than you can on the biggest dramatic feature. Book "Pershing's Crusaders" and you will be sent one of the beautiful diplomas reproduced here. It will stamp your theatre as an all-American house and the diploma carries with it the seal of Government as well as public approval.

The Division of Films of the United States Government Committee on Public Information has decided to award this diploma to every exhibitor who aids his country by presenting to its people the message of the Republic. This is beautifully printed upon a vellum sheet 19 by 26 inches, a gold seal and the tri-color ribbon. The cut, of course, does not do full justice to the elaborate original, but it gives some idea of the beautiful example of the printer's art. It will give to every exhibitor the thanks of his Government for his aid in the dissemination of information, and will be a certificate of public service that stands for something real in these stirring times.

The certificate will be sent direct from New York to each exhibitor who books this first Government release as soon as possible after the Division of Films has been advised of the booking. It should be framed as richly as possible and given a prominent place in the lobby display before being taken inside to find a more permanent place in the foyer. It will be noticed that there are spaces for six subjects, the first of which will be lettered in. The others can be added from time to time as the follow subjects are booked.

This brings up an important point in this contest. These releases by the United States Government are not merely random collections of strips of film, nor are they issued as a moneymaking scheme. These subjects are the cream of the thousands of feet of negative made each week by the Government staff photographers, which will eventually find a place in the archives of the country as a permanent pictorial history of the war. Perhaps you recall the photographs of the Civil War, dug up after many years in the studio of a Washington photographer. Perhaps you remember what odd-looking things these old wet-process plates seemed to you. Crude as they were, they form a priceless record, but they are not comparable to the records made on film in the present war.

From the very best of these negatives the Government selects the pictures that will show in the most orderly progression just what is being done in the great fight for World-liberty. "Pershing's Crusaders" is the first of these, and it is the desire of the President and his advisers that every man, woman and child in these United States shall be given opportunity to know precisely what is being done by our land and naval forces to meet this great emergency. Never in the history of the world has such a gigantic task been undertaken, and it is the wish of the heads of Government that everyone be kept informed. Newspapers cannot convey an adequate idea. The pictorial display alone can give a real conception of the magnitude of the task and of the success with which this work is being carried out. The successive pictures will show just what is accomplished, and it will be an up-to-the-moment pictorial history that even a child can grasp.

For this reason the Government desires not alone that "Pershing's Crusaders" shall be given the utmost publicity, but it wants all of the pictures in turn to be given an equally wide showing. It feels that the first picture will, of itself, create a demand for the others, and for that reason is pushing it as strongly as possible. And it is for that reason that the Moving Picture World has sought to do its bit by giving an added incentive to the exchange managers who are primarily responsible for its introduction. Now comes this Government offer of a proof of patriotism to every exhibitor who lends his aid.

The Victory Screen Pledge Offered by the Committee on Public Information, Division of Films, to Every Exhibitor Booking "Pershing's Crusaders."

This is a wonderful opportunity for the motion picture business to gain establishment. There is need that it shall be recognized as something more than an amusement device. In the Liberty Loan drives, in the Red Cross campaign and in many other ways the pictures have shown what a tremendous factor for good they can be made. It calls for no sacrifice on the part of the managers, for the reports from all over the country show that the film is a clean-up. The only possible sacrifice is the laying over of a picture already booked on a program, and if you handle these reels expertly you do not even make this sacrifice, for you can make an excess profit that will more than cover this loss.

Get busy now. Get into touch with the nearest First National Exchange or State Committee handling the reels. Book it for an early showing and then tear things loose. Start in to boom the picture right now and keep on talking until after it is shown.

There is no room this week to quote from the letters received, but we want to tell what C. Post Mason, of the Denver exchange wrote. He says: "Every showman who has so far played 'Pershing's Crusaders' in this territory has shown a profit on his investment in dollars and cents in addition to assisting the Government to place before the public facts and feats of unequaled magnitude, which stand as records throughout the universe."

That is what exchange men and exhibitors alike report. They are making money and at the same time fighting German propaganda with the most deadly weapon yet disclosed—picture publicity. If you have not yet planned to do your bit, do it today.

HENDERSON RETURNS TO PETROVA.

Daniel Henderson, who left the McClure-Petrova organization some time ago to engage in advertising agency work, announces that he has returned to the McClure organization and will resume charge of the advertising of McClure and Petrova pictures in addition to other work on McClure's Magazine.

National Association on Edge for New Year

Many Committee Meetings Held During the Past Week and All Largely Attended—Large Plans for Government Co-operation

DURING the week which has just closed, there have been more meetings at the offices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, in the Times Building, than during any similar period since the organization was formed two years ago.

The best evidence of the healthy condition of the organization is the fact that the meetings have been very largely attended and in several instances every committee member was present. The new administration headed by President William A. Brady had not left Boston, where the annual meeting was held on July 19, before plans were put into effect for the calling of these meetings and as a result several steps have been taken which will be of direct benefit to the industry, but beyond this, the outstanding feature is the interest which is being manifested in plans for co-operating with the Government and the other agencies which are co-ordinating with it in the prosecution of the war.

On Monday President Brady called together the heads of the export departments of the producing and distributing as well as the exporting companies to meet Carl Byoir, associate chairman of the Committee on Public Information.

On Tuesday, a similar meeting was arranged with the executive officials of the producing and distributing companies of the National Association.

On Monday afternoon, President Brady, accompanied by Marcus Loew and F. H. Elliott, executive secretary, attended the organization meeting of the committee which has been formed to secure funds for the erection of a suitable memorial to Major John Purroy Mitchel, former Mayor of the City of New York and who was the friend of the motion picture men.

On Wednesday occurred the first luncheon of Division 5 of the National Association which was the biggest affair of its kind ever held by the organization. This in itself indicates the renewed interest in the work of the National Association.

On Thursday noon, the members of the Fuel Conservation Committee recently appointed by President Brady met for the purpose of organizing. Marcus Loew was elected chairman and Harold Edel secretary. The other members of this committee include Samuel Rothapfel, B. S. Moss, J. H. Hallberg, P. A. Powers, who was represented by Paul Gulick, and President Brady, who was represented by Executive Secretary Elliott.

Hallberg Named as Technical Adviser.

This committee will create an advisory board with representatives in each important city. J. H. Hallberg was designated as technical adviser to the committee. President Brady has telegraphed Harry A. Garfield, Fuel Administrator at Washington, of the organization of the committee and that it is anxious to co-operate with the Fuel Administration and desires a conference with him at an early date.

A meeting of the board of directors of the Motion Picture Exposition Company was held on Thursday afternoon, at which time routine matters were considered and arrangements made to call together all of the companies which have contracted for space at the exposition scheduled to be held at the Grand Central Palace October 5-13.

The committee which was designated earlier in the week to co-operate with the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information met with Associate Chairman Carl Byoir at the National Association's offices on Friday noon.

The big meeting of the week was the one held on Friday afternoon to meet Joseph Johnson, director of Publicity of the American Red Cross, the story of which is told in another column.

Enters Third Year Under the Most Favorable Conditions.

It is evident the National Association has entered its third year under the most favorable conditions. The new administration is six weeks ahead of last year in the work already under way. It was not until August 27 a year ago that the adjourned meeting of the members was held in New York when the nominations of the directors were confirmed and officers elected.

With the support which has been promised by individuals and the executives of companies which are not members of the National Association it is contended that the next year will see a much better feeling and bring in to the organization the active support and co-operation of several concerns which have announced their intention of affiliating without delay.

Throughout all of the work of the organization, attention is being first given to plans for co-operation with the Government and other agencies which are depending so much now upon the film and screen to assist in supplying their propaganda before the American public. Within a fortnight it is expected President Brady will announce the new committees which are to co-operate with the Government authorities.

Six Detroit Theatres Show First Runs

Three Will be Operated by Kunsky, Who Refuses Half Million Offer for Lease of One of Them.

THE big interest in Detroit will be the first-run situation for the coming season. With six big theatres showing first-run features an entire week it remains to be seen what the effect will be on pictures available and the kind of business each will do. It will certainly be an eye-opener to the industry if Detroit is able to support all of them, giving a good profit to each house.

The first exhibitor to announce his booking plans for the coming season is John H. Kunsky, of the Kunsky Enterprises, controlling chain of ten houses, three of which will be first-run. Mr. Kunsky, and his general manager, George W. Trendle, have been carefully going over the situation, and in the belief that there will be a few state right features made that will be worthy of first-run in their theatres they have anticipated by signing up what they contend to be the very best attractions.

In connection with Mr. Kunsky's plans for the coming season it might also be mentioned incidentally that he turned down an offer to sub-lease his Adams Theatre, which would have netted him a profit of $20,000 per annum for the life of his lease; in other words, Mr. Kunsky turned down a positive net profit of close to a half million dollars on the Adams believing he will make double the profit by operating the theatre himself with first-run motion pictures.

"With the best managers we ever had—with the pick of stars and the pick of the best pictures—the coming season looks exceptionally good for our chain of theatres," said Mr. Kunsky. "Detroit is exceedingly prosperous; it has war orders running into billions of dollars; people will want to see good pictures and we intend to present them with elaborately than ever. Our programs all around will be better, and we can see nothing in the world that should prevent all the houses doing good business. At least, we never opened a season with greater optimism."

Eastman to Take Up Dyestuff Making

Big Rochester Concern Devoting All Resources of Its Laboratories to the New American Industry.

ALMOST important announcement was made the other day when the Eastman Kodak Company stated it was going in for the manufacture of dyestuffs and was devoting all the resources of its research laboratories to the new field.

The laboratories of the Kodak company are located at its Kodak Park plant in Rochester. At the same plant the company has for a long time been turning out upward of four hundred miles of film, or over two million feet, a day.

The entrance of the company into the making of dyestuffs may be the foreshadowing of the time when the Kodak concern will no longer enjoy a practical monopoly of the film business and will use part of its plant in the new industry. There have been many stories of late of the active participation in the making of film by the Du Ponts, of Delaware, and also by P. A. Powers, who has taken over the plant of the old Fireproof Film Company, in Rochester, and who is said to have secured control of certain patents for the making of film. It is also understood that the base for the making of film has been furnished the Kodak company by the Du Ponts, and that they are now preparing to use all of this themselves.

Weeklies to Issue Red Cross Pictures

Joseph Johnson, Director of Publicity, Gets Advice from Film Men Regarding Method of Distribution.

AT the invitation of Joseph Johnson, director of publicity for the Red Cross, a number of motion picture men met Mr. Johnson at the offices of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, Times Building, New York, on Friday afternoon to discuss methods of distribution for pictures secured by the Red Cross. That organization has a large footage of pictures taken by cameramen at the war fronts of France, Belgium and Italy, but through lack of organization has not been able to get them before the public. Recently Mr. Johnson secured the services of W. E. Waddell, for several years with Edison and other companies, and Harry Dull, salesman and distributor of Red Cross pictures, both of whom were present at the conference Friday.

Mr. Johnson explained that his desire was to arrive at the best method of distribution for his pictures—a method that would place them before the public regardless of the profit that might accrue, wide distribution being preferred to returns. He said that the Red Cross had a vivid story to tell to the millions of people who had contributed to its activities and that he believed they would be anxious to learn what had been done with their money.

Considerable discussion followed under the direction of William A. Brady, who occupied the chair. It was finally decided to appoint a committee to act in an advisory capacity with Mr. Johnson, and these were named: William Fox, chairman; F. J. Tichenor of the General Film Company; Pell Mitchell, editor of Gaumont Weekly; Arthur Friend of the Famous Players-Lasky Company; William Brandt, Brooklyn exhibitor; J. E. Brulatour, Eastman Kodak Company, and J. L. Hoff of the Moving Picture World.

In the meeting of the committee that was held immediately following its appointment Mr. Johnson was advised to distribute his pictures through the various picture weeklies and to make the best bargain he could to place the largest possible amount of film, the opinion being unanimous that he would get the widest distribution in that manner.

Contributions to Mitchel Memorial.

During the progress of the meeting Mr. Brady and Mr. Fox took occasion to bring up a movement started among motion picture men to raise a fund for the Mitchel Memorial. The following contributions were made. William Fox, $250; Gabriel Hess, for Goldwyn, $250; J. E. Brulatour, $100; F. J. Tichenor, $100; W. A. Brady, $100; William Brandt, $10; Associated Motion Picture Advertisers, $50; C. J. O'Reilly, $30. It was understood that this was but the nucleus of a much larger fund that is to be raised by the motion picture men as their contribution to the Mitchel Memorial.

"The Fourth of July Parade in Paris"

Inspiring View of Our Boys Marching and Red Cross Nurses in Parade Through the Beautiful Tree-Lined Streets of Paris.

AMID a frenzied ground whirl of excited Parisians and excitement even more tense than demonstrative, our soldiers are seen to unusual advantage in this official Red Cross picture of the Fourth of July parade in Paris. Never has such a perfect formation been seen on Fifth Avenue as that our troops held while under inspection of the French people, trained to arms from boyhood. Pictorial skill in great cities sometimes fails to be impressive because of gaunt buildings unrelieved by tree foliage, such as beautifies many of the avenues of Paris, the Champs-Elysees, broad, garden-bordered and extending from the beautiful Place de la Concord over a mile to the Place de L'Etoile.

In this lovely environment our splendid troops are invested with a glamor fascinating for us all at this moment, a presentation worth preserving for the eyes of future ages. Our men look like Crusaders, just as they really are, and this pictorial representation is not merely to show us how well they appear in foreign lands, but it has significance as a measure of historical importance.

These releases are greater than we realize at present. They should be shown in all parts of the country. They dignify our aims as a nation. They convey also some idea of the importance of this New Art, so far largely devoted to magnifying the unimportant. There are faults here and there in the points of view taken by camera men, particularly when the Red Cross contingent appears, but the whole impression is that of a moment not only seen but vividly experienced. The release is a noble contribution to a noble cause and to the art of producing motion pictures.

"Fourth of July in France" Is Shown

Pathe Releasing Two-Reel Illustration of French Appreciation of American Support—Made by General Foch's Men.

THE celebration of America's Independence Day in France as shown in the two-reel series of views made by the French Pictorial Service and released in this country by the Pathe Exchange, Inc., is a fine illustration of the feeling of affection which is fostered by France for her sister republic.

The film opens with scenes in an Alsatian village where some American troops are resting. From the windows of this village are seen waving the Stars and Stripes as well as the tricolor flag of France; and the villagers dressed in their Sunday best are making merry on behalf of their American visitors, and have even organized a parade for the occasion.

In Paris the most stirring sights are to be seen as the military parade passes along the city's principal streets, including the avenue Champs Elysees, Trocadero avenue, now named for President Wilson, and the Place de la Concorde. The enthusiasm of the French girls and women expresses itself in the strewing of flowers in the pathway of our American boys, or in running forward to place the blossoms in their hands. The parade was headed by the mayor of Paris, and French cavalry and infantry were dispersed at intervals among the Americans. Among the prominent personages taking part in the proceedings are President Poincaire and Marshal Joffre. These pictures are being exhibited at the Rialto theatre this week.

Film Production Continues to Decline

Board of Review Reports 1,010 Subjects Considered in 1918 Against 1,525 and 2,216 in 1917 and 1916.

THE production of motion pictures of a dramatic character continues to fall off, according to data based on the review of pictures by the National Board of Review in the course of the first six months of 1918. The number of subjects reviewed in that period was 1,010 and the number of reels 3,171½. This means that the average length of picture was 3.14 reels. In the corresponding period in 1916 the production, according to the same source of information, was 2,216 subjects and 4,850 reels, the average length of subject being 2.19 reels. In the corresponding period of 1917 the subjects numbered 1,525 and the reels 4,066½, the average length of each subject being 2.66 reels. A chart showing the production by subjects and reels covering the period for the three years would indicate that the general trend of production by months this year is parallel to that of 1916, while that of 1917 was irregular, reflecting the nervous condition of production while the Government was considering the question of taxation of motion picture production and exhibition. That there may be a deficiency this year is perhaps indicated by the fact that old pictures are being reissued in larger numbers than usual judging from current reports.

LEON NETTER JOINS THE NAVY.

Leon D. Netter, prominent state right buyer, head of Masterpiece Film Attractions with offices in Cincinnati and Cleveland operating in Ohio and Kentucky, also a franchise holder in State Right Distributors, Inc., of which Sol L. Lesser is president, has enlisted in the Navy, and started for San Francisco on August 5 to begin active service.

In taking this step, Mr. Netter has been impelled solely by patriotism, for, while he is within the draft age, he is in Class 3 and therefore not liable to be called for service within the near future.

Until Seaman Netter returns George P. Jacobs, heretofore in charge of the Cincinnati office, will operate both the Cincinnati and Cleveland offices of Masterpiece Film Attractions.

AUSTRALASIAN-SPENCER LITIGATION SETTLED.

The litigation between Australasian Films, Ltd., and Signor and Madame Spencer has been settled. The Australasian Films, Ltd., now take over again the Lyceum theatre in Sydney, Newcastle and Brisbane. Both of the Spencers retire from business for a long term of years.

War Tax No Bar to Motion Picture Business

World Pictures Exchangemen Canvass Trade Territories and Report Exhibitors Undaunted by Tax Burden

DESIRING to ascertain the attitude of the picture theatre owners upon the probable increase of the war tax on amusements the World Pictures Corporation caused a canvass to be made by its branch managers of the theatre owners in their respective territories, getting first hand opinions from the men who will have to collect whatever tax may be imposed upon motion pictures. Some of the returns are in and will form interesting reading. The paragraphs are the consensus of the opinions of theatre owners interviewed by the branch managers and are taken to express the feeling of the representative men in each field. Here is what they say:

"The American public has become accustomed to war taxes, and in view of the fact that patriotism has never before been at such a high pitch the great army of movie patrons will look on the increased tax as another means of not alone winning the war but of showing their desire to contribute to the nation's fund."—Chicago.

"The theatre has always been a safety valve where the surcharged emotions of our people can be released through the effects of entertainment. We Americans are highly emotional and when laboring under a big strain both mental and physical we go to the theatre to find relief."—Cincinnati.

Public Will Come Back, As It Always Does.

"It may be for the first few days or even two or three weeks there will be a slight dropping off in attendance, but the public will come back as it always has done and the moving picture will attract as strong as it ever did."—Omaha.

"Every alert business man knows when things look black is just the time to make the biggest effort to boost his business. Any sensible man will not permit himself to drop in the "dumps" just because the way is a little rough. He takes another yank at his belt and goes against the game determined to smile and when he smiles he generally wins."—Atlanta.

"There is a limit to human endurance and when this is reached the reaction sets in. Americans can stand just so much of a strain, and when this point is reached they go to the theatre. Experience has taught theatrical managers that when we have had panics due to financial causes at first the public kept away from their theatres, but it was only for a short while, and then they came back in order to keep their minds off their business and to obtain relaxation."—Boston.

Everything Points to a Big Year.

"Everything points to a big year, notwithstanding the tax. Big crops, and plenty of money and America winning in the war, all of these go to indicate the theatre managers had better brush up the standing room sign only and have it ready."—St. Louis.

This is a very different condition from that which some of our "professional" exhibitors would have us believe exists. We have been told that if the war tax on admissions was doubled practically half of the motion picture shows would have to close their doors. We have never believed any part of such calamity yarns because they have been made mainly by men who were so remotely interested in picture theatres that they could not possibly know what they were talking about. These tales have been taken up by leading men in the business and have been transmitted to Washington in an endeavor to prevent an increase of the admission tax.

From the messages quoted above we believe that we are getting nearer the truth of what the exhibitor thinks about the increase in taxation than has been gleaned from any of the dope uttered by our various "Calamity Janes."

Sunday Battle Still On in Lexington

Laymen's Committee Summon Theatre Employes in Effort to Prove Their Sabbath Work Unnecessary.

A JURY in Magistrate Dodd's Court in Lexington, Ky., last week held that Sunday picture shows were necessary in war times, and killed the fight made by the Laymen's Committee to close Sunday shows. Magistrate Dodd overruled efforts of the laymen's representatives to rule out all evidence relative to whether Sunday shows were necessary or not, and went a step further in that he read Section 1321 of the Kentucky Statutes, embodying "the Old Blue Laws," and left it to the jury to decide whether Sunday shows were necessary or not. The laymen endeavored to win the case by merely showing that the blue laws had been violated.

The laymen when beaten in this case took another tack and a few days ago started things humming again. They summoned operators, ticket sellers and ushers, some ten persons in all, to investigate and see if they were not doing unnecessary work on the Sabbath. However, no magistrate in the city would handle the cases, some claiming that they had openly discussed the proposition and favored Sunday shows, while the laymen objected to the other magistrates. After the case had been transferred from court to court Magistrate Parrish finally transferred it to Magistrate Botkin, at Coal Town, ten miles out in the county.

When the cases were called in this court the cases were postponed until August 15, as several witnesses were absent. The cases were all filed against employes of the Berryman Realty Company, operating the Ben Ali Theatre. This concern was fined $2 in the first test case under a charge of violating the Blue Laws, whereas the Phoenix Amusement Company and J. H. Stamper, Jr., of the Orpheum Theatre, were cleared of the charge by the jury holding Sunday shows essential.

The case may be postponed still further on August 15, and in any event the theatres are continuing to operate on Sunday, and are daily securing a stronger feeling in their favor. The summonses are for J. A. Todd, manager; Carl Neal, machine operator; Mrs. Alphine and William Craig, ticket sellers; Thomas McQuinn, ticket taker, and Milton Hager, Oscar King, William Baxter, Thomas Miller and George Rose, ushers. An effort will be made to show that all of these employes are violating the Blue Laws in that they are doing unnecessary Sunday work.

The employes of the other theatres have not been summoned, as the Laymen's Committee has been unable to secure the names of the employes as yet.

Canadian Reel Tax Hits Small Houses

One Exhibitor Closes Down Four Nights and Shows 8,000 Feet of Film Saturdays.

THE Canadian reel tax of 15 cents a reel a day seems to have hit the small town exhibitor rather badly. Every week there is a cry from some new section of the country that the special war assessment has put a decided crimp in the financial welfare of the rural exhibitor. Several outside exhibitors have been forced to cut down their shows in order to meet the new situation.

J. W. McCutcheon, proprietor of the Crystal Theatre, Oshawa, Ontario, has been compelled to close down three days of each week and he blames the fifteen-cent tax as the cause.

Walter H. Musson, proprietor of the Star Theatre, Hespeler, Ontario, declares that the reel tax was "the last straw" as far as he was concerned. He decided to close down four nights of each week and give an eight-reel show on Saturdays. He now pays the Federal Government only $2.40 a week, but the Ontario Government is losing many dollars in admission war tax which it should collect from patrons. Mr. Musson pleads that the reel tax should have been graded so that it would not prove an injustice and a burden to the small town exhibitor.

BLACKTON CHILDREN PLAY FRENCH REFUGEES.

The two youngest but by no means least important players in the cast which Commodore J. Stuart Blackton is directing in his production of "The Common Cause" are the producer's small children, Violet and Charles Stuart. As the small stars of the Country Life Series of short subjects, produced by Mrs. Blackton sometime ago and distributed by Vitagraph, they are among the well known children of the screen.

Bootleggers Thrive on Closed Sundays

But Nashville City Officials Continue Antagonistic to Opening Picture Theatres on Sabbath.

WITH city officials continuing in a vein of extreme obstinacy toward any move looking to the inauguration of Sunday moving pictures in Nashville, local amusement men have practically abandoned the idea of running the houses on Sunday for the present at least, in spite of the fact that a straw election conducted by a Nashville newspaper indicated the strong desire of the public for pictures on Sunday.

The Knickerbocker, Fifth avenue, and other houses opened for a few Sundays for the purpose of aiding the thrift stamp drive, charging no admission, entrance being gained by buying a thrift stamp at the box office instead of a theatre ticket. The stamps, of course, were retained by the purchasers, and no fee was collected at the door of the picture shows. This practice proved a heavy burden on the management of the houses, as salaries, lights and other operating expenses ran high, with no return.

The sixty-first annual Tennessee legislature convenes on January 1, 1919, at Nashville, and at that time it is very probable the legislative committee of the Tennessee Exhibitors' League, with headquarters at Memphis, will have ready some form of amendment to the Sunday closing statutes, permitting the operation of moving picture shows on Sunday. Nashville exhibitors have no intention of violating the law as it stands, but concessions could have been easily granted by the city officials looking toward furnishing amusement for the Government munitions plant workers on Sunday.

In speaking of the social conditions in Nashville since the coming of the great powder plant to Hadley's Bend, a suburb of Nashville, a sergeant at police headquarters declared that in spite of the bone dry law being in effect in Tennessee, the increase in drunks on Saturday nights and Sundays has been very noticeable. Last week one of the heaviest drunk calendars recorded on the police blotter in many months was in evidence.

Much of this dissipation, according to officials at the police station, is the result of the powder plant men, some 25,000 of whom are employed at the plant, coming to town on Saturdays and Sundays seeking entertainment, and when they are unable to find any places of amusements on Sunday other than the public parks many of them seek out the bootlegging element for a little "liquid diversion." It is the opinion among those who are most familiar with conditions that the operation of the shows on Sunday would do much toward alleviating the heavy run on the police station blotter.

METRO'S TREASURER RETURNS EAST.

Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of Metro Pictures Corporation, has returned to New York after four months at Metro's West Coast studios supervising production activities. His most recent trip to the coast was his eighteenth, and he declared himself more reluctant than ever to come back east, although Metro's business interests demanded his return.

On the eve of his departure the Metro official was the guest of honor at a good-bye dinner held in a downtown Los Angeles cafe and attended by stars, executives, directors and other members of the producing staff at the Hollywood studios. The diners numbered more than sixty. The evening was enlivened by the presence of a stringed orchestra, which played patriotic and popular airs during the dinner and furnished music for dancing which followed it.

May Allison and Bert Lytell, Metro stars, at present located on the West Coast, were seated at either side of the honor guest. Others attending were George D. Baker, manager of productions; Clifford Butler, studio manager; A. S. and Mrs. LeVino, Wilfred Lucas and Mrs. Lucas, Charles Hundt, Mr. Baker's assistant, and Horace Williams, casting director.

Fire in Kansas City Fxchange Building

Flames Start in Fox Quarters from a Defective Wire, but Are Soon Controlled.

FIRE broke out in the film vault of the Fox Film Company in the Ozark building, Kansas City, on July 24. A flaw in the electric light wire where the drop lamp was connected caused the wire to burn through and the hot end fell against the films. In a flash the flames leaped through the windows in the rear of the Ozark Building to the fourth floor and the Kleine-Edison offices. The flames bridged the alley to the building occupied by the Zahner Manufacturing Company on West Tenth street and did more damage there than where they started. The blaze was a test which proved the Ozark to be fireproof. Elevators continued to operate till all of the occupants were out of the building.

In the Fox office considerable damage was done, but by closing the back court windows the fire was prevented from reaching the Mutual headquarters on the same floor. Mr. Edwards, manager of the Kansas City office of Kleine, rushed into the building and managed to close the fire doors and as a result no damage was done except in the workroom. World offices on the fourth floor with Kleine-Edison were also untouched.

Business went on as usual, as the loss sustained was not heavy, from the fact that practically all the films were either at work or in transit for exhibitors. The chief inconvenience was the total loss of advertising matter. This was offset by neighboring branch exchanges supplying the deficiency.

EXHIBITORS' EMPLOYEES PAY FINES.

It costs at the present time twenty-five dollars in the New York courts to admit a child, unaccompanied by its parent or guardian, to a moving picture theatre, providing it is the defendant's first offense. Payment of the fine may be avoided by serving from five to ten days in the Tombs prison. A second offense doubles the amount of both fine or imprisonment.

Bernhard Levine, ticket taker of the Seventy-second Street Playhouse, pleaded guilty before Justices Edwards, Collins and Herman in the Court of Special Sessions to admitting Mary Huml, fourteen years old. He paid the fine. Anna Tarzian, cashier of the Palace Picture theatre, entered a similar plea for admitting Mark Rooney, twelve years of age, and also paid the fine. Louise DeCasaire, cashier of the Chatham theatre, Chatham Square, was convicted of admitting Margaret Topena, twelve years of age, and was given the alternative of twenty-five dollars or ten days in the Tombs. She paid the fine.

Busy Planning for A. E. A. Convention

Messrs. Frank and Rembusch Are Progressing Favorably with Arrangements—Reconciliation of Opposing Organizations Sought.

LOUIS H. FRANK, Chairman of the A. E. A. convention committee, and Frank J. Rembusch have been very busy on preconvention matters all week. It has been finally arranged that the Navy Relief Society and not the Chicago division of the Red Cross Society shall be the beneficiary of the net proceeds of the grand ball to be given Friday night, September 6, during the National Convention of the American Exhibitors' Association.

The navy band of the organization mentioned will furnish music during the evening, and Chief Yeoman R. J. Mason, of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, has arranged that the Jackies will appear in a series of laughable stunts between dances, while the ball is on.

Captain W. A. Moffet, commander of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station, will be one of the invited speakers during the Chautauqua meetings held on the first three days of the convention.

A telegram was sent to William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, July 31, inviting the members of the organization to meet the A. E. A. during convention week. Telegrams were also sent out to Adolph Zukor, William Fox, Walter W. Irwin, Pat Powers, S. L. Rothapfel, Robert Lieber and others to come on and take part in the program.

Joseph Daniels, secretary of the navy, will be in Indianapolis September 5, and advantage has been taken of that fact by inviting him to come on to Chicago and address a composite gathering of the men in the moving picture business on propaganda work which must be carried on patriotically by the men in it.

Ernest H. Horstmann, of Boston, national secretary-treasurer of the M. P. E. L. of A., and Dale Crittenberger, of Indianapolis, have already made room reservations in the Hotel Sherman for the run of the convention. The Motion Picture Appliance Company, of Boston, has also reserved quarters in the hotel for the exhibition of a new moving picture projecting machine.

Messrs. Rembusch and Frank have devoted considerable time to arranging the program for the convention, and it is expected that it will be off the press in a few days.

These men are both strong for the reconciliation and amalgamation of the opposing exhibitors' factions. They wish to repeat, and to repeat often, that the coming convention will be unlike any other that has yet been held by exhibitors. It is a convention for the entire trade, and the producing, distributing and supplies departments are cordially requested to co-operate and to participate in the proceedings.

MR. COHEN WRITES TO MR. SCHAEFER.

Mr. Peter Schaefer, Jones, Linick & Schaefer, Chicago:

My dear Mr. Schaefer: I am writing to let you know how very much I would like to help you make a big success of of your presidency of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America, and you can depend on my helping you to the fullest extent.

Everything that happened at Boston is over with, in so far as I am concerned. What I had to say, I said to all of the delegates present, and it was intended as constructive criticism so we could build a real worthwhile foundation for amalgamation and the development and growth of our association. There are some defects in our bylaws, etc., that should be remedied, and no doubt you and the splendid executive committee you have associated with you will attend to this in due time. You have a tremendous opportunity, and from what every one tells me you should be able to produce results, and while I am president of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League I would be pleased to serve you.

With kindest personal regards, I am

Very truly yours,

SYDNEY S. COHEN.

ARGUS COMPANY BEGINS INFRINGEMENT SUIT.

The Argus Lamp and Appliance Company of Cleveland, Ohio, has begun suit against the Nu-Movie-Lite Company of Peoria, Ill., for infringement of patent of the adapter now being manufactured by the Argus Lamp and Appliance Company for changing present types of motion picture machines to use Mazda projector lamps.

The Argus is the owner of five distinct letters patent on its appliances and the company announces itself to have been the pioneer in the Mazda branch of motion picture projection.

H. H. Cudmore, general manager of the Argus Company, while in New York this week, said: "Our policy is to prosecute most vigorously all infringements of our letters patent. We can prove unquestionably our priority in the adapter field. Our present adapter represents an evolution extending over a period of several years. Now that Mazda projection is replacing Carbon Arcs we are sure to encounter a certain amount of competition. This we are prepared to combat, but we do not propose to be hampered by competition which is predicated on our own patents and we have instructed our attorneys instantly to begin proceedings against any manufacturer who may put on the market an adapter which encroaches upon our rights."

ALBERTA TO HAVE FOUR-MINUTE MEN.

A committee has been organized in Edmonton, Alberta, for the purpose of providing Four-Minute speakers for the delivery of war speeches in local moving picture theatres. Frank Yeigh of Toronto, secretary of the war lecture bureau, visited Edmonton for the purpose of getting the local committee on its feet for a good getaway.

The first Four-Minute speaker in Edmonton was Lieutenant Roy Stevens, a veteran of the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry, and during the first evening he addressed the crowds at the Empire, Pantages, Hippodrome, Empress and Monarch Theatres. It is estimated that he spoke to 3,000 people at the five houses although it was a hot night.

Brunet Would Put Limit on Feature Output

Pathe Executive Says Indications Are Market Will Be Over-Supplied—Outline of Company's Plans

I HAVE come to the conclusion that now is the time to place a limit, a wise and sane limit, on the output of features." This is the keynote of an important statement by Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., in a statement given out this week. "The output today of five and six-reel features exceeds the demand by four to one," Mr. Brunet goes on to say, "and yet according to published announcement some of the big producers intend to place upon the market an increased number of five and six-reel pictures. Indications are to the effect that the 1918-19 market will be super-saturated with so-called features. As increased outputs almost invariably mean a lessening in quality, exhibitors will soon face a situation where they will find themselves back to the old 'regular service' days, and attempts will be made to force them to play entire programs which reflect the evils of a 'made on time' schedule.

"We saw the trend of events and prepared for it. For a number of months we have been selecting the cream of our feature product. If a picture met with the severe tests of star, story, production and direction which we put upon it, we placed it aside, holding it ready for the proper time to put it out. Now we are fully prepared to enter the field of specialized features with a year's supply of extra-selected star photoplays. We will release them one every four weeks. The success of our selected service booking plan, which we put into operation last March, was contributory to our decision.

"The extra-selected star photoplays are positive box office attractions which will readily lend themselves to the highest type of exploitation methods. These will not be the only features we will put out. From time to time we intend to release others, the product of our present contributing studios and outside producers. We will release no features under the Pathe name, however, that do not thoroughly satisfy us as to quality, and our plans do not contemplate a greater quantity than one Pathe feature every other week.

Will Continue to Release Outside Product.

"In addition to the classes of features which I have mentioned Pathe will also handle first class 'outside' product on regular or occasional release schedule such as the American Film Company's star series featuring Mary Miles Minter, Margarita Fisher and William Russell. These 'outside' features will be handled entirely apart and distinct from the Pathe features and should not be confused with them. As has already been announced, the American features will be handled by the American's own salesmen, operating from the various Pathe exchanges.

"The state of the market is and has been for some time such that it has been very difficult if not impossible to keep good features working continuously. Thus the obtaining of the maximum expectancy of returns on any feature has become impossible. There has been a fever haste to get business on the latest feature. In consequence those which have preceded have been almost, if not entirely forgotten. Many of the best features which have been made have been practically retired before they have played 50 per cent. of the available houses. By diminishing our feature output we can devote much more time to the marketing of each feature, to the careful study of the best exploitation methods for the exhibitor to use. Furthermore we can be certain of a much higher average of quality than is humanly possible under the one or more feature a week conditions.

"On September 22 we will release the first extra-selected photoplay, 'A Japanese Nightingale,' with Fannie Ward as the star. On October 20 will come 'The Bells,' with Frank Keenan as the star, playing the role created by the late Sir Henry Irving. Fannie Ward in 'The Narrow Path,' the A. H. Woods' stage success, will be released on November 17. On December 15 comes Bryant Washburn in 'All Wrong,' the best Washburn picture yet. Bessie Love is the star of 'Carolyn of the Corners,' to be released on January 12. On February 9 we will release Frank Keenan in a most powerful drama, for which we have not yet selected the title, but which we now know under the name of 'The Sierras Mail.'

"Another Extra-Selected Star Photoplay is Fannie Ward in 'Common Clay,' the sensational A. H. Woods' stage success which had such an extraordinary run.

"Among the Pathe Special Features we are able to announce for September 8 'Her Man,' adapted from Charles Neville Buck's well known novel 'The Battle Cry.'

Krauss' Jean Valjean is Remembered.

"On December 29 we will release the second of these Pathe Special Features, Henri Krauss, the premier actor of France, in 'A Vagabond of France.' Mr. Krauss will be remembered as the star of Pathe's famous picture, 'Les Miserables,' and is an artist who has no superior. Pathe has not released any foreign made pictures in a long while, but 'A Vagabond of France' is such a superior and special production in every way that we have no hesitancy in giving it our highest praise.

"A full year's supply of Extra-Selected Star Photoplays has already been selected, but the order of release after March 9 has not yet been determined upon.

"Needless to say we will continue to issue serials, scenics, comedies and short length subjects as in the past. 'Hands Up,' with Ruth Roland, is to be released August 18. Present indications are that it will be a wonderful success. Pearl White has started work upon a new serial which will probably be ready for release before the closing episode of 'Hands Up.' The 'Official War Review' which we are putting out in one reel each week, is already tremendously popular. The tie-up between the Post Travel series and the newspapers is working to the interests of all and is making the pictures popular wherever they play.

"The Harold Lloyd comedies, good as they have been during the past, are showing a constant and highly pleasing improvement. We will continue to release them one every other week, each in one reel. We are fortunate to have been able to secure the services of Stan Laurel between the two theatrical engagements, and the Rolin company made for us five comedies with him as the star. The first of these will be released along the first part of October. And of course our news weekly is another of our short releases which is found on the programs of a majority of the theatres of the country.

"Our plans for the coming year were completed so many weeks ago that we are now in the enviable position of being months ahead on our prints, posters and advertising matter. We expect to have our features in the exchanges a long time in advance of release. The value of this to the exchangeman and exhibitor is obvious.

"We are convinced that we are working along the right lines, and have been greatly pleased to note the enthusiasm of our exchangemen over our change in policy.

"It augurs well for Pathe business during the coming season that the last three months have been the biggest in our history."

KEITH BUYS BRONX'S ROYAL THEATRE.

Sydney S. Cohen has sold for Henry Morgenthau, former ambassador to Turkey, represented by Lackman and Goldsmith, to the B. F. Keith New York Theatres Co., the Royal theatre, at Westchester and Bergen avenues, Bronx, New York City. The building covers a plot 120 by 200 by 132 feet, and the theatre seats about 2,300. It was built at a cost of about $650,000. Additional property has been purchased to enlarge the seating capacity of the theatre.

BUSHMAN MARRIES BEVERLY BAYNE.

Following closely upon the announcement of the divorce granted to his first wife, Josephine H. Bushman, comes the news that Francis X. Bushman has married Beverly Bayne, his leading woman. The ceremony was performed in Baltimore on Monday, July 29, and the bride and bridegroom are now spending their honeymoon at Bushmanor, Riderwood, Md., the country home of Mr. Bushman.

BIDS WANTED ON THEATRE EQUIPMENT.

R. R. Smith, director of Liberty theatres, will be pleased to receive for the motion picture division bids on motion picture equipment to be installed in new Liberty theatres now building.

These bids should be submitted to R. R. Smith, War Department, Commission on Training Camp Activities, Washington, D. C.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

What Los Angeles Exhibitors Are Doing

Big Improvement at Tally's—Theatre Men Hold Luncheon—Shamrock Theatre has a Fire.

Improvements at Tally's Broadway.

CARPENTERS and painters have been busy for the last three weeks at Tally's Broadway theatre, making many novel and effective improvements in the house. An entirely new stage setting has been built, and with the new electrical apparatus that has ben installed, the enlarged orchestra pit, and the new chairs for the entire house that are on their way from New York, to say nothing of the special features now being booked for early showing, Tally's Broadway will soon be in a position to give increased pleasure and satisfaction to its patrons. The new Knabe Ampico grand piano just installed at this theatre, in connection with the great pipe organ, will be one of the big features of the musical program.

Theatre Men's Luncheon.

The Theatre Owners' Association gave a luncheon at the Hamburger Cafe on July 24 at noon, at which Governor Stephens, Edward Cowan, state commander of the Four-Minute Men; Marshall Stimson, Sheriff Cline, Judge Craig, Marie Dressler and David Hartford of the World Film Corporation were guests of honor. The entertainment was presided over by Frank A. MacDonald, and was one of the bi-weekly banquets at which the association, which represents the principal motion picture exhibitors of Southern California, entertains its guests.

Film Explosion at Shamrock Theatre.

When a news weekly film caught fire in the Shamrock theatre projection room, the explosion was so powerful that C. T. Sewell, operator, was forcibly expelled from the booth and rolled down the stairs before he could catch himself. The fire started an automatic sprinkler, and the worst damage was done by the water. No one was seriously injured, although when Mrs. N. L. Smith, cashier of the theatre, grabbed the day's cash receipts and cried out to the audience that there was no danger, and for the people to take their time in going out, there was almost a stampede. The fire was out by the time the fire department got to the scene, and the damages to theatre, projection machine and furniture is approximated at $3,000.

Smoke Room at Kinema.

Emil Kehrlein, Jr., manager of the Kinema theatre, has established a smoking corner for devotees of the weed among his patrons, who may hereafter sit back at ease in that part of the balcony set apart for them and see a good show while puffing away on cigar, cigarette or pipe. Handsome new chairs upholstered in dull blue alligator, and a novel lighting arrangement makes the corner very attractive.

Miller and Leonhardt in Chicago.

Fred Miller and Harry Leonhardt, proprietors of Miller's new theatre going up at Eighth and Main streets, made a hurried and very mysterious trip to Chicago recently, supposedly in connection with appurtenances for the new house.

Newsboys Noisily View "Pershing's Crusaders."

More than five hundred newsboys were guests of the Alhambra theatre and the Express-Tribune, a Los Angeles daily, in the week of July 21. When the organist, Miss Gay Weaver, played all the patriotic airs in her repertoire during the unreeling of "Pershing's Crusaders," the boys took up the chorus of each song with noise and enthusiasm, and some melody. Several of the boys were accompanied by their little sisters, and a few by their dogs, all of whom were admitted and no questions asked. The boys were guests—privileged guests at that—and everything was done by the Alhambra management and the Express-Tribune to make their enjoyment complete.

The Superba theatre is proudly and patriotically displaying a new American flag in front of the house, that is the envy of the other playhouses in the downtown district. The flag is 24 by 36 feet, and is the largest on Broadway.

Fred Miller, of Miller's theatre, has returned from a trip to San Francisco.

Los Angeles Exchanges.

William Alexander, district manager for the William L. Sherry Service, has definitely arranged for the first run of the Sherry features in Los Angeles, and has gone on a trip that will cover all the West Coast exchanges. Mr. Alexander will devote considerable time to the San Francisco and Seattle branches before he returns to Los Angeles.

Louis Hyman, formerly connected with the All-Star Features, Inc., of San Francisco, has assumed management of that corporation's branch office in Los Angeles, upon the retirement of Irving M. Lesser, who has taken a position in Uncle Sam's army.

Helen Keller to Make a Novel Picture

Famous American Woman Will Produce Humanitarian Subject Carrying Message to Whole World.

HELEN KELLER, famous the country over for having overcome three of the most dreaded afflictions of the human race, blindness, dumbness and deafness, is in Los Angeles, preparing to make a great humanitarian film that will carry a message from her to the whole world.

Miss Keller is accompanied by her friend and teacher, Mrs. Annie Sullivan Macy; by the author of her forthcoming play, Dr. Francis Trevelyan Miller, historian and scientific writer; by George Foster Platt, who produced the stage version of Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird," and will direct Miss Keller in her picture; and by a number of business and professional associates.

Dr. Edward Liebfried, of New York, is the organizer and business adviser of the Helen Keller Film Corporation, and is a strong believer in Miss Keller's success. She has been tested for the screen, and it has been found that her personality and appeal, dominant features of her personal appearance, reflects well from the film.

Work on the new picture will be started with in a few days at the Robert Brunton studios.

Ford Serial Progressing.

The fifteen episode serial which Francis Ford has written and is directing is now under way, with Ford himself as the leading character, that of a detective, and a cast including Mae Gaston, Elsie Van Name, Otto Hill, Francis Feeney, Duke Worne, Pete Gerald, Jerry Ashe and John Thwaite. Much of the action of the story is laid in Egypt.

Off to War.

Ernie Shields, actor-soldier husband of Betty Schade, Universal leading woman, has been transferred from Fort McArthur, near Los Angeles, where Betty could see him every week, to an eastern cantonment.

Jack Blackwell, scenic artist at the Golden West studios in Glendale, has joined the aviation division of the army, and is in training at Arcadia. G. M. Anderson, head of the Golden West Company, assured Jack his position would be waiting for him when he returns from the war with a handful of tail feathers from the German eagle.

Al Cohn, Mary Pickford's personal representative, is about to join the army, and is winding up his business affairs before he goes.

Dr. Lloyd Mace, emergency physician at Universal City, has joined the Hospital Corps of the Allied armies, and will soon depart for France.

Richard Marshall, former treasurer of the Majestic theatre, is in training at Camp Kearney.

Fred Putnam, for years floor manager at Pantages vaudeville and motion picture playhouse, has been called to the colors, and the Pantages' service flag boasts another star.

Irving M. Lesser, manager of the Los Angeles branch of the All-Star Features, has gone to work for Uncle Sam.

Ed Durling, writer of film news for an eastern paper, has enlisted in the balloon school at Arcadia, Cal.

Eltinge Honin' for Work.

Julian Eltinge has completed his house at Silver Lake, and has furnished it with rare old furniture and tapestries which he brought at different times from abroad. He has also planted a fair sized war garden, and his classic features have become tanned and burned to an almost unrecognizable condition.

Eltinge has entered into a partnership with Fred J. Balshofer, who is expected back from New York in a few days, when the pair will begin preparations for the filming of Eltinge's stage successes, "The Fascinating Widow," "Cousin Lucy," and others. Mr. Eltinge is very anxious to begin work on his pictures, as he wishes to complete all the productions planned before his vaudeville tour begins on January 1, 1919. While he is waiting, the actor is writing his experiences from the time he started in vaudeville several years ago until now, taking in his tours through France and Germany. In the meantime he is expecting his father and mother to visit him in the near future.

Gladys Brockwell a Bride.

Another romantic wedding that links the film world with the war is that of Gladys Brockwell, Fox star, to Harry Edwards, formerly a director at Triangle, but for the last six months in training at Camp Lewis. Miss Brockwell, during a short vaction granted her from the studio, went to American Lake for a visit, and while there was persuaded to become Mrs. Edwards before Mr. Edwards' company was sent to France. The pair went to Seattle to be married, and after a few days' honeymoon Miss Brockwell came back to Los Angeles to begin work on her new picture, "The Strange Woman."

Fell Down a Canyon.

Jack Oaker, husband of Belle Bennett, Triangle star, who has been at his home in Santa Monica on sick leave from the San Pedro Submarine Base, fell off an embankment near his home on July 24, and was found in an unconscious condition by a party of automobilists who were driving in the canyon. Oaker was taken to a hospital at Venice, where the physicians said he was suffering from a concussion of the brain. No one was with him at the time of his fall. After a day or two at the hospital he recovered rapidly, and was dismissed in another few days.

Mme. Yorska has arrived in Los Angeles, and has made known the fact that she is under a three years' contract with the Matzene Feature Film Company, and that her productions will range from comedy to tragedy and from modern to classic stories. Among stories under consideration for Mme. Yorska are two of Gertrude Atherton's novels, "The Doomed Woman" and "Tower of Ivory." Work will be started on the first picture in a few weeks at the Brunton studios.

Golden West Policy.

An announcement has been made by the officials of the Golden West Photoplay Company of their intention to limit the yearly production of film plays at the Glendale studios to eight five-reel features, starring G. M. Anderson, formerly known on the screen as Broncho Billy. This policy was adopted under the suggestion of Mr. Anderson and Jesse J. Robbins, director of productions. The first of the new Anderson features will soon be released under the title of "The Son of a Gun," and will be followed by "Red Blood and Yellow."

Studio Club Gives Tea.

Lois Weber was hostess at a tea given by the Studio Club of Hollywood last Sunday, at which two hundred guests were present. Miss Weber gave a brief talk on the work being done by the Motion Picture War Relief Association. She was assisted by her sister, who is also her secretary, and by Mildred Harris, and plans were made for a dance and entertainment to be given by the Studio Club in honor of the men stationed at the Officers' Training School at Hollywood.

Christie Comedies for August.

Acting on the belief that changes are welcome now and then in all kinds of films, Al E. Christie, director of the Christie Comedies, is trying out a number of new ideas, and a different and distinct note of originality that extends from title to tailpiece has been added to all of the Christie comedies for August.

Dorothy Dane and Bobby Vernon sound the first new note in the August 5 release, which is called "Just Plain Folks."

Ethel Lynne and Jay Belasco follow in a comedy based on acquaintance with the people next door, entitled "Know Your Neighbor," which is ready for showing on August 12.

August 19 brings Dorothy Dane and Bobby Vernon again, this time in a question to married folk in the shape of a play called "Does Your Husband Flirt?"

The release for August 26 gives Ethel Lynne a new support in the person of "Smiling" Billy Mason, in a light and airy fun vehicle entitled "You Can't Believe Everything."

Whitman Bennett in Town.

Whitman Bennett, general all-around factotum of the Paramount-Artcraft offices in New York, is in Los Angeles conferring with the local Lasky executives. It is four years since Mr. Bennett was in Los Angeles, and he found many changes when he arrived at the Lasky plant on Vine street. The converted garage where Cecil B. De Mille was making films four years ago has grown and spread out until it covers the whole block, and last week William De Mille was forced to go over on the Fairbanks lot to stage a picture because of lack of room.

Mr. Bennett will make an indefinite stay in Southern California.

Little Mary Still Out of Work.

Mary Pickfard is still receiving offers. Metro is said to have approached Little Mary with its hat in one hand and $2,000,000 in the other, all of said money to be paid for either six or eight pictures.

The First National Exhibitors have respectfully tendered an offer of $250,000 each for eight productions.

Goldwyn is supposed to be loading up a truck of simoleons and getting ready to make an offer.

It has been suggested that Charlie Murray, the well known auctioneer of the films, be put in charge of the case and auction Mary off.

Tars Entertained by Stars.

Three thousand of Uncle Sam's sailors who are being trained at the Submarine Base were entertained by a company of screen and stage stars who offered their services as a patriotic privilege on the night of July 23, with a monster performance given under the auspices of the Stage Women's War Relief, with Mrs. Lillian Brockwell and her daughter Gladys of the Fox studios as sponsors, and Herbert Heyes, of the Bessie Barriscale Company as stage manager. The show was given on the stage built up inside of the barracks by the Fox company.

Fred Stone of Lasky did some of his cleverest and nimblest dancing.

Julian Eltinge appeared in his swellest gown and his sweetest voice.

Wallace Reid was there with a number of different musical instruments.

Alice Forrest and Smiling Billy Mason put on a big fun stunt of great originality.

William Desmond, Herbert Heyes and Mildred Hollen staged a tabloid of "Mrs. Temple's Telegram."

Gladys Brockwell and William Scott staged a little farce called "Catastrophe."

Bonita, a stage comedienne, Rena Rogers, and Pete Malone, a sailor boy, sang.

Rubbernecking in Filmland

Personally Conducted by Giebler.

LADIES and gentlemen, the group of pea green buildings at the foot of the hills the gentle slopes of which we are now descending are the William S. Hart studios.

No, lady, in spite of the fact that William S., or Bad Bill Hart, as he is usually called, has made his name a household word because of his realistic depiction of many lawless characters of the wild and woolly west, none of the meanness has been soaked up by his system. In reality he is as gentle as a spring lamb.

An interesting circumstance that gives a true insight to the real self of this popular player is found in the location of his studio. The name of this thoroughfare we are now traversing, and on which the Hart plant is located, is Effie street, as you may observe by casting your eyes to yonder lamp post.

This simple fact should silence forever those who contend that bad-man parts can only be portrayed successfully by men with bad hearts. No player would have ever selected a street with the sweet and simple name of Effie if he were not a gentle and kindly soul himself.

My friends, the buckskin shirt that covers the bosom of the desperate desperado of Dead Man's Gulch may hide a heart of the purest gold; a brain attuned to the higher and more esthetic things of life may be located immediately under the twelve-pound hat of the Half-breed Heavy; legs that would rather go to the succor of the distressed damsel of the piece than to the blasted pine tree at the foot of the hill, there to await the stage coach with foul intent, may be concealed beneath the leather pants of the lone bandit of the films.

Since Mr. Hart stages most of his pictures out-of-doors, it is seldom that he can be found at the studio. He has just returned from a location trip to the Mexican border, and by special arrangement we may watch him at work on interior stuff for a few minutes.

Step this way, please.

The sounds of canine conflict emanating from the corridor are the results of the ambition of a youthful bull pup who thinks he can lick an Airedale terrier that loafs around the place. The pup tries it every day at this hour.

On this stage, a scene is being made for Mr. Hart's next picture, which will be called "Border Wireless," the story of which has to do with German intrigue.

As you will observe, the set is very carefully built up. All Hart's sets are this way. No scenery of any kind is used. The set represents a post office, telegraph, express, railway, freight and ticket office, a combination found very often in the southwest.

The young lady behind the counter telling the man he must get a book because he has brought in a sewing machine to be shipped somewhere is Wanda Hawley, the leading lady of the piece. The polite person, conversing with her is Gerrude Short. Charles Arling and Jillmore Mason are also in this scene.

The man with the fabulous whiskers just out of camera range is Eric von Ritzau, the villain, who has the part of a Hun spy. You will notice that Mr. Hart directs his own pictures.

Mr. Hart is one of the few favorites of the films who has actually lived the life he depicts on the screen. Bill was born and brought up in Dakota in her wildest and woolliest days. Chasing the grizzly bear, the buffalo, the badger and bob cat to their lair was his daily pastime.

These stirring experiences which filled his younger days enables him to put an essence of reality and truth to his films that no other player whose ideas of life of the west has been gained by reading Kingsley's "Westward Ho" and the works of the late J. F. Cooper could ever hope to attain.

Much of Bill's childhood was spent with the Sioux Indians of Dakota, and he speaks the Sioux language like a native redskin. Bill finds this very helpful at times. When he desires to metamorphose himself from an ordinary citizen into a ravening avenger, he repeats the following words: "We cha sha che cha," a phrase in Sioux meaning "He is a very bad man," and immediately he finds himself in the proper mood.

As we proceed to the next point of interest, a few words on the street nomenclature of Los Angeles will not be amiss.

We are now traveling on one of the most historic highways of the west, El Camina Real, meaning the King's Highway in English. Many of the names given to the streets by the early Spanish settlers, such as Figueroa, El Centro, Loma, Mariposa and Paloma, still remain in the older parts of town, but when new streets are made, the more poetic names of the male and female relatives of the real estate boomers are bestowed upon them.

Witness Effie, whom we have just left. No one with the soul of a poet can deny that such names as Effie, Elizabeth, Henry, Ezra, Hostetter, Gertrude and Gladys are more appealing and tickles the ear drum to a greater extent than the sonorous sounding names of Spanish origin.

We now find ourselves at the Sunset studios, the erstwhile home of the Triangle players. A number of companies are located here, including the D. W. Griffith organization.

Clara Kimball Young has just completed arrangements to make movies at this place, while poor but proud Pasadena makes up its mind whether or not she will be allowed to invade its sacred precincts. Many of the business and working people of Pasadena want the Young studio, but the artistocratic and highbrow element of the place say nay, while preachers are thundering denunciations from their pulpits against the threatened invasion.

The stage in front of us is set for Dorothy Gish, who has blossomed out as a producer on her own account. Yes, lady, Gish is a real name and not one adopted for stage purposes. The small person wearing the cap with the saucy knob on its top is Dorothy.

The man occuping a small portion of the large chair is Elmer Clifton, Miss Gish's director. The man shooting billiards in the other set is George Siegmann. This is George's last day at the studio, he has canceled his engagement with D. W. Griffith and signed up with Uncle Sam, and he will shortly go to France where he will play a part in the greatest drama the world has ever seen.

The man standing near the lady with the papers is none other than D. W. Griffith. Dave is one of our best known directors and has made some excellent movies in his day, including "The Birth of a Nation" and "Hearts of the World," and he is now turning out a series of films to be released through the Artcraft program.

Approaching Mr. Griffith from the left is Bobby Harron. Bobby, who is one of our most popular juveniles, has just had a great wrong done to him.

Some weeks ago a hirsute growth appeared on his upper lip, which, after tender care and intensive cultivation, developed into a mustache—small, it is true, but nevertheless a mustache that was plainly visible across a moderately wide street.

Immediately, whited sepulchers in the guise of friends began making scurrilous remarks about the mustache. Others took it up. It got to be the style to make jokes about Bobby's mustache. A certain newspaper writer named Price guyed him in the columns of his sheet.

Mr. Harron, being of a shrinking disposition, began to think he had done something criminal. He was hounded and badgered until he was forced to seek safety from ridicule in a safety, and laid his beautiful mustaches under the gillettine.

Little Thrills of the Week

Gloria Hope has had her dog clipped and the poor thing acts like a girl in her first one-piece bathing suit.

Kenneth McGaffey is still smoking the one-quart pipe he bought when he went East with Wallie Reid last spring.

Bennie Zeldman complains bitterly against the custom of referring to Kansas City as an Eastern town, says it seems very near and dear to him now, and the expression "in the East" sounds so far away.

F. A. Miller, who is building one of the largest theatres in the country had down his hammer and saw and grabbed off four days' vacation. First day was spent in making up his mind to leave the work, second day, actually vacated—off the job four hours, then dropped around to see how things were going on. Measured the depth of a sewer being dug by falling into it. Third day, caught one large fish and divided it among his neighbors. Fourth day, went back to work.

Studio Shorts

THEDA BARA and her company, in charge of J. Gordon Edwards, went to Catalina Islands last week to make scenes for a new feature.

Gladys Brockwell was hostess at the Sunday canteen held at the Mason opera house on July 21. Her assistants were Mrs. Frank Lloyd, Mrs. Mary Mann, mother of Bertha Mann, and Vera Lewis. The guests of honor were Wallace Reid and Grace Darmond, and Mrs. Wallace Reid poured tea.

Anna Mae Walthall, sister of Henry B., is playing an important role in a forthcoming Harry Carey production.

Paul Willis, playing juvenile leads in the G. M. Anderson features, is yet under military age, but he has joined the Hollywood Training School, so as to be ready when he does become old enough to join the real army.

A secret and popular vote has been cast by the members of the Los Angeles film colony to determine the leader of the grand march at the Film Players Ball at the Shrine Auditorium August 3. Stars were barred, but character actors, members of stock companies and extras were eligible.

George Melford has taken Lila Lee and a company of thirty-four Laskyites to Catalina Islands, where scenes for "Worse Than a Pirate" will be taken on the captured German raider "Agassiz," recently overtaken on the high seas by naval vessels.

Tsuro Aoki has written a child's play which, when produced, will have as its star little Mary Jane Irving, whose work in the latest Sessue Hayakawa production has earned the little actress much commendation.

Frank Elliott, formerly with the Theda Bara Fox company, has gone over to Universal.

Wellington Cross, regular stage actor, has canceled his vaudeville engagements to take part in a picture being made on the west coast.

Jack Mulhall wants to be godfather to a few divisions of Red Cross nurses.

Herbert Warren, for some time past Fatty Arbuckle's chief comedy adviser, is going back into vaudeville with his wife, Valerie Bergere.

Charles Chaplin and Mildred Harris both deny that they are engaged to be married, all rumors to the contrary notwithstanding, and despite the fact that they are frequently seen together. Both admit that they are good friends, however.

Arthur Hoyt, former casting director at Triangle, has been appointed as casting director at Universal City. Hoyt has just finished playing an important part in "The Yellow Dog."

Mae Murray has been asked by Secretary McAdoo to make a propaganda film in the interests of the Fourth Liberty Loan drive, and she has dropped all other work to make the picture for the Government.

Eddie Laemmle, besides being newly appointed assistant to Director Jack Dillon at Universal City, is also an officer at the Hollywood Officers' Training School on two nights a week.

Fay Tincher has been engaged to take part in the Billy Parson comedies.

Rollin S. Sturgeon will direct Monroe Salisbury's coming feature for the Bluebird program.

Nell Shipman, Vitagraph star, is writing a scenario to be produced by an independent concern this fall.

Mrs. Oliver Morosco and Marie Dressler have been elected members of the board of directors of the Stage Women's War Relief.

Mary Miles Minter, her mother and sister, and William Russell came down from Santa Barbara to attend the Submarine Base carnival on July 22.

George Holt has severed his long connection with the Vitagraph Company and will rest a while before accepting any other engagement.

Mary Pickford made a farewell visit to Camp Kearney last week and took along a print of her latest Artcraft film, "Johanna Enlists," in which "her regiment" shares honors with her, to show her godsons before they all leave for France.

Sallie Polk Merritt, a young society queen of Los Angeles, appears in an important part in Dorothy Phillips' new picture, "Until We Meet Again."

Winifred Westover has returned from the American studios at Santa Barbara, where she played leading parts in two of the recent William Russell productions, "Hobbs in a Hurry" and "All the World to Nothing."

Helen Jerome Eddy was the first Los Angeles film actress to enlist with Uncle Sam. Helen is now leading woman in the stock company at Camp Kearney.

Carmel Myers is back at Universal City after a six-weeks' trip through the east and various southern army camps.

Lila "Cuddles" Lee can now be said to be a full-fledged film star. She has bought a car and has had a wreck.

Parsons Ends His Eastern Vacation

Goldwyn Comedian Stops Off in Cleveland and Gives the Young Natives a Sweet Treat.

SMILING BILL" Parsons, hero of Capitol Comedies, is on his way to his Hollywood studio to resume the work interrupted when the vacation lure called him East several weeks ago. Upon his arrival on the West coast he will at once begin his thirteenth comedy for Goldwyn distribution. Before he came East he completed enough subjects to carry his releases to October 7.

Though the portly comedian made the cross-country trip primarily for pleasure, he found time for business. And in Cleveland, on his way back, he combined business and pleasure and found fun and profit. Two personal appearances at the Stillman theatre there served to introduce him to several thousand motion picture fans who had never seen him in the flesh and luncheons and other entertainments made his stay doubly pleasant.

Parsons passed the morning of his day in Cleveland in the offices of Goldwyn's branch, where H. A. Bandy, the manager, introduced him to a score of exhibitors. At noon there was a luncheon at the Hollenden Hotel, attended by representatives of all the local newspapers and half a dozen theatre owners and managers. At 3 o'clock the comedian appeared at the Stillman before a full house and was warmly received.

The real fun for Bill came later in the afternoon, however. Having loaded the tonneau of his automobile with small boxes of candy, Parsons and his party visited the Jewish Orphans Home, where his appearance, duly heralded, totally upset the routine of that institution and gave 300 youngsters a joyous hour. Bill made a speech advising all the little boys and girls to be good orphans. He said he had wanted all his boyhood to be an orphan but had never had any luck.

The comedian's next stop was at St. Joseph's Orphans' Home, where there was another enthusiastic reception. Each child there, upon being presented to the comedian, made a pretty little curtsey and walked off with a box of candy. Then all of them sang hymns and Bill said he had had a great time.

At both places motion pictures were taken by the cameraman of the Cleveland Plain-Dealer's Screen Magazine. These were later shown in scores of theatres in Cleveland and throughout northern Ohio.

Commodore Kirby, of the Cleveland Yacht Club, invited Parsons to dine with him at the club in the evening. Another movie was made at the club of the comedian being welcomed by the commodore and a bunch of his "beauties." Bill got the best looking one for a dance partner and passed the evening initiating her into the mysteries of California steps, leaving off only long enough to be whisked again to the Stillman, where, despite the rain, another packed house greeted him.

George Davis Hooks Up with Lesser

General Manager of Mid West Hearts of the World Company Formerly Was Manager of Alcazar.

A PROMINENT film visitor to New York during the past week was George H. Davis, general manager of the Mid West Hearts of the World Company. Mr. Davis for the past twenty years has been prominently identified with amusement enterprises in the West and was recently business manager of the Alcazar theatre in San Francisco. He has, however, disposed of his other interests to become associated with Sol L. Lesser in handling the twenty-two states for which Mr. Lesser secured rights to "Hearts of the World."

The executives of the Mid West Hearts of the World Company consist of Mr. Davis and Mr. Lesser, and an office will be opened in Chicago with Mr. Davis in charge, from which territory consisting of Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota, South Dakota, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and Texas, will be handled.

The remainder of the territory, consisting of the states of California, Oregon, Washington, Idaho, Nevada, Utah, Wyoming, Colorado, Montana, Arizona and New Mexico, will be handled from San Francisco by Mr. Lesser as president of All Star Feature Distributors, Inc.

The present plans call for the placing of twenty companies in each of these territories, each company carrying complete equipment for the presentation of this production, including orchestras averaging twenty pieces. In the San Francisco office Mr. Lesser will have charge of contracts for showings, while John A. Brehany is in charge of the organization of the road companies. In the Chicago office H. O. Martin, formerly handling special productions for Selig, Clune, and other producers, will be in charge of contracts, while Fred McLellan, at one time manager of Luna Park, is in charge of organization.

Under an arrangement with Mr. Lesser, Mike Rosenberg of the De Luxe Feature Films, Seattle, one of Mr. Lesser's associates in State Right Distributors, Inc., is associated in the handling of "Hearts of the World" for Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana.

General to Observe O. Henry Birthday

On Author's Fifty-fifth Anniversary Distributing Company Will Release Sixty-fourth Adaptation.

GENERAL FILM is planning to observe the fifty-fifth anniversary of the birth of William Sydney Porter (O. Henry) on September 2 by releasing the sixty-fourth screen version of the noted author's inimitable stories. While the name of the story to be filmed for this purpose has not been announced, it is expected that it will be one of the strongest and most popular of the several hundred short stories written by O. Henry.

This will be the second film observance of O. Henry's birthday anniversary. Last September General Film Company issued the several four-reel O. Henry subjects which marked the most ambitious step yet taken in the work of creating a living library of the author. The best of the stories for two-reel production are now filmed as Broadway Star Features for General Film Company.

No other writer, living or dead, has ever been honored by having such an extraordinary large number of his stories picturized, and plans for the coming month will set this figure at a much higher notch, it is announced.

"The screen versions of the O. Henry stories have more than duplicated the huge success enjoyed by these stories in their original form," said a General Film official. "The number of O. Henry fans, already numbered in the millions before the first picture was photographed, has been increased by many millions, in fact, the army of O. Henry film fans is many times larger than the original army of O. Henry admirers. This fact is indicated by the tremendous increase in the sale of O. Henry's books since the first story was filmed. Nearly 3,000,000 copies of his books have been sold to date, and there seems to be no prospect of a let up in the demand. More than one million copies of his books were sold in England in one season.

FOX BUYS "THE ROAD TO BERLIN."

The announcement is made that William Fox has purchased "The Road to Berlin," by Gladys Wright-Ukers, for production by William Farnum. Work probably will begin after the completion of the Zane Grey books which have just been bought by William Fox. Mr. Farnum completed one Zane Grey book, "Riders of the Purple Sage," which will be released in September, and is now at work on another, "The Rainbow Trail," also scheduled for early release. The two other Grey novels which he will film are "The Lone Star Ranger" and "The Last of the Duanes."

Commission Ousts Major Funkhouser

After Trial of Five Weeks the Merit Board Finds Him Guilty on Brief Survey of Testimony.

THE hearing of the Funkhouser trial ended Monday afternoon, July 30, having occupied just about five weeks. The city civil service commission board ruled at the conclusion of the trial that no oral arguments would be heard on the evidence placed in the record. This ruling was strongly opposed by counsel for the defense. The board then took the case under advisement.

The ruling of the board was given out Wednesday night, less than forty-eight hours after the trial ended. It found the major guilty of the charges brought by Acting Chief of Police Alcock and ordered that he be discharged from the office of second deputy superintendent of police and from the service of the city of Chicago. The two aids of the former second deputy were also found guilty of the charges brought against them and were ordered discharged.

Steps were taken immediately by counsel for the discharged officials to file an appeal in the Circuit Court. It was announced that Major Funkhouser and his aids will take the case to the Supreme Court, if necessary.

Major Funkhouser, up to the time of writing, has refused to give an opinion on the decision other than that, "It was inevitable. I was surprised at the suddeness of the decision, but the verdict against me and my two co-workers was not the least surprising."

Shelby M. Singleton, secretary of the Citizens' Association of Chicago, says that the ousting of the major and his aids is a misfortune to the city. "The major and his men have been a thorn in the side of the vice interests in the city," he gave out. "If it should be disclosed that the major was displaced so that no check on vice activities could be kept the voters should hold Major Thompson responsible."

Miss Harriet Vittum, of the Northwestern University Settlement, had the following to say: "The commission spent five weeks taking evidence and then passed on it in a few minutes. I don't see how anyone could go over this mass of testimony in the short time given it by the commission."

Following are several paragraphs from a lengthly editorial in the Tribune, in the issue of August 2, under the heading, "Politics, Police and Funkhouser":

The dismissal of Major Funkhouser from his position as second deputy superintendent of police by the ruling of the civil service commission lacks every quality which would command public confidence. The commission found the charges against the deputy superintendent and his aids, Borland and Thorey, unproved by evidence which did not change at all the opinion of many men and women qualified by training and experience to judge that Mr. Funkhouser has handled the very difficult problems of his office with consistent courage, loyalty, and good purpose.

We are certain that the observing and thinking people of the city feel with regard to the Funkhouser case that political and police stratagem have been successful in removing a man against whom the real charge was that he did too well something that was not really wanted done.

The case against Mr. Funkhouser is regarded as an attack upon him and, by the ruling of the commission, a successful one. The case had all the atmosphere and color of political processes which we optimistically and probably foolishly assumed were parts of outgrown methods. It has a grotesque lack of plausibility, and yet it insists on every aspect in which it is presented that an effort was made to get a man whose activities were embarrassing, that this effort went forward against the expressions of public opinion and in disregard of them placidly and determinedly to its object.

The successful attempt to get Major Funkhouser and remove him from activities in which he has been commended and which are needed for moral security and decency not only has every appearance of an assault upon the protection upon which the city has been depending but it has the suggestion that in municipal affairs we have gone back to methods against which there was much planning and much fighting twenty and thirty years ago.

Our municipal progress seems to have been a retrogression. The Funkhouser case has this appearance. We do not believe that the ruling of the civil service commission was justified by the truth of the situation, however much color of justification may have been contrived in evidence.

The News of the same date had an editorial headed, "Getting Rid of Major Funkhouser," from which these excerpts have been taken:

As to the charges against the major and his aids, some who have studied the testimony hold that the prosecution failed to establish either inefficiency, neglect of duty or insubordination. It is lamentably true that Major Funkhouser's downfall is thought by various workers in the cause of civic decency to be due to orders from the ruthless and audacious political machine that rules Chicago. Major Funkhouser's real offense, it is widely believed, was independence of the city hall politicians, a determination to enforce the law and fight professional vice to the best of his ability.

Such an official is undesirable and troublesome to a spoils machine at all times and particularly on the eve of an important primary election.

Lease Ground for Randolph Theatre

Jones, Linick & Schaefer Are Building a Beautiful "Loop" House Where Top Notch Pictures Only Will Be Shown.

THE firm of Jones, Linick & Schaefer has secured a long-term lease on the new building at 14-16 West Randolph street, where the El Mar Cafeteria had a short-lived existence. The location is one of the best on Chicago's "White Way," being only a few doors from State street and about as many from the Colonial Theatre.

This valuable lease gives this old established firm a fine opportunity to build a modern theatre for moving pictures within the "Loop," one that is destined to become a landmark in Chicago as well known as the Orpheum on State street.

The new theatre will be known as the Randolph. Work has already been started on the structure, the well-known architect Henry L. Newhouse being intrusted with the designing of the plans and their carrying out.

As the present foundations were laid for a ten-story building not quite a year ago, much time will be saved in completing the Randolph, and it is expected that it will be in readiness for opening some time in November. Architect Newhouse has been given carte blanche in the construction, interior scheme and decorations, so that the Randolph will doubtless be—what its owners intend it to be—the leading and the most beautiful moving picture theatre in the "Loop."

Jones, Linick & Schaefer have been waiting long for just such an opportunity, as it will give them a "Loop" theatre, where high class moving pictures can be shown exclusively. At the present writing the seating capacity of the Randolph cannot be definitely given, but it is expected that it will be 1,000 seats, more or less.

Healy, Wizard of South Halsted Street

Texan Turns Five-Cent, Rundown Theatre in Cheap Neighborhood into Successful Business Venture.

THERE is always a new way to shelve the older order of things if we could only get the insight, or vision, just as R. A. Healy, owner of the Monogram Theatre, 3520 South Halsted street, Chicago, happily convinced his friends and neighbors recently.

Mr. Healy hails from Texas, and he came all the way to Chicago to make a success as an exhibitor. Strange to say he elected to settle on South Halsted street, where cheap picture theatres and still cheaper pictures abound. No one before Healy arrived ever thought of charging over five cents in the vicinity of the Monogram. That theatre, when he bought it, had the real poverty atmosphere—a glaring, flaring lobby display outside and old, "rainy," backnumber pictures inside. But Texas Healy's talisman changed all that, and his neighbors are still rubbing their eyes to find out whether they are dreaming or not.

Mr. Healy's first move was the purchase of a five thousand-dollar organ for his house of 432 seats. Then he rented the best pictures he could secure, clothed his lobby with attractive, artistic posters and ran up the admission from 5 cents to 10 and 15 cents. Result: He has been showing to capacity, as a rule, ever since, because his patrons know that he is giving them their money's worth right at home, saving them the extra expense of going to the "Loop"!

Andrew Karzas Shows Novel Film.

Andrew Karzas, managing director of the Woodlawn Theatre Company, gave his patrons a novel treat last week by running off "The Honor Roll," a short film of about 700 feet, which shows the soldiers from the Seventh Ward now fighting in France, also enlisted men from that district now training at military camps. The film was made from still photographs of the men which had been obtained from relatives. The moving picture showed the men in natural size, the name and present address of each being shown in connection. Mr. Karzas states that the film gave much pleasure to the relatives and friends of the boys on the first three days of last week.

Silee Film Exchange Is New Name.

The Greiver & Herz Film Exchange, with headquarters in the Consumers' Building, was reorganized last week when Lee Herze, the junior member of the firm, purchased the stock held by S. B. Greiver, president of the concern. Mr. Herz, who has succeeded the retiring president, announces that the former policy of the exchange will remain unchanged, under the new title, Silee Film Exchange. President Herz announces he will give out in the near future some important news regarding new features which will be produced by his organization and the policy of expansion started under the old firm name of Greiver & Herz.

"Hearts of the World" at the Colonial continues its remarkable success without any signs of failing interest. To the contrary, indeed, the long lines of eager people waiting on Randolph street for a chance to get to the box office afford daily wonderment not only to out-of-town visitors, but to old-time residents of the city as well. It is a great tribute to the master director of moving pictures.

Mutual Buys "Little Orphant Annie."

"Little Orphant Annie," a five-reel Selig feature, has been purchased by the Mutual Film Corporation and will be released in the near future. The story is based on James Whitcomb Riley's poem and one of the poet's famous short stories, the adaptation being made by Colin Campbell, who directed the production. Director Campbell has created a fine film version which is worthy of being ranked as a classic.

George Kleine Has New Italian Feature.

George Kleine recently appointed Wallie Decker, a publicity man in this city, to take his new Italian picture, "Italy Behind the Lines," to Washington, where it will be given a special initial showing before President Wilson, Government officials, the Italian Ambassador and other prominent people. This fine picture, in seven reels, will be a revelation to Americans. It shows the marvelous industrial war activities which are now being carried on in Italy—from the manufacture of monster field guns, war planes, motor trucks, tanks, etc., to the making from gigantic iron ingots of the barbed wire used on the border of No Man's Land. I had a mere glance at sections of this picture and was not only deeply interested, but positively amazed. It will be released in the near future.

Attractions at Orchestra Hall.

Elsie Ferguson in "The Danger Mark" was a big drawing feature at Orchestra Hall for the week beginning July 28. She is one of the great favorites of the screen and on this occasion succeeded in enhancing her fine reputation as a silent drama actress.

Douglas Fairbanks will dominate the screen at this house during the week of August 4 in "Bound in Morocco."

Griffith's much heralded and eagerly awaited feature, "The Great Love," is announced at this house for an indefinite run, beginning Sunday, August 11.

Buys Captain Warwick's Last Picture Before Enlisting.

The Unity Photoplay Company, this city, has purchased the state rights for Illinois and Wisconsin to "The Accidental Honeymoon." In this picture Captain Robert Warwick made his last appearance as leading man before enlisting. Captain Warwick is now serving on General Pershing's intelligence bureau staff in France.

"The Geezer of Berlin" at Casino.

"The Geezer of Berlin" (Universal-Jewel) was shown at the Casino, on West Madison street, in the "Loop," last week, and drew fine business. "Really, everybody ought to see it," writes Kitty Kelly in the Herald-Examiner. "It isn't perfect, but the weak points can be forgiven for the sake of the flashes of genius that prevail—and it is jolly good fun."

Aid for Salvation Army Workers Near Front.

The big pageant recently shown at the Armour estate, Lake Forest, in aid of the women workers of the Salvation Army near the battle front in France, was given a grand reproduction at the Auditorium, Saturday evening, July 27, in support of the same worthy cause. The spacious building was filled to overflowing and most of Chicago's best known people were present. The handsome sum of $18,000 was netted, and every penny of it will be turned over to the Salvation Army's devoted men and women who minister in a wonderful way to the needs and comfort of the brave boys at the front.

Goldwyn Vice-President Visits City.

Harold Bolster, vice-president of Goldwyn, arrived in the city from New York, Wednesday, July 24, and after stopping over for a few hours departed for Detroit.

Timely Programs at Strand and Rivoli

British War Features Overshadow Dramatic Subjects as War Starts Fifth Year.

THE fourth anniversary of the entrance into Europe's world conflict of Great Britain and dependencies was marked by special entertainments at two of the leading moving picture houses of New York starting Sunday, August 4, with notable performances. The composite effect of watching one right after the other would make any man of vision cherish hopes of still more splendid things to come in motion-picture presentation than have been dreamed of in our philosophy. Fascinating were the studies and stories by themselves, but the whole effect, shaped to reality, colored to romance, adorned by music, transporting us from commonplace to where the wonders of contemporaneous history are passing in review, was a high form of mental stimulus.

What artists of other days longed to paint on canvas, the vanished secrets of Michael Angelo's utmost intention, the alembic of a scholars' revery, of a poet's fancy, of a psychologist's refined insight, a new glamour of history and legend, all these were grouped in this complex, but, beyond the direct pleasure afforded by the fine exhibition of well-chosen subjects, was the latent suggestion of still more impressive and beautiful possibilities of this New Art. We know its witchery, but we are not completely under its spell.

The leading features were: Strand—an official government presentation of "Four Years For Freedom"; Rivoli—an official government presentation of "Britain's Far-Flung Battle Line," both watched with intense interest and frequently applauded. It is not a reporter's business to discriminate unfairly, to even show partiality from reasons of friendship, and, most fortunately, it need not be done in this case. The great sources of delight were the same in both cases, and exactly so with the dull spots, the latter largely due to the camera men, gentlemen quite capable of photographing well subjects which could just as well remain unphotographed.

The best part of these pictures give us comprehensive views, those taken from the air, or those permitting a large scope survey of great masses of troops in movement. There is a lot of this in both, enough to more than counterbalance some very bad picture composition at close range. Audiences are as eager for those and they are avid of beauty in the regular subjects.

"Springtime a la Carte," an O. Henry story, and the artistic presentation of Saint Saens "Dance Machre" at the Rivoli; and the overture "Sounds From England" and Goldwyn's "Friend Husband," at the Strand, are in evidence. These and the vocal solos contributed largely to the variety and charm of artistic presentation.

These magnificent special days show that we are not losing our way in presentation. We are not groping around with night closing in upon us. We are progressing steadily toward higher and more satisfying results in this form of entertainment. Live managers are glimpsing new and more glorious performances from afar, not struggling in vain, but getting nearer and nearer ideal conditions.

Managers Rothapel and Edel deserve thanks from exhibitors as well as from the general public for the splendid efforts they are making to preserve the dignity and raise the quality of screen exhibition. HARRISON.

ADVERTISERS SEE "ITALY'S FLAMING FRONT."

Following the luncheon and meeting of the Associated Motion Picture Advertisers last Thursday at Rector's the members adjourned to Miles' Projection Room to witness the screening of "Italy's Flaming Front."

Private Joseph P. Reddy, formerly motion picture editor of the Morning Telegraph and now of the provisional ordnance detachment, located at Camp Raritan, Metuchen, N. J., was also present at the luncheon and screening, and was so impressed with the spectacular features of "Italy's Flaming Front" that he secured the permission of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit to show one of the three-reel episodes at an entertainment given by the members of his detachment on Friday evening, August 2, at New Brunswick.

"Triple Trouble" Genuine Says Spoor

Manufacturer Denies Essanay-Chaplin Film Is Either a Rehash or a Reissue but Is a New Film.

By George K. Spoor, President Essanay Company.

FOR the protection of exhibitors planning to run "Triple Trouble," the new Chaplin film, and who may have read the statement that Chaplin never made a picture entitled "Triple Trouble," I wish to state that the film is new in its entirety, just as advertised, and is not a rehash,, nor a reissue under a new title. There need be no doubt whatever on this matter.

It is true that Charlie Chaplin did not make a film for us, labeled with the title, "Triple Trouble," but we did make this film with Charlie Chaplin and no part of it has ever been shown on the screen before. The facts are that at the time of making the picture it went under the working title of "Life." Essanay is in the habit of reviewing its titles just as well as its pictures, before releasing them. Frequently a title is changed when we believe we have a stronger one, as well as are scenes in the picture itself.

This was the case in "Triple Trouble," Essanay considering it a better and more suitable title for the picture than "Life," which in fact was merely a tentative title. No change was made after release.

Essanay has many Chaplin films and it has never attempted to change any title after releasing the picture under another name. It has reissued Chaplin pictures, and has always stated that they were reissues, and all these reissues were released under the same title as originally. It has also put out two Chaplin reviews, which it plainly stated in its advertising were made up of other Chaplin films.

In "Triple Trouble," however, Essanay is presenting an entirely new film as it has stated. It is a continuous story made with Charlie Chaplin, and held by Essanay until the present time, and is not a rehash, nor a reissue of other pictures already issued. This film now is in all the George Kleine releasing offices and exhibitors are invited to look at it. I take it that exhibitors are fairly familiar with Chaplin films and it is very easy for them to judge for themselves.

Theatre Men to Aid Mitchel Memorial

Stage and Screen Committee Raises $3,600 Toward Monument to Honor Late Mayor.

EVERY member of the theatrical and motion picture industry in New York will have an opportunity of contributing to a John Purroy Mitchel memorial fund as a result of a meeting held in the office of E. F. Albee, when Marcus Loew was made chairman of a committee to form the Theatrical and Motion Picture Division. Thirty-six hundred dollars was raised among the men who attended the initial meeting.

Extensive plans are being laid by Mr. Loew to obtain subscriptions, large and small, from every one connected with the motion picture and theatre in New York in every capacity. All the film studios will be canvassed, as well as every theatre, in and near the city.

The late mayor of New York, who died so nobly and dramatically in the service of his country, at various times displayed a friendship for and an interest in theatres and motion pictures, which was of vast benefit to everyone concerned in these industries. It is therefore entirely fitting that the joint industries should do something to properly perpetuate his memory for future generations.

CIFRE IS NOW SUPPLY COMPANY CHIEF.

Joseph S. Cifre is now in charge of the main office of the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, 197-205 Pleasant street, Boston, distributors for Simplex machines in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, taking the place of William C. Francke, who recently resigned.

Mr. Cifre, who is known to the majority of New England exhibitors as "Little Joe," has an unusually wide acquaintance among the managers of motion picture theatres down east. His extensive personal knowledge of theatres in that locality is the result of numerous tours he has made as chief operator of the more important features sent out as road attractions.

In addition to his knowledge of operating he is a practical electrician, having at one time owned a prosperous electrical business at Revere Beach, Mass. He is president of Local No. 182, which is the largest in New England, having 150 active members. Mr. Cifre is now serving his second term as president of that organization.

Diaz Now With Fox's Export Office

Circulation Manager of Cine-Mundial Takes Post of Latin-American Department Management of Organization.

SIMULTANEOUSLY with the departure for Cuba and Central America of Abraham Carlos, general manager of the export interests of the Fox Film Corporation, and the departure of Aquileo Calvo for the management of the Fox exchanges in the Antilles, Mexico, and Central America, is coupled the announcement that Nicholas Diaz joined the Fox Film organization August 5 as manager of the Spanish and Portuguese department of the export section of the corporation.

The new post occupied by Mr. Diaz gives convincing illustration of the thorough comprehension of the film export exploitation the Fox Film Company enjoys. It marks a new and advanced era in the ranks of American film manufacturers.

Nicholas Diaz.

The acquisition of Mr. Diaz gives evidence of even a more thorough policy for Fox export from now on. The institution of one man to take charge of one division of the export market is a departure in film circles, for the Fox organization is covering the various markets that use different commercial tongues with similar thoroughness. Looking at it from another angle, it furthermore reveals the importance of the Spanish and Portuguese speaking markets for film manufacturers.

That Mr. Diaz should have been the selection for the management of this branch of the department is thoroughly patent to all who know the ability and aggressiveness of this young man. He leaves the circulation management of Cine-Mundial to assume his new post. During his three years with this Spanish and Portuguese export edition of the Moving Picture World Mr. Diaz contributed his share toward the unqualified success that Cine-Mundial has scored.

The new Fox department head is a native of Bogota, Colombia. He came to this country some four years ago, and has since specialized in motion pictures.

Industry Girds Up for Loan Campaign

Chairman Zukor Receiving Many Promises of Support From League Officials and Notable Screen Stars.

EVIDENCE that the motion picture industry is marshalling its forces with rapidity and enthusiasm with the single and united purpose of doing its full share in putting the Fourth Liberty Loan over the top continues to multiply in the daily correspondence received by Adolph Zukor, chairman of the National Association's committee appointed to co-operate with the Treasury Department in furthering the publicity campaign of the loan.

Quite the most satisfying and significant feature of last week's developments was a telegram received by Mr. Zukor from Peter J. Schaefer, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League of America. Mr. Schaefer wired from Chicago, pledging the complete co-operation of the League and stating that the members could be depended upon to forget all minor differences and work as one great machine at the command of Chairman Zukor should he call upon them.

Supplementing Mr. Zukor's telegram came a letter from Sydney S. Cohen, president of the New York State Motion Picture Exhibitors' League, placing his services and those of his organization at the disposal of the committee.

Frank R. Wilson, director of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan, has advised Chairman Zukor that he has received letters from numerous stars accepting the privilege of giving their services in the making of pictures. Among them Mr. Wilson mentioned Charles Ray, Mme. Alla Nazimova, Elsie Ferguson and Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew.

Robbins Is Factor in Fox Exchanges

Assistant General Managers of Corporation Is Responsible for Sales Development Program.

ONE of the important factors in the activities of the Fox Film Corporation during the season of 1918-19 will be Herman Robbins, assistant general manager of the corporation. Mr. Robbins is in general charge of all the Fox exchanges in the United States, and upon him will largely fall the sales development program of the corporation in the coming year.

In the Fox home office Mr. Robbins has supervision over the contract, booking and development departments and repairs and supplies.

Herman Robbins.

Mr. Robbins, in the formulation of the Fox policy for the coming year, has been a source of immeasurable help through his suggestions and counsel. During his connection with the Fox Film Corporation he has shown a thorough grasp of all the many intricate questions which arise in the distribution of the immense amount of film which the Fox corporation issues. Shrewd, resourceful, and the possessor of a keen executive mind, he has been a powerful proof of William Fox's policy of choosing only men of big affairs as executives.

In having general supervision over the Fox exchanges throughout the United States Mr. Robbins has made a host of friends in the trade. Moreover, many of the splendid service aids now in force in Fox exchanges are the direct result of his insight into the needs and desires of exhibitors and his unremitting efforts to push the Fox organization to the front. Service is one of Mr. Robbins' pet hobbies; in fact, he fully believes service ranks almost as high in selling film as the worth of the film itself. He sees to it that Fox exchanges follow this policy.

Rochester Firm to Work No Miracles

Powers Film Products Company Is Now in Operation "In a Quiet, Steady Manner."

ONE of the newest ventures in the motion picture industry, the Powers Film Products Company, organized about two months ago, is now in operation in the buildings formerly housing the Fireproof Film Company at Ridgeway avenue and Marigold street, but so far as could be learned by diligent inquiry at the offices of the company no attempt is to be made by the firm to do any of the wonderful things it was said to have in view when the corporation was organized.

At the time of the transaction in which the Powers-Cameron Company took over the large plant of the defunct Fireproof Film Company remarkable stories were afloat about the plans of the company, which were expected to "revolutionize" the motion picture industry. Miracles were to be performed, among them the producing of a film that would record the voice as well as the actions of the performers. This film was termed a "stereoscopic-talking picture."

Whence all the information concerning the new company came from is a mystery, for according to officials of the company the wonderful plans did not originate with the Powers Film Products Company, nor would they hazard a guess as to who had so industriously spread the story of their prospective miracles.

"Wild stuff," commented one official. "We are going to do nothing unusual. We are manufacturing no film except such as has been on the market for years. Other firms, including the one that occupied this plant before us, tried to do the unusual and failed. We are going into the business in a quiet, steady manner and will not try to rush things. The market for motion picture film is unlimited and we could easily get any number of large orders.

"When we first moved into this building it was said that everything was in first class shape to begin work at once. The fact was that we expected to find only the four walls of the building, and we have thus far been fixing things up and only started shipping recently. We employ at present only seventeen workers, but of course that number will increase as we get things started."

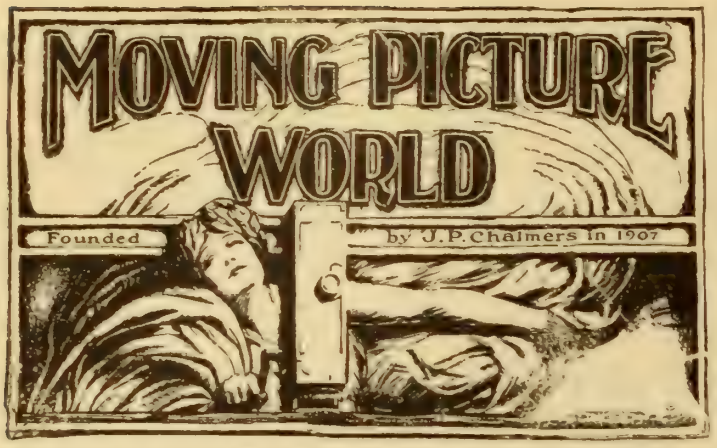
It was hinted that the new firm was to be the manufacturing end of the Universal Film Company, but it was said that it had no special connection with any other companies. Patrick A. Powers is said to be ready to back the concern with a large share of his wealth.

Dolores Cassinelli Is Back on Screen

DOLORES CASSINELLI is one of those piquant Italian beauties endowed with an interesting screen personality prominent in every picture in which she appears. After having left the silent drama for two years to take up concert work and to further develop her excellent soprano voice, Miss Cassinelli returned to the screen in the role of the princess in "The Million Dollar Dollies," and is about to be seen in "Lafayette, We Come!" in which she is co-starred with E. K. Lincoln.

Born in Genoa, Italy, July 4, 1894, she early developed an ambition to become a great dramatic or operatic star. First applying herself to her studies and equipping herself with a musical as well as literary education, she first attracted attention by her appearance in some of the more famous Essanay productions of bygone days. By the time she had completed a three year contract with Essanay, she had been the leading player in such popular films as "When Soul Meets Soul," "Do Dreams Come True?" "A Girl and a Man," "The Greek Singer" and many others, and appearing with such favorites as Bryant Washburn, Captain E. H. Calvert, Ruth Stonehouse, Francis X. Bushman, and others.

Dolores Cassinelli.



Miss Cassinelli is an expert linguist, speaking Italian, her native tongue and her favorite language, very fluently, while her knowledge of French, Spanish and English is enough to make any one marvel. She loves everything that is beautiful and artistic, but music has the first call in her affections, for like all of her race she is passionately fond of music.

Her return to the screen has been welcomed by fans the world over who still bear her allegiance, and it is an assured fact that Miss Cassinelli will more than make good.

LEAVING FILMS FOR UNITED STATES SERVICE.

Richard R. Neill and Rollo Lloyd, two players appearing in support of Harold Lockwood in Metro's screen production of "Pals First," a screen version of the stage success, dramatized by Lee Wilson Dodd from Francis Perry Elliott's novel, will be lost to the films shortly after the conclusion of their work in this picture.

Mr. Neill announces that he is going to an officers' training camp on September 15, while all arrangements have been made for Mr. Lloyd to go to Camp Zachary Taylor, at Louisville, Ky., as soon as his engagement is over. There he will take charge of the arrangements for the entertainment of the men at the post. The rank of first lieutenant goes with Mr. Lloyd's position.

Facts and Comments

SUFFICIENT warning has been given American manufacturers of the great trade war which will follow inevitably the clash of arms that is now convulsing the world. Public prints of every description are pointing out continually the necessity of preparation for that battle. It will be America's opportunity, and no small portion of that opportunity will fall to the makers of motion pictures who have, in this country, developed their art to the highest state of efficiency. Information has come to us from unquestioned sources of the efforts now being made by German capital to control various lines of industry, especially the motion picture business, when peace shall have been secured. Already in such neutral countries which tolerate German trade, or with which Germans have communication, the fight for control is in progress. That such plans should succeed is intolerable, but it will be the particular province of motion picture men of America to accomplish their defeat. The question is "How?"

As the production of motion pictures now stands, America is making ninety per cent. of the world's output. Everywhere American pictures are in demand; they are in fact preferred to those of any other source of production. Export conditions, consequent to the necessities of war, are making the distribution of our product somewhat difficult, but with the rapidly increasing tonnage of carrying ships this condition will not last always, so that there is every inducement for the starting of the strongest kind of propaganda in behalf of foreign trade; every reason why there should be a redoubling of every present effort to popularize our products among foreign peoples.

WHAT plans are you making in your state, Mr. Theatre Owner, to meet adverse legislation? Strong movements are under way to enforce Sunday closing laws and to impose censorship upon pictures. These are questions that must be handled locally. It will be up to the state organizations of theatre owners to fight these movements out with the legislators of such states where proposals to place such laws upon the statute books are made. Now is the time to begin the fight; don't wait until bills are introduced; begin with the elections and put men in office who have sufficient breadth of vision to consider the great mass of the people instead of the few sectarians. Begin in your own towns by getting together and finding out where your lawmakers stand. Organize your forces and be ready for the fight when it comes.

A GREAT deal of piffle has been printed in trade papers about service to the exhibitor, meaning advice as to how to place his business before his patrons in the way that will spell profit in the largest letters. Concrete examples have been cited and "exhibitor helps" have been published, but all such are limited in their application and many of them do not apply. The MOVING PICTURE WORLD has for several years printed in its department "Advertising for Exhibitors" what might be truly termed a correspondence school of theatre advertising, calculated to train any man of intelligence in the best methods of promoting theatre patronage, regardless of the size of the house or of the town in which it is located. Careful study of the principles laid down in that department, which are always amply illustrated by concrete examples, will teach any budding publicity man or busy manager how to handle his program and his house, under any and all conditions. Try it.

A CONSIDERABLE falling off in the number of pictures produced by American makers is noted by the National Board of Review. It is about twenty-five per cent., calculated upon last year's production. Off hand it would be difficult to say what the cause for shrinkage in product is beyond that cause which is apparent—the curtailment of the foreign market because of war. But while the number of subjects as reviewed by the board are less there may still be an increase in number of prints through reissues of old subjects which would not come under the scrutiny of the board. Intimation that Government tax measures is to blame for the falling off is hardly right. Our opinion would be that the difficulty of getting new stories would come nearer the truth. Of course there is the falling off of independent production usually marketed on the state right plan which is due to still another cause. Altogether the shrinkage does not indicate a serious condition of the trade.

Comedies of Married Life

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

GOING back to the time Griffith was putting on one-reel skits for the Biograph Company, when "Biograph Day" meant a packed house for the exhibitor, irrespective of stars and big names to lure the unwary, many of us can recall with pleasure screen glimpses of a relation now seldom used, that of modern husband and wife, in its tragi-comic and infinite variety. Some of these were De Maupassant gems.

"Marriage is not an institute of nature," said Napoleon.

He meant marriage as arranged by man.

Griffith was not depicting tragic matrimonial disasters, but sources of misunderstanding and scenes of reconciliation and readjustment. Among them were few of the stock situations, such as the triangle arising from a husband's neglect, or preoccupation with work, and few were melodramatic from past sins rising up to obstruct future happiness—they were mostly domestic comedies, and they took.

The subject is more alive now than it was then.

We may wish to preserve the ideal of sacredness set up by the church, or the pledge of security it furnishes society, but the machinery is old and the wheels have been creaking loudly for some time. Something has gone wrong with the works. Motion pictures need not point out the remedy, but they can present the amusing facts for grown-up delight.

Romance leading to marriage creates an ideal existence.

For that reason it goes no further than the embrace of lovers.

We often wonder what is going to happen when these dear young creatures leave a steady diet of cake and get down to bread and butter, and we have our doubts, as Thackeray did, when he wrote a sequel to Scott's "Ivanhoe." Our attitude of conservatism toward the present form of marriage has long been undergoing a change, until there is now a mental attitude in audiences which is little short of open revolt against the restrictions and regulations of days gone by. Whether that revolt is justified or not, it has brought about a condition of receptivity which gives assurance of success to domestic comedies.

The stage has just given us brilliant illustration in "Why Marry."

This comedy, a daring one, resorts to no morbid emotional appeal, supposed to be essential for dramatic success—it is almost purely intellectual. It is of the kind supposed to be over people's heads, but it astonishes the wise and arouses the stupid. It boldly faces and deals with existing conditions—it is redundantly alive. In view of the supreme importance of marriage to society as constituted at this moment, the wonder is that these bright and interesting aspects have not been given long ago on both stage and screen.

Both mediums as now used are weak in the same spot.

They reflect life as it is supposed to be, not as it really is.

They omit that psychology of man and woman which is obvious to all men and women of full growth in an audience, yet which requires high art to picture in a story. In illustration is Balzac's description of a wife who is about to fall out of love with her husband.

"She will throw paving stones at your head to drive away the flies that light on it. She will tell you in the evening of the things that have been said about you, and will ask an explanation of acts which you never committed, and of words which you never said. She professes to have justified you for faults of which you are innocent. The deafening rattle which your wife shakes will follow you everywhere with its obtrusive din. Your darling will stun you, will torture you, meanwhile arming herself by making you feel only the thorns of married life. She will be dull when you are merry, and will make you detest her merriment when you are moody. Very few men have force of mind not to succumb to this preliminary comedy. Most of them become irritated and fall into irreparable mistakes."

She is after alimony.

Rich material for this sort of story lies less in the situation than in the traits of human character revealed. It furnishes a perpetual delight to the audience to see people of the screen story amusingly at odds in the great Comedie Humaine.

Globe-Trotting Films

By Robert C. McElravy.

I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air.

ONE individual greatly discommoded in these days of submarines and general restrictions in ocean travel is the inveterate globe-trotter, that ubiquitous gentleman who used to come back to us from foreign shores, with a plentiful supply of labels upon his suitcase and a fund of stories on his lips about his visits in foreign lands.

But the public is not entirely the loser in this matter, for the films have taken up travel topics where the globe-trotter left off. Through the medium of the screen millions of people are becoming more and more familiar with world geography. The travel film holds its own with the best forms of moving picture entertainment. It may be found in most wisely selected programs today.

The travel film has had a more or less scattered and disconnected exploitation until the last year or two. But certain producers, recognizing the strong interest of the public in these informing screen subjects, are now going about things in a better way. That recent study of South American countries and cities was a step in the right direction; the travelogues depicting our own West, and the Canadian series, have been well worth while. Innumerable others may be traced by carefully examining the educational department of the Moving Picture World during the past few years. Films of this sort have a permanent value and may be used by the exhibitor at any time to advantage.

Just now a new series of travel pictures is being released. They were photographed under the personal supervision of Clyde E. Elliott, and the opening numbers are of particular interest to American audiences. One of them depicts the Island of St. Thomas, recently acquired by this country from Denmark, at a cost of $25,000,000. Others deal with the French and British islands in the West Indies, including Barbados, Trinidad and Martinique.

Such is the limited acquaintance of the average American with his own country, that these islands, which lie at the very gateway to the Panama Canal, seem like foreign shores to him. We know in a dim sort of way that they have a certain picturesque beauty, that they are inhabited by natives of sober, industrious habits, and that palm trees grow upon these isles. Persons who have read one of Mrs. Atherton's brilliant novels, "The Conqueror," will remember that Alexander Hamilton was born on one of the islands of the West Indies, and will no doubt recall her description of one of the violent hurricanes that occasionally sweep these isles. But of the West Indies and the whole region in and about the Caribbean Sea we are strangely uninformed.

While these island subjects only lead the new travel series, which we understand will cover many other parts of the world as well, it is particularly gratifying to have something of a definite nature on the West Indies at this time. The New York Times and perhaps other newspapers have been urging that our Government purchase more of these islands, if possible, the suggestion being made that an American Mediterranean might be established there.

If the screen can aid in such an undertaking, by giving the people a better acquaintance with the islands themselves, it will be another credit mark for the films. The best way to win the friendship and esteem of your neighbors is to pay some attention to them. In this connection we have a feeling that some day the screen is going to perform valuable service between this country and Mexico. Who knows as yet the full possibilities of the screen as a diplomatic medium?

Weak Spots in Construction

By Edward Weitzel.

THREE of the pictures shown recently, in one week, were classed as good examples of screen attractions. The accepted term "photoplay" is purposely not applied to them. One scenario was made from a successful stage play; another from a popular novel. The last scenario was also founded on a published story. All three pictures were finely acted and produced, the leading roles being filled by stars of acknowledged ability.

The first two pictures had weak spots in their construction. The screen version of the stage play, a polite farce, failed to follow the original and never depart from the comic spirit that should rule every moment of the story. A divorce incident, which is hurried over by a brief mention in the stage play is shown in full on the screen, and a serious note is struck that is out of harmony with the author's intent.

In the first picture, taken from a popular novel, the error of construction consists in working up the main theme for the first half of the scenario and then turning off on to a side track and carrying forward a motive that is not nearly so strong as the other, and slacking the dramatic tension.

The third picture frankly follows the novel form. The principal character is supposed to be relating his adventures, and all the subtitles are put in the first person, past tense.

Screen technic will one day recognize that the photoplay and the photonovel are separate and distinct forms of telling a story; and that the screen drama is a more arbitrary but much more effective manner of swaying the emotions.

Contrary to the accepted theory, the popular verdict on a picture is not the one that should always influence the author or the man who produces his story. Many a spectator leaves a theater with the conviction that he has been well entertained. The popular verdict on the picture he has just seen would read, "very good." Expert knowledge often reveals the discomforting truth that, had the possibilities of the story been fully realized, the entire body of spectators would have been in a frame of mind to exclaim, "Great, a wonderful picture!"

Fifth Class Declares It Is Essential

General Division of National Association Turns Out Nearly a Hundred Strong at Promotion Luncheon.

FOR the first time since its organization the General Division (No. 5) of the N. A. M. P. I. "got together" at a luncheon given Wednesday, July 31, at the Astor for the purpose of declaring that it should no longer be content to pose as the "fifth wheel" of the organization. The east ballroom was the mecca for representatives of the various motion picture interests that are assembled in in the fifth division, ninety-three luncheon guests representing more than the entire paid membership of the class.

John C. Flinn, director of advertising and publicity for Famous Players-Lasky, chairman of the division, acted as toastmaster, and addresses were made by William A. Brady, president of the N. A. M. P. I.; Paul Gulick, secretary of the fifth division, and Walter W. Irwin, whose mission was to present the patriotic issues that the "fifth wheelers" might be expected to forward. Mr. Brady put his usual "personality" into his remarks, and while he did not take time to become thoroughly "warmed up," he as usual said something well worth hearing and said it in his accustomed convincing manner.

Toastmaster Flinn, Mr. Gulick and the other speakers declared that the fifth division should by every right become the most important, numerous and influential branch of the association, indicating that its opportunities for great usefulness were practically unrestricted. Mr. Flinn announced that a campaign for membership would begin at once along plans to be outlined and forwarded by directors of the fifth division.

Thomas G. Wiley, Paul Gulick and James L. Hoff constituted the committee of arrangements for the luncheon proper, and those who paid two dollars for the meal got value received and a lot of good fellowship thrown in for extra measure. It was frequently remarked by those in attendance that the luncheons, having started, should be continued as frequently as might seem advisable for the purpose of "getting together" in friendly session, to get acquainted and to sustain interest in the fifth division. Here is a list of those who shoved their knees under the tables, ate their full and enjoyed the brief and snappy schedule of speeches:

John C. Flinn, Jerome Beatty, A. M. Bertrand, Herbert S. Clark, C. C. Burr, P. H. Atkinson, Morrie Ryskind, George Strader, Julian M. Solomon, D. Lewis, Grinnell, Charles F. FOUR GENERATIONS TO SEE WORLD PICTURE.

The famous comedy standby of the theatre, "Eight Bells," will have a pre-release at Norwich, Conn., the home of the Byrne Brothers, the famous family of actors and acrobats who have all their lives been identified with this remarkable breadwinner. Out of compliment to John Byrne, the eldest of "Brothers Byrne," Norwich is to have the distinction of first seeing it on the screen prior to its general release on World program. Four generations of the family will be present.

Grinds the Crank on Chaplin's Antics

Roland Totheroh Responsible for the Fine Camera Work of the Million-Dollar Comedies.

THE millions of Charlie Chaplin film fans all over the world, when they sit back in the luxurious opera chairs of the picture theatres showing Chaplain pictures, enjoying the antics of the great entertainer, seldom, if ever, give a thought to any one but the inimitable Charlie.

Roland (Rolly) Totheroh, Head Cameraman for Charlie Chaplin.

There is, however, one other man deserving of consideration, and he is the man behind the camera, who steadily, day by day, month by month and, in the case of Chaplin, year by year, grinds out the laughs that go round the world.

Ten years ago a young man sat at a drawing board in the art department of a San Francisco newspaper. He was a cartoonist, and had made caricatures and "strips" that had made many persons laugh. But he wanted a wider scope than the columns of a city newspaper, so he threw away the India ink and the artist's brush and proceeded to learn all he could learn about a motion picture camera. That cartoonist was Roland Totheroh, today Charlie Chaplin's cameraman, a position he has held steadily since 1915, when the comedian started his contract with Mutual.

Flashing back to 1910, Mr. Totheroh, or "Rolly," as he is familiarly known throughout the industry, applied to G. M. Anderson and was given a position in the camera department of the Essanay West Coast studios at Niles, California, where he had soon mastered the intricacies of every camera made.

When the Essanay West Coast studio closed Charlie Chaplin went east, and "Rolly," as he says, played a hunch, came to Los Angeles, and as soon as Charlie Chaplin returned with the Mutual contract in his pocket "Rolly" asked for the job of cameraman—and got it.

Comedy photography requires greater skill than that of ordinary drama, for in drama poor photography can always be tinted, which covers a multitude of sins; but a comedy must be "there"—clean-cut, sharp; in other words, not fair, pretty good, but it has got to be right, and that is the kind "Rolly" makes.

General to Release Red Cross Film

It Will Show Parade of American Veterans in Paris on the Fourth of July.

THE first laurel-crowned United States fighters are shown in a film just brought to this country by the American Red Cross. This picture presents a review of American veterans fresh from their triumphs north of the Marne. After its premiere in New York at the Rivoli theatre the film will be distributed throughout the United States for the American Red Cross by General Film Company. The production is the work of the pictures division of the American Red Cross.

The principal scenes depicted in the Red Cross film are from the international Fourth of July celebration in Paris, in which battle-scarred United States troops parade in the dedication of the new Avenue du President Wilson, formerly the Avenue du Trocadero, to the Strassbourg monument in the Place de la Concorde, where impressive patriotic ceremonies took place.

These troops had participated in America's first powerful blow against the German enemy north of Chateau Thierry, when a sensational advance was made against the enemy forces. How the women of Paris flung bouquets at the feet of the tall, wiry marching men is shown, besides many other incidents of the day .

The Red Cross film has been edited and titled by S. L. Rothapfel and his staff. Acting as distributors for the American Red Cross General Film Company will at once place copies of the picture in every city of the United States.

Lieutenant Cromelin Is Heard From

Son of Paul H. Cromelin of Inter-Ocean Film Corporation Tells of Fighting the Boche—Now in Hospital.

IN a letter to his mother, Lieutenant John A. Cromelin of the Twelfth Field Artillery and son of Paul H. Cromelin, president of the Inter-Ocean Film Corporation of New York, gives an account of the fighting on June 11, at which time he was wounded five times by machine gun fire. Though the young man wrote that he was not badly hurt, his wounds put him in the hospital at Vichy, from which point his letter was written on July 15. The letter reads in part as follows:

"I had been detailed as artillery liaison officer to the marines," he says. "On the night of June 11, while the attack was in progress, I was in company with a corporal, when we stepped into a German machine gun that had sneaked behind our advancing line. They opened fire at ten feet. The corporal was not hit, but three bullets got me in one arm, side by side, and two others went through my right leg. The corporal helped me, and we ran about a quarter of a mile, dropping down about every fifty feet when a flare would go up. It was a very dark night, and that prevented the German gun crew from following our course.

"The corporal helped to dress my wounds when we thought we had got safely away from the machine gun, and then we went on to a dressing station. Three days later I arrived at Vichy."

Enclosed with the letter were some notes made hastily during the busy days of the attack. Lieutenant Cromelin told of meeting a French flying officer who had been shot down three times in three days without injury to himself and little damage to his machine.

"The Americans showed the Boches that they were a darned sight better bunch of fighting men," he said. "I take off my hat to the doughboy, especially to the marine doughboy."

While regretting his son's injuries and hoping that they were no more serious than the boy reported, Mr. Cromelin is justly proud of his work. "I doubt if there are many officers outside of those who have had the advantage of a West Point training who are better equipped for service than my boy," said Mr. Cromelin. "In the first place he had three years in the officers training corps of the University of London, up to 1914, while he was attending school there. He was in England when the war started and wanted to get in then, but I prevailed upon him to return to the United States, when he continued his education at Princeton. He attended three camps of instruction at Plattsburg and received a second lieutenant's commission in the regular army. Again I prevailed upon him to return to Princeton and finish his education, which he did, resigning from the army. When the United States got into the war he tried to revive his commission, but was unable to do so and joined the officers' training camp at Fort Meyer, Va., from which he was assigned to the Twelfth Artillery, regulars, which went overseas in January. His class in the University of London which went into the war at the beginning has been practically wiped out."

Lieutenant Cromelin is but twenty-two years of age, but is six foot two inches tall and built in proportion.

HAWLEY FIRST NATIONAL MANAGER IN DALLAS.

Announcement is made of the appointment of Douglas Hawley, formerly news editor of the Dallas Times-Herald, as manager of the Dallas Exchange of the First National Exhibitors' circuit of Texas, E. H. Hulsey, president. Hawley is a well known and capable Texas newspaper man, and his friends predict for him an equal success in his new line of effort.

"The White Wilderness" (Mutual-Outing-Chester).

FOLLOWING in the footsteps of previous numbers of the Outing-Chester series "The White Wilderness" is excellent in quality of photography and subject matter. As the title suggests the picture abounds in snow scenes, and opens on a party making its way through the snow-clad forest to the foot of Mount Washington. The ascent of the mountain presents scenes of interest, which while not particularly thrilling, possess the quality found with the mysteries of snow-filled mountain passes and icy slopes. The particular feature of the picture covers the sports in which the party indulge after they arrive at the Tip Top house, including an amusing snowshoe run to Lake Placid, where curling is indulged in, and also skiing, skating, sledding and tobogganing. The real thrill of the reel occurs when we take a ride down a toboggan slide with the camera man.

"The Bay of Biscay" (Beacon).

The Bay of Biscay, which is partially bounded by France and Spain, presents many scenes of beauty along its shores. The Bidassoi river, separating France from Spain, is shown, and also Pheasant Island, on which the boundary line splits and where the Treaty of the Pyrenees was signed. Fuentorrabia, San Sebastian, the Chateau Polignac, the home of Pierre Loti, St. Jean de Luz, Biarritz, the rock of the Virgin, and beautiful surf scenes along the shores of the bay, are among the most interesting sights. The picture was exhibited at the Rialto theatre, New York City.

"Venezuela" (Pathe-Post Film).

An exceptionally entertaining travel number, showing the picturesque life of the natives of Venezuela, S. A. The manner of life is very unusual, owing to the oddity of customs, homes and surroundings. The making of pottery, close-ups of native women and children, and goat raising are special features.

"Official War Review No. 6" (Pathe).

The closing feature of this number is one of the best. It pictures an Allied attack on the West Front. The men are seen going over the top, with tanks also in action; later the dead, wounded and prisoners are shown. Other features of this number include views of the British fleet, the Prince of Wales in Italy and American soldiers in France.

"Our Dumb Friends in the War" (French Pictorial Service).

This series of views exhibited at the Strand theatre during the week of July 21 introduces in an entertaining and informational manner the various kinds of animals that are being used in the war. These include the horse, which is shown in the course of training; the dog, the camel, the mule and the burro. Cattle and sheep being shipped to the Allies are also shown.

"From Jelly to Bullfrog" (Universal).

In the 83d release of the Screen Magazine is an interesting treatise on the development of the bullfrog. The pictures were taken at the New York Zoological Park. After showing the jelly-like substance containing the eggs of the frog, the hatching of the eggs is shown, then the development from pollywog to full-fledged tadpole. Finally the transformation into the bullfrog—the process of months reduced to seconds by the camera.

"Railroad Ties from Uncle Sam's Forests" (Universal).

The felling of trees in the national forests and their conversion into railroad ties is shown in the 83d release of the Screen Magazine. The scenes of the picture were taken in the Wasatch National Forest, Utah. The trees that we see being cut are Lodgepole pine. The scoring of the log for the flat face of the tie, the stripping of the bark, the sawing into tie lengths and the sledding of them to the dry beds of a stream to wait for the spring freshets to float them to the shipping point is shown.

When Is a Weed Not a Weed" (Paramount-Bray).

In the 132d release of the Pictograph will be found an interesting series of illustrations of weeds having nutritive values. It teaches the spectator that nature has provided us with food of a palatable sort without the aid of garden tools and artificial cultivation. It points out the fact that potatoes and tomatoes were at one time classified as weeds, and that the leaf of the dandelion after it has passed the salad stage can be cooked and eaten after the fashion of spinach.

Life and Habits of the Humming Bird

Bray Studios, Inc., Secure Through W. L. Finley Remarkable Study of Shyest Bird.

WE are indebted for one of the most remarkable and interesting of bird studies to W. L. Finley of the Oregon Fish and Game Commission, who photographed it, and to the Bray Studios, Inc., who present it in the 132d release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph. This study takes us into the confidence of the daintiest creature, the humming bird.

Because of its unusually rapid flight and its secretive habits and shyness, the humming bird is extremely hard to get; and Mr. Finley spent many days of patient waiting and resorted to many ingenious tricks to secure the pictures. As a result he was enabled to obtain a complete record on film of the life and habits of this tiny bird, probably the first record of the kind ever obtained.

After discovering a nest, the photographer set up his camera and then each day stood by waiting for developments. Shortly he discovered that two pearly eggs the size of small beans had been laid and that the male immediately flew off that his gorgeous coloring might not attract enemies to the nest.

A few days later two tiny babies appeared, which the mother guarded with the greatest care, only leaving the nest to obtain food for them. The food she swallowed and the twins drew it already digested from her bill. After nineteen days the first of the babies was ready for a trial flight and off it went to be followed in another day by its little sister and then the mate once more appeared to occupy the tiny home with his little wife until another year and another family had come and gone.

"The Finger of Justice" Is Approved

Washington's Superintendent of Police Comments Strongly in Favor of Anti-Vice Picture.—Seattle Echoes Sentiment.

ON July 21 "The Finger of Justice," Rev. Paul Smith's production, founded on the anti-vice campaign of San Francisco, opened at Poli's theatre, Washington, D. C., after having been reviewed by Major Raymond Pullman, superintendent of police, and president of the National Police Chiefs' Association, and others, among whom were public officials and individuals of national reputation. Major Pullman's comment after having seen the picture was as follows: "I cannot understand why anyone would oppose this picture unless he has an interest in commercialized vice. Everyone in Washington ought to see it. While this is now a clean city, any relaxation of vigilance by the police department would result in a return of the vicious conditions of the old days of the 'Division.' If it were my picture I would show it everywhere. The picture is certainly not immoral and is one of the best constructed pictures I have ever seen."

It opened in Seattle, Wash., on the same date. Major Ole Hanson's comment after having viewed the picture is also interesting. He says: "I am willing that the country at large should know that we of the great Northwest do not fear the expose of vice and political conditions."

Literary Antiquities Recorded in Film

Paramount-Bray Pictograph Presents Historical Records of Ancient Civilization.

LOCKED behind fireproof doors in the New York Public Library is a collection of priceless literary antiquities which is the envy of every great museum in the world. This wonderful collection heretofore reserved for the few to whom the building in which it is displayed is accessible has been photographed by the Bray Studios, Inc., and will be given to the millions of theatregoers as a part of the 133d release of Paramount-Bray Pictograph.

The ruins of great cities, long centuries ago the dwelling place of peoples whose history was unknown, have been unearthed and from them have been taken the written records from which science has been able to learn of the life and peoples who lived long before the dawn of history.

From ancient Babylon a baked clay cone on which some scribe 4500 years ago had written of his king has been brought to the newest of the world's countries; a copy of the historic Chaldean tablet telling of the Flood and discovered during excavations in the Euphrates Valley, is another priceless record. A copy of the Koran, the bible of the Mohammedans, hand-lettered on vellum and dating back to the tenth century, lies next to the historic Pentateuch Roll containing the books of Exodus and Leviticus and actually used by the last colony of Jews at Kaifong Fu, in the fifteenth century.

"Hearts and Jerseys," in which the Jersey cow is eulogized, was exhibited at the Broadway theatre, New York City, on Tuesday morning, July 30. It was presented under the auspices of the American Jersey Cattle Club. M. D. Dunn, president of the National Dairy Council, delivered a lecture immediately preceding the exhibition of the picture.

William S. Hart Invites Suggestions

As Producer Rather Than Player He Asks Exhibitors to Write Him Constructive Criticism.

STEPPING out of his personality as the foremost delineator of Western characters who has ever come to the drama, silent or spoken, William S. Hart, in an interview at his studio in Hollywood, Cal., addressed the exhibitors of the United States as the executive head of the producing organization which is making pictures of himself, and placed the policy of his company before the theatre managers. The purpose of Mr. Hart's interview was to urge the co-operation of the exhibitors with the producers in an endeavor to make motion pictures reach a destination beyond that attained by any other factor in the progress of industry. Before presenting his views Mr. Hart emphasized the fact that he was talking as a producer, not as a player.

"I hesitate in addressing the exhibitors," said Mr. Hart, "for the reason that my motives may be misunderstood. Because of the public prominence of my career as an actor it is difficult for anyone, even an exhibitor, to consider me in any other capacity. When I speak from my desk I speak as a producer; I speak with the interests of our productions and the advancement of the industry in mind, but I speak with some hesitation nevertheless, fearing that it may be thought that I am endeavoring to arouse the interest of the exhibitors in William S. Hart in person and to aid him individually, rather than to obtain their co-operation in making Hart pictures valuable assets to their theatre programs—to assist them in making money and making them through our pictures, because they present quality production. I urge the exhibitors who read this, therefore, to appreciate the fact that it is the producer of Hart pictures, an executive of the William S. Hart Productions, Inc., who is addressing them and not a self-interested star.

"When a year ago I was able to form the William S. Hart Productions, Inc., with a contract for eight pictures a year for two years, to be released through Artcraft, the agreement was drawn so that I was an executive in my own company. This was not done for me to be a figurehead with my name on the stationery merely for advertising purposes. It was done so that I could actually have the management of my own productions. And, after the completion of my first year under this arrangement, the success with which I have met has compensated me for all the years I struggled gaining recognition on the stage and for the hardships that I suffered forming my career. I have gradually developed the various departments of my studio so that I control them all in the manner in which they can be of most value to the exhibitor, the man who depends upon my productions for his living.

"I make each of these statements with a direct motive. That motive is to let the exhibitor know that, as a producer, I am entirely within his reach, welcoming letters, suggestions, reprovals, and co-operation of any kind. I want the theatre man to know that by communicating with me he can reach the producer, the manager, the director and the star with one word—and that word will be welcome."

LOUISE GLAUM IN SEVEN LOEW HOUSES.

Seven Loew houses in New York will exhibit, first run, the Louise Glaum series of Paralta Plays, announces the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, distributors. "Wedlock," the first Glaum-Paralta picture to play the contract, was shown at the Broadway, 116th street, New York, Circle, Forty-second street, Eighty-sixth street and West End theatres.

Hodkinson Recruits Seasoned Salesmen

Corporation Organizes Field Forces for Exploitation of Paralta, Plaza and Douglass Natural Color Pictures.

THE W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is putting into effect its new field forces whereby Paralta, Plaza and Douglass Natural Color pictures now forming a part of Hodkinson Service will be represented by their own salesmen operating through the exchanges of the General Film Company. During the past two weeks W. W. Hodkinson has been recruiting, through the medium of trade press advertising, seasoned film men who know the faults of the industry and are in sympathy with the Hodkinson plan of service and the slogan of a fair deal to the exhibitor.

Each exchange will be represented by a Hodkinson salesman. The entire United States has been divided, for the present, into three sections, the salesmen representatives in each section being under the supervision of a division manager. John A. Stevenson will control the southern division and P. N. Brinch the western. C. E. Shurtleff, though continuing his duties as general sales manager, will cover the eastern division until a manager is appointed.

P. N. Brinch, who left New York last week, will install picked salesmen representatives in the west, his division covering all the territory west of Omaha and Minneapolis. Mr. Brinch's film experience covers a period of ten years. After three years with Pathe he first became associated with Mr. Hodkinson with the General Film Company and later with Triangle, where he made a reputation as special representative. When Mr. Hodkinson incorporated his own company Mr. Brinch joined him as sales manager.

John A. Stevenson, whose division takes in the territories reached by the Atlanta, New Orleans, Dallas, Cincinnati, Kansas City and St. Louis branch offices, was general sales manager for Paramount, leaving that concern when Mr. Hodkinson withdrew as president. He has been special representative for the Hodkinson Corporation since its inception.

C. E. Shurtleff will make a short tour of the east to get the salesmen representatives installed, returning to the home office to continue his duties as general sales manager. W. A. Bach will retain his capacity as assistant general sales manager.

The first of the salesmen representatives to take up his duties of giving personal service to Hodkinson customers is Arthur S. Abeles, who will handle the territory covered by the New York branch office. Mr. Abeles was previously with Pathe for four years, acting first as New York branch manager and later as special representative.

Other Hodkinson representatives have been appointed as follows: C. W. Perry will be located at Detroit. Mr. Perry was a Pathe salesman for three years and later manager of the Pathe Detroit office. Joe Levey, in charge of the Omaha office, after long experience with Fox and Select, went into the state right business for himself. Hoyt G. Morrow, who will have charge of the Dallas territory, has served many years in a managerial capacity for both theatres and exchanges, his latest associations being Dallas manager for Artcraft and First National Exhibitors' Circuit

Ruff Stuff.

EVIDENTLY Ralph Ruffner can hustle in any old town. Lately he moved down to the Rialto, Butte, Montana, to take charge of that house and his first attraction of importance was "My Four Years in Germany." It is interesting to note Ruff's listing of the display he used. It runs:

200 window cards
6 choice locations for neatly framed 22x28s.
3,000 small heralds.
15,000 large heralds.
25 twenty-four-sheet stands.
Special decoration for the building.
Slides.
Campaigns in two newspapers.
Letter from the mayor.

The large heralds were those supplied by the company. The campaign is best told in his own words. He writes:

The amount of traffic hereabouts brought tears of gratification to my peepers and it was responsible for about 95 per cent. of the inspiration to put up some go-getum stuff as advance on "My Four Years in Germany." Four days ahead of the show we opened on the building front with the lower line in the photo: "Ambassador Gerard's 'My Four Years in Germany' Sunday." Then the day of the show we stepped out with the top line in red, "To Hell with the Kaiser, see,' etc. This with the large cut-out letters in blue, formed a "stand" a hundred feet long. The total cost of this ad was around $75. We used heavy advance in all the papers, put out 15,000 heralds with the aid of the Boy Scouts, with the same result as in all other parts of the United States—terrific business. I am told it was the best-advertised picture attraction Butte has had. The heralds and their distribution cost $135. Not a solitary line of endeavor was overlooked in creating a rabid desire to see the picture. Naturally, it is an attraction that lends itself to aggressive work, and though we might have done just as great a business with less expenditure, still, this is hot weather time and our experience was worth much to us in pointing out the necessity of taking no chances. And we didn't. There are many side attractions open at this season to lure the potential patron away from indoors, and if the picture-show man relaxes for one little day his efforts to market his wares, he'll find that relaxation costs a great deal more than a big photoplay production. One thing we did that was different from the procedure on the Coast in handling this particular show was that we relied greatly on our advance copy, only opening on Sunday with four full, instead of the customary page. The four full I mention carried the most copy I have ever put into an ad. Probably somebody read it all. I did—it was like a strange child—he didn't look familiar. There was a good opportunity to have a little fun at Butte's expense and gain a laugh from the town people at an important point in the story of "My Four Years," and this we did. You will recall the scene where the Kaiser and his staff are seated at a large table and Zimmerman is telling what they are going to do with the United States after they take it; that they will give Texas to Mexico, California to Japan, and the balance they'll keep for themselves. Immediately following this comes the title, "Like crooks dividing so much loot," followed by a very clever fade-in showing each man at his place, though now dressed in the melodramatic attire of the underworld denizen. Here we introduced four feet of title which we had printed here, reading "——— and we'll give BUTTE, MONTANA, back to the Indians." As a surprise it was complete! and it won a big hand and plenty of laughter at every performance. One hardly expects to hear the Kaiser and his staff tell what they are going to do with one's own town, does one? I have nothing but the best of compliments for the producers of "My Four Years in Germany," and the excellent cast which interpreted it. The Butte people who saw it were enthusiastic in their praise. Upon my arrival here, when I found this production booked, my first thought was of the splendid line of advertising possibilities; of the wonderful black and white stills which would undoubtedly accompany it—fine copy to work from—stuff the advertising department of the producers could not help but availing themselves of. My expectations were 100 per cent. pure net. . . . Then came the BLOW! The cheesiest line of stuff I have ever seen is used with a big picture. Shamejul doesn't even come within the compass of my opinion. The 8x10s supplied this territory I wish you could see them. Notwithstanding the fact the picture is earning big dividends throughout the country, no part of the material accompanying it—at least in this territory—is responsible. The production is replete with possibilities, as I said before, but the advertising gotten out by the eastern men fails to avail itself or to reflect, as it should, these possibilities. A better line of stuff will bring the owners an easy million more as against what they will earn traveling as they are. A showman never picked out nor had anything to do with the selection of the material which found its way here and rested on the top of our safe until the show left town.

This is the first complaint we have had from exhibitors on the supply of advertising aids on this picture, and it may be that the condition is purely local with the exchange serving Ruff, but Ruff knows what he is entitled to and evidently he did not get it. The four fulls he speaks of are shown here. The lettering is not quite as good as a somewhat similar one for the Liberty, Portland, used in the issue of July 13. There the lettering was more distinct because the letters were more widely spaced, but this was Butte's introduction to the idea, and most persons probably thought it good, having no standard of comparison. It is good, for that matter, but not quite as good as the other. Considerable use was made of the solid blacks and whites, as used by Gordon F. Fullerton at a sister house in Seattle, and some of the other cuts carry the Fullerton brand-mark of an arrow piercing 100 per cent., for the house's exchange cuts. One or two of these black cuts were used in the press work, the illustration showing one across five columns, hooked up to the mayor's letter of approval, in which he regrets that the city cannot afford to send all of its citizens to see the picture. Another illustration shows the Rialto with the Gerard advertising in place on the front. Ruff, too, uses To Hell with the Kaiser for a catchline as so many others have done. By the time the film of that title comes along the novelty will be all worn off.

Here's a Good Model.

Here's a capital example of combination type and pen-lettering in an advertisement of the Dayton theater, Dayton, Ohio. It will be noted that the lettering down to "First time shown outside New York City" is all hand work, while the remainder is straight type work. The display face for the one reel titles is rather too pronounced. It would give a better general effect to work these in a smaller face or else a lighter letter. In spite of their size these have too nearly the color value of the main feature, and there is a little too much announcement in all caps at the bottom. It grows monotonous. But in general the display is unusually good and worth taking for a model.

Realistic.

About the only objection to be offered on this display of the Strand, Minneapolis, is that it is so convincing that people will have to think twice before they realize that it is the advertisement for a picture theater. The art work is by John L. Johnson, and the text by C. G. Branham, the manager. The suggestion of the circus is unusually well sustained, and the laugh the announcement will bring will fix the show and date in the reader's mind. It is novel and unique.

Three Drawings.

Thomas D. Soriero, of the Park, Boston, sends in the drawings reproduced here to show what he can do. It will be noticed that all Three Drawn Designs Used For a Single Program. The Larger Ones Are Four and One-half Inches Deep Across Two Columns, the Middle Design Being a Single Four.

three drawings are for the same program, the smaller one being used probably in the Saturday afternoon papers while the larger ones are run in the Sunday issue. They are better displayed than most drawn designs, but we question the value of all hand-lettering as against the mortised cut with inserted type. The regularity of the type letter is so much in favor of legibility that the artistic angle of the drawn design is negligible. It will be noticed that in the display at the left the artist has shortened the title to get a display in the space at command. This is unfortunate, since "The Yoke" is the title of a pseudo-sensational novel of ten years ago, and may be remembered by many who will wonder why Mr. Soriero should urge that "every true American should see the bill this week" to puzzle over the worries of an English maiden lady with a troubled mind. We like the individuality that the signed statement gives the advertisement, but it does not hook up with the title. We like the drawn design as an attractor, but we think that it is better to notch or mortise the cut to permit the major portion of the announcement to be set in type. Pen work will permit "distinctive" lettering, but it will detract from the description.

Steve, Too.

Steve Farrar, of the Casino, Eldorado, and the Orpheum, Harrisburg, Ill., is another who is not lost in admiration of the press matter supplied for "My Four Years in Germany," but his trouble differs from Ruffner's in that he didn't get anything to speak of. No cuts are supplied with this production, mats alone being offered, and the papers in Steve's town have no casting boxes because they do not stereotype. It never occurred to an intelligent exchange manager to have a few cuts cast for the use of the small town man who pays a (to him) high rental and who needs cuts in order to get the business. Steve says he has no real kick coming because he did $24 better than he did with "Over the Top," but that is not the idea. A picture with a high rental should carry cuts as well as mats, or, at least, the exchanges should have these cast up. The cut shows the three cross-page advertisements. They are not striking as the "Over the Top" Campaign, but it is good work for all-type. He also used the "I'm a friend of the Kaiser" complimentary tickets, which seem to be supplied by the renters. He also took a two sixes warning friends of the Kaiser to stay away from the house and used Ruffner's "Try to get in" slogan.

Two Cross Page, Four-Inch Spaces and One Five Inches Deep for "My Four Years in Germany," Showing What Can Be Done Without Cuts.

Changed Again.

The Hill, Newark, has changed its program style again. Now the four-pager has been replaced by a colored strip about 4 by 9 inches, printed on one side with the program, and on the other with general stuff about pictures and the Hill pictures in particular. An eight point face is used for the latter, and it is set in two columns instead of across the page, making it much easier to read. We think that this side works harder than the formal program, because it is chatting and readable, and makes publicity for the house, as well as the film. Johnny Mack still takes the public into his confidence with an editorial, but he still signs it "Your manager" instead of with his own name, which would have a still stronger effect. Give your house a personality, and in a community make that personality your own.

Uses a Duplicator.

The Third Street theater, Easton, Pa., seems to have gone over to the use of a duplicator machine for its program work, and sends out a form letter each week on the program. Using a device that gives a clean, sharp impression, they get a good result, and we think that it will pull as much business as would a program. The program is run off on the company's letter heads, which is rather an expensive stock for advertising. We think it would give just as good an effect to use a cut heading and cheaper paper. Cuts can be curved for the machines having a cylinder and used just as they are for flat-bed work. Since no effort is made to give the announcement the appearance of a letter, we think that this would save the cost of printed letter heads with no loss in effect. By the way, if you get a duplicator, get one that works from type, and get the elite typewriter type instead of the regular pica. You can tell more to the page.

Jusso.

L. W. Barclay, of the Grand Amusement Co., Johnstown, Pa., pays his compliments to the press agent body when he remarks:

> I lay no claims to being an advertising expert, nor a competent critic. But after seven years in the newspaper, chamber of commerce and press agent games, I must admit that I can dig up eighteen-dollar-a-week newspaper men who could put out better stuff than these alleged advertising men are handing us. And the worst of it is that every nickel spent on these fellows' salaries and on the junk they hand us increases our film rental without getting us a damned thing.

That's just the idea. The pressmen are supposed to be giving the exhibitor service. And because he is supposed to be giving service, his salary is added to the cost of the release, and the exhibitor is buying a dead horse that he does not care to use. And to cite a horrible example he remarks that the pressman who in his ready-made advertisement starts it off, "The Palace—The Harbor of Sweet Content," should be on some woman's magazine writing household hints. It's worse than that. Just to prove he knows something, Mr. Barclay sends in some of his own work. One of the advertisements is unusually good save for two points. The day is not dated and the hours of performance are not stated. Apart from that, this display is unusually good. The house, star and play get the big lines in their relative order, the star, below her name, is identified by means of recent successes, and the play itself is described adequately yet without excess. The cut of a lot of people standing around does not mean anything in particular, but it serves as an attractor about as well as a tint block would have done, and that is about the best you can expect of the average scene cut. We think this an unusually good disposition of the space.

A Three Tens From the Nemo, Johnstown, Pa., that Gives the Proper Value to House, Star and Play Names.

Interesting Just Now.

The Empire, Montgomery, Ala., gets a half page in a Sunday issue of the newspapers for its ice-cooled, air-washed system of ventilation, and it makes good reading for the picture fans, but we think that it would have excited more comment had it been explained that this system is the same as that used for the houses of Congress in Washington, instead of announcing it as a new, and therefore presumably untried, device. It is our understanding that the system was devised by E. F. Albee when Keith's theater, Boston, was built, and the system of forcing the air under the seats through the seat standards and grills was later adopted for the Capitol building. But the main point is that along with the opening of the summer is the time to talk about your cooling and ventilating system.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT is an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be endorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second set of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

Settling the Mazda Question.

This department has asked for a conference with the governing officials of the various lamp companies putting out Mazda lamps for projection, as is already known. This conference is now in process of being called, as is also known. Following is the letter I sent to S. E. Doane, Chief Engineer National Lamp Works, Nela Park, Cleveland, O.:

> In compliance with our conversation recently, I will try and set forth herein, as nearly as I may, my views as to what may be expected to be accomplished at the meeting to be held by the representatives of the National, Westinghouse and Edison Lamp Works and myself.
> In the first place, as set forth in a recent editorial in the Projection Department of the Moving Picture World, the claims of the various makers of Mazda Projection lamps are, to a considerable degree, conflicting, and it is to be hoped these claims can and will be harmonized at the meeting, or at least for certain apparatus and recommend these claims to their companies for adoption. Second, it is to be hoped that we may be able to fix upon some basis of what might be termed "maximum permissible claims" for Mazda Projection lamps, of 600 and 750 watt capacity at least. Third, it is to be hoped we will be able to fix upon some basis of comparison with the projection arc lamp, since nine theatre men out of ten will ask, "How will the Mazda compare with the arc I am now using?"
> Personally, I incline to the view that arc lamp amperage is the best servant we can employ in the latter comparison, but that is a matter for discussion when we meet. In any event, I am certain the meeting will more than justify its having been held.

Accompanying this letter was the following, designed to set forth, in as concise form as possible, the main points to be considered:

> In seeking to displace an electric arc for projection work the first thing the average theatre owner wants to know is, "How will the new light compare with that I am now using?" If the salesman makes extravagant claims, which cannot be backed up with actual performance, then there will be a sale made at the expense of a dissatisfied customer, also usually a customer who will seek to "get even" for the wrong done him by "knocking" the Mazda at every opportunity.
> Another very serious danger we encounter in the endeavor to supplant a too-powerful arc (by "too-powerful" I mean too powerful to be properly supplanted by the Mazda) is the fact that modern photoplays require a very strong light in order to bring out the more delicate shadings in photography. If a light of too low value is used there will be loss of beauty. In other words, there will be possibilities in the film which will be lost because the light is not powerful enough to bring them out. To fail to take cognizance of this phase of the matter is to do grave injustice to the business as a whole, as well as to the patrons of those theatres which are using a sufficiently powerful light to employ the entire photographic shading of the film for the screen. For this reason it is important that some standard of light requirement be set up, and this, it seems to me, can only be done by screen measurement, foot candle measurement, I mean. Of this I am not quite certain, however. It may be necessary to set the standard in total light strength at the film. (In thinking the matter over later, it has occurred to me that the latter proposal is impractical because of variation in screen surface and size.) It may even be that we cannot set up any standard of this kind at all. But from the standpoint of the industry and the theatre manager this latter is of great importance.
> To sum up, there are, it seems to me, two main questions: (A) What maximum claim can be made, and substantiated, as between the arc and the Mazda for projection? (B) What light strength is really necessary in order to do justice to the film itself? The first is, of course, the BIG thing for the meeting to consider, that and the harmonizing of claims between the different manufacturers for what are essentially the same, identical goods.

Upon receipt of the foregoing, Chief Engineer Doane sent out a letter addressed to the proper officials of the three companies involved which reads in part as follows:

> Mr. Rogers (Assistant Gen. Mgr. Edison Lamp. Works) and I had a preliminary, entirely informal meeting with Mr. Richardson at luncheon at the Vanderbilt Hotel in N. Y. C., June 20. It develops that Mr. Richardson has almost solely in mind the claims which the salesman makes to the motion picture theatres when he asks us to standardize. I asked Mr. Richardson to submit a statement of just what he has in mind. He sums it up as follows: (see my letter and accompanying summary to Mr. Doane.)
> We are making a number of experiments at Cleveland, and Harrison is doing the same thing, with the idea of formulating a series of statements as to what the various lamps will do. Mr. Richardson does not seem to care whether we standardize the 20 or 30, or both, or any reasonable number of lamps. His attitude was entirely reasonable, but he did make the point that we must tell the motion picture men what our lamp will do, preferably in terms of the arc lamp which it displaces, and that when one salesman says the 20 ampere lamp will do this and thus, every other salesman should say the same thing. Mr. Gillett of the Motion Picture News has written, suggesting that Mr. Cory, his expert, could be of assistance to us. I have told him we shall be glad of any assistance which can be rendered us by any one.

All this is set forth to show you that this department is not asleep on the Mazda lamp proposition, but very much awake doing its best to look after your interests, which, in the end, are the true interests of the Mazda lamp manufacturers. If Mr. Cory can assist in reaching a satisfactory conclusion in this matter, his assistance will, of course, be welcome. He had the same privilege of setting the matter in motion that I had, and the fact that I have set it in motion does not in the least debar anyone who has ideas of real practical value to offer.

I am very sure the coming meeting, which will probably be held in this month (July) will be productive of results of much and lasting value to all concerned.

Three Condenser System Experiment.

Our old friends, Joseph H. M. Smith, Fort Worth, Texas, sends in the following:

> Getting two new Power's 6-Bs, with new lamphouse; I am provided with an experiment lamphouse. Am using a three-lens condenser combination, which has increased my screen illumination by from 15 to 25 per cent. Using 25 amperes, I am getting approximately 7,000 c. p., as against 5,500 with the two-lens combination, which is an increase of about 1,500 c. p. The combination is as follows: A plano convex arc lens, with flat side toward arc; a plano convex next, also with flat side toward the light source, and then a bi-convex. This combination permits me to operate my arc at 2⅜ inches from surface of lens, with my front condenser exactly 13¼ inches from aperture. True, there is a loss of from 4 to 8 per cent. between air and glass at each surface, especially if the surfaces be not perfectly polished. Another thing to be considered is that thick lenses absorb more light than do thin ones. Condensers in 90 per cent. of cases are strained, especially in the short focal length sets, whereas the three-lens combination permits the use of comparatively long focal length lenses, with comparatively little spherical aberration. Of course I shall expect to be jumped on for advocating three lenses, but the time is coming when four lenses will be used; three in lamphouse and one at aperture.

Brother Smith sent several drawings, but they are hardly necessary, I think, since, as I understand him, his whole idea hinges on bringing the arc close to the lens without resorting to short focal length lenses; also the lessening of spherical aberration. This matter I think I shall leave in the hands of brother Griffiths, and such others as care to tackle it, with the notation that the three-lens combination is an old idea but one with which there has been but comparatively little experimenting done, insofar as applies to the projection of motion pictures in this country. Unless I am in error some foreign countries, particularly Germany, use the three-lens condenser almost exclusively. I am not posted as to its relative advantages but am inclined to question there being sufficient gain to offset the added cost, remembering that we are now bringing the arc as close to the lens as heat and flame will permit, without the use of excessively short focal length lenses. Spherical aberration in condenser is claimed by some to be a positive benefit.

By the way, what has become of our old friends Armstrong, of Ashland, Wisconsin, and James, formerly of Camden, New Jersey, who used to take great interest in these matters. In fact it was James who first started the light ray dope and "got us going" on that subject. As to brother Smith, we welcome him back after a long silence. He is all the more welcome in that we can now read his letters without the aid of a map, guide and an interpreter. Smith used, I think, to write his letters with a garden rake. Glad you have lost the rake—or reformed.

He Has Trouble.

J. H. Varnum, Midland, Michigan, writes thusly:

> This is my first offence, though have been reading your—beg pardon, "our" department for almost three years, and in so doing have learned many things. (Ought to be ashamed of yourself for not introducing yourself sooner, brother. You know this department depends on its friends—and enemies, if it still has em—for success as much as it does on its editor.—Ed.) This little 6,000 population town depends mainly for its existence on a large chemical works now making gasses for friend Government. There are two theaters in town, of which the Monarch, where I work, is largest and best. Wages at the "plant" are fairly high, hence the show business flourishes. We run one matinee and two night shows daily. Am running two Powers projectors, using about 35 volts 60 amperes 60 cycle current, with ½-inch White A C Special carbons. Picture 14 feet at 85 feet. All my trouble is with right hand machine. Firstly, there is considerable condenser breakage. New arc lens seldom runs more than three reels before it snaps. This is caused by the flame hitting it. Tried to remedy it by moving lamphouse forward but merely succeeded in getting a ghost. Second, the takeup tension won't work when I loosen it, and when I tighten it the film makes a grinding sound just as it passes into the lower magazine. Machine is a new 6-B. Am much in favor of the left hand machine you speak of. Will you give me correct condenser consideration for my condition.

Your last request answers your "firstly." You have wrong condenser combination, with arc too close to lens else flame would not strike same. If you are using 60 amperes A. C. you should have two 6½-inch plano convex lenses set not to exceed 1 16 of an inch apart. In meniscus bi-convex you should have a 6¼ next the arc and an 8½ ahead. A 6½-inch meniscus and an 8½ inch bi-convex. If this does not keep the flame from the lens or might too then try a little longer focal length lens ahead. As to the takeup tension, it is difficult to locate the trouble with accuracy if the projector is as you say, a new one. If the sound is just where the film enters the magazine examine the fire valve carefully. From your description I am inclined to think that for some reason the lower reel does not go over rate place as it should, and that the film rubs heavily on one side in consequence. This you can easily determine for yourself by seeing if the reel centers with the fire valve, or by watching it when running, opening the lower magazine door temporarily for the purpose.

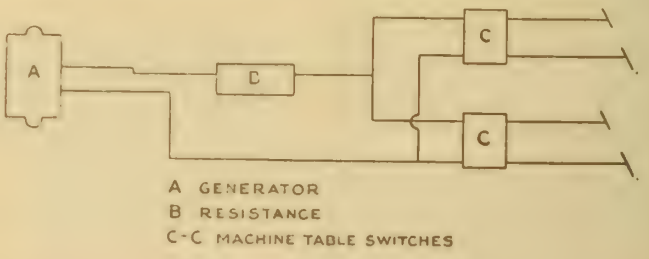
Film Damage.

Clarence Webb, Kenosha, Wisconsin, has film trouble as follows:

> Enclosed find two clippings from a Mutual Screen Telegram. It's one side of each is a ridge or cut. Film is supposed to be first run, hence brand new. It came too late to allow of an examination before projection. Not at damage after projection. It started about 25 feet from beginning and ended about 10 feet from end of film. Only six or two spindles showed the damage and almost all scenes were as per samples. Following this we projected another first run which showed no damage whatever. Have looked high and low for the trouble as it is my machines but cannot find it. Have two 1916 Simplex models. Can you tell me what could cause such a damage?

No, I cannot. The damage consists of a sort of double crease. It is as though one doubled the film back on itself toward the non-emulsion side along the inner edge of the sprocket holes on one side, and then doubled it back the other way along the edge of the same row of holes. Of course the film would spring back nearly into shape, but the crease is there, or rather the two of them. I very much doubt that it was done on a projector, and surely a machine would not damage just a part of one film that way. The film was on the sprockets properly since there is no damage from sprocket teeth. Can anyone suggest the probable cause?

Proceedings Society Motion Picture Engineers Now Ready.



Proceedings of the Society of Motion Picture Engineers, meeting of April 8-9, 1918, are now ready for distribution, and may be had by remitting the sum of 25 cents to C. Frances Jenkins, president, 712 Eleventh street N. W., Washington, D. C. It is a 69-page, paper bound booklet, and is well worth its small price. It is particularly of interest to projectionists by reason of the excellent papers on incandescent projection lamps, the same being by A. R. Dennington and by L. C. Porter and W. M. States. These papers should be in the hands of every projectionist who wishes to be up to date. They are well illustrated and written in understandable language. There is an article on condensers by C. Frances Jenkins, with which the average projectionist is apt to take serious issue on many points. There is an article on projection lenses, by Alfred S. Cory, which will doubtless be of interest to such projectionists as may be trained opticians. There is an interesting article on the portable projector, by Alexander F. Victor, president Victor Animatograph Company, and an article by the editor of this department, addressed mostly to the society itself. That is about all which will interest the projectionist, I think, but I strongly advise its purchase by projectionists, if only for the two articles on the Mazda projection lamp. It is there the real value lies.

Cut-Over Switch.

Messrs. Hay & Nicholas, Fairmont, Minnesota, says:

> We are appealing to you to tell us how to fix up a cut-over switch for using two projectors. Have a G. E. 60 cycle, 7½ h. p., three-phase, 220 volt motor belted to a 60 volt, 50 ampere generator which we have used for one machine. Have obtained wonderful results with it, but having lately installed a second projector find lot of trouble striking second arc while first is burning. Have copy of third edition of Handbook and have studied it, but don't get quite what we need. For instance, it speaks of necessity for resistance in such cases, but does not say how much. That is one thing which puzzles us. Another thing is we have volt meters, ammeters, and field rheostats and do not wish to go to expense of buying panel board having these things if it can be avoided. We particularly would like information as to amount of resistance necessary and diagram of cut-over switch wiring.

Resistance such as would enable you to burn both arcs at once would be a job for an electrical designer who had full knowledge of the characteristics of the dynamo you have. I think it would be too costly for a single installation. Your best plan would be to write the maker giving serial number of the dynamo and all other information contained on name plate thereof, telling them exactly what it is you wish to accomplish, viz.: To arrange to strike a second arc (give arc amperage) to burn for not more than three minutes with the first arc burning and not affected by the second one. If the dynamo will stand that amount of overload they can best tell you just what is needed for the purpose with the generator you have. You may, however, get very fair results, after a little practice, by wiring your arcs in multiple as many do and "stealing the current" from one to the other. This is accomplished without any special wiring or cut-over switches. Just wire up your two machines in the usual way, except that you use only one rheostat branching off to the two lamps between the rheostat and the lamps. Now when you have one lamp burning and strike the other the first will automatically go out. With practice fairly good results may be had but it necessitates the burning in of craters while there is no show on, since the two arcs cannot be operated together. Many use this plan and have excellent success, though it is not one I would advise, since it is a sort of make-shift at best. Attached diagram illustrates. I am assuming that you use some resistance even with a 60 volt dynamo. If not (special generator built for such work requires none) the wiring is the same, except that the resistance is left out altogether. No necessity for you purchasing panel board or other instruments. Connect ammeter and volt meter in anywhere between generator and resistance.

China Fits Pictures.

The J. P. Seeburg Piano Co. is in receipt of a very interesting paper from China. It is called The Review, and is published by the Empire Theater of Tientsin, China.

There is a special article concerning the installation in the Empire Theater of Tientsin, of one of the Style "V" Seeburg Organ Orchestras. The first automatic organ, we believe, used in the Orient motion picture houses.

Among other things, the article says:

> Special attention is also being paid to our musical programmes and in line with all the largest picture houses in America and elsewhere, we have made arrangements to install one of the famous Seeburg Organ Orchestras.
> Who can over estimate the value of a perfect musical accompaniment to a moving picture? The Seeburg instrument not only gives us a piano, but an organ, together with the resources and traps of an orchestra. There is nothing that suggests the mechanical. It is an instrument that has the human touch and the human soul, found, we believe, in no other instrument—possessing the quality of tone shading and personal expression which have made this instrument the choice of the proprietors of America's best motion picture theaters.

America is naturally the leader in all that pertains to pictures, and their musical accompaniments, but it is intensely gratifying to note that the right idea is spreading to such far-away lands as China. Inasmuch as music is a universal language, the time has come when all producers should insist upon a proper musical presentation of their pictures in other countries. Manufacturers of musical instruments should enter these distant and fertile fields with a view to good business and a spreading of musical art. Publishers of music have an opportunity of enlarging their scope of selling operations and even leaders in America should not overlook the opportunities presented in the Orient.

Orchestra of Allen Theater, Toronto, Canada.

Our Toronto correspondent informs us that the Allen Theater has perfected a splendid musical organization under the leadership of Luigi Romanelli, and is leading the way in picture settings throughout the Dominion. The members of this orchestra consist of English, Belgian and Italian artists and is a unique combination of wood and brass, including 3 violins, 1 flute, 1 clarinet, 1 bass, 2 French horns and organ, piano and drummer.

The absence of trumpet and trombone is extremely pleasing, for we have continually maintained in our columns that the brassy effect eminating from these instruments serves to detract from the picture. Mr. Romanelli, who was for many years director of the Strand Theater orchestra of Toronto, possibly the first musical director in Canada, has remarkable initiative ability and his choice of his orchestral instrumentations shows his keen insight into the picture game. He is an accomplished violinist himself, and frequently gives violin solos that are appreciated.

His practice is to play with his orchestra rather than merely lead it. Upon this point we must take issue with Director Romanelli. It requires all the brains and the talent of the best musicians coupled with a thorough knowledge of picture fitting to obtain the best results in directing. When he is forced to play also, he cannot give his whole attention to his orchestra and his picture, and thus the general result suffers.

Our best wishes go out to Brother Romanelli and his orchestra.

Musical Suggestion Synopsis.

GIRL PHILIPPA, THE (Vitagraph—Eight Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "May Dreams"—Borch, "Sunbeams"—Heliar, "Tendre A'Mour"—Clements.

The character of this picture is intensely dramatic and deals with the present war situation in Europe. Open with a misterioso and agitato followed by the theme. You will then need some dramatic music, followed by lighter stuff. You will require hurrys, agitatos, and furiosos. Particularly note the battle effects, such as shots and explosions, motorcycle, automobile and train. A few light numbers can be used to advantage as contrast to the big stuff. Do not use more than one theme if you have a small combination. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Vitagraph Exchange.

GOLDEN WALL, THE (World—Five Reels)—Theme—Valse Lento. Suggest "Sleeping Rose"—Borch, "At Last"—Constance, "Golden Hearted Daisies"—Williams.

This is a society drama taking place upon an American estate. The music mainly will consist of light stuff, especially for the first three reels. Afterwards dramatic music will fit the climax of the feature. There is nothing particularly difficult about setting the music for this picture and long numbers will be found most adaptable. Cue sheets can be obtained from the World Exchange.

HER BODY IN BOND (Universal—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "If it Should Be You"—Schroeder, "Elysian Dreams"—Deppen, or "Eleanor"—Deppen.

The first reel of this feature can be lightly set with long numbers. Commencing the second there is room for some pathetic music needed. It should be short and the light stuff continued until the third reel. Dramatic tension and pathetics are needed for this reel and three numbers should finish the reel. You will need a fox trot to open the fourth reel and continue with light stuff until the fifth, which will require heavy dramatic music. An agitato will also be of service in the last reel and close with the theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Universal Exchange.

HIGHEST BIDDER, THE (Vitagraph—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "Roses and Memories"—Spector, "Told at Twilight"—Heurter, or "Land of Dreams"—Driffil.

The character of this picture is an emotional drama with the scene of action laid in a little village. There will be room for much pastorale stuff and little place for Photo-Play Series. The music will be light and vivacious, in the main opening with a touch of sadness. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Vitagraph Exchange.

JOAN OF THE WOODS (World—Five Reels)—Theme—Andante. Suggest "Silent Sorrows"—Borch, "Visions"—Tschaikowski, "Pleading"—Woods.

The character of this picture is an emotional drama with scenes laid in the North woods and later in a large city. Open with the Theme and follow with heavy dramatic music leading into an agitato. Light stuff follows for a reel, when the action develops dramatic values. The only effects are telephone bell, door bell and water, and under ordinary conditions it would be better to disregard them. Close with the Theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the World Film Exchange.

LOVE WATCHES (Vitagraph—Five Reels)—Theme—Allegretto. Suggest "Garden of Love"—Ascher, "Idilio"—Lack, or "Love in Arcady"—Wood.

This is a comedy-drama with an atmosphere which is distinctly French. You will need some pastorales, serenades, a minuet and some light classical dance music. Light operatic selections could be used with excellent results. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Vitagraph Exchange.

MIDNIGHT MADNESS (Bluebird—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "My Castle in the Air"—Kern, "In Poppyland"—Albers, "Starlight"—Culueta.

Open with a rather heavy misterioso followed by a dramatic tension leading into the Theme. You will then require a hurry, followed by a bright intermezzo and a couple of dramatics. You will need a fox trot, a waltz, and two marches besides some dramatic tensions. This will play the picture, closing with the Theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Universal Exchange.

SAFETY CURTAIN, THE (Select—Six Reels)—Theme—Andante Appassionato. Suggest Andante Appassionato—Castillo, "Awakening of Spring"—Bach, "A Little Song"—Erdody.

Here you will need music contrasting in atmosphere, England and India. The story is intensely dramatic and requires heavy music throughout. You will need some pathetics, dramatics and oriental selections. Note explosions in the second reel, storm scenes towards the end. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Select Exchange.

YELLOW TICKET, THE (Pathe—Five Reels)—Theme—Andante and Russian. Suggest "Russian Romance"—Friml, Serenade—Tschaikowski, or "Moments Musical"—Moskowski.

This is a dramatic story wholly in the atmosphere of Russia, dealing with the intrigues of the secret service and the police. It is intensely pathetic in some parts and requires some considerable music. Open with the Theme, followed by a plaintiff Russian folk song. You will then need a slow dramatic working up into an agitato and returning again to the dramatic. Following this there should be a slow pathetic, a light intermezzo, heavy dramatic and an agitato, followed by a pathetic after Anna stabs the Baron. Close with the Theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Pathe Exchange.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

When You're Down and Out Take Six Bottles of This.

HAVING promised to withhold the name of the writer we give the following letter received by a well known film publicist from an erstwhile W. K. ditto, as the low down on how to cheer up and get stuff off your chest—especially in the scenario line.

"If anyone ever asks you for a recipe for writing stories for the screen just slip 'em this stuff that's about to follow, will yer? viz.:

"First you must go far away, in fact so gosh-dinged far that you can't even afford to wire anyone you know for money. Then, if you are inclined toward writing, just have a good time until you reach a most discouraging financial state.

"Don't stop at the ditch stuff, but get way down near the gutter. You know what I mean. Get to the place where the landlord gives you notice to have the 'greens' at a certain time, on a certain day, or you will be ostracized; more commonly known as dispossessed.

"Wait till you get to the minute when you're hungry as a mouse that's been caught in a trap by its tail and sees a piece of cheese on the other side of the room! Get to the place where your typewriter, as a medium of exchange, looks as good as a string of pearls.

"Get to the place where the steam on a restaurant window looks like a banquet and you find yourself mean enough to steal the crumbs from the pigeons in the park! When you get to that place and you haven't got a story in your noodle, then, b'gosh, you'll never be worth a darn as a writer, and you might just as well carry the typewriter to one of those 'Five-to-two' places and pay no attention to the interest on the ticket.

"But, if you've ever written anything in your life, you'll let that typewriter be the means of kicking you right out of that condition, and you'll write stuff that will make people in the film industry—especially the scenario editors—ask you where you've been. You'll tell them stories you've intended to write for a long time, and they'll take options on plot you haven't even written yet.

"They'll ask you for stuff, request that you hurry home and write some more, and are prepared to pay you for them before they are even finished! Then you begin to wonder who you are, where you've been, and who that other fellow was that used to travel around using your name and what has become of him, and why it was they never would take his stuff even though he's the same fellow he was before he became the fellow he is now.

"It's just as though someone slipped up the shade and allowed the sun to come in, and you never saw so much sun in all your life! You wonder how long this thing is going to continue before the porter awakens you and informs you the train has arrived at your station.

"You recall those unfortunates who have to take drugs to get the sensation you're getting. The only difference is you're getting paid for your sensation and they're paying to get it.

"Some men have to get a broken nose before they realize they can fight, others have to get knocked out entirely. Perhaps you're no different.

"Maybe you have to jump from the ditch into the gutter before you can climb to the top of the Washington Monument. In other words you have to meet Mister Adversity.

"If even Old Adversity can't help you, then you'll never be worth a damn! It's all in the sticking to it. You want to stick until you reach the borders of Hell, then get an asbestos suit and go through it.

"You've got to get hungry to do your best work. Edgar Allan Poe wrote 'The Raven' because he was hungry. He ate just as soon as he finished it, too!"

Proving "The Movies" Essential.

Clear from the trenches in France comes an echo of Triangle pictures which are "doing their bit" toward cheering the soldier boys in their leisure moments. The writer, Bogart Rogers, is a Hollywood boy who has grown up in the "motion picture capital." He is a lieutenant in the Royal Canadian Aviation Corps.

To him the Triangle pictures, which are being furnished free from the London exchange, are like a letter from home, and he watches for familiar "locations" and faces he has seen in southern California before becoming an air fighter. Lieut. Rogers' letter says in part:

"A bunch of us flew over to the trench theatre the other evening, and it reminded me of the good old Mason theatre in Los Angeles after the theatre is out. Each aviator was calling for his tender before taking to his plane for his homeward flight just like the auto starter calling out his numbers.

"We saw a very good Triangle picture—Old Bill Desmond as a college boy. It was taken mostly in Los Angeles, and many of the "locations" were like meeting old friends from home. There was also a Triangle comedy shown.

"The Expeditionary Force Canteen Cinema Supply uses Triangle films almost exclusively, and they are scoring a hit with the boys here. When I nonchalantly remark that I saw this or that Triangle star at such and such a place in Los Angeles the other boys are green with envy."

THE RAMBLER.

Hiller & Wilk Start Their Third Year

State Right Men Declare for Better Attractions for Maker and Exhibitor Through Open Market.

TO MOST of us August 1 was rent day—but to Hiller & Wilk that date marked an event in their business lives. On August 1, 1916, this firm of independent film merchandisers began business in the Longacre Building. Their initial stock in trade was ideas and enterprise, and they have spent two eventful years in the process of increasing their commercial effectiveness by adding more ideas and speeding up on enterprise. A few days before Hiller & Wilk started upon their third year a representative of the World called upon Mr. Wilk to ask him "how about it?"

L. L. Hiller.

"We started out with the determination to handle big productions along new lines," said Mr. Wilk, "and we believe that we have accomplished our purpose. We had to revise our plans somewhat, with the first few attractions we handled, but when we convinced William A. Brady that we could make more money out of 'The Whip' by our method than any other really big production had ever netted we were in a position to prove that our theories were sound. And prove it we did.

"'The Whip' put us on the map, and we put 'The Whip' across as big productions had never been exploited before. It was a simultaneous operation, mutual in effect and profitable for everybody concerned. The state rights market used to be the dumping ground for any old film that was produced and could be got rid of in no other way. After producers had tried every other method of distribution for whatever they had on hand, they dumped it on to the open market.

"We believe that our entry into the field has brought about a change in the state rights system. To 'get across' on the independent market a production must now be better than the best of 'program' products. No longer can manufacturers dump their junk into the field and dispose of it to independent buyers. Features must now have the 'stuff' in them to make a real attraction before buyers will even 'take a look.'

Jacob Wilk.

Manufacturers Waking Up to Open Booking Possibilities.

"Changes in the past two years prove that manufacturers are awakening to the possibilities of open booking. Some of the leading producers are organizing separate corporations for the purpose of promoting features that are capable of making more money for showmen (and the manufacturer) as independent attractions. There are several disguises, but the real big features are 'state-righted' by firms who have always advocated the program just the same."

Taking a strictly personal view of the situation Mr. Wilk expressed the belief that his firm has been largely instrumental in opening this new field for exploitation of really big productions. "As a result of our promotion of 'The Whip'," said Mr. Wilk, "producers were introduced to the possibilities of making more money out of better-class productions, and exhibitors were convinced that there was increased revenue in showing to their patrons the best pictures that may possibly be secured from whatever source they may come."

"We have tried to build up a reputation for handling the best," said Mr. Wilk, "and we have missed opportunities to make a lot of 'quick money' by turning down features that did not conform to our standard of ideas. What we have tried to do is win the confidence of the showmen we deal with, to have them come back to us for more and then to supply them only when the standard of the attraction meets our own tests.

"We have been two years building along established lines and we are going into the third year convinced that we have established our reputation just as we had hoped to establish it through fair dealing," said Mr. Wilk, in concluding the interview.

Exhibitors Sign Up for Star Series

Managers in Many Large Cities Contract for Solid Bookings of Goldwyn's Fifty Productions.

EXHIBITOR approval of Goldwyn's Star Series booking policy is found in the signing, under solid bookings, for all fifty Goldwyn productions, of many of the great theatres in the larger cities of the United States.

Repeating its New York, Philadelphia and Chicago achievements of obtaining solid bookings from the most important exhibitors of each city, Goldwyn has now closed similar contracts for Boston, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Denver, San Francisco, Toledo, Youngstown and more than a score of the larger cities in the past few days.

In Boston Jacob Lourie's Modern and Beacon theatres will be the first screen home of Goldwyn productions.

Ruben and Finkelstein's entire chain of Minneapolis and St. Paul houses will present in those big Northwestern cities all of the Goldwyn productions.

M. L. Markowitz's Strand Theatre on Market street, San Francisco, has signed for all Goldwyn productions for first run in the city at the Golden Gate.

In Denver S. L. Baxter, the exhibitor veteran of the Rocky Mountain region, has signed for all Goldwyn productions at his Isis Theatre, this being his second year as a Goldwyn exhibitor-customer.

Toledo's two biggest houses, the Temple and Alhambra, divide the Goldwyn productions, giving the company the city's two finest first runs. H. C. Horater, managing director of the Alhambra, has booked four star series and Edward A. Zorn of the Temple has booked three series.

C. W. Deibel, general manager of the new $500,000 Liberty Theatre, Youngstown, Ohio, has cast the die and made his house "the home of Goldwyn Pictures in Youngstown."

J. E. Tompkins, has booked Goldwyn solid for his Liberty Theatre, Colorado Springs, Colo.

Geraldine Farrar's first production, "The Turn of the Wheel"; Mabel Normands' first Star Series production, "Peck's Bad Girl"; Tom Moore in "Just For To-night," Madge Kennedy in "The Kingdom of Youth" and Mae Marsh in "Hidden Fires" are all completed and within a few days will be shipped for advance showings under the supervision of the various Goldwyn managers to the twenty offices of North America.

PATHE NOT IN GENERAL MARKET FOR SCRIPTS.

The scenario department of Pathe is not now in the market for motion picture plays for the reason that the company is overstocked at this time. However, the scenario editor is always ready to consider ideas for Pathe serials. These ideas should be submitted in synopsis form, not to exceed 5,000 words, giving a clear and comprehensive yet brief resume of the action and plot. Serials exploiting a woman star are preferred.

These ideas must be out of the ordinary and not along conventional lines. Do not submit manuscripts intended for the American Film Company to Pathe. A number of authors are evidently laboring under misapprehension, believing that Pathe is purchasing such plays. The scenarios intended for the American company are to be directed to their offices in Chicago.

Film Offerings at New York Theatres

Programs for Week of August 4 at Some of the More Prominent Local Picture Houses.

WAR pictures showing activities on Britain's battle fronts feature the new offerings at Broadway theatres. The Rivoli tops its bill with "Britain's Far Flung Battle Line," and eliminates the customary five-reel dramatic offering. The Strand features "Four Years for Freedom," official pictures of General Allenby's entry into Jerusalem. There is a Goldwyn feature, as well.

RIVOLI.—"Britain's Far Flung Battle Line, presented by The Official Government Pictures, Inc., W. K. Vanderbilt, president, shows England's fighting forces of land, sea and air on seven different fronts. Official Red Cross films show the historic Fourth of July Parade in Paris. O. Henry's "Springtime a la Carte" and Alfred Henry Lewis' story, "The Winning of the Mocking Bird," complete the bill.

STRAND.—"Four Years for Freedom" is an official Government picture reflecting the campaign in the Holy Land, with General Allenby's entry into Jerusalem. Madge Kennedy, in "Friend Husband," is the dramatic feature. Harrison Brockbank, in "Barrack Room Ballads," and Cory Tracy, soprano, offer specialties.

RIALTO.—Pauline Frederick, in "Fedora," is the feature. There are showings of the Fourth of July Parade in Paris, War Reviews, scenics, and specialties by Anna Rosner, soprano, and duets by Lorrie Grimaldi and A. Fornari.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—Jack Livingston, in "The Price of Applause," and Mae Marsh, in the "Glorious Adventure," will divide the week into halves. Vaudeville is also featured in the entertainment here.

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—David Wark Griffith's "Hearts of the World" continues its engagement from a start made April 4.

GEORGE M. COHAN'S.—"America's Answer."

Lichtman Lands Many Big Signatures

Returns From Trip to Four Cities with Paramount-Artcraft Contracts Approximating $1,000,000.

AL LICHTMAN, general manager of distribution of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, returned last week from a business trip to Minneapolis, Chicago, Milwaukee and Buffalo, and although he was gone considerably less than a week he came back with booking contracts in his pocket aggregating approximately $1,000,000, which he made in the cities named.

"My brief trip," said Mr. Lichtman upon his return, "measuring its results not merely by dollars and cents but by the manifestations of good-will, satisfaction and an eagerness to book Paramount and Artcraft pictures which I met with everywhere, has convinced me, beyond all question of the optimism with which exhibitors are viewing the new year's photoplay productions released by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation."

While in Chicago Mr. Lichtman and District Manager Max Goldstine closed with the firm of Ascher Brothers one of the biggest booking contracts ever negotiated in the Middle West. This contract covers service embracing the entire output of Paramount and Artcraft pictures for the year 1918-19, for fourteen Chicago theatres controlled by this firm.

Contracts were also made with Lubliner & Trinz for twelve houses in their circuit; Balaban & Katz for two Chicago houses; Reuben & Finkelstein of Minneapolis and St. Paul; Saxe Brothers and Newman & Landan of Milwaukee; Shea's Hippodrome of Buffalo.

Will It Be Movies In, Baseball Out?

John C. Flinn, Publicity Director for Famous Players-Lasky, Is Working Hard on a "Yes" Answer.

BASEBALL, professionally and in leagues, departs this sporting life, until after the war, on Labor Day. Two days later, if at all, the World's Series will be started—and that'll be about all for professional baseball until the Kaiser gets his final knockout. John C. Flinn, director of publicity and advertising for Famous Players-Lasky, being a far-seeing individual, began a movement to convert the space generally used for baseball report, in a measure, at least, to the use of publicity for motion pictures, just as soon as Provost Marshal Crowder had extended the "work or fight" order to professional ball-tossers.

Mr. Flinn sent the following telegram to sixty of the leading newspapers in the larger cities of the United States: "What are you going to do to fill baseball's place in your news columns? Do you realize that motion pictures are the national amusement? With half the motion picture news you gave baseball you can actually add circulation. Baseball never advertised while motion pictures are a constant and increasing source of revenue. Baseball sold papers to men. Motion picture news sells papers to everybody. We can help you make motion pictures take the place baseball has vacated. For the information of our publicity service please wire, collect, your plans for using motion picture news to increase revenue and to hold circulation and reader interest. Thanks."

The movement is in the interest of exhibitors everywhere. Mr. Flinn cannot "put it over" all alone. Individual exhibitors, in big towns and small, who have their own best interest at heart, will contribute their own suggestions to the newspapers, with a view to having more news matter carried in conjunction with their advertising. Of course, all of the space that usually goes to baseball may not be converted to the use of pictures—but every little bit helps.

Universal Heads Burn All Bridges

Together With the Highways, Which They Consume With New Machines a La Spurlos Versenkt.

JUMPING into your automobile, not knowing where you are going and leaving no address except the license number of your car seems to be the popular form of vacationing effected by Universal officials this season. R. H. Cochrane started the ball a-rolling by buying a new machine and setting sail over a month ago with no particular destination in view and all means of communication cut off. Joe Brandt, also in an automobile, and with movements equally camouflaged, started out two weeks ago. Hal Hodes, who handles publicity for the Big U, after an extended course of lessons at a correspondence school in the best method to drive a flivver, invested in one of the latest models in Tin Lizzies and followed Mr. Cochrane's example.

Joe Brandt, however, is the first of the tourists to return to the office. He reports a delightful tour of ten days, in which he covered the route leading him through Kingston, Albany, Saratoga, Lake George, Schroon Lake, Lake Lucerne and back through the Delaware Water Gap and a large part of Pennsylvania. With renewed energy and quickened eye and a coat of tan which would do justice to a fisherman he is now at his wonted task of keeping Universal exchangemen on the jump.

Fennyvessey Is Now a Buck Private

Rochester Manager Quits Exempt Job as Liberty Theatre Booker to Pull Machine Gun Trigger.

A STORY of patriotism is told in the enlistment of Paul Fennyvessey of this city in the National Army, at a time when he held under the Commission on Training Camp Activities an appointment that was paying him a lot more than the boys in khaki get. It would have been possible for Mr. Fennyvessey to avoid service in the National Army, under his classification in Class 5 as a necessary employee of the government, but he preferred to waive this and get into service as a buck private.

Mr. Fennyvessey, who was probably the youngest theatre manager in Rochester, had charge of the Strand, one of the theatres controlled by A. A. Fennyvessey, of that city. The experience of the younger Fennyvessey in the moving picture business as a theatre manager and film salesman made it easy for him to obtain an appointment as manager of a picture theatre under the Commission on Training Camp Activities.

For several months Mr. Fennyvessey was stationed in Texas, and had just been given the job of booking both films and plays for a string of five Liberty Theatres, in addition to managing one, when his order number was reached in the draft. He immediately said good-bye to his Liberty Theatre at Camp Bowie, Fort Worth, and is now attached to the 335th Machine Gun Battalion, Eighty-seventh Division, Camp Dix, New Jersey, and will be glad to hear from all of his old friends.

BEST FILMS AT MINIMUM COST.

The War Department, Commission on Training Camp Activities, operating the Liberty theatres, has secured from the following picture makers the privilege of using any of their pictures at such a minimum cost as will barely cover rewinding and shipping of films: Paramount, Artcraft, Fox, Goldwyn, Metro, Mutual, Triangle.

Roosevelt Backs Anti-Yellow Dogism

In Characteristic Letter He Says It Is No One Man's War But the American People's.

IN making a reality of the campaign against yellow dogism, which forms the basis of Henry Irving Dodge's interesting story of present-day life, "The Yellow Dog," has attracted the attention and called forth the personal praise of Theodore Roosevelt and has been assured the support of the American Defense Society.

In a letter addressed to Charles J. Giegerich, who is in charge of the nation-wide campaign to form anti-yellow dog clubs and organize the "boy power" of America, Mr. Roosevelt, commending the undertaking, says:

July 18, 1918.

My dear Mr. Giegerich:

I wish you all good luck in your effort to start the anti-yellow dog clubs. It is the duty of the American people to put this war through to a finish. It is our duty to insist upon a hundred per cent. Americanism in this land and to tolerate no divided allegiance. It is our duty to back up the Government in extending the draft, in encouraging and insisting upon the speeding up of our war-plane program, our field-gun program and every other industry connected with the war, and to back it up in sending the greatest possible number of our soldiers abroad until we get an army on the fighting line bigger than the combined lines of France and England.

It is our duty to stand by every public servant who efficiently, fearlessly and patriotically does his duty along these lines. It is no less our duty to fearlessly oppose any public servant who fails in any point to perform such duty. This isn't any one man's war, and it isn't any Government organization's war; it's the war of the American people. It's their duty to insist that all their servants carry it on with the highest efficiency.

With all good wishes,

Faithfully yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Charles J. Giegerich, Deputy, Anti-Yellow Dog Club, 730 Seventh Avenue.

The American Defense Society, in assuring its co-operation and support, takes occasion to praise the author of "The Yellow Dog" for having written a story of interesting, humorous fiction that delivers in its lines "An effective blow against the agents of German propaganda."

In almost every city where anti-yellow dog clubs have been started the mayor and chief of police are co-operating in the campaign, and when the film version of "The Yellow Dog" is released the campaign against German-made undercurrents of unrest will receive added stimulus.

Exhibitors Commend New Fox Policy

Announcement of 1918-19 Plans Arouses Interest of Showmen in Large and Small Towns.

COMMENDATION of the William Fox policy for 1918-19 is contained in numerous letters from exhibitors which the Fox Film Corporation has received since its announcement last week. Exhibitors, says a statement by the Fox corporation, are unanimous in their statements that the arrangements of releases of Fox pictures during the year beginning September 1 will be a great assistance to theatre owners.

Greater flexibility in the choice of stars is one thing noted in the exhibitors' statements. By the arrangement to show a number of big, timely pictures, twenty-six Standard Pictures, twenty-six Victory Pictures and twenty-six Excel Pictures, besides the usual number of Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedies and Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoons, every section of the country, it is expected, will have little difficulty in exhibiting the pictures which are most popular in that particular locality.

Pleasure was expressed over the fact that Miss Bara will appear in "When a Woman Sins" early in the fall and also in "The She-Devil."

In regard to the announcement that William Farnum will have four Standard Pictures based on Zane Grey novels there has been many approving letters.

Much interest was shown in the trade by the announcement of a number of big timely pictures which William Fox has made, among them "The Prussian Cur" and "Why America Will Win."

Considerable mystery surrounds the announcement of the Fox production, "Why I Would Not Marry." The nature of the film, who the star will be and all other facts regarding the picture are guarded with jealous secrecy. In fact, the only statement regarding this picture which has come from the Fox office is that it is "the story of a most beautiful woman in the world, and her problem."

Approval has been the greeting of the new Victory Pictures. Apt in their title and embracing three foremost stars, Victory Pictures have already scored with exhibitors, if letters from theatre managers are any criterion. Warm praise has been received for Gladys Brockwell, Tom Mix and George Walsh.

In this connection several exhibitors, the Fox office states, have written in commending the William Fox policy of buying only the best stories for his pictures during the coming year.

The Excel Pictures announcement also has made a hit with exhibitors. The growing popularity of Jane and Katherine Lee, Virginia Pearson, Peggy Hyland and Jewel Carmen has been reflected in the box-office response.

Do You Know Drama When You See It?

If You Do You'll Recognize It Here—If It Doesn't Stir Your Blood Go See a Doctor.

By Guy Hubbart.

THE recruiting officer in a medium-sized city turned a volunteer down because he was physically unfit to fight in the trenches. The young man was anxious to fight; he was anxious to get at the dirty Boche and his swaggering officers first-hand; but his chest was too shallow; his heart was weak; his feet were flat. He was rejected unconditionally. This is what he said when he got back behind the men's furnishing counter—his regular job:

"Oh, I am not fit to fight, eh! Well, I will fight. My feet may be flat and my heart weak, but my head isn't flat, my brain isn't weak. I'll fight the damned Kaiser and his crew of Potsdam butchers and baby killers. I'll fight him with something sharper than a sword, something the Teutonic philosophy cannot comprehend. I'll fight him with ideas."

The young man with the flat chest did fight. He organized a War Savings Stamp Club in his store and under his direction it sold $36,000 worth of stamps in six weeks. His boss helped him; his customers helped him. He is selling stamps yet and selling his regular merchandise—collars, neckties and shirts.

But he hasn't allowed his regular job to interfere with his fighting. No, sir; not at all!

Do you know what that $36,000 will do toward winning the war? Ask any ordnance man. He'll tell you and then you'll know why the Kaiser fears ideas more than he does guns. He knows he can't fight ideas. He is at the head of an army of cattle. Cattle must be driven. They can't fight like this flat-chested clerk.

You men at the head of concerns manned by salespeople with ideas, are you helping them fight? You are if you have a War Savings Stamp department where stamps are sold every day.

Tell this story to your associates. It will help them and you fight, and remember every dollar helps the gunner and the mop-up man over there.

Loew Makes Big Contract for Features

Signs Up for Sixty Paramount and Artcraft Productions for Each of Twenty-two Houses.

WHAT is perhaps the largest single booking contract ever made in the history of the motion picture industry has just been consummated by Marcus Loew with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. This contract calls for sixty Paramount and Artcraft feature productions for each of twenty-two theatres in New York and its vicinity. In addition thirty-six short subjects have been booked for the year in each house. The total sum involved is said to be in the neighborhood of $400,000.

The productions contracted for, each for one week's run in each theatre, are as follows: Two featuring Enrico Caruso, three with Fred Stone, three with George M. Cohan, eight with William S. Hart, eight with Douglas Fairbanks, eight with Charles Ray, two with Mary Pickford, four with John Barrymore, eight with Wallace Reid, five D. W. Griffith productions, nine Paramount and Artcraft special productions, ten Paramount-Arbuckle comedies and twenty-six Paramount-Mack Sennett comedies.

War Board Meets Film Men's Requests

Not Policy or Intent of Government to Impose Needless Restrictions on Manufacturers, Says Chairman.

VANCE C. McCORMICK, chairman of the War Trade Board, has written the following self-explanatory letter to William A. Brady, president of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry:

"The requests and suggestions for a modification of the regulations governing the exportation of motion picture film, submitted on behalf of the industry in your letter of July 19, in a memorandum of July 12, by Paul Cromelin and in personal conferences with representatives of the industry have received earnest consideration. It is not the policy nor intent of the board to impose unnecessary or needlessly hampering restrictions upon any branch of American export business or without good reason to check the flow of our export trade, the maintenance of which is of importance for war reasons. This consideration applies particularly to the export of motion picture film since the educational effect of film of a suitable character is of recognized value.

"After consultation with the Committee on Public Information the board has found it possible to meet your wishes to the extent of dispensing with the requirement of film destined for Great Britain and its Dominions and colonies and for France and Italy be consigned to a representative designated by the War Trade Board and that the special agreement (Supplemental Form X-20) be signed for such shipments. As was explained by Mr. Conger to the delegation which called upon him, it was not thought at the time when the general regulations covering exports to all countries were drafted that these features would work in the slightest degree as restrictions upon exports of film to the countries in question. The proposed agreement was so obviously a matter of form for countries whence all enemy film or enemy influence upon motion picture houses has long since been banished that a special set of regulations to complicate the procedure was not thought necessary.

"The board will require upon film exported to these Allied countries only a guarantee against re-export, to prevent American film from finding its way by circuitous routes into neutral countries to which the regulations of Form X-20 still apply.

"It does not, however, appear possible to dispense with the requirement that exports of film to neutral countries be covered by an agreement prohibiting sale to houses under enemy influence or control or exhibiting enemy film. Not only does the general policy of the Trading with the Enemy Act apply to dealings with houses thus employed in the enemy propaganda, but the success which has already been attained in combating enemy film popaganda in European neutral countries, particularly in Scandinavia, by the application of such restrictions quite justifies a continuance of this policy.

"The board still has under consideration the question of a revision of the regulations regarding the export of raw stock and the changes in the phraseology of the supplemental form suggested by you. Our representatives abroad have also been instructed to act upon applications for permission for re-export, in cases where such re-export appears unobjectionable, without referring the matter to Washington for decision.

"It was not the intention of the board in its regulations (paragraph G of the agreement) to interfere with the usual cuts and changes in film, but only to provide against changes which would alter the significance of a film in a malevolent way. Exporters need fear no difficulties from the application of this clause to ordinary cuts and changes, particularly as we propose to change the wording to read 'substantially the same form.'"

Metro's Kaiser Picture Going Strong

Home Office Reports Breaking of Attendance Records in Many Theatres Throughout Country.

ATTENDANCE records of theatres throughout the country are being repeatedly shattered by Screen Classics, Inc.'s seven part super-feature, "To Hell With the Kaiser," according to telegrams and letters from exhibitors and exchange managers to the offices of Metro, which is distributing this screen revelation of Prussia's plans to bring the world under its heel.

Indefinite runs of "To Hell With the Kaiser" are now going on in more than a score of the largest cities in the East, the North, and the South, while in the West many extended projections are already under way and others in some of the finest and most exclusive theatres in the country will be made immediately.

Two of the western cities which have been taken by storm are Los Angeles and Kansas City, Mo. In Kansas City it opened at Convention Hall, one of the largest auditoriums in the world. More than 25,000 saw the first two performances, and as many others kept the police active trying to get past the various entrances to the big theatre. Other cities are having similar experiences.

Tucker Now to Direct Anita Stewart

Terms of Contract Said to Allow Well Known Director Fullest Scope to Turn Out Real Box Office Attractions.

CONSIDERABLE interest attaches to the announcement that Louis B. Mayer has completed arrangements with George Loane Tucker, whereby the latter will direct Anita Stewart in her new series of de-luxe productions to be distributed by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit.

George Loane Tucker is generally acknowledged by both English and American film critics to stand at the head of his profession. While a native American, Mr. Tucker spent several of his most productive years in Great Britain, where he filmed "The Prisoner of Zenda" and "Rupert of Hentzau" by Anthony Hope; "The Middleman," well known to American audiences through the annual legitimate tours of E. S. Willard; "The Christian" and "The Manxman" by Hall Caine, and "The Hypocrites" by Henry Arthur Jones.

George Loane Tucker.

Mr. Tucker was in England at the outbreak of the war associated with the London Film Company, and during the following six months devoted his time entirely to the making of the picture to aid Allied war aims and assist in recruiting.

Upon his return to America, about a year ago, Mr. Tucker became associated with the Goldwyn organization, and turned out three of the best productions recently released by that company. These were "Dodging a Million," "The Cinderella Man" and "Joan of Plattsburg."

"I prepare my own working scripts," Mr. Tucker stated in the course of a recent interview, "and am happy to say that I have never yet had trouble with an author over my manner of handling this work. It is always my aim to retain the spirit of an author's conception and not 'adapt' it out of all semblance to the original. In this connection it is gratifying to state that there will be no 'time limit' on the pictures I will make, starring Miss Stewart. Every production will be the best of which we are capable, regardless of the number of days or weeks required to make it so."

Robertson-Cole Makes Big Foreign Deal

Acquires "Tarzan of the Apes" and Its Sequel for Large Slices of Territory—Other Sales.

ONE of the biggest foreign rights deals of the year was consummated last week when the Robertson-Cole Company took over the rights for "Tarzan of the Apes," together with its sequel, "The Romance of Tarzan," from the National Film Corporation of America for Great Britain and its colonies, exclusive of Canada and Australia. The consideration involved is said to be $75,000.

The Robertson-Cole company has also closed with the North American Motion Picture Corporation of Buenos Ayres and New York for the distribution of the Robertson-Cole productions in Argentina, Paraguay and Uraguay. Another deal just closed is the sale to the Co-operative Company of "The Cast-Off," "The Fingers of Justice," "Raffles," "Men" and "The Eagles' Eye" for Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

Due to the increase in its business in the last few months the Robertson-Cole has again been forced to expand its offices and has leased several rooms adjoining its headquarters at 1600 Broadway.

CANADIAN EXCHANGES CUT OUT OLD FILM.

Several Canadian exchanges have discarded a quantity of ancient films which had been lying in their vaults because of the collection of a special war tax from exhibitors in the shape of a 15 cent per reel a day assessment whenever a picture is in use. With such a tax there was no demand for old pictures.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

Scene from "The Silent Woman" (Metro).

Story of North Woods Is Metro's "Silent Woman"

THE title of Edith Storey's forthcoming Metro feature production is "The Silent Woman." It was previously known as "Shadow and Substance." "The Silent Woman" is a romance of the North woods. Nan McDonald is a clerk in a Hudson Bay trading post. She is affectionately called "the angel of the lumberjacks."

This five-act feature was directed by Herbert Blache, adapted by June Mathis and Katharine Kavanaugh from Lois Zellner's original story. George K. Hollister was the cameraman. The strong cast surrounding Miss Storey includes Frank Mills in the role of John Lowery, her husband.

Joseph Kilgour has the part of the villain. Baby Ivy Ward has the appealing role of little Billy. Lilie Leslie makes her first appearance with Metro in the part of Mary Lowery. T. Tamamoto, one of the best known Japanese actors in the theatrical profession, is included in the cast. Other well known people are George Stevens, Augusta Perry, Harry Linson, Ben Walker, and John Cohill.

The subject will be released in Metro's All-Star Series August 26.

Three General Films Popular.

New York bookings on three current General Film features, "Her Moment," "The Hypocrites," and the Oakdale Productions, indicate in a measure the popularity attained by these subjects, says a General announcement issued this week. Following special Loew bookings the Anna Luther and Elizabeth Risdon features, and "The Locked Heart," the first of the Oakdales, were booked for important engagements in the three large David Picker theatres.

"The Burden of Proof" Nearly Complete.

MARION DAVIES' second Select production, "The Burden of Proof," in which she is being directed by Julius Steger, was practically finished last week. Miss Davies' role is a dramatic one. A number of important scenes representing phases of official life in Washington and of exclusive society in Newport were shot by Andre Barlartier which will undoubtedly enhance the pictorial side of the photoplay.

An unusual opportunity to wear some stunning evening gowns is afforded Miss Davies during the course of the picture, while the other feminine members of the company are not far behind.

In addition to the first run bookings in New York, William L. Sherry reports a good demand for "The Street of Seven Stars," the first picture produced by De Luxe Pictures, Inc., with Doris Kenyon at the head of her own company. John D. Sorieto, manager of the Park theatre in Boston, has booked the picture for the week of August 12 to be followed by bookings in all of the important houses in the Hub.

Another booking is in the entire circuit of Ascher Brothers—Lubliner & Trinz houses in Chicago. The combination controls the third largest booking in the country.

Lillian Walker's First Is "Embarrassment of Riches"

THE title of the first of the series of eight "happy pictures," as they have been termed, in which Lillian Walker is to be starred is "The Embarrassment of Riches." The subject is nearing completion at the Thanhauser studio in New Rochelle, and announcement of the release date is promised in the immediate future. The second picture has been selected.

Miss Walker's first story is a most happy choice with which to start her series of pictures. Louis K. Anspacker is the author. The play enjoyed a prosperous two seasons' run in New York, and it is predicted by those qualified to know that as a motion picture it will prove even a bigger hit than it did on the legitimate stage. It is full of picture punches, with a novel treatment that is different and a great human appeal.

Contrary to the usual reservation of directors in accepting a play or book, Edward Dillon, who has been engaged as supervising director of the Lillian Walker Productions, went on record in advance of its production in declaring it to be a story that could not miss fire.

With the announcement of the releasing arrangements for the Lillian Walker series will probably come also the details of the organization of the new producing combination, of which the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation is one of the units. This has for its purpose the production of pictures for distribution on a co-partnership basis. The pictures produced by the Lillian Walker Corporation will be but one of several star series to be presented by the new combination. It is known that the output of three additional stars have already been contracted for, and it is said the new organization will include several producing firms which have heretofore been classed as independents.

Lester Park, the president and general manager of the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation, is said to be closely identified with the producing combine.

Mr. Park has been active for more than a year in furthering a closer relationship between exhibitor and producer, and the new combination, as well as his own releasing arrangements, are expected to reflect his activities in this direction.

Gail Kane's Release for September Is Love Story

GAIL KANE'S new production, "Love's Law," for release by Mutual September 1, is a love story with a new angle. Those who have been favored with advance showings of "Love's Law" are of the opinion that it is one of the best plays Joseph Poland has turned out, and certainly one of the most satisfactory vehicles ever afforded Miss Kane. J. Clarkson Miller, who wrote the scenario, is also enthusiastic about the completed picture.

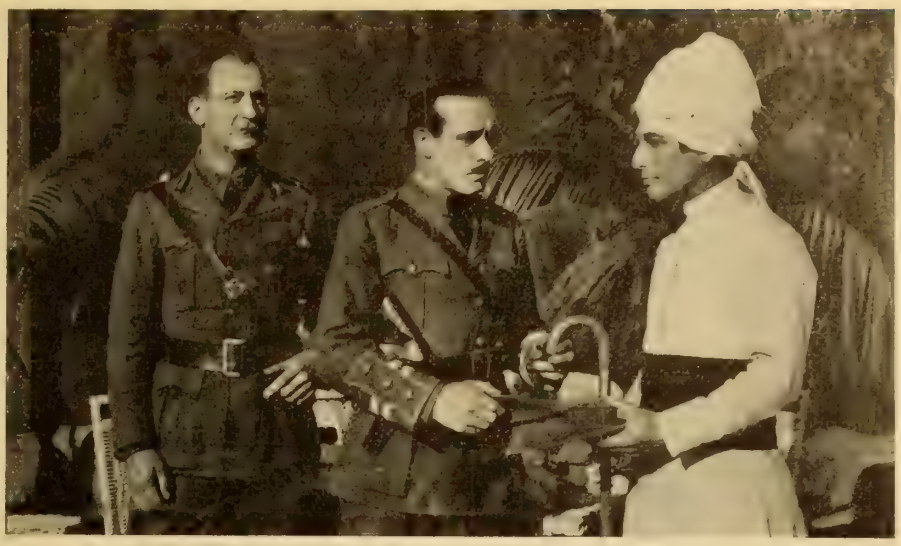
Supporting Miss Kane in the cast aside from her leading man, Courtenay Foote, are Reed Hamilton, Frederick Jones, Mathilde Baring, and Emile LaCroix. Francis J. Grandon is directing Miss Kane, who will produce eight feature plays for Mutual release.

Violet Mersereau Again a Universal Bluebird Star

AFTER a period of several months' inactivity the Bluebird has opened its studio at Coytesville again. The occupant will be Violet Mersereau, who has contributed some of the most popular photoplays to its two years' roster. Miss Mersereau started work at the studio one week after her return from the ball at Boston, having purchased a variegated wardrobe which she will require in this Bluebird photoplay, which is being made under the provisional title of "Together."

O. A. C. Lund has been engaged to direct Miss Mersereau, and will have entire charge not only of the production but of the studio as well. He has chosen a story written by R. Wolheim which was published as a magazine story under the title of "The Lone Dit." Anticipating that very few people would know what a "dit" was, he decided to call the story "Together." Incidentally it may be explained that a dit is a crook, and that Miss Mersereau in the new production will play a dual role, that of a young society woman and her twin brother who has not followed the straight and narrow path. Mr. Lund has already engaged Chester Barnett and Barney Randall to support Miss Mersereau.

Mrs. Castle Dances in Pathe Film.



Every one likes to see Mrs. Castle trip the light fantastic, but every one does not like to pay from $2 to $5 to see this queen of all dances display her skill. However, in "The Girl from Bohemia," the Pathe five-reel comedy-drama, Mrs. Castle is given an opportunity to exhibit a number of the latest dance steps such as won her fame in two hemispheres.

Not only does Mrs. Castle present her latest dances, but she also wears a large number of beautiful gowns of the latest designs, and these will certainly be very interesting to the feminine members of any motion picture audience.

World Announces Dressler Comedy.

World Pictures announce another Marie Dressler comedy is to be added to the list of comedies released by this organization. It bears the title of "The Scrub Lady" and is scheduled for general distribution on September 2.

Miss Dressler is making her pictures at her studio near Los Angeles, and will remain in the west all this winter with the possible exception of the time she will give the Government on the next war loan, which commences late in September.

Mabel Normand Has Good Support in "Peck's Bad Girl"

PLAYERS of exceptional merit, well known for their work in stage and screen productions, give Mabel Normand admirable support in her newest Goldwyn picture, "Peck's Bad Girl," by Tex Charwate, this star's first production of Goldwyn's new year.

For her leading man the star has Earle Foxe, for several years a contributor to the success of prominent screen productions, and before his entry into motion picture work identified with many stage successes. On the screen Foxe has done his best work in "The Escape," "The Trail of the Lonesome Pine," "The Love Mask" and in the Pathe serial, "The Fatal Ring."

Corinne Barker, an actress of beauty and dramatic talent, plays the role of Hortense Martinot. Miss Barker enjoys an enviable screen career and played a prominent role with Mae Marsh in "Money Mad."

Ryley Hatch is intrusted with an important part in the Mabel Normand production. Hatch is known for his work in several successful stage plays, the most noteworthy of which was his performance in Morosco's "Help Wanted." On the screen he has been equally successful. Blanche Davenport, well known on the stage and screen for her splendid characterizations, also supports Miss Normand.

Leslie Hunt, who played with William Faversham during the long run of "The Squaw Man," is well cast in "Peck's Bad Girl."

Others in the splendid cast of "Peck's Bad Girl" are Edwin Sturgis, well known for his comedy work in several recent screen productions; Joseph Granby, also a stage and screen comedian of worth, and F. G. Patton and Auge Becker, who play the roles of sheriff and constable, respectively.

Fred Stone Putting Over Some Remarkable Dancing

FRED STONE caused a sensation at the Lasky studio recently when he went through a series of his eccentric dances in the making of his new Artcraft picture, "Johnny Get Your Gun." The scenes took place in a ballroom set, with extra people in evening clothes making a wide circle about the famous comedian. No one, not even Donald Crisp, Stone's director, knew exactly what Stone was going to do. But suddenly the music and the camera started simultaneously, and he came shooting from a side door of the ball room.

Stone's dance was so swift and daring that it baffles description. The business of the extra people was to applaud, and they did so with the greatest enthusiasm, for they had never seen anything like Stone before. First Fred was on his feet moving slowly, then he would make a sudden twist, land on his shoulder and straighten up suddenly to assume a comic posture. And when the applause was at its height he suddenly skimmed across the floor and out the door. This was only the first of his dances. Others as fantastic and amusing followed. The eccentric dances are only one of the many features announced in "Johnny Get Your Gun."

World Purchases Gambier Story.

For the past six months the scenario department of World Pictures has tried to get in touch with Kenyon Gambier, the author of "The Huge Black One-Eyed Man," which appeared a year or so ago in the Saturday Evening Post. Mr. Gambier finally received the message and, as he expressed it, "there were so many postmarks on the envelope that it was hardly decipherable." He was willing to sell the story for picture purposes. He invited an offer. The deal was consummated by telegraph. The story was turned over to a force of continuity workers and Montagu Love will begin work on the picture within the next few weeks.

Triangle Has Ten Directors Working at Culver City

THAT Triangle intends carrying on an intensive campaign of picturemaking is evidenced by the fact that at no time in the recent history of the corporation has it had so many directors of reputation working on productions as at present. To the well known names of Christy Cabanne, Cliff Smith, William Dowlan, Albert Parker, Gilbert P. Hamilton, Frank Borzage, Henry Otto, and Thomas Heffron there must be added those of Jack Conway and E. Mason Hopper. The arrival of Taylor Holmes, bringing his own director, adds still another name to the list, making ten in all. With such a battery of directors "shooting" at one time under the Triangle trademark a great output of superior feature productions may be looked for.

Taylor Holmes will be featured in a comedy drama by Jean Havez entitled "His Father's Safety Razor." The plot of the story has not as yet been given out, but it is said to be a medium which will give full play to all the inimitable qualities for which this comedian is noted.

Lawrence Windom will handle the megaphone for Mr. Holmes, and a carefully selected cast will support him.

Jack Conway will direct "Mountain Law," scenario by Lewis H. Kilpatrick. Jack Richardson, Frank Pearce, and other well known stars will appear in the cast.

Albert Parker will direct Gloria Swanson in "The Secret Code," by Adela Rogers St. Johns. It is a psychological study of married life seen from the angle of the neglected wife, with a mystery element cleverly interwoven.

Jack Abbe, Triangle's clever little Japanese star, will be featured in a new picture entitled "The Spirit of Adventure," of which he is co-author with E. Magnus Ingleton, of the Triangle scenario department.

William Dowlan is scheduled to direct "The Atom," the work of Catherine Carr, head of Triangle's staff of continuity writers, and in it Director Dowlan will again have Pauline Starke for the featured role.

Three other productions, titles not announced yet, are in course of preparation, and, with the technical and construction departments working overtime, it would seem as if "busy" will be Triangle's middle name for several weeks to come.

"His Birthright" Coming September 1.

"His Birthright," the first of eight Hayakawa specials to be released by Mutual on September 1, has received the finishing touches under the eye of the Japanese star, who is now finishing his second picture of the series, "The Temple of Dusk."

A novel and complete advertising campaign has already been launched. The exhibitor will be provided with paper that has been prepared with especial effort to assure something new in that line. Two sets of one sheets and two sets of three sheets will be furnished. Sixes, sixteens, and twenty-four sheets will be supplied in addition to other material that must prove valuable in exploiting the production.

"His Birthright" was directed by William Worthington.

"The Return of Mary" (Metro).

Final touches are being put on May Allison's newest Metro production, "The Return of Mary," the young star's first picture made at Metro's Hollywood studios. The supporting cast was chosen with extreme care and includes several screen players of wide experience and reputation. Darrell Foss is leading man. Charles Burton plays the father. Strong roles are also assigned to Frank Brownlee, Joseph Belmont and Claire McDowell.

Bessie Love Is Now a Star for Vitagraph

BESSIE LOVE, for several years past a star of growing popularity, has been signed as a star by Vitagraph. Albert E. Smith, president of the company, states that Miss Love already has begun preparations for her first picture, which will be made at the company's Hollywood studio. She will be directed by David Smith.

The acquisition of Miss Love comes close upon the revelation of expansive plans by Vitagraph. This expansion, which includes the acquisition of a number of new stars, the inauguration of a fixed serial policy, the enlargement and improvement of the company's Western studio, and other similar moves would seem to be the forerunner of an important announcement by Vitagraph which may mark a new epoch in the company's history.

Bessie Love stands out among the younger stars through her work under direction of Griffith and Ince, and, more recently, because of the tremendous exploitation which she received at the hands of the Pathe Company, for which she made four features. She is a native daughter of California, born in Los Angeles, and graduated from the high school there. Starting her career under the direction of Griffith at the Triangle-Fine Arts studio she appeared in numerous important productions, among them "Intolerance," "A Sister of Six," "The Heiress of Coffee Dan's," "The Doll's Ship," and "Nina, the Flower Girl." Subsequently she came under the direction of Thomas H. Ince, and was featured in "The Sawdust Ring," "Wee Lady Betty," "Jerniekety Polly Ann," and others.

President Smith states that Miss Love will appear in Blue Ribbon features exclusively, the first of which will be released early in November. He says he plans to buy only stories and plays which he considers suited to Miss Love's personality, and that her pictures will be given the most careful consideration from every standpoint.

Will Rogers

Famous cowboy wit of the Ziegfeld "Follies," as he appears in the name role of "Laughing Bill Hyde," a Rex Beach story, now in the making at the Goldwyn studios.

"Friend Husband" Is a Most Compelling Brute

With the constant search for novelty it is not surprising that motion picture producers—the more enterprising of them—occasionally succeed in reversing some of the old situations, or at least varying them. Such is the case with "Friend Husband," in which Goldwyn Picture Madge Kennedy is soon to be seen.

Instead of employing forceful methods to bring the girl he loves to terms, the man in "Friend Husband" happens to be married to her. In fact, they are on their honeymoon when he decides on the daring course which finally causes her to capitulate and give him her love.

Until this moment love had played no part in the unusual marriage, convenience being the reason Madge Kennedy chose to go through the nuptial ceremony with him, hoping that it would end there and she would be free to enjoy the monetary benefit derived through a certain will. But the man, being a cave creature for all his conventional exterior, would not let the marriage end there and promptly dragged Madge off to his cave—or, to be more exact, his island.

There his tactics departed somewhat from the popular formula. The bridegroom did not resort to violence, firmness being the extent of his strength. Nor did he refuse to allow his wife to wear her pretty honeymoon frocks. But—he did make her work for her living.

Gloria Joy.

Joy Among the Oakdales.

One of the youngest and most promising of the 1918 crop of motion picture stars is Gloria Joy, the seven-year-old miss who is featured in the Oakdale Productions, distributed by General Film Company. Six of these five-reel features, each of which presents the small star in an appealing role with the lighter domestic touch, are being released at intervals of every two weeks.

Releases in the series are: "The Locked Heart," "No Children Wanted," "The Midnight Burglar," "Miss Michief Maker," "Little Miss Grown-Up" and "Wanted—a Brother."

Golden West Films Will Be Ready About September 1

G. M. ANDERSON, head of the Golden West Photoplay Company, and his players have finished two five-reel features, and a third is rapidly nearing completion at the Glendale studios. The first picture entitled "The Son of a Gun," with G. M. Anderson and Joy Lewis, his leading woman, at the head of the cast, will be ready for showing in about two weeks.

"The Son of a Gun" is a story of a Western character of the diamond in the rough type. Ordinarily, the Son of a Gun is a good-hearted, simple-minded child of the cattle ranges, but when he gets two or three shots of tarantula juice in his system he become a regular hellion, a wild riding, free shooting "son of a gun."

There is an element of romance and heart interest in the story, and much of the same kind of action that characterized G. M. Anderson's work in the old Broncho Billy films.

The feature was directed by Jesse Robbins, who was associated with Anderson at the old Niles (Cal.) plant. Fred Church, Joseph Flynn, Thomas Kelly, and George Cleethorpe, all members of the original Anderson Company in the old Broncho Billy days, have prominent parts.

The second Golden West feature will be "Red Blood and Yellow," and has the same cast of principals as "The Son of a Gun."

This will be followed by a picture not finally named, but which was made under the working title of "Shootin' Mad."

When the Golden West was organized it was planned to produce two-reel pictures in a continuity series dealing with early life in the West, and to be called "The Old Timer's Tales," but after things got going good and Anderson found he could get together many of his former players that made the Broncho Billy stories famous he decided to enlarge his plans and make five-reel features on an elaborate scale.

The Anderson players are operating at the old Ninth street studio in Glendale, probably one of the very first picture plants to be built in California. The situation is ideal, as every variety of scene and location needed for pictures with Western atmosphere can be had right at the front and back doors of the plant.

Affiliated Will Build National Distributing System

FOLLOWING a week spent at the executive offices of the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation, William J. Clark, of Grand Rapids, treasurer of that organization, has left for Chicago. Mr. Clark will return this week, at which time, it is understood, an important announcement will be made having to do with the active operation of the Affiliated plan.

One of the objects of Mr. Clark's trip to New York was to confer with Charles C. Pettijohn, the general counsel of the organization, and Sydney S. Cohen, chairman of its board of directors, regarding the physical handling of the Affiliated product.

Negotiations are in progress whereby the matter of the shipping and inspection of Affiliated prints and paper by a nationally organized distributing system will be placed before the board of directors of the Affiliated within the next few days.

The purpose of contracting for such service is to save the exhibitors of the country the expense of maintaining another distributing organization. The employment of an already existing organization, it is declared, will affect a saving in this item of from 20 to 23 per cent. on film rentals.

The release of the first Affiliated pictures will follow in short order upon the completion of the negotiations mentioned above. Consideration has already been given the selection of the first picture, and Mr. Cohen will within a few days name a committee of directors whose duty it will be to pass upon it.

A multiple reel patriotic subject which, it is declared, exceeds in its dramatic appeal the most notable of previous films of this character may be the first offering. At least three producers, however, are in the race for this honor, while special pictures undertaken only after consultation with the exhibitor directors of the Affiliated are being filmed in two studios in the East and two in the West.

Although a newcomer in national film circles, Mr. Clark in a few months time has won a place for himself. An exhibitor himself, having a controlling interest in a large circuit of theatres in Michigan, the exhibitors in the Affiliated have found him zealous in the guarding of their interests. In addition to his theatre holdings Mr. Clark has many large business interests in Michigan.

William J. Clark.

"Johanna Enlists" Is Complete.

Mary Pickford has completed "Johanna Enlists," and William D. Taylor, the director, has gone to England to enter an officer's training camp. This picture is military in character. It is not a battle picture, but has to do with certain incidents while a body of troopers are on their way to a cantonment. It is asserted that "Our Mary" has a role which, for delightful character, is unexampled in any of her former productions.

The scenario of "Johanna Enlists" was written by Francis Marion, and is an adaptation of Rupert Hughes' novel, "The Mobilization of Johanna." In it Mary makes a decided transformation—from an awkward country girl to a dainty young person.

Douglas MacLean is leading man.

The Walshes Are Working Together.

When William Fox releases "I'll Say So," one of the first of his new Victory Pictures, it will be a case of the Walsh family in the limelight, for R. A. Walsh directs the picture, and his young brother, George Walsh, is the star. Although brothers are not often the best co-workers, George and Raoul make a team that is hard to beat. What Raoul says goes, even though George is athletically capable of disputing his brother's order.

The scenario was written by Ralph Spence.

Ziegfield Signs for Hayakawa Pictures.

The Ziegfield theatre on Michigan avenue, Chicago's most representative motion picture house, has signed a contract with the Haworth Pictures Corporation for the entire series of eight Hayakawa productions, the first of which, "His Birthright," will be released September 1.

Negotiations for the presentation of the Hayakawa pictures in Chicago were conducted between Sam E. Rork, general representative of the Haworth Company, and C. E. Elliott, managing director of the Ziegfield, and were closed only after Mr. Elliott had personally previewed "His Birthright." He pronounced it one of the strongest pictures he had ever viewed.

Mr. Rork is at present in New York after a swing around the circuit as far West as Chicago closing deals for pre-release bookings on the Hayakawa pictures.

Flagg Editing His Paramount Comedies.

New York awoke on Saturday, July 20, to find the whole city posted with James Montgomery Flagg's latest Marine Corps poster. "Tell It to the Marines" is the title, and it shows a young American in citizen's clothes yanking his coat off in the spirit of fight as he reads the headlines of a newspaper that lies at his feet, which reads: "Huns kill women and children."

Mr. Flagg came to town from his summer home in Maine to edit his newest Paramount comedy and do some new posters for these films. He received many letters of congratulation on his new poster. Mr. Flagg's thirty-three patriotic posters of the past year have been reproduced by the millions and posted in every city and hamlet the country over.

Fox Reports Large Increase of Business in Buffalo

UNDER the direction of Clayton Sheehan, special representative, and Thomas W. Brady, manager, Fox Film Corporation's office at Buffalo reports a big increase in business in all lines of Fox films.

"A Daughter of the Gods," R. A. Walsh's drama, "Woman and the Law," and "The Blindness of Divorce," are reported as being exceptionally popular. Manager Earl Crabb of the Strand Theatre, Buffalo, has extended the run on "A Daughter of the Gods" because of the unusually heavy business. The lobby displays used at the Strand during this showing have attracted attention. Mr. Crabb is an artist and designed the displays himself.

The run of the Annette Kellerman picture has also been extended at the Drohen Theatre, Dunkirk, N. Y., and at Haven's Opera House, Olean, N. Y. Fred Bitner, who has just taken over this latter house, reports an exceptionally heavy business. He has injected new life and new ideas in the management, and has livened up the attractiveness of the theatre. Mr. Bitner has just booked the complete Fox service, including "The Big Six of 1918" and the William Fox Standard Pictures.

Fox service has also been taken by the Como Abbott Theatre, Buffalo; the Andrew Theatre, Salamanca, which has also booked "The Big Six," and the Princess Theatre, Corning, N. Y. The Symphony Theatre, Binghamton, has resumed the Fox service.

Manager Harold Franklin of Shea's Hippodrome, Buffalo, has resumed the showings of the Fox-Lehrman Sunshine Comedies, and is also playing the regular Mutt and Jeff Animated Cartoon program.

The Morgan Theatre, Auburn, is now using the Fox service, Mr. Sheehan reports, and the smart summer house at Loon Lake, the Casino, has also booked it. Manager Jack Matthews has taken on the Fox service for the Plattsburg Opera House.

Dr. Harry Hall, manager of Rand's Opera House, Troy, N. Y., has found "Woman and the Law" and "The Blindness of Divorce" big money makers, he says. He played each of these pictures a full week at his house. In Syracuse Edgar Weill has booked "Les Miserables" for a week for his Strand Theatre. This is the second showing of the great Victor Hugo picture in that city, the Whiting Opera House having already played it at $2 top prices.

Lone Female in "The Driving Power."

In the forthcoming production of "The Driving Power," a World Picture in which Montagu Love is starred, the unusual situation of having only one female actor is employed. The direction of this photo play will be assumed by Oscar Apfel. The company left on Monday for Lake Placid to take the scenes which are to represent a lumber camp.

Tefft Johnson Begins Work for "World."

Tefft Johnson, the latest director engaged by World Pictures, has assumed charge of the making of "Snug Harbor" into picture form with Madge Evans in the stellar role. The camera work is now in progress at the studio at Fort Lee.

Darrell Foss Again with May Allison.

Darrell Foss, who played opposite May Allison in "The Return of Mary," the first picture done by Miss Allison at Metro's studios in Hollywood, is again her leading man in "The Testing of Mildred Vane," on which work has just started.

A very prominent character in the story, adapted by George D. Baker from an original by Charles T. Dazey, is a maimed physician who keeps a diary written in Greek and who seeks to revenge a fancied wrong on a dead woman's daughter. The professor of Greek, by deciphering the notation, frustrates the rogue's designs.

"Now that I'm playing a Greek professor," said Mr. Foss, discussing his new role, "I'm rather sorry I failed to study Greek at college. Anyway, when I was an undergraduate I was too much of a live one to take up the dead languages."

De Mille's Latest Effort Sounds Like Regular Story

THE Cecil B. DeMille special production for Artcraft, "Till I Come Back to You," which will be released August 26, deals with the war, but from an angle hitherto unapproached by the screen producers and scenario writers. It is an original story by Jeanie MacPherson.

The psychology of childish thought as applied to certain situations growing out of the terrific struggle forms a large part of the theme, though the actual story concerns a Belgian girl who marries a German before the war and repents of it when her country is devastated.

A young American officer is involved in the plot, becomes a factor in the life of the young wife, and when her husband is killed takes her for his own. But the peculiar pathos and inspiring idea of the children's love for Albert, King of the Belgians; the brave deed of one little Belgian boy who saves a whole schoolful of little waifs; the manner in which to save their lives the American officer is forced to sacrifice the labor of months and is later court-martialed, only to be saved in turn by the child—these are some of the points which render the story different from the customary war picture. There is little "battle stuff," but plenty of excitement.

Bryant Washburn plays the American officer, and Florence Vidor is the Belgian girl-wife. G. Butler Clonebough is the German husband.

C. B. DeMille is enthusiastic over the picture, upon which he is lavishing the greatest care and attention.

Carol Holloway in Wolfville Tale.

Carol Holloway, well known for her work in serials with William Duncan, makes her second appearance in a Wolfville Tale this week in "The Jest of Talky Jones," a General Film release. Featured with her is William Lester, who has been playing prominent parts in the other stories of the series, and Robert Burns, Hattie Buskirk, and Charles Force. A strong note of comedy runs throughout the two-reel story, which is not without its touch of the dramatic.

Following the Wolfville release will come "Springtime a la Carte," another O. Henry story, featuring Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres, the popular stars of recent Broadway Star Features' successes.

The sub-titles in "Queen of the Sea," the submarine phantasy which William Fox is going to exhibit this season as one of his big, timely pictures, are declared to be of exceptional literary merit. Annette Kellerman is the star of "Queen of the Sea."

As the production is a big phantasy the sub-titles had to be of a nature in keeping with the beauty and picturesqueness of the picture. Miss Hettie Gray Baker of the Fox Film Corporation spent several weeks in writing the sub-titles alone. These, it is said, breathe the poetry and delicacy of the picture, without being banal or forced.

"Playthings" Is Universal's Bluebird for August 12

BLUEBIRD Photoplays, Inc., had a suspicion that when they bought Sidney Toler's stage drama, "Playthings," they had a remarkable piece of property. As a stage production "Playthings" had been a real warhorse of the stock theatres and traveling companies for years. It was only recently, however, that the scenario department was able to make the owners see any reason why they should give the photoplay people a look-in on it. Eventually, however, negotiations were closed with the Century Plays Company whereby Bluebird acquired the photoplay rights, and production was started with Fritzi Brunette, late Selig star, and before that a Universal actress, in the stellar role. Douglas Gerrard, well-known Bluebird director, who had charge of the production, engaged a strong cast to support Miss Brunette, including Myrtle Reeves, Lewis J. Cody, Mary Anderson, Charles Gerrard, Phil Dunham and F. A. Turner.

When the production came in from the coast last week it was so highly considered by the reviewing committee that an earlier place on the Bluebird program was made for it. The announcement is therefore made that "Playthings" will be the regular Bluebird release for August 12 instead of Monroe Salisbury in "That Devil Bateese," which will be released one week later, on August 19.

Southerners Have Call In Forthcoming Metro

"KILDARE OF STORM" will be Emily Stevens' next starring vehicle in Metro's All-Star Series. The story mirrors picturesque and typical phases of the South, having been written by Eleanor Mercein Kelly, a Southern author. Miss Stevens is not a Southerner, but most of those associated with her in the production of "Kildare of Storm" were born below the Mason and Dixon line.

King Baggot, who plays Kildare, and the director, Harry L. Franklin, both hail from St. Louis, Mo., where Director Franklin received his first theatrical training in St. Louis under the tutelage of Col. John D. Hopkins, while King Baggot frequently returned to St. Louis in stock companies and road productions. He and Franklin kept track of each other's careers, but their trails never crossed until the Metro production of "Kildare of Storm."

Jere Looney, who prepared the screen version of the story for the use of Miss Stevens, is also a Southerner. Mr. Looney hails from "furthest south" of any of those identified with the production, as he was born in Shreveport, La., and his knowledge of the South enabled him to retain the spirit of Miss Kelly's novel in adapting it to the screen. Another Southerner in the cast is Edwards Davies, who has the important role of Claiborne. He was a minister before he decided to change his profession for that of the stage. He first starred in vaudeville acts throughout the country.

An interesting coincidence is that one member of the cast in "Kildare of Storm," King Baggot, founded the Screen Club, the first club in the world entirely devoted to motion picture players, and that Edwards Davies, another member, is president of the Green Room Club, one of the oldest and best known of the theatrical organizations.

Still another member of the "Kildare of Storm" company to call the Southland home is P. Thad Volkman, who is assisting Harry Franklin in directing the production. Mr. Volkman comes from San Antonio, Texas, and has traveled extensively through all the Southern states. He was a newspaper man before being identified with the screen. Mr. Volkman has been connected with Metro almost since the firm began making pictures, and has been associated with several Metro stars and directors.

George Spoor's "Young America" Has Been Completed

PHOTOGRAPHIC work on both interior and exterior scenes in "Young America," the new George K. Spoor feature taken from the Cohan and Harris success written by Fred Ballard, has practically been completed.

Director Arthur Berthelet starts work immediately on editing the film, and it shortly will be ready for release. Inquiries already are coming to Essanay in regard to the release of the picture and as to when it can be booked. Exhibitors who have seen the play on the stage or know personally of its qualities are particularly anxious to show it.

Besides carrying an unusually strong and timely plot the picture is attractive photographically, the most elaborate care having been taken with the interior settings and the exteriors selected both from the point of their suitableness and beauty.

The cast was specially picked from several cities for the various parts, mostly from New York and Chicago, so that each character is the best adapted to the role taken that could be found. It is believed that the play as a whole will be an unusually strong one.

Niles Welch Signs With Famous Players-Lasky

NILES WELCH, one of the more talented and experienced of the younger screen actors, has signed a four-year contract with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation under the terms of which he will appear as a featured player in support of Paramount and Artcraft stars. In making this announcement, Vice-President Jesse L. Lasky said: "Ever since the success of Mr. Welch when he played the leading juvenile role opposite Marguerite Clark in 'Miss George Washington,' at which time we received innumerable letters from exhibitors and admirers of his work, many of whom suggested that he ought to be featured regularly in Paramount pictures, I have been trying to engage him. I am much gratified at finally having secured his signature to a four-year contract, as I consider Niles Welch one of the most promising juveniles on the screen."

Mr. Welch was born in Hartford, Conn., and received his early education in France and England, his parents having spent the greater share of their time in Europe during that period of his life. He attended St. Paul's School at Concord, N. H., and entered Sheffield Scientific School, Yale University, with the class of 1909. From there he went to Columbia University, where he was prominent in all student activities, including football and rowing. Also he was active in 'varsity theatricals, and after leaving college he played in stock for three years. His first motion picture engagement was with Vitagraph, with which company he was identified for a year. He then appeared for a year in Metro productions, and since has been seen in Paramount, World, Universal, Pathe, Select, and Goldwyn pictures.

French Army Takes Picture of Celebrating Americans

THE title of a two-reel production scheduled for immediate release by Pathe is "Fourth of July in France." It was photographed by the cinematographic division of the French Army, and was obtained by Pathe from the French Pictorial Service.

The motion pictures making up this subject have just been received from France, and are full of absorbing interest in every detail for the reason that they show Uncle Sam's boys at the Independence Day celebration in the land of the lilies.

A brief resume of the interesting scenes in this film show the unusual character of the production. We see our boys on parade at the main square of a little Alsatian town. This town the Sammies rescued from the grasp of the Hun, and they are being showered with flowers and good wishes by the Alsatians who long were under the iron heel of the German Government.

The scenes shift to Paris, where all the Allied countries joined together in the celebration of Uncle Sam's Fourth of July. We see President Poincare accompanied by General Joffre, the Governor General of Paris, Ambassador Sharp, and other dignitaries assembled to review the parade along the Paris boluevard held in honor of the United States and her Independence Day.

And down the Avenue President Wilson, formerly Trocadero Avenue, renamed by the French in honor of our President, we see Allied soldiers marching midst the fluttering flags of the Allied governments in which the stars and stripes predominate.

In this two-reel production many interior pictures carrying intense human interest are presented.

As a box-office attraction there can be no question as to its value. The newspapers of the land gave the celebration of the Fourth in France the widest publicity. Joined with the intense interest of the public in our soldiers in France is also a widespread pride in the recognition by our brave ally of America's greatest holiday. The "Fourth of July in France" is certain to attract the widest attention.

"Inside the Lines" (World).

The current release on World program of the five-reel feature, "Inside the Lines," with Lewis S. Stone as the star, is still a big box office winner in the legitimate theatres. A revival of this Broadway success was made in Boston, and, though it had a long run there during its first visit to that city, it is now in its twelfth week. So pronounced is the success it is now meeting with that plans are being formulated for several companies to tour in it the coming season. The timeliness of this picture is best illustrated by the recent disclosures of the activities of German authorities from Wilhemstrasse. They spent over thirty million dollars in perfecting an organization to disseminate propaganda in this country by buying up a large number of daily papers scattered throughout the United States.

"Inside the Lines" is the best of all the plays shown to date that illustrate the methods of the German Government in insidiously sowing the seed of doubt and discontent to nullify the aims of our Government to bring this war to a successful termination.

Real Western Atmosphere For Farrar's "Hell Cat"

WITH the first episodes of Goldwyn's production of "The Hell Cat," nearing completion in Cody, Wyoming, Geraldine Farrar and her company are preparing to travel farther toward the heart of the West for the remaining scenes of Willard Mack's drama. The daily program of the international celebrity has been one calculated to tax the endurance of anyone but herself. Arising at 6 in the morning, she rides on the pony placed at her disposal by the citizens of Cody to the Hargreaves Ranch on Cottonwood Creek, about five miles from the town, where she is joined by Reginald Barker, her director, and the other members of her company in time to shoot the first scene at 7.30. Work continues until the same hour in the evening, so brilliant is the sun.

The ranch is typical of that section of the country and includes everything to be found on the place of a well-to-do sheep raiser, although it was found necessary to add much more than the place at first afforded. For the burning of the ranch-house a duplicate interior of that building has been erected on the place. After the fire scenes are photographed Geraldine Farrar and her associates will forsake Cody for a fifty-mile pilgrimage into the cattle country.

Arrangements have been made with Winthrop Holley Brooks, owner of Valley Ranch, one of the show places of the country, whereby the place is turned over to Goldwyn for as many days as are required to stage the action demanded by the play. Valley Ranch is entirely different from the simpler outfit on Cottonwood Creek, and boasts of every modern improvement. There Geraldine Farrar will have her own electrically lighted log cabin and the remainder of the company will be quartered in tent houses.

Besides Milton Sills and Tom Santschi, together with other members of the company, the cast will be further strengthened by ten champion riders of Wyoming, local celebrities, most of them, because of the accidents they have survived. Their daring exploits are taken as a matter of course. They will also live at Valley Ranch. Geraldine Farrar insists that every member of the company supporting her dine at one great table in the ranch-house.

Metro Gets Rights to "The Man Who Stayed at Home"

METRO has acquired the American motion picture rights to "The Man Who Stayed at Home," the patriotic drama which has delighted theatre audiences both in this country and in England. "The Man Who Stayed at Home" will be produced under the personal supervision of Maxwell Karger. The identity of those playing the roles of Christopher Brent and Miriam Lee, taken on the New York speaking stage by Albert Brown and Katharine Kaelred, will be announced later. The play completed a long run at the Forty-eighth Street theatre, New York, some few weeks ago.

The record of "The Man Who Stayed at Home" has been eventful. It was produced at the Ambassador's theatre, London, where it had a run of two years. It was written by Lechmore Worrall and J. E. Harold Terry in collaboration. Under the title of "The White Feather" it had a brief engagement in New York shortly after the beginning of the European war, but war problems were not at that time sufficiently understood in this country and the play was withdrawn.

After America's entry into the great struggle it was produced under its present title by Henry Jewett with the Copley Square Stock Company, in Boston, having the unusual run, for a stock company, of thirty weeks. William Moore Patch, managing director of the Fort Pitt theatre, Pittsburgh, recognized the drawing power the play would have to a country awakened and secured the national stage rights, showing the play at his own theatre for seventeen consecutive weeks.

Later the play awakened New York and continued its season well into midsummer. The coming season it will be sent on tour throughout the United States. A notable cast will be engaged to interpret the play for the screen, and it will be produced as a multiple-reel feature under the guidance of a distinguished director.

"The Man Who Stayed at Home" will be the eighth patriotic feature production issued by Metro, the others being "To Hell With the Kaiser," starring Lawrence Grant and Olive Tell, which has just completed a successful Broadway run; "Lest We Forget," with the heroine of the Lusitania, Rita Jolivet; "My Own United States," starring Arnold Daly; "The Slacker," with Emily Stevens; Mabel Taliaferro in "Draft 258"; "The Legion of Death," starring Edith Storey, and "Her Boy," co-starring Effie Shannon and Niles Welch.

Walsh Spends Six Months Making "The Prussian Cur"

AN idea of the thoroughness of R. A. Walsh, the Fox director, may be obtained from the statement from the Fox Film Corporation that Mr. Walsh spent twenty-seven weeks filming "The Prussian Cur," the production which exposes the secret workings of the Prussian spy system in this country.

When Mr. Walsh began on the production he was faced with a stupendous job. He had to duplicate the United States Senate chamber, the German Embassy at Washington, the Kaiser's Palace at Potsdam and other historical settings that require, not only extensive preparations, but also the greatest fidelity to detail. How closely were facts adhered to in this production is shown by the fact that the real furniture which was used in Ambassador von Bernstoff's office in the German Embassy at Washington is used for a setting in "The Prussian Cur."

Baby Marie Leads Pathe for Week of August 18

THE program announced by Pathe for the week of August 18 is an attractive one, according to the announcement of that company. "Winning Grandma" is a five-reel drama, and is full of heart interest. This production features Baby Marie Osborne, "Little Mary Sunshine," in the story of the regeneration of a stern and cold-hearted woman.

The first episode of the thrilling serial, "Hands Up," will be released by Pathe. "Hands Up" is in fifteen two-part episodes, each crowded with pep, punch and power, plot and counter-plot, and thrills without number. This serial, from the pen of Gilson Willets, produced by Astra, and directed by James Horne, promises to excel, if that is possible, preceding Pathe serials.

"Bride and Gloom" is another of those rip-roaring Lloyd comedies which have proven so popular with exhibitors. Pathe exchanges assure all exhibitors that "Bride and Gloom" is on a par with the other Lloyd comedies.

Fox Has Seven Pictures in Work East and West

SEVEN productions are now in work for William Fox in the East and West studios, it is stated in an announcement by the Fox Film Corporation.

William Farnum and his company have just returned from the Grand Canyon of Arizona, where they filmed scenes for "The Rainbow Trail." While at the Grand Canyon Mr. Farnum celebrated his birthday. He and his company also found that the temperature 3,000 feet down in Hermit Creek Camp was extremely high, the mercury sometimes bumping 124 degrees.

J. Gordon Edwards is nearing the completion of the super-production, "The She-Devil," which will be an early Standard Picture release.

Gladys Brockwell, under the direction of Edward J. LeSaint, is in her second week on the production of "The Strange Woman," the screen adaptation of the famous William J. Hurlbut stage play of the same name. This production will be an early Brockwell release under the William Fox Victory Pictures Banner.

Tom Mix, another Victory Pictures star, is nearing the end of work on "Mr. Logan, U. S. A.," which is described as a Secret Service drama of particularly thrilling situations. In this drama, it is said, Mix appears without his famous cowboy garb for the first time in many moons.

Pictures being made for William Fox in the East include "I'll Say So!" starring George Walsh; "The Queen of Hearts," with Virginia Pearson, and "Marriages Are Made," of which Peggy Hyland is the star.

Alma Rubens in Story of Italy.

Director Frank Borzage, who has just finished his last production, "The Ghost Flower," a romance of sunny Italy, in which Alma Rubens has the featured part, congratulates himself on having obtained one of the most artistic sets ever erected on the Triangle lot. It is a Naples street scene. Borzage is fortunate in having had the assistance of Miss Amy E. Sacker, who has lived abroad extensively, and is as familiar with Italian life as with American itself.

Alma Rubens.

Several new players are included in the cast supporting Alma Rubens, among them being Charles West and Emery Johnson, a new juvenile. Francis McDonald and Dick Rosson also have important roles.

Select Presents Quartet of Attractions for August

SELECT announces it will release during August four productions. The latest attractions of Clara Kimball Young, Alice Brady, Norma Talmadge and Constance Talmadge are included.

"The Savage Woman," about which so much has already been written, is the Clara Kimball Young production for the month. This picture was originally scheduled to be released at the end of July, but such is the magnitude of this production that it was found impossible to complete and provide prints on the picture before the early weeks of August. Produced by Clara Kimball Young and her own company at Hollywood, "The Savage Woman" will undoubtedly take rank as one of the major accomplishments of this star.

Probably the second of the Select releases during August will be "The Death Dance," Alice Brady's next picture. This is a ripping story of New York life in which Miss Brady is seen in the role of a breezy modern girl who determinedly follows a course of clean living and upright conduct in the face of many embarrassing situations. The story is credited to Marie Eve, the photoplay being prepared by Paul West—the last work which this veteran scenarioist did before leaving for the Western Front. J. Searle Dawley directed the picture, and the camera work was done by H. Lyman Broening. H. E. Herbert shares honors with Mahlon Hamilton and Robert Kane in the leading male roles. Helen Montrose is seen to advantage as a pleasure-seeking society woman, and Rita Spear, Charles Slattery, and Nadia Gary all have effective minor parts.

Norma Talmadge again comes before the picture lovers of the country during August in "Her Only Way." This story is from the pen of George Scarborough. The scenario is by Mary Murillo. It is a story of small town love and intrigue—with a surprise at the end. Director Sidney A. Franklin has arranged many pleasing scenes in which Miss Talmadge shows to the best advantage. The piece is in six reels.

The third in her succession of screen presentations of noted stage successes is Constance Talmadge's August picture, "Sauce for the Goose," in which she is presented by Lewis J. Selznick. This brilliant comedy was first seen in America as a starring vehicle for Grace George, and scored instant success. The screen adaptation was done by Julia Crawford Ivers. Constance Talmadge is presented as Kitty Constable, the sprightly young wife of a no less sprightly husband played by Harrison Ford. Kitty has a mind of her own, and is quite capable of turning an embarrassing situation to her own account when she has been flirting with one of her husband's friends in a spirit of going the errant "hubby" one better. James C. Van Trees ably assisted with some first class camera work. The cast includes Harland Tucker, Vera Doria, Edna Mae Cooper, Lewis Willoughby, and Jane Reckley.

Many Inquiries Coming on Johnson Travel Pictures

ARRANGEMENTS are now being made through which the Martin Johnson travel pictures, "Among the Cannibal Isles of the South Pacific," will be shown as a feature attraction in many of the legitimate and higher class motion picture houses throughout the country.

That these pictures have struck a popular chord is manifested in the many letters that have been received by Mr. Johnson not only from the amusement houses, but from educational and scientific institutions as well.

With the view of supplying the latter demand a series of short subjects will be made from part of the 50,000 feet of negative which Mr. Johnson took on his expedition, part of which will be shown at universities and educational institutions, as well as to religious societies showing the missionery work which is now being accomplished in these regions.

Alice Howell Puts on "Hey, Doctor!"

From Julius Stern, the president of the Century Comedy Company, comes the information that Alice Howell is about to appear in another of her characteristic vehicles which has been given the title of "Hey Doctor!" In this burlesque Miss Howells returns to the type of characterization which is peculiarly her own and appears as Rosie Rattle. In the cast supporting her are Russ Powell as Dr. I. O. Lotts, Eddie Barry as the janitor who loves Rosie, Billy Armstrong as Billy the artist, Edith Kelly as Jassband Jennie, and Neal Burns as her sweetheart.

Keeney Soon to Release Third Subject, "Marriage"

THE Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation has now released two pictures through the William L. Sherry Service, "A Romance of the Underworld" and "Out of the Night," and will shortly release a third, "Marriage." Reports from the Sherry exchanges continue to tell of the success of the Keeney pictures. In many houses they have been drawing capacity in spite of the normal lassitude of the summer season. All of these Keeney pictures star Catherine Calvert and are directed by James Kirkwood.

The tentative title of the fourth Keeney pictures, "The Girl With a Past," has been changed to "The Uphill Path." It is by the late Paul Armstrong, who wrote the well-known drama from which the picture of the same name, "A Romance of the Underworld," is adapted.

According to his present plan, Mr. Keeney will resume production with Miss Calvert early in the fall. No definite announcement has been made as to when he will take up production with Jewel Carmen, who recently signed a contract for an extended term of service with Mr. Keeney. It was understood that Mr. Keeney would begin at once with Miss Carmen were it not for legal entanglements, William Fox claiming her services under a previous contract.

"Marriage," the next Keeney release, is of especial interest because it was written by Guy Bolton, who is the author of "Polly With a Past," "Oh, Boy!" and "Oh, Lady! Lady!" This is Mr. Bolton's maiden effort for the screen and bids fair to make him popular with the movie fan. The story is a tensely dramatic one and in characteristic vein.

Good Reports on Kenyon Releases.

Reports from the various exchanges of the William L. Sherry Service, which is distributing all of the pictures of Doris Kenyon as the head of her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., show that the first of the Kenyon releases, "The Street of Seven Stars" is making a hit with the public. It is a sweet and simple story of love and adventure with not a few thrilling incidents. The screen adaptation is from the well-known Mary Roberts Rhinehart story of the same name, which was published in the Saturday Evening Post and afterward in book form.

The second of the Kenyon pictures, "The Inn of the Blue Moon," is to be released on August 11. It is a love story by Louis Joseph Vance, one of the more successful of American authors and writers for the screen. Miss Kenyon plays the dual role of twin sisters, one of whom is raised in a lonesome part of the Catskills and grows up almost as a wild girl, while the other is reared in luxury in the environment of New York's fast society set. The striking resemblance between the two sisters leads to numerous cases of mistaken identity. Even their sweethearts can't tell them apart, and some of the mix-ups are very amusing.

"Bawled Out" (Universal).

Alice Howell in "Bawled Out," a two-reel comedy, is the latest offering featuring this star which comes from the Century Comedy Company. According to Universal officials "Bawled Out" is the best Alice Howell comedy released to date. Featuring so popular an aggregation of players as Hughie Mack, Vin Moore and Helen Gibson in support of Miss Howell, Universal regards it as being out of the ordinary.

Hughie Mack enacts the role of a poor unfortunate jail bird, while Miss Howell is his sweetheart who comes to visit him at his "home with the iron windows." The comedy was directed by James Davis, who has a number of successful laugh-producers to his credit. The picture will be released at an early date.

Stewart and Gloria Swanson Triangle Features August 11

THE United States-Mexican frontier forms the background of "Cactus Crandall," the featured production offering Roy Stewart, and scheduled as the first release on the Triangle program for the week of August 11. A timely production which strikes a patriotic keynote is "Shifting Sands," the second release for the week, and features Gloria Swanson.

"Cactus Crandall" was written by Roy Stewart himself, and he plays the hero, Cactus Bob Crandall, in this production, which is described as a Western thriller. The girl, Helen, is interpreted by Marion Marvin, who makes her first appearance upon the screen in this production.

George Elwood Jenks scenarioized this play, and, according to the report, Director Cliff Smith has furnished the production with entirely new sets which picture the environment of the Mexican territory with picturesque reality. Steve Rounds was the camera man.

Charles T. Dazey wrote "Shifting Sands," which offers Gloria Swanson as the second release of August 4. It is described as a story of love and sacrifice in which the heroine finally wins happiness through her patriotism.

Miss Swanson plays the part of an artist, Marcia Grey, who cares for her invalid sister. She is unjustly convicted and sent to prison by a man whose advances she scorns. Upon her release she finds love and happiness. But after her marriage she is again molested by the man who caused her imprisonment. He attempts to force her to betray herself and her country, but the Secret Service interferes, and her former sacrifices are not in vain.

Joe King portrays John Stanford, a rich tenement worker, in love with Marcia. Harvey Clarke, Lillian Langdon, and Arthur Millett are members of the supporting cast.

This is the first Triangle production directed by Albert Parker, who recently arrived at Culver City. Pliney Horn photographed and Katherine Carr wrote the scenario.

Outing-Chester Shows Beavers.

"A Dam Catastrophe," seventh of the Outing-Chester travel pictures released by Mutual, displays a colony of beavers in active operation. The busy little animals, all unconscious of the proximity of a cameraman, are shown cutting down trees on the bank of a swift-running stream in the Northern forest, their long, sharp teeth shining in the sunlight as they gnaw into the hard wood.

The close-ups of Mr. and Mrs. Beaver are probably more intimate pictures of these industrious little folk than have ever been made before. Every hair in their long whiskers can be counted if the spectator is inclined to count them.

This release constitutes also an intimate touch of the wilderness. The pictures are said to have been made forty miles from any human habitation, except those occupied by Tepee Indians, with whom the photographer made his home while stalking the beaver.

Stanton to Make "Eyes of the Soul."

Having just completed "Why America Will Win," the great patriotic picture of victory which is based on the life of General Pershing, Richard Stanton will begin work soon on another big production. This picture bears the title of "Eyes of the Soul," and it will be done by an all-star cast.

Fox Planning Campaign For "The Strange Woman"

PLANS for an elaborate campaign are maturing in the Fox Film Corporation for the exploitation of "The Strange Woman," the screen adaptation of William J. Hurlbut's famous stage play, which will be one of the early Gladys Brockwell releases under the William Fox Victory Pictures brand.

"The purchase of the motion picture rights to this play," stated an official of the Fox Film Corporation this week, "is in direct line with the Fox corporation's policy to buy only the best novels and stage plays for picturization by our stars.

"'The Strange Woman' in its original version was one of the most successful plays in recent years. It played a full season on Broadway and toured the principal cities of the country. It is our purpose to capitalize this appeal. We think 'The Strange Woman' is one of the best stories that has ever been put on the screen, and we're going the limit with it. Miss Brockwell has already begun work at Hollywood, Cal., under the direction of Edward J. LeSaint, and the picture probably will be released early in September.

"To give the exhibitors of the country the full benefit of the prestige which this picture established in its stage form we have devised several novel publicity and advertising aids."

"Green Eyes" for Dorothy Dalton.

A picturesque and wonderfully dramatic story of the Old South is promised in "Green Eyes," the next Paramount picture in which Dorothy Dalton will be seen. It was written by Ella Stuart Carson and directed by R. William Neill under the supervision of Thomas H. Ince. The story concerns a man who marries a girl much younger than himself and becomes jealous of her.

Jack Holt, Emory Johnson, Robert McKim, Doris Lee, and Clyde Benson do excellent work in their respective roles.

"Come On In" Is War Slogan.

The first John Emerson-Anita Loos production for Paramount starring Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex has just been completed at the Eastern studios of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation. It is described as a comedy of the training camps, and will be released under the title, "Come On In." The slogan of "Come On In"—for it is apparent from the outset that the picture not only has a slogan, but carries a strong patriotic message as well—is "Come on in—the war is fine!"

World's "The Road to France" Is a Romance of Ships

A BRIDGE of ships is The Road to France," declares E. N. Hurley, chairman of the United States Shipping Board, and against the background of present war activities in American shipyards World Pictures announces the picturization of a tense love story bearing the title of "The Road to France" and starring Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley. This super-special will be released on the regular World program on Sept. 9.

As a fitting foreword to the picture Mr. Hurley appears in the introductory scenes and explains the importance of ships and shipbuilding to the glorious future of our country. The launchings of a large number of ships on July Fourth are shown, together with views of notables who were present, these including Judge E. H. Gary and Mrs. Gary. The latter is seen christening the ship "Liberty" as she slides from the ways.

In the introductory scenes Chairman Hurley says: "Eight months ago the entire working force in the shipbuilding plants of the United States totaled 45,000 men. To-day there are 350,000 men working in the yards and 250,000 cutting timber in the forests and saw mills, besides untold thousands fabricating plates and frames in the steel mills of the country. German efficiency, that was forty years developing, will be answered by us in one year by the bridge of ships that will make 'The Road to France.'"

That this picture will arouse tremendous interest was confirmed by the expressions of appreciation and approbation made by the privileged few who were present at a private showing of this photoplay when screened at the private projection room in the home office of World Pictures a few days ago.

The scenic environment of this film embodies the most interesting section of the nation's activities leading to a successful termination of the world war. It shows the evolution of a steel cargo carrier from the laying of the keel plate to the christening of the ship as it takes to the water. Interwoven in the picturization of the fabrication of a ship is a romance breathing patriotic fervor which will strike a responsive chord in the heart of every American. Here is propaganda of a sort that is most earnestly desired by our country. It is a mental tonic that should and no doubt will stimulate every son and daughter of "Columbia" to do even bigger things that democracy may survive and make this world of ours a safe place.

State Rights Department

Conducted by C. S. SEWELL

"Mickey" Orchestration Made by H. Sylvester Krouse

FOLLOWING the anouncement that the Mack Sennett production, "Mickey," featuring Mabel Normand, would be offered to state right buyers several sales of foreign territory are reported, including England, Spain, Portugal, and Brazil. Rights to New York have also been secured by Magnet Film Exchange, 71 West Twenty-third street, and Jules Burnstein, manager of this exchange, is very enthusiastic over this production, and predicts that audiences will come back a second and third time to see it, and that this picture will prove to be the biggest box office attraction that ever entered a motion picture theatre.

The music score for "Mickey" is being prepared by the well known composer, H. Sylvester Krouse, who has written several ballet suites, scores for musical comedies, and popular songs. In addition to preparing a full orchestration, Mr. Krouse is also arranging a complete piano score so that the smaller theatres with only a piano and possibly one or two additional instruments will not be handicapped.

"Suspicion" Is Title of Hoffman's First Release

"SUSPICION," the first release of M. H. Hoffman since his severance from Fourth Dimension, has been edited, cut and titled, and the first completed print will shortly be ready for viewing. Mr. Hoffman, who is rapidly recovering from the sickness by which he was recently overtaken, has supervised the preparation of his picture throughout, and anticipates that it will be one of the outstanding successes of the early fall season.

"'Suspicion,'" stated Mr. Hoffman, in an interview given last week at Mount Sinai Hospital, "will, of course, speak for itself when seen, so it is neither necessary nor advisable for me to prejudice what I naturally consider to be its very great merits as a production and a box office attraction, but I would like to say a few words as to the strength, appositiveness and timeliness of the story. This was written by Thomas Bedding, whose experience, knowledge and abilities in this kind of thing is very well known. Mr. Bedding chose a powerful theme for his play. 'Suspicion' is a war-time offering, but there is not a foot of battle stuff in the picture. It is a story of the present day and hour, and many of the scenes are laid in Washington. The picture will, I think, make a world-wide appeal.

"Mr. Bedding and I are old associates in film production and exploitation, although we have not hitherto been so closely identified as in the present case.

"'Suspicion' is a state rights proposition, but I have reserved New York and New England for my own offices. I am confident that by reason of the strength of its story 'Suspicion' will be quite as popular with exhibitors and the public as, for instance, 'My Four Years in Germany.' The topic of 'Suspicion' is literally in the air, everybody is talking or thinking about it, the newspapers devote a great deal of space to it, and the future of civilization and democracy depend upon the forces and influences which are dealt with in 'Suspicion.' Yet the picture does not preach, it entertains, while it thrills and excites.

"'Suspicion' will be probably followed by many other big offerings, but at present I and my force are concentrating upon this picture."

Madame Petrova Finishes Extensive W. S. S. Tour

ON July 28, Madame Olga Petrova returned to New York, having completed her country-wide tour in the interest of the War Savings Stamp movement. Starting on June 22, she visited twenty-five of the principal cities, as follows: Atlanta, New York, Houston, Dallas, Fort Worth, Kansas City, Des Moines, Omaha, Denver, Salt Lake City, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland, Seattle, Butte, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Milwaukee, Chicago, St. Louis, Indianapolis, Newark, Louisville, Cleveland, and Pittsburgh, in a little more than a month.

The amount, $200,000, which she promised Government officials that she would raise, was soon attained and passed, and figures for the entire tour indicate that the total sales of War Savings and Thrift Stamps on this trip will reach nearly $500,000. In each city she appeared in one of the leading motion picture theatres, giving, in addition to a war talk, recitations and a recitation of a patriotic ballad, "Freedom for All Forever." Co-incidental with her personal appearance her latest film, "Tempered Steel," was shown. In each place visited she was greeted by enthusiastic crowds in many cities being received by the mayor, other officials, and special military escorts, and at some points War Savings Stamps meetings were held in public squares and parks to accommodate the crowds who could not gain access to the theatres. In St Paul she led a parade of the naval squadron.

Madame Petrova's return to New York was timed so as to allow her to view "The Tiger Woman," her fifth special production directed by Ralph Ince, and which will be released in the near future.

Gaumont News Reels Show Many Interesting Scenes

AMONG the interesting items in Gaumont Graphic No. 18 are Y. M. C. A. overseas secretaries on parade in New York; vast apricot crop ready for the market in California; girl workers in Chicago making millions of hardtack for American soldiers; Secretary McAdoo conferring with railroad officials in San Francisco; Secretary of War Baker and General March receiving official communique from General Pershing, and view of an American balloon squadron in action.

The current release of Gaumont News No. 19 shows "yeowomen" from Charleston navy yard being taught how to shoot; the boys of '61 backing up the boys of '18 by cultivating ground in California; Polish army of volunteers from United States on French soil; huge water power plant in Maine; sailor boys enjoying sport carnival; naval recruits in Chicago being given stickers on which they write their names and then stick them on a figure of the Kaiser; knitting bee in Central Park, New York, and Hudson River outing for wounded boys just back from France.

Many Stage Players In "Ashes of Love"

AS stock companies have long been regarded as the best preparatory school for dramatic stars on the speaking stage, so many motion picture directors are coming to the conclusion that stage experience is of great value to exponents of the silent drama, says a representative of the Graphic Film Corporation, and photoplay casts now contain the names of actors formerly seen exclusively in stage offerings.

As an example of this attention is called to the cast of "Ashes of Love," the feature production which Director Ivan Abramson is making for Graphic, which is headed by James K. Hackett and Effie Shannon, both well known stage stars; while an important role has been intrusted to Mabel Julienne Scott, who graduated from stock and appeared as leading woman for several of the foremost actors. In addition, many of the other members of the cast have had stage experience, including Ruby de Remer, Paula Shay, William B. Davidson, Hugh Thompson, Thea Talbot, Dora Mills Adams, and William Bechtel.

Modern Secures New Jersey Rights to Gaumont Topicals

A CONTRACT has been closed through Arrow Film Corporation, as sales agent, disposing of the northern New Jersey rights to the Gaumont News and Graphic to the Modern Film Company.

Herman F. Jans, president of the Modern Film Company, and also president of the New Jersey Metro Film exchange, lately organized the Modern Film Company for the purpose of handling independent or state right attractions separate and apart from the New Jersey Metro organization. All independent attractions heretofore released by him through the Metro office have been transferred to the new organization. Gaumont News and Graphic releases are the first productions purchased since the inauguration of the new plan of operation.

Before signing this contract, Mr. Jans is said to have submitted three of the early issues to five exhibitors in as many different localities in his territory, and was guided by their judgment.

Sawyer Secures Several Locations.

Arthur H. Sawyer returned to New York this week following a trip to Atlantic City. The purpose of his visit being to survey the possibilities of locations for the forthcoming "Ralph Ince Film Attractions," the story of which calls for several scenes along the Atlantic coastline, together with a spectacular effect to be staged on the water. Mr. Sawyer reported that he has discovered several ideal spots, and stated that he completed arrangements whereby the places in question have been secured through option, and will be used exclusively in the initial Ralph Ince production.

Will Soon Begin Work on First Anna Case Picture

ANNA CASE, the well known grand opera prima donna and star of the concert stage, will on August 12 begin work in the first production in which she will be featured by the International Film Corporation. This picture was previously announced as being titled "The Golden Hope." However, so many changes have been made in the story that Director Julius Steger is endeavoring to select a more appropriate title, which will be announced later together with detailed information as to the type of story.

In addition to beauty, Miss Case is said to possess remarkable dramatic ability, and to have achieved success entirely through her own efforts. Possessed of a beautiful voice, her parents unfortunately were not in position to allow her to have it cultivated; so she started on her own initiative and fought her way, rung by rung, up the ladder of fame, being engaged successively at different times in selling newspapers, driving the station hack in her home town, singing in the church choir, then small concerts, making records for phonographs, etc., all of which helped to pay for her musical education until, by long, hard, and conscientious work, she reached the goal.

Irving M. Lesser Joins the Navy.

Irving M. Lesser, manager of the Los Angeles office of Sol L. Lesser's All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., has enlisted in the navy, and Lewis Hyman has been transferred from the San Francisco office to Los Angeles to take Irving Lesser's place.

This necessitated changes in the organization of Mr. Lesser's San Francisco office, so Mr. Carney has been promoted to Mr. Hyman's place, and W. G. Holbombe is now in charge of the booking of the official U. S. war films which are being distributed under authority of the State Council of Defense of California.

No Impossible Situation in Gaumont's New Serial

THAT a motion picture serial need not depend on improbable situations or the interjection of magical agents or impossible wonders is claimed to be proven by the success attending the showing of the first episodes of the Gaumont Company's new photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance."

The interest depends primarily on the story. Starting with a tense situation which merges into another even more dramatic the attention of the spectator is gripped before the first few hundred feet have been screened. Then follows a succession of startling but natural situations —thrilling adventures, exciting dangers, marvelous escapes which are said to be entirely devoid of padding, and which keep the interest at high tension. And even then there will be many persons disappointed because of the fact that the majority of those who took part in this play are now fighting real battles in France, which makes it impossible to show further daring escapades of the delightful adventurer who is featured in this serial.

"The Hand of Vengeance" is said to be a clean and "different" kind of photo-serial, and one which will delight any class of theatregoers. It is a mystery story, an adventure story, a detective story, a heart-interest story, a love story, a romance—all in one. And above all it is claimed to be crammed full of interest and suspense, cleverly portrayed by competent actors, and having beautiful photography.

The entire serial is now complete in ten two-reel episodes, artistic posters and publicity aids have been prepared, and exhibitors will be able to see it complete before booking.

Hall Talks of New Plan

THE Producers' Distributing Corporation, whose plan of offering exhibitors twelve special productions for the coming year at ten, twenty and thirty dollars was announced in our last issue, is now located in spacious new offices on the third floor of the Leavitt Building, 130 West Forty-sixth street, New York.

Frank G. Hall, president of this concern, bases this policy on facts collected during his long experience as an exhibitor controlling a number of houses in New Jersey, as president of independent exchanges booking state rights subjects, and as a large operator in the handling of special features for which high rental prices are demanded.

Mr. Hall states that he sees no reason why the same quality of special attractions cannot be offered at fixed prices, open to all, regardless of higher bids by opposition theatres. Franchises for twelve pictures will be granted in the order of application, and a two-picture concellation clause affords protection to franchise holders from pictures not coming up to their expectations.

It is announced that a sales force under the leadership of Lynn S. Card, is now at work, and a statement regarding the first production will be made in the near future.

Installs Auto Service to Quicken Shipping

J. A. Koerpel, President of the Northwest Film Board of Trade, Establishes Motor Truck Transportation System Between Seattle and Portland to Overcome Express Delay in Sending Films—Will Open Other Routes if Work of Forwarding Companies Is Not Improved.

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

SEATTLE—The Northwest Film Board of Trade is taking up the express problem out of Seattle, and J. A. Koerpel, the president, is arranging for a motor truck express to look after the towns where most trouble is being experienced, viz.: those between Seattle and Portland. If the consolidated express companies do not improve the service to the north and east other motor truck routes will be established along those lines as far north as the Canadian line and at least as far east as the central part of the state. In establishing this motor truck service for the shipment of films, Mr. Koerpel is not making an untried experiment, for he established a similar service between Washington, D. C., and Baltimore when he was stationed in that city as World manager, and it is still being used.

To Have National Premier in Seattle.

"Salome" featuring Theda Bara will have its national premier showing in Seattle at the Orpheum theatre on August 3. One of the reasons for the decision to show the big sensational feature in Seattle was the fact that Texas Guinan's big super-feature, "Gambling Wives," played to bigger business in Seattle than in any other city considering the length of the engagement.

Rex Enjoys Record-Breaking Business.

The middle of summer is not usually thought of by exhibitors as a time for record breaking runs of motion pictures and John Hamrick, manager of the Rex theatre, Seattle, certainly never thought that the record made with Chaplin's "Carmen" on the Sunday after a big street parade with a brass band and about fifty boy imitators of Charlie would be broken on a hot July Sunday, but that's exactly what happened on July 21 and what's more, Monday's business continued to smash records. Its "To Finish of Justice" that's gone into the wrecking business at the Rex, and it has been continuing all week at such a rate that Mr. Hamrick has arranged to hold it over another week in spite of the fact that he has booked it for second and third runs at his two other houses. The lobby display was considered so good by Miss Grace Marbury Sanderson, author-manager of the production, that she has had eight dozen photographs made of it to send the other first run exhibitors throughout the territory. The picture is already booked up to the eighth run in Seattle. In the Washington territory it is booked up tight to October. Miss Sanderson, who has established her Northwest headquarters at 2016 Third avenue, will leave next week to cover Montana.

Metzger Now With Jewel Productions.

G. A. Metzger, who has given up the Northwest managership of Universal to accept the general managership of Jewel productions, has sent out letters of farewell, and offering his personal services while in New York to help his exhibitor friends in the Northwest. A similar letter from him was also published in his house organ, "Reel Stuff," which is published in the Portland office. Mr. Metzger's letter was followed shortly by one of greeting from Sol Baum, who is succeeding his former chief. Mr. Baum has for some time been acting as Mr. Metzger's assistant in the capacity of manager of Bluebird productions in the Northwest.

Pathe Office Now in New Quarters.

The Seattle Pathe office was moved this week from its old location in the Central building to the new building just completed for it at 2113 Third avenue.

Exchange Personals.

H. E. Wright, formerly an exhibitor and owner of state rights features in British Columbia and other parts of Western Canada, has joined the sales force of the Seattle Select office. Another new name on the list of Select salesmen is that of R. A. Butzier.

J. E. Madsen, who was Mutual's first manager in Seattle, got a furlough from Camp Lewis the other day and paid his many friends on film row a visit.

J. A. Koerpel, World manager, has just returned from a trip calling on exhibitors in Washington's Death Valley, where he experienced temperatures which mounted as high as 114 degrees in the shade.

A. G. Keighley, booker at the Seattle General office, went into training this week at Camp Lewis, and his place has been taken by L. T. Ruffner, who was shipper at the Artcraft-Paramount office.

Alex Singelow is leaving this week on his first trip through the Washington territory for Kleine.

Jack Rantz and His Bride Are Back.

Jack Rantz and his bride, who was Miss Virginia Keltner, of the Seattle Artcraft-Paramount office, returned to Bremerton this week from their honeymoon in California. Mr. Rantz operates the Rialto and Dream theatres in Bremerton.

J. W. Allender Incorporates.

SPOKANE—Incorporation papers for the J. W. Allender corporation of Spokane, Wash., have been filed with the secretary of state at Olympia, Wash., the capital stock being $25,000. The incorporators are J. W. Allender, manager of the Lyric and Majestic theatres, Spokane; J. G. Maddux and Beulah Allender, all of Spokane. The corporate object is to buy, lease, propel or otherwise engage in plays, operas, songs and moving pictures. Mr. Allender said the incorporation was for the special purpose of operating the Lyric and the Majestic theatres at present.

Lewis Popular in Spokane.

Petrova Sells $10,162 W. S. S.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—By the charm of her personality and through the fire of her rousing patriotic speech, Madame Olga Petrova added a considerable sum to Indianapolis' War Savings Stamps quota at the Circle theatre Tuesday, July 23, where she made a personal appearance at both matinee and evening performance. Her sales of stamps at the two performances amounted to $10,162. Considering the fact that the Indianapolis campaign had closed several weeks ago, the sales made by the motion picture star were considered remarkable by members of the local War Saving Committee.

Mme. Petrova was introduced by Mayor Charles W. Jewett. Following her speech she sang a patriotic song written by Lieutenant B. C. Hilliam called "Freedom for All and Forever." She then offered to give a $5 Thrift Stamp to whoever from the audience would offer to sing alone the song she had just finished. Miss Patricia Mason, of University Heights, a suburb of Indianapolis, bravely complied.

Mme. Petrova was entertained at dinner Tuesday night at the Woodstock Country Club by Mr. and Mrs. Robert Lieber, and she was also entertained at luncheon at the Hotel Severin at noon by Mayor Jewett, Serge Halman, A. L. Block, president of the Circle, and others.

Schull and Moore Buy Gem Theatre.

Raymond C. Schull, for several years a motion picture machine operator at the Grand theatre at Kokomo, Ind., and Merrill Moore, a young business man of Kokomo, have purchased the Gem theatre here, and will operate it as a first-class motion picture house. Mr. Schull has received patents on a number of projection devices which he has invented.

Lyric Theatre Opens in New Dress.

The Lyric theatre at Marion, which has been closed for the last few weeks while the interior was being repaired and redecorated, will be reopened on Monday, August 5, according to an announcement this week by Miss Dolly Spurr, manager of three local theatres. The Lyric has been redecorated, and presents a very cozy and attractive appearance. The Royal-Grand theatre, which Miss Spurr also manages, will be closed for repairs from August 6 to September 2, with the exception of Saturdays, on which days the regular program of vaudeville and pictures will be shown.

Will Show Gerard Film Again.

In the two days that it was exhibited at the Paramount theatre in Rochester the film, "My Four Years in Germany," was witnessed by 1,800 persons, and many others were turned away because of lack of seating space. The management of the Paramount is arranging to have it presented again in a few weeks.

Theatres Make Patriotic Donation.

Five Evansville theatres, the Alhambra, Princess, Woodlawn, Columbia, and Franklin, donated a part of their receipts Monday and Tuesday to the Evansville War Mothers' Association, which was organized here recently.

Miss Spurr Gives Camp Impressions.

Marion.—Miss Dollie Spurr, manager of the Mutual Theater Company, of this city, has gone into the "war correspondent business." Miss Spurr recently made a visit to Camp Sherman at Chillicothe, O., and on her return wrote articles for the Marion papers in which she gave the impressions gleaned through her talks with Marion lads now soldiering at the camp.

Films Form Basis of Post's Entertainment

Metro's "To Hell with the Kaiser," and Pathe's "Kicking the Germ Out of Germany" Main Features of Kansas City Newspaper's Show at Convention Hall—Thousands Unable to Gain Admission.

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY.—The Kansas City Post was host to its readers at a "war rally" given at Convention Hall, Saturday, July 20. The main features of the entertainment were the photoplays, "To Hell with the Kaiser," Metro's great patriotic release, and the Pathe comedy, "Kicking the Germ Out of Germany." In celebration of the victory of the Americans and French over the Huns at the Marne a number of patriotic speeches, community singing, and music by McMillan's orchestra from the Garden theatre preceded the pictures. In spite of the fact that the seating capacity of the hall was about ten thousand and performances were given at 1 o'clock in the afternoon and 8:30 in the evening thousands were turned away. One thousand seats were reserved for the students of the army mechanics schools and all other soldiers here.

Olive Tell, who stars in "To Hell with the Kaiser," telegraphed the following message to the Kansas City Post prior to the showing: "I trust the presentation of 'To Hell with the Kaiser' will help raise the patriotic spirit of the American people more than ever, if this is possible. I never took so much delight in my picture work as in this picture, as the part of killing the crown prince and capturing the Kaiser, if only in pictures, was greatly enjoyed by me, and I trust that these two events will soon happen in reality. Kindly extend my compliments to the people of Kansas City and yourself."

R. A. Rowland, president of the Metro Pictures Corporation, also wired his congratulations to the people of Kansas City. "Metro Pictures Corporation extends its compliments to the people of Kansas City, and trusts that the presentation of 'To Hell with the Kaiser' will help us and our allies. If it does we will feel amply repaid for its production. Sincerest wishes."

Robertson Enters the Army.

H. C. Robertson, brother of Richard Robertson, manager of the Goldwyn offices in Kansas City, and salesman for the company, leaves this week to enter the army.

Ryan Promoted to Sergeant-Major.

Phil L. Ryan, formerly manager of the Standard Film Corporation, and now with the Signal Corps at Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, was in at the Kansas City offices during the week end of July 20. Mr. Ryan's executive ability will not stay under in the army any more than it did in the film game. The same ability which made him the youngest general manager in the country perhaps has promoted him to Sergeant Major after two weeks as a private. Mr. Shylen is taking over some of the advertising work which was formerly in charge of R. H. Tannehill.

Vaughns Leaves for St. Louis.

C. C. Vaughns, formerly manager of the Kansas City office of the George Kleine system, left July 20 to take charge of the St. Louis branch. "Cal" Edwards is now in charge here, and has made a slight change by placing Miss Laveta Crithfield in charge of bookings. Miss Crithfield has been with Kleine for over two years in various capacities.

Holds Benefit for Base Hospital.

Base Hospital Unit No. 28 was given a motion picture benefit by the auxiliary at the Alamo theatre, Saturday night, July 27. Two performances beginning at seven and nine o'clock, respectively, were run. The unit is under the command of Major John F. Binnie, who is now in active service in France. Photographs and pictures of the boys at work were shown.

Raymond Called to Fight.

C. E. Raymond, shipping clerk for the World Film Corporation, has been called to the colors. Mr. Raymond is replaced by Harry Cameron, formerly with Paramount, and also with Kleine-Edison.

Universal Notes.

Leo Doty, booking clerk, has been called to the army. Mr. Recob is taking his place.

D. B. Lederman, special representative from the New York office, is again in Kansas City looking over the system which he installed a week or ten days ago. From Kansas City, Mr. Lederman will go to Des Moines, Iowa.

V. A. Klingberg has been added to the Universal force as special attractions salesman in the Kansas territory. Mr. Klingberg was formerly with the Universal and also with Paramount for some time.

Exhibitors Who Visited Kansas City.

The following are some of the exhibitors from the nearby territory who paid their respects to the Kansas City exchange last week: E. Van Hyning, Pastime theatre, Ottawa, Kansas; R. W. Varderman, Maple theatre, Independence, Mo.; Lee Gunnison, the Royal and Crystal theatres, Atchison, Kansas; Mrs. Mellington, Ottawa, Kansas; Charles Barron, Augusta, Kansas; C. Holmes, Emporia, Kansas; C. D. Stricker, Liberty theatre, Sand Springs, Okla.

Del Rio, Tex.—A theater building is to be erected by W. Box, San Antonio.

Ohio Operators Present New Wage Scale

Becomes Effective August 19—Increases Earnings from 62½ Cents an Hour to 80 Cents—Provision Made for Special Entertainments and Overtime Work.

By M. A. Malaney, 607 Belmont Building, Cleveland, Ohio.

CLEVELAND.—Motion Picture Operators Local 160, I. A. T. S. E., last Monday submitted a new wage scale to exhibitors, to go into effect on August 19, which will give them a raise from 62½c. an hour to 80c an hour. Here is the scale:

Section 1.—All night shows within our jurisdiction shall pay at the rate of $25.60 per week, four hours to constitute a night's work. The aforesaid amount shall include one matinee a week. Should the said matinee run continuous, the operator shall receive $1 for the supper hour. All extra matinees shall be paid for at the rate of $3.50 each and shall not exceed four hours.

Section 2.—All theatres running ten hours a day shall employ two operators, each working 5 hours per day, and each to receive $28 per week.

Section 3.—All theatres running twelve hours per day shall employ two operators, each working 6 hours per day, and each to receive $33.60 per week.

Section 4.—All theatres running 14 hours per day shall employ two operators, each working 7 hours per day, and each to receive $39.20.

Section 5.—All theatres running 16 hours per day shall employ two operators, each working 8 hours per day, and each to receive $44.80 per week.

Section 6.—All theatres running a daily matinee and evening performance, the matinee not to exceed four, and the evening performance not to exceed four hours, shall pay $44.80 per week.

Section 7.—Special entertainments shall be paid for at the rate of $5 each and shall not exceed four hours. $3 shall be charged for setting up machine and $3 for taking down.

Section 8.—Overtime in connection with downtown theatres shall be computed by adding the total overtime per week, and charged pro rata.

Section 9.—Overtime in connection with all other theatres shall be charged for at the rate of $1 per hour or fraction thereof.

Section 10.—All operators engaged for road work shall receive the wage scale as required by the International Alliance at the time he is engaged.

Section 11.—Operators shall not be permitted to carry film, banners, posters, etc., to or from theatre or film exchange, either with or without compensation.

Section 12.—Eastern standard time shall be recognized in accordance with this scale.

Charles V. Burton, well known cameraman of Cleveland, is in Salt Lake City taking pictures of the potash fields for Uncle Sam. This work is preliminary to Burton's entering the active service. He has applied for a commission in the observation department of the aviation division.

E. J. Smith, manager of the Universal exchange, has just returned from vacationing in the Adirondacks and other eastern points.

Fighting Sunday Closing in Ohio.

The Sunday closing bill in Ohio will receive another blow when the exhibitors of the state gather in Columbus at the Deshler Hotel on August 1 in an effort to provide ways and means for legalizing the Sunday movie in Ohio. Notification of the meeting has been sent forth to everyone connected with the film industry.

Those present at the initial meeting of exhibitors in Columbus last month decided to form themselves into a regular organization for handling the proposition intelligently, and to that end organized under the name of the Ohio State Screen League, with officers as follows: Henry H. Lustig, president; Fred Desberg, secretary. An executive committee was also elected, and consists of the following representative exhibitors: John W. Weinig, Cincinnati; C. W. Cline, Akron; Harry W. Cress, Piqua; Joseph Perlstein, Toledo, and Zach Smith, Bryan. This committee will act in conjunction with the officers of the league.

The Ohio State Screen League is not affiliated with any other motion picture organization, and has power to act only in reference to Sunday closing.

At a recent meeting in New York of the Sunday closing committee of the N. A. M. P. I. it was decided to send one of their representatives on to Columbus to be present at the mass meeting in Columbus, August 1.

Petrova Sells $16,000 W. S. S.

Mme. Petrova's two appearances at the Stillman theatre last Friday netted the U. S. Government just $16,000 in war saving stamps. The popular screen star made a short address in the afternoon and evening, accompanying her talk with a few well selected songs.

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Greenbaum of the Alhambra theatre have just returned from an enjoyable visit to Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, where their son, Jack, is stationed. Mr. Greenbaum brought back the good word that Jack will be in Cleveland for the opening of the Alhambra on August 17.

Fox Preparing for Big Sales Drive.

The Fox Film Company's Cleveland office is showing a great deal of activity preparatory to the big sales drive that Manager Sydney E. Abel is planning for the early fall. In anticipation of the drive he is enlarging his sales force considerably. Two new men were added this week. They are H. E. Smith, for the past five years owner and manager of the Toledo Film Exchange in Toledo, and C. D. Woodyet, a prominent exhibitor from Illinois.

Sunday Closing Receives Setback.

Sunday closing in Ohio was given a blow last week when the grand jury refused to indict two moving picture owners of Tiffin, Ohio, for running their shows on Sunday. They were recently arrested for keeping open on Sunday after the mayor had forbidden the shows to continue opening.

Parsons Treats Newspaper Men.

"Smiling Bill" Parsons, of Capitol comedies, which are being released through Goldwyn, visited Cleveland July 22 and certainly let the city know he was there. Bill treated the newspaper men and others to a fine luncheon at the Hollenden Hotel, and in the afternoon went to two orphan asylums and distributed a box of candy to every child. At 3 and 9 p. m., Mr. Parsons appeared in person at the Stillman theater, where he delivered a talk on Thrift Stamps. At 6 p. m. he was the guest of honor at the Cleveland Yacht club. Moving pictures were made of these events by the Plain Dealer Screen Magazine.

Gordon Square Has Film Repertoire.

The Gordon Square theatre, Cleveland, has just closed a successful summer season of film repertoire, something new in this section, if not in the country.

Manager Ryder had a week for each popular star, and ran their best pictures, changing daily.

Ohio Short Items.

Manager Leibmann, of the Cleveland Parex office, is looking for two good road men.

Two Exchangemen Called to Colors.

DES MOINES.—Two exchange men well known to Des Moines and Iowa exhibitors answered the call to arms this week. Orrin C. (Lafe) Clark, assistant manager of the Yale Photoplay Company, enlisted as yeoman in the navy. Billy Swain, cashier at the Universal office for several years, was called in the draft, and with the Des Moines contingent went to Camp Pike, Arkansas. It was a coincidence that Stanley J. Mayer, former manager of the Yale, was the first local film man to go into the army.

M. J. Frisch Back from Meeting.

Manager M. J. Frisch of the Universal office returned from the general meeting of Universal branch managers and high officials in Chicago. Mr. Frisch stated that plans for the coming year reveal some unusual productions for distribution through the Universal offices. He reports business booming in the face of the hot weather and usual off season.

Draft Board Summons Harry Watts.

Harry Watts, who has been acting as manager of the Palace for several weeks past, hastened to his home in Omaha in answer to a summons from the draft board there. Manager Dan C. Burgum of the Garden will also supervise the Palace in the future with Jess Day, former manager of the Star, and experienced in theatricals generally, as house manager. J. L. Shipley is handling publicity for both theaters.

Epidemic Closes Picture Theatres.

An epidemic of infantile paralysis has demoralized the picture business in Dubuque, all theaters having been closed by order of the city authorities. Several deaths resulted from the disease, and the theater managers state that it may be some little time before the ban is lifted and they are permitted to reopen.

Mitchell Supervises Music at Palace.

Norris E. Mitchell, who has been musical director at the Garden for several years, has had the supervision of the Palace orchestra added to his duties as well. Mr. Mitchell promises to bring the latter house up to a high musical standard. He continues to direct personally at the Garden.

Witmers Sell Their Lyric Theater.

Cecil Witmer, manager of the Casino, announces that owing to his brother, H. H. Witmer, having been drafted, they have sold their Lyric theater at Valley Junction to Ed Lyons.

Authorities Close the Twin-Star.

Declaring it to be a violation of the state and city laws the Twin-Star theater of Ames was ordered closed Sunday by the Chief of Police. The picture being shown was "Pershing's Crusaders," the film having been secured upon the request of soldiers of the visiting 313th Battalion as a means of Sunday advertisement. Gerbracht Sisters, who are operating the house while their brother, Joe, is fighting with the Marines, were called before the city council. The mayor was out of the city at the time and the case has gone over until his return. Interest runs high in Ames, and the majority seem to favor an open-Sunday town.

Dress Lobby for "Uncle Tom's Cabin."

"Uncle Tom's Cabin" packed and jammed the Garden theater for four days. Manager Burgun fixed the lobby up appropriately, surrounding the box office with logs and using cotton and cane effectively for a background. A great deal of interest attached to Mrs. Priestley Morrison in the role of Aunt Ophelia, Mrs. Morrison having been a stock favorite here for several years, and it being her debut in pictures. A special children's matinee on Saturday attracted more than two thousand children.

Columbia Takes Over the Baker.

ROCHESTER.—The Baker theatre has been taken over by the Columbia Amusement Company, which will move its burlesque into it from the Corinthian next season. It has been said that the Corinthian would show high class pictures next season.

Authorities Seize Park Theatre.

A peculiar situation has arisen in Bath involving the Park theatre. This house and the National hotel were owned and conducted by William P. Murphy. A while ago Mr. Murphy neglected to pay his taxes, and the municipal authorities immediately seized the property. They then leased it to Matthew E. Shannon. Now Murphy has started a suit in the Supreme Court, alleging that the authorities had no right to take any such action. He is also suing Shannon to recover possession of his property. The latter has asked the city of Bath to defend his suit, but the city officials claim that they did not guarantee the lease.

Crawford Wright Adjudged Bankrupt.

Crawford Wright, manager of the Wright theatre at Waterloo, has been adjudged bankrupt and the affairs of the theatre placed in the hands of Referee in Bankruptcy Charles A. Hawley, of Seneca Falls.

McVoy Takes Pictures of Draftees.

One of the most progressive motion picture theatre managers in Central New York is Manager McVoy, of the Morgan theatre in Auburn. When a number of drafted men from Auburn and Cayuga county left Auburn one morning last week, Mr. McVoy had a cameraman on the job, and took some splendid views. Thev were shown two days after being shot. One scene that is remarkable shows the parade coming down James street.

Theatres Aid Home Warfare Campaign.

LOUISVILLE.—Louisville motion picture theatres, retail merchants, telephone companies, etc., have joined in a campaign for the week of August 4 to 10 to raise $88,000 still needed to complete a fund of $227,000 for the Louisville Federation of Social Agencies. Lee Goldberg, motion picture chairman for Kentucky for war work, has arranged with a number of theatres to use slides carrying the slogan, "Do Your Share for Home Warfare." The theatres to aid in the campaign are the Alamo, Ideal, Hilltop, Cherokee, National, Palace, Starr, West Broadway, Aristo, Crown, Hippodrome, Majestic, Norman, Preston, Strand, Casino, Empire, Fontaine, Ferry, Mary Anderson, Orpheum, Shelby, Rex, East Broadway, and Walnut.

Adjust Labor Differences.

Paducah.—Moving picture theatres of this city which have been listed as unfair to organized labor are back on the fair list again following adjustment of the differences between the three theatres and the International Alliance of Theatrical & Stage Employees. The matter was settled through arbitration by a committee composed of Commissioner J. L. Woolridge; President Andrew H. Bradley, of the Central Labor Union, and owners of the Kozy, Arcade, and Star theatres. The operators of the theatres went on strike on May 10, and the strike had been in effect since that time.

Breck Company Takes Quarters in Film Row

San Francisco Supply Concern Opens Beautifully Appointed Salesroom and Offices in Fireproof Building at Golden Gate Avenue and Jones Street —Formerly at 70 Turk Street, the Old Film Center.

By T. A. Church, 1507 North St., Berkeley, Cal.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.—The Breck Photoplay Supply Company, which succeeded to the business of George Breck several years ago, has moved from the quarters that have long been occupied at 70 Turk street to a handsomely appointed salesroom at the corner of Golden Gate avenue and Jones street. This store is in a fireproof building erected exclusively for film exchanges and theatre supply firms, and this concern was the first to lease space. It occupies a space twenty-five by seventy-five feet in size, with a full basement, in addition to a mezzanine floor, where the offices are located. A large shop will form a part of the equipment, and it is planned to manufacture many specialties for use in connection with projection. The Breck Photoplay Supply Company has long handled Simplex machines in this territory, and was recently made distributor for the entire Pacific Coast. Sales in the local field have been quite satisfactory of late.

This concern has always handled a large line of the theatre supplies, and this will be added to now that the move has been made to Film Row. At one time its location on Turk street was in the heart of the film exchange district, but this industry has now centered on Golden Gate avenue, and the move was made to that thoroughfare as soon as suitable quarters could be secured. Tom Maguire, manager of the firm, was for years an exhibitor in the Northwest, and has a wide knowledge of the needs of theatre owners.

Peerless Buys Arbuckle Films.

The Peerless Film Service has purchased twenty-four one-reel Arbuckle comedies, having made such a success in booking the Chaplin reissues it controls. Complaints are made that others having old Chaplin pictures are putting out misleading advertising, claiming the honor of booking these at the Portola and other theatres where the Peerless has placed the reissues.

Rodeo Helps Red Cross.

G. E. Madsen, who conducts the Bell theatre at Livermore, Cal., worked hard to make the recent rodeo a success, and reports that about $3,000 was cleared at the event for the benefit of the Red Cross. Moving pictures were taken, and are being shown at theatres in the Livermore Valley.

Nick Turner Returns to T. & D.

Nick Turner, for some time manager of the T. & D. theatre at San Jose, Cal., and who left to assume the management of the Strand theatre at Grass Valley, which he purchased, has again joined the staff of managers of the Turner & Dahnken Circuit, and has been placed in charge of the Berkeley house. Harry Oviatt, who was in charge here for several weeks, has assumed charge of the house at San Jose.

Bluebird Man Joins Marines.

Joe Goldberg, for the past year in charge of the Bluebird office at San Francisco, has enlisted with the Marines. He recently completed a long road trip for the Universal, and enlisted upon his return.

Kinema Engages Orpheum Theatre.

The management of the Kinema theatre at Oakland some time ago secured bookings on both "Pershing's Crusaders" and "Hearts of the World," intending to show them both at this house. It was later decided to show the former immediately following its engagement at the Columbia theatre in San Francisco, and an opportunity was presented of securing the Oakland Orpheum for the presentation of "Hearts of the World." The new arrangement is a very advantageous one, since this house has a much larger seating capacity than the Kinema, with better facilities for the installation of the augmented orchestra that will be required, and with proper facilities for the reservation of all seats.

Notables Speak in Theatre Tea Room.

M. Maurice Sasenave, minister plenipotentiary of the French High Commission to the United States, spoke recently at a reception tendered to him in the Red Cross tea room on the mezzanine floor of the California theatre. Lieutenant Paul Verdier, of this city, who has served with the French army the past four years, also spoke and allowed the theatre management to exhibit a reel of pictures, the property of the French Government, showing the "Blue Devils" and some submarine views.

Made in San Francisco Picture Shown.

The first complete "Made in San Francisco" feature picture, "The American," produced by the Liberty Feature Films Company under the direction of H. E. Wallace, who also plays the leading role, was shown recently for a week at the Theatre St. Francis. Others who took part in the production were Clarence E. Hogan, Barbara Marriott, Gertrude Bartlett, Sophie Christenson, Francis Sights, and Anna Goldsmith. The concern plans to erect a large studio here.

San Francisco Brevities.

The Paul Smith Pictures Company has given up its offices at 120 Golden Gate avenue.

George Chamberlain, of the Independent Film exchange, has disposed of most of his film, and has left for Texas to handle his Sontag & Evans production.

J. W. Davis, formerly road man for the General Film Company out of the local office, has resigned to accept the management of the Vallejo theatre at Vallejo, Cal. He succeeds Joe Langley, who has gone to Hanford to manage the house owned by his brother, Claude Langley.

H. E. Lotz, manager of the Pacific Coast offices of the Western Triangle Distributing Corp., made a trip early in the month to Salt Lake City to install a new manager.

Andy Hillyard, formerly with Edward H. Kemp, is now in training at Camp Kearny, Cal.

Louis R. Lurie, of the Rialto theatre, recently made a business trip to Seattle.

The Grand theatre, one of the oldest houses in the Mission district, has been sold by Sam Levin to Mahoney Bros., and will be conducted under the management of Charles Mahoney.

Otto Roeder has moved from the old Columbia theatre to the Bay View theatre on Railroad avenue.

George Breck, E. L. Gilmore, and L. M. Kaye are engaged in business as the Vitaslide Company.

J. Hellman and C. E. Burns have disposed of the New Piedmont theatre at Oakland to the J. S. Kimball Company.

Texas Brief Items.

George L. Barry, of the Billy Barry theatre at Bowie, Tex., was visiting among Dallas film exchange men last week for the first time in three years. He commented on the army airplanes droning overhead and on two or three new Dallas skyscrapers.

Two former Texas League ball players are making a big success as moving picture exhibitors. They are "Boston" Campbell and "Babe" Peoples, of Denison, Tex. They are joint proprietors of the Arcade theatre.

Equitable Exchange Newest in Kansas City

C. W. Harden, an Old Time Picture Man, Is Manager and Chief Promoter—W. H. Bell, Secretary and Treasurer—Offices Located in Ozark Building—Will Handle Billy West Comedies and State Right Features.

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY.—The Equitable Film Corporation is the latest exchange to be added to Kansas City's list. The manager of the company and chief promoter is a man who is popular and well known in Kansas City film circles—C. W. Harden. Mr. Harden was first introduced to the Kansas City film world as manager of the local Fox office. Later he had charge of the Metro, where he remained until last August. From the Metro he went to the E. & H. Film Distributing Company, which he established in Atlanta, Ga. A short time ago he sold his interest in that company and came back to Kansas City to affiliate himself with the owners of the Camp-Bell Film Company, forming the Equitable Film Corporation. The corporation is capitalized for $25,000, taking over all of the assets of the Camp-Bell Company with Mr. Harden in charge. W. H. Bell, who is also an old-time film man, having been manager of the Paramount office in St. Louis previous to his Kansas City experience, has been appointed secretary and treasurer of the company. J. M. Campbell, president of the company, is a prominent insurance man of Kansas City, being particularly well known in financial circles.

C. W. Harden.

Billy West comedies and a number of big state rights pictures will be handled. The corporation expects to become the largest independent buyer in the middle west. The offices of the company are located in the Ozark Building, the center of the film industry in Kansas City.

Owing to the prominence and popularity of Mr. Harden and Mr. Bell, who have had such long experience in this territory in the film business, the success of the company is already assured. There will be the unlimited financial resources of Mr. Campbell and his associates, so this combination means a really big local proposition.

Gregory Joins the Army.

Charles Gregory, salesman covering the Iowa territory for Goldwyn, leaves August 5 to join the national army. Mr. Gregory, who has been with Goldwyn since the opening of the office, first as shipper, then booker, and salesman, is the third man from the Kansas City office to go into the service. The other two are H. C. Robertson, salesman, and T. F. Wilson, shipping clerk, who entered the navy.

Brucklein Enlarging His Theatre.

Hugo Brucklein has completed plans for a 50x37-ft. addition to his moving picture theatre at 1615-17 East 18th street. The extension will be one-story high and put on at the rear of the present building.

Newman Purchases Big Pipe Organ.

Work on the Newman theatre at 12th and Main is being pushed as rapidly as possible. Mr. Newman has just purchased what is probably the largest pipe organ in the west from the Austin Organ Company. The instrument has eighty-nine stops and four manuals. The top manual is made of the finest orchestral material procurable and the organ is designed to take the place of an entire orchestra. Mr. Newman's idea in this is that he wished to be fully equipped in case war conditions should cut down on the number of musicians.

Triangle Releases Pleases Censor.

The city censor held a private showing last week of the two Triangle releases, "Beyond the Shadows," featuring William Desmond, and the "Golden Fleece," featuring Joe Bennet. These were passed as very good.

Campbell Returns for Conference.

J. M. Campbell, of the Camp-Bell Company, has returned to Kansas City from his summer home at Lake Okoboji, Iowa, to hold an important conference with W. H. Bell in regard to plans for expansion in view of the coming fall season. This exchange is new and one of the leading independent distributors in the Missouri and Kansas fields.

Woods Goes to the Army.

W. B. Woods, booker for the Pathe, has been called to the colors, and will report for service in a week or ten days. D. W. Day, formerly booker with the Vitagraph, took charge of the booking department of Pathe in Mr. Woods' place.

With Missouri Exhibitors.

Will Leucht, of the Savoy theatre, St. Joseph, Missouri, has enlisted in the navy and expects to leave for the Great Lakes Naval Training School immediately.

Sam Harding, owner of the new Liberty theatre, Kansas City, has been in Omaha, Neb., on a brief business trip during the past week. Mr. Harding expects to return within a few days. A $750 upright piano has been purchased for the orchestra at the Liberty.

Dr. Wertenberger, of the Empress theatre, St. Joseph, Mo., was in Kansas City recently. Dr. Wertenberger is remodeling and redecorating his house for the fall season.

W. B. Scoville, of the Idle Hour theatre, Kansas City, has just returned from a motor trip through Colorado. Work has already been started on the extension to the theatre and the erection of an entrance on Grand avenue.

Junction City, Kan.—Work of remodeling the Columbia theater is almost completed.

Jameson, Mo.—C. E. Long is now manager of the moving picture show at this place.

Moreley, Mo.—A portion of the new $10,000 building being erected by Black & Son will be occupied by the Morley moving picture show.

Houston, Tex.—The new Victory theater has been opened to the public.

Detroit News Letter

Perry Selling Hodkinson Productions.

DETROIT.—Charles W. Perry, for three years with Pathe in Detroit, part of the time as manager, and for a while manager of the Boston Pathe office, has returned to Detroit as special sales representative for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He will devote his entire time to selling Paralta and Plaza Plays, making his headquarters at the office of the General Film Company.

Pierce Now with Liberty Theatres.

The numerous friends of Howard O. Pierce, for several years publicity manager for the Kunsky Enterprises, all last winter as manager of the Butterfield houses in Flint, and recently manager of the Liberty theatre at Camp Taylor, Louisville, has been appointed assistant director of the Liberty Theatres of the United States, making his headquarters at Washington. Howard has a brother who has been with the Marines since the outbreak of the war.

Garson Shows "The Hushed Hour."

Harry I. Garson, president of the Broadway-Strand theatre, and manager for Clara Kimball Young, was in Detroit on July 24 and 25. While here he screened his first feature, "The Hushed Hour," with Blanch Sweet and House Peters. Those who saw it declared it was a real big picture worthy of playing in the best houses.

Exhibitors' Board Decides on Dues.

On Tuesday, July 23, a meeting of the officers and board of directors of the American Exhibitors' Association, of Michigan, was held at the Hotel Tuller, Detroit. It was a short meeting, some complaints being discussed on which there will be a report later. The board decided to make dues for all Michigan exhibitors $12 per year, the fiscal year starting July 1.

The board of the Exhibitors' Booking Corporation, of Michigan, also held a brief meeting, enabling stockholders to pay for their stock and to complete the Michigan unit so that it can be properly associated with the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation—the national body. Charles Seaman, of Grand Rapids, national director, attended the meeting, and reported the recent New York conference.

Detroit Brevities.

Jake Sullivan, recently manager of the Your theatre, Detroit, has been appointed manager of the Globe theatre by Warren & Cohen.

Leon Schlesinger, general sales representative for the Manxman Corporation, was in Detroit July 25 and 26, and placed "The Manxman" with John H. Kunsky for one week at the Washington theatre—week of August 11. Mr. Schlesinger is making a hurried trip to the principal cities placing "The Manxman," and reported splendid success.

Jack Mowat, of the new Lincoln Square theatre, Detroit, seating 2,000 people, announces the opening will be on Labor Day.

W. A. Haynes, an attorney, has become affiliated with the film business by becoming city representative in Detroit for the Dawn Masterplay Company.

James Rutherford, for three years with the Miles theatre in Detroit as house manager and publicity manager, and for 22 years in every branch of the amusement business, has taken full charge of the Bijou theatre, Bay City, for the Butterfield interests.

The Educational Distributing Corporation, of New York, has established Detroit offices at 302 Film building in charge of Harry Abbott, who formerly managed the Academy of Music, New York City.

The Dawn Masterplay Company, of Detroit, has become United States and Canada distributors for the Spanuth Original Vod-Vail Movies, and offices are to be opened at once in New York and Philadelphia.

Remodeled Empress Theatre Reopens.

The Empress theatre, Calgary, Alberta, is now almost as good as a brand new theatre. The house reopened on Friday, July 19, after considerable alterations and improvements had been made in the place. The balcony was enlarged and carpeted with a view to using it as a reserved section during the coming winter, and six hundred seats were added to the capacity of the theatre. A brand new ventilating system was installed, the new equipment including six exhaust fans in the roof and two ventilating tunnels over the screen. An extra exit has also been installed at one end of the balcony. The whole interior has been redecorated in artistic fashion. The lighting system was also remoleled in order to secure a new indirect effect. The seating arrangement on the main floor of the house was also altered somewhat.

Y. M. C. A. Entertains.

The Y. M. C. A. has arranged to present a series of Fox Standard Pictures at the Princess theatre, Brownsburg, Quebec, for the benefit of the many employes of the Dominion Cartridge Company. The plan was arranged at the suggestion of the company, whose employes include nearly all the adults of the town.

Aloz Joins Staff of U. B. O.

J. H. Aloz, formerly manager of the Auditorium theatre, Quebec, has left Canada to join the staff of the United Booking offices, filling the position recently vacated by Tom McKee. Mr. Aloz owns a farm at Hampton, Mass., and it was his desire to be closer to his property that helped him to decide on his move to Gotham.

Keeps Tabs on Condition of Films.

Manager T. E. Kennedy, of the Lyceum theatre, Wingham, Ontario, follows a practice that helps both himself and the exchanges quite a bit. He uses a special printed form on which he keeps data concerning the condition of every film that is used in his theatre. The operator looks after the filling in of these report forms and the headings include scratches, perforations, torn edges, misframes and general condition. He sends these reports to the interested exchange for their action or otherwise. The exchange appreciates his efforts in this connection.

Among the Southwest Theatres.

Orange, Tex.—Contract for the construction of a modern theater building equipped for a motion picture show has been let to the E. W. Brown Estate.

Bristow, Okla.—Mike Signal has sold the De Luxe theater to Mr. Larsen, of Oklahoma City, who will take charge immediately.

Hollis, Okla.—J. K. Lunn has purchased the LeGrande theater. Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Molloy are now operating the theater for Mr. Lunn.

Cement, Okla.—G. F. Cutshell has bought the Arcade theater from F. A. Herber.

Collinsville, Okla.—W. J. Mallett, formerly of Tulsa, has leased the Royal theater.

Ponca City, Okla.—Frank Powell, the proprietor of the Mission and Majestic theaters, has sold all his theater interests to William Moyle, of the Moyle Theater Company.

Duncan, Okla.—Hass and Campson expect to have the new Pastime theater ready for opening about August 1. The building and furnishings will cost between $12,000 and $15,000.

Altus, Ark.—Garland Hamm has opened a moving picture show at Altus.

Hope, Ark.—I. W. Rogers will erect a $25,000 theater.

Leachville, Ark. — Leachville Theater Company will erect a new building. W. H. Taber, president.

Des Moines, Ia.—The Palace theater has been sold to the General Amusement Company. A. H. Blank is the manager.

Entertain Convalescent Canadian Soldiers

Employes and Executives of Regal-Regent Interests of Toronto Provide Recreation for the Wounded at the Military Hospital at Whitby—Show Gerard's Film and Chaplin's "A Dog's Life" and Give a Vaudeville Performance

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Wineva Avenue, Toronto, Ontario.

TORONTO.—The Regal and Regent people, of Toronto officially known as the executives and employees of the Regal Films, Limited, and the Regent theatre, enjoyed a Sunday outing at Whitby, Ont., thirty miles from Toronto, on July 28, for the purpose of entertaining the several hundred convalescing soldiers in the Whitby Military Hospital.

Despite the "blue laws" of Ontario the film folk had a big day. Eighty of them made the trip in fifteen automobiles, played and sang, and then returned home feeling both good and sore, the latter state referring to the condition of leg and arm muscles after a strenuous baseball game. A picture show was provided in the theatre of the hospital, the attractions being "My Four Years in Germany" and Chaplin's "A Dog's Life." Seven members of the Regent orchestra provided the music for the presentation.

The "Film Nine" played "The Cripples" a game of baseball and the score was 42 to 5 or 24 to 5—we forget which—in favor of the ex-soldiers, despite the fact that J. P. Bickell, the big man of the Regal-Regent interests, officiated as an umpire. Only five innings were played.

Mr. Bickell was also the manager of the picture show and the stage manager for the vaudeville performance which was also staged. In other words, he worked while the rest played.

The soldiers provided a healthy meal for the city visitors. It would have been known as a "square meal" before the war. Practically every employee of the two companies was on the job and mingled in most democratic fashion. Announcement was made by Mr. Bickell that they would all make another Sunday trip to the Whitby hospital within another few weeks. One of the treats promised for the coming occasion was a recital by the entire "Regent Famous Orchestra" for the soldiers.

Regal to Handle Metro's "Kaiser."

Formal announcement has been made by Regal Films, Toronto, that it has arranged for the release in Canada of Screen Classic productions during the coming twelve months. There will be twenty-six features, the first of which will be "To Hell with the Kaiser."

Monarch to Release Goldwyn Pictures.

Specific details as to the manner in which Goldwyn releases are to be handled throughout Canada in the future are now available. The Goldwyn Productions will be released by the Monarch Film Company, Limited, a branch of the Famous Players Film Service, Limited, and the first release will be in September.

In addition to the Goldwyn business the Monarch Film Company, Limited, is distributing Select Pictures in the Dominion. Select pictures are controlled by Jules and J. J. Allen under the firm name of Select Pictures Corporation, Limited.

The general manager of the Monarch Film Company is Phil Kauffman, who was the Toronto manager of the Famous Players Film Service for a number of years and who was later associated with Regal Films, Limited. His office will be continued in the Hermant building, 21 Dundas street East, Toronto, although the general offices of the Allens are located in the Allen Theatre building. The Montreal office of the Monarch will also be quite distinct from the branch of the Famous Players Film Service in that city. The address of the Monarch's Montreal branch is 108 St. Catherine street West.

Devaney Succeeds Rogers at Fox.

Ben. F. Rogers, for many months in charge as manager of the Toronto branch of the Fox Film Corporation, has been transferred to the Fox office at Washington, D. C. He has been succeeded at the Toronto office by Leo Devaney, who has been associated with the Fox interests in Toronto for several months. Mr. Devaney was formerly a local newspaper man and handled the publicity for Shea's theatre and Shea's Hippodrome. Mr. Rogers was formerly with the Fox branch at Boston. Mr. Vincent McCabe continues as Canadian representative for the Fox interests.

All Toronto Theatres Running.

So far as moving picture theatres are concerned Toronto is once more boasting that "the lid is off." In other words, the local theatres are "100% open." For a short time there was one dark picture theatre, the King theatre, at 565 College street. This has been acquired by Manager Lester of the Royal theatre, 584 College street, only a few doors away, and he proposes to operate both houses in the future. After redecorating and a few changes the King theatre was reopened on Saturday, August 3.

Import Paper Under Special License.

Toronto exchanges report that they are now having no difficulty in importing all the still photographs and display paper for various current releases that they require. Not long ago an order-in-council was passed which prohibited the importation of any photographs or special printed pictures. For a time the Canadian Customs refused to pass the photos for moving picture features, but now the paper and other accessories is coming into the country under special license.

Bailie Does Street Car Advertising.

W. Bailie, of Toronto, president of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario, has acquired complete control of the Kum Bac theatre, 1012 Dovercourt road, from his "old man." His move has been to install a real pipe organ as well as a piano. Mr. Bailie recently signed a contract with the Toronto Railway Company for a one-sheet advertising board on the front of ten trollies that are routed to pass his theatre and through his neighborhood every ten minutes. In addition to this advertising he distributes about 5,000 programs each week and also uses 150 window cards in the various stores.

Convert Club Into Picture Theatre.

The premises of the Windsor Athletic Club, at Windsor, Ontario, have disappeared as such. Under the direction of Ed Glassco the building is being transformed into a modern moving picture theatre to accommodate 1,100. Associated with Mr. Glassco are a number of Windsor's best citizens. The theatre is to be known as the New Empire theatre.

Byerle Goes to Kansas City.

Tom Byerle, one of the best known film exchange men in Eastern Canada, has departed for another country, namely the United States. Byerle received a tempting offer to become manager of the Famous Players branch in Kansas City so he drew out of the Toronto office of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Pathe distributors. Byerle was a prominent exchange man of Montreal for a number of years.

Donates Use of Film to Red Cross.

President L. E. Ouimet of the Specialty Film Import, Limited, Montreal, donated the use of a colored scenic reel for the Red Cross Society in St. John's, Quebec, for a recent collection in aid of the Secours National. Mr. Ouimet made a similar donation last year.

Serkowich Commissioned Navy Lieutenant

Prominent Cincinnati Film Man Will Be Attached to Staff of Commodore Eaton—Resigns from His Motion Picture Connections.

By Kenneth C. Crain, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, Ohio.

CINCINNATI.—The definite announcement that H. Serkowich, secretary of the Moving Picture Exhibitors' League of the Chamber of Commerce and of the Associated Film Exchanges of the Chamber of Commerce, in both of which he has been active from the start, has become an officer in the navy, carries with it his resignation from the two bodies mentioned, as the Navy Department itself requested the Chamber of Commerce to release Mr. Serkowich. He has been commissioned as lieutenant, senior grade, and will be attached to the staff of Commodore Eaton, who is inspector of munitions and materials for the navy in the Cincinnati district. This makes it probable that Lieutenant Serkowich will be kept on duty in or around Cincinnati, especially as it was his work as instructor in a school for radio operators, and his aid in speeding up the manufacture of navy supplies in this section, aside from his achievement in the successful conduct of a volunteer navy recruiting campaign, that brought him most favorably to the attention of the Department. However, his experience in actual sea duty, gained several years ago in the merchant marine, where he was an expert wireless man, may cause him to be assigned to duty on the water, and it was doubtless with this in mind that he was required to pass the usual rigid physical and mental examinations for the rank in which he was commissioned, coming through all tests with flying colors. Appropriate recognition of Lieutenant Serkowich's departure will be taken at the film organizations which he has served and he has already received many personal gifts attesting the esteem in which he is held by various film men and exhibitors.

Cincinnati's Own Star is to Marry.

The news received in Cincinnati recently that Mae Aerite Clark, Cincinnati's own star, is engaged to marry an army officer, was of more than ordinary interest on account of the fact that Miss Clark's family still lives in the Queen City, and that she has given her old home many marks of her affection. Among the most recent of these was her personal appearance on behalf of the drive for the second Liberty Loan, on which occasion Cincinnatians signified their appreciation by giving to her personally an over million dollars in subscriptions.

Opera House Playing to Big Business.

There must be something about the Grand opera house in Cincinnati, perhaps it is the knowledge that during the winter its prices are about the highest in the city—that makes people flock there to see moving pictures. At any rate, virtually every feature shown there during the summer has run beyond its original engagement, the recent instance of "My Four Years in Germany" running four weeks instead of one being the most remarkable. However, the record has been maintained by succeeding attractions, as "Tarzan of the Apes," scheduled for a week, proved so good a drawing card that it was booked for a second week, Arthur Guy Empey's "Over the Top" being postponed on this account.

Strike Delays Work on the Palace.

Labor trouble, which is seldom missing through any entire building job in the Queen City, broke out a few days ago on the Palace theatre work, in the shape of a walkout by members of the structural ironworkers' union, who declared that non-union men were being employed on reinforced concrete work. The ironworkers claim that they alone are entitled to do this kind of work, and threaten to quit the job permanently unless they are given the exclusive right to handle the reinforced concrete.

Brett Returns from Chicago Meeting.

J. F. Brett, manager of the George Kleine exchange in Cincinnati, distributing "Perfection Pictures," returned a short time ago from a visit to Chicago, where he discussed forthcoming releases with the big guns of the Kleine organization. Mr. Brett is much pleased with prospects for business, measured by the excellence of the productions coming, and is preparing for energetic campaigning among exhibitors in order to give them the fullest opportunity to benefit by his good things.

Pittsburgh News Letter

By E. J. McGurty, 455 Union Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Minerva Theatre Being Remodeled.

PITTSBURGH.—The Minerva theatre on Fifth avenue is the latest downtown theatre to remodel. Work is well under way for the enlargement of the theatre, and it is assumed that it will be ready in completed form about the middle of August.

The theatre will have two entrances and will extend from Fifth avenue to Oliver Way. It will have a seating capacity of approximately 1,000, as compared to its present capacity of about 450. The location of this house is ideal, being directly across from the Olympic and in the same square with the New Grand.

Mr. Demas, the manager, has contracted for the Sherry releases, which he will play a week commencing with the "Romance of the Underworld" in August.

Avenue Theatre to Open August 1.

The new theatre next to the Hotel Henry, at 423 Fifth avenue, will be opened as the "Avenue" about the first of August, and is the latest addition to the downtown theatres. It will have a capacity of about 250, and has been furnished and equipped with new material. This theatre is a square away from the main artery of moving picture traffic, but ought to draw business, as the trend of the street is up this way.

Wise Returns to the Fold.

An old time exhibitor who has been out of the business for about four years has returned to the fold, taking over the Avalon theatre from J. E. Stewart. The new exhibitor's name is Wise. The name may be significant in showing why he returned at this particular time. The Avalon is a neighborhood theatre which is prospering as a modern house of limited capacity.

Brown to Open House in Brookville.

Brookville, Pa., the center of a thriving agricultural district, is about to see the opening of a magnificent new theatre costing approximately $90,000. The theatre will be ready for opening about Aug. 15. It is being built by the Brown Brothers, of that place. The lobby is being modeled after that of the New Grand in Pittsburgh. The town is at present without a picture house, the old store-room theatre having been closed sometime ago.

Rex Theatre Changes Hands.

The Rex theatre of Uniontown has changed hands again, being taken over by D. J. Shimm. Mr. Wagner has engaged in another line of business.

Wood Takes Over Theatre at Clymer.

Frank Wood, who has the Grand theatre in Indiana, Pa., has recently taken over the two theatres at Clymer, in the mining district near Indiana, and will operate them on a policy which will conform to that that at his Indiana house. Mr. Wood was in Pittsburgh this week and says that business is fair considering the very warm weather. Mr. Wood's cousin, who has the theatre at Apollo, known as Woodie's theatre, has taken over the opposition house and is running it one night a week.

Mme. Petrova Boosting W. S. S.

Madame Petrova is here this week boosting W. S. S., and also the enlistment of marines. She arrived last Friday and will be in the city several days. Judging from the success which she has attained elsewhere she should have very good results here.

Minneapolis News Letter

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Ave., Minneapolis, Minn.

Stombaugh Managing Pathe Exchange.

MINNEAPOLIS. — Charles Stombaugh, former manager of the Standard-Art Dramas exchange here, and more recently manager of the Pathe exchange at Omaha, Neb., has returned to the Mill City, and is now established as manager of the local Pathe exchange. When R. O. Proctor, district manager for Pathe, and the gentleman who has been acting manager of the office since H. J. Roberts resigned was called to Chicago to take his draft examination early last week he made up his mind to make a switch in managers and give the local office a permanent boss. Proctor wired Stombaugh to come back to Minneapolis, and he sent Roy L. White to Omaha to manage the Nebraska exchange.

Miss Polk Leaves for "Over There."

Minneapolis' film rialto has sent many of its favored sons to take part in the gigantic struggle for Democracy abroad, and its women workers at the exchanges have proved unquestioned patriots by their work for the Red Cross and other patriotic orders, but to Miss Grace Polk goes the honor of being the first Minneapolis film woman to go to France for war work. Miss Polk gave up one of the best publicity positions in the country to "do her bit." She recently enrolled for canteen work abroad, and July 27 received a call to leave for New York within twenty-four hours. Miss Polk for several years was a reporter on the Minneapolis Tribune, later she became Minneapolis correspondent for the Moving Picture World, and eighteen months ago became press agent for the Ruben & Finkelstein theatres in Minneapolis. George M. Guise, former secretary to Mayor W. G. Nye, and more recently city editor of the Minneapolis Daily News, is to succeed Miss Polk as R. and F. press agent.

Rumor that R. & F. Want More Houses.

Rumor has it that Ruben & Finkelstein, owners of fifteen Twin City theatres, and among the most prominent exhibitors in the country, are dickering for several theatres in Wisconsin and Iowa. Neither Mr. Ruben nor Mr. Finkelstein could be reached to verify such a report, but it has been practically understood for some time that the local film magnates were looking for prosperous show houses in nearby large cities.

Exchange Notes.

W. R. Frank, Universal salesman, has resigned his position to study preparatory to entering the naval signal school at Chicago in September.

Mike Conhaim, recently sent back from Camp Dodge because he was too big to train down into fighting shape for Uncle Sam, is now back with the Supreme exchange.

Manager Pearson, of the First National exchange, has secured Gunner Van Raalte, a returned Canadian soldier, to travel with "Pershing's Crusaders" and talk on war work.

Earl Conlan, Vitagraph booker, resigned last week to enter the army. Conlan has been assigned to the Coast Artillery at New York.

Baltimore News Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

J. J. Payette in Army.

BALTIMORE.—The latest recruit for Uncle Sam's forces from Baltimore film circles is J. J. Payette, who is well known both in the Baltimore and Washington territories. Mr. Payette has been associated with a number of film companies in the past several years, and before joining the army was connected with Goldwyn. He is now a member of the 5th Engineer Corps, and has been sent to Camp Humphreys, Va.

O. D. (Nick) Weems, who is one of the foremost film men of the Baltimore and Maryland territory, has succeeded Mr. Payette as the Baltimore representative of Goldwyn. For some time Mr. Weems was salesman for Mutual, then became Baltimore branch manager for that company. Later on he went with Paramount-Artcraft, from which association he now comes to Goldwyn. Mr. Weems is well known, and one of the most popular film men in Baltimore.

Pictures At Camp Purnell.

At the new convalescent camp which was opened about two weeks ago on the Severn River and named Camp Purnell the motion picture is helping greatly to bring the wounded patients from General Hospital No. 2, Fort McHenry, into shape again. A fine program of pictures is shown twice weekly in the large recreation hall.

Depkin a Busy Man.

Bernard Depkin, Jr., supervising manager of the Parkway Theatre Company interests, is right up to his neck in business these days. He has again taken over the management of the McHenry theatre, Light near Cross street, and for a couple of weeks has been running a daily change of pictures with great success.

On Saturday, July 27, Mr. Depkin took a run down to Atlantic City, N. J., to look over his Anita theatre in that city, and reports that while the season for the well known summer resort has not been a smashing one still he has been making out very well with the Anita, which is being run with N. E. Bowden, a Baltimorean, as the house manager.

Schanze Hailed to Court.

Frederick W. Schanze, proprietor of Schanze's theatre, Pennsylvania and North avenues, as well as a drug store on the same corner, was given a hearing before Justice Brendel in the Northwestern Police Court on a complaint of the Child Labor Bureau on a charge of violating the child labor law of Maryland. It was shown that the two boys in question merely hung about the store to make money by acting as messengers, which they invested in Thrift Stamps. The case was dismissed.

Exhibitors' League to Hold Picnic.

The Maryland Exhibitors' League is now busily making preparations for the holding of a lively picnic on August 10 for all the moving picture fans in the Monumental City who care to attend. Frank A. Hornig, president, and Louis A. DeHoff, secretary of the league, will make a trip to New York to arrange for the appearance at the picnic of about 25 film stars who are to be their guests for the occasion.

The affair is to be held at Monumental Park, and, according to the arrangements now under way, the affair is to be informal. Many interesting features in the way of athletic games and old fashioned sports are being planned for the occasion. Dinner will be served in the park. It will be an all day affair. The guests for the occasion will be entertained in a true Maryland fashion by the members of the league.

Activities in Texas Film Circles Last Week

Business Booming in Galveston—E. H. Hulsey Entertains Patriotic Societies at His Old Mill Theatre—Dallas Ordinance Requiring Metal Booths for Projection Machines May Be Amended—Other Interesting Items.

By Phil Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Tex.

Business Excellent in Galveston.

DALLAS.—The moving picture business is booming at Galveston, Tex., with the construction of shipyards and the use of the Gulf port as a station for United States marines and units of the United States Navy and naval air service.

Business had fallen off there until the Government war activities commenced, according to the report of George Bell of the Bell Enterprises, controlling five Galveston theatres, who visited Dallas during the last week in July. Lack of customary excursion rates on the railroads was the cause of the temporary summer decline in the Galveston theatre attendance.

Hulsey Entertains Patriotic Bodies.

Two Dallas patriotic societies, the Dallas Home Guard and the Anti-Yellow Dog Clubs, were guests of local newspapers and E. H. Hulsey of the Old Mill theatre to "Pershing's Crusaders," which is the month-end feature at the theatre mentioned.

The Dallas Home Guard, five hundred strong, went to the Old Mill and cheered the patriotic picture to the echo.

The Anti-Yellow Dog Clubs are composed of Dallas youngsters who are enlisted to run down slackers and spreaders of German propaganda. The organization was modeled after a story carried in the Saturday Evening Post, and now the Dallas clubs have a membership of several hundred enthusiastic boys.

The youngsters staged a big street parade carrying patriotic banners and ended up at the doors of the Old Mill theater for a special matinee performance which they enjoyed vastly. The Old Mill was decorated with the national colors and the flags of the allied nations for the occasion.

A novel feature was introduced by Manager Herschel Stewart in securing phonographs from the Columbia company and having General Pershing's address to America rendered before each performance. The stunt was productive of much patriotic enthusiasm.

Sol Davis Back from El Paso.

Sol Davis, assistant salesmanager of the General, is back from El Paso, where he went with John A. Staveson, personal representative of W. W. Hodkinson, of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, to look over conditions in the border country and in New Mexico.

Mr. Davis reports that owing to troop movements from border cities, and El Paso in particular, that business has fallen off. The exhibitors say, however, that such a condition will only be temporary as more soldiers are expected for training. El Paso is out for a cantonment which will increase the already large command stationed there.

Authorities Examining Projectors.

Dallas city commissioners, in conjunction with the chief of the fire department and the fire marshal, have been interesting themselves during the past few day in various types of motion picture projecting machines.

In particular they have been investigating the reliability of various machines whose agents claim that they may be safely used in churches, auditoriums, etc., without a fireproof booth. At present every motion picture machine here must be enclosed in a metal booth, but it is possible that this ordinance will be amended and made less drastic.

Hulsey Returns from New York Meeting.

Returning from the First National Exhibitors directors' meeting in New York, E. H. Hulsey brings back some gratifying news regarding coming releases to First National franchise holders in Texas. In particular is he enthusiastic over the fighting scenes in "Italy's Flaming Front."

Swayne Building 1,000 Seat House.

Mack Swayne of Ada, Oklahoma, proprietor of the Liberty theatre, vaudeville and pictures, in that city, has started to build a new theatre for pictures only. The new house will have a seating capacity of over 1,000.

General Film Offices to Move.

"Smiling" Jimmy Kelly of the General is busy with plans for the establishment of new offices for the General Film Company here. He will move from his quarters at 2017 Commerce street to a two-story building at 1924-26 Main street in the near future and expects a formal opening about August 15. The new General offices will be one of the most elaborate and handsome film exchange quarters in the Southwest.

Follows Policy of New York Rivoli.

The Hippodrome theatre of Dallas is the first of the larger moving picture play houses here to adopt a short-reel program. The management is copying the Rivoli theatre of New York City, and during the last week of July presented the same bill as shown at that play house during the last week in June. The short-reel stuff while rather a novelty to Dallas picture fans is proving popular. The opening program was "Sisters of the Golden Circle," an O. Henry picture; "Faro Nell's Return," a Wolfville picture, and "The Preacher's Son," a Judge Brown story.

Keyes Joins Aviation Corps.

A. A. Keyes, proprietor of the Texas theatre, Quanah, has joined the colors and is now a flying cadet at Love Aviation Field at Dallas. E. Rodriguez, whom he left as manager of his theatre, was here to see him a few days ago.

Texas Exhibitors Visiting Dallas.

Among Texas moving picture exhibitors visiting Dallas during the last week in July were Jake Abrams, Crown theatre, Houston; W. F. Sonneman, Rex and Nickel theatres, Waco; M. L. Levine, Ideal theatre, Corsicana; F. G. Alexander, Elks theatre, Marshall; William Phipps, Monogram theatre, Childress; Joe Davenport, Waxahachie Amusement Co., Waxahachie; R. V. Barnes, Mission theatre, Sulphur Springs; Sam Nastos, Liberty, San Angelo.

Hodkinson Plan Going Big.

James Kelly, of the General Film Company, reports a wonderful response of Texas moving picture exhibitors to the Hodkinson co-partnership plan offer. He says that 75 per cent. of the Texas exhibitors will avail themselves of the offer before the end of the summer season. Among those already signing up are J. J. Hegman, Austin; Hugo Plath, Temple; W. R. Fairman, Bryan; J. C. Fanning, Mineral Wells; J. F. Green, Cleburne; Puers and Belton, Jacksonville; D. F. Prall, Longview; F. A. Alexander, Marshall; W. J. Lytle, San Antonio; J. B. Wilson, Sherman; N. Lewis, Tyler; R. C. Moore, Vernon; J. A. Contery, Weatherford; W. J. Johnson, Wichita Falls; J. Hamilton, El Paso; L. M. Hervey, El Paso; S. Turk, El Paso; D. C. Howell, Coleman.

During the last week in July five Dallas theatres were showing Hodkinson pictures simultaneously. They were the Queen, Bluebird, Hippodrome, Rex and Colonial. Eight Dallas theatres have signed for Hodkinson service.

Form Committee to Raise Fund for Soldiers

Washington Exchange Managers' Association to Supply Fighters with Tobacco and Other Luxuries—To Purchase Player-Piano for Y. M. C. A. Hut—Would Instruct Disabled Veterans in Examining and Rewinding Films.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Bldg., Washington, D. C.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Oscar A. Morgan, manager of the local Famous Players exchange, is chairman, and Sidney E. Kent, Abe Dresner, and E. C. Wales are members of a committee of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association formed to raise a fund to be used for the benefit of soldiers in Washington. One of the first things to be accomplished will be the purchase of a player-piano for the Y. M. C. A. hut on Pennsylvania avenue near Seventh street, Northwest.

This war service committee has had worked out for it a most ambitious program. One of the big things will be the sending out to men in the service the trade journals published in the interest of the motion picture industry. It is also contemplated furnishing the film-men soldiers with tobacco and other luxuries and comforts. The committee was directed to get in touch with the commandant of the Walter Reed General (Army) Hospital and advise him that instruction would be given to disabled veterans in examining and rewinding films. The managers feel that there are many men who could do this work, and they are willing to pay appropriate wages. At present they are depending upon girls, and their work at times is not altogether satisfactory. They would be willing to increase the wages paid for this class of work if men are available.

At the meeting of the association there was some little discussion of the practice in vogue among the exchanges of taking employees one from the other. Sidney E. Kent, of Triangle, chairman, and Herbert M. Osborn, of Pathe, and Robert Smeltzer of World Film, are to draw up some sort of an agreement under the terms of which this practice will cease. It is not the intention of the managers to stand in the way of their employees bettering their condition, but hereafter when an opportunity arises, before a committee exchange accepts the service of such an employee, the exchange by which he or she was previously employed is to be notified and given an opportunity to meet any advance in wages or better conditions of employment that may be offered.

The managers are very much perturbed over the continued activities of Fire Marshal Nicholson, who is insisting upon the observance of some of the rules that he laid down some months ago. These regulations require that everything in the inspection room must be of metal. It is almost impossible to get articles of steel due to the Government restrictions on that metal. He also demands that no inspector handle more than one show at a time, and that all films be kept boxed.

Mr. Nicholson, with persistent zeal, has kept the exchangemen stirred up to the limit for many months. The managers feel that he should shelve his rules and regulations until after the war, for just now they have all they can do to handle their work with the few men that are left to them under the draft and fight or work orders. At any rate, the film men are going to try to get a further delay of the regulations.

Select Exchange Doings.

Ed. McShane, who formerly traveled through Virginia and North Carolina for Paramount-Artcraft, has again associated himself with Vivian Whitaker, and will hereafter represent Select Pictures in Virginia. Carl Sonin, formerly bookkeeper at the exchange, has gone on the road, and will cover Baltimore and Western Maryland.

W. L. Parker, formerly assistant manager of the exchange, has donned a suit of Uncle Sammy's clothes, and is now being drilled in the use of rifle and bayonet at Camp Meade. William F. Ballenger, formerly a salesman at the exchange, has been at Camp Meade for some time, and likes military life a whole lot better than juggling with films. Hugh Berman, formerly booker for Select, is learning to be a birdman at one of the San Antonio, Texas, fields. James U. McCormick replaces Mr. Parker as assistant manager. He comes from the Government service, re-entering civil employment after being connected with the Government for eighteen years.

Enhance Interest in Gaumont Serial.

Interest in this territory in the Gaumont serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," is being stimulated by Sidney B. Lust, who is handling the films, by an offer of ten dollars to the person in each town in which the film is shown offering the best solution following the showing of the second episode.

Notes Opens Criterion Theatre.

Marcus Notes has recently opened his new Criterion theatre at Ninth and D streets, Northwest. The building which houses this theatre was formerly a business property, and was remodeled at considerable expense by the present occupant. It has a seating capacity of 500, and is equipped with a balcony reached from each side of the auditorium. The balcony is 28 feet wide, and each row contains 12 seats. It is decorated in buff and blue.

The length of throw to the 12 by 16 foot screen is 115 feet. The booth equipment is modern, with Model S Simplex machines, motor rewind and other electrical equipment. The entrance to the theatre is decorated with black Italian marble. The walls have been tinted a light blue, harmonizing with the white ceiling and the mahogany finished doors.

Crandall in New Offices.

Harry M. Crandall is now located in his new offices in the Metropolitan Theatre building on F street, near Tenth street, having just moved from his cramped quarters in the house at Ninth and E streets Northwest. The interior of the Metropolitan Theatre building is still far from completion, for work upon it has been badly hampered by reason of material and labor shortages and railroad embargoes. However, Mr. Crandall hopes to be able to have a formal opening on October 1.

The new offices are spacious and well equipped. The desks and office furniture are all in mahogany. Private rooms have been provided also for Joseph P. Morgan, Mr. Crandall's associate in many activities, and George Crouch, who is in charge of the accounting department of the enterprises. Mr. Morgan is general manager and booker. It is announced that Arthur Robb, now manager of the Knickerbocker, will be transferred as manager to the new Metropolitan, and an office has been set aside for him also.

Tennessee Trade Letter

By J. L. Ray, Nashville Banner, Nashville, Tenn.

Exhibitor Joins Colors.

NASHVILLE.—Roy C. Shelton, formerly manager of the Nashville Strand, and later a director with the William Fox Company at one of its Eastern studios, has enlisted under the stars and stripes, and left July 29 for the National Army cantonment at Camp Colt, Gettysburg, Pa.

Although he was in class four of the draft, Mr. Shelton appeared before his local board and waived his deferred classification for a class one berth in order that he might enter training for overseas duty. He will enter the tank corps at Camp Colt. Friends in Nashville gave him a rousing send-off, with best wishes for his safe return.

Nashville Theatre Aids in War Work.

A box has been placed in the lobby of the Fifth Avenue theatre for the purpose of receiving contributions to the Commercial Club's wool fund, which will be used in securing materials for the knitting of socks and sweaters for soldiers and sailors of Nashville and Davidson County.

The Fifth Avenue has placed a well lighted showcase in the lobby with samples of the completed work, which acts as a stimulus to the "recruiting."

Four-Minute-Men Have Own Slides.

In order to prevent confusion and as a means of quick identification a policy of four-minute men carrying their own screen slide with them has been adopted in Nashville. Tony Sudekum, president of the Crescent Amusement Company, has charge of the distribution of these slides, and has requested that four-minute men present their slides to the operator of the house where they are to speak before going on the stage in order that their names may be flashed on the screen. After the show the men call back at the operating booth and secure the return of the slides for use at the next house at which they appear.

New House at Pulaski.

The People's theatre formally opened its doors to the public at Pulaski, Tenn., a few days ago, the opening performance being "The Beast of Berlin." This house was formerly the old Pulaski opera house, and has been made over to conform with the requirements of an up-to-date moving picture house.

Philadelphia News Letter

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Buhler Chairman of Loan Committee.

PHILADELPHIA.—Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley and the Central Market Street Company's theatres, has had the position of chairman of the Fourth Liberty Loan Committee conferred upon him, for the Third Federal Reserve District. Mr. Buhler will co-operate with the motion picture theatres and the film exchanges around Philadelphia with a view to making the next Liberty Loan drive a huge success.

Madden Given Farewell Dinner.

A farewell dinner was tendered last Friday night to Bob Madden, formerly manager of the Savoy theatre, who will leave for Camp Meade in the near future. Jim Martin, manager of the beautiful Princess theatre, which has become an exceedingly popular photoplay resort under his careful management during the past six months, is reported to have arranged this pleasant little party for Bob.

Berger Joins Uncle Sam's Army.

R. Berger, manager of the Kleine System, has left the city to join Uncle Sam's army. Mr. Berger only arrived from the Washington branch a short time ago, and it was due to his previous successes that he was transferred to take charge of the Philadelphia office.

Griffith Film Rebooked by Garrick.

D. W. Griffith's picture, "Hearts of the World," which enjoyed such renowned success a few months ago at the Garrick theatre, will again come to that house for an indefinite stay, beginning on Monday, August 12.

"America's Answer" at the Forrest.

S. F. Nixon announces that on Monday, August 12, at the Forrest theatre, the United States Government will present through its Committee on Public Information, Division of Films, the second official American War film, "America's Answer." This feature film in eight reels will be the successor to "Pershing's Crusaders."

"A WOMAN'S FOOL"

Universal Special Features Harry Carey in Owen Wister Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A STORY of western type if it is well produced is pleasing to the majority of people. "A Woman's Fool," the Universal five-part adaptation of the Owen Wister story, "Lin McLean," has its good points and its bad points, the chief among the latter being a lack of good construction. Harry Carey is the featured member of the cast and plays attractively in the title role. Mollie Malone is mentioned as the feminine lead, but is not permitted to enter the picture until the fourth reel, which seems rather an oversight on the part of the director. Betty Schade, playing what might be termed the second feminine lead, has the screen almost from the beginning. Others of the cast are M. K. Wilson, Ed Jones, Vester Pegg, William Carroll and Roy Clark.

The story concerns Lin McLean, a product of the west, who one day collected what was coming to him from the boss and started off for Denver to look around. Before he arrived at Denver, however, he met and fell in love with Katy, a "biscuit shooter," who afterward is discovered to have a husband living and a little son, deserted by both father and mother. In Denver Lin comes across the child and also falls in love again with a good and beautiful girl. The first woman, following him, breaks in on the family party, causes the young wife to desert, and finally tries to poison herself. The close of the picture finds Lin happy with his wife and the child of the other woman. The picture contains some good comedy touches.

"OH! WHAT A DAY"

Jester Issues a New Twede Dan Comedy Built for Laughing Purposes Only.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

DON MARQUIS wrote a full column about a man who ran his Ford through the length of Kansas on stomach bitters. Twede Dan shows how a man may run a regular automobile many miles on straight booze, when gasoline is more expensive than the tangle-foot.

"Oh! What a Day" was only a comedy dream, but patrons of Jester comedies will get the full effect of Twede Dan and Babette's mirth-provoking antics the dream notwithstanding and nevertheless. The fun is divided into two sections, as the comedy is divided into reels. In the early scenes Twede Dan and his "goil" are shown motoring toward the seaside, and the last half of the comedy pictures the fun they have when they get to the bathing beach.

The idea of a "drunken" automobile is well conveyed and there are no end of funny outcomes of the motor's "jag." At the seaside the comedy element is engendered by chases and "clinches" in the bath-houses and in the plunge. While it may seem impossible to get new comedy out of motoring or bathing intervals Twede Dan has done just this with fine effect. "Oh! What a Day" is a whole lot funnier than a majority of the screen comedies extant and will provoke gales of laughter wherever it may be shown.

"ALL MAN"

Blue Ribbon Vitagraph Number Offers Curious Study of Criminality.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Blue Ribbon subject features Harry Morey in the role of John Olsen, a workman in whose veins the blood of the Vikings is said to flow. The story was written by Donn Byrne and directed by Paul Scardon.

This is chiefly interesting as a study of criminality, and there is almost too much of this for the average observer, we fear. The leading character, John Olsen, scarcely comes up to the mark as a hero in any sense of the word; his course under temptation from the first reveals nothing but weakness. He once tries to reform, it is true, but at the next breath of threatening trouble he starts in to commit another crime. The character never arouses full sympathy and, in spite of the title, the hero exhibits pitiful weakness and not strength. But the fault is with the plot itself rather than with the character.

Olsen at first has a responsible position in an iron foundry, but is tempted by a socialistic agitator to help blow up the safe. The job is done, but Olsen's leg is broken by the fall of the safe door, and he is taken to the home of Belle Foliot, a woman crook. By the time he recovers, they are in love. They plan several thefts together and Olsen is apprehended and sent up for five years. On his release he decides to reform, but as Belle will not do so, he marries a country girl and takes up farming. The detective who sent him up lets out his secret. His wife deserts him and he decides to revenge himself on the entire community by destroying the bank's papers. The detective and Belle, who has appeared on the scene, save him from this. Olson then decides to get a divorce and it is intimated that he and Belle will start life anew.

Betty Blythe, as Belle, has the stronger part of the two, as her villainy is consistent until the very close, and one is able to feel that her reform will be genuine.

"DOING THEIR BIT"

The Lee Kiddies Have Responsible Roles in Spy-Plot Full of Thrills.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

DIRECTOR KENEAN BUEL is understood to have written "Doing Their Bit" especially for Fox's "Baby Grands." Such being the case we are led to believe that the author-director considered that such inconsistencies as appear during the progress of the spy-plot presentation would be overlooked because of the youthfulness of the little ones who undertake many exceedingly mature accomplishments. So be it, then, and, such being the case, "Doing Their Bit" will entirely please and satisfy the host of theatregoers that have come to admire these clever children because of their individual and combined artistry.

The story starts in Ireland and finishes off in New York, where the kiddies have come to make their home with a rich uncle who is becoming daily richer through the manufacture of munitions. Two agents of Hun "kultur" are on the ship that bring the little ones here, and Jane is the one to identify the spy who signals to U-boats. The German diplomats make their way into society, play upon the weaknesses of the munition manufacturer's son, and are caught in the act of stealing the design of an essential piece of machinery by the "Baby Grands."

In the plot are touches of patriotic color drawn through the contrast in the action of two "society" chaps who shirk volunteering, while a rugged Irish youth hurries to join the army at the outbreak of war. "Society" gets a bad "showing up" during the progress of the story, and in the end ordinary mortals have all the best of the situation. The story is carried forward with even measures of "suspense," comedy and "thrills," and should be entirely satisfying to audiences that like melodrama even to the extreme of inconsistencies in construction and development.

"HER HUSBAND'S HONOR."

Mutual Features Edna Goodrich in Excellent Drama by Mabel Heikes Justice.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

IF all the stories presented for screen dramatization were as full of interesting incident and consistent action as "Her Husband's Honor," by Mabel Heikes Justice, the path of the producer would be easy. Edna Goodrich plays the feminine lead with ease and charm, and David Powel' playing opposite her, depicts well the role allotted to him. Thomas Tommamato gets a fine opportunity to show what he can do, and takes advantage of it. The role of Davenport, the crooked contractor, is well played, and also that of his wife by Barabara Allen. The production was ably directed by Burton King.

The story tells of the signing of certain vouchers by the secretary of a large building contractor as ordered by his employer, and of his discovering afterward that he has been framed up and is liable to a term in prison for the non-payment of a million dollars or more. From here on the fate of the young man hangs on the signing of a big contract for plans for certain Japanese public buildings. When the signature of the Japanese representative is about to be placed on the contract a point of variance is discovered, and the final decision is postponed. The secretary's wife, realizing her husband's danger, obtains possession of the specifications and uses her powers of fascination, at the same time pleading the need of cash, and sells them to the Japanese representative, thus saving her husband and also the firm of Davenport.

"ALIAS MARY BROWN"

Triangle Offering Features Pauline Starke in Crook Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

WHILE Pauline Starke appears as Betty, the girl heroine of this story, the principal events really centre more about Dick Browning, the hero impersonated by Carson Furgesson. The plight of the hero at the beginning is a very interesting one, but in his later career as a full-fledged thief seeking revenge upon his father's enemies the sympathy of the observer is not always retained.

Revenge is a hard motive to saddle upon a hero, because in yielding to the desire for it he immediately loses something of his heroic qualities. In this story Dick's father, before his death, is said to have been robbed by three wealthy men, and the shock of this brings on his mother's death. Dick appeals to the rich men for funds just prior to his mother's death, but when this is refused he speedily falls in with a band of crooks and robs each of the men in turn. He accomplishes this in girl's attire under the name of Mary Brown, but he does not make up particularly well in the feminine role, and this rather adds to the unconvincing character of the story.

The offering is one that will get over with almost any audience, but is not notable for any special novelty of presentation or elevation of thought. Even while the hero reforms at the close and returns the stolen goods the feeling remains that his course was not justified.

The story was written by E. Magnus Ingleton, and directed by H. D'Elba. Others in the cast are Walter Belasco, Dick Rosson, A. N. Millett, Eugene Burr, Alberta Lee, F. Thompson, and Sidney De Gray.

"THE PRICE OF APPLAUSE"

Triangle Number Features Jack Livingston in Absorbing Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS is one of the most interesting war pictures recently offered. It follows the fortunes of a Greenwich Village poet whose mother was a German, and who had a strenuous time learning to be a good American. The photoplay, adapted by Doris Schroeder from a story in the Saturday Evening Post by Nina Wilcox Putnam and Norman Jacobson, turns up some valuable character work, and moreover depicts some soul struggles and peculiar mental slants that have had their parallels in real life.

Jack Livingston makes a flesh and blood character out of Karl Le Barron, the Greenwich Village poet who lived upon applause as an orchid subsists upon air. At the beginning of the war, and most of the way through it, his sympathies were with Germany. But applause was to be obtained by siding with America so he makes a bluff that he will go to France for this country. His friend, Marcarson, takes him up, and offers to go along. Marcarson even insists, and Karl finally goes, though he is a coward at heart and really does not want to fight.

There are some weird and realistic scenes on the battlefield at night. The Stalking Karl exchanges identification tags with a dead German, and assumes the latter's helmet. He then allows himself to be taken as a German prisoner. Marcarson, thinking Karl dead, has his poems published and they make a sensation coupled with the announcement that the author died a hero. Karl later sees a volume of his own poems, and desires more than anything in the world to come to life again in the estimation of the world and claim the applause due him. It can be seen that the story is a very strong one, and the climax itself is satisfying.

Claire Anderson plays the feminine role and Joe King that of Marcarson, while Walt Whitman appears as Professor Arnold.

The subject is altogether unusual and well presented. It was directed by Thomas N. Heffron, and the night photography in particular by C. H. Wales is good.

"SPRINGTIME A LA CARTE"

Delightful Little O. Henry Story Produced by Broadway Star Feature Company.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

IT IS reasonably certain that we may expect a bright surprise and some intelligent subtitles in the O. Henry comedies, unless the director has interpolation fever. The director's pulse is normal, however, in "Springtime a la Carte," and we are permitted to enjoy a visualization in accord with the mood of the story. It is simple enough to contain an element of unsought pathos, that which is so powerfully brought out in the opera "Madame Butterfly," the patient endurance of a woman's aching heart while awaiting the return of a loved one who may never come.

She is a stenographer on vacation in "dandelion" time when she meets, loves and is loved, but they both must work, so they agree to wait until next dandelion time—a whole year—before meeting again at the same place. She returns to the city, and he goes "South." The year almost elapses and finds the two out of communication for no good reason. The girl is poorer, but nothing prevented her giving the new address. The story loses force from lack of clear explanation of how two loving hearts should fail in this respect. It is not a serious loss, however, and is forgiven at the end.

The hero returns to the city and chances upon a restaurant whose menu cards are being typed by the unhappy heroine. He glances at one of them, learns her address, rushes up to her room and declares on the spot she must become his wife.

It develops that the young typist had a crooked "w" on her machine and that, in writing of a dish served with dandelions, she had typed in "Dear Walter" instead.

This simple little story is so well told and Agnes Ayers is so appealing as the steno-heroine, that the audience which watched the visualization at the Rivoli applauded with enthusiasm.

"FRIEND HUSBAND"

Goldwyn Presents Madge Kennedy in a Comedy by Lois Zellner.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

LET there be no doubt that Madge Kennedy is an attractive girl and a charming comedienne. She is both of these in the amateurish production, "Friend Husband," so replete with inconsistencies that there is hardly space to name them, but it is brightened by humorous subtitles, and these, together with good types and the little artiste herself make the comedy mildly interesting.

The materials of the story are almost exactly those used in other plays, "just suited" to Miss Kennedy, in the words of those who do the selecting. In nearly all of these a wealthy and somewhat irresponsible young lady decides to do the unconventional in a very sweet and ladylike manner. Of course she is bound to have mishaps, particularly with burglars, and we know in advance that a manly hero of the strictly good and impossible type will rescue her unsullied by the world, not a spot on her dainty raiment.

In this case the stock situation of an eccentric will by a rich uncle, the delight of all amateurs, is used. In order to obtain her property, Miss Kennedy must marry a man approved by an elderly attorney. How provoking! She had just decided not to marry—ever! However, she decides to pay a nice young man five or ten thousand to help her out of the difficulty, be a husband in name only, and he is carefully provided in advance. A noble young man leaves his wealthy father and a growing business to study law under a country practitioner, who happens to be the same one who decides on the future husband. He decides without hesitation; the marriage is performed; the husband abducts his wife, carrying her to a completely equipped and very sequestered and recently deserted house on an island which has become the secret hiding place of burglars. Struggle, husband shot in the arm that he immediately after uses freely, and all's well that ends in an embrace.

"A PAIR OF CUPIDS"

Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne Are Featured in an Entertaining Comedy.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

ADMIRERS of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne will be pleased with "A Pair of Cupids," their latest offering, released by Metro in five reels on July 29. It is a thoroughly enjoyable comedy with many laughable situations, brought about by the complications ensuing when each of the characters unexpectedly finds a baby on the doorstep.

Henry Burgess desires that his wealthy nephew, Peter, marry his ward, Virginia; but Virginia says she does not want a living cash register, and Peter is equally positive that an animated doll does not appeal to him. Henry then has an inspiration. He rents twins from his laundrywoman and has one placed on Virginia's doorstep, the other one on Peter's front porch. Then things begin to happen. The plot thickens when, at the expiration of the time for which the children were rented, their father has two crooks to kidnap them, so as to get the bond which was put up to cover their safe return. Peter, thinking something is wrong, follows the father and chastises the crooks. The scheme proves to be a huge success, and Henry Burgess then tells the happy young couple that the utilization of the two babies as "a pair of cupids" was his idea.

The two stars, as well as the remainder of the cast, give excellent performances of their respective roles, particularly Bushman, whose light comedy work appears to improve with each successive production of this type. Jessie Stevens, in the humorous situations, also proves to be a valuable assistant as Bridget McGroghan, the mother of the twins.

The settings and photography are entirely satisfactory, and the picture was well directed by Charles J. Brabin, the laughable scenes where Bushman and his valet first discover the baby and seek by various means to amuse him being especially good. Edgar Norton appears as the valet, Charles Sutton as Henry Burgess, Gerald Griffin as the father of the twins, Louis Wolheim as one of the crooks, and John and Elwell Judge as the twins themselves.

"WINNING GRANDMA"

Baby Marie Osborné Star in Pathe Release That Makes Heavy Draft Upon Credulity.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

THAT there is a severe tax on effort to secure scenarios in which to star even so clever a child as Baby Marie Osborne is obvious in the presentation of "Winning Grandma." Here is a play in which it remains for the child to be the only consistently natural of all the cast. Grandma is a most inhuman old lady, rich in worldly goods and blessed with two sons who have married just as nice girls, judging from appearance, as moving pictures ever presented as complications to a plot.

There are two scheming chaps who essay the task of robbing grandma while her sons manage her estate. So inhuman is the old lady that she ousts one son from the job of general manager to install the other boy in the same position. Truth is, nobody on earth could live within speaking distance of grandma without committing murder. For no reason on earth the mother of Baby Marie takes a questionable motor ride with one of the schemers, goes with him into a house she had never visited before—and then something happens.

The husband is tipped off by the other schemer and rushes into the room where his wife is being manhandled by the other crafty villain. There is an impending divorce, while the silly wife goes to live with the other brother. Baby Marie is kidnapped by her mother, the baby's father overhears the two schemers in a plot to walk off with grandma's estate—and rushes away to fold his wife in fond embrace, after receiving the necessary forgiveness.

Baby Marie Osborne has little of importance to do with the actual winning of grandma—but she is the center of several scenes of childish animation and deserves a much better chance than this story gives to her. The necessity of making five reels out of very little material injures the completed product very materially.

"MERELY PLAYERS"

World Photoplay Deals Entertainingly with Society and the Stage.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

LULU CASE RUSSELL is the author of "Merely Players," a five-part World photoplay directed by Oscar Apfel and featuring Kitty Gordon. Irving Cummings, George McQuarrie, Johnny Hines and Muriel Ostriche are the principal members of the supporting company. The story is light but inconsistent to its class and will entertain the large number of persons who are interested in the stage. It also throws more or less light on the professional dramatic critic and the consequences of telling the truth about an aspiring young woman's first attempt at acting. In this case the debut is an absolute failure and the notices in the morning papers drive the disappointed girl to turn on the gas and try to escape from her heartaehe by the suicide route. The tragedy is averted just in time, and the critic is given an object lesson in the danger of not side-stepping when reviewing the efforts of well-meaning, but misguided, attempts to act. In spite of the warning dramatic critics and screen reviewers will probably keep on in their heartless but necessary task of telling the truth—as they understand it.

"Merely Players" has a dramatic foundation that is built upon the infatuation of Hollis Foster, a married man, for Nadine Trent, a society lady who is fond of acting in amateur theatricals and who turns her talent to account when Foster's attentions become too pronounced. There are several side-issues to the story that are none too well blended, and Director Oscar Apfel has worked a lot of familiar "business" into the comedy scenes.

The acting is generally satisfactory; Kitty Gordon as Nadine Trent has a part adapted to her personality and method and dresses with her usual lavishness. The supporting company, which also includes Pinna Nesbit, Florence Coventry and Dore Davidson, make the most of their several characters.

"THE EYES OF JULIA DEEP"

Mary Miles Minter is Charming in Pleasant Drama That Finishes Off with Lively Comedy.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

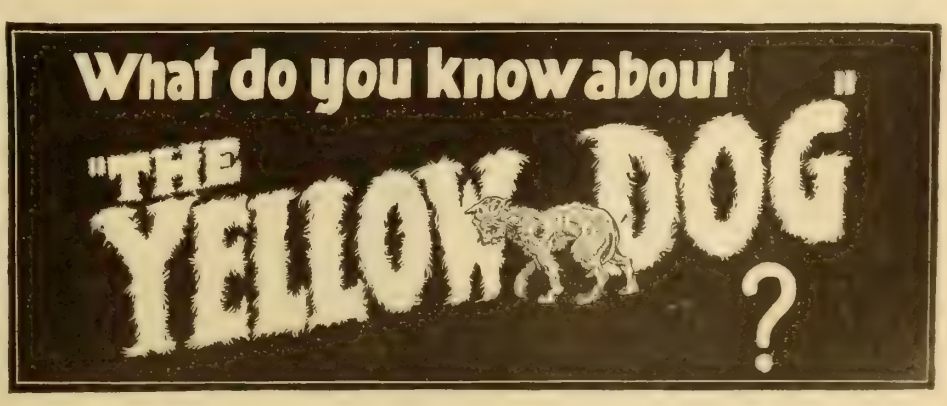
THREE reels of engaging drama furnish the basis of two reels of lively comedy that comprises the feature in which Mary Miles Miles Minter appears to fine advantage. The eyes of Miss Minter play a large part in "The Eyes of Julia Deep," and we have two convincing close-ups in proof that Julia had "some" eyes.

Miss Minter is refreshingly natural and artistic in her faithful impersonation of the star role. She embodies this typist's ideas of what motion picture actresses may best represent—youthful grace and charm, blessed with an intelligent face, rich in expression and the dominating ability to go along about her business of acting for motion pictures just like a regular human being who is both clever and pretty.

It takes three acts to tell the story of the drama, and to get things into five-reel shape there is supplied two rather superfluous reels of comedy that stretches credulity without becoming entirely inconsistent. In the comedy reels there are flashes of broad farce that is likely to garner laughter as the tribute of most moving picture audiences.

"The Eyes of Julia" rates along at lively pace in the early sections, and to the praise of whoever is responsible Miss Minter gets her spiritual and physical self through the completed entertainment without falling victim to any assault squads or avenging vampires. The entire process of presenting "The Eyes of Julia" leaves a clean and wholesome memory of a pleasing entertainment with Miss Minter's personal charm the chief of many delights.

Allen Forrest as Miss Minter's leading man played a fine and manly part in he-man fashion, despite his extra allowance of good looks. Lottie Driscoll was particularly effective in the comedy section, and George Periolat was entirely adequate to the requirements.



Comments

General Film Company.

MAMMON AND THE ARCHER.—This interesting O. Henry picture in two reels shows how wealth ingeniously applied proves a valuable aid to cupid in promoting a love affair. Edward Earle and Agnes Ayres are the featured players. Reviewed at length in our last issue.

Christie Film Corporation.

THIS WAY OUT (Christie).—A rather amusing comedy featuring Ethel Lynne and Bobby Vernon. The story treats of the result of a young wife's mistake in allowing her mother to come to settle in her home immediately after she is married.

The husband, disagreeing with his wife, resorts to extreme measures to 'cause his mother-in-law to vacate.

Fox Film Corporation.

DOING THEIR BIT, Aug. 4.—The Lee Kiddies put it all over a couple of German spies during an enjoyable picture that starts its story in Ireland and ends in America where two little waifs find happiness, and rich relatives. The children are called upon to perform some very mature and responsible actions in forwarding the plot and do their work well. "The Baby Grands" are clever kids, who need only proper scenarios to give play to their manifold talents. "Doing Their Bit" will please a majority of screen devotees.

THE SEVENTY-FIVE MILE GUN (Fox).—Mutt and Jeff cartoon of timely interest, showing how the comic characters connived to put out of commission the big gun that Huns have been using to kill Parisian babies at long distance. The idea is ingeniously worked out, with a connected story. In the end the whole German army is "frustrated" by cheese and beer. This is one of the best of Mutt and Jeff comedies thus far shown.

THE BURGLAR ALARM (Fox).—Mutt and Jeff comedy, principally employing scenes in police court where Jeff is on trial for knocking an Italian chimney-sweep so bow-legged that he cannot continue his business. The judge eventually releases the prisoner and fines the owner of the house where all the trouble started $10,000. When the judge himself is shown to be the landlord he sends everybody to prison, on a charged decision, for life. The customary incidents in a comedy court room are called upon to provide the fun. Very good indeed.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

ALL MAN (Vitagraph), Aug. 5.—A five-reel Blue Ribbon subject, written by Donn Byrne and directed by Paul Scardon. This features Harry Morey and Betty Blythe as two crooks. The characterizations are interesting, but the plot rather disjointed. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE PATH OF THRILLS (Vitagraph).—Chapter V of "A Fight for Millions." This witnesses the safe landing of Jean after her parachute jump from the cliff into the branches of a tree. She is later carried off by Lawless and Snaky, but they are forced to leave her, owing to close pursuit. The riding scenes in this number are very fine. Lawless later steals the bible containing the proofs of Jean's birth, and the scene changes to a mountain cabin in which he is hiding.

Goldwyn Pictures Corporation.

BACK TO THE WOODS (Goldwyn), July 28.—A five-part Mabel Normand production in which she herself does excellent work, but which provides her an insufficient vehicle. A full review of the picture was published in last week's issue.

Jester Comedy Company.

OH! WHAT A DAY (Jester Comedy).—Twede Dan and Babette are seen in an intensely amusing comedy, employing some "new stuff" in motoring and bathhouse divertisements for film audiences. This Jester comedy is one of the best of the newer style of entertainments in its class and should please all devotees of screen comedies.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

A SUCCESSFUL ADVENTURE, July 15.—The entertainment value of this production, which is in five reels, is due to the delightful personality of the star, May Allison, rather than to the story, which lacks consistency. The photography is excellent, there are several pretty scenes, and good character work on the part of several members of the cast. Reviewed at length in our last issue.

Miscellaneous.

THE BORDER LEGION (T. Hayes Hunter).—A five part adaptation of Zane Grey's novel of the same name featuring Blanche Bates. The talented star is not favored by the camera, and while the story, in which Hobart Bosworth plays the principal male role, is stirring in quality, the feminine element has not been satisfactorily presented. The production generally speaking will be liked. A full review was published in last week's issue.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SCREEN TELEGRAM No. 43.—To a large extent this issue is composed of interesting scenes from "over there," including American artillery moving up to the battle front, the sending up of an observation balloon, ambulance and engineering corps in action. Novel use of placer mining methods for recovery of lead fired by soldiers in training camps for target practice, and several other timely subjects are pictured.

SCREEN TELEGRAM No. 44.—Several scenes of the Marines in training at Paris Island, S. C., are shown. There is an unusual diversity of subjects in this issue, including portable dental office for treating soldiers, Vassar students training to be nurses, Long Branch horse show, Indian war dance in celebration of Christian feast of St. Anthony, and expert life-saver who has but one arm, launching of another ship to beat the Huns, and California girls in sylvan dances.

A COORIAL ON THE ORONOCO (Outing-Chester).—A full review of this interesting subject was printed in the Motion Picture Educator of our issue of April 13. The trip along the Oronoco river, Venezuela, takes us past rocks of black granite and into the gold regions of El Callao. Further on we come across the Guarato Indians and watch them making hammocks of a fibre obtained from the palm. The Moriche and the Mangrove palms provide industry for the natives.

WHAT WILL FATHER SAY" (Strand).—Cullen Landis and Elinor Field are the principal players in this issue of the Strand comedies. The plot of the story is consistent and amusing. A young couple who married in secret have earned the displeasure of the young man's father. One day he decided to visit them in their new home and receiving word of the proposed visit the newly-weds take advantage of the furnishings of an apartment across the hall which they have been left in charge of for the day. The occupant, returning earlier than she had said, causes a lively skirmish in the replacement of the furniture.

HER HUSBAND'S HONOR (Goodrich), Aug. 4. This five-part production featuring Edna Goodrich is based on an excellent story written by Mabel Heikes Justice. David Powell plays opposite her, doing good work. Others of the cast are Thomas Tommamnato and Barbara Allen. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW, NO. 6 (Pathe), Aug. 4.—A five number, full of important subjects. It shows the British fleet convoying transports; a close-up of a British battleship; King George visiting the admirals; the Prince of Wales in Italy, and an attack on the western front, with tanks in action as well as men.

THE GHOST OF THE RANCHO (Pathe), Aug. 11.—An entertaining five-reel comedy-drama, by Arthur Henry Gooden, featuring Bryant Washburn and Rhea Mitchell. The story is laid in Southern California near the Mexican border and contains a combination of humor and thrills, put together in pleasing style. Reviewed at length in last week's issue.

BRIDE AND GLOOM (Rolin-Pathe), Aug. 18.—A successful comic, featuring Harold Lloyd and Bebe Daniels as a young married couple. Their first experiences after the ceremony on the Pullman car are very laughable. The number is a riot of good fun.

VENEZUELA (Pathe-Post Film), Aug. 18.—This number, descriptive of the interesting South American country, turns up some real novelties in the way of architecture and native life. It is one of the best travel numbers we have seen recently. The manufacture of pottery makes a good closing feature.

FOURTH OF JULY IN FRANCE (Pathe).—Two reels of film showing the splendid manner in which the French Republic celebrated the American Day of Independence. Scenes in an Alsatian village opens the film and comprises the most of the first reel. The second reel is taken up with the parade in Paris in which our boys accompanied by French cavalry and infantry and also prominent French personages, took part. A review will be found elsewhere.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE PRICE OF APPLAUSE (Triangle), Aug. 4.—A strong five-reel subject, adapted by Doris Schroeder from a story by Nina Wilcox Putnam and Norman Jacobson, and directed by Thomas N. Heffron. The character of the hero, a Greenwich Village poet of German sympathies, is very well drawn and the story itself unusual. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

ALIAS MARY BROWN (Triangle), Aug. 4. A five-reel offering, written by E. Magnus Ingleton and directed by H. D'Elba. This features Pauline Starke and Casson Furgesson. The latter appears as a young man who turns thief in order to revenge himself upon the men said to be responsible for the death of his father and mother. The plot is a rather conventional offering of the crook type, not entirely convincing in presentation. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

Universal Film Company.

FOOLS AND FIRES (L-KO), Aug. 7.—A two-reel comic featuring Eddie Barry, Eva Novak and James Donnelly. The latter is chief of the fire department and his daughter is besought by three suitors. The chief's house gets on fire and there are some wild and hilarious moments. This follows along familiar lines, but is full of good comic action and should go well.

THE BRASS BULLET (Universal Special), Aug. 17.—Episode No. 2. After Rosalind jumps from Spring Gilbert's yacht she makes her way to Jack's boat. She forces Jack to take her to Pleasure Island, where Homer Joy and Mrs. Strang come into the story. Joy is plotting to get the inheritance also. A mysterious hand shoots Joy while he is trying to kill Mrs. Strang. The story interest in this is well-contrived and entertaining.

GIVE HER GAS (Lyons-Moran), Aug. 17.—This laughable automobile comedy will appeal to all who have driven or ridden in "flivvers." Lee Moran and his family take Eddie and his wife riding in their new car. There are some fearful and wonderful accidents on the trip, which winds up disastrously. This makes a good subject.

A WOMAN'S FOOL (Universal Special), Aug. 17.—Harry Carey plays an attractive role in this five-part production, which is an adaptation of the Owen Wister story, "Lin McLean." The picture contains considerable comedy of clean quality, but the construction of the production is at fault. A full review will be found elsewhere.

World Pictures Corporation.

THE BELOVED BLACKMAILER (World-Picture), Aug. 12.—A five-reel subject by Harry O. Hoyt, directed by Dell Henderson. Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley play the lovers, in a light comedy type of story, punctuated with numerous laughs. Reviewed in last week's issue.

"IN JUDGMENT OF"

Metro Presents Anna Q. Nilsson and Franklyn Farnum in the Story of One Girl of the Third Generation.

Cast.

Mary Manners.....Anna Q. Nilsson
John O'Neil.....Franklyn Farnum
Judge Brainard.....Herbert Standing
Bob Brainard.....Edward Alexander
Mrs. Manners.....Lydia Knott
Andrew Vail.....Harry Northrup
Mr. Manners.....Spottiswoode Aitken
Mrs. Brainard.....Katherine Griffith

Directed by Wills S. Davis.

The Story: Mary, a debutante, possesses the power of mind reading. One day, at a lonely spot in the country, she is attacked by a robber and saved by a stranger, whom she promptly calls by name and whom she invites to a lawn party. This stranger, John, is seen by Judge Brainard, who desires that his son, Robert, marry Mary. Robert becomes jealous of John and demands of the judge that he tell him just who John is. The judge confesses that John is his son by a former marriage. A former friend of John's, learning of the judge's confession and the fact that he is to settle a sum of money on John, gets John to sign a check and goes to blackmail the judge. In a scuffle this man is hurled over a cliff. John, who has appeared on the scene, is accused of murder and convicted, when the judge confesses that he is the murderer and that John is his son, and all ends happily as John wins Mary.

Feature Anna Q. Nilsson as Mary Manners and Franklyn Farnum as John O'Neil.

Advertising Angles: You can work best with the appeal to the interest the average person takes in fortune telling and kindred arts. Ask "Are you the seventh son of a seventh son, or a daughter of the third generation?" and "Do you see things?" Using these and similar inquiries as introductions to advertising stories telling the basis of this play. Get dealers who sell dream books, ouija boards and fortune telling cards to work in with you on window displays. Dress the box office with astronomical signs and symbols and announce, "We do not tell fortunes in the lobby. Go inside and see Mary Manners."

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Cast.

Adele Durant.....Gladys Brockwell
Robert Bradley.....Herbert Heyes
Dick Brown.....L. C. Shumway
Pedro Vasquale.....Willard Louis

Directed by Edward J. LeSaint.

The Story: When the man who is infatuated with Adele Durant, fearing disgrace, kills himself in her presence, his friend, Robert Bradley, threatens to denounce her as a murderess unless she submits to his wishes. Bradley takes her to a lonely part of Mexico and leaves her at a disreputable dance hall, where she becomes one of the leaders of a band of brigands who plot to kill the American owner of a Mexican mine. Adele hurries to warn her countryman and discovers him to be Bradley. In a fierce struggle that ensues she wounds him, but he persuades her to flee with his party to the United States. The couple are pursued by the bandits, and while Bradley goes for assistance, Pedro, the bandit leader, threatens to kill the women and children unless Adele comes to his cabin. To save them she consents, but when Pedro tries to embrace her she fights him off until Bradley arrives and rescues her. When Bradley learns of her noble sacrifice, respect is awakened and love follows.

Feature Gladys Brockwell as Adele Durant and Herbert Heyes as Robert Bradley.

Elise Storrow.....Eldean Stuart
Jim Nash.....Harry Lee
Cashier.....Dan Malloy

Directed by James Kirkwood.

The Story: Rosalie, employed at the Treadwell mills, is refused a loan when her sister dies from overwork. To obtain money she goes on the street. In a fight with a ruffian she is saved by Bob Storrow, son of one of the owners of the mill. Later she is selected as a model for a picture for the Magdalene Home, of which Storrow and Treadwell are trustees. She denounces Treadwell and tells her story. Storrow is the guilty party, and fearing to confess takes her to his home as a governess. Bob reappears and asks her to marry him. She writes a confession, slips it under his door and then accepts him. Learning of Storrow's guilt she denounces him and finds Bob did not get her confession. She leaves, but Bob finds her, tells her he knew her story from the first and takes her in his arms while his father, thoroughly penitent, gives them a blessing.

Advertising Angles: It might be possible to interest the labor organizations in this story with a special appeal emphasizing the result of labor conditions in the Treadwell Mills. Work through the secretaries. Play up the labor angle in the newspaper work and get after the business hypocrites. "Are you a hypocrite" might be made the basis of an advertisement or throwaway. Lay emphasis upon the cast, including as it does many favorites.

"SHIFTING SANDS"

Triangle Presents Gloria Swanson in a Thrilling Story by Charles T. Dazey, Dealing with the German Spy System in a New Manner.

Cast.

Marcia Grey	Gloria Swanson
John Stanford	Joe King
Von Holtz	Herbert Clark
Minnie Grey	Leone Carun
Mrs. Stanford	Lillian Langdon
Willis	Arthur Millett

Directed by Albert Parker.

The Story: Marcia Grey seeks to support her sister and herself by peddling pot boilers. She applies to a magazine for aid in financing an operation for her sister, but is told they are interested only in fallen women. A young German, Von Holtz, offers to supply her financial needs if she will become his mistress and on her refusal explains that he merely tested her, and persuades her to accept a loan. Having done so he denounces her to the police as a thief and solicitor when she again refuses to accept his first proposition. She is railroaded through to the penitentiary. On her release she finds her sister has died, and is about to destroy herself, when she becomes interested in the Salvation Army. She attracts the attention of Stanford, a wealthy welfare worker, who marries her. Some years later the war has broken out, and young Stanford is entrusted with important papers to be carried to England. Von Holtz, now a spy, gains entrance to the Stanford home, and threatens to denounce Marcia on her police record if she does not procure the papers for him. She apparently consents, but leads the spy into a trap, and proves her husband's love by voluntary confession.

Feature Gloria Swanson as Marcia Grey and Joe King as John Stanford.

Advertising Angles: Mr. Dazey is a well known writer for the stage, and his name should have some advertising value if only as the author of "In Old Kentucky." Tell that this is a story of the German spy system, but lay emphasis upon the fact that it is not a war drama, but deals merely with one social angle. Offer free admissions to a matinee to anyone who can pronounce the title of the play rapidly fifteen times without changing to "Sifting Sands," You will create no little excitement and get a corking story for the local paper as well, for few persons can repeat the title rapidly without becoming confused. Directed by Fred Thomson.

The Story: Primrose, a refined girl, who has been brought up by her uncle, receives a letter from her father who deserted her mother many years before. Angered, she goes to her father disguised as a wild, untaught mountain girl, and despite her dress and actions finally wins the love of her father and his ward, Jack. With many misgivings her father gives a ball in her honor, and throwing off her disguise she appears in her true personality. A crooked business associate demands $500,000 from her father, and a vampire whom Jack has married while intoxicated appears on the scene. Primrose, however, rises to the emergency, as her uncle has just reported that oil has been discovered on her farm, and the vampire turns out to be the wife of Primrose's father's secretary. This smooths the path of romance for Primrose and Jack.

The Story: Jeffrey, the gay scion of a wealthy family, is driven from home by his father. In the West he comes to his senses, and determines to make good. Through the aid of his sweetheart and a ghost he succeeds in capturing a gang of bad men, and after many exciting complications everything turns out all right, including his love affair.

Feature Bryant Washburn as Jeffrey Wall and Rhea Mitchel as Mary Drew.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Love and Adventure Amid Rugged Scenes on the Mexican Border.
If You Never Believed in Ghosts See This Photographic Specter.
Star of the "Skinner" Series Has the Best Play of His Career.
Excitement on Mexican Border Intensified by Gripping Love Interest.
Exciting Scenes and Incidents Intensify Deepening Heart Interest
Photoplot of Complications and Surprises Fraught with Sensations.

Advertising Angles: Play up the star where he is popular, and tell that this is one of the best action stories in which he has been seen of late. Capitalize on the ghost. Ask your patrons if they believe in ghosts, and tell that here you have photographs of the ghost of the ranch. You might parade a ghost of the rancho through the streets with the advertisement lettered on his grave clothes. In your newspaper work the word will work into many striking appeals.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three sheets, one six-sheet. one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color; also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

"FEDORA"

Adolph Zukor Presents the Distinguished Player Pauline Frederick in Victorien Sardou's World-Famous Drama, Made Popular by Sarah Bernhardt and Fanny Davenport.

Cast.

Princess Fedora.....Pauline Frederick
Gretch, a Police Official..Alfred Hickman
Loris Ipanoff.....Jere Austin
Gen. Zariskene, Chief of Police,
W. L. Abingdon
Count Vladimir Androvitch,
Wilmuth Merkyll

Directed by Edouard Jose.

The Story: Princess Fedora is a Russian of wealth and beauty. She is betrothed to Count Vladimir, who is slain by Ipanoff because of an affair between Vladimir and Mme. Ipanoff. Fedora swears vengeance upon Ipanoff, whom she follows to Paris. Learning the truth, she finds that Ipanoff was justified, and that she loves him. Previously she had caused the arrest of his brother, who is drowned in his dungeon, and this catastrophe kills his mother. Ipanoff swears vengeance, and attempts to strangle his wife when he finds she is the guilty party. She eludes him, and, taking poison, dies at his feet as the police enter the room.

Feature Pauline Frederick as Princess Fedora and Wilmuth Merkyll as Count Vladimir Androvitch.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Victorien Sardou's Great Tragedy Invited Fame to Fanny Davenport and Sarah Bernhardt.
Greatest of Sardou's Tragedies Now Revealed in Vivid Photo-scenes.
Pauline Frederick Essays Role Made Famous by Bernhardt and Fanny Davenport.
Sardou's Great Drama Provides Pauline Frederick with Strong Role.
Tremendous Drama of Intrigue and Violent Vengeance.
Villainy and Intrigue in the Days of Russia's Czar.

Advertising Angles: The revival of this famous old play is worth extra advertising. Use the "Ask Dad, he knows," for throwaways, beginning, "Who was the greater Fedora, Bernhardt or Davenport, Ask Dad, he knows." The pictorial paper does not give a fitting suggestion of the

"A WOMAN'S FOOL"

Universal Presents Harry Carey in a Special Production in Which Lin McLean Goes Up Against a Biscuit Shooter, a Rainmaker and a Woman Station Agent.

Cast.

Lin McLean.....Harry Carey
The Virginian".....M. K. Wilson
"Honey" Wiggin.....Ed. Jones
Tommy.....Vesta Pegg
Katie.....Betty Schade
Lusk.....Wm. Carrol
Billy.....Roy Clark
Jessamine Buckner.....Molly Malone

The Story: Lin felt sorry for Katie, who was employed in a Denver restaurant, and offered her a home in the West. Her husband soon appeared on the scene, and, as there had been a severe drought, offered to make it rain for six hours for a thousand dollars. Strangely enough, it did rain, so he collected the money, and Katie decided that her husband was the right party to stick to. After the softening effect of years had opened his congealed heart, Jessamine appeared, but she would not have anything to do with Lin on learning of his previous matrimonial venture. A strange act of generosity on the part of Katie, however, straightened matters for Lin.

Feature Harry Carey as Lin McLean and Betty Schade as Katie.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Rollicking Story of the Wild West with Heart-Interest to Supply the "Punch."
Swift-moving Story of Adventure and Romance in the Wilds.
Prairie Romance Linked with Super-vengeance and Western Justice.
Love and Adventure in Swift-moving Scenes and Incidents.
Breezy Atmosphere of Western Adventure Pictured in Swift Scenes.
Wild Riders and Sure Shooters Carry Stirring Romance of the West.

Advertising Angles: A good plan in advertising this would be to run semi-reading advertisements, each taking up some feature of the story. Run these in series, as, "Katie was a biscuit shooter in a Denver railroad restaurant when Lin McLean first set eyes on her and wanted her for his own. He didn't know she had a husband and a little boy when he asked her to be his—and she didn't tell him ... When this man appears and a reconciliation is about to take place, Bateese hurls him again a tree, and, grabbing Kathleen, forces her to marry him. He leaves, and Courteau and the other man have a fight in Kathleen's cabin. She goes out and yells for Bateese, who, in despair, has thrown himself from a cliff. As she reaches him and finds him still alive but badly injured she realizes that she loves "that devil, Bateese."

Feature Monroe Salisbury as Bateese Latour and Ada Gleason as Kathleen.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Monroe Salisbury, Star of Many Bluebirds, Returns in His Most Convincing Role.
Strange Call of the Wild in Love's Battle for Happiness.
Gripping Story of Love and Vengeance in Canadian Wilds.
Sensational Battles and Thrilling Episodes Set in Wild Surroundings.
Love Knows No Nationality When Cupid Sounds His Trumpet Call.
Vigorous and Appealing Photoplay of Rugged Details.

Advertising Angles: Use "the girl who didn't know her heart" as a sub-line for advertising this story. Play it up as a vivid story of the great Canadian woods, where elemental passions sway the habitans. Draw a picture of the three lovers of the girl, and ask which won.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scenes cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.

"COALS OF FIRE"

Thomas H. Ince Presents Enid Bennett, the Charming Australian Star, in an Original Story of the Daughter of a Tavern Keeper in a Temperance Town.

Cast.

Nell Bradley.....Enid Bennett
Rev. Charles Alden.....Fred Niblo
James Bradley.....Melbourne MacDowell
Ben Roach.....Billy Elmer
Amy Robinson.....Virginia Sothern
Steve Morrow.....John P. Lockney
Charles Read.....Donald MacDonald

Directed by Victor L. Schertzinger.

The Story: Nell, the daughter of a liquor seller in a temperance town, is looked upon with contempt by the populace. A minister asks her for lemonade, but she gives him whiskey. She apologizes, and he is attracted to her. A bond salesman takes a girl to Nell's father's place and gets her intoxicated. Nell, realizing the girl's plight, agrees to marry her father's bartender if he will help her rescue the girl. The bartender attacks the salesman, who is saved by the preacher, and who reviles Nell, thinking she is responsible for the girl's condition. He learns the truth, sends Nell to school, and on her return a few years later finds him waiting for her.

Feature Enid Bennett as Nell Bradley and Fred Niblo as Rev. Charles Alden.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Good for Evil Returned in Sensational Portions During Progress of Thrilling Drama.
Crime and Intrigue Follow Attempt of Minister to Reform Community.
Strange Retribution Follows Villainous Attack Upon Good Government.
Social Outcast Redeems Herself by Befriending Her Persecutors.
Getting Even with Society in Revenge for Society's Misdeeds.
Novelty in Photoplot Provides Unusual Screen Entertainment.

Advertising Angles: Hook up with the present movement for prohibition by announcing this as a sidelight on the matter. Advertise, "The girl who couldn't go wrong when she tried." Get a disreputable looking dog and have a man lead it through the streets, the man to wear a placard, "Give a dog a bad name, then kill him. Enid Bennett in 'Coals of Fire' got a bad name, but she couldn't go wrong. See why at (house) tonight."

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising layout mats. Slides. Press book.

"HEREDITY"

World-Pictures Presents Barbara Castleton, in with Madge Evans and John Bowers, in the Story of a Love That Lasted.

Cast.

Nedda Trevor (child).....Madge Evans
Nedda Trevor (grown)..Barbara Castleton
Nedda's Mother.....Jennie Ellison
Nedda's Grandmother...Anne Warrington
Edgars.....Jack Drumier
Paul Winslow.....John Bowers
Jim Blake.....Joe Smiley
Frank Graves.....Geo. MacQuarrie

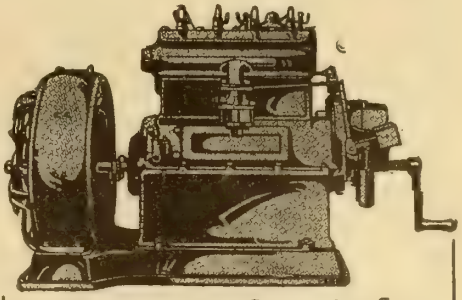
Directed by William P. S. Earle.

The Story: Little Nedda Trevor, knocked down by an automobile, is urged by her dissolute stepfather to pretend injuries as the basis for a damage suit, but instead she goes to warn the young driver of the attempt to blackmail him. She never forgets the incident. Years later Nedda has grown into a beautiful woman. Her employer, Graves, seeks to win her hand, but she feels that marriage would be a mockery without love, and she comes of the blood of the Trevors, and her mother has instilled a belief in loyalty to self. Her stepfather murders her mother in a drunken passion, and Nedda is accused of the crime. She appeals to Graves, who replies that marriage is the price of his assistance. Nedda still refuses, but Paul Winslow, her childish ideal, again finds her, and clears her of the hideous charge through her stepfather's confession, and the childish romance blossoms into a happy marriage.

Feature Madge Evans and Barbara Castleton, and John Bowers as Paul Winslow.

Program and Advertising Phrases: May Courage, Faith and Honesty Be Inherited?
Strange Crime Revealed in Tensely Interesting Mystery Plot.
Law of Heredity Invoked to Fasten Crime on Innocent Victim.
Story of a Childhood Love that Lived to Happy Fruition.
Blood and Breeding Tells in a Story of Struggle and Sacrifice.
Happy Outcome of a Struggle for Love and Contentment.

Advertising Angles: Play up the twin stars in all announcements, and for a lobby display use their portraits linked together with a card, "Two stars for one price." If you can borrow a really curious antique ring mount this or display it in a case for a window display, explaining that "Heredity" is shown in Nedda's adherence to her ideals just as her ancestor's loyalty won the ring of a king. You might use the circumstantial evidence angle for a minor point, but the more certain appeal will be the mention of the stars.



Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six sheets. Free advance

"NEWMAN" Brass Frames and Rails

Read What Josiah Pearce & Sons Says About Our Goods

Gentlemen:

Now that you have completed equipping our new theatres here in New Orleans and Houston, Texas, we want to take this means of expressing to you our appreciation of the manner in which we have done business with you, as well as to the character of your goods. You have, without exception, filled our orders just as promptly as we could ever expect and probably quicker than we had anticipated, and the fact of your having supplied us with brass frames and various other equipment in our fifteen theatres is evidence that we are pleased with your goods, for they are the most attractive, durable and practical that we have as yet found.

We wish you good luck in the prosecution of your work.

Yours very truly,

"ALL MAN"

Vitagraph Presents Harry Morey and Betty Blythe in a Blue Ribbon Feature That Presents Many Interesting Angles in a New Fashion.

Cast.

John Olsen.....Harry Morey
Belle Foliot.....Betty Blythe
Lieut. Rielly.....Bob Gaillard
Marco Paroni.....George Majeroni
Morris Sachs.....Carleton King
Ryan.....Bernard Siegel

Directed by Paul Scardon.

The Story: John Olsen, brought up with no well defined idea of right and wrong, joins two fellow workmen in cracking the safe of the factory in which they are employed. Their success leads them to other jobs, and John takes a delight in the adventurous life. One night he meets with an accident, and is taken to the home of Belle Foliot, whose husband is doing a life sentence for murder. On his recovery she joins the gang, and John permits himself to be captured in a moment of danger to ensure her escape. On his release from prison he decides to go straight, but Belle is not willing to share a humdrum existence. He marries a colorless girl who deserts him when she learns of his past life, and way is at last paved for his legal marriage to Belle, who determines to go straight with "her man."

Feature Harry Morey as John Olsen and Betty Blythe as Belle Foliot.

Advertising Angles: Here is a crook story differing from the usual run of crime plays. Advertise it as such, and ask if John really was responsible for his misdeeds or whether it was not society which was to blame. Play up the fact that this story is developed from "Fiddlers Green," a story run in the Saturday Evening Post. Perhaps your book store has bound copies and will be willing to share advertising space with you. For a lobby display get a property or second-hand safe, with a card reading, "This safe doesn't look much like one of Cupid's darts, but its fall brought two loving hearts together in 'All Man.' See how it worked out (date)." Advertise an "All Man" matinee at ten cents, and add that women can come if they are willing to pay fifteen.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.

Cast.

Cactus Crandall.....Roy Stewart
Helen.....Marion Marvin
Carter.....Pete Morrison
The Father.....Wm. Ellengford
Mendoza.....Joe Rickson

Directed by Cliff Smith.

The Story: Bob Crandall, a ranchman, misses 500 head of stock and goes across the border into Mexico to find them. He runs into a nest of bandits and rustlers. Helen Ware is kept a prisoner in a saloon, and her father is in jail on a flimsy charge. Cactus finds a friend, a Texas ranger, who is looking for a chance to get Ware out, but he cannot rescue both, and Helen refuses to leave without her father. Cactus arranges to take care of Helen, and the ranger gets Ware out of jail. Cactus shoots up the saloon and rescues Helen, taking her to his ranch, but he returns to get into the fight, and Mendoza circles the melee and captures Helen a second time. Once more Cactus comes to the rescue, and this time Mendoza is killed. Back at the ranch again, Cactus finds the steers accounted for, but he is not sorry for what might have been a useless adventure.

Feature Roy Stewart as Cactus Crandall and Marion Marvin as Helen.

Simplex

"LET THE Simplex TWINS BUILD UP YOUR PROFITS"

Far be it from us to claim that projection is the only thing that counts, BUT——when a mother says "I think my eyes of that child" she says a big mouthful about the preciousness of the eyes.

There is no profit in pleasing the mind with good subjects, the ears with sweet music, the nose with delicate perfume, or the body with comfortable seats, if you undo it all by offending the eyes.

Not only that, but besides keeping people away, you don't save a cent in operating expenses; for it has been abundantly proven that the eye-soothing projction of the Simplex costs less.

All this gives us plenty of reason for urging you to let the Simplex Twins build up your profits.

A [show] worth more profits more Simplex Projectors are Profit Protectors.

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

First Year Milestone Passed

By

United Theatre Equipment Corporation

WHEN our forefathers planned, and later executed, the formation of the United States of America, many "know-it-alls" predicted disaster and trouble. To-day the U. S. A. stands the peer and leader among the nations of the world, due to the foresight and good judgment of those who have conducted the affairs of this wonderful republic.

The U. S. A. is composed of many units brought under one executive organization. It is an acknowledged fact that concentration of authority and executive power, when good judgment is exercised, brings about ECONOMY and EFFICIENCY.

We are glad to announce that United Theatre Equipment Corporation has passed through its first year's existence with flying colors, notwithstanding the dire predictions by some people.

We have passed through a year of unprecedented difficulties, not only on account of the multitude of details involved, but also on account of war conditions, which we had to face immediately after the formation of this company.

There is not an exhibitor or user of motion picture, electrical and similar apparatus and supplies who has been served by U. T. E. who will not gladly testify that we give 100% service and are 100% efficient.

The experience of those conducting the destiny of U. T. E. has brought about the satisfactory solution of the equipment business, and those exhibitors who take advantage of U. T. E. service will find much relief from annoyance, troubles and delays. Therefore, we are of material assistance in producing best screen results with the least expense.

Lucky is the exhibitor who can feel that, when he places an order for projectors or other equipment, he is done with that order. By this we mean that the moment the order is placed with us the exhibitor has put it UP TO US to produce the desired results, without worry or anxiety on his part.

We overcome all projection difficulties. We investigate all new apparatus and supplies and make thorough tests before offering such goods for sale. This means insurance to you, and we shall continue our careful discrimination, in order that we may always be able to deliver and install the most modern equipment for the projection and exhibition of motion pictures.

With our branches in all important cities where ample stocks of machines and supplies are carried, we are better able to take care of your wants than any other concern as yet established in the motion picture equipment business.

We thank you for past patronage and solicit your future business, which will have the same prompt and careful attention as in the past.

STATE AND MADISON STS.

DIRECTION
CASTLE AMUSEMENT CO. (INC)

CHICAGO, August 3rd, 1918.

George Kleine System,
207 S. Wabash Avenue,
Chicago, Illinois.

Gentlemen:-

Believing that a great injustice has been done to the Essanay Company as well as yourselves by the Trade Paper advertising of one of your competitors in connection with the release of Charley Chaplin in "TRIPLE TROUBLE" I want to state actual facts in connection with the engagement of the picture at the Castle Theatre.

The Castle Theatre, ever since its opening, has been an exclusive first run house; we cater to the very best patronage in Chicago, consequently endeavor to use careful judgment in the selection of our program.

Never in the history of this theatre have we played anything but first run films.

I booked "TRIPLE TROUBLE" after witnessing a private screening and my judgment in its being a satisfactory box-office attraction in every way has been proven by the receipts.

The picture was booked originally for one week but owing to the very excellent business, and because of popular request, we have held it over for a second week's run, which is the first time this has been done in the history of the Castle Theatre.

"TRIPLE TROUBLE" PLAYED TO THE BIGGEST BUSINESS EVER DONE AT THE CASTLE THEATRE despite unusually hot weather conditions and gave complete satisfaction to my audiences. They thoroughly enjoyed it and the laughs were just as great as I have ever heard with any of Chaplin's pictures.

I am a stickler for fair play and in order that exhibitors operating first class picture houses may not be misled into believing that "TRIPLE TROUBLE" is not a brand new film in every sense of the word, never before shown - that it will give complete satisfaction to their audiences - that it will prove just as big a money getter as any of the Chaplins, I am going on record in this manner.

You have my permission to use this letter in any way you see fit and if further proof is desired you are at liberty to refer exhibitors direct to me.

Yours very truly,

(Signed) M.J.Weil

121 WEEKS for Paramount and Artcraft Pictures

35 Weeks for the rest of the Industry

What Does Lawrence,

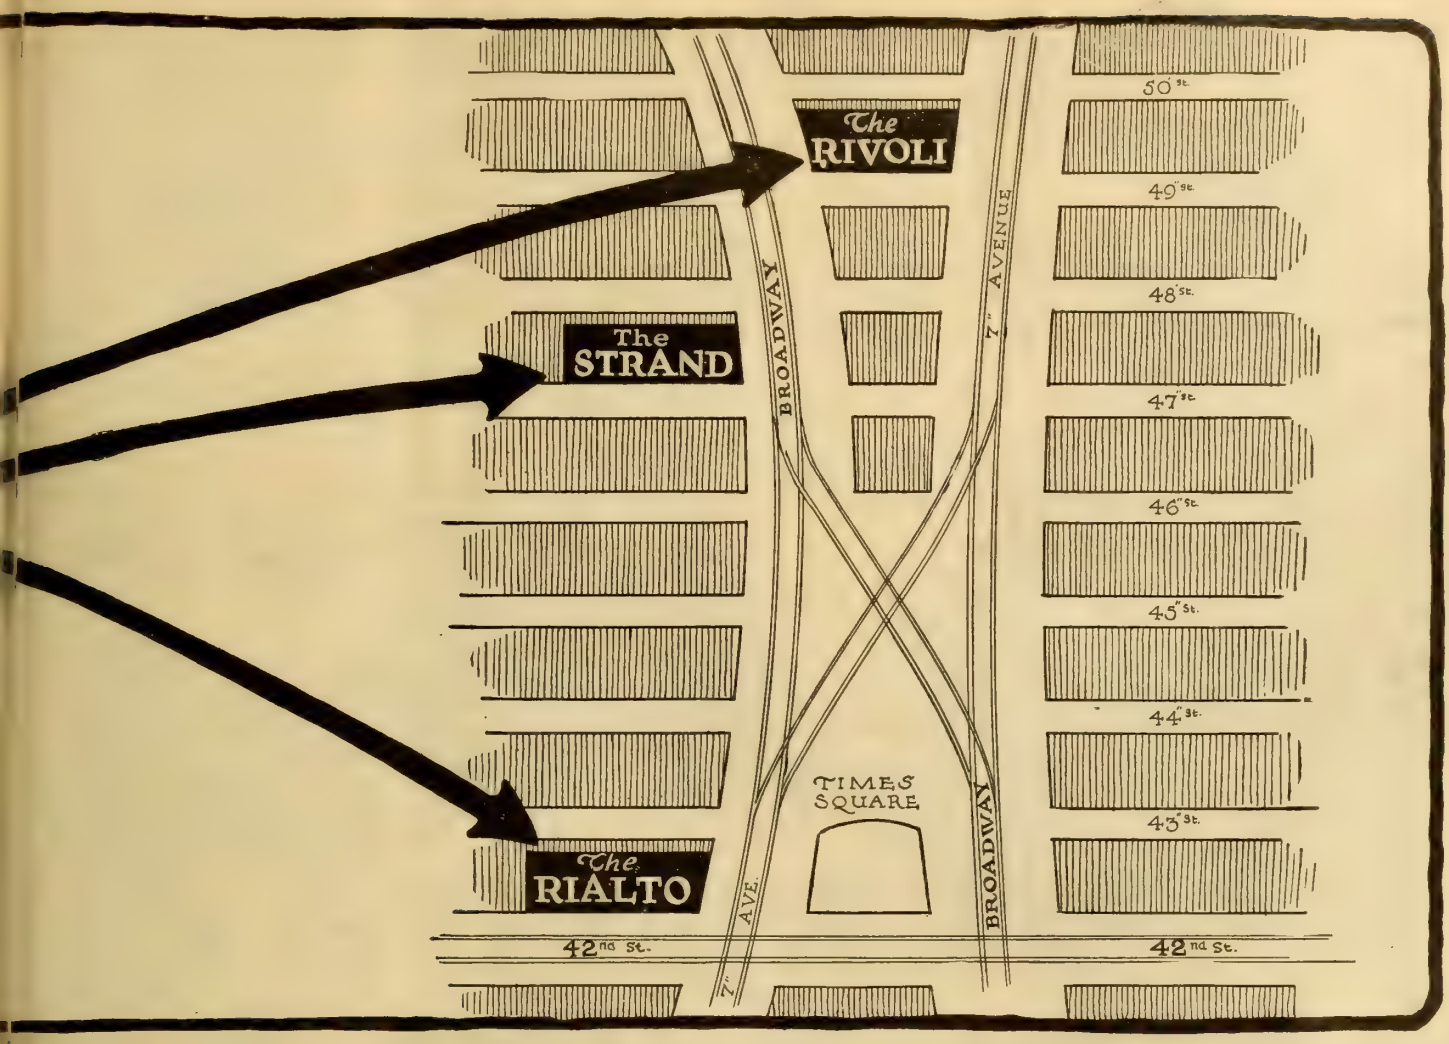
IN the year beginning September 1st, next, New York's three great moving pictures theatres—The Rivoli, The Strand and The Rialto—will show 121 Paramount or Artcraft Pictures. That leaves 35 features to be chosen from the productions of all the rest of the industry put together.

"What do I care?" asks Lawrence, Kansas.

By the features in those three theatres, New York judges the moving picture industry—decides whether moving pictures are worth while, whether they are essential, whether they are wholesome entertainment, whether they should be supported or ignored.

"New York's opinion means nothing in my young life," declares Lawrence, Kansas.

S. L. Rothapfel and Harold Edel, in choosing programs for their theatres, have a tremendous responsibility on their shoulders. In those three theatres, a few blocks apart, is decided the destiny of the entire motion picture industry. What they show may not affect your theatre immediately, but, Lawrence, Kansas, these two men have the power to tear down or to build up the industry of which you are a part.



"Oh, say, that's going too strong," protests Lawrence, Kansas.

It is, is it? Read on, Lawrence, Kansas.

Suppose The Rivoli, The Strand and The Rialto showed questionable pictures or merely stupid pictures. It is these theatres that the greatest writers in the country attend. In these seats you find U. S. Senators and Representatives, club women, public officials from all parts of America—men and women who write and speak and make laws and whose influence is nation wide.

Within a very few weeks the influence of bad pictures would be felt in Washington, in Kansas City, in San Francisco. These people would be asking pertinent questions. The motion picture would be on the carpet everywhere.

Mr. Rothapfel and Mr. Edel realize their responsibilities. They have performed splendid service for the industry in keeping before the eyes, not only of New Yorkers, but of the hundreds of thousands of visitors from all over the country, the very best in motion pictures.

Perhaps, Lawrence, Kansas, you do profit directly by this. Doubtless your leading merchant, in his trips to New York, has attended these theatres and has returned with new respect for you and your theatre. Doubtless he has boasted about you, telling his friends, "Why, they show the same pictures in Lawrence that they do in New York, and they show them just about as soon, too."

But that is incidental.

The big thing is that what New York and its visitors think about motion pictures, is vital to every person connected with the industry. The leaders of America attend The Rivoli, The Strand and The Rialto and for the good of all of us they must see the best the industry affords.

Mr. Rothapfel and Mr. Edel, who realize the importance of their theatres to the industry, have chosen 121 Paramount or Artcraft Pictures for the year to come.

The way they rate the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's productions is significant.

These men believe that the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has earned the right to be the predominant representative of the motion picture industry in New York in the year to come.

Do you think they are right, Lawrence, Kansas? Of course you do. And you'll be guided to no small degree by what they do.

Thanks, Lawrence, Kansas, for your attention.

The Master Producer Has Done It Again!

THE Strand in New York is "Besieged by crowds that stand for hours and stretch down the street and around the corner," the New York World says.

The New York Tribune says, "When we left the Strand the line which forms to the left had stretched down as far as 45th Street [The Strand is between 47th and 48th Streets] but we intend to get up bright and early some morning soon and go to see 'The Great Love' again. Everyone should see it once for the story and once for the acting and the accompanying music."

"The Great Love" means capacity business for a longer run than you ever gave any other picture.

J. WARREN KERRIGAN

in his fourth Paralta Play

"A Burglar for a Night"

by

F. McGREW WILLIS

Produced under the personal supervision of
ROBERT BRUNTON

Directed by Ernest Warde

In the role of Kirk Marden, J. Warren Kerrigan will be seen as the son of an American railroad magnate; the embodiment of the American spirit to fight for right—and fight fair. In the Orient he meets William Real and befriends him. Upon their return to America he learns that his father is about to be ruined by a business rival. How he steals not only the papers that had been obtained through intrigue, but also the heart of a beautiful girl, presents Mr. Kerrigan in one of the most virile roles that he has ever interpreted.

Announcing the release of the Lillian Walker Series of eight happy pictures thru the W. W. HODKINSON CORP.

Directed by Edward Dillon

Wag

EXACTING in its requirements of quality, and unyielding in its adherence to the highest principles of business, the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation is setting new standards in the motion picture field that will make for the soundest development of every factor within the industry.

IN announcing the release of the Lillian Walker series of pictures through this organization, therefore the producers of these pictures believe that they are not only offering exhibitors an additional guarantee of the consistent merit of their productions, but that they are associating themselves with a business force that is vital to the best interests of exhibitors.

Hodkinson Service to have new star series because

Hodkinson Service offers the only channel of distribution for the producer that assures him an equitable, fair and just presentation to the exhibitor and which satisfies the demand of the industry for a closer relationship between exhibitor and producer.

Mr. Lester Park, President of the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation, says: "When we made our initial announcement in the trade press we had not decided on our distribution arrangements, but, after careful investigation, I was entirely satisfied that the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation offered the only distribution that would bring our product to the exhibitors on the fair and equitable basis we desire, and still allow us to be in the quality company our product deserves.

"I have been one of the few producers who has worked with the exhibitor toward solving his problems, and I believe that by placing the Lillian Walker Productions as I have I am helping to build a structure that will be mutually beneficial for all."

The above is one reason why Lillian Walker Productions will be released as part of Hodkinson Service.

Over There and Over Here

Over there the valiant men of France, Great Britain, Italy and the United States are wearing down the resistance of the Hun and forcing back his fighting line toward the Rhine.

Over here men, women and children watch with feverish interest the papers day by day to see what the last few hours have brought forth over there. Every item of news, each picture that bears upon the endless battle, is scanned with eager eyes.

You can show them what the motion picture camera is seeing over there-first hand, fascinating information, if you show

That's What They All Say—
"one of the screen's finest comedians"
HAROLD LLOYD

the star of the one reel Rolin comedies bearing his name. Mr Lane, the photoplay critic of the Boston Evening Record; is to be complimented upon the soundness of his judgment.

By TAMAR LANE

Everyone is quite ready and willing to pin new words of praise on those who have already won success and distinction, but there is not the same promptness and effort to praise those who have not yet won a certain degree of fame. With this thought in view we take our Oliver in hand to smear a few honeyed words on the career and personality of Harold Lloyd, one of the screen's finest comedians, and one whom we think some day take his place along side Chaplin and Arbuckle as a wholesale producer of laughs.

Even today Harold Lloyd is making comedies which compare favorably with those of Chaplin and Arbuckle. Lloyd is featured in one reel comedies which are made by the Rolin company and distributed through Pathe. His films are always laughable and consistently good. We have yet to see a poor one. Lloyd is a young man, apparently about 25 and if managed properly will some day make a big name for himself in the screen world. He is original in his work and imitates no one either in make up or in acting. He is unique as a slapstck comedian for the reason that he wears absolutely no trick make-up or character clothes. His only comedy accessory being a pair of horn-rimmed glasses.

ROLL OF HONOR

THE NAME OF EVERY THEATRE WHICH EXHIBITS

PERSHING'S CRUSADERS

THE FIRST U. S. OFFICIAL WAR FEATURE

will be published in this Roll and the United States Government Division of Films will present a handsome "Victory Screen Pledge" to its proprietors to be used for lobby display and as a memento of their patriotic action.

Names preceded by an asterisk (*) are the week's supply of newcomers on the Honor Roll.

If you have contracted for "Pershing's Crusaders," the name of your theatre positively will appear in this roll. It may be two, or even three weeks afterward, as it takes time to pass the contracts through various departments.

DON'T BLAME CHAPLIN FOR THIS FILM CRIME

"Triple Trouble" Is Atrocious Patch Quilt of Ancient Slapstick Reels.

BY W. K. HOLLANDER.

If, as it is often repeated, picture entertainment eventually will fall by the wayside, a discarded fad once universally idolized, such films as "Triple Trouble" will hasten the catastrophe. Affiliating Charlie Chaplin's name with this picture not only does the comedian a gross injustice, but is ruinous to the industry as well. It is not a Chaplin specialty such as the public has been in the habit of getting, though the comedian is there, having been dragged in unwillingly and unwittingly.

The comedian's friends will rise in indignation against the subject and the few who cannot be entertained by his clowning will pity his plight. It is obviously a pieced together affair, clumsily connected by silly subtitles, aiming to give it timeliness and patriotic flavor.

Collection of Old Slapstick Stuff.

If one cares to dissect carefully, fragments of two or more separate slapstick comedies will be detected in one of which Chaplin participated, while Leo White, who frequently gave visualization to the excitable French count in Chaplin and other comedies, is considerably in evidence elsewhere.

The writer saw "Triple Trouble" at the Castle theater Sunday afternoon—and almost wept. A few persons laughed at some of the comedian's antics, probably because they thought they were expected to do so by the management and mayhap out of respect to the comedian himself.

Poor Charlie Isn't to Blame.

There are a few situations showing Chaplin in uncomfortable circumstances; one or two others disclose him in desperate combat against odds; while the main substance—in which he does not participate, tells of some fiendish German plot to get possession of an American formula for a powerful explosive. The whole thing is worse than the worst old Keystone slapstick.

It looks as if Essanay gathered together the shavings of several old pictures and manufactured "Triple Trouble." So don't blame Chaplin. He had nothing to do with it. He will be along shortly in a film of his own making called "Shoulder Arms."

And Still they Come

Day after day, without end, without let up, unceasingly,—letters, telegrams and scores of other communications pile in to the offices of JEWEL with praise, compliments, enthusiastic exclamations, boosts galore on the BIG MONEY Exhibitors are taking in on "THE KAISER, THE BEAST OF BERLIN." Here are samples of what we're receiving from every State in the Union daily.

"THE KAISER" -the Beast of Berlin

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS (Inc.):

Regarding "THE KAISER, THE BEAST OF BERLIN," this is positively the biggest money getter I ever played.

(Signed)
WM. HARPER,
Lyceum Theatre,
Souris, Manitoba.

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS (Inc.):

"THE KAISER, THE BEAST OF BERLIN," has SOME drawing power. In my town of only 700 people, 672 saw "THE KAISER" on Sunday, July 21, with big civic counter attraction going on 11 miles in the country.

(Signed)
MARTIN PETERSON,
Gem Theatre,
Armstrong, Ia.

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS (INC.):

"THE KAISER, THE BEAST OF BERLIN" is positively the greatest picture we ever played. Broke all records. Advanced our prices to 50c and filled our 500-seat Auditorium three times in our town of only 1,200 people. Played 3 weeks before also in a close by town. Made our showing all the bigger. Nothing begins to compare with the money-getting power of "THE KAISER."

(Signed) LOUFFELHOLZ BROS.,
Cuba City, Wis.

Playing repeat—2-3-4—and 5 times—"THE KAISER, THE BEAST OF BERLIN" is cleaning up. The only reason you can give for not playing "THE KAISER" is that you have all the cash on hand that you can use. Book NOW and get your repeat dates along with your first booking.

JEWEL PRODUCTIONS (INC.), 1600 Broadway, New York

No words by any writer in any language can begin to describe this tremendous and awe-inspiring pen picture of "THE SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA." Winsor McCay, world renowned artist, with his staff worked 22 consecutive months and made over 25,000 separate and distinct drawings of this indescribable spectacle, bringing out the detail with greater thrills than if it had been photographed. Every angle of the death throes of this monster ship and its precious cargo of human lives shown on the screen in a manner to rivet any audience to its seat.

Sensational beyond words are the overwhelming scenes enacted. It's the greatest pen picture from every angle ever shown on the screen. It's the picture that millions want to see because these millions will never forget the world catastrophy of "THE SINKING OF THE LUSITANIA." Give it to your public NOW. Book it and advertise it unlike any picture you've run in months. It's the picture that will never have a competitor. If you get it, YOU have it alone. Thrilling posters, ads and other matter ready prepared for you. Your nearest Jewel Exchange will give you more facts and figures. Book it NOW. You'll congratulate yourself and us later on.

Read that telegram again—Note that it says: "WITH COMPETITION RUNNING EXPENSIVE FEATURES WE WERE ONLY ONES DOING BUSINESS." That means that YOU, Mr. Exhibitor, can meet any competition in the wide world with "THE GEEZER OF BERLIN," first, because it's a screaming travesty of "THE KAISER THE BEAST OF BERLIN" and secondly because you get the direct and tremendous power of the publicity and advertising on the original and only—

"THE KAISER THE BEAST OF BERLIN" picture that has had and is now having more free advertising and publicity than ANY big production ever screened. It's your chance to sweep in with a winner. It's your chance to clean up. It's your chance to get your share of the juicy profits that are coming like a tidal wave on "THE GEEZER OF BERLIN." Elebarate advertising dope all completely prepared for you. You've no time to lose. Wire your nearest Jewel Exchange NOW. JEWEL PRODUCTIONS (Inc.), 1600 Broadway, New York City.

Hammerstein Was Right — Caruso Did It

Impresario Years Ago Had Said the Day Would Come When the Great Tenor Would Sing on the Stage of the Manhattan Opera House, but It So Happened the Artist Was Performing for the Camera—and for Zukor

OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN said it—and in fullness of time it came to pass. Enrico Caruso, the movie actor with billion dollar lungs, sang on the stage of the Manhattan Opera House. But it was not the cigarmaker impressario that brought about this consummation on Friday, August 9, between the hours of 10 A. M. and late in the afternoon.

Adolph Zukor, the Hammerstein of motion pictures, was the cause of Caruso's appearance at the Manhattan. All the scenes for his forthcoming Artcraft—with the exception of a few long shots and close-ups at Pagliacci, the grand opera clown—had been taken at Fort Lee. There remained but the opera house interiors, with stage settings and full-dress audience to be completed when Caruso drove up in his Henry Ford to the stage door of the Manhattan.

The "fringe of Chelsea" was there to greet him—somehow gossip carries fast and Caruso's invasion of the district traveled as speedily as bad news. But his coming was good news to the denizens of "Ate" and "Nint" avenue, where the early "Thirties" run across town to get their feet into the North River. Lads and lassies of all ages—even unto the gray-haired stage—watched the great Italian tenor enter (just as Hammerstein had once said he would) the stage door of the Manhattan Opera House. And Chelsea villagers gazed and gossiped.

Inside, the audience had assembled. The center aisle of the parquet was the line upon which Assistant Director Scully's forces rested. The name of the A. D. might more properly be Scurry—for he was everywhere. Some two hundred ladies and gentlemen with the day off had turned their opportunity into profit and their figures into evening clothes to make the audience that should applaud the mighty Caruso when he had stuck a long knife into his antagonist at the climax of the second undertaking.

Audience Is Picturesquely Impressive.

Viewed from the stage the audience was picturesquely impressive. Aged men with whiskers like diplomats wear when they have their pictures taken; elderly ladies with green and purple feathers in their hair that swayed and swung as they fanned and fanned, and fanned some more; males of the type of Shubert chorus men who laughed in baby voice and clapped their hands with sympathetic sweetness when they got the signal; girls of various ages and complexions with chest measurements that looked like a one-sheet before it had gone to press—a regular assembly of counterfeiters to symbolize the gathering of the clans at the Metropolitan Opera House.

Director Jose held one end of a long rope, as he stood close to the brace of cameramen, in the centre of the middle aisle, well back under the curve of the balcony. Assistant Director Scurry—he simply must be called that—held the other end as he ran back and forth close to the brass rail that separated him from perdition in the orchestra pit. To the right the rope settled tautly in its flight:

"Fill these seats inside the rope, if you please," said Mr. Scurry.

The brave and bold and fair and forty and near-males of the audience settled into the seats—alternating a male and a female with the precision of the dark brown and light yellow sardines we observe when the tin is first opened. Then the rope swung to the left and settled again; the rest of the audience sat themselves down in even formation—here a male, then a female, then a Shubert chorus man, then another woman, who made a white, shiny spot in the group like a small section of a bathroom wall.

"Inside the rope, or out of the picture," called Mr. Scurry. The audience formed an inverted V, narrow at the head of the aisle and broadening out as things got closer to Caruso. In fur capes that wilted over the backs of their chairs the ladies looked as comfortable as though they were on the street—where it was twice as hot and twice as sticky.

On the stage the little "theatre" where things were soon to happen had been set in "Three," with a wood scene backing and surrounding it back to full stage and over to right center. The villagers in radiant dress had assembled. They were a gorgeous lot of men and women—probably fifty chorus people who knew "Pagliacci" backward and sidewise.

Caruso Mooches on Sweatily With Whitened Face.

There was an outburst of vocal commotion; two short, but ringing blasts of melody (exactly as though the good ship Enrico were blowing its whistle in warning of approach) and Caruso—the billion-dollar vocalist—was in the very midst of the party. It would be a lie to say that he danced on joyously. What he did was to mooch on sweatily. His face was whitened like the clown we had heard use the Caruso lungs at the Metropolitan. His garb was of same style—but not white, a la opera. It was lemon color, but the big black rosettes roamed down the front and the fluffy collar surrounded his neck and obstructed the view of Enrico's real elevation, as to his head.

He was in good humor, despite the temptatious temperature. He picked up a little girl who was of the chorus, and jounced her above his head. There was a word of greeting for men and women of the chorus; a slap on the shoulder for a young man in white trousers and blue flannel coat.

"This Caruso person is human," thinks we to ourselves. "We shall essay to engage him in conversation as per regular interviewers who write 'feature stuff' for the family page."

When he seemed content and happy with just a second to himself we advanced and gave the high sign. Caruso dipped his colors and was about to pass on. But we thwarted him.

"Which would you rather be, give your choice, Mr. Caruso," we said, as the great Enrico started to smile behind his whitening. "An opera singer, a movie star or a phonograph record?"

"Yes, exceeding warm," said he, smiling. "I am not compelled to do this, but I do it to keep myself employed. Lack of occupation makes me distressingly nervous—but I like this work very much indeed."

We had looked, once, into Charley Chaplin's million dollar smile and liked it. To gaze into Caruso's billion dollar smile is even more so. For he is just as genial as Chaplin—although he doesn't speak with an English accent. Perhaps the difference between a million and a billion had its effect—but, somehow we liked Caruso (in our fickle way) just as well as we liked Chaplin.

Celebrated Welkin Resounds to Call of "Camera."

"The picture is all fineto except these scenes," said Caruso. "We have been working hard in Fort Lee. There will be several hours' work here today and I shall be glad when we have concluded."

(The point we wish to make right here is: Despite all temptation, despite the heat, the opportunity and consent of the governed, we have refrained from interpreting this Caruso interview in malignant and emasculated Italian dialect. Decorations, we believe, are worn out on the left lapel of the coat just above the handkerchief pocket.)

The preparations for "shooting" having, meanwhile, pressed forward to completion the World man found a cool spot close to the door of a fire exit (to which we walked and did not run as per Joe Johnson's still extant instructions). Director Jose, standing near the cameras, waved his arms and megaphone. The scene was rehearsed on the stage and then the Jose cry of "Camera" rang the celebrated welkin.

The "Pagliacci" chorus burst into song, as the ten-piece orchestra struck up the measure. Caruso, in his donkey-shay, driven by a pretty girl, who distributed handbills, wheeled into range and stopped near the footlights. His voice arose in smothered cadence. He gesticulated with comic intent and effect. He beat the bass drum—and otherwise "ballyhooed" for the show that was soon to take place somewhere on the Piave.

"Mark down the cameras, boys," said Director Jose. And the grinding machines moved on to the stage for a close-up. In this Caruso sang just a leetle bit louder than for the long-shot.

The scene shifted to the interior of the little theatre—first of the thimble, bandbox and little theatre movement that was well under way before the Government needed steel for war purposes. Director Jose had shifted again to the head of the aisle. Caruso here took the direction of matters into his own hands and gestures.

The table had been set, the girl was coached into how she should act and where she should run and Caruso, himself doing all this, had shown his to-be adversary where and how to stick his knife into the billion dollar lungs (or try to, at least)—and then "Camera" rang once more through the empty upper regions of one of Oscar Hammerstein's monuments.

Caruso gives every indication of presenting great possibilities for moneymaking. Somebody is going to get rich. It may be the exhibitors and it may be Artcraft—and then, again, it may be Italy's rotund, jovial Caruso. HILL.

"The Great Love" Acclaimed by Crowds

New York's Strand Holds Capacity Audiences During First Two Days of Griffith's Latest Production.

DAVID WARK GRIFFITH has scored again. "The Great Love" has been acclaimed by capacity business at New York's Strand during the first two days of its current week's showing. Sunday, of course, was sure to bring the usual holiday crowds to the Strand—with a fine, cool day to gratify the swelterers—but the true test came Monday when the regular week's routine started.

Before 7 o'clock Monday evening—following reported big business all day—the house was comfortably filled and capacity soon resulted. The standing room was occupied for the first show and again, after 9 o'clock, when the bill again "turned," every seat was occupied and standing space was pre-empted.

As an indication of what the picture may be expected to do throughout the week—and as an index to its probable favor throughout the country—it may be recorded that "The Great Love" delighted spectators and held every observer in the thralldom of suspense. Director Griffith's personal popularity was evidenced in a spontaneous outburst of applause when the director passed before the camera, in a flash of a second, unannounced and entirely unexpected, as one of the "crowd" then under the eye of the machine during a vista of Parisian street life.

"The Great Love" gives every indication of marking another immensely popular appeal to the picture going public. Elsewhere the work has been technically judged for this issue, and it only remains for this report to register the undeniable indications of public approval for this latest of the master-craftsman's handiworks.

Exposition Will Be Held in October

At Gathering Held in Office of National Association Space Contracts for $24,000 are Reported.

THERE is going to be a motion picture exposition in New York in October. This was definitely settled at a gathering of the representatives of the companies which have contracted for space held Monday at the offices of the National Association. The meeting was presided over by William L. Sherrill, a director of the Motion Picture Exposition Company, in the absence of President William A. Brady.

The meeting was called at the request of the board of directors of the Exposition Company, who deemed it advisable that the companies which had contracted for space for the October show should learn of the plans which are under way to hold a big motion picture Liberty Loan rally in the week of October 5-13 which will include also the banquet which will be the biggest affair of its kind ever held by the industry.

It was reported at the meeting that twenty companies had actually signed up contracts amounting to about $24,000 and a majority of these companies were represented at the meeting when it was unanimously voted to proceed with the plans as originally outlined.

The following companies have contracted for space: Vitagraph, Pathe, Fox, Universal, Triangle, World, Precision Machine Company, Nicholas Power, National Carbon, Edison Lamp Works, General Electric, National Lamp Works, Argus Lamp and Appliance, American Coin Register, Westinghouse, William A. Brady, Famous Players-Lasky, Metro, Frohman Amusement, Goldwyn and Select.

The officials of some of these companies who were in attendance at this meeting declared their intention of increasing their space holding and of securing space contracts from other companies which are not now represented.

"Stolen Orders" Sold for 20 Countries

Indications that Sun Will Never Set on William A. Brady's Production of Diplomatic Intrigue.

TWO of the most interesting sales of foreign rights that have been recorded in some time are announced in connection with Wiliam A. Brady's screen story of diplomatic intrigue, "Stolen Orders."

Through W. H. Seely, representing Robertson, Cole & Co., a sale has been closed covering the rights to "Stolen Orders" for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and colonies. This means that the Brady picture will not only shortly be shown in England, Ireland and Wales, but as well in India, Burma, Ceylon, Straits Settlements and South Africa. Prints will be turned over to Robertson, Cole & Co., in New York, and it is the confident expectation of that concern that "Stolen Orders" before long will be thrilling thousands in the far places and the near.

Another significant and important sale recently closed is that whereby Harry G. Kosch, acting for John Olsen & Co., purchased the rights for "Stolen Orders" for France, Morocco, Tripoli, Algiers, Egypt, Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Japan, China and the Philippines.

With the feature showing simultaneously in the territories purchased it can be said of the Brady picture that, like the British Empire, the sun never sets on it.

Following its recent remarkably successful runs in legitimate theatres in New York and Washington, the Brady picture has just played a week of excellent business at the Shubert Theatre, Boston.

BRAY STUDIOS AIDING GOVERNMENT.

Bray Studios, Inc., producers of Paramount Bray Pictographs, who from the first days of the entrance of the United States into the war have been engaged in film production for various Government bureaus, recently established a special department devoted exclusively to the production of government films.

This department, under the supervision of J. F. Leventhal, is working on a series of animated technical drawings for the Army War College intended to demonstrate the operation of the many complicated devices with which a modern army wages war. These films are employed by the War College for instruction purposes in training camps and have met with great success.

JOSEPH COUFAL RECEIVING CONGRATULATIONS.

The many friends of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph F. Coufal were agréeably surprised to receive an attractive "pink" announcement of the arrival on August 8 of a baby daughter to grace their household; and are showering the couple with congratulations.

According to the latest news, both the baby and Mrs. Coufal are doing finely, and Joe, who is a member of the staff of the United Theatre Equipment Company, is greeting everybody with the smile that won't come off.

WILL GENTZ JOINS DRAMATIC MIRROR.

Will T. Gentz, prominently identified for years with the press and with foremost enterprises in theatrical and musical fields, has withdrawn from the Fox film organization to become associate editor of the Dramatic Mirror. Mr. Gentz set in motion a national publicity campaign in behalf of "Salome," a big screen spectacle announced for early presentation, while with Fox.

Los Angeles War Service Members Parade

Ahorse and Afoot and on Floats Men and Women of the California Studios Stage Brilliant Pageant and March Past Cheering Throngs in Celebration of the Victories of American and Allied Armies

THE street pageant and parade given by the Motion Picture War Service Association on the night of July 31 to celebrate the victories of America and the Allies in France, and to welcome and open the Allied War Exposition at Exposition Park, was one of the most brilliant and spectacular pageants ever staged in Southern California. Practically all of the motion picture people in Los Angeles had a part in the great jubilee. The parade formed at Seventh and Hope streets, marched over to Broadway, up Broadway to First, over First to Spring, and then down Spring to Ninth street, where it disbanded.

The entire route of the parade was a blaze of lights, a medley of music and vocal applause and enthusiasm. Multitudes of people packed the streets.

Douglas Fairbanks, riding on a big horse and wearing a big white hat and a big wide smile, was grand marshal and led the parade.

Mary Pickford, stepping along at the side of David Wark Griffith, walked the entire distance.

Lois Weber, at the head of the Studio Girls, each wearing a robe and cape of white, a white colonial hat and a sash of blue and red, made the old town rock with applause.

There were soldiers and sailors by the platoon and by the battalion. The boys from Fort McArthur, the boys from San Pedro, the boys from the submarine base, the balloon school—fine upstanding fellows, fit crusaders for Pershing, every lad of them—and the Lasky Home Guards with Major Cecil B. De Mille at their head, furnished the military atmosphere.

And bands! One from Fort McArthur that was a little parade all by itself. One hundred and five pieces there were to that band! And the Naval Reserve Band, the band from the Soldiers Home, the Letter Carriers, the Firemen's, the Elks, the Eagles, the Knights of Pythias, the Salvation Army, the Fife and Drum Corps, and the Scotch Bagpipers—two lots of them, each with a lad as tall as a step-ladder doing the drum major act, or whatever it is that the boss of a bagpipe band does.

There were directors by the dozen, directors on horseback, directors on foot; high salaried experts and moguls of the films using shank's mare as a mode of locomotion and shouting themselves hoarse as they went along.

Helen Keller Marches Between Two Little Girls.

Helen Keller, who is in Los Angeles to make an educational film, blind to the lights, deaf to the music, but strong in patriotism, clasped hands with two little girls and marched bravely along.

There were twelve floats in the line of march—such floats as only the artistic talent of the studios could be expected to turn out.

Astra studios, representing Portugal, was the first, and behind this float marched the Kaiser, the Crown Prince and Von Ludendorff in chains.

The Griffith studio's float portrayed Victory, with Helen Weiner as the symbolic figure.

The Thomas H. Ince plant had Japan, with a number of native Japanese dressed as ancient warriors. Modern soldiers marched alongside the float, which was drawn by eight horses.

The Fox studio's was Belgium, with Gladys Brockwell typifying the stricken nation.

The Vitagraph float represented the spirit of Canada and showed the triumphant lions of the Dominion.

Triangle depicted the spirit of Italy, with Alma Rubens as Italy and Barney Sherry as Columbus.

Mack Sennett's float, England, was a reproduction of the heavy English field pieces, and belched forth shots and smoke at intervals.

Scotland's Float Shows a 42-Centimetre German Gun.

The Robert Brunton studios had a reproduction of a captured German 42-centimetre howitzer. The float represented Scotland, and Bessie Barriscale was the central figure. Little Mary June Irving, wearing a Red Cross costume, was also on the float.

William S. Hart's float represented Serbia, with Josephine Howard as Serbia.

Lasky's typified the United States, with Edna Mae Cooper as Columbia. There were soldiers and sailors, all kinds of war workers and two Red Cross nurses on the float.

The Metro float represented Cuba, and had two symbolical figures in the persons of Anna Q. Nilsson as Liberty and Eileen Hume as Cuba.

The monster pageant was arranged under the direction of S. E. V. Taylor, representing D. W. Griffith, chairman of the Motion Picture War Relief Association.

The Allied War Trophy Exhibition opened at Expostion Park the next day, August 1, and at twelve o'clock on that day another monster parade of soldiers, sailors, bands and exhibits of war relics, including the original British war tank Brittania, marched through the streets of the city.

Mary Pickford was again a central figure, representing the City as Miss Los Angeles. She was presented by the Government with a service flag containing 14,000 stars.

Bernard H. Dyas, Los Angeles manager of the War Exhibit, made a public acknowledgment of the work done by the motion picture industry.

"In the interests of the Chambers of Commerce of Los Angeles, and all Southern California," he said. "I desire to express my appreciation and theirs of the great work done by the motion picture industry. The Allied War Exhibit is a patriotic affair, and as usual the motion picture people responded. Their parade was donated without any solicitation on our part."

R. W. Priest Forms Brokerage Company

The Film Market, Inc., Will Handle Productions for Independent Picture Makers.

ROBERT W. PRIEST, who has become well known in the motion picture industry during the past five years through his activity, enterprise and energy in the exploitation and in the purchase and sale of special feature productions, has organized a unique enterprise called "The Film Market, Inc.," under the laws of the State of New York, with offices at 403 Times Building, New York.

This corporation is designed to furnish a reliable and financially responsible channel through which independent producers may market their productions to the best advantage with every assurance that they will be efficiently exploited; and, on the other hand, a medium for the purchase of pictures by buyers for all territories throughout the world, putting them in touch with all available features that are to be had, thereby bringing independent producers and American and foreign buyers in contact under conditions of the fullest advantage to both.

Robert W. Priest.

For four years Mr Priest has made a special study of the production and sale of features and their exploitation, and possesses information of great practical value in this connection. This information includes all statistics that can possibly have any bearing on the probable earning power of a picture in any specific territory throughout the world and facts and figures in relation to the production, sale and exploitation of big specials in the past, which have never before been collated.

Film Market Has Wide Powers.

The Film Market, Inc., has extraordinarily wide powers under its articles of incorporation, which give it authority not only to act as a buying or selling agent, but also the right to finance productions and to do anything and everything required in connection with distribution and exploitation, either as principal or agent.

Mr. Priest, who is a theatrical manager of many years' experience, began his connection with the moving picture industry as manager for the Gaumont Company and Lee Shubert in 1913, exploiting the Captain Scott South Pole Pictures. Since then he has been constantly engaged in exploiting various subjects for the principal producing and distributing companies. From the time he started in the business Mr. Priest has kept a detailed record of his work, which record now covers 700 typewritten pages and affords an answer to almost every problem of producing and marketing and enables Mr. Priest to speak with authority.

Hodkinson to Release Walker Pictures

Addition to Service of Park Productions Will Complete Distributor's Plans of One Picture a Week.

WITH the addition to its service of Lillian Walker Productions the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation makes good its recent statement that it would release one picture a week commencing September 1. This announcement, following on the heels of the addition of Jesse D. Hampton productions, makes five sections of Hodkinson Service.

In addition to the new series of eight Lillian Walker productions, Hodkinson Service consists of J. Warren Kerrigan in Hampton pictures; Anita King and Kathleen Clifford in Plaza pictures; Bessie Barriscale, Louise Glaum and Henry B. Walthall in Paralta Plays, and the Douglas Natural Color films, the first production of which is "Cupid Angling" with Ruth Roland.

Lester Park, president of the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation, has been an exhibitor, and his brother, Byron Park, is at present at the head of a co-operative motion picture organization of exhibitors in Utah.

In referring to this additional product W. W. Hodkinson stated: "The coincidence of Mr. Park's ideals with mine would seem to offer conclusive proof that there is something different and essentially right in the principles of my organization."

"The Embarrassment of Riches" will be the first release, scheduled for September 23. Louis K. Anspacher is responsible for the story, which is nearing completion at the Thanhouser studio at New Rochelle.

Just What Is Supply of Screen Stories

Sarver Points Out There Are a Hundred Thousand Foreign Plays as Well as Novels and Short Stuff.

AFTER seeing the mass of photoplays presented day after day in the motion picture theatres and looking over the past releases of the different producing companies, one wonders how long will it be before the supply of material for screen entertainment becomes exhausted," says Charles Sarver, scenario editor of World Pictures.

"In Reginald Clarence's 'Stage Cyclopaedia' there is mention made of over fifty thousand English plays. The French drama includes over twenty-seven thousand plays. Spain, Italy and the rest of the continent have given us nearly twenty-five thousand. Of course, out of this great mass of dramatic literature less than 50 per cent are adaptable for motion picture purposes.

"We have also as a source of supply the current magazines and collection of novels and short stories. But from these inspirations we are bound to pick and cull because they include in many instances the same situations that give the photoplay its punch. There is one thing we must bear in mind that the day is fast approaching when a picture play, entirely original in every way, will be an isolated production. There will creep in these features something that either reminds us of a picture we have seen or a situation that has been used over and over again.

"The number of stories that daily come to the scenario editors passes all belief. From the length and breadth of this land are writers who are making valiant efforts to break into the ranks of photoplay writers, and it is well for scenario editors to encourage them. For it is from such sources that we will in the future have to depend for stories that have the elements of originality. After so long a time the experienced writer becomes so blasé that his output is marked with commoplace ideas."

Nat Rothstein Tries Out Gas Sedan

Usually Truthful Advertising Man Goes After Real Recreative Change in Machine He Can Lie In.

LOADING his oil tanks to capacity and his own tanks to sufficiency Nat Rothstein set forth upon vacation from 1600 Broadway without telling anybody where he was going. For several weeks Mr. Rothstein has been preparing for this fortnight of meandering. His work as advertising manager for Universal keeps him going at "high" the year 'round and to get a stock of adjectives compiled in advance, plus his weekly routine, kept this fiend for-work at the office for several evenings.

The Rothstein car is a sedan. Those who own Fords will know what is meant by the term sedan as applied to motoring. Generally speaking sedans have hitherto been chairs to sit in—but the Rothstein sedan is a machine with a place to lie in. It is said that Nat's truthfulness during fifty weeks of the year is so exacting upon his temperamental qualities that he must seek relief of a sedan to lie in during vacation.

The motor in question was the prize car displayed on the floor of Grand Central Palace during the Automobile Show last January. After the crowd had finished walking all over it, and testing out the seats and cushions, Mr. Rothstein had it furbished and is now proving that it is a practical car and not strictly a show piece.

GREIVER TO DISTRIBUTE FORD WEEKLY.

Simeon B. Greiver, formally president of the Greiver and Herz Exchange in Chicago, has disposed of his interests in that concern, as announced in the Chicago letter in the World last week, and has incorporated the Greiver Distributing Corporation in the state of New York to handle the national distribution of the Ford Weekly. Permanent headquarters have been established in the Vanderbilt Avenue Building, 51 East Forty-second street, New York.

Quimby Strong for Exhibitor Advertising

Pathe Sales Manager Sums Up Observations of Countrywide Tour and Advises Showmen to Encourage Newspaper Editors to Print Motion Picture News in Place of Declining Sporting Material

F. C. QUIMBY, sales manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., has recently returned from a visit to twenty-two of the Pathe exchanges in the United States. During his extensive journey Mr. Quimby discovered that in a number of cities the leading dailies are discontinuing their sport pages and are devoting much of this space to motion pictures.

"In one instance Mr. Keist, managing editor of the Dallas Times Herald," says Mr. Quimby, "stated that he had been devoting one page a day for years to sports and that he never received any advertising in return from ball clubs or sporting goods houses. He says he finds his readers are much interested in motion picture stories that make good reading. On the other hand, by boosting the motion picture theatres in Dallas he receives some revenue, whereas in boosting sports there was no revenue.

"In Seattle Jensen and Von Herberg and James Clemmer have been using big space in the Seattle Times for years and have found it profitable in running from quarter page to full page ads every day. The Seattle Times has reciprocated by giving the motion picture theatre in Seattle one of the best Sunday motion picture sections in the United States. The people in Seattle look forward to receiving their Sunday Seattle Times with as much pleasure as any special magazine. It is well got up, attractive, has snappy stories, well illustrated, and the make-up of the display ads are well done.

"The same situation exits in Portland with the Portland Oregonian and Journal where William Parker of the Majestic Theatre and the Jensen and Von Herberg interests are conducting the same progressive publicity campaign.

"San Francisco is fast going to the front with publicity for motion pictures. Gene Roth with his beautiful new California theatre and the Turner & Dahnken interests use liberal space in the San Francisco Examiner. Syd Grauman of Los Angeles states that, although his theatre is well out of the beaten path, coupling up his new house with big display space in Los Angeles papers had made it possible for him to do most phenomenal business. This is also true of Miller's, Quinn's and Tally's, who have all been very consistent users of display space.

New Orleans Overlooks Advertising Possibilities.

"In New Orleans Mr. Thatcher of the Times Picayune said he was willing to create a special motion picture department, but he was not able to make the theatre interests there understand the possibilities of newspaper publicity. Mr. Neumeyer, business manager of the New Orleans Item, made the same statement. New Orleans is the last place in the United States to get off to a good start on newspaper publicity, and this should not be so, as in New Orleans we have some of the most progressive exhibitors in the United States. Mr. Saenger showed me through his beautiful Strand theatre. He is doing everything in a big way in New Orleans with the exception that he should use more display space in the New Orleans paper. He has everything to back it up.

"Mr. Thatcher of the Picayune says Mr. Saenger only spends around $50 a week to present a million dollar show. This may be a little exaggerated, but I am positive if Mr. Saenger would use a liberal amount of display every day in the New Orleans Item and Picayune he would find these two papers more than willing to donate a liberal amount of reading matter and pictures and that although he is doing a corking good business he would find by using the newspapers more his business would be materially increased.

Predicts Further Increase of Exhibitor Advertising.

"Statistics show that for the six months ending June there was 30 per cent. more display space used throught the United States by motion picture theatres than the six months ending December, 1917. I predict for the six months ending July, 1919, we will see another increase of 25 to 30 per cent. over the six months ending June, 1918.

"Exhibitors all over the United States never had had more of an opportunity than at the present time to get in touch with their newspapers and urge the discontinuance of the sport page, to be replaced by a good attractive motion picture department. All distributing companies would be more than willing to supply these newspapers with good snappy stories and photographs. Branch managers everywhere would be instructed to personally co-operate with the newspapers in supplying them with all the material and information possible.

"Right at this particular time when sporting news is so scarce and on account of a great many professional sporting men being drafted it makes it hard for newspapers to keep up the sporting page. Therefore, exhibitors everywhere, branch managers and the industry as a whole should take advantage of this opportunity to impress upon newspapers throughout the nation the great importance of devoting their sporting page to the motion picture industry and they will find that the industry as a whole and the exhibitors will be willing to reciprocate in every way possible.

"In Kansas City I find that the exhibitors would like to use space, but the Kansas City Star will not give any free 'readers.' They have a young man in charge of their motion picture department (which is a very limited department) who is said to be unfamiliar with the theatrical business. He does not, it is charged, use stories submitted by the distributors or the exhibitors. This is a bad state of affairs and I am positive the managing editor of the Star can be shown the great importance of a live picture department.

Editors Will Meet Showmen Half Way.

"There are other cities where conditions exist similiar to this, all of which can be ironed out if this proposition is properly put before the managing editors of these papers. I have always found newspaper men to be most liberal in their views, and any time you can show them how they can make money they are more than interested.

"All that most of them ask is that the exhibitor come half way with them. Newspaper men realize that the public want motion picture stories, but they do expect the exhibitors to use a reasonable amount of display space to offset the cost of running the stories. Progressive newspaper men are always anxious to see that the makeup of their paper is good, and it has been fully demonstrated by the Seattle Times, the Portland Oregonian, the San Francisco Examiner, the Spokane Review, the Dallas Times Herald, the New York Telegraph, the Washington Post, the Cincinnati Inquirer and many other newspapers throughout the United States that a motion picture department is a great asset to their paper. If exhibitors in any locality have tried to encourage motion picture departments in their newspaper and failed we will be pleased to put our publicity department at their disposal to help them show their paper the great possibilities for the motion picture department."

Industry Is in Prosperous Condition

So Declares E. M. Porter of Simplex, Basing Statement on Sales of His Machines Down East.

REPORTS from the Boston Motion Picture Supply Company, 97 Pleasant street, Boston, exclusive distributors for Simplex machines in Connecticut, Massachusetts and Rhode Island, indicate a large percentage of increase in the sales of Simplex projectors in the last six months. At the present rate the installations in that territory will in the next few months far exceed the number of machines sold there in the corresponding period just past.

"This extraordinary increase," says E. M. Porter, general manager of the Simplex Company, "makes a significant commentary on the motion picture business generally in that section of the country known as Down East. It does not require any close study of the conditions, not only throughout New England, but in any other part of the country, to realize that the motion picture industry, as indicated by the sale of projection machines is in a prosperous condition. A glance at the monthly reports received from our distributors shows an upward sales tendency which cannot fail, in their uninterrupted increase in sales, to confirm our belief in the general improvement of business among motion picture theatres."

Checking Up the "Slackers" in Ohio

Sam Bullock's Publicity Committee Puts It Up Strong to Theatre Owners in the Cleveland District.

WORKING as secretary of the joint publicity committee of the League and the A. E. A. for the Cleveland district Sam Bullock, always forceful and definite when he has something to say, writes us a letter accompanying a circular of instructions to motion picture theatre owners of the Cleveland district on war work which show how they propose to check up the picture theatres in that section. Mr. Bullock's letter is worth reading:

Cleveland, O., Aug. 7, 918.

Editor Moving Picture World:

I note with interest the feverish preparations that are being made for various "drives" in the movies to help "Lick Hell out of the Kaiser." I also notice that "Victory Screen Pledge Certificates" and other "inducements" are going to be offered to managers to stimulate them to help Uncle Sam. This is dead wrong.

I say to hell with the manager who needs a "Gee-gaw" of any kind, especially since he and his employees are now beneficiaries under Provost Marshal Crowder's ruling. If the growing casualty lists will not stimulate him he should be drafted at once. If too old, his place should be closed and he interned as a "slacker." There are plenty of slacker managers in strong pro-German locations who do not care how many "Victory Screen Pledge Certificates" their opposition gets. THEY GET THE BUSINESS by offending no one.

As an active officer in organization matters here in Ohio, I have concrete evidence of this, so much so that after considerable correspondence with Messrs. Pettijohn and Rembusch, we, in Cleveland, have evolved a plan to make every manager in Ohio "toe the line for the boys over there" to make it unanimous on all matters emanating from Messrs. Creel and Hart's publicity office, O'K.'d by the moving picture industry's representatives. Non-members uncontrolled by League or A. E. A. orders or requests must be checked up.

Co-operation with the M. P. L. and kindred organizations will make for 100 per cent. efficiency where "gee-gaws" will stimulate box-office profiteering by "slackers" at the expense of the patriotic manager who needs no paper "Iron Cross."

I inclose you a copy of the "Cleveland Plan" sent out to all exhibitors and exchange men in franked United States envelopes.

SAM BULLOCK,
Secretary Local No. 1 M. P. E. L. of A.
National Director A. E. A.

A Strong Circular of Instructions.

Important Notice to All Motion Picture Exhibitors. All Motion Picture Theatre Employees Exempted from the Draft.

Provost Marshal General Crowder places all motion picture theatres upon the "Essential" list by his recent ruling, thus expressing the Government's appreciation for the assistance our screens and theatres are rendering in helping to win the war. This ruling places your theatre upon the same footing as a munitions plant and we hope there will be no "slackers" among Ohio exhibitors. Please give close attention to war propaganda, films, slides etc. Give special attention to the slide advertising Civil Service examinations for stenographers, clerks etc. If you have not received this slide, phone the undersigned at once.

ALTERNATE DAILY with the "Thrift Stamp" and "Order Coal" Slide, while the "CIVIL SERVICE" slide is running until Aug. 17. Apply at your film exchange for the new "THRIFTIE TRAILERS"—these are distributed free to be attached on each program as received. Theatres will be checked up as "Non-essential" if found negligent in these important matters. Let us prove our value 100 per cent to Uncle Sam and help "LICK HELL OUT OF THE KAISER."

Exhibitors (non-members of the League or American Exhibitors' Association) can get supplies and detailed information at headquarters, second floor, Republic Building, 647 Euclid avenue, 2 to 4 daily, or phone the undersigned. SAM BULLOCK,
Secretary League & A. E. A. Joint Committee, 4801 Denison avenue. Cuy. Lorain 1021-R, or Cen. 6043-K. Also at League and A. E. A. meetings every Tuesday, 2 P. M.

P. S.—All exhibitors will please understand that a theatre is not regarded as "essential" unless the management conforms to "Essential" war requests. You cannot "camouflage" by putting a flag outside and neglecting to "do your bit" inside.

To Film Exchange Managers: The above notice has been mailed ALL exhibitors in Cleveland district. Please display same in your office for the information of out-of-town exhibitors. THE CASUALTY LIST IS GROWING—our boys are doing nobly. We must go the limit and help. We are co-operating with Director Crouse of the W. S. S. Board.

SAM BULLOCK,
Secretary Publicity Committee.

"War Matinees" for Returned Soldiers

Cromelin Discusses Possibilities of War-time Innovation Adopted by Exhibitors in Great Britain.

PAUL H. CROMELIN, president of Inter-Ocean Film, and a keen student of international film conditions, believes the "war matinee" in British kinemas to which wounded soldiers are invited minus charge will eventually be seen in America. The British exhibitor, Mr. Cromelin found, had worked up a degree of public good-will that more than balanced the few seats given away.

"It has been the English picture man's great chance to combat censorship faddists and other enemies of the screen," says Mr. Cromelin, "and I am sure the American exhibitor, ever progressive, will want to seize this same opportunity.

"In most English military hospitals the convalescing patients are allowed out from two to six o'clock in the afternoon. The matinee show of the neighboring exhibitor is wide open to the soldier. The latter knows exactly the treat he is 'in for.' A doctor who asked a thrice-wounded Tommy how he expected to spend his first afternoon in Blighty was nonchalantly told: 'At the pictures, sir, of course.' It is easy to see why the films hasten Tommy's recovery.

"The real rulers of the new America will be its returning doughboys. They will hold the balance of political power even as the G. A. R. did after the Civil War. They will smash censor tyrants and compel Sunday opening—if we win them to the films as the British exhibitor has done. What is the American theatre man going to do about it?

"I can do nothing better than remind the American exhibitor that two salient facts stand out as the result of the Great War. One is, 'In time of peace prepare for war.' And the other, 'In time of war prepare for—peace.' England is showing Motion Picture America its great opportunity."

Film Offerings at New York Theatres

Programs for the Week of August 11 at Some of the More Prominent Local Picture Houses.

RIALTO.—Dorothy Dalton, in a Paramount picture, "Green Eyes," written by Ella Stuart Carson and directed by William Neill, was the featured player at the Rialto the week of August 11. Jack Holt, Robert McKim and Emery Johnson are members of the cast. A Paramount-Mack comedy called "She Loved Him Plenty," a scenic, and the Animated Magazine completed the picture program. DeSere La Salle was the soloist.

RIVOLI.—William S. Hart in an Artcraft picture, "Riddle Gawne," held the leading position on the Rivoli program. The photoplay is based upon a story by Charles Alden Seltzer, and was directed by the star. Kathleen MacDonald is a member of the cast. The Rivoli Animated Pictorial, a scenic and a cartoon by Tad were also shown. Gladys Rice was the soloist.

STRAND.—The new Griffith feature, "The Great Love," showing the awakening of the wealthy and exclusive classes of England to the needs of the war, headed the list of pictures at the Strand. The cast includes Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish and Robert Harron. The Topical Review was also on the program.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—First half, Enid Bennet in "The Vamp." Latter half, Bessie Barriscale and Howard Hickman in "Maid o' the Storm."

FORTY-FOURTH STREET—Griffith's "Hearts of the World" continues its run.

GEORGE M. COHAN'S.—"America's Answer."

MME. YORSKA ARRIVES IN LOS ANGELES.

Madame Yorska has arrived in Los Angeles to begin her career in the film world. She will produce her film dramas at the Brunton Studios in Hollywood under the auspices of the Matzene Company, with which she has a three-year contract. Madame Yorska is a protege of Madame Sarah Bernhardt's.

Representatives of her company and the studios at which she will produce were on hand to welcome her at the train, headed by Mr. Matzene. Among the party were also the dramatic editors of the leading Los Angeles papers who had met Mme. Yorska on her previous visit to Los Angeles.

Full preparation is being made for Madame Yorska at the Brunton Studios. Robert Brunton, master art director and head of the studios, will devote his attention to the details. The story selection for her debut has not yet been announced. The method of distributing Mme. Yorska's productions will soon be announced.

ROLLO MUTUAL'S ASSISTANT SALES MANAGER.

S. J. Rollo, who has been connected with the sales department of the Mutual Film Corporation for the last year, has been appointed assistant salesmanager by A. S. Kirkpatrick, Mutual's new assistant general manager. Mr. Rollo entered the Mutual organization from Montgomery, Ward & Company, the big Chicago mail order house, after an apprenticeship in salesmanship with the National Biscuit Company. Some months ago he was placed in charge of the employes' department of the Mutual and was promoted from that post to the position of assistant sales manager.

PRESIDENT SMITH DONATES PATRIOTIC FILM.

Albert E. Smith, president, is donating, in the name of the Vitagraph Company, the cast, film, director and cameraman for the making of a patriotic short length film to be used for the benefit of the Woman's Hospital Association of Los Angeles. Nell Shipman will be the principal in this story, supported by Otto Lederer and several other members of the Vitagraph forces. W. C. Hall will direct this patriotic film.

How Bookings Help in the Trophy Race

To Date Nearly Fifteen Hundred Patriotic Motion Picture Managers Have Booked "Pershing's Crusaders," and There Are Still Three Weeks Before the Contest Closes--Do Your Bit, Let Your Patrons See This Picture

CENTERED on this page you will find the first tabulation of the bookings made for "Pershing's Crusaders." This is not the standing of the various contestants for the six-foot bronze trophy offered by the Moving Picture World for the most intensive bookings of this the first of the series offered by the United States Government, through its Committee on Public Information, Division of Films. It does not give the percentages of the various exchanges. It merely recapitulates the bookings recorded to date, which is, of course, ten days earlier than the published date. For that matter, there is still a full three weeks for pulling up the record.

The State Committees on Defense in North Dakota, Michigan and California planned prior to the arrangement with the First National Exhibitor's Circuit to handle all film publications of the Creel committee, and no reports from them are as yet available, but it will be remembered that Sol Lesser, of California, has already announced his intention of getting that prize away from everyone else, and it is to be presumed that all three are hustling.

There are some mighty encouraging figures in the report, and some few that do not look so good. The film has been shown only once in Nevada and twice in Hawaii, making a total of but three bookings for that territory, and Mississippi and Louisiana combined have but five bookings between them. Surely there must be something the matter with these figures!

On the other hand, look at Colorado, New Mexico, Utah and Wyoming, which have gone ahead. They had fifty-three bookings as the ace in the hole when the figures were first published. They did almost half of that in the next week and more than half the last week. They scored a total of 109. That's a gain of 56, and the entire state of New York lacks two bookings of equaling those figures, but you keep your eye on Carey Wilson. He may have worn a fuzzy green hat when that caterpillar headgear was popular, but if doing the "Legree" over his salesmen is going to have an effect we shall not have to pay express charges on that trophy—we'll send it over by the office boy and we'll all go along to see that it gets there safely. It's a pretty big trophy and we have a half-portion office boy.

Harry Weiss, of the Chicago office, writes: "Illinois will come very near copping that trophy. We are going to get 'Pershing's Crusaders' into Illinois as close to 100 per cent. as any living 'man power' can possibly get it. I am traveling almost entirely by automobile and there are few water tanks I do not visit."

He does not say he is traveling on the water wagon, but from his fondness for the tanks it would seem that his is a white ribbon car. Let's look at the table. Nineteen last week and only nine for the last report. That doesn't look so good, but then the mails are all shot to pieces. Weiss will do to keep a spare eye on.

Floyd Brown, of Indianapolis, announced that he was out for better than 100 per cent. bookings. J. M. Jacobs and H. C. Knox are hustling. The bookings for this week register 14 with 12 the week before—and they are still going up like a copper stock that Tom Lawson is advertising. Seventy-six does not look so good, but there is still time.

That same total of 76 is announced by Douglas Hawley, of the Texas-Arkansas headquarters. But he got only 12 this week and 17 the week before. But then, it's easy to miss train connections on those Texas roads, and next week may show a different story.

F. V. Fisher, of Seattle, and C. H. Feldman and A. C. Arthur, his aides-de-camp, are getting their stride. Only 6 for the second week with 17 for a starter and now they show 15 in one week. That's the right way to climb.

General Flynn, of Philadelphia, came up to the hundred mark with the aid of W. J. Heenan and Lieutenants Mansell, Tolman, Smiley and Van Dyke. They have the aid of the marines in Philadelphia, and Flynn is not going to sit back in his chair and take a man-sized breath until he can add a percentage mark to that hundred.

C. E. Holah, of Des Moines, who announced that we might as well send him the trophy now as a few weeks from now, has hit upon a capital scheme. He gets the managers who have already played the film to write brother managers of their success. That sort of a report beats anything the salesmen can say, and we're passing his tip along. The film has made money—and something better than money—wherever it has played. His figures were 75 to start off with. He added 19 the first week and 31 last week. That's going some! That ties the Colorado advance and is only 6 behind the Eastern Pennsylanvia high water mark.

Four of the nine bookings credited to Lee L. Goldberg, of the Kentucky-Tennessee section, are mining camps. That's small fry, but it is a sign that the Goldberg hustler gets the Government's idea. They want everyone to see it, not just a few in the big towns. That's why we offer a splendid trophy for intensive work.

This is not an ordinary film. It's Government work. It is the message of a nation to its people, and the manager of a house who does not show his patrons this film is not a 100 per cent. American. Perhaps he has never done business with the First National before, but this is not a First National production. It is a Government document, and the man who cannot, at the end of the drive, display in his lobby one of the beautiful Victory Screen Pledges given by the Division of Films of the Committee on Public Information to every exhibitor who books in this subject, is helping the Kaiser. That may sound a bit strong, but that is just what it amounts to. Nothing will check the effect of Hun propaganda talk more effectually. Nothing will bring greater cheer to the true American. Last week we offered a cut of this diploma, but no cut can do justice to the original. It is genuinely artistic and it means a lot to any man. Get one of the certificates now. Don't wait until public opinion compels you to book in these features. Lead your patrons and don't make them force you to do your duty.

It's not going to cost you anything. If you work it right you can make a real clean-up and a greater gain in prestige that will resolve itself into money in the long run. It's not a sacrifice to which you are being urged. You are merely being invited to make money. That's what you are running a theatre for, isn't it?

"Crashing Through to Berlin" Opens

Broadway Packed at Showing of Universal's News Weekly "Shots" Formed in Continuity to Card-Index World Struggle.

THREE days advance advertising in the daily papers, large space employed in the Sunday issues and an uncommon amount of billposting had a visible effect upon the neighborhood of Broadway, at Forty-first street, Sunday evening, August 11, when the Universal enlarged upon its opportunities for exhibiting purposes and gave the first public showing of "Crashing Through to Berlin." Before 8 o'clock the line of would-be ticket purchasers extended down Broadway to Fortieth street, and until long after the entertainment started this line kept alive and insistent with evidence of desire to see this latest offering of war's by-product.

With all seats taken and standing room pre-empted to the limit the prelude to the main attraction started with an audience ready to applaud anything and everything. Six or eight reels of assorted "stimulators" preceded "Crashing Through to Berlin." These subjects included the Screen Magazine, Miracles in Mud, and Industrial, a song rendered from a stage box, and some tableau interludes that all had a large element of "kind applause" in their composition.

Despite the fact that the house had been applauding for an hour, there still remained vigor to enthuse over the principal offering—but the "edge" was dulled by the introductory films, while better showmanship would have nourished the general effect of patriotic fervor for concentration on the "big show." Nevertheless there was enthusiasm and applause running all through the showing of "Crashing Through to Berlin"—with abundant evidence that everybody hoped the ticket selling title would speedily be made good.

The sub-titles were numerous and fulsome, titles in a vast majority of instances remaining on view far in excess of the time devoted to "shots" of the film referred to. This, of itself, is accounted for in the necessity of maintaining some sort of continuity in making entertainment out of what seemed to be extracts from news weeklies in times past and present.

Putting together these vistas of events in many lands, assembling them in something approaching historic sequence and forming the scores of brief "shots" in support of long titles has been accomplished with great credit to the several men whose names are displayed along with the main title. These names lead with Carl Laemmle, who "personally directed" the offerings; a Mr. Whipple, who edited, and Jack Cohn, who "produced" the completed subject. To these men goes credit for organizing what is, in fact, a pictorial history of the world war (in its high lights and essential details) almost up to date.

Beginning with "shots" at the funeral of the Archduke Francis Ferdinand and his consort the series of sub-titles and "shots" go on with the multiplicity of historic events that have so filled the past four years with momentous undertakings. France, Russia and England spring to arms; Belgium is invaded, and the wreck and ruin in the Hun's trail are vizualized. The Kaiser and his chinless son are shown; Von Hindenberg and many other leaders in Germany's assault upon civilization are pictured—and the audience evidenced great patience in modifying its signs of emotion to an amazing degree. These master Huns were viewed during a silence that was emphasized by the outburst of patriotic fervor always bestowed upon the next succeeding "shot" that pictured an incident with the Allies.

Practically every angle of the progress the war has made in four years was pictured on the screen in brief "shots"; the disclosures were, in fact, a pictorial card-index of events that led up to the time the United States "shied its castor into the ring"—and then came the real, big, demonstrations of patriotic fervor. Toward the end of the showing came pictures registering the development of aerial forces; the Zeppelin raids, and pictures of these dead vultures; aeroplane flights and inspiring sights in "stunts" and battle formations that will thrill every beholder. At one time there were as many as fifteen "birds" in the air, flying in alignment, V-shaping their course exactly as wild geese wing their way northward in early spring. HILL.

Big U. B. O. Booking of Red Cross Film

Albee and Murdock Co-operate with General in Giving Patriotic Subject 2200 Showings.

AT one stroke the successful American Red Cross Film entitled "The Fourth of July in Paris" has been assured of immediate country-wide showing in the most popular vaudeville houses in the most important cities. Due to the lively interest E. F. Albee and John Murdock, of the United Booking Offices, in all that appertains to the American Red Cross and to the patriotic and humanitarian motives behind that organization, the many vaudeville theatres which are served with material by this great booking concern will show the Red Cross film as part of their program. In co-operation with the General Film Company, which is distributing the picture for the American Red Cross, Messrs. Albee and Murdock have promptly closed a broadcast booking. This means a time of 2,000 days or so. It is not believed any such extensive booking of a one-reel film offering has ever been made in one transaction.

A pre-release run of one week at the Rivoli theatre in New York demonstrated, through the applause and cheers of the audiences and the enthusiastic comments of the New York daily newspapers, that this rousing little patriotic film was an ideal offering for any theatre in the country. Reflecting credit upon the American Red Cross Bureau of Pictures, which secured and brought over the film, it covers an international historic event in condensed and remarkably effective manner. The graphic reproduction of the first victorious troops from Chateau-Thierry marching in Paris at the initial observance of our Fourth of July by the French republic is such as to thrill and exalt every spectator.

The U. B. O. engagement of "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris" means that the film will be programmed in the very largest Class "A" vaudeville theatres in the country, besides about 400 smaller houses. It is expected that "The Historic Fourth of July in Paris" will be filling its time in all of the U. B. O. houses about the week of August 19.

Rogers Registers All In, Not Fatigued

After Climbing Palisades Follies Favorite Repudiates Director's Instructions.—Knows Something About Lovemaking, Too.

WORK is progressing rapidly at Goldwyn's Fort Lee studios and at various nearby locations on "Laughing Bill Hyde," Rex Beach's powerful story of "the man who licked Fate," which Mr. Beach and Willard Mack are making into a motion picture for release under the Goldwyn star series plan. With good weather the production should be completed in another ten days or two weeks.

Will Rogers, famous lariat-throwing wit of the "Follies," who has the name role in the picture, is ready to admit that all is not movie gold that glitters. For nearly two weeks he has labored like a Hercules, working days in the picture and nights at the Amsterdam theatre. Two whole days he spent climbing up and down the Palisades, most of the time carrying in his arms the inert figure of an actor representing his penitentiary pal, with whom he had escaped some hours before.

"Register fatigue!" shouted Director Hobart Henley as the perspiring and out-of-breath Rogers reached the top rock of a towering cliff.

"I register all in," retorted the cowboy. "I don't have to pretend if I don't want to, do I?"

Later Rogers was called upon to jump to Boonton, N. J., for work on location. There he had his first chance to make love for the camera; and to say that he did it well would be gilding the lily. Any man with four years' experience in the "Follies" to his credit admittedly is a past master at the art. Anna Lehr has the role opposite him, that of an Alaskan Indian girl in the picture.

LEXINGTON SUNDAY CASES AT STANDSTILL.

The Lexington Sunday moving picture cases are at a standstill just now, and will not be resumed until the hearing on August 15. In the meantime the theatres are operating the same as usual and paying little if any attention to the added material that the members of the Laymen's Committee is securing to be used against them.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Ohioans Get Together on Sunday Shows

Sixty-four Towns Are Reported Closed on Sabbath and Committee is Created to Act in Situation.

EXHIBITORS and exchangemen from all sections of Ohio gathered in Columbus Thursday, August 1, to attend the second meeting of The Ohio State Screen League. This organization was formed the early part of June for the purpose of enlisting the aid and co-operation of all Ohio exhibitors in obtaining favorable Sunday picture show legislation.

The result of the first meeting was the discovery of how vitally the exhibitors of Ohio are affected by the Sunday closing law. While it was known that several towns had been forced to close up on Sunday, through pressure brought to bear by the ministerial powers of the towns, it was not known until a full report was made to the officers of the Ohio State Screen League that Sunday pictures have been banned in 64 cities of Ohio. In this list there are many prominent towns of large population. This indicates that it is only a matter of time until the blow will be aimed against Sunday pictures in the big cities of the state.

The towns already affected by the enforcement of the Sunday closing law are Findlay, Fostoria, Tiffin, Lima, Piqua, Portsmouth, Wadsworth, Bryan, Marysville, Wooster, New Philadelphia, Conneaut, Clyde, Lancaster, Circleville, Washington Court House, Delaware, East Liverpool, Wellsville, Xenia, Nelsonville, Athens, Logan, Ironton, Marietta, Gallipolis, Mount Sterling, London, Wellston, Greenfield, Lisbon, Hillsboro, New Boston, Coshocton, Cambridge, Troy, Sidney, Connellsville, McConnellsville, Milford, New Lexington, Alliance, Sebring, Urbana, Bellfontaine, Mount Vernon, Bremen, Van Wert, St. Marys, Wapakoneta, Crooksville, Roseville, Junction City, Gloucester, Amanda, Williamsport and Pleasantville.

This practically includes all of the cities south of Columbus with the exception of Columbus, Cincinnati, Dayton, Springfield, Hamilton, Middletown and Bellaire.

Following the announcement of the extent to which the Sunday closing of moving pictures had been carried in Ohio it was agreed at the recent meeting to invest full power of action in the hands of the executive committee, so as to get prompt and efficient action in obtaining a change in the present legislative measures which forbids Sunday pictures while sanctioning the Sunday baseball.

The executive committee consists of John W. Weinig, Cincinnati; C. W. Cline, Akron; Harry W. Kress, Piqua; Joseph Pearlstein, Toledo, and Zach Smith, Bryan. This committee will act in conjuction with the officers of the organization, Henry H. Lustig, president, and Fred Desberg, secretary.

Ontario Association to Publish Book

Will Contain Pictures of Members and Their Theatres as Well as Records.

THE Moving Picture Exhibitors' Protective Association of Ontario proposes to issue a "White Book" to describe its activities and prospects, as well as plans for the coming year. Every member of the association is going to get his name and face in the book, with a brief summary of his record in the theatre business.

Illustrations of all theatres owned or controlled by members of the association are also to be published. The album will also include a number of paid advertisiments from exchanges, newspapers, supply houses and other concerns. This business will pay for the book, it is expected. The work is in the hands of Secretary Thomas Scott of the association, whose office is located in the association's club quarters at 141 Yonge street, Toronto.

Louisville Theatremen to Aid Soldiers

Photoplay Association, Co-operating with Service Board, to Provide 900 Admissions Weekly.

NINE of the leading theatres of Louisville, constituting the downtown members of the Louisville Photoplay Association, are co-operating with the Louisville War Camp Community Service Board in order that soldiers at Camp Taylor who haven't the money can get to see pictures free of charge. At the suggestion of the War Camp Service Board the following theatres have agreed to give fifty tickets to each Saturday performance and a like number to the Sunday performances, making a total of 900 free admissions weekly to the boys in khaki, the members of the organization readily agreeing when the plan was put up to them by President Louis J. Dittmar.

This list includes the Strand, Mary Anderson, Majestic, Alamo, Walnut, Rex, Casino, Orpheum and Star theatres. The tickets will be distributed through the Soldier's Club, the Community Service office and company commanders. This plan has been carried out very successfully in other cities, in some cases the theatres turning over the entire seating capacity at certain shows to the soldiers.

The War Community Service Board will keep a record of the men securing tickets so that there will not be too much duplication and so that everyone will get a fair deal. The first trial of the plan was put into effect on Saturday, August 3. Local theatre managers claim that a few tickets more or less makes very little difference especially during hot weather, and that they are glad to be able to do something for the boys at the camp.

DETROIT CONCENTRATES ON EXCHANGES.

It looks as if the new film building at 63 East Elizabeth street, Detroit, will soon house every film concern in the city except the Dawn Masterplay Company, in the Owen Building. Already Metro has moved there, occupying ground floor space, and it is understood Triangle has signed a lease for one of the ground floor stores and that the Madison Film Exchange at 73 Broadway has also decided to move there within the next thirty days. This will make 90 per cent. of the Detroit film companies situated in the same building, which will be of great convenience to exhibitors and anybody doing business with the film exchanges. The newest firms to establish agencies in the film building are the William L. Sherry service on the second floor, the Educational Film Distributing Corporation on the sixth floor and a representative for the American Film Corporation on the third floor at the Pathe exchange.

Chicago News Letter

Rogers Has Had Wide Business Training

Becomes Manager of Pathe's Second Largest Office in America After Experience of Less Than Two Years.

THE story of F. B. Rogers, manager of the Chicago office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., will be read with more than ordinary interest by young men in the film business who have determined to work their way up. It will show that a good education, followed by business training in other branches of industry, is an important aid to success; that good health, with its great driving power, is an indispensable aid to success in business life.

Mr. Rogers is from Missouri. This fact will probably convey the impression that he is cautious. I believe he is, and, moreover, I believe that he must be shown things before he takes them confidently in his mind. He is from Kansas City, Mo., a city I like well, where he was born about forty years ago. He took the full course in the public schools of the city and was graduated from High School, after which he took a two-year course in Bunker Hill Military Academy, at Bunker Hill, in Southern Illinois.

F. B. Rogers.

This academy training evidently gave him a liking for the strenuous life, for he at once engaged in cattle-ranch business and spent four years on the range in Texas. There he added to his rugged health. Then he took up the livestock commission business in his home city and Chicago for several years, after which he became special representative for the American Telephone & Telegraph Company, handling contracts for private wires, Morris circuits, etc., for two years. Next he engaged in the wholesale cottonseed, meal and feed business, in the sales department, for a successful run of three years.

It will be seen that in all these occupations Mr. Rogers had been developing his resourcefulness as a salesman. At this point in his career he made up his mind to enter the film business.

In February, 1917, he was appointed special representative to Essanay's sales department for the handling of Max Linder comedies in Illinois and sections of Michigan and Iowa. This was his first work in the film business, and his great success is still remembered, although the quality of Linder's comedy had greatly waned because of his sickness. Rogers filled the position for four months when he was transferred to George Kleine's office, where he handled V-L-S-E subjects for some time.

He next became assistant manager of the Standard Film Corporation's Chicago office, under R. O. Proctor, succeeding the latter as manager in November, 1917. In April, 1918, Mr. Rogers became assistant manager of the Chicago office of Pathe Exchange, Inc., under Mr. Proctor, and when the latter was promoted to the position of division manager for the Middle West Mr. Rogers succeeded him as manager of the Chicago office. That was about three months ago, and, in the interim, Mr. Rogers has proved himself both successful and popular.

Mr. Rogers stands high in the estimation of exhibitors in Chicago and tributary territory, and this is directly due to his straightforward business methods and square dealing. Twelve years ago Mr. Rogers married Miss Edith Emory, of his home city, an old schoolmate. They have one child, aged 11.

"Bob" McKnight Says He Feels Lonely

Read His Letter from "Over There" and Sit Right Down and Write Him a Breezy Reply.

BOB" McKNIGHT, who was press agent with the American Film Company for some time before enlisting in the aviation service, about a year ago, has written to a friend in this city from "Somewhere in France." He is now a second lieutenant in the air service "over there." His letter bears the date of July 13, but was not received until the week of August 7.

The following paragraphs will be read with interest by his many friends, and it is hoped that all of them will comply with his request to write to him, as he is hungry for news from home:

"As you know I graduated from the Champagne Field on November 3 and sailed from New York as a member of the Fourteenth Foreign Detachment, arriving in France early in December. We sat around here awaiting training until nearly the first of May. (You see I have risen from the ranks like an Alger hero and the first six months of inaction saw me doing everything a private can do for Uncle Sam to earn his bully beef). I was dubbed a cadet, to be sure, and got $100 per, but my special stunt was getting out an American four-page weekly, telling of the Cadets' life and having it printed in a little French shop. It was called Beaumont Bull and really got quite a reputation on the A. E. F. Like all live issues, it was suppressed once by the authorities.

"Since May I have been learning to fly at an all-French school. I have gotten so far as to go up alone and come down again without breaking anything about the machine or myself. In a few weeks, if I am lucky, I shall be given a French brevet and the American R. M. A. and that entitles me to a week's holiday in the mountains or on the sea coast. After that, I will leave for the most famous of the advance training schools and shall go in a bombarding plane.

"I have been a backward student and the teachers gave me up, but as a matter of fact it is not very hard to fly, if you keep your head. You remember Bob Roberts—American's artist purchasing agent? I suppose you know he is teaching others to fly at Love Field, Dallas. We went to ground school together; but he stayed in the States when I came over here. Where we are it seems remote from the War, but in reality it is not so far from the firing line. We can hear the big guns booming.

"By early fall I hope to be flying over the lines. I wish you would pass the word around among the film folks I know that I'd like to hear from them. I never get enough news from home."

Please address your letters: Second Lieutenant R. B. McKnight, U. S. Air Service, France, Via N. Y.

Stage Carnival Out at Essanay Plant

Mrs. George K. Spoor Directs Novel Entertainment in Aid of Equipment for Unit 380, Home Guards.

GEORGE K. SPOOR, president of Essanay, turned over the studios and grounds in Chicago, Friday and Saturday, August 9 and 10, to Unit 380, Illinois Volunteer Training Corps, for a military carnival.

The carnival was held under the direction of Mrs. George K. Spoor, president of the Ladies' Auxiliary of this unit of the Illinois guards. The unit has been furnished with a drill hall and guns by President Spoor, and the carnival was for the purpose of raising funds for other equipment.

The organization, which has as its nucleus Essanay employes, is voluntary, and must furnish all equipment.

A motion picture of Unit 380, of which Captain Richard N. Woodman is commander, was taken Friday afternoon and also moving pictures of the thousands of visitors on the grounds. The pictures were run on the screen in the Essanay projection room Saturday evening.

There were all the delights of a Coney Island with the added fun of circus sideshows, including open-air dancing, Ferris wheel, merry-go-round, snake charmers, gypsy fortune tellers, an Indian village and other attractions.

A continuous vaudeville show with professional talent from the Chicago show houses, was held both days, also solo dances and ballets. Miklos R. Redey, a noted singer, rendered the Aria from "Pagliacci" and the Toreador song from "Carmen," in costume.

Charles R. Willis, world's champion climber, did some death-defying acts on a trapese on top of the Essanay studio.

Shakeup of Officers in Local 110

President Joseph P. Armstrong Requested to Resign and Herman Mintz, Recording and Corresponding, Secretary, Expelled.

JOSEPH P. ARMSTRONG, president of Local 110, I. A. T. S. E., was requested to resign that position July 27, on account of several charges brought against him by members of the local organization, which were investigated under the direction of Mr. Dolliver, one of the international officers of the I. A. T. S. E., who came on to the city for that purpose.

Charges were filed against the entire executive board of Local 110, and, in addition to the action taken against Joseph P. Armstrong, the recording and corresponding secretary, Herman Mintz, was expelled. No other members were affected.

It is said Mr. Armstrong assigned several operators of Chicago Local 110 to preferred positions in picture theatres, on the payment by them of certain sums of money to him personally.

Richard Green, one of the international officers resident in Chicago, was appointed to fill the position of president of Local 110, I. A. T. S. E., for the unexpired term. Frank Brown was appointed to fill the position of Herman Mintz for the unexpired term.

Indianapolis Sees a "Hoozier Romance"

All the Notables of the City Present at an Invitation Showing on Saturday, August 10.

SELIG'S "A Hoozier Romance" opened a week's run at the Alhambra, Indianapolis, Sunday, August 11. Great preparations were made for the event by Messrs. Barton & Olson, proprietors. A pre-showing was given in the theatre Saturday afternoon, August 10, to which the Mayor, city officials, literary societies and notable residents were invited by the management.

Several members of the executive staff of the Mutual Film Corporation and J. H. Herman, Selig's representative, went on from Chicago to be present at the invitation presentation, which was an unusual occurrence, owing to the high estimation in which James Whitcomb Riley is held in Indiana.

The script of the photoplay was adapted from one of the poet's short stories by Colin Campbell, director of the production for William N. Selig. Mutual purchased the big feature recently and its booking is proceeding rapidly, owing to the brisk demand.

Alfred Hamburger has secured the initial showing for Chicago, for his Ziegfeld Theatre, on Michigan avenue, where it will be shown during the week beginning Monday, August 19. It has been booked for the Ascher Bros.' circuit immediately afterward and also for the Lubliner & Trinz houses.

"America's Answer" Secured by Orchestra Hall.

In my letter in the issue of August 10 it was stated that the second official American film, "America's Answer," would begin an indefinite run at the Grand Opera House, this city, July 29. Now it has been learned that the pictures will not be shown at the Grand, but at Orchestra Hall, where they will have a run of three weeks, beginning Monday, September 9.

The first of this series, "Pershing's Crusaders," had a most successful run at Orchestra Hall and it is fitting that the second also should be shown at the same place, more especially during the hot summer months. This splendid hall bears the reputation of having the best ventilated auditorium in the country. Only recently an air washer was installed for removing the dust from the intake of air and at the same time humidifying it. Additions and alterations to the ventilating system were also made, which increased its capacity from 59,000 to 105,000 cubic feet of fresh, cool air a minute. The test was made this year by the city health department, and showed that, with a seating capacity of 2,582, Orchestra Hall furnishes more than twice the number of cubic feet per capita required by the city ordinance.

Christy Comedies Popular, Says Friedman.

J. L. Friedman, of Celebrated Players, informs me that the organization will celebrate its one-hundredth release of Christy comedies on August 19. These comedies are popular throughout the Middle West, Mr. Friedman says, the entire territory being covered from the Chicago office. Mr. Friedman has just purchased the rights for Illinois, Wisconsin, Iowa, Nebraska, Minnesota and North and South Dakota to the Gaumont serial, "The Hand of Vengeance." This serial is in 10 episodes of two reels each, and the first will be released early in September.

Political Action Committee Appointed by President Hopp.

Joseph Hopp, president of Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of A., appointed a political action committee of the organization on Tuesday, August 6. The chairman is William E. Haeney and the other members are Max Hyman, William E. Burford, Aurora; George Hopkinson, John Bobeng, Harry C. Miller, William Rone, Henry Von Meeteren and John Frundt. Mr. Hopp will act with the committee ex-officio.

The committee referred to will recommend for public office such candidates as seek the preferment of moving picture exhibitors and who are friendly to the interests of the moving picture industry generally.

F. J. Flaherty Severs Connections with Foursquare.

Frank J. Flaherty, manager of the Chicago office of Foursquare and owner of one-half interest in the office, severed his connections with the organization, Saturday, August 3. Holmes C. Walton, from the Foursquare studios, New York, will have charge of the Chicago branch until Mr. Flaherty's successor has been appointed. Mr. Flaherty is one of the best known and most popular exchange managers in Chicago, and his proved ability as a hustler and a business getter will not permit him to remain long out of harness.

New Manager for Lane Court Theatre.

H. M. Rouga, formerly an exhibitor in Canada and, more recently, manager of the Famous Players Film Corporation's office at St. John, New Brunswick, made a pleasant call at this office Monday, August 5. Mr. Rouga has been appointed manager of the Lane Court Theatre, one of the theatres on the Ascher Brothers' circuit in this city. This house formerly was managed by Bruce Godshaw for several years and he has been transferred to the management of the Frolic Theatre. Mr. Rouga stated that Lane Court was doing excellent business and that he is following closely the policy of Mr. Godshaw, under whose management the house was very successful.

Ascher Brothers Open Midway at Rockford.

The Ascher Brothers opened their fine new Midway Theatre in Rockford Saturday, August 3. The event was a gala affair and the house, which seats 2,000 persons, was packed. Norma Talmadge in "The Safety Curtain" was the leading feature of the program. This makes the sixteenth house on the Ascher Brothers circuit. The Midway has a very attractive interior and many compliments were paid the owners on the beauty and appointments of the house. This theatre will be a big boon to the soldiers in training at Camp Grant.

"The Great Love" at Orchestra Hall.

"The Great Love," Griffith's Artcraft feature, will be run at Orchestra Hall for one week only and not indefinitely, as was first announced. It will be shown during the week of August 11.

"Conquered Hearts" at Playhouse.

Marguerite Marsh in "Conquered Hearts" entered her second week at the Playhouse Sunday, August 11. This strong Rialto feature is scoring a big success. The prices are 25 and 50 cents, and 25 cents for matinees. It is distributed through the George Kleine system.

DRUCKER OF ST. LOUIS JOINS ARMY.

The National Army has called another of General Film Company's exchange managers. E. J. Drucker of the St. Louis branch has notified the home office of his call. Mr. Drucker had been making a record as manager of the branch.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

What Los Angeles Exhibitors Are Doing

Riverside Theatre Remodeled.

Howe and Merrill of Riverside, California, are remodeling the Loring Theatre, one of the three houses operated by the firm, which will be ready for opening about October 1. The Loring will be remade throughout and seating capacity increased. Mr. Howe spends three days a week in Los Angeles booking features and keeping in touch with the market, While Mr. Merrill acts as business manager and active manager of the theatre. The firm also control the Regent and the Orpheum in Riverside, the latter house being now closed for the summer. The Loring will run pictures six days a week with a vaudeville bill on Saturday night and an occasional road show.

Audience Sings at Grauman's.

A pretty innovation at the Grauman Theatre during the run of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was the singing of old plantation melodies by the audience. Jesse Crawford, organist, played the accompaniment on the great pipe organ, and the words of "My Old Kentucky Home," "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground," and "Old Black Joe" were flashed on the screen in time to the music, with an invitation to the audience to sing, which was accepted enthusiastically at every performance.

Notes of Theatres and Theatre Men.

Jacob Gottstein, from Seattle, owner of a string of theatres in the Northwest, is spending his annual vacation in Los Angeles and at the neighboring beaches.

The Burbank Theatre invited all sailors and soldiers on leave in Los Angeles during the run of "No Man's Land" to be guests of the management.

* * *

Howard Sheehan, part owner of the Rialto Theatre in San Francisco and brother of Winfield R. Sheehan, general manager of the Fox company, passed through Los Angeles on his honeymoon with his bride, who was Miss Edythe Claire Freiling, and was entertained at the Fox studio during his stay in the city. Mr. Sheehan and his bride departed for Catalina Islands the next day.

* * *

Walter Farnum, owner of a motion picture show on Seventh street in Los Angeles, has closed his theatre for the summer, and is spending his vacation at Universal City, playing extra parts and incidentally learning a few tricks about the film industry.

* * *

Sid Grauman invited a lot of little orphans from the Los Angeles orphanages to see Marguerite Clark in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" during the run of that film at his house.

* * *

D. W. Griffith's new Artcraft picture, "The Great Love," opened at Clune's Auditorium on August 12.

"Pershing's Crusaders" is in its third week at the Alhambra.

Lasky Leases Big Battlefield Site.

The Lasky Company has leased a tract of land consisting of 1,000 acres adjoining Griffith Park, west of Mount Hollywood, generally known as the old "Universal Ranch," for the purpose of filming outdoor scenes for Paramount and Artcraft productions. This famous ranch has been in continual use by various picture companies for nearly all the battles in history, from Roman and Egyptian to the present time, besides other scenes requiring large space. The Lasky company has had the use of a 1,500 acre ranch near an olive farm in the San Fernando valley, but the location was too far away from the studio. The present site is within five minutes ride from the Lasky studio in Hollywood.

Vitagraph to Send More Companies West.

An announcement has been made by the Western Vitagraph Company that several of the companies now working in the east will be sent to the studio in Hollywood for the coming fall and winter. The difficulties of heating and lighting the studios in the east experienced last winter is one of the principal reasons for the contemplated move, it is said. Of the players likely to be sent west are Alice Joyce, Edward Earle, Anita Stewart, Gladys Leslie, Harry Morey and Betty Blythe. Earle Williams, who intended returning to New York, has begun work on a new picture, and will probably remain in Southern California all winter.

Triangle Strike Averted.

A strike, which had been threatened because of the discharge of sixty union men at the Triangle studio at Culver City, was averted last week through the mediation of Charles T. Connell, Federal Labor conciliator. A charge was made that Triangle had laid off the union men without cause, and Chicago and New York motion picture houses were to be asked to refuse to handle any of the films produced by the Triangle company. Captain Connell brought about an understanding between the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Hands and the Triangle Corporation, and stated that the discharged men were to return to work.

Studio Extras Caught in "Work or Fight" Raid.

The central station War Squad of Los Angeles, made a raid on the film studios in Hollywood last week and corraled nearly a hundred young men within the draft age who were being used as extras in picture productions. At the first studio visited, one hundred and fifty men were being used in a battle scene. All of these were questioned, and forty were found who could not give evidence of being engaged in some essential occupation. At other studios the same process was gone through with, and the film producers were advised to seek their sham battle recruits from among the men who have been placed in Class 5 by the draft board.

Film Stars to Open Camp Theatre.

A presentation of "The Virginian" in spoken form is in preparation for the opening of the new Liberty Theatre that is being built for the soldiers in training at Camp Kearney. Frank Campeau, who created the original role of Trampas in "The Virginian" is in charge of the production, and has secured Dustin Farnum for the leading part, with Winifred Kingston, Gladys Brockwell, Tully Marshall, George Fawcett and others in the remaining important roles. Campeau will of course interpret his old part of Trampas, the villain. Douglas Fairbanks and William Farnum will be present at the opening performance.

Gish Company at Norwalk Celebration.

Dorothy Gish, with her director, Elmer Clifton, and her company of players were the guests of honor at a street pageant and parade at Norwalk, Cal., when the soldiers stationed near that town were given a farewell entertainment before they were sent to France. Scenic artists from the Sunset studio were sent in advance of the celebration to assist in decorating the city, and moving pictures were made of the whole affair.

Studio Club Dance.

The Hollywood Studio Club gave a dance on the night of August 3 for the boys in training at the Hollywood High School. Admission was charged to all except soldiers and sailors in uniform. The entertainment was in charge of Mrs. Jesse L. Lasky, Mrs. William De Mille, Miss Anne Bauchens and Miss Letitia McElvaney, and the music was furnished by a jazz band.

Second Propaganda Film to be Made Here.

A telegram from Washington to the Los Angeles division of the Motion Picture Directors Association made known the fact that the Committee on Public Information had decided the second propaganda film for use in all allied and neutral countries during and after the war—showing the United States aims and plans and object in entering the conflict—was to be made in Los Angeles. The local association of the Motion Picture Directors is headed by Frank Beal, president and chairman. Lois Weber, Walter Edwards, Joseph De Grasse, William Robert Daly and Ben Wilson are on the committee for the production. J. Searle Dawley, president of the eastern division of the organization, has been in Los Angeles for the past few weeks in conference with President Beal.

Anderson Contemplates Move.

The Gilbert M. Anderson Photoplay Company is said to be considering San Mateo, Cal., as a location for a studio for the Golden West Productions. Mr. Anderson leaves within a few days for New York on business in connection with his theatrical interests, and his decision about the San Mateo proposition has not been finally settled.

Scenario Writer Off for France.

Frances Marion, writer of scenarios for the Lasky Company and for Mark Pickford, has given up her $50,000 a year salary to take a commission from the Government to travel through the allied countries in search of material which will be used as propaganda and which will be published in magazines and newspapers in these countries. Miss Marion has an invalid brother who cannot go to war, and has taken it upon herself to represent the family at the front or wherever the Government sees fit to send her in the capacity of special writer. She will visit France and England first, then Scotland and Ireland, and afterward may perhaps include Russia, Japan, China, India and Egypt in her itinerary.

Carmel Myers May Desert Screen.

During her recent visit to New York Carmel Myers received a flattering offer from A. H. Woods, theatrical producer, to star in a regular stage play under his management. Miss Myers' contract with Universal does not expire until next May, and she says it is too soon to say definitely whether she will accept the stage offer, but her lifelong ambition has been a stage career, and she is very much tempted to take advantage of the offer.

Scenario School Established.

Owing to the serious problem of obtaining original story ideas for motion picture production, the Palmer Photoplay Corporation has established a school for the purpose of teaching the essential principles of scenario construction to the serious student of the photoplay. The Palmer plan includes a service designed to aid the author in finding the logical market for his scripts, although the organization will not act as broker between author and producer.

Frederick Palmer, who has been conected with several studios in the capacity of scenario writer, feature writer and editor during the past five years, is said to have the indorsement of such names as De Mille, Ince, Hart, Fairbanks, Pickford, Christie, Arbuckle and others.

Girls Swindled by Film School Man.

R. M. Godwin, director of a school of expression and motion picture acting, with quarters in the Mason Opera House building, is accused of having swindled a number of young girls who claim they have paid him money—one of them as much as $87—with the understanding that he was to educate them in the art of acting and a guarantee of a position with a film concern. The girls say that the only instruction they received was a few lessons in make-up and walking before a motion picture camera at Eagle Rock Park. The man is being sought on a warrant charging grand larceny.

Charges Apartment "Location" Injured Business.

Fannie Manzer, manager of an apartment house in Los Angeles, brought suit against the Universal Film Company for $50,000 damages, alleging that the use of her apartment house as a "location" for scenes in a problem play injured her business and brought her place into disrepute. Judge Weller refused to grant a motion for non-suit. The first witness for the defence was Phillips Smalley, who directed the photoplay on which the action was based. He testified that he selected the apartment house because it appeared to be a moderate priced place.

Lasky Home Guards Now Attached Unit.

The Lasky Home Guards, heretofore unattached, have become part of the State organization, with their own major in the person of Major Cecil B. De Mille. In obedience to orders from the State Adjutant General, the company has increased its number to full batallion strength.

The company numbers 150 and is equipped with a two-company machine gun and hospital section. Every member of the unit is actively engaged in the picture industry and all are members of the Lasky organization.

The Lasky Guards are regarded as the crack company of the State, and Governor Stephens, who reviewed the troops recently, told them that their fame had spread all up and down the Coast. The new unit will be known officially as the Fifty-first California Home Guards.

More Crusaders for Pershing.

Albert D. Cowles, former director with the Ince Company, has joined the Tank Corps.

Harry Edwards, of the Christie studio, went to a recruiting station the other day and enlisted in the Navy. The next day a card came for him telling him to report for draft service. Harry is proud of having beat the draft, even if the margin was close.

George Chesebro, former leading man at Universal City, has been made acting sergeant at Camp Kearney.

De Witte Hagar, of Lasky, has enlisted in the United States Naval Reserve.

Justin O'Connor, assistant to Frank Woods, of the Lasky studio, has joined the Canadian Army.

George Meehan, of the Sunshine studios, left August 1 for the Columbia University of Photography, from which institution he expects to be sent to France within the next six weeks. George was presented with a wrist watch from the employes of the studio.

Marshall Deats, from the business office of the Sunshine studios, has joined the Naval Reserves at San Pedro.

Film Stars Great Red Cross Workers.

On nearly any afternoon at the Red Cross Headquarters, on Eighth and Alvarado streets in Los Angeles, may be seen anywhere from one to half a dozen of the film stars from the various studios in Hollywood and vicinity, taking part in the entertainments in the little theatre on the grounds, presiding in the varous booths, or performing such stunts as selling soft drinks, singing and dancing, and otherwise entertaining the guests.

Winifred Kingston appears as hostess in the Tea Room at least once a week.

Julian Eltinge was guest of honor on Wednesday afternoon, singing the songs of his popular stage successes to entertain the guests.

Saturday of last week, the big day, Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, through the courtesy of the Orpheum Theatre Company, was announced as the chief attraction of the afternoon. In the evening Otto Lederer presented a sketch called "Filmdom Stars." Other film players who took their turn at entertaining the crowd by selling soft drinks, dancing and singing, were Dustin Farnum, Eddie Polo, Leo White, and a number of young ladies who took part in the street dance.

Bebe Daniels, of Rolin-Pathe, sang at a Red Cross benefit given at a private residence on Westlake avenue on the same evening.

Among the entertainers at a lawn fete held in Pasadena, at which nearly a thousand dollars was raised for the Balloon Camp Club House at Arcadia, were Douglas Fairbanks, Vivian Martin, and a number of regular stage players.

The L-KO studios did their "bit" by donating quite a bit of wood to be sold at the Red Cross Salvage Station on Sunset Boulevard in Hollywood.

Rubbernecking in Filmland

Personally Conducted by Giebler.

LADIES and gentlemen, the itinerary today includes two comedy studios, each of a distinct type. First we shall see polite comedies in the making, and for the benefit of those who may not understand technical terms it may be well to explain what is meant by polite comedies.

Movie comedies are divided into two classes, the polite and the impolite, and while the purpose of each is identical; namely, to contribute to the gaiety of the world by causing the facial phenomenon known as laughter the modus operandi of their manufacture is somewhat different.

The punch in the impolite comedy is gained through accident, while in the polite comedy the same thing is achieved by incident. The impolite comedians assault each other with bricks and pies, while their brothers of the polite films use inuendo and suggestion.

The low and rakish building we are nearing is the factory maintained by the Christies, Al and Charlie, sometimes known as the Jocose Brothers, because of the fact that they deal exclusively in jocularity.

This week the Christie boys are celebrating the making of their one hundredth comedy. This fact should convince any one that there must be a demand for polite comedies. Surely no plant could turn out one hundred comedies in one hundred consecutives weeks if there were not many people whose funnybones refused to function except at this brand of humor.

The tall man crossing the lot is Charles Christie, the business head of the firm. The other equally tall and—as you could see if he would but remove his hat—slightly bald gentleman, is Al, who directs the comedies. In other words, Al makes 'em and Charlie sells 'em.

The Christie boys are of Scotch descent, and they are living refutations of the base slander that was put upon a noble race when it was said the Scotch have no sense of humor. Another point in their favor is that they do not indulge in the well-known vice peculiar to the Scotchman—playing the bagpipe.

The far-away look in Al's face is there because he is having a mental view of a funny situation. If we stick around long enough we will have the opportunity of seeing it worked out.

Step up on this big stage please to your right.

The young lady attired in the blue dress and becoming hat is Ethel Lynne, a polite comedienne of considerable fame. Standing to her left is Harry Edwards. The bunches of hair on the sides of Harry's face are known as "butler's whiskers," a bit of make-up without which no male movie servant of the upper classes is complete.

The musky looking person perched on top of the step ladder is Elmo Lincoln, the blacksmith of the "Beast of Berlin," and Tarzan of "Tarzan of the Apes." Mr. Lincoln spent so much of his time up in the tree tops while he was making Tarzan that he is unhappy unless he is up in the air all the time. Hence he chooses the ladder as a resting place instead of an armchair, as does the man near the table to the right, who is George French. George is a character actor of much repute.

The young lady talking to Mr. French is Patricia Pennington, and she is to play the part of Mr. French's daughter in a comedy called "All Mixed Up," that is on the fire now.

The person with the smile and the strange looking musical instrument is Smiling Billy Mason. The instrument is known as the Ukebanjo, and is the result of crossing the ukelele plant with the banjo vine.

The ukelele in its pure state is a terrible instrument. The hybrid produced by the aforesaid grafting process produces a device which, although making a noise strangely resembling music, has a saddening effect, and is used in many comedy studios to tone down with the ebullient spirits of the players who might otherwise make comedies so funny that people would laugh themselves to death when looking at them.

The young lady talking to Mr. Mason is Louise Wood, whose pet name is Corda, and the petite person to her right is Clarine Seymour. Miss Seymour, former leading lady for Toto the Clown, is a recent recruit at the Christie plant. Miss Seymour seems small in stature, but the fact that she is so near Miss Wood, who is somewhat plump, unduly emphasizes the fact. Clarine really weighs eighty-seven pounds.

Now if you will all follow me you will be able to see Al Christie rehearse a scene for "Some Cave Man." The set is an exact duplicate of a chic little bungalow of the period of the world's history when the majestic dipplodoccus and the sawtooth tiger roamed the fields and forests, and the voice of the whangdoodle singing its doleful song could be heard where e'er the woodbine twined.

The young man wearing the bearskin robe is Bobbie Vernon; the young lady similarly attired, who, by the way, is one of the few girls in the pictures with blond eyes as well as natural golden tresses, is Dorothy Dane.

Al is instructing Bobby in the etiquette of love and courtship in the happy and halcyon days of the cave men, when every citizen was master of his own house and used a stout club to maintain the dignity of his station, unhappily, that is long passed.

No, Lady, this is a polite comedy, and we would not be able to see Dorothy seize the club and whack Bobby on the bean with it if we stayed here all day, because the play does not call for that kind of action—and we have no time to argue the suffrage question, with you, as we must proceed to the next point of our journey.

Here's Where We Visit Charlie.

The row of chalets directly in front of us, although you would never suspect it, is part of one of the most famous studios of the country.

Meeting Charlie Feet to Feet.

It is here that Charlie Chaplin makes his frolicsome films. You will note that these buildings are very different from others devoted to the manufacture of movies. It is estimated that during the open season for traveling, eleven hundred and sixty-seven assorted tourists, from Ottumwa, Iowa, and other points, all of whom want to meet Charlie face to face and feet to feet, seek admission to the studios daily.

Owing to the fact that he is under contract to make a movie film now and then, it is manifestly impossible to accommodate them all; if he did life would be just one hand-shake after another.

Charlie Chaplin and Lucille Cavanaugh.

Note the quiet air and evidence of efficiency on every hand as we pass through the business office and through the sanctum sanctorum of Studio Manager John Jasper, whom you see seated at his desk. Peep into Mr. Chaplin's dressing room and observe the comforts and conveniences not found in the lair of many stars.

The air of peace and quietness that obtains on the lot would never lead you to suspect that you were in the immediate vicinity of the place where comedies that rock the world with laughter are being made. The handsome residence to the north, which is part of the studio property, is inhabited by Sid Chaplin, Charlie's brother and manager.

The set on this stage is an exact duplication of the trenches "over there," and is being used for Charlie's latest comedy, "Shoulder Arms," a story of the great war set to laughter.

Of course, it is unnecessary to inform you that the man with the uniform, tin hat and Chaplin mustache, talking to the lady, is the inimitable Charles. The lady is Lucille Cavanaugh, Orpheum headliner, who is visiting the plant. The other lady just beyond, wearing the dark waist and an air of wishing the weather would get cooler, is Edna Purviance.

Now that you have seen that Charlie is just as funny when working before the camera as he is on the screen—a thing that can be said of few comedians—we will proceed to inspect one of the most interesting exhibits the studio affords.

Give your attention to the strip of cement pavement extending across the beam. The words of the prophets have been preserved in books; the scenes of nature's beauty spots have been limned in oil and water colors; the beauty of the early Greeks have been cast in deathless bronze—and here you see before you the erratic footsteps of Charles Chaplin written on imperishable granitoid, thus preserving for posterity the imprint of the feet that have stamped themselves in such an indelible manner on the hearts of the present generation.

Last week a suspicious character was seen prowling around the lot at night. Upon the approach of the watchman the prowler made a hurried exit, and it was seen that he was walking in exact imitation of Chaplin.

The man was one of the many Chaplin imitators who had entered the grounds with the felonious intention of stealing Charlie's stuff, and but for the fact that he was pursued with such vigor that he was forced to break the step he had acquired by placing his feet in the imprints on the cement walk, the miserable miscreant would have got away with it.

Studio Shorts.

FANNIE Ward was entertained at tea by Mme. Sarah Bernhardt while the famous French tragedienne was in Los Angeles filling her engagement at the Orpheum.

May Allison has rented a roomy house on La Brea avenue, where she will make her home during the coming year with her mother and sister.

Slim Summerville and Bobby Dunn, of the Sunshine Comedies, presented a vaudeville act at a Red Cross benefit in Covina, Cal., recently.

Charles Gunn is taking lessons in the art of directing at the Brunton Studios.

Sarah Bernhardt shared honors during her first week at the Orpheum with Marguerite Clark, Cecil De Mille, Jack Pickford, Constance Talmadge, Mae Murray and Mary Miles Minter in the downtown theatres.

Eighty cowboys support Bill Russell in his new picture, "When a Man Rides Alone." With whom do the cowboys ride?

Clarine Seymour, former leading woman for Toto the Clown, has been engaged to play leading parts with Bobby Vernon in Christie Comedies.

George Hackathorn, player of juvenile leads, has made several addresses before meetings recently on behalf of Belgium, under the auspices of the Junior Committee for Relief in Belgium.

William C. De Mille is directing Vivian Martin at the Morosco studio.

William V. Mong has finished a picture for Universal, and before making any other engagements will move his family to his newly acquired ranch near Whittier, California.

Mary Pickford says she is not going to France, as that would necessitate giving up her salary, and would stop the income tax she pays the Government, which would curtail the building of airplanes, U-boat destroyers, ammunition, or whatever it is they do with the $200,000 she is taxed.

Harry Mestayer has started on his second production at Triangle.

Kathryn Adams, Frank Keenan's new leading woman, has heard from her aviator in France. He had just bagged his first Hun, and couldn't resist writing and telling his fiance all about it.

Olga Grey is playing opposite William Russell in "When a Man Rides Alone."

A little daughter has arrived at the home of Al Cohn, former publicist for Mary Pickford.

Fred Stone is now at work on his third feature at the Lasky studio. Stone opens in Chicago on the regular stage on Labor Day.

William S. Hart and his company have returned from the Mexican border, where battle scenes were made for a coming war picture. Hart is said to have killed more than a hundred imitation Germans during the course of the film.

Gilbert P. Hamilton has left the directorial forces at Triangle and may make a special production of his own before connecting up.

Jack Curtis, former Triangle heavy, is getting ready to make a trip into Arizona with a Fox company for a western picture.

Albert Shelby Le Vino, head of the scenario department at Metro's western studio, has been called back to New York to resume his duties with Maxwell Karger, Metro's chief of productions. And Bert had just bought a ranch where he intended to raise all sorts of things prescribed by Hoover.

All the costumes for the women in the big movie parade that ushered in the Allied War Trophy Exhibition in Los Angeles were made in the Lasky costume department.

George Holt's vacation—the one he was going to take upon leaving Vitagraph—came to a sudden end the day after his contract expired when he was engaged to take the heavy part in a Bluebird feature with Monroe Salisbury.

Margery Bennett, sister of Enid Bennett, will be leading woman for Monroe Salisbury in "Hugon the Mighty."

Harry Pollard has postponed indefinitely his annual bath in the Pacific Ocean this summer. Afraid of sharks!

John J. Hay is playing the part of a detective in the Douglas Fairbanks production, "He Comes Up Smiling."

Hobart Bosworth is in Los Angeles on a vacation following a "flyer" in vaudeville.

Cecil B. De Mille is planning for a big production of "The Squaw Man," the stage drama in which Dustin Farnum starred for several years.

A farewell party was given Bertha Mann, star of the Oliver Morosco stock company, upon the completion of her engagement in Los Angeles, at which more than half of the guests were well known film stars, including Gladys Brockwell, May Allison, Belle Bennett, Harry Hilliard, Bessie Barriscale, Tom Mix, Vera Lewis and many others.

The Submarine Base dance at the Alexandria given recently by the Los Angeles film people realized the sum of $1,003.

Sessue Hayakawa and his company left last week for San Francisco, to be gone about ten days. Scenes for a forthcoming picture were made aboard the steamer, and others will be made in the Oriental quarter of San Francisco.

Mary MacLaren is the first film star to have been adopted as godmother by the navy.

Lila Lee has returned from Catalina Island, where she has been rusticating, and is ready to begin work on her next picture at the Lasky studio. Al Jolson happened to be at the Island resort, and he and Miss Lee assisted at a Red Cross benefit by singing songs.

Metro Establishes a "Kicking" Night

At West Coast Studio Entire Force Gathers Weekly for the Removal of Matters Pressing on Their Chests.

"SAVE your kick for Monday night," has become a by-word at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood ever since the inauguration of regular weekly meetings of the studio force to discuss problems that have arisen during the preceding seven days, and to offer suggestions for increasing the plant's efficiency and the quality of pictures produced. For every Monday night the Metro "family" assembles on the studio stage, and, with George D. Baker, manager of productions, presiding, proceeds to hold an "uplift" meeting.

Joseph W. Engel, treasurer of Metro Pictures Corporation, sponsored the idea, and the first meeting was held several weeks ago, before Engel's departure for New York. It was intended to be a gathering of the heads of the various studio departments. Cigars were passed around, and everybody invited to make suggestions that might improve the work of the studios. The following Monday the attendance showed an increase, and now, although Engel has left the west coast, the meetings are attended by virtually every employe of the studios, all of them anxious to put in a word of suggestion, or suggestive criticism.

Minutes are kept of what is said and notes made on the spot, which are later embodied in orders issued by Studio Manager Butler to the various department heads, with a view to correcting laxities or any delinquencies pointed out at the Monday night meetings. Thus far there has been a very noticeable improvement in the running of the studios, and Baker and others believe it to be the direct result of the meetings.

GENERAL'S RED CROSS PICTURE A HIT.

Instant popularity has been scored by the first American Red Cross official war film, to judge from the reception it got at its premiere in New York at the Rivoli Theatre. Pointing to this reception, the distributor of this picture for the American Red Cross, predicts an overwhelming success all over the country.

"The Historic Fourth of July in Paris," which is the title of this single reel subject, is now being sent to every General Film exchange in the United States. Upon the heels of the Rivoli booking, the distributor reports that big bookings already have been obtained in the Washington territory. Co-operation in publicity for the picture by the American Red Cross national organization in its thirteen divisions from coast to coast is likely to give the picture an added impetus and to give it a career remarkable for a subject of its kind.

Blackton Extends Rawlinson Contract

Player Will be Featured in a Series of Productions to be Made Following Release of "The Common Cause."

J. STUART BLACKTON has extended his contract with Herbert Rawlinson, whom he first signed to play the featured male lead in "The Common Cause," and now plans to feature him in several other Blackton specials to follow this propaganda picture, which he is producing under the auspices of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission and in which Sylvia Breamer is the other featured player.

Commodore Blackton already has in hand the story and scenario for the second in this new independent series of special productions, has accepted and purchased another story which will probably be the basis of the third, and also has options on two popular plays and novels from which he will probably select the fourth big subject of the series.

The leading man's part in each of these four stories, including "The Common Cause," is a typical Herbert Rawlinson role. Hence, the agreement which makes Mr. Rawlinson a Blackton star.

Distribution plans for "The Common Cause," which is to be released late in September or early in October, have been arranged and announcements will be made shortly.

BERGQUIST TO PHOTOGRAPH LOCKWOOD.

R. J. Bergquist, who has been with Metro for a long time as cameraman with Bushman and Bayne, has been engaged by Managing Director Edwin Carewe to photograph Harold Lockwood's Metro productions.

Blanche Sweet Shops in Fifth Avenue

New Harry L. Garson Star Then Discusses an Illusive Hat and Gown and "The Unpardonable Sin"

By Edward Weitzel.

APPLYING the familiar trick of stringing together the titles of a number of plays to the career of Blanche Sweet shows a curious want of affinity between the name of her first motion picture and the title of her latest release. "A Man With Three Wives," her first picture, does not suggest in the slightest degree "The Hushed Hour," which has just been given to the public. However, the title of the blonde star's next release suggests perfectly the extent of the crime committed by the thrice married gentleman—"The Unpardonable Sin." The Rupert Hughes story is to be produced by Harry L. Garson, and Blanche Sweet is now touring the Fifth avenue shops in search of record-making and heart-breaking costumes.

Blanche Sweet.

The screen favorite whose retirement for over a year caused so many motion picture fans to ask, "What has become of Blanche Sweet?" was born in Chicago, but came to New York for her photoplay debut. This was made at the old Edison studio, at the age of thirteen. She impersonated one of the trio of better halfs of the bigamous gentleman. Experience on the spoken stage and a long dress were her chief aids in deceiving the director and the public as to her right to enter the bonds of matrimony and acquire a one-third interest in the fickle affections of a badly damaged masculine heart. An engagement at the Biograph, under Griffith, brought her into association with a body of now famous picture stars, Mary Pickford being one of them. Like all of the Griffith graduates, Blanche Sweet is ready to acknowledge the artistic debt she owes to the creator of "Hearts of the World."

Over a glass of lemonade in the cafe of the Great Northern Hotel Blanche Sweet gave the above information about herself, and then chatted of "The Unpardonable Sin," and the disappointment that came to her through a fetching hat and wrap that she bought to wear in "The Hushed Hour."

The remembrance of the affair made her quite pensive for a moment, but she turned a sigh into a laugh, as she commenced the recital of the hat and the wrap that were destined never to be perpetuated upon a strip of celluloid and fill the feminine film fan's heart with envy.

Wastes no Hat Description on a Man.

"They are certainly dreams and I fell in love with them both the moment I first saw them. I picked out the exact moment I should wear them in the picture, before I paid for them and had them sent home. The hat was a—pardon me, the description would be wasted on a mere man, wouldn't it?—but the wrap matched the hat perfectly, and I felt I was creating a sensation when I put them on at the studio and walked over to show them to Edwin Mortimer, my director.

"'How do you like them?' I asked.

"'Stunning!' replied Mr. Mortimer, 'but you don't intend to wear them in this scene, do you?'

"'Why, yes,' I faltered, all taken aback. 'I bought them on purpose for this scene.'

"'We'll find a better place for them. Ready, please.'

"After the picture was completed I found out that the better place he meant was in one of my wardrobe trunks. I tried to introduce that hat and wrap into every scene where I could find any possible excuse, but that unfeeling man succeeded in discovering weighty reason for preventing me from wearing them, and all the time he pretended to admire the way they matched my gown and my complexion."

"Didn't you smuggle them into at least one of the scenes?"

"Yes. I gave Mr. Mortimer such a defiant glance the last time he started to object to their being used, he was afraid to do anything but smile and say 'All right!' He won the battle, just the same: When the picture was cut the one and only appearance of the hat and the cloak was eliminated." Blanche Sweet looked up with a half serious smile. "Perhaps I set too great a store by them, but they certainly were very becoming."

"Now for the usual question, Miss Sweet: What is your favorite line of parts?"

"I haven't any. I like any part I feel is suited to me."

"And your role in the Rupert Hughes story?"

"I hope the public will like me in it as well as I like the character myself."

Famous Players Report New Contracts

Increased Business Requiring Many Additions to Sales and Booking Departments.

NEVER since the inception of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation has the sales department seen such activity as is at present being evidenced in connection with the handling of next year's bookings. Every day contracts are pouring in requesting 100 per cent. service, from exhibitors, large and small, throughout the country. Despite many additions to the home office staff, the sales and booking departments are working day and night in an endeavor to keep up with the flood of contracts.

Record time in signing up for the entire new product of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation for the coming year was evidenced at the Baltimore exchange when Guy L. Wonders, managing director of the Wilson Amusement Company, Baltimore, closed for all next year's Paramount and Artcraft pictures, in three minutes. "I called at your Washington office today," wrote Mr. Wonders to the home office in New York, "and after being presented with a schedule of prices by Mr. Busch it only required three minutes of my time to approve and sanction it. As I have met with success on productions released by Paramount-Artcraft during the 1917-18 series, which enabled me to inaugurate several advantageous changes in the policy of my theatre, both in admission prices and length of runs, I naturally knew the value and merits of the goods he was selling and I was, therefore, in a better position to decide and act quickly."

Among the most recent theatres to sign for "100 per cent. service" are the Hippodrome in Philadelphia; Grand, Chester; Majestic, Grand Island, Neb.; Lehigh Orpheum, South Bethlehem; Grand, Vineland, N. J.; Grand, Marietta, Ga.; Third Street, Easton, Pa.; Lorain, Bethlehem, Pa.; Leader, Philadelphia; Lyric, Cheyenne, Wyo.; Princess, Colorado Springs, Col.; Princess and Scenic, Waterbury, Conn.; Bedford, Bedford, Mass.; Ideal, Columbia, S. C.; Rialto-Princess, Denver, Col.; Coliseum and Liberty, Seattle, and Kinema, Oakland, Other big contracts signed within the past few days have been entered into with such theatres as the Modern and Beacon Theatres, Boston; the Exeter Street Theatre, Boston; Circle, Indianapolis; Majestic, Columbus; Fenway, Boston; Imperial, San Francisco; Kunsky's theatres in Washington, Madison and Detroit; Liberty, Portland, Ore.; California, San Francisco; Modern, Providence, and Strand, Providence.

STEVENS ADDED TO METRO'S STAFF.

Robert Stevens, brother of the Metro star, Emily Stevens, has been added to the directorial staff at the Metro studio, and is at present attached to the working organization of Albert Capellani, who is preparing Screen Classics, Inc., super-features with Mme. Nazimova as the star. Mr. Stevens is a Shakespearean actor of note, and this is his first experience in motion picture work. He is busily studying every branch of studio endeavor, "learning the ropes," as an associate of Henry Kolker, who is Mr. Capellani's principal aid.

Army and Navy Contains Many Film Men

List of Employers and Employed in Various Branches of Motion Picture Industry Who Have Responded to Country's Call for Soldiers and Sailors —Readers Are Invited to Forward Changes in Unit or Omissions

IN common with every true-blooded American the desire to uphold the honor of his country and to put down the common enemy of civilization as embodied in the Hun is uppermost in the heart and mind of every motion picture man. In response to this moral urge many of the craft engaged in its various branches have volunteered or have answered the call of the draft. The Moving Picture World has no means of ascertaining the name or service of every man in the trade who has joined the colors, but it has made a start to secure that interesting bit of information because those of us who remain behind to keep the home fires burning, to buy War Savings Stamps and Liberty Bonds will be glad to know who, among so many of us, are making a greater sacrifice than we.

In compiling the list of names which follow we have been obliged to depend upon the most accessible sources. From them we have secured a fairly good number, but there are numerous others—men from the thousands of theatres of the country, not so readily reached—who remain to be included in this roll of honor. It is our purpose to print them all eventually, but to do so we must depend upon our readers to supply the information. Therefore, with this list as a beginning, we ask all to scan it closely and to supply the omissions. These will be compiled as rapidly as received and printed at the earliest opportunity.

Further than that we have made a careful card record of all names received and would like to keep it up to date, giving the latest information of each individual. We hope that the friends of each man listed in this or subsequent issues will keep us informed on their movement as nearly as possible.

Notes of omissions or errors in the list will be gladly received and promptly corrected. As this list promises to be a very important one before war is concluded we ask our readers to assist us in an effort to make it complete and keep it correct.

One Fourth Loan Featurette Is Ready

It Is "The Taming of Kaiser Bull," Produced by Carl Laemmle, with Mae Murray in Leading Role.

AT the personal request of Secretary McAdoo and with the hearty consent of Carl Laemmle, president of Universal, Mae Murray laid aside, for the time being, her own productions to make a featurette to assist the government in making the forthcoming Liberty Loan Drive the most successful of any of the four. Under the direction of Robert Leonard, who has produced all Special Attractions at Universal City, the featurette has just be completed and entitled "The Taming of Kaiser Bull."

In the featurette Miss Murray plays the role of a cowboy and as such represents Uncle Sam. She is dressed in proverbial chaps, with wide sombrero, high boots and spurs, with a wicked forty-five dangling jauntily from her right hip. To complete the picture, a little package of Roll Your Own protrudes with its tell-tale tag from the shirt pocket.

"Roll your own," says Miss Murray, "and you will have more money to invest in Liberty Bonds and Thrift Stamps," but just the same, the Roll Your Own package is full of face powder, and an ivory pocket mirror and powder puff are in the left chap pocket. Harry Carey, Universal's cowboy exponent, took great pains with Miss Murray's make-up and costumes for this feature.

"The Taming of Kaiser Bull" opens with the Kaiser, a role taken by a gigantic long-horned Arizona steer, cornering Democracy in the corral. Miss Murray, in the role of Uncle Sam, fires a bullet from a gun labeled First Liberty Loan. This only stirs the bull to greater fury. Miss Murray hurls a large rock labeled Second Liberty Loan. In rage he charges on Democracy, while Miss Murray endeavors to beating him off. Drawing her lariat is the Third Liberty Loan. She throws it over the bull, which drags Miss Murray up and down the range. Pershing's Riders from the Rancho U. S. A. across the pond see her plight and rush to her rescue, and after a general mix-up they throw the bull. Miss Murray then brands him on the flank with the "Fourth Liberty Loan."

The picture ends with a close-up of Miss Murray raising her gun in the camera and saying, "Dig deep and come across for the Fourth Liberty Loan."

Commemorates England's Entry in War

Strand Theatre Exhibits Group of Pictures Illustrative of British Efforts for Cause of Freedom.

A GROUP of pictures exhibited at the Strand during the week of August 4 is of great interest and significance. It is entitled "Four Year for Freedom" and was shown in commemoration of England's entry into the war. Another point of interest in connection with these pictures is that they were compiled by Charles Urban, and include by way of introductions some of the naval scenes exhibited by him formerly in that first splendid group shown a couple of years or so ago revealing England's quickly and systematically prepared defense against Hun barbarism.

"Four Years for Freedom" includes scenes illustrative of the capture of Bagdad showing the East Indian soldiers crossing the Tigris river on a pontoon bridge and later passing through the streets of Bagdad. General Allenby's entry into Jerusalem is of unusual interest and shows the meeting of the commander-in-chief at the Jaffa gate, the passage of the troops through the streets, the introduction of the dignitaries of the city to General Allenby and staff, and the reading of the proclamation of freedom. A part of the British aerial fleet in action is shown and also stirring scenes with the Canadians at the memorable battle of Vimy Ridge. One of the most thrilling sights of the pictures shows a charge of British tanks.

World's Minneapolis Man Joins Army

John LeRoy Johnston, for over two years correspondent for the Moving Picture World in Minneapolis and St. Paul, has been called for service in the National Army, and will likely be in camp by the time this issue is off the press. Mr. Johnston is the fifth of the World's correspondents to join the colors. Previous to taking up the World correspondence work he was artist and writer on St. Paul papers for seven years, editor of Amusements and of Reel News, northwest film weeklies, and more recently he has been publicity manager for the Minneapolis Universal exchange.

John Leroy Johnston.

In addition to being a writer, Mr. Johnston is an artist and cartoonist. Upon leaving for war service he was presented with a handsome wrist watch by Mme. Olga Petrova. He will be succeeded as Minneapolis correspondent for the World by William E. Mulligan, a writer on the Minneapolis Journal.

Mr. Johnston recently passed his twenty-first birthday and is a man of a decided original bent, both as a cartoonist and a writer. Readers of this paper will remember the able account by him of the proceedings of the recent convention of the Northwest Motion Picture Exhibitors' Corporation. His work has regularly been of value to us and it is with mingled feelings that we bid him good-by and good luck as he goes forth to do his duty with other American men and women.

ARTHUR KANE GOES TO CHICAGO.

Arthur S. Kane, general manager of Select Pictures Corporation, left on the Century Thursday afternoon for Chicago, on Select business. Mr. Kane will be in conference for several days with Fred Aiken, Select's branch executive in Chicago. It is understood a number of important contracts are under way in this territory, and Manager Kane doubtless is having an eye to the new fall business.

Facts and Comments

ARE you doing any hard thinking on the question of foreign trade? Here is a great chance to exercise your gray matter to profitable effect. Right now there is a demand for American pictures because they are the best in the World's market in quality and just about the only pictures available in any market now. But the latter condition will not always prevail; American producers will not always have a practical monopoly of the business that has been given them by conditions forced upon other countries by the War. Once peace is declared and picture-makers of France, Great Britain and Italy resume operations there will be strong competition for the world market. But while we are waiting for that time to come it is up to our manufacturers and producers to so exploit their products that it may become so favorably known to the civilized world that the preference will be in our favor. Keep your mind working on it.

First in importance in considering the question of the world's market is the necessity of keeping the trade center in America. For years the greater proportion of the world's output of motion pictures has been made in America, and for as many years the center of the world's trade has been in London. There were two reasons for that condition: one was our lack of experience in handling exports and an unwillingness to learn; the second was a peculiar trade condition which enables picture men to get raw stock cheaper in London than in this country. The first condition we are correcting rapidly, but it is still possible to buy Eastman raw stock in London for less money than it can be purchased here. This practice may be good business for the raw film manufacturer, but it is bad for the American motion picture business. It ought to be corrected.

* * *

WHAT preparations are you making for the Fourth Liberty Loan? We have gone through three loan campaigns successfully, but the amounts were comparatively small in comparison with the amount that will be asked in the next. Also, while the motion picture industry helped materially in he raising of the last loan, what we did was not a marker to what we will do this time. For weeks there has been a careful campaign in the planning under the leadership of Adolph Zukor. In the plans thus being made the picture interests of America will have a large and strenuous part. Everyone will have a chance to do his and her best. To a certain extent there will be plans for the exhibitor as there are for the manufacturer, the distributor and the player. Added to these plans and fitting into them harmoniously the exhibitor has an opportunity to do some thinking and planning on his own hook. Have you thought of it? Ask yourself what there is that you can devise that will strengthen the big program and induce your patrons to dig down for a few more bonds. Start the old "think tank" working for the next drive. It starts in September.

SINCE the casualty lists have been coming in we have not heard a word from motion picture theatre owners in protest against the contemplated increase in the admission tax proposed by the Congressional Ways and Means Committee, now laboring on that proposition in Washington. One large operator of legitimate theatrical interests, speaking for that branch of the amusement industry, has declared that the proposed doubling of theatre taxation will drive half of the legitimate houses out of business, but the picture theatre men seem to have no such fears. Experience has taught them that in times of stress their business prospers, and with a prosperous business they know that it will be no hardship to meet the levy. In which case why worry?

When contemplating the ultimate increase in taxation it will be well to remember that the act of Congress imposing the new tax rates has not yet been enacted. The schedules are only in process of formation. Hence, it would be a mistake to make any effort to meet the added expense of operating until the law providing for the collection of the new tax has been passed and signed. This is not a drive against the theatre owner, but a measure which makes him a part of the tax gathering machinery of the government. The public will quickly understand that the tax must be added to the regular price of admission and pay it cheerfully, knowing that, in doing so, it is taking up but a small part of the sacrifice which civilization demands in the great effort being put forth to make this fine old world safe for peace loving, law abiding people to live in forever hereafter. Learn to pay with a smile, for our boys are smiling and dying "over there."

Directing According to Directors

By Louis Reeves Harrison.

WHEN Eugene Ruskin of Broadway started in to direct the production of moving pictures for "The Sake of Truth and Beauty" and, incidentally, three hundred a week, he had a lot of ideas, some imagination, tact in handling actors and experience enough to make the salary worth while. From this experience he had learned that actors have more in them then they realize—it is the director's business to bring out this latent ability so that they may interpret at their best.

The studio director is like a leader of grand orchestra.

He must consider above all things harmony of performance.

Even great soloists must not play too loud.

Eugene was a believer in the great actor. There were many who knew how to do fairly well, few who could adequately present an intense dramatic situation or adequately portray a complex of character. But he had not been long in the studio before he was made to feel like a door mat for the "illustrious ONE" to wipe his feet on. He was supposed to stand with bated breath while the "ONE" imposed his own ideas, not only upon how it should be done, but what should be done.

The great actor must be perpetually in the limelight.

The play must suit him regardless of the public.

The great actor must have a publicity vehicle.

Now Eugene had an idea there were audiences to be entertained, not actors to be advertised, and there was intrenched in his judgment one guiding principle—"The fewer dull vehicles foisted on the public the sooner will benefit accrue to all concerned, producer, exhibitor and public as well." When Eugene enunciated this principle before the Illustrious One, he was given the merry Ho-Ho. When Eugene further said that a really great actor could interpret many roles, not be confined to playing up his own personality, the Illustrious One turned his back in disdain, called his chauffeur and shrugged his shoulders—"Home, James!"

Then Eugene got his from the Business Manager.

B. M.—We just got a play called "Eddy's Pus Wrecks——"

Eugene—You mean Oedipus Rex. Been done to death.

B. M. (suspiciously)—You don't like it.

Eugene—Why not let me help you select the play?

B. M.—Can that. We must have one with a big name.

Eugene—Why not stories that reflect the life around us? I feel that we exist for the public and by public consent. People have eyes. Let us show them what is amusing, hopeful, bright, entertaining or even edifying in the moment that is passing or in the future to come.

B. M.—What are we paying a star ten thousand a week for?

Eugene—To milk you dry and then run his own company.

B. M.—How about Madame Sylphine, advertised everywhere?

Eugene—Yes, by a corset concern, but I will see what can be done.

Scene II, Madame's dressing-room, a realm of enchantment.

Madame S.—So glad to meet ye-ou, Mr—er—ah—Rushin. My last director was so stupid. He allowed me to enter from the side. You see—my profile is not perfect. I must come down from Upper Centre. I could be seen to better advantage descending steps with a train and picture hat, a long-handled parasol for a staff—I have a lovely one just from Paris, in spite of this dreadful war. I hope it ends soon—don't ye-ou.

Eugene—Yes-sem—

Madame S.—Then you must stop the camera for me to arrange my hair in that mad scene. I imagine I have committed a murder, though I am as innocent as an unborn child. Still I have to tear my hair a little, and there is a way of doing it becomingly. When I get it just right you can start that camera again—it is to be a close-up. I adore close-ups—the public likes to see me that way—don't ye-ou?

Eugene—Yes-sem—

Madame S.—Then I have the loveliest boudoir cap you ever laid eyes on. Work in a scene where I can show that and my new China-silk peignoir. You will do that for ME, won't ye-ou, Mr. Rushem?

Eugene—Yes-sem!

The Three Sisters—A Fairy Story

By Robert C. McElravy.

THERE were once three sisters who lived together in comparative harmony. But two of the sisters, named Miss Literature and Miss Drama, were older than the third and they were inclined to overlook her growing beauty. They went out to parties and other functions, neglecting to take Miss Photoplay, the youngest sister, along. The latter, conscious of her own merits, smiled at the exclusiveness and patronizing manners of her elders. When they dressed to go out, moving past her with a slight sniff, she sat quietly by the fireside and watched them depart, refusing to take them too seriously for her own peace of mind.

For the younger sister had a great deal of humorous philosophy in her makeup, and she knew from the very first, if they did not, that she had quite a lot of what Mr. Barrie has called "that damned charm." So, when they left her, she was usually busy with her own devices, popping corn, cracking nuts, knitting socks for the soldiers, or doing goodness knows what a pretty young girl finds to do around the fireside. They said she was a little drudge and had no sense of art and often laughed at her, but she did not seem to care.

When the others had gone a change would often come over the younger sister. She would go to her room and attire herself in the most wonderful of garments, some of which had been handed to her by the elder sisters. The gowns were often quite fresh and new, but the sisters had explained to her that they must keep up with the everchanging styles, and that she was quite welcome to them. They might well have been astonished to see what she was making out of these cast-off clothes, for when she was fully dressed the third sister was really quite as beautiful as themselves, and had of course the advantage of being younger.

Once attired, the little miss would press a button and presently she would enter a taxicab and speed away into the night. She was going to what the elder sisters termed "one of those horrid movie balls" and she shivered with a mixture of apprehension and delight every time she did it. She knew they would not approve of such a thing, but she was very popular at these balls and she was not content to be a Cinderella all the time.

Presently a hue and cry went up that Prince Public was searching for a certain young lady who had lost a slipper at a ball, and would not be happy till he found her. The slipper had been lost at one of those horrid movie balls, too, and this annoyed the elder sisters exceedingly for they had not been there. They did not even know that Prince Public was in the habit of frequenting such places!

But if Prince Public had his heart set upon finding the lady who could wear the slipper, they must of course oblige him. So they began trimming their toes and paring their heels in order to be able to give Prince Public what he wanted. The process caused them to limp rather painfully, but the slipper was said to be ridiculously petite, and they agreed that at least one of them must wear it.

Having got themselves up to the best possible advantage, the elder sisters sallied forth, leaving the third sister as usual by the fire. They moved about as conspicuously as possible and soon had the satisfaction of meeting Prince Public. He greeted them with a smile, but when it came to trying on the slipper, there was general disappointment. With all the pains they had taken, the slipper was still a wee bit small.

Prince Public bowed himself away and the elder sisters wandered about in a sad and discomfited state. After a long while they determined to return home, thinking it would be nice to spend at least one evening with the third sister by the fire. When they arrived, great was their chagrin to find that Prince Public had preceded them and that the slipper had been found a perfect fit for their sister, little Miss Photoplay!

The elder sisters, Miss Literature and Miss Drama, were naturally quite peeved at this, but they were really very nice girls at heart, and besides Prince Public was still fond of them. So they both kissed little Miss Photoplay and she invited them to the next movie ball, and they all lived happily ever after.

Cheer Up, Brother Johnson!

By Edward Weitzel.

ACCORDING to Julian Johnson, "The chief thing wrong with motion pictures today is the class of intelligent people who continually find fault with them." He also puts it down that "We want from the intelligent men and women of the United States unquestioning, enthusiastic belief in the motion picture as an instrument of destiny in bringing men and their motives together throughout the world, as a disseminator of knowledge, and a purveyor of beauty and emotion." He also utters this solemn warning: "Have a heart and help. If you don't, I tell you that as sure as we're both here, the Motion Picture—and the Photoplay, which is the Motion Picture's biggest and finest expression—will come to a full stop."

Cheer up, Brother Johnson! The Motion Picture, either capitalized or lower cased, will be doing business throughout the civilized world and also in a portion of the uncivilized long after the seed of the Kaiser has ceased to trouble the earth. The screen has already become a necessity and a part of our daily life, and will no more be thrown into the discard than will its great forerunner, the printing press.

The intelligent men and women of the United States will always judge the Motion Picture on its merits—and recognize its limitations. They realize that the method of producing the photoplay is the most costly form of getting beauty and emotion before the public. It is not possible to take a portion of a pictured story as one can a passage from Shakespeare and spend five minutes in studying such a wonderfully condensed criticism of life as that found in the philosophy of Friar Laurence:

So light a foot
Will ne'er wear out the everlasting flint:
A lover may bestride the gossamers
That idle in the wanton summer air
And yet not fall; so light is vanity.

The artist paints a great picture and it is reproduced by many inexpensive methods. The dramatist writes a fine play and it is possible to own a copy of the work and study it at leisure. The motion picture can be seen only in a theatre, and is always shown in its entirety. At some future day every home of refinement and culture may be equipped with its own projection machine, and short pictures, appealing to the highest artistic sense, may be a part of every intelligent person's motion picture library.

In the meantime, it may be as well to refrain from uttering solemn warnings or from scolding the public for its lack of unquestioning belief in the screenplay. The silent stage has a loyal following, in spite of its mistakes, and will work out its future by force of its inherent worth.

Nothing will so assist its progress as a concerted effort on the part of directors, scenario, and continuity writers, to relegate the screen novel to the rear and produce photoplays that are dramas in the theatre sense of the word.

Zukor Will Aid Department of Labor

In Carrying Out Billboard Campaign of Famous Players-Lasky, He Will Reserve Space for Message to Workers.

ITS attention having been attracted by the recent announcements in the trade papers of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation's country-wide billboard campaign, the United States Department of Labor has written to President Adolph Zukor requesting that a portion of the space to be used be reserved for a message from the Department.

The letter, while incidentally laying emphasis on the tremendous interest being aroused in the campaign everywhere, opens a new avenue through which the motion picture industry may render most valuable service to the Government. This is through systematic poster displays in the lobbies of picture theatres in every city and village in the country, and in a letter to David K. Niles, of the Bureau of Information and Education of the Department of Labor, Mr. Zukor not only has made the suggestions but has offered the services of his organization for carrying it out. This, of course, is in addition to the co-operation in the billboard advertising which the Labor Department solicited and which was forthwith promised by Mr. Zukor.

The shortage of labor in the essential industries has been a matter of considerable concern to the Government for some time, and Mr. Zukor calls the attention of exhibitors to the fact that here lies an opportunity for service in helping to win the war which they can embrace with a minimum of inconvenience, constituting an effective supplement to their work of assisting the Fourth Liberty Loan "over the top."

Send 'Em Along.

W. S. McLAREN, of the Majestic and Colonial, Detroit, dropped in the other day to look over the town and have a talk with people. About the first thing he said when he hit this office was, "Those elaborate campaigns planned by such men as McCormick are interesting, but they do not help give much help to the man who has not an art room and a scene studio at his command. What the average manager is interested in is what the other fellow is doing with the means at the command of the average exhibitor." That is entirely true, but the trouble is that the man who is merely doing the best he can with what he can get, like Steve Farrar, for example, does not always realize that he is doing something even more noteworthy than McCormick when he gets a good display, and so he does not bother to send in his stuff with a word of explanation. If you've been helped by this department you can pay back your debt to the other fellow by paying in kind. Don't think that because your stuff does not compare with McCormick's it is not equally interesting. Send it along anyhow, and you may help some other chap out of a hole. Don't leave it to George. Make George your middle name and do it yourself.

Country Composition.

The New Virginia theater, Harrisburg, Va., sends in an advertisement that is an excellent example of what a country printer can and most generally does do if he is not urged to better things. This space is four and one-half inches across two columns; ample space in which to get plenty of good display if the copy is marked properly, but the printer, lacking a knowledge of values, does the best he can, and that is very poor. Only two advertisements in the entire four-pager look at all well. One is office copy and the other is a bank advertisement with only one display line, in which the printer could not very well go wrong. The office has an extended letter of the same face as the house signature. This extended letter should have been used even though it required the omission of the word "theater." A three-em space should have been used between the letters to further gain the suggestion of size. "Today and tonight" could have been set in a ten-point bold with equally good results, and "Today, matinee and night" would have been more definite than "today and tonight," the latter being counted as part of the day. Better still would have been the times of showing, as "Today at 2.30, 3.45, 7 and 9 P. M." The next line could have been dropped to gain space, since it means little, and "World-Brady presents the clever child actress" should have gone in one line of six-point to permit an eighteen-point for the name of the little star. Then should have followed a line in eight-point, "Co-starring with George MacQuarrie," set with the name of this player in bold face, and following with another six-point line carrying the "in a five-reel feature." This would have let the name of the play gain prominence, and here, too, an extended letter should have been used. The "also" should have been spaced between this and the next bank, serving as a dash and then the Chaplin bank. By setting the admission prices all on one line and the news weekly in a slightly smaller face the lines could have been better spaced to indicate the three divisions of the program. The printer does not know this because he is a typesetter and not an advertising expert. He must be told by means of markings on each line of type. The New Virginia has no opposition and does not have to make a fight for business, but now is a good time to train the printer against the coming of opposition. Money is lost if the advertisement is not made as attractive as possible. Much more can be done with nine column-inches. It should be possible in such a space to give a brief selling talk, a line or two suggestive of the play.

For "A Pair of Sixes."

The Victoria, Buffalo, uses a good line for Essanay's "A Pair of Sixes" when it remarks:

> Ordinarily a pair of sixes is a poor hand, but you'll give it a good hand when you see it.

But the printer was asleep when he set a following line as "See Him and go into acstacies." Outside of Germany only Diety gets the capital H.

The Hill Heading.

We have mentioned the Hill (Newark, N. J.) programs, but this is the first time we have been able to reproduce the new form since Mr. Mack uses mostly green stock. But he must have run out of color lately and used white, so here is his heading, normal size. The sheet is 3¾ inches wide and drops about eight inches. It is a compact head and gives all the facts except the telephone number in small space and with good display. It is a good model to follow, even in larger sizes. The date is given as July, but as a matter of fact the program is issued weekly with an editorial comment on the current bill in each issue, the front being used for text and the back for the formal program.

Improving Upon Ruff.

The Dayton theater, Dayton, Ohio, is using "Come" as a variant to Ralph Ruffner's "Go" for a house slogan. It does not seem to have as much force as go, but it works all right. We like better the "Try to get in" which Ruff is now using for the Rialto. That should be used, however, only for the big things, and a slogan should be given in each advertisement. System for July has a discussion of house slogans, and it is shown that the general phrase is seldom useful to the house. At a public meeting the slogans of numerous merchants were read off and the audience was asked to connect the slogan with the house. In every case the slogan that did not carry a punch idea was not connected with its house, and in one case three houses were credited with one slogan because it would fit any one of the three. But the slogan with a smash was hooked up with its store right away. In the same way the theaters that have a punch line will profit by it where no amount of advertising will fix a colorless phrase. "Always a good show" is too general, and "The House of Quality" really means nothing. "Where the Reels Run Right" would be better, but something still more individual would carry more weight. But get something that is individual and impossible to copy. For a time the red-fronted Woolworth stores were almost a trademark, but today a ten-cent store that is not painted red is as scarce as dead mules. The idea was so good that all the others took it. It is the same way with the red band across the window of the United Cigar Stores. All the others are using it and cannot be stopped. The safest way is to get a good phrase and then patent it as a trade mark if possible, though a sentence cannot be patented unless it has some unique feature, but if you patent a design including your phrase, and always use the design, then the use of the phrase by another house could probably be prevented at common law as an effort to detract from your trade mark, though the phrase itself cannot be patented. Getting back to Dayton, we think that the flossy lettering is not well advised. A clean, readable type is better for title and star even though it may hurt the artist's feelings to tell him so. The advertisement is a two sixes with a heavy indent to the left. As the cut was placed to the left of the page in the outside column, the indent did not work as well as it would have done had it been between columns, but of course the house could not know just where the cut was to be placed.

Plugged For Pershing.

This is a reproduction of a reproduction from Amusements, a local paper, showing how two Minneapolis dailies plugged the Government's war picture in the Minnesota metropolis. The display was a two-page layout with the lower bank giving the names of twenty-six firms which contributed space to the Committee on Public Information. The picture was given a regular showing at the Metropolitan, but because of the patriotic interest of the subject the papers solicited the merchants' aid in advertising the picture, and they contributed willingly, the advertisement giving the stamp of importance to the showing. This meant much more than the mere advertisement itself. It gave the film dignity. S. Barret McCormick gained somewhat similar results from "My Four Years in Germany," but there the merchants carried allusions in their different advertisements, while this is the result of concerted action on the part of the merchants represented, just as leading firms paid for pages and smaller spaces for the Liberty Loans and War Savings Stamps. This action put the picture on the same plane with other national movements, and the idea might well be copied by others. Make a note of it, but do not try to obtain this publicity for the melodramatic "patriotic" pictures or your end will be defeated. Save it for something really worthy of the effort.

Floated an Advertisement.

George J. Schade, of the Schade theater, Sandusky, Ohio, sends in the photograph of a float he used in the Fourth of July parade. It offers a good suggestion to others, and it would be worth while pasting up for future reference. You may not think you are ever going to need a float, but you never can tell. The basis for this is a Cadillac car which was converted into a float 18 feet long and 8 feet wide. One hundred pine trees were required to mask in the framework. A calliope was concealed in the body of the car, the organist sitting with the driver, half concealed in the foliage. In the rear carnival masks; to be had of most large costumers, were planted, these including a policeman, cat, dog, lion, rabbit, giant, clown and elephant. Two sets of the flags of the Allies, eight to a set, were used, but these fluttered in the wind and did not take well. The donkey mask was worn by a man who worked the effects. It not only brought good business on the Fourth, but made talk that lasted well past the celebration. It pays to get into these local affairs to as large an extent as you can afford, for it all comes back.

Ruff Stuff.

The Rialto, Butte, Ralph Ruffner's new home, is of white terra cotta and has to have its face washed now and then to keep it presentable. One of these interesting events happened just after Ruff arrived and the moment he saw the scaffold and the people looking up at it, he went inside and had a banner painted reading, "Just hanging around waiting for Sunday's show." Then he gave the public something to see when they looked. The other lettering is on the same style as the recent "My Four Years in Germany," and reads (in red) "See Texas Rangers in action in Rex Beach's (in blue) 'Heart of the Sunset,' Sunday." It will be noted that the white front supplies the third element of the tricolor. Ruff suggests using this near the date line on a Fairbanks:

Fast as lightning,
Funny as Heck,
While the goin's merry
Be on deck.

He says it worked for him, and it isn't poetry at that—just Ruff Stuff.

A Picture Directory.

The Daily News, Toronto, uses a half page directory regularly each Saturday giving the complete program for the week at practically all the houses, and most of these houses repeat on week days with the current bill. The cut shows the full weekly announcement and on the left a daily section. Not all houses are represented in the daily insertion, though such a directory is comparatively inexpensive and worth the investment. The reproduction might interest the advertising manager of the most enterprising of your own papers. Try it on him if you live in a town with a dozen houses or more.

A Daily and Saturday Directory Published by the Daily News, Toronto. An Effective and Economical Form of Advertising.

Proof Reading.

The usually impeccable Elmwood, Buffalo, in a recent program shows that their printers must have lost some men to the draft. They announce "Old Hartwell's Club" instead of "Cub" and "Journey's End" instead of using the "The," while in "Who is to Blame" it is printed "Taro Sam" instead of the Japanese "San." If the Elmwood can slip, anyone can, so make note to be particularly careful in your own proof reading from now on. It is not up to the printer. It is up to you and to you alone. It's not even up to your assistant.

Using the Kaiser.

This half page was made up by the American theater, Enid, Okla., for "The Kaiser," using two of the ready-set examples of the Universal in conjunction with its own type layout. The result is better than might be expected from the use of two distinct advertisements within a third, and may suggest an idea to others. Under the layout used, it probably was not possible to use the house signature in larger type, since it had to set against the diagonal, but apart from this the result is effective and should suggest similar use of other ready set advertisements in building up a larger space than the cuts provide for. We think that to "stagger" the title in four lines as

A Half-Page, Using Two Electros as a Portion of a Third Advertisement. The House Name Should Be Better Displayed.

THE KAISER,
the Beast of Berlin,

would have gotten a better display and still have allowed the use of the inserted cuts.

A Ballyhoo Menace.

L. A. De Hoff, of the Garden, Baltimore, got up a float to advertise the showing of "My Four Years in Germany," and, as told in the news columns lately, the man who impersonated the Kaiser was arrested under the work or fight law as being in non-essential employment.

A Novel Advertising Stunt which Resulted in the Arrest of the Impersonator of the Kaiser for Being in Non-Essential Employment.

Personally we think that popularizing this propaganda play should be regarded as essential employment, but the incident should serve as food for thought to those contemplating street work. This is a case where the Kaiser really went to work.

Helping Others.

Abe H. Kauffman, of Kauffman's Specials, Memphis, booms his business by taking an intelligent interest in the business in general. He sends in a clipping from a paper in Friendship, Tenn., which is out of the ordinary and which may suggest an idea to others. Mr. Eaglin seems to have caught all angles of the idea. A part of the money goes to the school, a part to the government, in admission taxes, and a part to the Red Cross. His announcement reads:

COMING TO STAY.

I wish to state that my purpose in starting a permanent picture show at the school building is not altogether for profit as the first 20 per cent. goes for the use of the auditorium and house lights which will go to the school; second, it will help my Uncle Sam to lick the Kaiser because it will provide a war tax, and in addition to this I intend to donate 10 per cent. of net receipts to the Red Cross until every wound inflicted by the German war machine is healed, until our government has provided the pension after the war to take care of same.

Notwithstanding all this I intend to show the very best pictures available, educational, moral, sentimental, comic and patriotic. And in this way I earnestly solicit and firmly believe I shall receive the support and patronage of the best people of the community. I also believe there is enough good in all to see and appreciate the efforts I am making and the expense I have gone to put this over.

Remember, I am not looking to the show business for a living, for I make a living in the shop on Main street.

Thanking everyone for your kind consideration of me in the past and for yours in the future, I am,

Yours to serve,
J. W. EAGLIN.

His first throwaway lacks definiteness, for he merely announces "Five big reels of moving pictures, including a dandy comedy." There is nothing very convincing in that announcement. The title, even when it is not known, has some advertising value and can be presented attractively, but five reels of unknown title does not make the same appeal. A better bank is the announcement that children under twelve will be admitted free if accompanied by parents, and adds "Adults 15c and your money back if not satisfied." That has a convincing ring. With a store at his back, Mr. Eaglin can make each enterprise work hard for the other.

Used Cartoons to Help.

Cartoon advertisements are not unusual, but Eugene Levy, of the Orpheum, Seattle, did something new when he used a couple of sketches to draw attention to the scene cut. We do not think that the scheme will work regularly, for it is apt to detract from the strength of the main cut, but as a just once it does nicely. The design is clipped from a four column full length and it was also used for a two tens through the week.

Keep Her Cool.

It is no advertisement to have your cashier sweltering in the ticket box, no matter how cool the interior of your house may be. Even if you have to take one fan out of the house, keep your ticket seller cool, and it would be the part of wisdom to so place the fan that it does not show. Get the general effect of breeziness without showing the mechanism and the effect upon the possible patron will be marked. And see that the girl has on a summery costume in warm weather, that helps too.

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

The School Scheme.

We have, I think, succeeded in slowing down, if not entirely squelching the "school" proposition, which was coming up strong. The writer attended two conferences on that proposition, both held in the offices of the National Association of the Moving Picture Industry. The first was a meeting called by the secretary of that organization to consider the feasibility of establishing a school for producing projectionists to take care of the then supposed to be pending decision declaring projectionists non-essential. It was proposed to place ample capital behind the proposed school, or schools. The National Association was acting in perfect good faith in the matter, believing a crisis was at hand which might close a large proportion of the theaters of the country. It was proposed to have the editor of this department act as one of an advisory board to handle the matter.

We very promptly informed the meeting that no crisis as yet existed, since the order was not yet promulgated, and that we would neither personally or as representative of the Moving Picture World, have anything to do with any move of that sort until the international officers of the organization representing the projectionists (The I.A.T.S.E. &M.P.M.O.) had been consulted and had set the seal of their approval on the matter. Mr. Elliott, secretary National Association, gave instant consent to my calling up Assistant President Dolliver, of the I. A., which was done, and as a result the whole thing was unanimously laid over until the decision was had as to whether or not the projectionist was to be essential or non-essential.

After that decision was rendered (you have all read the account of that by now) we received a wire from Secretary Elliot, while at South Lyme, Conn., rquesting our presence at a conference with labor leaders next day. We drove down, found Secretary Elliott, Assistant President Doliver, First Vice President Cannivan and three other members of the executive board of the I. A., Fuld and Blumenthal, of the Exhibitors' Trade Review; Gillette, of the Motion Picture News, and Lee Ochs, president Exhibitors' League, present.

It seems a report had gone out, emanating no one seemed to know where, that Lee Ochs, president Exhibitors' League, had raised, or proposed raising a fund of $20,000 with which to "fight the projectionists." This President Ochs emphatically denied, branding it as slander, pure and simple. After Mr. Ochs had explained his position in the matter of the schools, emphasizing the point that all he or his organization desired was to be protected from a genuine shortage of projectionists a quite reasonable desire, by the way, and one with which no man could seriously take issue); the writer, through the chairman of the meeting, Mr. Elliott, asked President Ochs this question: "Mr. Ochs, you as president of the National Exhibitors' League represent that body in this meeting. Will you accept the assurance of the international officers of the projectionists' organization here present that that body will take care of the situation and protect you from any actual, bona fide shortage of operators?"

President Ochs replied: "Certainly. That assurance will be entirely satisfactory."

The writer then, through the chairman, asked Assistant President Doliver this question: "Mr. Doliver, you have heard my question to President Ochs and his reply. Will you and your colleagues here present agree to protect the exhibitor from any bona fide shortage of projectionists, understanding that your reply will include not only New York City, but the entire country?" To this Assistant President Doliver replied: "We most certainly will."

There was then some further discussion as to the schools which had already been started in some cities. These over-zealous exhibitors who have started schools are, it was pointed out by Assistant President Doliver, playing with fire, and unless their activities be curbed serious trouble might, and probably would result.

As a final outcome both President Ochs and Assistant President Doliver agreed to prepare statements on this phase of the matter for publication, and the meeting disbanded at 3.30.

Power's Motor Drive Trouble.

Walter L. Green, Morganton, North Carolina, asks us to spank his Power's motor drive for him, or tell him how to do it himself. He says:

> Will you kindly help me out of the following trouble? Am running a Power's 6-A motor driven projector. Installed new friction material on driving wheel few days ago. After reassembling parts there was an unusual noise. Friction material is true, and motor shaft is in line with driving shaft. Motor attachment runs all right until I throw on the load, also at times it will run all right for a few reels, after which the trouble returns. It seems to be due to coupling on motor shaft, because it runs back and forth in the motor. I have the two couplings adjusted so that there is sufficient play for the universal flange. Best wishes both to yourself and to the department.

In all probability the trouble lies in the armature shaft. End play in this shaft is taken care of by fibre washers, two at either end of the shaft. Should these washers become worn end play will develop. This might cause a rumbling, particularly at starting, especially if friction pulley shaft R 25, figure 250 of the Handbook, is not set properly. After starting and coming up to speed the rumbling is not apt to manifest itself except when there is a change in voltage. The remedy is to put in sufficient fibre washers at end of armature shaft to take up the end play. It may require one or two at each end. It is also possible that friction pulley shaft R 25 is so adjusted that it is too close to coupling on motor shaft, which would cause the same trouble, with end play present in armature shaft. This information comes direct from the Nicholas Power Company, and is official.

Sheck Retires.

George Hoskins, Cleveland, Ohio, asks for address of J. K. E. Company, and says:

> Picture theaters of this city are 100 per cent. organized. There is some shortage of men just now, and a few of our men are working double shift. Several of the members of local union 160 are in the service of Uncle Samuel, which is the answer. We are keeping them supplied with smokes. We are holding a banquet to brother Oscar Sheck, international organizer I.A.T.S.E. & M.P.M.O., who is severing all connection with the organization in order to engage in business. We are sorry to lose men like him.

If money is the only object of most of us who have served you in the past, could make decidedly more of it "in business." Incidentally, let me tell you that you right now have a corps of international officers of whom you may well be proud. Charles Shay stands in a class by himself as a shrewd, astute, honest official who has accomplished wonders for your good. Doliver, assistant president, is a man who will fill that office or any other you can put him in, thoroughly, efficiently and completely. Billie Cannavan has a foundation of sand and good sense to start with. He has developed into a wonderfully good official, shrewd, cool-headed and diplomatic. Your international secretary is also the example of the right man in the correct place. The rest of the international officers I am not so well acquainted with, but I observe that they are doing excellent work, and that is what counts. You will kindly understand that the foregoing is most emphatically not a mere "jolly," but a statement of the even and exact truth. It is designed as a well deserved tribute to real ability.

Don't Know of Any.

Stephen S. Karkala, Bradford, Pa., asks:

> Want names of parties manufacturing or selling apparatus for driving two projectors with one motor, motor to run continuously. Apparatus must be so that projectionist can shift from one machine to the other, and must not be very costly. Must be durable, convenient for one man to handle, and thoroughly reliable.

Sorry, but I know of no such apparatus at this time. There was such a thing made by the Walstad Machine Company, Tacoma, Washington, but I understand its manufacture has been discontinued. Also, it was rather expensive. J. Claude Re Ville, Florence, South Carolina, also made a very good multiple clutch control, but whether he still makes it or not I do not know. You will find both these devices described and illustrated in the Handbook, pages 277 and 280.

Changeover Signal Device.

From V. Wood, member Local Union 330, Fort Worth, Texas, we have the following:

> Am enclosing herewith drawings of "Automatic Change-over Signal" invented by myself, for which letters patent have already been issued. Drawings are, I think, self explanatory, hence no description is necessary, except to say that the device is adjustable to any size magazine, as well as to any size reel or reel hub. It may be adjusted to give signal at any point the projectionist may desire. A company has been formed for its marketing, and active steps in that direction are now being taken. Our business representative, DeWitt C. Feegles, was in New York June 10 to 15, and made several attempts to submit to you the full working model he had with him. But at the World office he was each time informed that you were "out." Am now submitting plans in the hope that you will give them careful consideration and your indorsement. Several devices have already been described in the department, and some of them are direct infringements on my patent. Warning is hereby given that we intend to protect our rights fully.

In the first place, Brother Wood, if your business representative called at the World office he should have been supplied with my home phone number, where he could have gotten into immediate touch with me. I have told you all before, and now tell you again, when you visit New York City you can get into touch with the editor, if he is in New York at the time, by calling telephone Bath Beach 373. That is my private phone number, which Feegles should have been supplied with at the World office. Sorry, for I should have liked to have talked over certain points in this invention with Feegles. I cannot use blueprint for making a cut, hence cannot print the drawing unless you supply black and white tracing. The device is very simple; also, within its limitations, it is absolutely positive in its action. It is readily adjustable, as related by the brother. These things are in its favor. But I am not here to merely tell you its good points. Such service will be abundantly taken care of by the advertising man. I must, as a matter of duty, also tell you the things I see against it. Here they are: The device consists of a single arm, with a roller at one end and a hinge joint at the other, and a bell with a striker stem terminating in a broad disc. The hinge part of the joint is bolted to the side of the magazine half way up from the bottom, so that the arm and roller may be freely raised and lowered, or so that when raised vertically and released it will swing down with its own weight, the roller describing an arc in falling. At the point where the roller strikes bottom (side of magazine near its bottom) a hole is drilled in the magazine through which the stem of the bell-striker is placed, the bell being attached to the outside of the magazine wall. The action is as follows: The full reel is placed in the magazine, with the device raised up and its terminal roller resting on the film roll. As the film is unwound the device gradually drops down until the point is reached where the distance from the film roll to the magazine wall is equal to the length from magazine wall to tip of roller, whereupon the device, no longer being supported by the film, drops down, the roller striking the striker disc and ringing the bell. That, roughly, is the action. Now for the other side. First, with some magazines and a full reel, or an overloaded one, the reel would not go in with the device in place, and if it did then the film would, I think, press heavily on the side of the device, not on the roller. Possibly with a square magazine this could be overcome by placing the hinge somewhat higher. I don't know. Might bring the striking disc up too high. Second, amount of adjustment is limited by possible diameter of striking disc. Third, there is and can be no possible provision for two signals—one for lighting and one for change-over, and this latter is the really most serious fault.

Now kindly don't run away with the idea that I am condemning the invention. I am NOT, but merely doing my duty in setting forth its good points and its possible faults. In a matter of this kind I prefer to await the report of projectionists who have used the device. I shall therefore do with this as I have done with others, viz.: Ask Brother Wood, or the selling company, to send out three of these devices, one to each of three projectionists whom I shall name, for test. Under the circumstances (necessity for drilling holes in magazine) they will have to be given these men free of cost. On their report I will base my indorsement and recommendation. That is the way I treat the big carbon companies and all others. For, after all, the proof of the pudding is mostly to be found in its eating.

Advantages and Disadvantages.

Richard E. White, Boston, Massachusetts, propounds the following queries:

> Will you kindly answer the following fully in our department: (A) Advantages of having three projectors in projection room instead of the usual two? (B) Disadvantages of having projection room located 150 feet from screen? (C) Advantages of reels with 5-inch hubs as against 1½-inch ones; also where may 4- and 5-inch interchangeable hubs be obtained? (D) Sanitary provisions for projection room? (E) Qualifications, knowledge, etc., a man should have to secure license or permit and become helper to projectionist? (E) When are you going to take a trip of inspection to Boston?

(A) With three projectors installed, when one breaks down or gets out of order, there is a complete machine all ready to take its place; also the third machine may be in process of repair without interfering with the routine of the projection room. (B) Difficulty of matching the lens system to avoid waste of light. Such a long distance with ordinary size of picture calls for very long focal length projection lens, which in turn, due to spread of light ray beyond aperture, necessitates large diameter lens, which adds to revolving shutter difficulties, since the dissolving point of light ray (proper location for revolving shutter) is too far away to be reached. See Handbook for full information—too long to be taken up in detail here. (C) A question of leverages. If the takeup tension be set tight enough to rewind the film when the reel is nearly full then, with a small hub, there will be very heavy strain on the film and its sprocket holes (pulling against teeth of lower sprocket) at beginning of run. The large diameter hub lessens this very much. Don't know where the hubs named can be had, but most likely at any office of United Theater Equipment Corporation. (D) A large question to consider here. Roughly, thorough ventilation, with air exhausted by constant running fan through vent pipe near ceiling. Fresh air intake from outer air located at or near floor line. Should be more than one if room is a large one. Basin with running water. Toilet facilities. All ports closed with glass to exclude foul air from auditorium and dangerous draughts. (E) A firmly fixed idea that he don't know very much and a determination to learn. A man with sense enough to realize and know the first and to have real desire for knowledge is safe to have other necessary qualifications. On second thought, however, it runs in my mind that in your state the helper is presumed to handle the projectors under supervision of the projectionist. If that is true I could not answer question E without further knowledge. I would also add that in any event the helper should know something of electrical action to begin with—the more the better. (F) Don't know. Might run up most any time, as I am now located for the summer at Point o' Woods Beach, South Lyme, Conn.

Of the Richardson's Handbook

W. L. Brantley, Managing Exhibitor of Nacogdoches, Texas, says:

"I have received my copy of The Handbook, and think it GREAT. Every manager and operator should have one."

He Hath Troubles of His Own.

Ben Friedman, New York City, dusts off his typewriter and proceeds to indite the following tale of woe:

> Am in charge of two Simplexes, using 35 amperes D. C. Things went pretty smooth until six months ago, then the grief commenced. After running one projector would strike the other arc about half a minute before changing over, whereupon my light, which had been white and strong, commenced fading away until picture could hardly be seen on the sereen at all. Trimmed my leads in lamphouse and put on new lugs. Examined every switch and connection—all good. Had rheostats repaired without result. Light just simply leaves the crater and climbs up the back of positive carbon. Have tried different makes of carbon without result. Use 40 ampere link fuses in projection room, and 60 ampere cartridge fuses on the main. The former never blow. It is always the latter. Have had different electricians examine wiring, but they have failed to discover the trouble. At times cannot seem to take hand off feed wheel of lamp; at other times it seems to behave pretty well. Bought new lamp jaws and tested for grounds, but nothing doing.

I can think of but two things, viz.: Magnetic blow from front, which could not be present with D. C., and anyhow ought to blow the arc out instead of up back of positive carbon, and increased voltage. I would suggest that you attach a voltmeter across lamp terminals and see how high the voltage goes when you have the trouble. Meanwhile, I am submitting this matter to our readers and intend submitting it to the Examining Boards of New York City and Boston just to see what they can dig up. To me it is a very odd case. There seems to me one bare possibility, viz.: The brother is taking current off one side of a 3-wire D. C. circuit, and when he lights the other arc there is a connection established with the 220 in such way that amperage is limited but voltage jumps. This might be had through a high resistance ground, I think, but whether or not it would set up the trouble the brother describes I do not know. Let us hear from some of you wiseacres.

Picture Playing a Dignified Profession.

TIME was, when anyone who could pound out "Turkey in the Straw" on a time-worn piano would pass as a good picture player. That time is no more, however, and it is doubtful if such a player would be tolerated anywhere in these United States, no matter how backward the community, or primitive the theatre.

Similarly, there has been a corresponding improvement; more so, perhaps, than in the class of the music, great as that transformation has been.

Today the organist, pianist, or leader of the best photoplay theatre is a recognized artist, and the profession itself has become one to be proud of; so much so, indeed, that the very best musicians of the country are entering it.

And there are many reasons for this, for there are few professions which make a greater demand financially and physically on the student than does that of music. The cost of instruction exceeds that of almost any other calling, and the years spent in attaining proficiency comprise a greater proportion of the average working life than is the case with any other profession, while the returns are, in but few instances, commensurate with the investment. A music teacher's time is ordinarily worth so much per hour, and the hours of a day are limited; hence there is a limit to the financial possibilities of teaching, and few church organists there are, whose salary as such is enough to meet living expenses. The profession of picture playing, therefore, offers the highest possible returns, financially and artistically, to the qualified musician.

When the moving picture theatre was born no one imagined, unless here and there a stray prophet, that it would become one of the greatest factors in the economic and social life of the country, but such has been the case, and although it is only within the last two or three years that music has been given its proper value in relation to the picture, it is now universally accepted as a vital necessity. From one end of the country to the other the cry is going out for the proper sort of musician; but, alas, the supply is exceedingly limited.

It must be remembered that one may be a very good musician and yet be useless for the purposes of the theatre. The organist to whom a Bach fugue or a Mendelssohn concerto is a familiar joy, might prove an unqualified failure as an accompanist to a feature play. The pianist who finds no insuperable difficulties in Chopin, McDowell or Tschaikowsky, might "fall down" with the simple score of an ordinary picture. And so with the orchestra leader. He might be capable of conducting a symphony orchestra through all the intricacies of a Strauss overture, and yet give no satisfaction to the audience of a "movie" show.

There is something over and above a technical and esthetic knowledge of music demanded in the theatre; in fact, this something can be best described under three heads: First and foremost, a strong sense of dramatic values; second, versatility, and, thirdly, repertoire. In brief, it is thorough musicianship plus these three qualifications.

There is an art in playing to the pictures which can only be acquired by thorough instruction and practical experience. The technique of the theatre is the very opposite of that of the concert platform or the Church; yet, other things being equal, the one is complementary to the other.

First-class theatres do not want fakirs. The day of the picture fakir is past. What is wanted is a musician in every sense of the word. One who has a cultivated sense of dramatic values in the picture, and the ability to translate and reinforce those values with the music. A player who can transpose a song, or orchestrate it for his orchestra, if need be. One who can improvise either original or given themes correctly and interestingly. A man or woman with a big repertoire of classical and popular music at his or her finger's ends, and the artistic skill to employ it suitably. Above all else, the ability to cue a picture understandingly, arranging a score which shall give the picture life and point, reinforcement and support, but which shall at no time obtrude itself to the detriment of the picture, or the story it is telling. Players of this calibre are what theatre men are calling for, and to whom they are willing to pay big salaries.

In fact, the recognition of picture playing as a dignified profession is becoming very prevalent, not only among workers in the film industry and musical fields, but in the lay mind of the picture fan. If a picture setting is haphazardly thrown together the patrons are instantly aware of it, and complaints stream into the office of the house manager. This is not conducive toward the welfare of the negligent or ignorant orchestra leader.

In order to prepare piano players, organists and orchestra leaders for the proper presentation of pictures there has been formed in Los Angeles, California, The Professional School of Picture Playing, having as its principal Brother R. V. Johnson. Mr. Johnson has, for a number of years, been actively engaged in picture playing throughout the country. He has served as organist, pianist and orchestra leader in the most modern of American theatres, and for several years was conductor of the Butte Symphony Orchestra and the Rialto Theatre Orchestra, at the same time being organist and conductor of the American Symphony Orchestra and the Rialto Theatre Orchestra in Butte, Montana. His individual qualifications are of the highest, while his associates on the faculty are artists of wide experience in picture playing.

So far as we can learn, the Professional School of Picture Playing is not for the hidden purpose of "plugging" any particular brand of organ or piano. Its aim is purely educational for the purpose of helping to raise the standard of picture music. Nothing could be more worthy of the undivided support of musicians everywhere. We bespeak for it a brilliant future and extend the glad hand of welcome with the assurance of our hearty co-operation and endorsement.

Union Musicians Back Up Their Uncle Sam.

Union musicians of the United States are playing in their highest key for the war aims of the country.

According to Owen Miller, National Secretary of the American Federation of Musicians, they are anxious to do still more, if they can, than they have done in the past.

In the recent Liberty Loan drive the musicians have subscribed to approximately $2,500,000 worth of the renowned bonds. In the second drive they loyally dug into their national and private money chests for nearly $2,000,000, and in the first loan campaign they bought an amount closely approaching the later two endeavors.

In the second loan drive the international organization subscribed for $55,000 worth of the bonds and would have taken $75,000 in subscriptions but $20,000 was tied up in a manner that made the proposition unmanageable.

Many of the affiliated musicians' unions, despite the fact that their treasuries were somewhat weakened for local reasons, nevertheless went the limit to stimulate success for Uncle Sam's war bond flotations.

And from one end of the nation to the other, wherever men have formed in the parade line to enthuse the citizens to the big issues before the nation, the union musicians have given of their best in music, service and in money.

The 88,000 members of the American Federation of Musicians can well be proud of the work, well done, they have accomplished for the United States of America in its hours of deepest stress. The nation, too, is proud of the noble band.

Musicians Must Work or Fight.

Considerable diversity has been expressed on proper interpretation as to just who shall be included in the order. The five district exemption boards of Missouri held an all-day meeting in Jefferson City, the capital of the State, June 20, 1918, for the purpose of agreeing on uniform action. This resulted in sending an official circular to all local exemption boards containing nine paragraphs instructing the local boards how the "Work or Fight" order, issued by Provost Marshal General Crowder, is to be applied. This circular was sent out by Lieutenant Colonel J. H. McCord, who has charge of the enforcing of the draft act. Paragraph 3 is appended and applies to musicians:

"3. Paragraph C of Section 121-K, includes, in addition to ushers and other attendants, all persons engaged and occupied in games, sports and amusements, except actual performers in legitimate concerts, operas or theatrical performances."

And this means that every professional musician who is not engaged in connection with legitimate concerts, operas or theatrical performances will be forced to enter other vocations or go to the front.

Take Care of Your Piano.

We are in receipt of a letter from a prominent singer who works for a song publishing house, confining his efforts to the city portion called Brooklyn. He complains bitterly about the condition of pianos in the picture theaters, which, he maintains, are not kept in tune nor receive any attention after they are once installed.

Exhibitors should take as great care of their piano as they do of their operating machine. A piano whose keys stick, the upper register is flat and the lower one sharp, while a few notes won't sound at all, is neither ornamental nor useful. It gives the place a black-eye with every music lover who enters the place. Pianists cannot be expected to provide good music unless they have a decent instrument upon which to perform. Singers cannot get results if they are forced to sing with a piano that varies in pitch with every octave (we mean, of course, out of tone balance).

The remedy is simple and comparatively inexpensive. An instrument that receives six and seven hours continuous playing should be tuned once every two months. If this be done regularly the tuner can easily adjust any loose connections or soften up the hammers. It simply resolves itself into the old adage, "A stitch in time saves nine," and, perhaps, a new piano.

Music At the Strand.

During the week of July 28, Harold Edel, of the Strand Theatre, offered his usual excellent program of music. Opening with the overture Masaniello, by Auber, and conducted by Carl Edouarde, it continued smoothly and artistically until the organ solo, March Triumphial, by Clark, which closed the show.

The overture was exceptionally well played, with pretty gradations of tone quality. The rhythm was well marked, and, although the inclination was to hasten the gladsome theme a trifle, the entire interpretation was splendid and in keeping with the traditional rendition. A pastoral setting, showing sheep grazing upon the hillside, assisted materially in conveying to the audience the dominate feeling of the overture. It is somewhat interesting to note the historical significance of this overture and the unique personality of its composer.

Daniel F. Auber, a prolific composer of French operas, was born at Caen in Normandy in 1782, died in Paris, 1871. His father, an art dealer and print seller in Paris, wished his son to devote himself to business, and sent him to London to acquire a knowledge of the trade. Auber's irresistible inclination for music, however, manifested itself and in 1804 he returned to Paris, following thenceforward his natural bent. His first opera, "Julie," was produced in 1812. He wrote several operas, among which "Masaniello ou la Muette de Portici," produced for the first time in 1828, was considered a masterpiece by Wagner. Its portrayal of popular fury is so graphic, that the Brussels riots followed its performance in that city in 1830. It seems to have been inspired by the revolutionary spirit prevalent at that time in Paris; it differs so wholly from Auber's other operas which are comic.

The pictorial had a choice selection of music. The early part showing the prisoners who had been captured by the French, was played by the organ, and Brother Brigham showed great ingenuity in the paraphrasing of the Marseillaise. During the air raids on the churches a slow pathetic was rendered by the orchestra and proved most effective in contrast. The Oriental music accompanying the scenes of Palestine carried the true eastern atmosphere and won appreciation from the audience.

Maleta Bonconi, a little lady violin virtuoso, showed a considerable dexterity in the playing of "Hejre Kati," by Hubay. Her bowing is good, althongh her interpretation could only be classed as fair, while her harmonics were exceptionally fine. In her second number "Souvenir," by Drdla, which was played con sordino, she showed a breadth of tone which was extremely pleasing and found popular favor.

The feature, "The Border Legion," was accompanied by orchestra without a fault. The choice of music was excellent and the fact that they always remained under the picture proved effective. During the scene between the hero and the heroine, in a lone hut on the plains, dramatic value was enhanced immeasurably by the excellent synchronization of the selection. The finale was magnificent.

Following the feature Herbert Waterous, basso, rendered "A Fighting Man," by Capel, in a manner that was truly artistic. We have always maintained that the experienced artist, and preferably those who have gained a wide reputation, through good work, is to be strongly desired in the picture field. Mr. Waterous has a voice far above the average, and is always sure of a welcome wherever he appears.

The comedy and organ solo close a splendid bill.

Wedding March—Sousa.

It is interesting to learn that Lieutenant John Philip Sousa is writing a "Wedding March." There will be no doubt, in quarters qualified for discriminating judgment, as to Mr. Sausa's capabilities. The trouble will come in finding a bride who will have the courage sufficient to spurn the galling jade of ancient precedent and make her way to the altar in the strains of a wedding march "made in America." May the Star of Inspiration shine bright upon Lieutenant Sousa's pathway as he assumes this commendable undertaking.

Musical Suggestion Synopsis.

A GENTLEMAN'S AGREEMENT (Vitagraph—Five Reels)—Theme—Valse Lento. Suggest "Kathleen"—Berg, "Waters of Venice"—Von Tilzer, or "Adele"—Briquet.

The character of this picture is strongly dramatic and of modern times. The atmosphere is western and will require music of the western type. Note the wedding scene where organ can be effectively used, but do not play Wagner nor Beethoven unless you have nothing to substitute. You will need light music in large quantities for the first half of the picture and graduate it so that it works up into dramatic stuff. You will need three agitatos, a misterioso, a hurry and a furioso. Some dramatic tension music can be advantageously used also. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Vitagraph Exchange.

A NINE O'CLOCK TOWN (Paramount—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "A Perfect Day—Bond, "Serenade"—Liandon, "Legend"—Friml.

This is a comedy-drama calling for light music with moments of dramatic value. Here will be needed serenades, bright intermezzos, a few light waltzes. Some agitatos and fast allegros can also be used. There are two opportunities for special effects. In the beginning of the picture when the clock strikes use an imitation of a cuckoo, and in the second and fourth reels produce a band effect, playing a march. If your orchestra be large, cut out all the strings and work a brass quartet with woodwind. This might be done by the organist also, and be productive of good results. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount Exchange.

DANGER MARK, THE (Artcraft—Five Reels)—Theme—Andantino. Suggest "May Dreams"—Borch, "Extase D'Amour"—Roze, or "Melodie"—Lederer.

The story is one of retrospection within. It is psychological in its appeal and will need rather heavy music. It is a picture that will require some study to evolve the best musical accompaniment and a previewing should be obtained if possible. There are no startling situations and the plot moves along smoothly, so that long numbers will prove most effective. Do not use the theme too frequently, but let it act as a re-enforcement of the strong points in the picture. You must use a waltz to fit the dancing scene and some heavy dramatic music will come in handy as you approach the finish of the picture. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Artcraft Exchanges.

DEMON, THE (Metro—Five Reels)—Theme—Allegretto. Suggest "Impish Elves"—Borch, "Dance of the Moths"—Weidt, or "Barhetta"—Nevin.

Here is a picture that will require great ingenuity to bring out the contrasts of many atmospheres. You will need, besides modern music, some Oriental stuff, a little distinctive Italian music and some varieties, emblematic of the British snob. The picture is serio-comic and the music should be exaggerated almost to burlesque proportions. We would suggest the opera "Perdita" as a most suitable source of search for needed material. In view of the fact that the heroine bears the same name, lovers of this opera would appreciate its significance while it has the necessary Italian flavor. You will need some agitatos and misteriosos, some dramatic tensions and hurries to make up the proper setting. No special effects are needed. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Metro Exchange.

FEDORA (Paramount—Five Reels)—Theme—Andante Dramatic and Russian. Suggest "Fedora"—Giordano (the Andante portion), "Visions"—Tschaikowski, or "Reve Angelique"—Rubinstein.

The character of this picture is intensely dramatic and follows closely the story by Sardou. The operatic version will be found invaluable and with close attention it can be made to play almost the entire picture. The music must be entirely in the Russian atmosphere and very heavy throughout. The usual number of hurries and agitatos will be needed. Pauline Fredericks plays the title role and you, who have played her earlier offerings will know exactly what to expect. Get a pre-viewing if you can, as the cue sheets available do not get under the surface of the drama. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount Exchange.

LESS THAN KIN (Paramount—Five Reels)—Theme—Andantino. Suggest "Esperanza"—Johnstone, or "Midsummer's Night Serenade"—Albeniz.

The music for this picture is light and of the Spanish type mainly. You will need a misterioso, a march and a waltz lento. In the first reel begin with "La Paloma" and continue with the Spanish atmosphere until the pathetic moment, when it is permissable to leave the atmosphere if necessary for proper portrayal of the situation. There is a direct cue calling for a "Perfect Day," By Bond. Don't miss it. Close with the theme. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Paramount Exchange.

LESSON, THE (Select—Five Reels)—Theme—Moderato. Suggest "My Castle in the Air"—Kern, "Wait Till the Clouds Roll By," or "Melodie"—Kargonoff.

Open with light music of the serenade and intermezzo variety which will take you up to the third reel. During the latter you will need to fit a wedding procession, its following marriage ceremony and the leaving from the church. If your patrons object to the usual "Bridal Chorus" from the "Wedding March" because of their German origin, play the "Bridal Chorus" from the "Rose Maidens," by Cowen, then "Traumerie"—Schumann, and "The Coronation March," by Svenden. This is the only spot that will give any difficulty. No Photoplay Series is necessary for this picture. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Select Exchange.

SOUL OF BUDDHA (Fox—Five Reels)—Theme unnecessary.

This is a picture dealing in three atmospheres, Oriental, Scotch and French. You will require agitatos and dramatic tensions as well as a few pathetics. When the dancers appear it would be advisable to use Ballet Egyptian No. 1, by Luigini. See that the musical contrasts are well marked. Cue sheets can be obtained from the Fox Exchange.

Leaders' Service Bureau.

Questions Answered—Suggestions Offered.

Q. I use a fourteen piece orchestra, regular combination. In storm scenes how can I get the best effect, with "strings," "wood-wind," or "brass"?

A. The use of the strings and wood-wind is preferable, as the brass has a tendency to overbalance the orchestra if used. Examples of excellent writing for storm effects are to be found in "Scotch Poem," by MacDowell, and "Promethius," by Lizst. If your selection is heavily scored for brass muted effect secures an even balance.

Q. In writing a march is it better to keep the theme in the same key throughout or change it?

A. The usual form is to have the trio in a relative key going back into the first key in the coda. Sousa, however, usually holds the coda in the same key as the trio, which is usually a fifth higher than the opening one.

Nature of Positive.

SINCE the following toning processes intensify the original image, it is necessary to commence toning with an image of the correct density and contrast. A "medium," positive referred to below, is obtained by giving a slight over exposure and a short time of development, but the exact degree of intensification which takes place in any particular case will be learned after a few trials.

In the case of lantern slides the best and most transparent tones are only produced on slides of fine grain such as the Eastman Standard Slow lantern plate.

Tone 1. Red Tone.

Positive Employed. Medium.

Tone the well washed positive in the following:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Copper Sulphate	250 grains	16 grams
Ammonium Citrate (Neutral)	500 gr. 1 oz	50 "
Potassium Ferricyanide	240 grains	16 "
Ammonium Carbonate	120 grains	8 "
Water to	1 gallon	4 liters

Dissolve each ingredient separately in as little water as possible, mix the filtered solutions so obtained in the order given and dilute to the required volume. The solution obtained should be light green in color and perfectly clear. The ammonium carbonate should be almost transparent and free from white powder, and should be dissolved in cold water, while the ammonium citrate employed should be neutral. Most samples contain acid which acid would neutralize the ammonium carbonate and affect the resulting tone. The free acid is usually citric acid, and should be neutralized with a solution of ammonia using Litmus, as indicator.

Somewhat warmer tones are obtained by adding 50% more potassium ferricyanide to the formula.

Life of the Bath.

With use the bath precipitates a brown sludge of copper ferrocyanide and in consequence becomes weaker by the loss of copper.

Time and Temperature of Toning.

5 to 15 minutes as 70° F.

Time of Washing.

10 minutes.

It is important to keep the bath covered when not in use so as to exclude light, since the bath is light sensitive while no foreign metallic surface should be allowed to come into contact with the solution, otherwise the copper salt will deposit on the metal.

After washing, immerse in the following dye bath:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Safranine A (National Aniline & Chem. Co., Inc.)	60 grains	4 grams
Acetic Acid (Glacial)	⅓ ounce	22 cc.
Water to	1 gallon	4 liters

Time of Dyeing.

5 to 10 minutes, according to depth of tone desired.

Time of Washing After Dyeing.

Usually only a slight rinse in water is necessary. If the highlights are stained, the positive should be washed for five or ten minutes, or until clear. Stained highlights are caused either by insufficient washing after toning, too strong a dye bath, or an incorrect amount of acid in the dye bath.

Tone 2. Orange Tone.

The instructions are exactly as for Tone 1, substituting the following dye bath:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Chrysoidin 3R (Nat. Aniline & Chem. Co., Inc.)	24 grains	1.6 grams
Glacial Acetic Acid	⅔ ounce	20 cc.
Water to	1 gallon	4 liters

Tone 3. Violet.

The instructions are exactly as for Tone 1, substituting the following dye bath:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Methyl Violet (Nat. Aniline & Chem. Co., Inc.)	24 grains	1.6 grams
Acetic Acid (Glacial)	⅔ ounce	20 cc.
Water to	1 gallon	4 liters

Intermediate Dye Tones.

The depth of the dye tone is determined by the time of immersion both in the copper toning bath and in the due bath. Pale tones may therefore be obtained either by giving a short bath in the copper solution and fully dyeing, or by toning for a longer time and giving a short immersion in the dye bath.

By mixing the dye baths, 1, 2 and 3, intermediate colors may be obtained.

Tone 4. Pale Red.

Positive Employed—Normal.

Tone for one or two minutes in the copper bath, wash for ten minutes, and then immerse in the following dye bath:

Dye solution for Tone 1, 1 volume.
Dye solution for Tone 2, 1 volume.

When the desired tone is obtained, rinse until the highlights are clear.

Compound Tones.

Tone 5. Copper, Iron, Dye Tone.

By first partially toning the black and white positive (medium) in the copper bath so that the half-tones are completely toned but the shadows only partially, washing for ten minutes and then completing the toning process in a blue toning solution, the residual silver in the shadows is toned blue. In this way a double tone is obtained, the shadows appearing dark blue and the half tones reddish brown.

By immersing the positive toned in this manner in the Chrysoidin dye bath as given under Tone 2, the dye is mordanted to the half-tones which contain copper ferrocyanide producing a striking double tone effect.

A suitable blue toning bath formula is as follows:

	Avoirdupois.	Metric.
Potassium Bichromate	1½ grains	.1 gram
Ferric Alum (Ferric Ammonium Sulphate)	75 "	5 grams
Oxalic Acid	180 "	12 "
Potassium Ferricyanide	60 "	4 "
Ammonium Alum	300 "	20 "
Hydrochloric Acid 10%	65 minims	4 cc.
Water to	1 gallon	4 liters

The method of compounding this bath is very important. Each of the solid chemicals should be dissolved separately in a small quantity of warm water, the solutions allowed to cool, filtered, mixed strictly in the order given, and the whole diluted to the required volume. If these instructions are followed, the bath will be a pale yellow color, perfectly clear, and will remain so for a considerable period.

Troubles in Dye Toning.

(a) Stained highlights are due either to insufficient washing after toning in the copper bath, too strong a dye bath, or an incorrect amount of acid in the dye bath.

(b) Weak highlights. If the highlights do not absorb the dye proportionately, this is due to the use of an exhausted copper bath or of one that was not mixed correctly.

Summary.

Lantern slides and motion picture positive film may be toned by replacing more or less of the silver image by a compound of copper, particularly copper ferrocyanide, washing, and then immersing the toned image in an acid solution of a basic dye. The copper salt present in the image acts as a mordant to the dye and a toned image is thus produced of a color intermediate between that of the dye and the copper compound, depending on the relative proportion of each. The amount of coper salt necessary to mordant the dye is usually so small that the resultant tone differs but slightly from that of the dye itself.

By employing a mixture of dyes intermediate tones may be obtained, while by commencing with a black and white image of fine grain, very transparent toned images are produced.

The author is indebted to Mr. S. Tulpan for assistance in carrying out the various experiments.

A Glycin Developer.

Glycin is slow acting developer which keeps for a long time and yields negatives perfectly free from stain. It also makes an excellent positive developer giving a rich blue black print and when redeveloped gives very pleasing sepia tones. Its keeping qualities and close grained deposit recommend it especially for those whose work is in small quantities and infrequent. When exhausted it becomes strongly fluorescent, showing a bluish cast like kerosene, and should then be thrown away.

Try the following formula, and if you find it satisfactory you can easily calculate for larger quantities:

Glycin	2 ozs.
Sodium sulphite	5 "
Potassium carbonate	10 "
Water	1 gallon

Making the Whole World American

League of Nations to Be Realized Through Motion Pictures —London Looks for Principles of Washington and Lincoln to Accomplish These Results.

THE London Evening News is calling the attention of the English manufacturers to the "domination of the American films." While admitting the great American leadership in moving picture educative control, the English paper pleads for a strengthening of British interests. At the present time the "kings" of the moving picture production are in America, and while American principles are admirable, the desire is expressed that British producers should do more to hold their own, with the intent that future national developments should have sufficient British-American influence wherewith to maintain interest in India, Australia, New Zealand and even Canada.

The particular power of the moving picture in the coming league of nations is expressed as follows: "It is through the cinema that the peoples of the nations of the world will get to understand each other; the moving picture will prove a tremendous power in cementing the projected league of nations which is to maintain a world peace."

In every part of the world where moving pictures are shown the principles of Washington and Lincoln are becoming the principles of all peoples, they are sentimentally and practically immediately acceptable to the human race, and their propagation is only limited by the limitation of the moving picture, which now in turn seems to be fast becoming unlimited.

It is fairly calculated that 90 per cent of moving picture education is now absolutely American. "There are few pictures nowadays in which 'Old Glory' does not get a look-in" says an English writer, and, while it is a little humiliating to British interests to have to admit this, these are times in which the world must be glad to encourage the present spirit of the allied age no matter from what country may emanate the greatest leadership.

The two fundamentals of the moving picture are the universal nature of its language and its power of unlimited expansion. These great qualities are the causes of all success attending its mission. That these should be dedicated to the greatest of world problems is not surprising. That the principles of America's highest purposes may be thus spread is great cause for educational moving picture congratulation.

Interesting Educationals of the Week

Two Travel Subjects Two Industrial, and One Topical.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

"Antigua, British West Indies" (Pathe).

ONE of the most interesting spots in the West Indies from an historical standpoint, is Antigua. It is the capital of the Leeward Islands, and according to the picture exhibited at the Rivoli theatre, is subject to drouth and wind storms. Among the points of interest shown is St. John's with a population of 9000, and English harbor made famous on account of its associations with Lord Nelson. The docks with their yellow buildings little changed since the time of the great sea lord are covered in the picture, as well as other ancient relics.

"The Tides of Yesterday" (Educational-Bruce).

Longfellow's poem "The Tide Rises, The Tide Falls" has provided the inspiration for Robert C. Bruce's latest scenic gem. This picture consists of a series of beautiful scenes on the sea shore carried out along the lines of light and shade represented in the poem. It is a picture which will be most welcome to the refined audience.

"An Old World Lesson in Farming" (Paramount-Bray).

In the 133rd issue of the Pictograph will be found an illustration of the thrift of the Italian farmer transplanted to America. It shows his practice of tilling every inch of the land that he has bought for a mere song. It also draws attention to the economy of his methods in putting his whole family to work on the homestead.

"Making It Possible for the Blind to Read" (Universal).

The printing of the Matilda Magazine established by Mrs. William Ziegler in New York City, and distributed free to 15,000 blind persons in the United States and Canada, is shown in the Screen Magazine No. 84. The working of the presses on which the paper, first dampened, receives the raised impressions by means of which the blind read the news and other articles of the magazine is illustrated. It is also interesting to watch the deft manner in which the blind employees handle the various tasks of getting the magazine together.

"Fine Points of a $10,000 Beauty (Universal).

Farmers especially will be interested in this subject which appears in the 84th issue of the Screen Magazine. A superfine specimen of the Jersey milk cow class is introduced; and when we have admired her to the full an expert points out for us her various excellencies of physique.

Pretty Good for An Amateur Showman

Texan With Five Weeks' Experience Filled His House Continuously for Seventeen Hours.

"I MIGHT have done better," said V. R. Barnard, manager of the Star Theatre, Cooledge, Texas, "but I am a new man in the business. It was June 3 when I got into the show business. It was July 16 that I ran 'My Four Years in Germany' for seventeen consecutive hours."

Arthur James, publicity director for Metro, in his contribution on the subject of advertising and publicity among the other articles printed in The World of July 20, said something. He declared that "unless the exhibitor was willing to advertise his show nobody could save him."

At least one exhibitor down in Texas has proved the truth of Mr. James' assertion. His name is V. R. Barnard, and he runs the Star Theatre, at Cooledge, a town of 505 persons, according to the railroad guide. Mr. Barnard showed "My Four Years in Germany" on July 16.

In a letter to the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Texas, at Dallas, dated July 26, he tells what he did, saying at the same time that he "advertised it good." Here's his letter, which may be of interest to exhibitors who are inclined to balk at what they deem a too heavy advertising expense:

"'My Four Years in Germany' was a big success for me. I advertised it good; kept my car on road six days and began showing it at 9 a.m. and stopped at 2.10 a.m., and the last show began at 12 o'clock in the night and had 221 people to see it that time. People would come out and tell how good it was and they just stood there and waited until they could get in. So you can tell the exhibitors if they want their standing room taken up, show 'My Four Year in Germany.'"

GILLSTROM TO DIRECT THE LEES.

Arvid E. Gillstrom, one of the best known directors of comedy-drama productions in the country, has joined the forces of William Fox. He will begin work soon on a production starring Jane and Katherine Lee. The title of the picture has not yet been chosen.

Mr. Gillstrom has had a long and successful career in directing screen comedies. Born in Gotenberg, Sweden, he was educated in the School of Mines, Colorado, and in his youth served as a mining engineer and prospector. His screen career has been almost wholly along comedy lines, and many of the comedy effects which are now in universal use were originated by him.

Trade Conditions in Far East Good

Howells Representative Discusses Present and Future Outlook of the Film Business in Australasia and the Orient.

HORACE T. CLARKE, Australian and Oriental representative of David P. Howells of this city, is at present in New York on his way from Australia to the Orient.

Asked what he considered the prospects of the motion picture industry in the Commonwealth, he replied: "I see a wonderful future for the business in Australia. Even up to the present time I think I am right in saying that we have, taking into consideration our limited population, accomplished a great deal in the distributing and exhibiting end of the business. You must remember that practically every picture that is produced here is eventually released in Australia. In fact, we have been receiving more film than we can properly take care of. For instance, I doubt if any Australian distributor is making money at the present time, while on the other hand, the live wire exhibitor is doing well, for having a liberal supply of film from which to draw on he is well placed and can afford to be somewhat independent.

Horace T. Clarke.

The Australian buyer is paying too much for his film supplies nowadays, which can safely be attributed to certain Australian buyers in the past overestimating their own importance and incidentally picture possibilities in their market. After the war when the Government's present building restrictions are lifted, there will undoubtedly be a number of picture houses on the latest American plan built in our leading centres. This, together with the fact that fewer and better productions are likely to be made in the future, should further popularize the moving picture in the Antipodes.

"The war is naturally having a serious affect upon Australia. We have contributed roughly 80 per cent. of our eligible fighting force by voluntary enlistment, and are still continuing on that basis. In addition we have subscribed in the vicinity of $750,000,000 to war loans and war funds. New Zealand is also cheerfully making wonderful sacrifices. With a population of approximately 1,000,000 people, she is now conscripting her 'married men with three children' class.

"Picture audiences, which are comprised of 75 per cent. womenfolk, want light entertainment as a rule. We rely on America for practically the whole of our film supplies at present, the exception being a limited supply of British topicals. Our public is particularly interested in America's war activities, and for this reason your war gazettes are very popular. The Australian feeling towards anything German is very pronounced. Picture house attendances have kept up very well despite the call on our male population, which is mainly due to the fact that many people find it too expensive to go regularly to the spoken drama, although the cost of admission is considerably less than it is with you.

"Desirous of becoming acquainted with the producing and manufacturing end of the business, we visited Los Angeles on our way across and had the pleasure of seeing a number of the leading stars at work. Considered among the favorites in Australia are Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Clara Kimball Young, Mme. Petrova, Pauline Frederick and our own Enid Bennett; Charlie Chaplin is of course a warm favorite and certainly has it all his own way as far as comedy is concerned. Very little has been done by way of production in Australia, although several of the pictures made there have been successful on account of their local atmosphere. The production of pictures at present on a large scale seems impracticable, for while such a venture would probably be an artistic success, it could hardly be claimed a success commercially.

"We are expecting a great increase in trade between America and Australia after the war, particularly when shipping problems are straightened out. When the business warrants it, no doubt we will have regular weekly steamship sailings and a fifteen day voyage in lieu of twenty days as at present. This is exactly what Australia needs and will go a long way toward her internal development.

"I am very much interested in the stand that your Government has taken in classing the Motion Picture Industry as an essential, clearly demonstrating the high national value reposed in it as a revenue-earning and win-the-war industry. I am also much impressed with the desire of the men in every branch of the business to do all in their power to assist the Government with the work it has in hand; this will naturally tend to elevate the business to a higher plane. While the present censorship and license regulations are causing quite a good deal of hardship amongst the exporters, we can rest assured that the Government is only taking such steps as are deemed necessary under the existing conditions."

Mr. Clarke leaves New York early in September for Japan, China, the Philippines, Straits Settlements, India and the Dutch East Indies, returning to Australia in January next. He takes with him a number of features, special productions and supporting programs purchased by David P. Howells for the Oriental market. After several months in Australia, Mr. Clarke will return to the Orient to place new contracts for Mr. Howells, who is extending his operations in these territories.

Robertson-Cole Closes Foreign Sales.

The Robertson-Cole Company, international film distributors, announce the following just closed:

"Stolen Orders" for the United Kingdom of Great Britain and her colonies, except Australia and Canada.

"Woman Eternal" and "11th Commandment" for British Isles and "11th Commandment" for Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Equador.

"The Finger of Justice" for British Isles, Australia, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

"The Master Crook" and "The Public Defender" for British Isles, France, Italy, Holland, Greece, Spain, India, Burma, Ceylon and Straits Settlements.

"Those Who Pay," "The Belgian" and "Just a Woman" for the United Kingdom and "The Belgian" for India.

"The Eagle's Eye" for Australia, Chile, Peru, Bolivia and Ecuador.

"The Accidental Honeymon" for United Kingdom.

"Raffles" for Chile, Peru, Bolivia, Ecuador, Spain and Portugal.

"The Zeppelin's Last Raid" and "Nine Tenths of the Law" for Spain and Portugal.

And the following subjects for the whole of South Africa:

"Woman Eternal," "11th Commandment," "Crucible of Life," "Just a Woman," "Nine Tenths of the Law," "The Silent Witness," "The Sin Woman," "The Castoff," "The Fringe of Society," "Men," "The Serpent's Tongue," "The Devil's Playground."

Big Deal Closed for South America

Peruvian Exchange Purchases Rights on Fox, Pathe, Ivan, Paralta and Numerous Special Productions.

THE Empresa de Teatros y Cinema, Lda., one of the largest renting and exhibiting concerns in South America, has recently put in practice a plan designed to bring together the Spanish speaking public of its territory and the American manufacturers of moving pictures. Eduardo Rodrigo, one of the managers of the firm, arrived in New York about two months ago for the purpose of establishing connections, and will be on his way back to South America by the time this issue goes to press. Following a course much in vogue among Latin-American and European buyers, which is, however, being rapidly eliminated by the modern publicity methods developed in this country, Mr. Rodrigo refused to make any public announcement whatsoever in regard to his New York activities until he had closed his contracts and was ready to leave these shores.

Eduardo Rodrigo.

"The contracts that I have signed on behalf of the Empresa de Teatros y Cinemas, Lda.," said Mr. Rodrigo to a representative of the Moving Picture World, "cover as much as a million feet of film and represent an investment of over a hundred thousand dollars. All these contracts will be in force for at least a year.

"We have bought all the Paralta output, which includes the pictures featuring Bessie Barriscale, Lois Wilson, Henry Walthal, J. Warren Kerrigan, Louise Glaum and Clara Williams; most of the five-reelers produced by the Select Company with Clara Kimball Young, Norma and Constance Talmadge, Alice Brady and Marion Davies; the Selexart productions in six and seven reels; all the Ivan films; 'Les Miserables,' 'When a Man Sees Red,' 'Du Barry,' 'Jack and the Bean Stalk,' as well as a large and comprehensive selection of other Fox subjects; practically everything produced by Pathe here and in Europe, and numerous special productions, such as 'Inside the Lines,' 'Hypocrites,' 'I Believe,' 'The Married Virgin,' 'The Reapers,' 'The Master of the House,' 'Liberty,' 'A Man's Man,' and 'The Victim.'

"As you are undoubtedly aware, our firm, besides supplying the exhibitors in general, owns several theaters and controls many others. Some of them are our absolute property, and I mean by this that we own not only the buildings, but also the land. In this connection, I wish to mention the Colon and Excelsior theatres, of Lima, as well as the Cinema-Teatro of Barranco, an aristocratic watering place located twenty minutes from the capital of Peru. In Arequipa we have just opened the Olimpo theatre, equipped, as all the others, with every modern improvement. One of the theatres we control, the Merced Street Cinema-Theatre of Lima, shares the honor with another Buenos Aires house of being the only ones in South America giving continuous performances.

"In Chile, Ecuador and Bolivia we have branches and agencies, besides exploiting several theatres, amongst them the Alhambra of Valparaiso, especially built for moving picture exhibitions. This house is doubtless one of the most comfortable in South America.

"I might remark in passing that competition in Chile is assuming suicidal proportions. There will be very shortly eight exchanges within the republic. However, owing to the purchases recently made by us in this country, we can look to the future without the slightest fear.

Colon Theatre, Lima.

"In regard to Peru, you will allow me to make one point perfectly clear. I have noticed that some South American renters, in interviews published in Cine-Mundial, insist on alluding to their 'branches in Lima.' Now, I wish to state that amongst the theatres and moving picture houses of Lima there are only three that we do not supply. Our programs constitute ninety per cent. of the moving picture business done in Peru, and, therefore, the talk about branches and agencies down there only reveals abnormal powers of imagination.

"The capital we do business with—not counting our investments in films—as represented by our theatres, real estate, furniture and cash, amounts to 65,000 Peruvian Pounds, equivalent to about 325,000 Dollars in American currency. This does not include our recent purchases.

"Before closing, I might say that the American moving picture production appears to me to be simply wonderful, colossal, in quantity and quality. I have been purchasing films in all the producing and exporting markets of the world within the past five years, and it is by honest opinion that the Silent Art is advancing with gigantic strides in the studios of this country."

The Empresa de Teatros y Cinemas, Lda., which Mr. Rodrigo has been representing in New York, was founded in 1900 and occupies a prominent position in the firm trade of Latin-America.

Its president, Aurelio Garcia y Lastres, was for some time secretary of the treasury of the Peruvian Republic, and is to-day the manager of the Popular Bank of Peru. Felipe Chavez, of the Parisian commission house of Chavez Bros., is the vice-president. Chavez Bros. do all the buying for the firm in European markets.

Warning to Exporters and Producers

Arch G. Kent Calls Attention to Peculiar Transactions Originating in South America and Mexico.

A COUPLE of men from Cuba, beginners in the film business, arrived in New York a month ago for the purpose of putting the finishing touches to a deal initiated by corespondence with Sidney Garrett, of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc. The deal—if the purchase of a single picture can be designated by such a high-sounding name—fell through. Like all amateurs, the pseudo-impresarios from Cuba, after a short week in town, became so suspicious that they were afraid of their own shadows. Finally, the strain was too hard to bear, and, according to Bernardo Herrera, the Chilean renter, both left for South America to buy America pictures for exploitation in Cuba.

Carlos Callejas, an old-timer of recognized ability in a small way, also from Cuba, came to New York two months ago, and, after organizing a company under the name of Callejas & Boan, secured the rights on most of the Paralta and Vitagraph productions for his territory. Mr. Callejas, when he started negotiations with the local exporters, found conditions very discouraging, and one day declared point-blank in the office of Cine-Mundial that he was thinking seriously of taking the next steamer for South America, as he could get the same pictures there cheaper and without so much fuss.

Arch G. Kent, general manager of the Central American Film Company, holds even more decided views on the subject. He does not hesitate to give details of several transactions of this nature and to mention the name of the concern he thinks responsible for them, which, for obvious reasons, we cannot divulge.

"If the manufacturers and exporters cannot put a stop to this illicit traffic or do not care to do so," said Mr. Kent recently to a representative of the Moving Picture World, "we will simply have to adopt the same methods and buy in the cheapest market. It is no laughing matter to purchase rights at fancy figures in New York while some of our competitors are obtaining all kinds of American film at ridiculous prices from Mexico and South America. The only safeguard we have at the present time are the intricate regulations of the War Trade Board. Thanks to them, we can do business to-day in the United States in a business-like way, without the constant fear of the profits being turned into a loss by the activities of the dupers, pirates and the legion of unscruplous brokers that used to infest the large trading centers of this country. But nothing has been done in foreign markets to curb the activities of these traders and of some firms doing exactly the same thing in spite of their claims to financial standing and respectability.

"Here is an opportunity for the Film Exporters of America and the Export Division of the National Association of Manufacturers to prove their usefulness to the industry in general. We all know that this state of affairs cannot be eliminated by legislation. As a matter of fact, even in this country the laws are very lax in their application to the film business. The same thing occurs abroad with the added disadvantage that, for weighty reasons of our own, we refused to sign the international agreement on copyrights formulated by the Berne Convention, and find ourselves to-day entirely unprotected in most foreign countries. This is particularly true in Latin-America, where some American producers, who had been 'borrowing' rights with impunity from European authors without consulting them, are threatened with all kinds of law-suits and in some cases have had to make unpleasant compromises to avoid court action, while they themselves cannot obtain any legal redress whatever if their own legitimate picture rights are infringed.

"This is the time, therefore, for the Export Division of the N. A. M. P. I. and the Film Exporters of America to take the logical course, and the only practical one, to exterminate this evil, by entering into a hard and fast agreement not to deal with any national or foreign concern that makes a practice of going outside its territory or of knowingly trading with parties guilty of such infringements. In a word, what I advocate is a commercial blacklist in the film business. This, in conjunction with the new regulations of the War Trade Board, would place the export business of films on a sound basis."

Foreign News and Comment.

Relations between Spain, France and Italy are becoming more and more strained in the moving picture business. The French government has enforced an absolute prohibition against the export of celluloid film, whether exposed or not, to the Peninsula, and the quantity of Italian films imported is rapidly diminishing. American pictures, that were looked upon not so very long ago with a certain amount of ill-concealed contempt as a sort of filler, occupy at present a privileged place in all programs.

To give our manufacturers and exporters an idea of the revolution that is taking place at this moment in the Spanish amusement world, we reproduce below a few paragraphs from an article recently written by Julio L. de Castilla, editor of "La Vida Grafica."

"I do not wish to go into the factors that have brought about these changes in the tastes of the public, nor into the advantages or disadvantages they may entail; my only aim is to call the attention of the trade to a condition that exists and must be reckoned with.

"We are still getting many good Italian pictures, as evidenced by the announcements carried in all the local trade papers; but if there is nothing to complain about in regard to quality, the same thing cannot be said when it comes to quantity.

"During the months of April and May the censorship bureau has examined one hundred and fifty thousand metres (about 460,000 feet) of films, divided as follows: Italian, 50,000 metres; French, 15,000 metres; American, 70,000 metres; Spanish 15,000 metres.

"These figures speak for themselves."

According to reports sent by the local Cine-Mundial correspondent, the Sociedad General Cinematografica, of Buenos Aires, suspended the release of all new pictures on June 1st. This company has been handling, and is handling at the present time as far as we know, Paramount, Vitagraph, Select and some Triangle productions. It is our belief that this decision was taken to counteract the effects of the temporary export embargo on films that threatened the business with Latin American countries during the past month, and there is no doubt that normal conditions will be re-established as soon as the Washington authorities lift the ban on the granting of licenses. In point of fact, this has already been done, and, in our opinion, the Sociedad General acted this time in a rather precipitate manner.

Last week saw the opening of an important drive by Sidney Garrett, president of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc. It is his avowed intention to control for his concern as many good short comedy releases as possible. The first week saw big results for him, and four franchises for world's rights, outside of the United States and Canada, four comedy releases are added to his short reel department.

Tom Brett Comedies, Walt Mason Comedies, Crystal Comedies and Selig Chimpanzee Comedies are the particular four to be included in the first capture.

These in addition to half a dozen other franchises, including that of Billy West, are giving the house of J. Frank Brockliss, Inc., a commanding position in the foreign comedy field.

British Notes

By J. B. Sutcliffe.

THERE must be many in the moving picture profession in the U. S. A. wondering at the lethargy of the London Film Co., the producers of "The House of Temperley," "The Prisoner of Zenda," and several other classics of modern English literature, only a few of which were successfully exploited in the States. They need not wonder long, for now that internal dissensions in the parent company have been finally allayed the L. F. C. is again about to embark upon new exploits. Sir D. F. Jury has joined the board of directors and the first move is the re-issue on the home market of the old successes of which Jury's pictures are distributed. In the meantime an ambitious new production will be started upon at the Twickenham, or probably another studio. As a successor to "The Manxman" it should do much to restore the beefeater trade mark to its once unassailable place on our screens.

How often is it that the art of the film title becomes the art of film salesmanship? Apart from intrinsic merits there is one Fox comedy due for early release that has sold everywhere on its label, to borrow a commercial phrase. It is called "Are Married Policemen Safe?" The production, I notice, tactfully avoids a definite answer to the titular query, although the Fox office boy, a reputed wag, tells customers they may have it either in the negative or, and very emphatically (28 points) in the positive.

Capt. Bud Fisher of the Canadian army was among recent visitors to Wardour street. He is now in France and promises novel sketches of the doughty doings of Mutt and Jeff in the trenches.

* * *

S. F. Edge of motoring fame and a former financial backer of moving picture enterprises appears once more to be drifting into the industry. He has now become associated with J. C. Bee Mason, the bee king, in a new limited company for taking films of agricultural and natural history subjects. Mr. Mason has for several years been experimenting with the camera at his own bee farms in Sussex and since the beginning of the war Mr. Edge has become celebrated as a tiller of the land.

Sir Jesse Boot, the drug store magnate of the many stores bearing his name, is, I am told, also coming over to the pictures as a field for speculation.

Lest it should offend by innuendo the multitudes of hard working women munitioneers the Ideal Film Renting Co. has changed the title of its recent acquisition from "A Women of Today" to "A Frivolous Woman."

* * *

In connection with the issue of the Transatlantic Co.'s next serial a competition for War Savings Certificates is offered to patrons of moving picture theatres. The competitor has to discover "What Did Eddie Say?" at certain junctures in each episode of "The Bull's Eye." The Eddie referred to is, of course, the one and only Polo. The first prize is fifty War Savings Certificates worth on maturity one pound each.

Film Booking Offices, Ltd., the distributing agency here for Essanay, Kalem, A. B. and M. P. Sales Co. have appointed an exhibitor as its manager, S. Thornton Smithwaite.

At last, after many promises, much heralding and more speculations on the causes of its delay in shipment the multi-reel "Mickey" has safely landed in London. The Western Import Co. would have been in an unfortunate position if it hadn't, in view of the many bookings already received. Upon the booking of films in anticipation of their arrival from the States within a specified time London distributors are becoming more cautious. Only recently the Pathe Co. was compelled to cancel thousands of dollars' worth of contracts for its serial "The Mystery of the Double Cross" through the failure of the negative to be guaranteed in time for the original release date of the first episode.

Exchangemen of the Newcastle district have made an emphatic reply to the suggestion that they should only supply films to exhibitors who are members of the Exhibitors' Association. The renters strongly deprecate the idea and regard it as an attempt to use them as recruiting officers for the rank of the Exhibitors' Association.

Australian Notes

By Thomas S. Imrie.

Sydney, N. S. W., Australia, June 18, 1918.

HAVING experienced its fair share of vicissitudes as theatre and opera house, church and lecture hall, the Sydney Lyceum Theatre has during the past three months been transformed from a typical "old-time" theatre into one of the most comfortable and artistic photoplay theatres in Australia.

The renovation is mainly internal, and is of the most complete character. In place of the old drab chasm-like entrance which did not admit of any lobby display there is now an open vestibule, with walls cased in beautiful Australian marble, and a broad stairway of dignified proportions leading to a spacious foyer, which extends the width of the building and opens out on either wing to the dress circle accommodations. The old circles, upper and lower, with their numerous supporting columns, have disappeared, and new balconies have replaced them. Warren bridge trusses make columns unnecessary, and it may be said in passing that no other theatre in Australia boasts a 64-foot span under these circumstances.

The exhaust system of ventilation has been installed, the plant having a capacity of 33,000 cubic feet of air per minute. By advancing the line of the view circle 40 feet beyond that of the old, the back stalls look up to the foyer and enjoy the advantages of a 30 foot ceiling. The decorations are in the rococo of Louis XVI. treatment. Offices and retiring rooms are provided on the foyer floor, and the projecting machines—two 6B Power's—are housed in a fireproof room completely outside the walls of the building.

Hoyt's Proprietary, Ltd., the new lessees of the theatre, opened with the ten-part Fox super-feature "Les Miserables."

A deputation from the Theatrical Employees Association asked the Chief Secretary (Mr. Fuller) to amend the Theatres and Public Halls Act to provide for an examination of biograph operators and a stricter inspection of theatres, as far as the operating boxes and exit doors were concerned. They contended also that the operator should be provided with an assistant.

Mr. Fuller said that he would have to give the matter consideration before he would say he was prepared to bring in an amendment of the act.

Australasian Films, Ltd., are presenting Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" at the Sydney Town Hall on Saturday, June 15. The film has been most extensively advertised during the past month, and present indications point to the film being a record-breaker.

The Federal Censor Board has been working overtime lately, and several features have suffered considerably thereby. "Panthea," "The Price Mark," and "Scandal" fared very badly, the last named subject especially so.

At present all films are reviewed in Melbourne, which causes much inconvenience to Sydney importers. The officials are now arranging for two of their members to be stationed in this city, and censor all local screenings before presentation.

Cecil B. DeMille's "Joan the Woman" is the current attraction at the Sydney Tivoli Theater special matinees. The Tivoli is ordinarily a "legit" house, but recently innovated photoplay entertainments each afternoon, under the direction of Alec Lorimore, chief of Paramount Pictures.

With the object of raising money for the Red Cross Society, society circles in Sydney and Melbourne have each produced a film proceeds from which will go to the fund. The Sydney production is entitled "Cupid Camouflaged," is in four reels, and features local society in all its glory. The initial screening of the picture was given at the Sydney Theatre Royal at prices of 21/-, 10/6, and 5/- (equivalent to your $5, $2.50, and $1.25) and the fact that a crowded house was obtained at these prices made the picture trade sit up with surprise. The Melbourne production, "His Only Chance," was conducted in much the same way, and a similar success has been registered by the southern film.

From a critical point of view both subjects are woefully lacking in the essentials of an ordinarily good picture, and the fact that they are advertised as "amateur" films does not balance these defects. Plot, acting, photography and direction are mediocre in both pictures.

The Southern Cross Film Corporation situated in Adelaide, S. A., have completed a five-reeler entitled "The Woman Suffers." It is a melodrama of more than usual interest, the story being at all times consistent and true to life. The direction shows skill, and in all respects the picture is an improvement on the usual local article. Boyd Irwin and Lottie Lyell are the leading players.

"The Waybacks," a seven part version of the Australian novel by Henry B. Fletcher, was released this month, and has instantaneously scored a great success. The film received a great send-off at the Sydney Town Hall, where it was screened for one night only. The main entrance presented the spectacle of a riot. The ticket sellers were unable to cope with the crowd, which became jammed in the passage, and the only way people who had reserved their seats could get through was by organizing a succession of rushes, which, though it drove the ushers frantic, brought spasms of relief.

Sarah Allgood, the popular little Irish actress, who has just completed a successful theatrical tour through Australia and New Zealand, is the star of a Quality Feature, to be entitled "Just Peggy." This subject is listed for early release, and will be followed by similar high class subjects from the studio of this new concern. J. A. Lipman wrote and produced "Just Peggy."

Majestic Puts Over a Paralta Play

Portland Theatre Combines with Local Newspaper in Arousing Interest in Bessie Barriscale's "Madam Who."

PARALTA PLAYS, distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, went off with a bang in Portland, Oregon, where the Bessie Barriscale feature, "Madam Who," was given unusual advertising.

Through arrangement with the Majestic Theatre, running Paralta-Hodkinson Service, the Evening Telegram conducted an advertising campaign. It was the week of the W. S. S. drive and also the week the Majestic Theatre was showing J. Warren Kerrigan in "A Man's Man." The Majestic management put up a prize of $50 in W. S. S. for the one who could identify a Madam Who scheduled to appear at certain business houses during the day for five days.

The stores in which she appeared were those who took space in a full page of the Evening Telegram, making a page advertisement for "Madam Who," the Paralta Hodkinson Picture. Each day the Telegram carried a live and interesting story on Madam Who's experiences that day. Her disguises were many and clever. She was often approached and spoken to, but, as a certain phrase had to be correctly spoken, she remained uncaught until Friday noon, when Miss Mary Wing, of Portland, spoke the salutation correctly to the elusive Madam Who.

Madam Who having been caught before the time of the hunt was up, the Majestic Theatre management put up another $50 in W. S. S. and another Madam Who was sent out. This advertising and publicity stunt resulted in a record business at the Majestic for both "A Man's Man" and "Madam Who."

Are Women the Better Script Writers?

Clara Beranger Perhaps Starts an Argument When in Some Detail She Tells Why She Thinks So.

CLARA S. BERANGER, the noted scenario and continuity writer now with World Pictures and formerly with Pathe and other well known producers, who has just completed the continuity for "Heart of Gold," a new World Picture, says that women are going to come into the writing end of the picture industry in greater numbers than ever before. "The motion picture as an entertainment," declares Miss Beranger, "appeals more to women than to men. This fact is bound to be admitted if the exhibitors' statistics are to be given the credence they deserve. To appeal to the female patrons the photoplay must display the feminine point of view and no one is better able to project this angle than women writers.

"It needs no cursory glance at the current releases and those of even six months ago to prove that there are more writers among the feminine sex than the male persuasion.

"The heart throb, the human interest note, child life, domestic scenes and even the eternal triangle is more ably handled by women than men because of the thorough understanding our sex has of these matters. It is an old truism that love to a woman is her whole existence, while to the man it is a mere incident in his life. This is one of the reasons why a woman writing drama for the screen gives to her story the sincerity that no man can lend. With this sincerity the audience gets plausibility and probability. Men writers in developing their story have to create artificial emotions which they delude themselves into believing is inspiration."

ROOT STRONG FOR WINNING THE WAR.

At "Jack" Root's Strand Theatre, Pasadena, California, $226.05 was raised in a free will collection for "Our Boys in France Tobacco Fund" in two days. One of the features was Billie Rhodes in "Our Lady Nicotine" during the two days. Manager Root expended $25 in the advertising and young women of Pasadena stood at the door with subscription lists and took the cash. The same way at the same theatre on another occasion $205 was raised for the Belgian children, and thousands of dollars at various benefits given by Manager Root for various war needs. Mr. Root was born in Australia, but came to America when a child and says none too gently he detests his native country. Manager Root thinks he has more Liberty Bonds than are possessed by any other Southern California theatre manager.

Out in the Byways of Picturedom

How the Motion Picture Houses in the Country Towns are Supplying Entertainment the Summer Season

IF you look at the map you will see that an automobile trip of 350 miles from Ossining to Albany, N. Y., east as far as Connecticut and the Berkshires, and west along the Hudson River from Albany to Newburgh, brings you in contact with about fifty towns of 800 to 2,000 inhabitants. About 25 per cent. of them maintain motion picture theatres, which are open two or three days a week and most of them have surprisingly good programs and well managed houses. The seating capacities range from 125 to 300, with prices of admission from 20 to 35 cents, and occasionally 50 cents, according to the character of the attractions. The average attendance each day is from capacity to capacity and a half. From this we can tell just about how much the manager realizes above his overhead. Rental prices paid for features range from $15 to $30 a day and sometimes $75, when run for two days in succession. Of course, rentals depend upon the drawing and advertising value of the picture.

It must not be assumed that these small towns are satisfied with any kind of "junk." They want standard productions at the graduated and equitable system of distribution in vogue by all well regulated exchanges. They draw their patronage from adjacent smaller communities and the surrounding farming districts.

The shows run all summer and we heard only a few complaints which we shall mention later. The managers were apparently not aware of a convention in Boston nor seriously disturbed by war taxation or pending legislation. They were just paying attention to business and meeting conditions as best they could.

At Katonah we were disappointed to find the manager of the Katonah theatre, G. H. Packard, employed during the day by a large concern in New York City, his wife being in charge of the afternoon performances. This theatre represented an investment of seven or eight thousand dollars in a town of about 1,000 inhabitants. The seating capacity was 200.

Murphy Goes Out and Hires the Town Hall.

At Pleasantville, another small town of less than 2,000, we met our genial friend, George R. Murphy, manager of the Bedford, the only theatre in the place. He told us he was going to quit, because the landlord had raised his rent to a prohibitive figure and he understood Mr. Landlord was going to run the place himself. He has informed us since that the townspeople had requested him to fit up the town hall, pledging him their support and patronage. He has consented to do so in acknowledgment of the compliment paid to him and motion pictures.

At Saugerties we met Syd Hoffman, whom we knew when he was in the film business at 729 Seventh avenue, New York. He is manager of the motion picture theatre, seating 350, and the opera house. The latter he uses for stock company performances and special attractions. In addition to his theatres he is just at present running a stone quarry. We drove out to the quarry and found him in overalls, blasting rock. He very obligingly drove back to town to show us around.

We stopped to see J. McNulty at Carmel, who has the King theatre. He was busily engaged at his garage, but not too busy to give us the glad hand, tell us he was a reader of the World and talk over the film industry in general. He is doing a good business.

We did hope to see A. Lawrence Chase at Pawling, but he was out of town and his theatre was not running on the day of our visit. We also missed Bill O'Neill at Brewster and Mr. Bernstein at Mount Kisco.

Jeremiah Brooks at Athens runs the Playhouse, seating 300, opening only twice a week. It is purely local and does not warrant more extended showings.

The Empire at Philmont seats 428, and altogether is a very attractive little place, although the town was not designated on our map. Clarence Hoctor is the manager of the Empire and a right clever chap he is, too.

Sells the Right Dope in Two Places.

Valatie is a manufacturing town and supports the Valatie theatre, seating 428. It has an attractive front and a comfortable, well appointed interior. H. C. McNamara is the manager, and runs the village drug store. He is one of the most alert managers we have ever met and our cordial reception made our hour's visit all too short.

One of the most thriving little towns visited was Millerton. It is a farming centre and draws from the surrounding territory. Frederick Adams, who is in the garage and automobile business here, runs the theatre and runs it right. He has the confidence and support of the citizens, who appreciate his efforts to keep them entertained and enlightened through the screen.

At Redhook, George Auger manages the Lyceum. This is run under the auspices of the village band, of which Mr. Auger is a member and the secretary. He is engaged regularly with a large manufacturing concern and manages the two or three showings each week at the Lyceum, which seats about 350.

Among some of the larger places we stopped at was Catskill, where C. R. Lansing presides over the destiny of the Irving, 480 seats. This is a regular theatre, running three days. We found Mr. Lansing a wideawake business man who is doing a business commensurate with his possibilities, and no complaint about patronage.

At Hudson we called at The Playhouse to see A. G. Elliott, the manager. You all know about the Playhouse. It is one of the most talked of and best managed houses this side of Albany.

We stopped at Kingston for dinner and afterward visited a little while with G. C. Gildersleeve, manager of the Opera House, seating 1,000, showing twice daily to excellent attendance. Kingston is some happy town, full of life.

Todd Has a Most Up-to-Date House.

In passing we put up for the night at Poughkeepsie, where we called on Brother Todd, who keeps his managerial eye on the Stradford, one of the most perfect and modern show houses in this country or any other, for that matter. It seats 1,400 and we understand is capitalized and patronized by members of the faculty of Vassar College and the elite of Poughkeepsie. Mr. Todd is the right man in the right place.

We did not forget to call on the affable G. Cohen, manager of the Dutchess and a couple of smaller houses in Poughkeepsie. Judging from the attendance we saw at the evening performance, he has every reason to be happy.

As we are more or less interested in the welfare of the Moving Picture World, we were gratified to find that 75 per cent. of the managers we met subscribed for this publication.

Carnivals are a great counter-attraction to motion picture theatres in these small towns. They usually remain in town a week, and during their stay almost deplete the town of small change and monopolize public attention.

From all of the smaller towns, as well as the larger, the army and navy have taken their quota of recruits, which in addition to a falling off of summer visitors makes an appreciable difference in patronage.

Fox Installs $12,000 Organ in Liberty

Renovated St. Louis Theatre, Seating 2,000, to Open September 29, With Theda Bara in "Salome."

A NEW $12,000 pipe organ, one of the finest theatre instruments in the country, is being installed in the new William Fox Liberty Theatre in St. Louis, which will open late in September.

John Zanft, managing director of the Fox Circuit of theatres, who is in charge of all arrangements for the new house, declares the installation is only one of numerous improvements being made in the house. The interior has been completely renovated and the lobby is being redecorated and made larger. Mr. Zanft aims to make the Liberty the most palatial motion picture home in the Middle West.

The Liberty Theatre is located at Delmar and Grand avenues, in the heart of the theatre section of St. Louis. The house has 2,000 seats. In addition to the organ there will be an orchestra of thirty-five pieces. It is Mr. Fox's intention to maintain a high-class picture policy, with Fox productions being given an exclusive first run.

The first production to be shown in the Liberty will be "Salome," Theda Bara's drama of the siren who cost the life of John the Baptist. The theatre will open for the public Sunday, September 29. Salome" will be shown for an indefinite run.

Thomas D. Soriero's New Departure

Boston Manager Institutes a Profit-Sharing Week for Employes and Shows a Profit in the Dull Season.

By Epes W. Sargent.

BUSINESS DULL? Try a profit-sharing week. Thomas D. Soriero, of the Park, Boston, and a string of houses through New England, finds that it turns a dull week into a paying one and showed to one-third more business than is recorded for any similar week in the history of the house.

Mr. Soriero says he is not a socialist, but that he recognizes as good the chief tenet of true socialism which runs to the effect that the producer of wealth is entitled to an adequate share of the profits. It is management that makes money, but the success with which the managerial schemes are executed is dependent upon the entire force and, recognizing this, he recently declared a profit-sharing week at the Park that not only brought him justification of his theories, but good business and marked publicity, as well. More than that, he has further cemented the staff into a united force for advancement. From every angle profit-sharing week was a success, both at the Strand, Lowell, and at the Boston house.

It was announced that a portion of the gross for a certain week would be paid to the employes, and the announcement was made well in advance. At once interest was manifested on the part of the patrons and the friends of the employes. Checks came in for blocks of tickets and even the holders of season passes kept them in their pockets and bought tickets for that week. When a chronic dead head will pay out real money with a pass in his pocket, the golden days are well nigh here. More than this, many persons came to the special week merely to give their approval to the idea. They were not regular patrons of the house, but they were believers in practical socialism, and so they even went out of their way to attend the Park instead of the house they usually patronized, and it is becoming evident that some of them have become converted to the Park: For there is an improvement in the average business that followed a box office showing one-third better than for the similar week in any other year of the history of the house.

To give it a patriotic angle, the profits due the employes were paid in War Savings Stamps, and not only did the Government benefit in this respect, but the increased business means higher payments on the admission tax for that period.

It was not intended as an experiment in socialism. It was done with a sincere desire to show the employes that their loyal support was appreciated, but the socialists of the better sort took the idea up and made a point of attending the theatre. Mr. Soriero has decided to make the profit-sharing idea a permanent part of his policy, and the returns from the first experiment were sufficient to aid materially in holding intact the efficient staff.

Making of "Hell Cat" a Difficult Task

Many Problems Encountered and Surmounted in Filming Farrar Production in Wooly Wyoming.

THE task of producing a Goldwyn Picture twenty-five hundred miles from the studio at Fort Lee, even though the star and company are in the locale demanded by the author, is an undertaking replete with difficulties and unlooked-for expense.

When Geraldine Farrar arrived in Cody, Wyoming, to appear in "The Hell Cat," by Willard Mack, not even her keen eyes realized the amount of work involved in setting the stage for the first scenes of the drama. But soon she saw what had been accomplished.

Two ranches had been rented, one five miles from the town and the other ten times as far, with two auto buses, a motor truck and a touring car to convey the company and properties to and from the scene of work.

Hotel accommodations were awaiting the arrival of the company of twenty, including the technical staff brought from Fort Lee, and at one of the ranches 20 horses and 250 sheep were quartered at the expense of Goldwyn, not to mention a score of chickens, feed for which had to be purchased and transported to the ranch. Luncheon for the company, reinforced by 20 cowboys, is prepared in Cody and sent to the nearer ranch. At the other place, food for the players is carried over the mountains and cooked in the regular chow wagon.

The matter of building sets is not by any means eliminated because the scenes of "The Hell Cat" are largely exteriors. Ten carpenters were sent from town to construct the interior of the ranch house, which is later to be burned down, and for this purpose $500 worth of lumber was carted over the rocky road from Cody. This is but one of the problems connected with producing a play which would have been accomplished with hardly a thought at the Fort Lee studio.

Shipping the film daily is another consideration. As soon as Percy Hilburn, the chief cameraman, returns from location, it is boxed and taken to Billings, a distance of 125 miles, in order to catch the early morning train to New York. But with all this unusual work, everyone associated in making Geraldine Farrar's second Goldwyn production is happy, and the prima donna herself, up at sunrise and with her evenings occupied in receiving scores of visitors eager to see her, finishes her day with almost as much vim as she begins it.

Johnson Has Studied Children's Ways

World Pictures Director Says Little Folks Pick up Direction Quicker Than Their Elders.

TEFFT JOHNSON, who recently signed contract to direct Madge Evans in "Snug Harbor" for World Pictures, has long made a special study of directing children in pictures, until to-day he is regarded as among the ablest men in the industry doing this particular line of work.

"The directing of children in pictures," says Mr. Johnson, "is a field of endeavor as distinct from the regular work of producing as possibly can be. With children the director is compelled to carry every bit of business in his mind as he goes along. Children will play a scene and ten minutes after you ask them what they did in a particular situation they will tell you they do not remember. With the adult actor it is different. Children will pick up direction quicker than their elders and are more receptive to the instructions of the director than even experienced actors. Children are not so apt to be self-conscious, and that is why on the screen they give us an ingeniousness that even the best of stars cannot duplicate.

"There is no reason why a picture with a child as the central figure cannot be as appealing to mature audiences as any photoplay featuring the big names of the motion picture field. Booth Tarkington has made his biggest successes with his 'Penrod' and other 'kid' stories and his readers number a legion among the old-young people of this country. Tom Sawyer is a juvenile book, but it is just as interesting to granddad as it is to his little grandson."

HODKINSON SIGNS UP NEW COPARTNERS.

G. W. Curtiss, of Kansas City, has just become a Hodkinson co-partner. Mr. Curtiss is owner of the new Doric Theatre, one of the best in that section of the country.

John A. Stevenson, Hodkinson division manager for the south, recently completed a most successful trip throughout the southwest, at which time he tied in twenty exhibitors in Texas. They are Dye, Ford and Rogers of Amarilla; Dorbandt Brothers, of Athens; J. J. Hegman of Austin and Temple; I. G. Keeler of Brownsville; W. R. Fairman of Bryan; Mays and Fitzpatrick of Cleburne; B. C. Howell of Coleman; W. L. Hamilton of Delhart; W. Campbell of Denison; Sam Schwartz of Eagle Pass; Simon Turk and T. M. Hervey of El Paso; Puers and Bolton of Jacksonville; D. F. Prall of Longview; Fred A. Alexander of Marshall; J. N. O. C. Fanning of Mineral Wells; J. H. Brauttery of Nacogdoches; B. C. Bell of Palestine; Lytle, Apostolin and Mikolem of San Antonio; A. J. Cooper of Seymour; Jim B. Wilson of Sherman; N. Lewis of Tyler; R. C. More of Vernon; J. A. Courtney of Wetherford, and W. J. Johnson of Wichita Falls.

SACHS TO HEAD GARFIELD COMMITTEE.

Thomas Watt Gregory, Attorney General of the United States, who is to be one of the principal speakers at the unveiling of the monument to former President James A. Garfield, at Long Branch on Sept. 2, will be received on his arrival at that City by a committee headed by Moses A. Sachs, the well known lawyer who is prominently connected with the motion picture industry of New York. Mr. Sachs was notified of his appointment by Mayor Flock of Long Branch on August 5. A meeting of the committee, which includes some of the prominent figures in picturedom, is to be held at Mr. Sachs' office at 261 Broadway on Thursday, August 15, for the making of final arrangements.

Exhibitors Co-operate on Exploitation

At Showing of Farrar Production in Cleveland Twenty Showmen Exchange Ideas on Subject's Advertising.

EXHIBITORS in all sections of the United States are this week seeing Goldwyn's first star series releases for the coming season—Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn Of the Wheel," Mabel Normand in "Peck's Bad Girl," Tom Moore in "Just For Tonight," or all three productions.

Shipments of prints have been made by Goldwyn to all of its offices to enable exhibitors to have pre-views of the three pictures with which the company launches its second big year, increasing its output from twenty-six to fifty pictures.

Coincident with the shipment of these productions the Goldwyn Cleveland office, through its manager, H. A. Bandy, and his service department aid, W. J. Brandt, held the most novel meetings ever devised in the industry.

Every Goldwyn customer in the Cleveland territory as well as all other interested exhibitors attended an exclusive showing of Miss Farrar's first production not merely as spectators but as theatre specialists co-operating with each other for the purpose of agreeing upon an advertising campaign in their respective Ohio cities.

Among those attending this showing were George J. Schade of the Schade theatre, Sandusky; C. W. Deibel, general-manager of the new Liberty theatre, Youngstown; H. C. Horater of the Alhambra theatre, and Edward A. Zorn of the Temple theatre, Toledo.

In truth, the meeting was an exploitation conference that had been prearranged for several months—a score of successful showmen having decided that for the first time in picture history they would analyze a picture together and each give the other plans and suggestions for the promotion and exploitation of the production. Therefore, when "The Turn of the Wheel" is advertised in Ohio the advertising campaign will represent the combined ideas of twenty or more men and the methods of lobby display and outdoor local campaign for the various cities will embody the suggestions of experts.

Shipping Film Shows Answer to Kaiser

Two-Reel Official Subject Released by General Portrays What America Is Doing to Beat Submarine.

HOW American workingmen are "making the stars fly 'over here' that the Star Spangled Banner may fly 'over there,'" is graphically told in "Our Bridge of Ships," the United States official war film, released by the Division of Films, Committee on Publication Information, and distributed by the General Film Company.

"Our Bridge of Ships" is a two-reel production. Its purpose is to visualize just what American shipbuilders and American shipyards are doing to meet the sub-sea menace of the Hun. It is a pictorial answer to the Kaiser's declaration that "America cannot build ships as fast as we can sink them." E. N. Hurley, chairman of the Shipping Board, has declared that America will build 1,600 ships, with a 6,000,000 tonnage, within a year. At the present rate at which ships are sliding off the ways this estimate will be exceeded. And, as one of the striking titles of "Our Bridge of Ships" declares, "When the last smoke of this war clears away the entire world will point to the working men of America and say they made victory possible."

It has frequently been declared that "when we can build ships faster than the U-boats can sink them the submarine peril will vanish and America will win the war." "Our Bridge of Ships" shows the marvelous progress that has been made toward this desired end, and it does it in a way that is at once thrilling, entertaining and instructive.

Kitty Gordon Forms Picture Company

Owner of Famous Back Will Make Six Features Each Year from Pen of Wilson Mizner.

TO provide the luxurious charm and the regal grace of Kitty Gordon with worthy pictorial settings will be, to quote the certificate of incorporation, the fundamental purpose of the latest film company to be framed. The output of this company will be known as the New Kitty Gordon Pictures.

With the formation of this company are set at rest all rumors to the effect that the actress is to turn her justly celebrated back upon her screen career and to return to the speaking and singing stage.

There are to be six features annually each from the pen of Wilson Mizner, one of the wittiest and most adroit of Broadway's playwrights. Mr. Mizner is perhaps the best-known survivor of a school of red-blooded, all-American writers who "packed a punch."

The new company is to be Miss Gordon's own, her business affairs being in charge of Sydney L. Cohan. Her leading man is to be Mahlon Hamilton.

The first of the new Kitty Gordon pictures will be finished and ready for release about the middle of October.

Ruppert to Care for Independents

President of Film Clearing House Says Men With Only a Negative May Club Together.

I HAVE been asked," says President Jacob Ruppert of the Film Clearing House, "whether the Clearing House proposes to distribute for exchange systems and program producers solely, or whether independent producers may be served too. The question arises for the reason that exchanges and program producers have sales staffs that can be easily switched into our shipping centers, whereas it is known that the independent producer has no such men, just a negative. How, then, is the Clearing House to take care of the individual with the lone negative?

"A number of such independents are arranging to take care of themselves. Their method, in brief, will be to 'club' together on a staff of special representatives, while we do the physical distributing. These representatives will be men trained in feature selling. They will have at their finger tips full information on what the film industry to-day is pleased to call 'merchandising.' They will be in no way connected with the Clearing House—just with the club of independent producers."

H. Y. ROMAYNE BRINGS FEATURE TO TOWN.

H. Y. Romayne, president of the Romayne Film Company of Los Angeles, has arrived in New York with a print of his company's latest production "Me und Gott" a six reel propaganda feature, for which he is seeking a buyer. The Romayne company is a comparatively new concern, "Me und Gott" being the first picture it has offered to the trade. This subject was directed by Wyndham Gittens, who is in charge of all productions for the company. Mr. Romayne is stopping at the Hotel Astor.

Associated with Mr. Romayne are Edward D. Ulrich, who is business manager; and Thomas A. Baker who is treasurer, and the son of the founder of Bakersfield, Cal. Phil White, formerly with Kleine, Triangle and Universal, is the head cutter.

The Romayne company has selected as a trade name the word "Bearcat" and its ambition is to make only bearcat pictures.

ALLAN ADAMS NOW A VET.

General Film Company, which is represented in the American forces at home and abroad on active duty by dozens of former employes, was apprised this week of its first contribution to the casualty list in a greeting to Auditor W. M. Gulick. The message breathes the buoyant spirit of the American soldier throughout.

Written on a Y. M. C. A. postcard, it ran as follows:

"Still plugging away at the Boche, trying to bring the war to a close. Am at present in the hospital recovering from a slight wound. Regards to the girls and boys. ADAMS."

Mr. Adams was the first General Film man to enter the national army and represents the company's first service star. He has been abroad several months.

"ONCE TO EVERY MAN" ALMOST COMPLETED.

What is promised to be one of the best pictures turned out by the Frohman Amusement Corporation is now on the last stages of completion under the title "Once to Every Man," by Larry Evans. The picture stars Jack Sherrill and Mabel Witheel. Mabel Witheel is the famous seventeen-year-old beauty starring all season at the Winter Garden with Al Jolson in "Sinbad."

RECEIVER FOR AMERICAN FILM LABORATORIES, INC.

Justice Donnelly of the Supreme Court has appointed James A. Lynch receiver of the assets and effects of the American Film Laboratories, Inc., pending a suit brought by John F. Blanchard, as trustee, against the concern to foreclose a deed of trust dated February 2, 1915, to secure the payment of $50,000, covering the leasehold property at 69 West 90th street, machinery, etc. There is due on the bonds interest amounting to $8,330. The receiver is required to give a bond of $3,000.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

During Long Winter Evenings Try This On Your Neighbors.

FOR a company of people who are enthusiastic patrons of the movies, and nearly everyone is these days, a game founded on the real and professional names of some of the best known stars of filmdom is most amusing. This is how it goes:

Provide each player with a pencil and sheet of paper and ask him to write the real name of a given number of well known actors and actresses. At least a third of the answers will be wrong and two-thirds of the remainder will elicit the reply: "Have never heard." The number of favorites who write Mrs. before their names will be another source of surprise to the players when the corrected lists is given.

The hostess, of course, reads only the stage names, asking that they be written under each other as words for spelling were written in school days. The guests are given a half hour in which to place opposite each the real name. A correct list will read as follows:

Mary Pickford.....Mrs. Owen Moore
Fanny Ward.....Mrs. Jack Dean
Lulu Glaser.....Mrs. Thomas Richards
Geraldine Farrar.....Mrs. Lou-Tellegan
Annette Kellermann....Mrs. J. R. Sullivan
Julia Sanderson.....Mrs. B. Barnette
Billie Burke.....Mrs. Florenz Ziegfeld
Jane Cowl.....Mrs. Adolph Klauber
Viola Allen.....Mrs Peter Duryea
Elsie Ferguson.....Mrs. Thomas Clark
Alice Joyce.....Mrs Tom Moore
Nance O'Neil.....Mrs Alfred Hickman
Marie Dressler.....Mrs James Dalton
Blanche Bates.....Mrs. George Creel

And here is another way of making up an answer list:

I like to watch the graceful form
Of Mrs. J. R. Sullivan.
But lest I wake a thundred storm,
I speak of Annette Kellerman.

I'm quite devoted to Jane Cowl,
I call her that with pleasure rife,
Although I know (nay, do not scowl)
That she is Adolph Klauber's wife.

When Mary Pickford I would praise
I do not speak of Mrs. Moore.
Miss Fagan's Ina Claire on days
She, pictured, doth my heart allure.

And even Fanny Ward is not,
Except when smiling on the screen
When Life's the play and Love's the plot,
She's chaming Mrs. Jack R. Dean.

Concerning "The Terrible Face."

After carefully scrutinizing the frontispieces of the various space hounds who were given a trade showing in a recent issue of the M. P. W., I do not think it is just an' fair to Justin Fair to hand him deferred physiognomic classification.

Moreover, he could not hope to be more than atmosphere when appearing in the same picture with Catherine Calvert. In fact our most beautiful he-vampires (including Walrus and Ambrose) would be eased into a pulchritudinous Class 5 under similar circumstances.

It is understood that chorus girls derive their names from a study of the Pullman car situation.

We might judge from "Katy," "Soo," "Bee," and similars that they get them from box cars.

The Progress of Hyam Pilljim On Far-Flung Battle Lines.

Paentins,
June 28/18

Dear Walt,

Lots many invitations to eat the dope, I'm getting every "Some dope, Too"

No, I'm not American — yet.

I want to be a "Press Agent, Walt. I haven't a typewriter with me, or I'd use it. I haven't the faintest idea what a mimeograph is, perhaps that doesn't matter? But I have a Message. I want to tell the great Public some undeniable, straight-from-the-bottom-of-the-well Truth about Myself.

When I grow up — I mean when the war is over — I'm going into The Movies.

No, I'm not going to be a Star. Nor a Director. Nor an Exchangeman. Nor an Exhibitor.

I'm The Man who is going to give the great Public What It Wants

I'm going to write Stories, Scenarios or sometimes I'm going to answer The Question: "What's wrong with the Pictures?" I'm going to Deliver The Goods

That's What I'm going to do, Walt.

No, I'm not making it quite.

Shall I let you know decisively how I'm getting on? I haven't got Kreisler — Sofer. But I think the U.E. — the Dear Public will be glad to hear about Pilljim's Progress. don't you?

The Tale of Several Shirts.

MR. AND MRS. HARRY McRAE WEBSTER trotted off to the country early in July for a period of recreation. In a spirit of good fellowship Mrs. Webster suggested to Katherine Perry, a roof garden actress, that Miss Perry and her mother enjoy themselves in the Webster flat while the Harry McRaes were vacationing.

"Use the apartment and its contents as your own," were the last words Mrs. Webster uttered to Miss Perry as the door slammed on the McRaewebsters. Here's the rest of the story (with Webster on one end of the telephone conversation some days later and Miss Perry indulging in the Q and A pastime of explaining):

"Did you see any shirts for gents in my apartment after I left?"

"Oh! yes, thank you—about nineteen I think, and they made such pretty little dresses."

"What's that—explanationing please."

"Why I used them all to make clothes for the poor Belgian babies."

"You did—who the———"

"Your wife—"

"What's the idea?"

"She said I was to use anything and everything in the apartment as if it were my own, and I took her word for it."

"You took my shirts for it," yelled Mr. Webster.

And this ended the lesson.

E. K. Bolts When Lightning Bolt Bolts Both His Barn and Grain.

E. K. LINCOLN, who is co-starred with Dolores Cassinelli in "Lafayette, We Come!" had a hurry call from New York to Blandford, Mass., where his country estate is located. A bolt of lightning during a thunder storm struck the large barn connected with his Hill House property, burning it to the ground and causing a damage conservatively estimated at $10,000.

This barn had just been filled with part of this year's crop of hay, rye, and oats. Mr. Lincoln left immediately for Blandford, and said that a fireproof barn would be built at once.

First Class in Beauty: Stand Up!

Metro's publicist declares that it became necessary, in photographing May Allison's "The Return of Mary," to shoot a scene on the campus of Hollywood high school. George D. Baker is supposed to have done the asking.

The production manager was informed that Metro could obtain the board's sanction to take pictures on the grounds of the school, which is exclusively for girls, on one condition—namely, that a representative of the Los Angeles board, which has supervision over the Hollywood institution, first have a look at the young ladies.

The school board representative motored out to the studios, was presented to Miss Allison and then shown the girls who were to work in the scenes with her.

"Permission granted," he said, after the first glimpse. "I never saw a more splendid lot of refined and good-looking girls. Go right ahead with your picture. And, by the way," he added, "you don't happen to need a handsome board official for atmosphere, do you?"

Parked Her Lizard in Bread.

Virginia Chester, blonde and come-hitherish of eye, is playing in "Bread," a Universal photodrama starring Mary MacLaren. When she was eager to join the Universal forces she confided her ambition to Ida May Park, directing Mary MacLaren. Miss Park told her to make her small part distinctive and await results.

After an hour of deep and painful thought Miss Chester decided that she woud flabbergast the company by teaching her pet chameleon to crawl on her milk white shoulders.

All worked well until the little reptile started to change his color. At first he flushed red, probably with embarrassment, then green with envy, and later blue when he was picked off and tethered in a hatbox.

In the next picture Virginia will probably have a larger part with a less temperamental lizard.

The Fate of Feet in a Fete.

On the beautiful lawns of the Letts estate in Hollywood a garden party was in progress. Will S. Davis, Metro director, was rehearsing a scene in "Judgment." An "extra" dashed up the gravel walk, breathless, and ten minutes late. He almost fell into the arms of Bert Dorris, the assistant director.

"I would have been here sooner," he gasped, "but I had to hunt all over town for these."

He pointed down, and it was Dorris' turn to gasp.

"Your bit in this scene is that of a young society idler in white flannels," said Dorris, "and here you show up with a Charlie Chaplin rig on. What are you wearing those things for"?

Dorris pointed the finger of scorn at the tremendous brogans on the "extra."

"Why I thought you said 'long feet'," the super explained, "and these shoes are the longest I could get."

Then light dawned on Dorris.

"I said 'lawn fete'—not long feet."

Thanhouser Three-a-Week was presenting Maude Fealy in "Little Dorrit."

"King Robert of Sicily" was coming along from Essanay in two parts.

"Ivanhoe" had just been completed in Merrie England by Universal, with King Baggot in the title role. Leah Baird was Rebecca and Evelyn Hope played Rowena. Who directed? Herbert Brenon.

"The Smuggler's Child" was guaranteed to be "a dainty, spectacular, and dramatic production" by Solax. Does anyone remember? Was it all that?

"At the Foot of the Scaffold" was the light and frothy outgiving of the American Kineto Corporation. Just who was finally hanged is not disclosed.

Selig's Summer Time Selections were "wholesome, seasonable and sensational," as per announcement. "The Stolen Moccasins" and "A Mansion of Misery" were listed as "w, s and s." Even then Thrift Stamps looked promising.

"The Skeleton in the Closet" was Kalem's contribution to art. We hereby give it a rattle.

"The Gangster's Sacrifice," "The Burning Rivet," "The Fatal Scar"—some of Lubin's titles. Perhaps there may be here just an inkling of why Lubin is no longer flashing across the signs on Monday and Tuesday evening these days.

Sam Spedon was writing advertisements for Vitagraph at that time. Sam believed in getting all the type he could for his boss' money, Sam did.

Ethel Grandin, pretty as a picture, was playing leads in Universal's Gem company.

Wilfrid North, Vitagraph director, was declared to be some "swatter" in the golf line.

Yes! The censorship thing was bowling along. Carl Laemmle, W. C. Toomey, of Mutual, and Frank L. Dyer, of General Film, held a meeting—but that was five years ago.

M. L. C. Funkhauser, the then and still well known censor of Chicago, announced that "a space in city hall is being prepared where films may be shown." Funkhauser "got his" last week. The infant industry is progressing.

Francis X. Bushman was located at Ithaca, N. Y., making photodramas for Essanay. To this very day Bushman still gets his name in the papers.

Norma Phillips was listed "among the newly acquired Reliance players." The New York Sun still remembers her; lately stated that she appeared in "The Mortaged Wife" at the Broadway theatre. Betcha Dorothy didn't like it.

Helen Gardner in "Cleopatra" is stated, in all seriousness, to have played to $1,400 "in four days at the King theatre and Shenandoah theatre, St. Louis." There's a mark for Theda Bara to shoot at.

"At the Sign of the Flaming Arcs" was about the most interesting department The World was carrying. In these notes George Blaisdell told how Earl J. Hudson, of Standard Films, was home in Elgin, Ill., getting his watch fixed. Mary Pickford had just finished "Caprice" and was starting "In the Bishop's Carriage" (she was referred to as "Little Mary" then), while Mrs. Fiske had completed five reels of "Tess of the D'Urbervilles," all of which applied to Famous Players. Then, too, there was William Robert Daly leaving Imp comedies to succeed James Kirkwood with Victor—Kirkwood going back to Biograph.

A. Warner, president of Warner's Feature Film Company, contributed a "Defense of Three-Reel Pictures." It seemed to be looking bad for multiple-reel productions at about that time.

At the Sign of the Good Showman.

PINCH hitting in a regular game means that someone of previous importance is about to scoot to the shower bath. Pinch hitting for film reviewers means that the P. H. is about to undergo something closely approaching the Turkish variety.

Not, however, in all cases. Take, for instance, Vitagraph. Not alone do they provide electric fans in a spacious room with commodious chairs, but add, for good measure, a piano player to accompany the feature on its progress across the screen.

This we style good showmanship. If a reviewer is worth having around and film reviews mean anything in the young lives of distributors, wabbly chairs minus backs, in scant profusion, chucked into stuffy rooms seem to prove otherwise in some few instances.

Fox Reports Phenomenal Business for "Cleopatra"

THE phenomenal business being done all over the country by the William Fox production, "Cleopatra," which went on a rental basis August 1, has developed the interesting fact that 5,200,000 persons have already paid to see this great drama of the siren of the Nile.

That this figure is only temporary is shown by the bookings which are coming in for "Cleopatra." A striking fact in connection with these bookings is that many of them are repeat dates, and this despite the fact that the production, at its original showing, played at special prices.

Kunsky's Washington Theatre in Detroit, for instance, has just rebooked "Cleopatra" for a week, and early reports stated that despite the terrific heat the house is being packed at both daily performances. "Cleopatra" played the Washington Theatre on a percentage basis for five weeks in the spring at $1 top prices.

"Cleopatra" opened in Pittsburgh for its run in the Olympic Theatre at popular prices, and although the thermometer registered 100 degrees in the shade there was no diminution in the crowds that sought admission.

The extended run of the play at the Victoria in Philadelphia set a new high mark for attendance in that city, and the run of the play at the Colonial Theatre, Chicago, will long remain a standard. An interesting situation developed in regard to the showing in Chicago. After the Colonial had given the play a record-breaking run at $1 top prices Miller's Rose Theatre in Madison street booked it for two weeks. At the end of that time it became increasingly evident that if the management wanted to satisfy the crowds that sought to see the picture it would have to book another week. The print being used by the Rose had been engaged for the next week by another Chicago theatre. The Rose sent out a hurry call for another print, but it was found that all the fifteen prints in the Chicago territory were in use right in the City of Chicago for that week. Accordingly a fresh print was rushed on to Chicago from the Fox home office in New York, the special messenger arriving just in time for the first performance Monday.

Extended runs of "Cleopatra" were also made in Boston, where it played three weeks; Portland, Ore., where it filled the house twice daily for two weeks, and in Milwaukee, where its engagements were repeats, "Cleopatra" having played in each of the cities on previous occasions.

Other cities that have booked this record-breaking production for repeat engagements are Cincinnati, Fort Worth, Trenton, East Liberty, Pa.; Columbus, Denver, Camden, Fort Wayne, Cleveland, where it has booked nineteen days' re-engagement; Reading, Pa., and Battle Creek, Mich.

Outing Pictures Show Old Naval Base.

With the world at war, gigantic fortifications in place at every conceivable point of military advantage, there exists a valuable harbor of demonstrated naval importance, equipped with dry docks and docks unprotected save by two pieces of artillery, and nobody to shoot them—undisturbed by modern militarism, and unconcerned over the world's turmoil.

It is St. Eustatius, a tiny island in the West Indies, once the most flourishing port of the western hemisphere, the naval base of the British high seas fleet in the war of 1812. It was from there that Admiral Rodney operated his ships, and it was there that he repaired them.

All that remains is the ruins of the great docks and warehouses, the ruins of the dry docks, the royal governor's mansion, and the two guns—the "Big Berthas" of their day—the guns which fired the first salute to the American flag under Holland's recognition of American independence.

These things are all pictured in "Statia With a Past," Outing-Chester adventure picture No. 8, which is released by Mutual, August 18. The interesting island is treated with the same originality and cleverness which has marked the Outing pictures and made them stand out as one-reel features.

Museum of Art Compliments Pathe's "Hands Up" Poster

THE Pathe twenty four sheet poster advertising the new serial, "Hands Up," which is now posted in every city of any size in the country, has received distinguished mention from one of the most exacting art judges in the world, the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York City. Under date of July 31 Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., received a letter from the museum requesting that it be sent one of these twenty-four sheets to place on file in its library of commercial art. In this library, it states, it files only the best posters. As the ones, threes and sixes are of the same high class as the twenty-four, exhibitors are thus assured that the paper they are receiving on "Hands Up" is of a character that will materially aid them in securing notable business.

With the release date still some time off, August 18, the various Pathe exchanges have reported many excellent bookings. As a matter of fact, "Hands Up" starts with a better showing in the matter of business booked than any serial Pathe has ever put out. Pantages has booked it for every one of his houses, canceling a competing serial to do so.

Bluebird to Issue Again Keenan's "The Long Chance"

BLUEBIRD has rescued from the oblivion which perforce overtakes all things cinema another excellent photoplay. The late Broadway Specials contained a number of good examples of the moving picture art. Among them was Frank Keenan in "The Long Chance," a thrilling six-reel picture of the West in its most unvarnished condition. It was released three years ago, and had far more than the natural life of a photoplay. Now Bluebird has decided to reissue it on its regular program, cutting it down to five reels and snapping it up with modern titles and the style which accompanies all Bluebird photoplays.

The reissue of "The Long Chance" is not nearly so difficult as that of many photoplays, because it was one of the first dramas to be produced along what are known now as modern titles. That is, its story wasn't told in one-two-three sequence. The element of photoplay suspense was interjected in the development. Half of the story wasn't told until the last reel, whereas it was formerly the custom to keep the audience in strict acquaintance with the entire action of the photoplay as it progressed.

In addition to Frank Keenan, who needs no introduction to photoplay fans, and who is still grinding them out for their delectation, the cast assembled was a strong one, including Stella Razetto, Fred Church, Beryl Boughton, Jack Nelson, Jack Nelson, Jack Curtis and Clyde Benson.

E. J. LeSaint made the production, which was written from a continuity contributed by Harvey Gates. In fact it is to Mr. Gates that "The Long Chance" is indebted for its highly modern tecnnique. Keenan is seen in the character of Harley P. Hennage, written by that wonderful portrayer of Western types, Peter B. Kyne.

"A Sun Kissed Isle" (Post Travel).

"A Sun Kissed Isle" is the title of the Post Travel Series No. 11, released by Pathe Exchange, Inc., the week of August 25. This travelogue takes the spectator through Uncle Sam's Island of Porto Rico, showing beautiful scenery, the modes of living of the natives and their industries.

Scene from "Pursuit of Polly" (Paramount).

Billie Burke Plays Driver in "In Pursuit of Polly"

IN "In Pursuit of Polly," her newest Paramount picture, to be released August 19, Billie Burke will be seen for a time as a chauffeur in overalls, who does not disdain to repair her broken-down automobile and who, while engaged in this occupation, is discovered by a millionaire who offers to assist her and later, following a series of the strangest kind of adventures, marries her.

In this picture Miss Burke plays the part of Polly Marsden, a wealthy society girl of New York, who is unable to choose between two men who love her and consequently becomes engaged to both of them at the same time. To extricate herself from this tangle she announces that she will give her hand and heart to the first man who captures her, she to have an hour's start in her automobile.

As the result of this plan many interesting situations develop, all of which are diverting, many of them comical and others highly dramatic. In the course of her adventures Polly comes in contact with Hun spies who are seeking to destroy American munition plants. Mason, the millionaire friend of the roadside, who happens to be a Secret Service agent, comes to the conclusion that Polly is acting in conjunction with these spies as their confederate and he is forced to place her under arrest just as the two suitors reach the scene. It thus develops that, according to the agreement made before the race began, Polly belongs to Mason, as he is the first to have captured her, and he unhesitatingly claims her as his bride.

It is said that there have been few photoplays in which Miss Burke has been seen that have afforded her the support for effective characterization that "In Pursuit of Polly" does. Thomas Meighan is her leading man and others in the cast are Frank Losee, A. J. Herbert, William Davidson, Alfred Hickman and Ben Deely.

Doris Kenyon Breakfasts With Hub's City Officials

DORIS KENYON'S first production, "The Street of Seven Stars," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, produced by her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., had its first showing in New England at the Park theatre in Boston during the week beginning Monday, August 12. Miss Kenyon appeared in person at the theatre Monday afternoon and evening. In honor of the event Manager John D. Soriero arranged to have all of the city officials of Boston meet Miss Kenyon at a breakfast to be given at 10 o'clock on Monday. In addition to the city officials, prominent exhibitors of Boston and New England also were invited.

Following the breakfast Miss Kenyon, accompanied by Theodore C. Deitrich, president of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., and William L. Sherry, president of the William L. Sherry Service, motored to Lowell, where a lunch was given in Miss Kenyon's honor by the exhibitors of that city.

Manager Soriero conducted an extensive advertising campaign in the Boston newspapers on the initial showing of "The Street of Seven Stars" in New England, and has aroused much interest in star and production.

"Prisoners of the Pines" (Hampton).

The first Jesse D. Hampton picture starring J. Warren Kerrigan has been titled "Prisoners of the Pines," so called because it is a story of the workers in the lumber camps of the far north and so far away from civilization as to be literally prisoners of the trees from which they earn their living. Hampton-Kerrigan pictures are distributed by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Affiliated Issues Booklet Giving Detailed Analysis

A SIXTEEN-PAGE booklet under the title of "The Exhibitor Dominant," has just been issued by the Affiliated Distributors' Corporation and is being mailed to the members of the various Affiliated units throughout the country.

The book explains in detail the platform of exhibitor-controlled co-operative booking as worked out by the Affiliated plan, and contains an interesting chart of the benefits derived by both exhibitor and producer from this method of film distribution.

The question of the savings effected by exhibitors through grouping their booking power is treated by specific illustrations. How the funds of exhibitors are at all times kept under their control; how pictures are selected; how quality productions are assured; how the producer is protected, and how waste is eliminated are some of the topics discussed in the booklet.

"Regardless of whether an exhibitor becomes associated with the Affiliated he owes it to himself to weigh carefully the material presented in this book," said Charles C. Pettijohn, general counsel of the Affiliated, in commenting upon the publication of the work.

"So far as I know there has never before been published a treatise which outlines so comprehensively just how far-reaching is the power of the exhibitor. It is not a revolutionary nor radical argument, but a sane, constructive discussion of the part that the exhibitor can and should play in putting his own business and the business of the industry as a whole on a sound, efficient basis, through the medium of co-operation."

Exhibitors not members of the Affiliated units may obtain copies of "The Exhibitor Dominant" through the national director of the Affiliated in their territory or by writing to the Affiliated offices in New York.

"A Law Unto Herself" (Paralta).

Paralta announces the completion of the fourth Louise Glaum play with that company, "A Law Unto Herself." Miss Glaum has the difficult part of portraying three different periods, each ten years apart. The locale of the story is the Champagne district of France, and the time 1894, 1904 and 1914. There is a background of war and preparation for war that furnished the fabric upon which the drama is woven.

Francis Paget supplied the original story and working synopsis. Mr. Paget is a new author in the screen world and the story of "A Law Unto Herself" is the first one he ever submitted. It was accepted immediately in preference to other scenarios which had been considered and Mr. Paget was brought out from his home in Montana to the studio, where is is expected he will write other stories for the star. The screen version was written by Jack Cunningham.

Wallace Worsley produced the play, which will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation.

Ethel Barrymore to Make Maugham's "Lady Frederick"

LADY FREDERICK," the brilliant society comedy by W. Somerset Maugham, has been secured for screen purposes by Metro from Mr. Maugham's American agents. Ethel Barrymore, who introduced the play at the Hudson theatre, New York, a few seasons ago, with such success, will also present it to the American public by way of the screen, and Metro is the gainer.

Following close upon the heels of another great comedy, "Our Mrs. McChesney," which Miss Barrymore has just completed at Metro's Sixty-first street studio, the acquiring of "Lady Frederick" is in line with the firm's program of presenting this star in a screen series of the productions in which she has most strongly endeared herself to the public, namely, in brilliant, sparkling comedies with underlying heart interest. Miss Barrymore has played successfully on the speaking stage both "Lady Frederick" and "Our Mrs. McChesney," the latter being an adaptation of the famous Edna Ferber stories, dramatized by the author and George V. Hobart. Further stage comedies will be added to the list.

Herbert Blache will direct Miss Barrymore.

"Geezer" Goes Over Big in Chicago.

"The Geezer of Berlin," the travesty on "The Kaiser, the Beast of Berlin," which Jewel put out, has had its first test and has come away successful. Jewel officials were so fed up on "The Beast's" success that they had come to think there was only one picture of the class. To have a two-reeler keep right on where "The Kaiser" left off was more than they had dared hope.

Mrs. Emma Cohen, manager of the Casino Theatre, at 58 West Madison street, the heart of Chicago's Loop district, saw "The Geezer of Berlin" in the Universal Exchange projection room and without arguing about the first-run price booked it on the spot. She used an elaborate advertising campaign prepared by the exchange publicity department, and Irving Mack saw to it that all the Chicago reviewers were there. In spite of all high priced competition "The Geezer of Berlin" got the tops, the cuts and the best reviews.

Madge Kennedy Puts On Scenes at Daly's Theatre

WHILE the oppressive hot wave was breaking all heat records for New York City, Goldwyn was setting a new mark for motion picture realism. The big event was the transforming of Daly's Theatre in Broadway, New York, into a motion picture set for scenes in Madge Kennedy's newest Goldwyn picture, "A Perfect Lady," from the successful stage play by Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf. The playhouse where Augustin Daly, playwright and producer, achieved his biggest successes and the scene of Ada Rehan's greatest triumphs not so many years ago became a burlesque house for the three days the Goldwyn players used it—just as it had been in late years.

One of the scenes required eighteen chorus girls. They surround Miss Kennedy, who plays the role of Juliet, leading woman of the troupe. In the audience were 300 extras applauding the work of Juliet and her pretty chorus assistants. Also in the audience were four prominent members of the cast posing as members of a Sabbath league, one of them being the sheriff. The latter, urged by other members of the committee, orders the curtain lowered because of the apparent vulgarity of the show, and then tells the audience to file out to the box office for its money.

Because of the intense heat, Goldwyn had a cooling plant installed at Daly's Theatre. For luncheon four tables were set the length of the lobby and food was brought from a nearby hotel. Jere Austin, Miss Kennedy's leading man, acted as host in the garb of a clergyman, the role he plays in "A Perfect Lady." A sixteen-piece orchestra engaged for the theatre scenes made music for dancing between hours of work.

Young Picture for Loew Houses.

Clara Kimball Young and Her Own Company are appearing at all the Marcus Loew theatres this week in "The Savage Woman," opening Monday and Tuesday at Loew's New York Theatre and Roof. The picture has been boiled down to five reels. The picture was directed by Edmund Mortimer from "La Fille Sauvage," by Francois Curel.

Loew Books Outing-Chesters.

Loew's circuit of New York theatres has just booked the entire Outing-Chester travel series of twelve pictures released by Mutual to run in all the Loew houses in New York. Each release works twenty days. These one-reel classics, which were produced by C. L. Chester in co-operation with Outing, "the world's authority on the great outdoors," are meeting with wide popularity, their range of unusual subjects having commended them to the travel-loving public.

The Outing-Chester cover parts of the semi-civilized world never before caught by the motion picture cameraman, their subjects extending from the jungle interior of Fiji to those equally little known islands of the West Indies, Saba and St. Eustacia, with in-between visits to Venezuela, including a canoe trip up the Orinoco, a ramble among the glaciers of Mt. Columbia, a trip to the Gulf Coast islands off Louisiana, side tours among the pines and mountain streams of upper Canada, and again among the Florida Everglades. Intimate housekeeping arrangements of native tribes in remote and nearly inaccessible parts of the world are revealed in this series.

Jewel's Anti-Yellow Dog Campaign Is Spreading Fast

THE practical "win the war" campaign being conducted by Jewel Productions, Inc., in connection with the visualization of "The Yellow Dog" has spread throughout the country so rapidly and grown to such proportions that the greatest expectations of the company have been surpassed and Henry Irving Dodge, author of the now famous story and founder of the anti-Yellow Dog agitation, says his fondest dreams have been more than realized.

In addition to the chambers of commerce and patriotic societies that have already been reported as sponsors of the campaign in various cities many great newspapers have taken up the work of organizing the boy power of their cities in co-operation with the leading picture theatres.

In several cities this plan has been reversed by the most prominent exhibitor assuming charge of the campaign and securing the co-operation of the newspapers in his territory.

This latter plan gives the widest publicity to the movement and is made possible by the fact that every phase of the campaign that is suppressing the destructive influence of Hun propaganda is free of commercialism and is in no way associated with the picture that will later be released to do its share in converting yellow dogs into thoroughbred patriots.

One of the biggest Anti-Yellow Dog clubs in the country to date is in Dallas, where the Dallas Dispatch is "whooping up" the drive in association with the leading picture houses and legitimate theatres.

A big street parade in which over one thousand members participated was conducted by this paper, and after being review by the Mayor, Joseph E. Lawther, and Harry Olmstead, of the Council of Defense, the paraders were presented with membership badges that were honored by admission to the Old Mill theatre at a special performance. Other special performances have been given as part of big Yellow Dog rallies and still others are planned to keep the campaign in Dallas going.

Western Photplay's Serial Named.

The international title contest conducted by Leah Baird has come to a close. The majority of film fans throughout the world decided against the opinion of Miss Baird and the original title selected by Joseph A. Golden of the Western Photoplays, Inc., has been settled upon as the final selection for the serial in which Miss Baird is being starred. A majority counted in favor of the choice originally placed on the serial as being the most appropriate and the most interest compelling.

"The Messenger of Death" is the title of the coming fifteen-episode serial.

Miss Chadwick Featured By Pathe in Two-Reelers

A GIRL whose vivacity and screen personality won for her success over night in the Pathe serial, "The House of Hate," is to be starred in a number of two-reel dramas produced by Astra and released by Pathe Exchange, Inc.

The first of these dramas of plot, counterplot and the underworld is entitled "The Honest Thief," and will be released in the near future. It tells a story of a girl cashier in a country bank whose ingenuity and brains circumvent the plots of crooks and wins for her a husband and happiness.

Miss Chadwick has been surrounded by a capable cast of players. Another one of the two reelers in which Miss Chadwick will be starred is entitled "Getaway Kate," a drama of the call of the heart. Pathe will give further details regarding these two-reel dramas in the near future.

Gillstrom Directs the Lees.

Jane and Katherine Lee, the diminutive stars, have begun work on the first of their pictures which will be released under the William Fox brand of Excel Pictures. The play bears the temporary title, "Go Get 'Em," and is said to be full of thrills and opportunities for the Lee children to play their mischievous pranks.

Besides being the first Lee Excel Pictures, "Go Get 'Em" also marks the advent of Arvid E. Gillstrom into the forces of William Fox directors. Mr. Gillstrom has had a wide experience in producing film comedies, and "Go Get 'Em" is expected to mark several departures in this type of screen play.

The last few pictures of Jane and Katherine have been directed by Kenean Buel, but Mr. Buel has now been assigned to another play.

Scene from "High Tide" (Triangle).

Alma Rubens and Harry Mestayer Lead Triangle Aug. 1

A DRAMA of love and sacrifice, "The Ghost Flower" heads the Triangle program for August 18, offering Alma Rubens in the leading role. It is a story of the victory of patriotism. The heroine debases herself in the eyes of the man she loves that she may save him from death. But face to face on the battleground comes her sweetheart and the man who has determined to kill his rival for her affections. Both have faced the tragedy of the world's great conflict, and in the face of death and devastation the villain's conscience is awakened. Personal quarrels are forgotten in the turmoil of the battles of the nations, and to the hero comes the knowledge of the nobility and sacrifice of his sweetheart's love.

Alma Rubens is an Italian girl, Guilia, a character which should conform admirably to her brunette type. Several new players are included in her supporting cast, among them being Charles West and Emory Johnson.

Frank Borzage, who directed this production, is said to have furnished one of the most artistic sets ever erected at the Triangle studios, a Naples street scene. Madeline Matzen wrote the story, which was scenarioized by Catherine Carr. Jack McKenzie handled the camera.

Director Gilbert P. Hamilton's latest picture, "High Tide," in which Harry Mestayer, the former Broadway star, is featured, is the second release for the week. Mr. Mestayer is shown as a successful playwright and author who has risen from a street "newsie" through sheer ability. The plot centers around the love of Barbara Edwards, an aristocrat from New England drawn to the city by ambition, and the conflicting affections of a show girl, Polly Staire. Mestayer portrays Hudson Newbrook, and Jean Calhoun is Barbara. Yvonne Pavis and Jack Rollen are new players especially engaged in this production.

"High Tide" was written by E. D. Carber, with scenario by Catherine Carr. Gilbert Warrenton was the cameraman.

Ralph Ince to Direct Hamilton.

George Randolph Chester's story, "Five Thousand an Hour," the scenario of which has been made by June Mathis, has been decided upon by Maxwell Karger as the initial picture for Hale Hamilton as a Metro star.

"Five Thousand an Hour" is one of the cleverest of the George Randolph Chester stories and its leading character is a typical Hale Hamilton part. Mr. Hamilton will create the role of Johnnie Gamble, a conquering financier, who goes through many escapades, and whose career holds one amusing situation after another, but who eventually cleans up a crooked business deal and wins out. Many scenes of unusual beauty and interest will be incorporated in the picture, among them the racing at Saratoga, a prominent country club and prize kennels of a dog fancier.

Ralph W. Ince will direct. Assisting is William W. Cohill.

The first scenes for "Five Thousand an Hour" will be taken at Saratoga and will show many of the world-famous places of note in that city—the springs, the picturesque old hotels, homes of our political conventions, the races and numerous other features.

Mutual Releases Field Single Aug. 20.

Elinor Field, the clever Los Angeles high school senior, who is starring in Strand comedies on the Mutual schedule, has already produced half a dozen remarkable one-reel pictures, and her prettiness, daintiness, and originality have already increased the popularity of the Mutual-Strand featurettes.

Her latest release is "Winnie's Wild Wedding," scheduled for August 20, in which a flirtatious and clever girl, ready to marry her first love, quickly overcomes father's mandate that she must not marry until she has had three proposals. She arranges for the additional two in a hurry, but her foot nearly slips on the third.

The "humanness" of the Strand-Mutual playlets has appealed to high class theatres.

Pretty Frocks for Mae Marsh.

Mae Marsh's many pretty gowns in her latest Goldwyn picture, "Money Mad," set for release August 25, will be a treat as well as a surprise to her admirers. Motion picture devotees seldom look to Miss Marsh for fashionable frocks. By her art alone has she won fame on the screen. In only one other Goldwyn production, "The Cinderella Man," was she so prettily garbed.

Here's the Good Cast For Moore's "Just For Tonight"

PLAYERS notable for their achievements on stage and screen surroun Tom Moore in "Just for Tonight," th medium of his first appearance as a Gold wyn star. As his leading woman To Moore has Lucy Fox, identified with we known productions in the spoken dram and for several years equally noted fo her work before the camera.

Henry Sedley, a favorite on the stag and in vaudeville before his entry int the motion picture field, has an importan role. Another to whom a major part ha been intrusted is Henry Hallam. Maud Turner Gordon, whose work as the mothe with Madge Kennedy in "The Service Star won high praise everywhere, and wh played a similar part with Geraldin Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel," i well cast. So is Ethel Grey Terry, lon a favorite on the stage and screen. Othe well known screen players in the cast ar Edwin Sturgis, Phil Ryley, Robert Con ville, and Robert Broderick.

Augustin Daly. He has also appeared i productions of Klaw & Erlanger an Henry W. Savage.

His screen career embraces three and half years spent with the American Kine macolor, Metro, Vitagraph and others His first production with the World Com pany will be "What Love Forgives," b Gardner Hunting.

George Walsh, Appearing in Victory Pictures.

Fox Proud of Brand Name Victory, Signifying Punch

THE Fox Film Corporation says it is proud of the name, Victory Pictures, which it has designated for one of the groups of its productions this coming year. It thinks Victory Pictures is a good name, because the same punch that will bring victory to American arms in France is contained in the work of the three stars that will make Victory Pictures—Gladys Brockwell, George Walsh and Tom Mix.

These three players, in the opinion of the Fox Corporation, typify all the verve, electric force and smash that are making themselves felt on the Western front.

Tom Mix is the West, with all its daring, its breezy, devil-may-care life; when his rides he visualizes the bravery and hardihood of the men who hewed a civilization out of a wilderness.

And then there is George Walsh. All that is fine and wholesome and splendid in young America is embodied in this actor's work. He is athletic, like all good young Americans—clean-limbed, happy, bubbling over with life and vitality.

Gladys Brockwell is the typical American woman. She has fine force and high-tension temperament. And her plays stand out for these very qualities.

Farnum Finishes Second Grey Story.

William Farnum has completed the filming of "The Rainbow Trail, the William Fox picture taken from Zane Grey's novel of the same name. The film has been cut and assembled and will be shipped to New York shortly for inspection.

The Grand Canyon of Arizona will be well advertised in this picture, as will also a large part of Southern California. Mr. Farnum, his director, Frank Lloyd, and twenty-four other members of the Farnum company spent a week 3,000 feet down in the Grand Canyon making scenes. This photoplay is a sequel to "Riders of the Purple Sage," another Zane Grey book also picturized by Mr. Farnum. Both productions will be among the early William Fox Standard Picture releases of the coming season.

It is believed the next story Mr. Farnum will film will be "The Road to Berlin," a western tale written by Gladys Wright-Ukers.

It's Chauffeur Moore in Goldwyn's "Thirty a Week"

WITH "Just for Tonight," his first Goldwyn starring vehicle being shown at Goldwyn branches throughout the country, Tom Moore is at work in the Goldwyn studios at Fort Lee on his second production as a star. It is "Thirty a Week," from the successful stage play by Thompson Buchanan, and is said to give Mr. Moore a role even more suitable than that afforded by his first production.

"Thirty a Week" is being directed by Harry Beaumont, engaged especially by Goldwyn to supervise the Tom Moore productions. His remarkably successful direction of the "Skinner" pictures—"Skinner's Dress Suit," "Skinner's Baby," and others—makes him especially well fitted to handle Tom Moore. He and the star are in accord in believing that "Thirty a Week" will be a whirlwind of adventure and fun.

The play tells the story of the romance of a young Irish-American chauffeur whose salary is thirty dollars a week, and who falls in love with and marries the beautiful daughter of his disgracefully rich employer. The complications which make the fun and suspense of the piece both precede and follow the wedding.

"Thirty a Week" is a story that suits Tom Moore's wishes right down to the ground. He has let it be known that he won't be seen in pictures as the adventurous hero who sweeps all before him by surmounting impossible obstacles and winning out over hindrances that would floor a super-man. He wants to be a human, every-day American, not an impossible god of the cinema.

The supporting cast of "Thirty a Week" and other details of the production have not yet been announced. Goldwyn promises a surprise in the announcement of the name of Mr. Moore's leading woman.

"Smiling Bill" Back at Work.

"Smiling Bill" Parsons, back at his Hollywood studios after a six weeks' transcontinental vacation tour, is at work on his thirteenth Capitol comedy, as yet unnamed, enthusiastic over the receptions accorded him everywhere and delighted with the praise heaped upon his productions by theatre owners and patrons.

Prints of his two latest Capitol comedies, "Up a Tree" and "Bill's Sweetie," have been sent from Hollywood to all Goldwyn exchanges for distribution among the exhibitors

Parsons promises a surprise for his friends in the new Capitol comedy he is working on. It will present the fat funster in a role strikingly different and even funnier than those that have gone before.

Pathe Announces Keenan Feature.

Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces there has been completed a great Frank Keenan feature which has been entitled "The Midnight Stage." This drama of California is of the sixties. It will be remembered that Frank Keenan won artistic fame in the role of the sheriff in David Belasco's western drama, "The Girl from the Golden West."

In "The Midnight Stage" Frank Keenan enacts a dual role; that of a gambler and then of a road agent. Jack Cunningham wrote this drama, which was directed by Ernest C. Warde.

Congenial Role for Kerrigan.

F. McGrew Willis, author of J. Warren Kerrigan's Paralta Play, "A Burglar for a Night," released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation early in August, has provided Mr. Kerrigan with one of the most congenial roles the screen star has had.

Lois Wilson is seen as the heroine. She has appeared with Mr. Kerrigan in a number of his photoplays and has achieved popularity by reason of her comeliness and artistry. Charles French, William Elmer, Robert Brower and Herbert Prior also are in the cast.

Pathe's First Big Picture for Season Is "Her Man"

PATHE'S first big feature for the season of 1918-19 will be "Her Man," which will be released on September 8. The picture is adapted from the novel by Charles Neville Buck, "The Battle Cry." Elaine Hammerstein is the star of the picture, which was directed by Ralph Ince. The Advanced Motion Picture Corporation produced it.

"Her Man" is a picture of which the Pathe organization is proud. Not only is the story a strong one, lending itself perfectly to screen purposes, but the cast, locations, production and direction are all excellent. The picture deals with what is perhaps the most picturesque people in the United States today, the mountaineers of the South. The scene of the story is laid in the mountains of Kentucky and practically all the exteriors were filmed there. It is interesting to note that Director Ince selected for the making of his picture the same place of which Mr. Buck wrote in his book. Therefore the locale is authentic and the types used as "extras" perfect, for natives were employed wherever possible.

Miss Hammerstein makes a charming heroine. She has a strong part, that of a society girl who believes it her duty to educate the mountaineers away from their feuds and assassinations and in the end becomes a feudist herself for a little while.

W. Lawson Butt plays the leading man, having the part of "Bad Anse Havey," the clan leader.

COMPLETE PLANT FOR SALE.

The entire plant of the Eagle Film Manufacturing and Producing Company, Jacksonville, Fla., was purchased by the Independent Hardware Company, Jacksonville, Fla., when the company went into bankruptcy. The properties bought included studio equipment, lights, sets, carpenters' tools, wardrobes, etc., and complete laboratory equipment of printers, perforators, racks, tanks, developing solutions and office furniture, including desks, filing cabinets, typewriters, index files, etc. There is also a quantity of finished positive prints in the safes. Not having any use for such equipment, the purchasers have offered it all for sale. The advertising announcement will be found in the business section of this issue.

General Releases an O. Henry.

"Springtime a la Carte," one of the quaintest O. Henry comedy-dramas released in some weeks, takes its place on the General Film schedule this week after a distinguished week's run as a pre-release at the Rivoli theatre in New York. Agnes Ayres and Edward Earle, featured in recent O. Henry productions, again appear in the stellar roles. The production was directed by Kenneth Webb.

Next week General Film will release a Wolfville tale, "The Widow Dangerous," featuring Hattie Buskirk and John Cook.

"The White Lie" Released September 2.

Bessie Barriscale's next Paralta play, "The White Lie," is a powerful drama, written by William Parker and directed by Howard Hickman. The gripping situation is built around three characters, who, outside of baby Mary Jane Irving, are practically the only persons in the story. With the star, Charles Gunn and Edward Coxen complete the cast. Originally called "A Wife's Conscience," "The White Lie" will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation on September 2.

Scene from "Ruling Passions" (Schomer).

"Ruling Passions" Slated For Month's Broadway Run

ABRAHAM S. SCHOMER, whose many stage and screen successes include "To-Day," "The Yellow Passport," "The Inner Man" and others, is at the Biograph studio completing the production of his latest screen effort, "Ruling Passions," upon which he has been working for the past three weeks. Those who have seen that part of the play already completed are quoted as declaring it is bound to meet with large success. It deals with a vital and interesting problem of life.

Mr. Schomer has selected his cast with great care and skill. Its leading members are Julia Dean, Edwin Arden, Claire Whitney and Earl Schenk.

"Ruling Passions" will be presented at a Broadway theatre for a four weeks' run and then released throughout the country by the Schomer Photoplay Producing Company, Inc., of 1440 Broadway.

"Lawless Love" Next Fox Special.

Jewel Carmen in "Lawless Love," a tale of a New York vaudeville artiste and a masket bandit, is announced as the next Fox special feature release. The picture is based on a magazine story, "Above the Law," which was written by Max Brand, and was directed by Robert Thornby, being Mr. Thornby's second picture for Fox.

There are only three principals in the cast. Besides Miss Carmen, who portrays the role of LaBelle Geraldine, fresh from the vaudeville stages of Broadway, there are Henry Woodward, who appears as Black Jim, a bandit chief, and Edward Hearn, cast as Freddie Montgomery, who has a yellow streak wider than a Staten Island ferryboat.

Scenery of striking beauty is declared to be a feature of the play, as many of the scenes were taken at Huntington Lake, California, 9,000 feet above sea-level.

Second Keeney Picture Released.

The second release of the Frank A. Keeney Pictures Corporation, "Out of the Night," by E. Lloyd Sheldon, was put on the market August 11 through the William L. Sherry Service, which is distributing all of the Keeney productions. The next Keeney release will be "Marriage," by Guy Bolton, and the next after that "The Uphill Path," by Paul Armstrong. The last named picture is complete, except for final editing and titling.

When Mr. Keeney started in the film producing business he announced that he was going to put out high-class pictures, with a strong popular appeal. That he has made good this promise thus far is evidenced by reports from exhibitors received by the William L. Sherry Service, which is distributing all of his productions.

Ray to Make Another Western.

Charles Ray, as a result of the success of his former Western picture produced by Thomas H. Ince for Paramount, "Playing the Game," has been slated for another of that type, to be filled from a novel and wherein he will have the role of a young chap on a ranch somewhere in the open lands.

Seena Owen has been selected as his leading woman. Victor Schertzinger will direct, assisted by Bill Curran, with Chet Lyons at the camera.

Chatsworth Park, thirty-five miles from Los Angeles, has been selected as the location for the exteriors.

General Film on Broadway With Long and Short Play

THE week of August 4 was Genera Film week in so far as Broadwa first-run houses were concerned, re ports Manager J. A. Hammell of the Ne York exchange. At the Rivoli three Gen eral Film short-length classics compose the major portion of the program, whil at Loew's New York "Her Moment," wit Anna Luther, was the feature subject o the Wednesday program. This was th third successive week in which Genera Film's offerings have been represented o Broadway, "The Enchanted Profile," an O Henry story, having been screened at th Rivoli during the week of July 28, whil the week previous saw another O. Henr story, "Mammon and the Archer," at th same theatre.

The notable program created by Man ager Rothapfel of the Rivoli for the firs week in August contained an O. Henr story, "Springtime a la Carte," and Wolfville tale, "Winning of the Mockin Bird," two-reel productions, as well a the exclusive American Red Cross filr showing the Fourth of July celebratio in Paris.

"Springtime a la Carte," featuring Ed ward Earle and Agnes Ayres, was th fourth of the recent O. Henry picture shown in the two Rothapfel theatres dur ing the last few weeks.

Gail Kane Has Daviess' Story.

Miss Gail Kane's next production in th series of eight feature pictures she is t be starred in by Mutual is from "Th Daredevil," Maria Thompson Daviess' mos successful novel, the pictorial rights o which have been purchased at Miss Kane' earnest request.

Miss Daviess has written many success ful books and magazine stories, among th most popular of which were "The Meltin of Molly," "Miss Selina Sue" and "Th Soap Box," "The Road to Providence, "The Treasure Babies," and "Over Paradis Ridge."

Otto to be Lockwood Co-Director in Yorke-Metro

HENRY OTTO will again direct Harold Lockwood in Metro productions. Mr. Otto returns to the Metro fold after a two years' severance of relations.

During the time of his previous affiliation with Yorke-Metro, Mr. Otto was credited with the production of what proved to be among Mr. Lockwood's most successful early vehicles. It was Mr. Otto who put on "The River of Romance" and "Mister 44."

While no announcement has been made to such an effect, Mr. Otto's engagement may nevertheless presage the appearance of Mr. Lockwood in more vehicles of the type of "The River of Romance" and "Mister 44."

According to the agreement Mr. Otto will alternate with Managing Director Edwin Carewe in the making of future Lockwood pictures. He will take over the star immediately after the final scenes of "Pals First" have been made and will start "shooting" at once while Mr. Carewe is engaged in the task of cutting and titling his production.

Mr. Lockwood and Mr. Otto were fellow players with The Selig Company in the days of one reelers, Mr. Lockwood appearing in leading roles, while Mr. Otto played heavies. They were associated in these capacities for two years. Mr. Otto then went to the American Company as director, remaining there for two years. He was also with the Universal for a long time and produced for them, among other pictures, the screen version of "Undine." Another spectacular water feature he produced was "A Modern Lorelei," starring Tyrone Power. His most recent engagement was with Triangle, for whom he directed features starring William Des mond.

Before entering screen work Mr. Otto appeared in vaudeville and on the so-call ed legitimate stage besides filling engagements as stage director. For a long time he was stage director for Henry W. Savage.

Henry Otto.

East and West Fox Has Nine Productions in Work

REPORTS from the William Fox studios in the East and on the Pacific Coast show that nine productions are in work. "The She-Devil," being directed by J. Gordon Edwards at Hollywood, is nearing completion. Tom Mix and his company, under the direction of Lynn Reynolds, has just gone to Prescott, Ariz., to begin work on "The Two-Gun Man," and Gladys Brockwell is progressing with the picturization of "The Strange Woman." William Farnum has completed filming "The Rainbow Trail."

In the East Virginia Pearson is at work at the Blackton studio in Brooklyn on "The Queen of Hearts," a mystery play, and Peggy Hyland has started on "Marriages Are Made." Director Richard Stanton has begun on "Eyes of the Soul," a big all-star production, and another Fox company has started on "Why I Would Not Marry," which is described as the life story of the most beautiful woman in the world.

Jane and Katherine Lee, under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom, a new Fox director, are at work at the Victor studio on "Go Get 'Em." George Walsh has also just begun work on a yet unnamed play under the direction of his brother, R. A. Walsh.

Metro Actor Works 385 Days.

In the company supporting Emmy Wehlen in "His Bonded Wife," the comedy photoplay by Louis and Arthur Zellner, which was scenariorized for Miss Wehlen by June Mathis, is William Frederick.

Mr. Frederick holds the unique record of having worked before the camera 385 days without even losing a Sunday—quite the longest in motion picture annals. This Thespian also holds a stage record of which he is equally proud, eight consecutive seasons on Broadway.

Swickard Is a Metro Director.

Charles Swickard has been added to the directing staff at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood. He will direct Bert Lytell. Swickard, who was an actor with wide experience in legitimate productions and stock companies before his advent in motion pictures, comes to Metro with an excellent record.

"The Girl from Bohemia" Leads Pathe for August 25

A COMEDY-DRAMA from the story of Lois Zellner, directed by L. B. McGill and produced by Astra, featuring Mrs. Irene Castle, is "The Girl From Bohemia," leading the Pathe program for August 25. It has to do with a girl from Bohemia who, as a result of an inheritance, finds herself in the provincial town of Mayport and there love and adventure develop. She not only wears a number of expensive gowns, but she performs some of the latest dance steps, which will certainly be of interest to the lady movie fans.

Episode 2 of the latest and most thrilling of Pathe serials is entitled "The Missing Prince" and continues the adventures of Echo Delane, the magazine writer, with her cowboy's lover, "Hands Up," and the search of the mysterious tribe of Inca Indians for "The Missing Prince," who is to marry the Bride of the Sun.

"Nipped in the Bud" is a farce comedy, featuring Toto, supported by a capable cast of fun makers.

"A Sun Kissed Isle" is the subject of the Post Travel Series No. 11 and presents interesting scenes in Porto Rico.

The Official War Review, released in this program and presented under the government's direction, shows the latest scenes of Uncle Sam's activities on the firing line of France.

Three Large Bookings for Hayakawa Pictures

Three important bookings have been closed within the week by the sales force of Mutual for the series of eight Sessue Hayakawa specials produced by the Haworth Pictures Corporation.

The Riviera, Balaban and Katz's new million dollar theatre in Chicago will open on September 1 with "His Birthright," first of the Hayakawa pictures.

The productions have been contracted for by the B. S. Moss circuit to play in the six Moss theatres in New York and Brooklyn. Each picture is scheduled for three days in each of the houses.

The series has been booked for the new Woodlawn theatre, Chicago, which opened a couple of months ago and has been one of the sensational successes of the midwest.

Sales of the Hayawaka productions through the Mutual exchanges are being directed by James M. Sheldon, president of Mutual, and A. S. Kirkpatrick, the new assistant general manager, working in cooperation with Sam E. Rork, general representative of the Haworth Corporation.

"Pals First" Will Soon Be Ready.

In fulfillment of its recently announced decision to promote Harold Lockwood in the special attractions class, Metro announces that it will release "Pals First" under the banner of Screen Classics, Inc. The picture has been in course of production under the direction of Edwin Carewe since the Lockwood company's arrival from the coast early last month and the film soon will be ready for release.

The vehicle is an adaptation of the stage success "Pals First," prepared by Leo Wilson Dodd from Francis Perry Elliott's novel of the same name.

Harold Lockwood has a congenial role. His large cast includes Ruby De Remer, James Lackaye, Richard R. Neill, Frank De Vernon, Anthony Byrd, Pauline Dempsey, Walter P. Lewis and Rollo Lloyd.

Mary Miles Minter's First Is "The Eyes of Julia Deep"

PERSONAL representatives of Samuel S. Hutchinson, president of the American Film Company, Inc., stationed at the numerous Pathe exchanges throughout the country, are showing exhibitors the first of the new Mary Miles Minter subjects which American is selling direct and Pathe is distributing. The title of this first offering is "The Eyes of Julia Deep," and is a comedy-drama in five acts from the story by Kate L. McLaurin. Lloyd Ingraham directed it, and included in Miss Minter's supporting cast are Alan Forrest, George Periolat, Alice Wilson, Ida DeVilla, and Carl Stockdale.

Miss Minter is given innumerable opportunities to put over the type of acting for which she is famous, and in her part of a department store exchange clerk she takes full advantage of each of the opportunities given her.

Every exhibitor who has shown one of the Minter subjects in the past will recognize in this release another opportunity to draw the thousands of Minter fans to his theatre, while many theatres that have never before shown a production starring Mary of the M's will seize this chance to add still another sure-fire hit to its list of attractions. Bookings on this and other American subjects can be made at any Pathe exchange by applying to the American Film Company representatives stationed there

May Allison's Second Making Progress.

"The Testing of Mildred Vano," May Allison's second picture to be produced on the west coast, is making excellent progress. Most of the interiors have been photographed and Technical Director Ralph Godfrey has erected an immense ballroom set with conservatory and gardens. With these scenes out of the way the Allison company will go on location for exteriors.

Wilfred Lucas again is directing, with William E. Fildew as skipper of the camera. The story was written for Miss Allison by Charles T. Dazey and adapted for the screen by George D. Baker. It is a comedy-melodrama.

Metro Buys "Oh, Annice!"

"Oh, Annice!" the sparkling and clever serial story by Alexine Heyland that has been runing in the Woman's Home Companion, has been chosen as a starring vehicle for the Metro star, Viola Dana, the firm having bought the screen rights of the story.

Work before the camera will be begun as soon as Director John H. Collins has completed his scenario version and selected the cast to surround Miss Dana. Albert H. Kelly again will be Mr. Collins' assistant, and the photography will be done by John Arnold.

Pathe's Stars in Loan Campaign.

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., is enthusiastic upon the subject of the motion picture industry cooperating with the government in the next Liberty Loan drive. In issuing instruction to the various departments of the Pathe Exchange, Inc., Mr. Brunet says:

"We propose to bend every effort in assisting the government in making the next Liberty Loan drive the success it deserves to be. All the Pathe stars, including Pearl White, Frank Keenan, Emmy Ward, Ruth Roland, Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Baby Marie Osborne and others, are going to bend their shoulders to the wheel in the work for Uncle Sam."

Strong Support for Madge Evans.

World Pictures has completed the cast for "Snug Harbor," the new picture in which Tefft Johnson will make his debut as a director with this organization. Madge Evans is the star and will be supported by Jack Drummer, Charles Sutton, William T. Carleton, Blanche Craig, Sam Ryan, formerly with many of George M. Cohan's successes, Charles Jackson, Kate Lester, Nora Cecil, Charles Ascot and Esther Banks.

Work is now in progress on this picture at the studio in Fort Lee and in a few days the entire company will leave for the New England coast for the exteriors. One of the principal scenes in this play is a mariner's home and will be taken down Cape Cod way.

World Shifts Release Dates.

World Pictures announces a shift of release date of two of its pictures. "The Road To France" instead of being presented on September 9, will have its screen premier on October 14. "By Hook or Crook," another Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley picture, will be the September 9 offering instead of October 14, as previously scheduled. The necessity of the change of dates grew out of the inability of World Pictures to secure the completion of the lithographs necessary adequately to exploit "The Road to France."

Dietrich Sets Release of Kenyon Film for August 18

THEODORE C. DIETRICH, president of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., announces that the postponement of the release of "The Inn of the Blue Moon," with Doris Kenyon at the head of her own company, is due to the fact that it was impossible to get films and accessories to the western coast in time to enable exhibitors there to show the picture on the date originally set, August 11. The new release date is August 18.

Those who have seen this picture are enthusiastic over it. They say its romantic and beautiful love story, together with the picturesque scenes and general artistic quality, will give it prestige with all classes and keep it in demand longer than the average picture. The author, Louis Joseph Vance, one of the most popular of American story tellers, has been in close touch with the production from the start and has given much valuable advice.

Reports from "The Street of Seven Stars," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, the first De Luxe release, are to the effect that it is doing capacity business in many houses, in spite of the handicapping effect of the hot weather. Mr. Deitrich recently visited Buffalo, where he found that in the exclusive East Liberty district the pictures had played to capacity all week. All of the De Luxe productions are being distributed through the William L. Sherry Service.

"Why America Will Win" is Shown.

A private screening was given last week of "Why America Will Win," the picture based on the life of General Pershing, at one of the projection rooms of the Fox Film Corporation. The screening was attended by officials of the corporation and the film is now being cut and finished for showings early in the fall.

Based on the life of General Pershing, the production, which was directed by Richard Stanton, followed the career of the great American commander from his West Point days right into Berlin.

Ebonies to Release Fortnightly.

A rearrangement of the releasing schedule for the Ebony comedies is announced this week by General Film Company.

Beginning with "When You Are Scared, Run," August 19, these comedy subjects will be available every other week. It is announced from the Fond du Lac studios of the Ebony company that every effort will be made to insure the quality of the comedies, since they are proving so popular. Work has been begun on a number of selected stories.

"The Strange Woman" (Fox).

Announcement from the Fox Film Corporation is that "The Strange Woman" will be Gladys Brockwell's second release under the new Fox Victory Pictures brand. The first release will be "Kultur," a powerful drama designed to throw new light on Germany's intrigues in Austria before the war. Work on "The Strange Woman," which is based on the great stage success of the same name by William J. Hurlbut, is nearing completion under the direction of Director Edward J. LeSaint at Hollywood.

Rialto Announces Second Picture.

Following the successful reception of its first production, Grace Valentine in "The Unchastened Woman," Rialto De Luxe Productions announces the second special release, presenting Marguerite Marsh in "Conquered Hearts," a photoplay which was enthusiastically received at its initial trade showing. Distribution will be through the George Kleine system in the United States and Canada and for all foreign countries through the Piedmont Pictures Corporation.

United To Distribute "The Light of Western Stars"

HARRY A. SHERMAN, who for the past few days has been in New York arranging for the distribution of his company's first production, "The Light of Western Stars," announces the consummation of arrangements by which this picture will be released by United Picture Theatres of America, Inc., and will be their first offering to theatres comprising this organization. Further, Mr. Sherman announces that after viewing this production the United has contracted for six more features starring Dustin Farnum, who is the star of the first release, and will pass upon the type of stories before the work of production is begun. Two have already been accepted, the second of the series being "The Wolf Breed," by Jackson Gregory, and "The Man in the Open," by Roger Pocock.

A Western feature that is not stereotyped in form ought to be welcomed. It will probably be good news to many, therefore, to learn that a thrilling Western feature has been made from Zane Grey's novel, "The Light of Western Stars," and one which differs greatly from the usual thing in Western drama.

Dustin Farnum is seen in the role of Gene Stewart, the reckless, lovable cowboy hero of Zane Grey's novel. The author originally patterned his character of Gene Stewart after Dustin Farnum, and actually says so, hence it is quite appropriate that Mr. Farnum should play this part.

In a general way this story is an epic of the Southwest. All of the scenes were taken in the original locations described by the author. The story is laid in Mexico, New Mexico, and Arizona. The photography was done by Homer Scott. In doing these scenes many hardships were endured by the company.

While there is no lack of thrilling Western action in the story, "The Light of Western Stars" is by no means a conventional Western tale. Another redeeming feature of this film adaptation is said to be the fact that there have been no liberties taken with the author's text. The original story is practically intact.

Hold Private Showing Of "Lafayette, We Come"

A PRIVATE showing of the first production of the Perret Producing Company, the much heralded patriotic film "Lafayette, We Come" (Pershing '17') was held recently for the executives of the company, Director Leonce Perret and his staff, at which time, F. Du Fourno, one of the directors, spoke as follows:

"It is said of the motion picture and its entertaining and educational values that the surface of these possibilities has merely been scratched. If this be true then it has fallen to the lot of a Frenchman to be the first to dig down under this surface and bring up a specimen nugget indicative of the priceless ore which lies hidden below. True, there have been produced motion pictures which have thrilled audiences and will live long in their memory, but never before has a motion picture so ingeniously sown the seed which when ripened will for all time bind two nations—France and America—in a bond of mutual understanding, fraternity and love. Those of you who have aided in this project realize the truth of my words." Mr. Perret's sales organization are busily engaged negotiating for the disposition and release of the film to be preceded by a showing on Broadway. Announcement of the completion of these negotiations will be made shortly.

"Sporting Life" Announced For Release in September

MAURICE TOURNEUR announces that "Sporting Life," adapted from the famous Drury Lane melodrama, will be ready for release early in September. The releasing arrangements are in the hands of Hiller & Wilk, Inc.

"Sporting Life" is the first production of the Maurice Tourneur Productions, Inc., and the first offering in his own name of the director who made "The Whip," "The Blue Bird," "A Poor Little Rich Girl," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," "Trilby" the first four Elsie Ferguson pictures and other noteworthy productions. Mr. Tourneur selected "Sporting Life" because it was one of the biggest successes of the famous home of melodrama, the London Drury Lane, because it was also a New York hit, and, like "The Whip" it is a romance of the turf, being woven around that famous British sporting classic, the Derby. It is also by the same authors as "The Whip."

Mr. Tourneur is said to have spared no expense in making "Sporting Life" into what he believes to be the best production of his career, and he is still engaged in revising, cutting and proving it, although he is also now working on his second production. "'Sporting Life' will leave my studio absolutely perfect in so far as I can make it so," says Mr. Tourneur. "It will be as I want it in every detail, down to the smallest caption. I have put my whole heart into 'Sporting Life' and I am putting the greatest care into every last inch of it.

"Sporting Life" has a carefully selected cast, including Constance Binney and Fair Binney, Willette Kershaw, Ralph Graves, Warner Richmond, Charles Eldridge, Charles Craig and Henry West.

Hiller & Wilk, Inc., are already in receipt of a number of inquiries regarding "Sporting Life," from all over America, as well as Australia and India, where the melodrama was equally well known as a stage hit. Bookings are now being arranged, following the definite announcement of early September as the date of release.

Eastern Enlarges Offices

EXTENSIVE alterations are being made at the Eastern building, the home of the Eastern Feature Film Company, at 57-59 Church street, Boston, Mass. The entire main floor is being renovated, and a reception, counting, and exhibition rooms are being installed.

Herman Rifkin, president and general manager of this company, is a man of the progressive type, and increased business during the past year have necessitated larger quarters.

"Little Women" Is Announced As Second Brady Feature

THE second big special independent production made by William A. Brady is rapidly approaching completion. The subject is an adaptation of Louisa Alcott's well-known novel "Little Women," one of the most widely read books ever published in America. Practically every girl in this country has read it, and it has been translated into nearly every language and enjoyed great popularity; Jo, Amy, Meg and Beth, the gallantries of Laurie, the faithfulness of John, the honesty of professor Baehr are as well known in Great Britain and other countries as in the United States.

Many attempt were made to secure the screen rights to this production, but it remained for Mr. Brady to persuade the Alcott estate to permit the making of the picture; incidentally, it was Mr. Brady who made the very successful stage production of this book, which ran in New York for eighteen months and then enjoyed a phenomenal tour of the country.

The picture will be produced under the direction of Harley Knoles, who has chosen for the location, scenes in and around the home of Miss Alcott at Concord, Mass. The house in which she lived has been preserved by the state of Massachusetts as a memorial, and Mr. Knoles is using in the picture, the rooms in which she lived to write her famous story, also the famous Plumfield Orchard. To those who know "Little Woman" the picture should therefore prove doubly attractive.

While it is quite a jump from the sensations of "Stolen Orders" to the beauties of "Little Woman," this is in line with Mr. Brady's policy of choosing great and popular subjects, and as his third independent production, he will film "Way Down East," which as a theatrical attraction has for nineteen years been before American audiences.

All of these productions will be sold on a territorial basis.

Schlaiter and Standard Announce Several Ivans

FOLLOWING the announcement of the sale of rights to several of their feature pictures to L. J. Schlaifer Attractions for Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana, and to Standard Film Corporation of Minnesota, for northern Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and South Dakota; the Ivan Film Productions announce that each of these exchanges will immediately begin an active campaign, starting with "Babbling Tongues" and that at intervals of three weeks, the following productions will be released to exhibitors in the above mentioned territories: "Sins of Ambition," "Married in Name Only," "The Girl Who Did Not Care," "Her Surrender," "Two Men and a Woman" and other Ivan features.

Both of these organizations are well known in the State Right field; the Standard has its principal office at 406 Film Exchange Building, Minneapolis, and H. L. Muir is manager; while the Schlaifer attractions is under the management of Melvin Weinstock, and is located at 2022 Third avenue, Seattle.

"The Whip" A Money-Getter Says Thompson of True Film

TRUE T. THOMPSON, of the True Film Company, with headquarters at 1911½ Commerce street, Dallas, Texas, reports great success in handling "The Whip" in his territory, stating that "this picture has proved itself an exceptional box office attraction in this section; producers should be interested to know these facts so that more state right pictures of this character can be produced."

Among the exhibitors to whom Mr. Thompson refers as having written him testifying to the value of this production as a money getter are W. E. H. Hulsey, Old Mill, Dallas; B. F. Roberts, Liberty theatre, Houston; Sandefur - Brewer Amusement Company, Little Rock; F. B. Garrett, Jewel theatre, Clarendon, Ark.; S. D. Warner, Majestic, Austin; F. A. Alexander, Elk theatre, Marshall, Texas; J. F. Head, Auditorium, Hot Springs, Liberty theatre, Placquemine; T. H. Boland, Empress, Oklahoma City; F. B. Smith, Majestic, Stuttgart, Ark.; A. J. Bethancourt, Houma opera house, Houma, Ark.

Shipman Handling Frazee's Two-reel Mystic Comedies

UNDER an arrangement with Edwin A. Frazee, the Frazee Film Productions consisting of two-reel mystic comedies, will be offered on the open market by Ernest Shipman.

Mr. Frazee, who is responsible for several Keystone successes, such as "Crooked to the End," "A Village Vampire" and others, states that the time has come for a distinct departure in the making of comedies, and that the introduction of illusions for which he has patent protections, will form a part of each story, rivalling on the screen the work of Keller, Carter, and Herrmann on the stage, but that no expose will be made as to how the various illusions are accomplished.

The first production, "A Haunted House," has been completed and is booked for a run at W. H. Cline's Broadway Theatre, Los Angeles.

Lieutenant Hall Featured In Film Based on His Book

CARLE E. CARLTON, president En Tar Cinema, Ltd., announces active work has been going on for the past seven weeks in the production of "En Tar," or "Fighting the Hellish Huns in the Air," adapted from the book of the same name written by Lieut. Bert Hall, of the Lafayette Escadrille.

Harry Revier, the director of the last two Lillian Walker productions, is directing this picture, which, it is expected, will be ready for release about September 15.

Lieut. Bert Hall, who appears personally in the production, has been awarded several decorations by the Allied powers, including the Croix de Guerre. His personal experiences in fighting in the air are said to be vividly portrayed.

As a part of the production there is 1,500 feet showing actual battle in the air taken by Lieut. Hall's observer, including the destruction of a Hun biplane and the blowing up of an observation balloon. Supporting Lieut. Hall in the cast is Edith Day, star of the theatrical production, "Going Up," still playing on Broadway, New York. Others in the cast include Stuart Holmes and Warner Richmond.

The United States Government is said to be co-operating with the producers in the use of battle planes, observation balloons, and hydro-aeroplanes. An observation sausage balloon in which Lieut. Hall and Miss Day ascend is destroyed in mid-air through an attack by hostile aeroplanes.

The production will be released in approximately eight reels for the state rights market. An advertising campaign has been inaugurated, including the syndicating of Lieut. Hall's book in a great number of newspapers.

Gaumont Shows Our Boys Receiving War Crosses

GAUMONT Number 19 shows our boys of the 104th Infantry receiving the French War Cross, presented by General Passaga while Major-General Edwards congratulates them. In Chicago, a two-headed Austrian eagle over the door of a Loop restaurant, was discovered by Uncle Sam's sailors, who covered it with the Stars and Stripes. Among other interesting items in this number is an Auto Polo game at Independence, Mo., in New York City James Montgomery Flagg, the famous artist, re-executes his poster "Tell that to the Marines!" in the presence of thousands, on the steps of the Public Library. The Marines at Mare Island express vividly the idea "To Hell with the Kaiser"—which is formed by a solid mass of sailors. French aviators, escaped from German prison camps, held a happy reunion in Paris, and Dr. Carrol, famous surgeon, for having revolutionized surgery in war, is made Commander of the Legion of Honor.

Gaumont News Number 20 shows the Independence Day Celebration which took place in Paris, with Uncle Sam's soldiers marching through the Place de la Concorde and wending their way around the Champs Elysee. The appearance of American Red Cross nurses was greeted with just as many cheers.

Effective Courtroom Scene In Fifth Petrova Picture

AN interesting and effective scene in Madame Petrova's fifth special production "The Tiger Woman" represents the interior of a court room during a trial. The set, which was modeled on the largest criminal court room in New York is very massive, the entire floor space of the Petrova studio having been utilized, and five hundred extras are said to have been used as spectators, court attendants, jury, etc.

Through the co-operation of an expert court stenographer, Director Ralph Ince has introduced a novelty in the taking of testimony of the witnesses, instead of ordinary sub-titles accompanied by the different scenes, the picture fades into a book of stenographic notes, which in turn dissolve into the testimony; and this is photographed on a background suggesting the atmosphere of a court in general.

Elliott Makes Record Building a Theatre

Kansas City's Old Sapphire Torn Down and a New House Built Between June 6 and August 1—Will Seat 450.

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—A. E. Elliott holds the record for rapid construction of a moving picture theatre. For the past five years Mr. Elliott has operated the Sapphire theatre at 115 East 12th street. The lease expired the 1st of June, and on May 4, 1918, Mr. Elliott took a 99-year lease on that property and on the adjoining building. June 6 the work of razing the Sapphire commenced, and Thursday, August 1, witnessed the opening of the new Elliott theatre in the same location.

The house, which is 38x77 feet, and has a seating capacity of 450, is finished in cream and brown, with red, white, and blue emblems as the motif in the centre of the panels. A feature of the theatre is the projection booth, which is one of the best in the city, being 15x22½ feet, with an eight-foot ceiling, and operating the very best De Luxe Motiograph machine. The lighting is indirect, and the music comes from an American Photoplayer. Admission is 10 cents plus the war tax throughout the house. Programs consist mainly of features and comedies. Mr. Elliott has contracted for the first run on Triangle, with a twice a week change. Sunday, August 4, began a run on the "Price of Applause," dealing with trench lift in France and prison life in Germany.

Mid-West and South Theatre Notes.

Batesville, Ark.—Manager C. K. Mosby, of the Gem theatre, is making extensive improvements.

Little Rock, Ark.—Manager Fiedler has been making extensive improvements in the Majestic theatre. A new heating and ventilating system has been installed.

Holden, Mo.—Harry Cobb has leased a lot here and will erect an airdome theatre.

Kansas City, Mo.—Hugo Brecklein will build a one-story and basement addition to his picture show. It will be 50x37 feet, of brick and concrete.

Houston, Tex.—The Travis theatre was opened July 21 under the management of Long & Bailey.

Lubbock, Tex.—The Lyric theatre Company was chartered with a capital stock of $6,000 by E. McElroy, K. Carter, and W. F. Schneck.

Sulphur Springs, Tex.—The Buford theatre sustained the loss of two rolls of films and minor injuries to the building in a recent fire.

Dallas, Tex.—The Princess theatre, Elm and Akard streets, was slightly damaged by a recent fire.

Traer, Ia.—Henry Schlemer has purchased the Princess moving picture theatre.

Leo Doty Joins the Colors.

Leo Doty, who has been with the Universal for the past four or five years as booking clerk, has left for Camp Funston.

E. S. Lowry at Camp Funston.

E. S. Lowry, Missouri salesman for the General Film Company, has left for Camp Funston, where he will join the National Army.

C. E. Raymond in the Service.

C. E. Raymond, formerly shipper for the World Film Corporation, has been called to the colors. His place is being filled by Harry Cameron, previously connected with Paramount and Kleine-Edison.

Business and Personal Notes.

The benefit motion picture show held at the Alamo theatre recently by the Women's Auxiliary of Base Hospital Unit No. 28 was very successful. From reports submitted it is estimated that approximately $700 was obtained for the unit.

M. L. Livingston, executive representative from the United Theatre Equipment Corporation, New York, is in Kansas City for a month or six weeks.

The new Universal serial, "The Brass Bullet," featuring Juanita Hansen and Jack Mulhall, will run four days each week at the Globe theatre, one of Kansas City's vaudeville houses.

E. G. Horton, formerly city salesman for the Camp-Bell Company, has taken a position as traveling salesman for the Standard Film Corporation.

Frank Cass, salesman for the Universal Film Corporation, who left recently for the army, has been placed in a deferred classification and has returned to cover his territory throughout Kansas.

Mr. Myer, head bookkeeper for the Universal, has gone to Tulsa, Okla. Mr. Myer was formerly in the credit department of Mutual. Mr Pierce has been added to replace Mr Myer.

L. W. Brophy, Muskogee, Okla.; B. B. Slothower, Lyric theatre, Vinita, Okla., and George Hill, McGinnis theatre, El Dorado, Kansas, were visitors to Kansas City exchanges last week.

W. C. Ansell, formerly traveling salesman for the Camp-Bell Company, has left for Seattle, Wash.

Mrs. Milling, of the Crystal theatre, Ottawa, Kan., was recently in Kansas City to arrange for new fall bookings. Mrs. Milling stated that in spite of the hot weather and competition consisting of a free show the house broke all records with "To Hell with the Kaiser" on a 25-cent admission.

J. E. Finch, formerly with Kleine-Edison, is back with that company as salesman covering the territory of Oklahoma and Arkansas.

Indiana Trade Letter.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

Lightless Nights Begin Again.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.—Indianapolis was in semi-darkness for two nights, beginning two weeks ago, in compliance with the new two-a-week lightless night order issued by the Federal Government. Local exhibitors say they did not notice a decrease in the box office receipts on the two lightless nights, but they are expecting a decrease on these nights later on. According to the observations made by the exhibitors when the lightless nights were in vogue last winter, there are not nearly as many people on the street on lightless nights as on other nights.

The exhibitors, however, are not complaining of the situation in the least. They say they are willing to make any sacrifices that will aid in any way toward the winning of the war.

Grand Theatre at Bluffton to Reopen.

Bluffton, Ind.—The Grand theatre, damaged by fire in April, is just about completed and will soon be reopened. As a result of the fire it has been necessary to rebuild the balcony from the foundation up and the inner walls had to be replastered and redecorated.

The interior of the theatre is now decorated in a beautiful Tiffany from the floor to the top of the balcony, giving a marble effect with a rich blending of colors.

The large asbestos curtain has been repainted in dark crimson, highlighted with black and has the appearance of a large velvet tableau curtain. The projection booth will be one of the best in the state. The interior construction is to be of iron and cement, and the outside will be made of metal lathing and three inches of asbestos plaster. The booth will be one of the most complete of its kind as to machines and other equipment, according to Fred Tangeman, who has charge of the work.

Indiana Film Notes.

Bloomington, Ind.—Fire damaged the interior of the Princess theatre in this city recently, causing a loss estimated at $250. Robert Harris, manager of the theatre, said the flames apparently originated in the front part of the house near a ventilator, in which some refuse had accumulated.

Portland, Ind.—A deal was closed here Wednesday by which O. E. Pierce, proprietor of a confectionery on North Meridian street, became the owner of the Theatorium, a local motion picture theatre. J. T. Templin, the former owner, says he has not made any definite plans for the future.

Gary, Ind.—Employes of the Aetna Explosive Company's plant, three miles east of here, are to have a theatre all their own. The theatre will be operated by the company purely for the benefit of the employes.

Film Briefs From Quincy

By Joe Esler, Traveling Representative of Moving Picture World.

QUINCY, ILL.—Frank Anarino, of the Savoy Gem staff, has been called to the colors, and is now stationed at Camp Gordon, Georgia.

Joe O'Neill in Service.

Joe O'Neill, of the Quincy theatre, is in the service at Rahe Auto School in Kansas City taking a special course in motor mechanics, and he has progressed so well that he has been appointed an instructor.

Prof. Fischer Moves to Chicago.

Prof. Carl Fischer, leader of the Orpheum theatre orchestra, will move to Chicago, where he has been offered a place with the Chicago Symphony orchestra and a position on the staff of one of the largest conservatories.

Harris O'Farrell Now Overseas.

Harris O'Farrell, a member of the famous O'Farrell Bros. orchestra, is now overseas with a detachment of the Great Lakes band.

Sidney Hausman in Navy.

Sidney Hausman has joined the navy, and has been assigned to the Great Lakes training station band.

Moberly Theatre Has Five Stars.

The Grand theatre, Corbett and Truit, managers, at Moberly, Mo., is one of the honor theatres to book "Pershings' Crusaders." The service flag of the theatre has five stars now—H. Lingo has gone to Camp Travis, H. E. Stevens, to Ft. Sill, Aubrey Jordan is "over there," so is James Watterson and Eddie Hines.

Tom Robey Likes Army Life.

Tom Robey, treasurer of the Orpheum, left with the last draft quota for Camp Gordon, Georgia. He writes friends he likes army life, and is getting fat on army chow and hard work they give him.

Notes of the Trade.

It is expected the Orpheum theatre will open this month with pictures and vaudeville.

Highland Park, the premier summer resort, is showing free movies to their patrons, and have booked several features for this month's display.

Ed. Kuse is managing the Dreamland at Warsaw, Ill., and using a Paramont and Triangle program.

The Hall theatre at Columbia, Mo., is featuring Artcraft and Triangle programs to its patrons.

The Princess theatre at Moberly, Mo., has been closed for the season.

Seattle Trade Letter

By S. J. Anderson, East Seattle, Wash.

Some Recent Film Shows.

SEATTLE, WASH.—"The Finger of Justice" has been drawing such unprecedented crowds to the Rex theatre for the last two weeks that John Hamrick has decided to hold it over for a third week, even if he has to pay for the film rental and advertising of other exhibitors who have booked it for that time.

Everett, Wash.—Everett was one of the smaller cities of the country where "The Unbeliever" was put over in a really big way and where the results fully justified the effort. S. P. Totten, manager of the Star, where the feature was booked to run, arranged to have ten marines come over and sent them around town in two automobiles firing blank cartridges. Immediately telephone inquiries began pouring into the newspaper offices and the theatre as to what it was all about. The results were capacity business for the theatre, $300 for the Smoke Fund—and the loss of the operator, who hurried into Seattle the first thing next morning in order to be the first to enlist in the Marine Corps from Everett.

Wenatchee, Wash.—The Wenatchee theatre has been turned into a home of motion pictures exclusively. F. L. Stannard, who took over the theatre last fall and who operates the Gem, a motion picture house, says that he wishes he had dropped vaudeville when he first took charge of the Wenatchee. He reports a record business at the latter theatre with "My Four Years in Germany" and says that he is going to make a specialty of films of that nature at this theatre.

Seattle, Wash.—The entire eight reels which compose the program at the Strand this week are released through Pathe. The feature is a Pathe special, "More Trouble," featuring Frank Keenan. Then there is a Pathe comedy, a Pathe scenic and the British official war film "Britain's Bulwarks."

Seattle Exchange Notes.

Herman Wobber, western division manager of Paramount-Artcraft, spent the latter part of last week at the Seattle office. D. K. Shanks, auditor from the San Francisco office, returned with Mr. Wobber.

Tom North, western division manager for Pathe, went to Portland a few days ago on an inspection trip. He will return to Seattle before proceeding to his headquarters in San Francisco.

L. A. Todd, who has opened the Parex office at 2022 Third avenue, announces that the selling campaign of William L. Sherry Service is already well launched in the Pacific Northwest. W. W. Armstrong, who has had a great deal of experience as a salesman in this territory, has been employed as salesman out of this office.

A. H. Huot, formerly assistant manager of the Seattle Fox office, has transferred his allegiance to the Select office to serve in the same capacity.

Take Some Change in W. S. S.

Higher Admissions in Detroit Probable

Exhibitors See Necessity of Getting on a War Basis at Once—Salaries and Other Expenses Are Going Up.

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

DETROIT, MICH.—If ever in the history of the motion picture industry exhibitors were required to study their business and to adjust themselves to new conditions it is right now. With the proposed increases in admission taxes as well as increased taxes for exhibitors themselves, it is very essential that exhibitors immediately prepare to "get on a war basis." This is no time for thinking of the past; there is only one thing left for exhibitors to do and that is to act quick. If their scale of prices needs boosting there should be no hesitancy to boost. The public will pay the boost—they expect to pay increased prices to the theatres just the same as they are paying it to the baker, coalman, groceryman and everybody else. Why should the exhibitor think his prices should remain still when his own cost of business is increasing?

In Detroit the union motion picture operators are demanding increased wages of 16 to 17 per cent. The present scale expires on August 31, and the new wage scale is to be effective September 1. The increase will amount to approximately $5 per week. To the John H. Kunsky Enterprises, with its ten theatres, the increase will amount to in the course of the next twelve months of from $2,500 to $3,000.

Everything the exhibitor buys or owns will cost him more.

It's the exhibitors' next move. We sincerely hope that no Michigan exhibitor will hope to stay in business and leave 1917 and 1918 prices unchanged. It simply cannot be done.

What's the outlook for fall? many people in the film business ask.

Summing up the situation as we see it, there is no cause for alarm. The country is prosperous—no one can deny that—the various cities of importance are pretty well filled up with war orders—wages were never higher and they will be still higher in the fall. People must have amusement, and where is there any cheaper amusement than motion pictures. Theatres are giving better attractions than ever before, so even if prices are slightly advanced people are certainly not going to give up their cheapest and best entertainment, are they?

Exhibitors have it within themselves to make business good or bad—depending on whether they are good showmen.

McElroy Believes in Specials.

Blair McElroy, of Fitzpatrick & McElroy, who operate extensively in Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin, was a Detroit visitor on August 3. "Mac" was accompanied by Mr. Miller, the architect and construction manager for the circuit. "This fall the picture business will be a day-to-day proposition and the exhibitor will have to be on his guard every minute," said Mr. McElroy. He must watch himself and not tie up his theatres too solidly in order that he can have time to play the numbers of big specials which will be on the market. Fox, Metro, Kleine and the rest will have specials to offer.

Educational Film Moves.

Harry Abbott, representing the Educational Film Corporation, has moved his offices to 602 Film building. The entire work of distributing Educational films will be up to the Standard, while the selling will be entirely up to Mr. Abbott.

State Film Again Changes Hands.

The State Film Company, Film building, Detroit, formerly owned by Co. W. S. Butterfield—sold later to Messrs. Jack Ryder and Peter L. Smith—has been sold again to Samuel Ludwig, of the Victor Film Company, who has already taken possession. "Civilization," "The Masque of Life," "A Mormon Maid" and "The Deemster" are a few of the pictures owned by the State Film Company.

Items Worth a Glance.

George Lightman, recently of Cleveland, succeeds G. Cliffe Reid as Detroit manager for the Parex Film Corporation, which leases William L. Sherry pictures.

M. W. McGee, managing director of the Majestic theatre, Detroit, has returned from an extended motor trip and is now seriously considering first-run pictures for the coming season.

The principal circuit of theatres in Michigan are operated by the following: Butterfield Circuit, John H. Kunsky Enterprises, Fitzpatrick & McElroy, Delft Theatres, Inc.; Warren & Cohen, Scram Amusement Co., Consolidated Theatres, Inc., and Woodward Amusement Co.

H. A. Ross, Detroit manager for Artcraft-Paramount, was on a motor trip the week ending August 3, accompanied by George W. Weeks, special representative.

Nashville Trade Letter

By J. G. Stahlman, care of The Banner, Nashville, Tenn.

Films Prove Their Value.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—Not to every mother who has given a son to her country's service is given the opportunity to see the pride of her heart receive a decoration for valorous service with the American expeditionary forces, or witness him at play behind the lines or get a glimse of "sonny boy" taking a shot at the Kaiser's hordes with one of the pretty little French 75s.

But such opportunity has been afforded several Nashville war mothers who have sons serving with Gen. Pershing's force overseas.

During the showing of some war scenes in connection with the Hearst-Pathe weekly at a local picture house recently Mrs. Edward Buford saw her son, Lieut. Edward Buford, Jr., of the American air forces, receive the decoration of the distinguished service cross.

Last week at the Princess theatre Mrs. Charles L. Hughes was watching a bunch of American engineers doing lots of heavy work, including fighting in France—all in the pictures—and suddenly the audience was startled by the cry "There's Shelley!"

There on the screen was Lieut, Shelley G. Hughes, her son, now serving with the American force overseas.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller Dismukes and their friends enjoyed seeing Private John Dismukes of the Rainbow division playing with a squirrel, his company mascot, behind the lines in France, just after they had read in Associated Press despatches of "Dizzy's" splendid work in nailing three Boche snipers during a daring trench raid in broad open daylight.

Dallas Hippodrome Taken Over by Hulsey

Owner of Ten Theatres in Various Texas Towns Now Has a Third Dallas House—Will Be Devoted to Big Films.

By Philip Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Tex.

DALLAS, TEX.—E. H. Hulsey, who owns ten theatres in various Texas cities, has added another to his string. In addition to the Old Mill and the Queen theatres in Dallas he has taken over the Hippodrome.

The Hippodrome closed down during the last week in July, and a big petition was started by Dallas merchants and business men asking Mr. Hulsey not to allow this magnificent play house to stand with closed doors. They promised him every support possible.

Hulsey accordingly announced the opening of the Hippodrome under his management for August 10. The theatre will be devoted to big feature films, and in the winter season may put on some high class road shows. The opening attraction was D. W. Griffith's "The Great Love." Admission prices for such features are 50 cents and 25 cents. There is a special orchestra. "Italy's Flaming Front" will follow as a second film feature. The theatre will have no definite schedule as to the length of showing films. They may be run a week, two weeks, or even longer.

Three Dallas Theatres Remodelling.

Dallas has three theatres in process of remodeling for opening in August. The Majestic, which shows pictures with vaudeville, will have been entirely remodeled, with a new foyer and lobby, before the end of the month. The Jefferson will have a new lobby, and will soon be ready for business.

The Princess, owned by William Nevills, was slightly damaged by fire during the first week in August, and is being remodeled for immediate opening.

Another moving picture fire took place at Orange, Texas, on the last day of July, when a blaze started in the operator's booth of the Airdome at that city. The audience stampeded, and two men were slightly burned and three bruised and injured. Damage to the theatre was small. Repairs are being made.

Drouth Hurts Theatre Business.

The drouth situation in west Texas, where there has been only one good rain in the past three years, is becoming more and more serious. Moving picture business has been hard hit in many small towns. Sweetwater and Midland, Texas, have closed their picture shows owing to drouth conditions. Business dwindled to practically nothing.

At El Paso and other border cities the moving picture business is bad owing to the fact that the border is closed because of the war.

George Bell, Jr., Married.

George Bell, Jr., of the Strand and Palace theatres, Galveston, visited film row in Dallas early in August on his honeymoon tour. He married Miss J. McCarty, daughter of a well known Galveston banker. Bell, after a visit to New Orleans and other Southern points, will go to Washington, D. C., with his wife, where he will enter military service.

Leo Rideout at Camp Mabry.

Leo Rideout, formerly associated with his father, L. Rideout, in the management of the Star theatre, Denison, is in training at Camp Mabry, Austin, Texas. He is taking a course in automobile mechanics. Mr. and Mrs. L. Rideout were visitors in Dallas early in August, as they motored to south Texas to see their soldier son.

Lady Managers Visit Film Row.

There were lots of lady managers visiting film row, Dallas, early in August. The women exhibitors in Texas are setting the men a merry pace when it comes to progressive ideas. Among those looking over the big stuff were Mrs. Lon Bacon, of the Pastime theatre, Itasca, who booked "A Dog's Life" and the other Chaplin releases.

Mrs. T. S. Brockman, of the Queen theatre, McKinney, booked "Pershing's Crusaders," so did Mrs. Henry Oscar, of the Queen at Calvert.

New Texas Theatres and Changes.

Joe Davenport, of Waxahachie, will open his new Dixie theatre about September 1.

The Ellenay theatre, owned by Louis and Andres, at El Paso is almost completed. It will be one of the finest theatres in the Southwest. It will open late in September.

C. W. A. McCormick, of the Crescent theatre, Austin, has taken over the Majestic theatre, of that city, which he is now operating as a moving picture house.

P. C. Crown, of Houston, is building a new moving picture theatre at San Antonio with 400 seats.

Army Buys Camp Travis Theatre.

The Majestic theatre at Camp Travis, San Antonio, has been purchased by the United States Government for $32,000, and will be operated hereafter by the War Entertainment Commission, so Col. R. C. Williams, commanding officer at Camp Travis, announces. Pictures will be shown and other acts as obtainable. The theatre was built by the Interstate Amusement Company at a cost of $50,000.

Business and Personal Notes.

Harry Owens, of Paramount, is back from California, where he spent two weeks at his company's studios.

Lewis B. Remy, of Goldwyn is back from a two weeks' tour of Texas, which took him from the Panhandle to the border.

J. B. Dugger, of Vitagraph, has returned from a branch managers' meeting at Kansas City.

J. B. Dugger, of Vitagraph, has received many letters from exhibitors in the North and East asking for information regarding business conditions in Mexico. An article in the Moving Picture World mentioning Mr. Dugger's name recently dealt with the Mexican situation.

Hodkinson Men Active.

Hoyt G. Morrow has been appointed special representative for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. He will have his desk in the offices of the General Film Company.

John A. Stevenson, district manager for the Hodkinson Corporation, has left Dallas for San Antonio. He is busy exploiting their new Plaza brand of pictures.

T. F. McTyer, general manager of the General, will be in Dallas for a couple of weeks. He is assisting Smiling Jimmy Kelly move into the new General offices.

Exhibitors Visit Film Row.

Among Texas exhibitors seen along Dallas film row early in August were

B. C. Bell, of the Gem theatre, Palestine.
A. Mendel, Princess, Galveston.
William Epstein, Strand, Laredo, who was on his way home from New York.
R. L. Palmer, of the Liberty, Ranger.
H. Walliston, Princess, Arlington.
Billy Batsel, Queen, Sherman.
L. E. Carey, Victory, Houston.

Iowa Trade News Letter.

Theatres Community Singing.

DES MOINES, IA.—Community singing is meeting with big success in the Garden theatre. Harry Murrison has charge of the music. Four times daily, assisted by the orchestra and pipe organ, he exhorts the audiences to sing war songs and the old favorites.

Hiersteiner Managing a Theatre.

Harry Hiersteiner, formerly roadman for Mutual and Paramount in Iowa, is acting as manager of the Family theatre for J. Miloslowsky.

W. L. Myers Gets Married.

W. L. Myers, manager of the Waterloo Plaza, having taken over that house recently for J. E. Hostettler, is receiving congratulations on his marriage to Miss Eleanor Watts. Under Mr. Myers' progressive management the Plaza is enjoying excellent business.

Frudenfeld Gets Managerial Job.

Arthur Frudenfeld, former manager of the Majestic in Waterloo, has been named general manager of the Columbia and American theatres at Davenport and of the Palace in Moline, Ill., just across the river. Mr. Frudenfeld announces that high grade first run pictures will be offered at the American, vaudeville and short subjects supplying the policy of the other two theatres.

Abe Kahn Joins Blank Forces.

Abe Kahn, for the past year with Select Pictures of Omaha, has resigned for the A. H. Blank Enterprises. Kahn is one of the most capable and best liked film men in the state and is bringing in his usual good results in his new connection.

Varsity Theatre Changes Hands.

Messrs. Clemmer and Windelow, proprietors of the Varisty theatre, have answered the call of Uncle Sam and have disposed of their house to J. G. Howe.

Interesting Local Jottings.

M. J. Frisch has returned from the Universal convention in Chicago and announces the promotion of Miss Atta Weil to the position of cashier, made vacant in the Universal office through the drafting of Billy Swain, who held this position four years. Manager Frisch immediately got out into the territory and spent several days in eastern Iowa in the interests of Jewel productions.

L. A. Sheridan, manager of the Pathe office, is doing road work during the shortage of representatives out of that office, three men having been called to the colors during the past month. District Manager Ralph Proctor of Chicago was in conference with Sheridan the first of the week.

Show business has kept running at full speed all summer, the picture houses playing to capacity and the Orpheum reopening on Aug. 11, three weeks earlier than usual. More than 50,000 rookies are in training at Camp Dodge which is close by, and it is estimated that the transient population of the city is more than 30,000 weekly.

Manager Skirboll of Metro has been in New York attending the annual meeting of Metro managers.

J. C. Collins, road man in western Iowa for the A. H. Blank Enterprises, is covering his territory in a new Dodge roadster.

"The Geezer of Berlin" did turnaway business at the Garden four days recently, being topped on a bill that included several other features.

Des Moines Small Items.

Visitors at Des Moines film exchanges during the past week included R. J. Relf of the Star, Decorah, Gus Wilke of Elkader, Saul and Son of the Irving, Carroll Louis Rosenfield of the Temple-Grand, Creston.

Grace Clark DeGraff, prominent soprano, is an addition to the musical program at the Rialto. Miss DeGraff is very popular locally.

Taking advantage of the recent assassination of the former Czar, "The Fall of the Romanoffs," the Herbert Brenon production, is booking rapidly. It is being shown second run at the Royal, Des Moines, and at the Herrold theater at Camp Dodge simultaneously.

Philadelphia Trade Letter

By F. V. Armato, North Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Hardcastle Takes Kleine Desk.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.—"Ted" Hardcastle, formerly special representative of the Chicago territory for the George Kleine system, has arrived in Philadelphia to take charge of the local office, thereby succeeding R. Berger, who left for Camp Lee, Petersburg, Va., where he will enter the officers' training camp.

Mr. Hardcastle assumed his new duties in the highest of spirits and looks forward to the fall season with great confidence. John Phelan, formerly of Pathe, has been appointed as the new booker.

Gallant Marine Pays Visit.

J. F. Flynn, formerly manager of the Peerless Exchange, who recently enlisted in the U. S. Marines, arrived in Philadelphia last week and paid his last visit to the boys along film row before being shipped off. He is greatly delighted with the prospect of taking an ocean voyage.

Oscar Bower Joins Select.

Oscar Bower, formerly manager of the Goldwyn exchange, has joined the forces of the Select and is meeting with success throughout the Pennsylvania territory. George Walsh of the Strand theatre, in Scranton, played Clara Kimball Young in "The Claw" last week for two days, and reports excellent business. George Morris, manager of the Savoy theatre, in Wilkes-Barre, also did surprisingly well during the past week on the same feature.

Exchange and Theatre Notes.

G. Schwartz, formerly of the World, has been appointed as the new booker of the Select Exchange.

George M. Kruper, manager of the Hamilton theatre, in Lancaster, became the happy father of a brand new baby boy and has been celebrating the event all week.

B. Tolmas, formerly manager of the Mutual, who is now representing the Peerless, was given a most cordial reception upon the event of his last visit to Mr. Krupa's theatre on account of having broken all records with "My Four Years In Germany," a Peerless production which was presented for an entire week, and for which a three-days' additional booking was given.

Al Widner, formerly manager of the Vitagraph's Washington branch, has joined the Peerless sales force and is already on his way up through the state.

The Victoria theatre opened to tremendous crowds Monday, despite the terrific heat, with the first presentation of "To Hell With the Kaiser," which has been booked for the entire week of August 5. Joe Cohen, manager of the Allegheny theatre, after viewing "To Hell With the Kaiser" at the Metro's projection rooms, immediately gave a week's booking and announced that he intended to play this production a week ahead of his regular schedule.

The Week's Film Notes from the Northwest

H. J. Bayley, Former Minneapolis Vitagraph Manager, Returns as Head of Hodkinson Exchange—Other Notes and Changes.

By John L. Johnston, 719 Hennepin Avenue, Minneapolis, Minn.

MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.—Another former Minneapolis exchange manager, H. J. Bayley, is a "come back," we have just learned. He was Greater Vitagraph manager here and more recently Goldwyn manager at Chicago; he has returned to this city and will become manager of the Hodkinson exchange. P. N. Brinch, personal representative for Mr. Hodkinson, and Mr. Bayley arrived in Minneapolis several days ago and they expect to have the Hodkinson service plan well established in this territory within a few weeks.

G. W. Malone Takes New Job.

George W. "Governor" Malone has come mighty near having "his pitcher in the papers" several times, but with this issue he succeeds. And, there's a reason. "Govie" has left the local Mutual exchange, with which he has been connected for about eight months, to become special representative for S. S. Hutchinson's Fisher-Minter-Russell productions hereafter to be distributed through the local Pathe exchange. He is one of the best known and most aggressive film salesmen in the territory. He should make a success of his new position, for he has learned a good deal about Fisher-Minter-Russell during his eight months with Mutual.

George W. Malone.

J. A. Stanley on Way to France.

James A. Stanley, one of the first cameramen for the Lochren Film Corp., has joined the cinematographic division of the United States army and is now en route to France. Every film and slide cameraman Lochren has had in three years is now in service. These men are: J. A. Stanley, Fred Place, H. C. Brown, G. C Johnston, Earle Slye, Arthur Lund and Herbert Oslund.

Walter Strauss Joines Elliott-Sherman.

Walter Strauss, previously connected with the salesforce of the Westcott exchange, has joined the Elliott-Sherman exchange and will look after "Mothers of Liberty," "Garden of Allah," "Ramona" and "The Birth of a Nation" in the Minnesota territory.

Northwest Trade Jottings.

Manager A. H. Fisher of the Minneapolis Metro exchange has returned from a meeting of Metro exchange managers at New York optimistic.

E. S. Holmes, manager of the local Vitagraph exchange, has returned to his desk after a week's absence. While out of the city, Mr. Holmes attended a meeting of Western Vitagraph managers at Kansas City and also spent two days in Chicago. During his absence John P. Steinson was in charge of the office.

Manager Nelson, of the Sherry exchange, has announced that he has contracts for the showing of three Sherry pictures at the Minneapolis Shubert one week each. Catherine Calvert in "The Romance of the Underworld," Doris Kenyon in "The Street of Seven Stars" and "Out of the Night" will be shown at Manager Niggermeyer's theatre.

Harry Hollander, brother of W. K. Hollander, Chicago Daily News critic, has joined the Minneapolis Westcott Film exchange. Mr. Hollander is to succeeed Tom Burke as manager of the exchange, Mr. Burke having joined the army. Mr. Hollander is much of the same type of film man that is Mr. Burke, popular, always smiling, possessing a wide knowledge of film business and with a record for square dealing. Mr. Burke has brought the Westcott exchange up into the front ranks among the west's independent film exchanges within two years and he has many friends that will miss him, but who hope he will return soon.

Dan Donnelan, ever smiling, good natured, hardworking manager of the Mutual exchange, is out hustling these days and is booking the Outing-Chester Scenics in the best theatres of the territory.

R. L. Hewitt, for over two years manager of the Unicorn or American Standard exchange, holding the record for managing one local exchange longer than any other, has resigned and will soon take up Y. M. C. A. work abroad, according to reports. Mr. Hewitt's leaving makes Harry Rathner of the Select exchange the oldest "one-exchange" man in the city.

Three Ruben & Finkelstein Theatres, Minneapolis.

Strand. New Garrick. New Lyric.

Exhibitor "Pulls" a Novel Stunt.

Woodstock, N. B.—The Hayden Gibson theatre at Woodstock, under the capable management of S. C. Hurley, introduced something of a novelty last Saturday afternoon. To the children bringing the best arranged bunch of wild flowers a button of the Navy League and a membership in that league were presented. To others theatre tickets were presented. A display of the flowers was made on the stage for the evening performance, and later they were sent to the hospital.

How Film Shows Solve Managers' Problems

Savoy Theatre at Hamilton, Ontario, Quits Burlesque Policy for Pictures—Grand at Peterboro Also Turns to Films.

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Winerva Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

TORONTO, ONT.—There will be no burlesque in Hamilton, Ont., during the coming year because the Savoy theatre, the "home of burlesque" in that city, has decided to continue with moving pictures after a successful summer film season. Manager Stroud of the Savoy has been competing with several other large local film theatres all summer and he has come to the belief that pictures are the real tonic for his house. He has been changing programmes twice each week and his prices have been as follows: Matinees, 10c. and 15c.; evenings, 10c., 15c. and 25c. He has been using a seven-piece orchestra all summer. Two shows are being given daily, one at 2.15 and the other at 7.15 P. M.

A similar situation is found in Peterboro, Ont., with the Grand Opera House. This theatre has made a specialty of playing all the road shows available, but Manager Turner is now having the theatre remodeled and redecorated for the presentation of continuous picture shows. His future policy will be to book only an occasional road attraction. The Grand is being changed under the direction of William Dineen of Toronto.

Theatre Darkens for Six Weeks.

After a run of the Artcraft feature, "Shark Monroe," the Province theatre, one of Winnipeg's largest, closed on Saturday, August 3, for a period of six week during which time the whole house is to be reconstructed and renovated. The Province has been in operation for seven years, and has been consistently successful. Announcement is made that the Bijou and Gaiety theatres, of Winnipeg, controlled by the same interests, will present the bookings of the Province theatre during the time that improvements are being made in the Province.

Theatre Tries Special Free Admissions.

The Empire theatre, Saskatoon, Sask., operated by the Groves-Walker Company, Limited, adopted an interesting policy for a period of six weeks starting Monday, July 29, to meet hot weather conditions. Programs are being changed three times each week, and shows are presented continuously each week day from 1 p. m. to 11 p. m. Each program consists of a five-reel feature, a two-reel reissue, and a one-reel comedy reissue. Admission prices range from 5 cents to 15 cents at all times of the day, and special provision is made for the free admission of women and children at special hours.

All children under twelve years of age, when accompanied by parents, are admitted free every afternoon, while all lady patrons are admitted without charge between 7 and 7:30 each evening.

Y Shows Kill Camp Theatres.

A very unusual situation prevails at Niagara-on-the-Lake, Ontario, where several thousand Canadian and Polish soldiers are in training for overseas duty.

Three theatres were opened by Toronto people at Niagara soon after the military camp was restarted last June. One of the three houses, the Kitchener theatre, is a large permanent terra cotta structure operated by Mrs. Norris, of Toronto. Another is a large wooden theatre known as the Strand, which has been managed by William Dineen. The third is a large black topped tent, the manager of which is Stanley Adams, of Toronto. This is known as the "Carry On," and Mr. Adams secured permission to erect his stand inside the camp lines.

The three theatres were doing good business until criticism was leveled at the Y. M. C. A. by the public in general. It was charged that the Y. M. C. A. had become a profit-grabbing institution. The association thereupon made several changes in policy, and one of the moves was to start a moving picture tent, the admission to which was free. Business at the "legitimate" picture houses immediately fell flat, and they may have to close.

The Strand has turned to stock burlesque in order to provide something different to the Y. M. C. A. show, but the other two civilian theatres are sticking to pictures.

New Allen Theatre in Regina.

The new theatre of Jules and J. J. Allen, the Canadian theatre magnates, in Regina, Sask., will be ready about December 1. The Allens have signed a ten-year lease for the property, which is at Broad street and Eleventh avenue. The theatre will cost about $50,000 when completed, and will have a seating capacity for about 1,200 people.

Sam Bloom Adds Another.

Sam Bloom has added a fourth theatre to his string of houses in Toronto. His latest is the King George theatre at Bloor and Bathurst streets. Mr. Bloom became an exhibitor about five years ago with the Academy, a 450-seat theatre in West Toronto. Not long ago he secured the Moss Park theatre at 225 Queen street east, and later the Crescent at 3265 Dundas street west.

Both the Moss Park and Crescent theatres were classed as bloomers before Mr Bloom took hold of them, but now they are blooming with all the signs of prosperity.

Making Patrons Forget Hot Weather.

Manager Crang, of the Oakwood theatre, Toronto's largest suburban theatre, is mixing things up in a successful effort to make people forget about the weather. He has made use of contests, presented various vocal artists, and has made it a point to secure the very best available attractions on the film market.

Another recent stunt was the taking of moving pictures of all the mothers and children attending a matinee performance. These pictures were shown all during the week of August 5 in addition to the regular program.

Baltimore Trade Letter

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

Two Big Benefit Performances.

BALTIMORE, MD.—Through the courtesy of George A. McDermott, resident manager of Loew's Hippodrome theatre, and Charles E. and John T. Ford, co-proprietors of Ford's opera house, two monster benefit performances were held in these playhouses on Sunday night, August 4. Both theatres were packed to the doors and the meetings were conducted under the auspices of the Baltimore Conference for Palestine Restoration. About $175,000 was taken in at the meetings, which marked the opening of the drive for the sale of $1,000,000 worth of War Savings Stamps, to be bought by Baltimore's Jewish residents.

Big Picnic Scheduled.

The big moving picture fan picnic which has been arranged by the Maryland Exhibitors' League through the untiring activities of President Frank A. Hornig and Secretary L. A. DeHoff, is scheduled to take place at Monument Park, Baltimore, on Saturday night, August 10. The stars who are to honor the event by being present according to plans now completed are: Kitty Gordon, Olive Tell, June Caprice, Florence Reid, Hale Hamilton and Edward Earle.

Price Entertains Viola Dana.

Viola Dana appeared personally at Loew's Hippodrome theatre, Eutaw and Baltimore streets, on Monday, August 5, in connection with her production "Opportunity."

Red Moon to Close.

The Red Moon theatre, 20 West Baltimore street, which might be considered one of the pioneer houses of Baltimore, will close down on Saturday, August 31, as it has been purchased by the Caswell Hotel Company. George Benjamin, well known in film circles of Baltimore, has managed this theatre for the past two years and took hold of it at a time when it was not a good proposition, and by skillful booking and showmanship built up a fine patronage.

Plays to Big Houses.

On the strength of the big run which "To Hell With the Kaiser" had at Ford's opera house during the week of July 29, Charles E. Ford, manager of that theatre, booked it for a second full week's run beginning August 5. Arthur B. Price, Baltimore Metro representative, has been handling this feature.

Blue Mouse Improved.

The Blue Mouse theatre, 28 West Lexington street, of which Max Covelerchek is the proprietor, is being greatly improved. The interior is being redecorated and rearranged and the lobby will be changed. It is understood that when it reopens on Monday, August 19, Ben Abrams, who for some time represented Hoffman Foursquare pictures and later another distributing company, will pilot the affairs of this house.

Out-of-Town Benefit.

Westminster, Md.—Arthur Stonesifer, proprietor of the Opera House, in this city, gave a moving picture and minstrel show for the benefit of the Red Cross at this playhouse on Monday night, August 5. The performance was a great success and the house was crowded to the doors.

Blue-Grass Trade Letter

By Ohio Valley News Service.

BIG STONE GAP, VA.—The Amuzu theatre, of Big Stone Gap, which is on the border between Kentucky and West Virginia, has just recently installed a large electrical pipe organ secured and installed through Sterchi Brothers, of Knoxville. Manager J. R. Taylor is much pleased with the instrument and the way the public has taken to it.

Louisville, Ky.—The Strand theatre, co-operating with the Red Cross, has been showing the picture "The Making of a Nurse," used in the drive to secure 25,000 nurses and 750 student nurses from Kentucky. The picture is shown under the auspices of the Woman's Committee, National Council of Defense, and the local Red Cross Nursing Committee.

Louisville, Ky.—M. Switow, of Louisville, while not as big an operating exhibitor as he was a few years ago, still has five theatres under his control, these being the Kozy, of Louisville; Casino, Louisville; Dream, Jeffersonville; Grand and Kerrigan, New Albany. Mr. Switow recently operated the Shawnee theatre, but dropped it when his lease expired.

Louisville, Ky.—The Big Features Right Corporation is planning to move a part of its exchange operations from the third to the second floor of the Novelty theatre building, and to use the third floor principally for storage purposes.

Hopkinsville, Ky.—M. L. Stockley, of the Princess theatre, which was recently burned, reports that the new building is well under way, and the Crescent Amusement Company, of Nashville, expects to start operations in the new building about September 15.

Bowling Green, Ky.—J. P. Masters, manager of the local house of the Crescent Amusement Company, is expected back shortly from a much needed vacation.

Notes From Maritime Provinces

By Alice Fairweather, "Standard," St. John, N. B.

ST. JOHN, N. B.—The Exchange Managers' Association of the Maritime Provinces has received a letter from the executive of the Martime Provinces Exhibitors' League in answer to the communication from the association stating their aims and objects, with a copy of their constitution. The president of the association states that the Exhibitors' League is entirely in sympathy with the aims of the association, and feels sure they will meet with the approval of the N. S. Board of Censors.

A meeting of the association will be held about the middle of August, at which the theatre managers will be asked to be present.

Wall's Successor Not Yet Appointed.

Halifax, N. S.—No successor to A. H. Wall, of the N. S. Board of Censors, has as yet been appointed. A. H. Flynn has been filling the position most acceptably, and would be the logical choice, as he worked with Mr. Wall for some time.

Films Invalided Soldiers' Quarters.

The publicity representative of the Invalided Soldiers' Commission at Ottawa, Mr. Senior, has been recently in Nova Scotia with a motion picture camera operator taking pictures of the provision made for returned tubercular soldiers. Many views of the sanitorium at Kentville were taken, and among those filmed at Halifax were views of a class of soldiers at the Maritime College qualifying to be bookkeepers. The picturization is being done for Henry Ford, and at his expense.

Daily Co-operates with Theatre.

Halifax, N. S.—The Daily Echo and the Majestic theatre are co-operating in an advertising scheme. The paper issues a scholar's coupon which, with seven cents, admits any child under 15 years to any matinee of motion pictures at the Majestic theatre. This price included the Government tax.

McArthur Manages Remodeled Lyceum.

Charlottetown, P. E. I.—The old Lyceum theatre on Prince street has been thoroughly renovated, and has been opened under the management of H. H. McArthur, formerly of St. John. The Charlottetown "Guardian" says that the theatre will "exhibit the biggest and best motion pictures that money and experience can produce at the lowest admission fee consistent with success, which will be 5 and 10 cents," and "the management states positively that no matter how big the picture attraction may be there will be no increase in prices."

Among the St. John Exchanges.

Talking with R. G. March, of the Specialty Film Import, who has just returned from a trip along the South Shore line, he says that business is very dull down that way. The houses complain that, owing to a variety of causes, they find it pretty difficult to fill the theatres. Mr. March contracted for the Pathe pictures with C. E. Staples, St. Stephens; H. W. Chase, of the King Street theatre, St. Andrews, and B. B. Jordan, of the Opera House, McAdam. The official British War Pictures was taken by six exhibitors. Mr. March is taking this picture out with him on his next trip through Nova Scotia.

A campaign for the benefit of the Navy League is being carried on throughout the Maritime Provinces, and the Specialty Film Import, with their well known generosity, are furnishing naval views to be shown in connection with this campaign. For almost every patriotic show which has been given in St. John at least one of the films have been donated by the Pathe firm. The Canadian Universal have furnished several films, and the Regal also.

Edward Teale has been appointed manager at the Metro-Regal office handling both exchanges. He expects a visit shortly from J. J. Ungar, the general manager, and later on, when the new policy is introduced, says there will be "lots doing."

Buffalo Trade News of the Past Week

Older Owners of Buffalo Theatres Getting Ready for Possible Draft Call—Notes from the Exchanges and Theatres.

By J. A. McGuire, 216 Carolina St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Older Film Men Getting Ready.

BUFFALO, N. Y.—Several Buffalo and western New York exhibitors who are bachelors as well as true patriots, are already figuring on paper what they will do with their theatres in case they (the proprietors) are called to the colors by the proposed raising of the draft age to 45 years. The film men claim that while they have always feared the unerring shafts of the diminutive Cupid they will be willing to face unswervingly the "shots and shells of the Huns."

The new draft ruling will take thousands of moving picture devotees away from points in this territory.

"The president of a draft board in Syracuse told me that the 18 to 45 year plan will affect 35,000 men in that city," said the manager of a Buffalo film exchange. "Based on the same ratio the number of men to be taken out of Buffalo will probably be upward of 100,000."

H. E. Lotz Now with Fox.

H. E. Lotz, former manager of the Triangle, Buffalo, was a caller. Mr. Lotz recently resigned as special representative of that company to accept a similar position with the Fox Film.

Five-Cent Houses Getting Scarce.

It looks as if five-cent moving picture shows will be scarce as admirers of the Kaiser in the Buffalo territory. The Government's proposal to double the seat and admission taxes at the theatres indicates that the public will soon have to pay more money to patronize the picture houses. Even now such signs in front of theatres, "The Greatest Show on Earth at Five Cents," exist only in memory. Gradually the "blood and thunder, something for nothing" tactics which used to be a thorn in the side of legitimate showmanship seem to have been pushed into the background in Buffalo these days. The old-time flaring signs that formerly ensnared the crowds of film lovers seems to have lost their edge, so far as the public is concerned. In fact the public is pretty well aware of the upward prices of everything, pictures included, and that so-called philanthropy in the form of "giving something for almost nothing" in the film business is pure fictition.

W. F. Freel at Camp Dix.

William B. Freel, former shipper for the Triangle, Buffalo, was a recent visitor. He is a member of the 153d Depot Brigade, Co. 7, 2d Battallion, Camp Dix.

Buffalo Film Briefs.

T. C. Montgomery, manager of the Triangle, Buffalo, has returned from a trip through the central New York territory. He has just received a welcome letter from his brother, William Montgomery, who is a member of the Motorized Machine Gun Corps in France. The letter also contained a copy of a charmingly-expressed greeting which King George, of England, extended to the soldiers of the United States on their arrival overseas.

Charles Sanwald, auditor of the Modern, New York, is a Buffalo visitor. Charles A. Streimer, manager of the New York office of the Modern, has returned to that city.

The Acme theatre, Syracuse, formerly owned by G. Pelletier, has been taken over by Metzger Bros., who also own the Lincoln theatre, that city.

Emmett Cornell, of the Eckel theatre, Syracuse, is spending his vacation at Saratoga.

"The bookings of 'To Hell with the Kaiser' are coming in so fast," said E. J. Hayes, manager of the Metro, Buffalo, "that we have found it necessary to get three prints of this production."

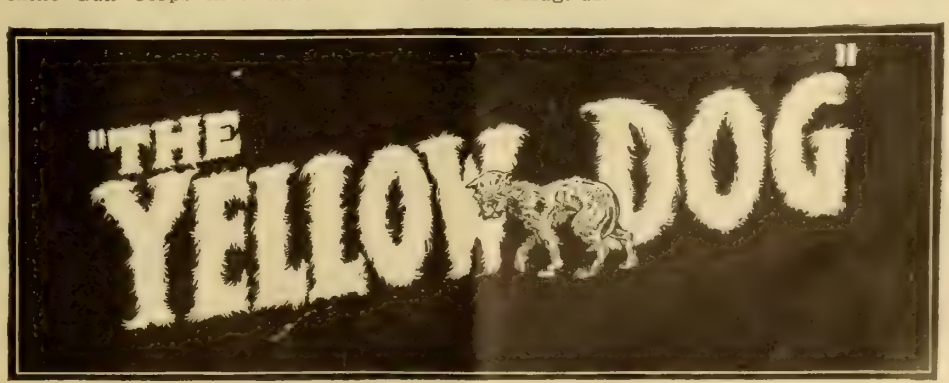
Middle New York Theatre Notes

By C. A. Carroll, Utica Observer, Utica, New York.

Park Theatre Changes Hands.

UTICA, N. Y.—The Park theatre, formerly the Bender, Utica, N. Y., has been leased, according to report, to Goldstein Bros., of Springfield, Mass., owners of a chain of theatres throughout New England. The Park theatre was opened Oct. 8, 1917, by P. A. and J. B. Breglio, of Springfield, Mass., as a high-class picture theatre with a 10-piece orchestra, and concert singers, after a large sum of money had been expended to make it the most beautiful theatre in central New York. After two months, as a result of patronage falling off, the theatre was forced to close, leaving a number of big bills unpaid in this city. Since it closed the house has remained dark, but now that it has been leased it is expected that it will soon be opened.

Up-State Film Jottings.



Utica now has a Rialto theatre. The Colonia, a popular neighborhood house, has been been changed to the former name and is being entirely redecorated for the fall season.

Service flags are now found in the lobbies of the Alhambra and Avon theatres, Utica. Henry Wholahan, formerly operator at the Avon, is now in the aviation service in France, and John Miller and his brother Joseph, both former operators at Alhambra, are now in electrical branch of the U. S. Navy.

Sam Wood Opens Lyceum Theatre.

The Lyceum theatre, Amsterdam, N. Y., was opened Monday, July 29, under the management of Sam Wood, one of the leading merchants of that city. Fox pictures are being used.

"My Four Years in Germany" is to be the attraction at the Avon the entire week of Aug. 12.

Cincinnati Fire Code Inspector Watchful

Operator Found Neglecting His Machine Gets a Fourteen Day Suspension—City Regulations Must Be Observed.

By Kenneth C. Craig, 307 First National Bank, Cincinnati, O.

CINCINNATI, O.—The increasing stringency of the inspection by city authorities of the operation of photoplay houses is indicated by the fact that a short time ago a night inspector reported facts which resulted in the suspension of an operator for fourteen days. The inspector reported that the operator was neglecting his machine, leaving it running under motor drive, although he had previously been warned against the practice.

"This is the first suspension of an operator," said the building commissioner, "but it will not be the last, unless practices contrary to the fire regulations are stopped. It is the beginning of a campaign to see that operators stay with their machines and comply with all safety regulations. We have had a number of fires in operating booths recently, and care will prevent them. The safety of thousands of patrons of moving picture houses is in the hands of operators, and I propose to see that only those who attend to their work properly and intelligently are licensed to operate."

Park Theatre Closes.

Considerable interest attached in Cincinnati moving picture circles to the recent announcement of the closing of the Park theatre, one of the two houses doing business in the center of Hyde Park, leaving the field clear for the exclusive operations of the Erie. Both houses have been successful during the several years they have been in operation in the same block. The property has been sold to a baker, and will be remodeled for his use. The deal includes the space adjoining the theater, which was used as an airdome during the summer months.

Cincinnati Brief Notes.

Manager Charles Weigel, of the Alhambra, Cincinnati, had a most successful week's run of "Ruggles of Red Gap," featuring Taylor Holmes. The popularity of the novel from which the play was made was reflected in the attendance at the West Fifth street house, and accounted for the success of the run, which was longer than Manager Weigel usually cares to handle.

The ever-new feature comedy in which Charles Chaplin and Marie Dressler convulsed the world, "Tillie's Punctured Romance," made a successful reappearance recently in Cincinnati, booked by Manager Tom Corby, of the Star, for two days.

Charles Murphy Opens Theatre.

Wilmington, O.—Charles Murphy, former baseball magnate with the world-famous Cubs, and likewise once known widely as a newspaperman working in Cincinnati, has joined the ranks of moving picture exhibitors, recently opening a handsome theatre here bearing his name. The house is as up to date in every respect as any that can be found in the larger cities and has started off in a manner which gives promise of enduring success for Mr. Murphy in his new capacity.

Cleveland Trade Letter

By M. A. Malaney.

Metro Office Notes.

CLEVELAND, OHIO.—Harry Reavy is in Akron taking a farewell of the exhibitors in that city. Reavy will confine his energies to Cleveland, in the future, and will handle Screen Classics exclusively.

A. Fletcher, who has been representing Metro in the western part of Ohio, will cover Reavy's territory, and F. J. Nugent, who formerly handled "The Re-Making of a Nation," will visit exhibitors in the western section of the state.

Ohio First National to Hold Meeting.

The first meeting of franchise holders of the Ohio First National Circuit, to be held since its organization, is scheduled for September 9 and 10. This announcement was made by President Mandelbaum upon his return to Cleveland from New York last week. Mr. Mandelbaum brought along a lot of information about the future prospects of the circuit and will have more of it by September 1. He left for a two week's vacation at Mt. Clemens, Michigan.

Greenwald Plans Another Picnic.

Frank Greenwald, of the Exclusive Features, Cleveland, was so successful with his recent picnic for film men that he is engineering another, to be held at Avon Beach, the afternoon and evening of August 15.

Bert Diener Sends Greetings.

Word has been received from Bert Diener saying that he is to be found in the managerial chair of the Victor Film Company in Detroit, where he will always have a glad hand extended to all of his Cleveland film friends.

Liebmann Gets Michigan Territory.

Manager Walter R. Liebmann of the Cleveland Parex Film exchange, has received word that henceforth he is to have complete charge of all the Michigan territory, in addition to Ohio, Kentucky and West Virginia, which he is now handling. George Lightman, road representative for Liebmann, has been placed in charge of the branch office in Detroit temporarily until definite arrangements for a resident manager can be made.

Netter Honored by Film Men.

Leon D. Netter, of the Masterpiece Film Attractions, was the honor guest last Saturday of one of the biggest film parties ever pulled off in Cleveland. There were fifty exhibitors and exchange men present, all of them gathered at the Winton Hotel by the common feeling of friendship for Mr. Netter, who has turned over the active operation of his office to George P. Jacobs, while he enters the naval branch of the service. The boys presented Netter with a handsome wrist watch and their best wishes.

Netter left Cleveland for San Francisco on Monday. Jacobs accompanied him as far as Chicago.

Cleveland Business Notes.

"To Hell With the Kaiser" played a week's engagement at the Bank theatre, Akron, and set a new standard for the house, both in attendance and receipts. The house was sold out for every performance.

Jim Dunlevy, manager of the bank, got away with a little free advertising on the picture when he won a "What to Do With the Kaiser?" contest that the Akron Press ran, by answering tersely, "To Hell With the Kaiser." This bit of knowledge of the fitness of things netted Dunlevy a nice new five spot.

"To Hell With the Kaiser" also succeeded in breaking the hoodoo that has surrounded all war pictures presented in Toledo. Manager H. C. Horater of the Alhambra, opened with the Metro picture last Sunday, and reported that he came within a few dollars of reaching his highest mark in the history of the house.

Many members of the local Famous Players closed up shop a Saturday ago and transferred their energies to picnicking. The Cleveland Yacht Club was the scene of the outing, although most of the action took place in the water and on board the yacht Rachel, which Commodore Kirby kindly turned over to the film folks. The evening was devoted to dancing.

Pittsburgh Trade Letter.

By E. J. McCurty, 455 Union Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Theatre Changes in Pennsylvania.

PITTSBURGH, PA.—The Alhambra theatre at Beaver Falls, recently closed by Mr. Hart, has been acquired by the Rowland interests, P. B. Jones, who manages the Rowland and the Colonial in Wilkinsburg, having taken active charge of the theatre. The new company in control consists of Mr. Jones, R. A. Rowland and F. G. McPherson, the latter a resident of Beaver Falls. The name has been changed to the Regent, and it will be remodeled and decorated, and when reopened will be devoted exclusively to pictures. Mr. McPherson will be the resident manager.

The K. & K. theatre on Carson street has been taken over by C. F. Micheals, in partnership with his brother. The theatre was formerly owned by the United Business Men's Association of Western Pennsylvania and has been devoted to stock and tab shows with short pictures. This theatre at one time, under the management of Alex Moore of the Hilltop theatre in Pittsburgh, was a flourishing house.

M. A. Rapp, who owns the Earl theatre at Sharpsburg, will throw his new theatre at Aetna, Pa., open to the public this week and will let the "first-nighters" name the theatre. The new theatre will have a capacity of about 400 and will be modern in every respect. This is the only theatre in the town. Mr. Rapp is one of the oldest exhibitors in the district, having had the Earl and Kathryn theatres in Sharpsburg from time immemorial.

The Rialto theatre on Upper Fifth avenue is having a varied career. This theatre was built by the Rex Amusement Company, of which Marks Browarsky is president. It was sold about four months ago to B. Levine, who at that time was in Class 4 in the draft. The other day he received his summons for examination and was transferred to Class 1. Last week he left for Camp Lee, Va. He hurriedly sold the theatre to Myer Rothschild on Thursday, and on Friday morning an auto-truck backed into the lobby and left nothing but the insurance adjustment as evidence. The theatre is being repaired and will open soon under the management of Peter Alderman, who has been in the business in various capacities for a number of years.

Theodore C. Deitrich, of the De Luxe Pictures, passed through Pittsburgh this week on his way to New Brighton, his home town. His mother still lives there and no doubt Mr. Dietrich spent a very pleasant time. Mr. Dietrich stopped at the Sherry exchange while here to pay his respects to Mr. Lyon, the manager, and to inquire about the success of his pictures. Mr. Dietrich is very well known and is popular in Pittsburgh, having been connected with the Pittsburgh Dispatch for a number of years.

The Boyle theatre at Crafton, which has been closed for some time, has been taken over by M. Janicks, who has had a number of theatres in the past year or two. He is playing all shows two days at 15 cents.

Harry Davis Called to Flag.

The resident manager of the Wonderland on Fifth avenue, one of the Harry Davis circuit, has been called to the colors and his place has been taken by Ted Miller, who has managed a number of successful theatres in the district. Mr. Johns, who has left, was very popular among the film men in the city.

Hatch Film Moves.

The Hatch Film Company has moved from 501 Penn avenue to the new film building at 412 Ferry street. This concern handles the "Whip" and "The Still Alarm" in western Pennsylvania.

"WILD PRIMROSE"

Vitagraph Presents Gladys Leslie in a Really Delightful Screen Offering.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

THE MOVIES would pump into unhindered and ever-increasing popularity if every screen presentation could be as wholesome and entertaining as "Wild Primrose," in which Gladys Leslie is forwarded to expanding fame as a screen star of youthfulness, talent and inherent qualifications. The rare delight attending "Wild Primrose" is the perfect naturalness in which the plot is advanced by players who act utterly human and do logical things under average circumstances. Little matter that the plot is brushed by the far-outstretched hand of coincidence—so many seemingly impossible things happen in real life that pictures, to a reasonable extent, may be expected to find refuge for plot advancement in strange happenings.

Primrose, as interpreted by Miss Leslie, is a Tennessee girl who has just returned from a seminary. Her guardian-uncle tells her, for the first time, how her father, a rich Easterner, married and then neglected her mother for the reason that his bride was not born to "society." Finally he deserted her, and from a broken heart the mother died. The father is now married again—to a woman who has provided him with a grown-up son. The young man has nothing to do but dissipate, and does that well, winding up with a bride on his hands who has induced him to marry her while wine was flowing knee-deep in the valley of their cabaret romance.

The father sends for Primrose, and she decides to masquerade as a wild mountain girl—in fulfillment of her father's estimate of his child as set forth in his letter calling Primrose to New York. Miss Leslie neither insults intelligence nor fails in effect as she proceeds with her masquarade. She never overdoes or underacts her part, and when the time comes to throw off her shell of deceit she blossoms forth as a delight to the eyes and a credit to her entourage.

The plot thickens in due course. The father speculates in stocks, gets into the clutch of a conniving broker, who demands the hand of Primrose as his recompense. This is not all to the ideas Primrose has formed on the marriage question. She likes her father's step-child and worries not about the money end of affairs—for oil has been found on the Tennessee farm her mother owned and Primrose is worth more than the United States loaned to the Russian Government.

Step-son's wife proves to be the renegade spouse of the secretary who has served Primrose's father for years. The broker demands his ransom or threatens ruin to his victim—and then Primrose pours oil on troubled waters. It is regrettable that so many threads of the plot must be drawn together hastily in the concluding scenes—but the result is attained without too much shock to the sensibilities, in a total of entertaining photoplaying.

Carrying so much of the story upon her slender and perfectly "beautiful" shoulders Miss Leslie contrives to be on view most of the time without once becoming an intrusion. Her manner is so natural, her artistry so deft and her presence so entirely agreeable that one is glad to have her return to every scene and awaits with pleasurable anticipation her speedy—and assured—return whenever she steps aside to let the plot develop. And be it recorded and emphasized that all the individuals in the cast, men, women and children do credit to themselves and to their profession.

"THE FORBIDDEN BOX"

Jewel Production Featuring Mildred Harris Points to Moral of Contentment.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A STORY by E. V. Durling has been used as a basis for the six-part Jewel production, "The Forbidden Box," in which Mildred Harris is featured with Henry Woodward playing opposite to her. The picture was made by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley. Up to a certain point it is satisfactory, and one is impressed with the manner in which the lesson of the production is set forth, but toward the close the action becomes somewhat farfetched and fails to be convincing. Unusually fine sets have been employed in the picture and the spectator cannot fail to be impressed with the artistic richness of the interiors.

The illusion of the unattainable is the idea worked upon in the story in which a young girl is represented as being discontented with her simple country home; and after marriage and the attainment of money and luxury is still discontented because she has not been allowed to drink of the joys of life under the high lights of the city. Her husband, once a leader of a fast set in New York, refuses to open to her what he calls the "forbidden box," the opening of which is bound sooner or later to destroy her illusions. Finally when she has become obsessed with the idea of going to the city to live he yields, but in yielding immediately forms plans to disgust her and drive her back to the country. The unconvincing part of the story occurs in the carrying out of these plans, which strike one as being inconsistent.

"HIS BIRTHRIGHT"

First Haworth Production to Be Released Through Mutual, Lacking in Constructive Merits.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

BASED on a story in which the plot doesn't seem to get anywhere the first of the Haworth productions in which Sessue Hayakawa is starring is somewhat at a loss to convince the spectator of high qualifications from a dramatic viewpoint. Sessue Hayakawa has appeared to excellent advantage in productions with which he has previously been connected and he would no doubt have done more effective work in the five-part production "His Birthright," which is being released through the Mutual Film Corporation, had better opportunities and more ingenious direction been afforded him.

As it is there is a tendency toward posing rather than natural action on the part of the star, while the director strives to extract comedy from situations where it does not naturally exist, depending largely on the sub-titles to get it over, and worries with the more tragic incidents in a way which causes the action to drag.

A Japanese atmosphere has been cleverly contrived as a background for the opening of the story, and much credit is due the art director for the exquisite beauty of some of the scenes.

Briefly speaking, the story concerns a young Japanese lad born of a Japanese mother and an American father. The boy, reared in a Japanese fishing village by a servant of his mother's house, learns at the attainment of manhood that his mother, brokenhearted at the desertion of her husband, stabbed herself to death at the shrine of one of the gods while he was still a baby. In vengeful mood he goes to America to shadow his father and to kill him if the opportunity presents itself. Before this tragedy has a chance to happen the father explains matters.

"THE HOUSE OF MIRTH"

Metro Makes Pleasing Adaptation of Edith Wharton's Novel.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE story furnished by the Edith Wharton novel, "The House of Mirth," makes an attractive basis for a screen production. It has been skillfully handled in a five-part Metro feature by Director Albert Capellani, with Katherine Harris Barrymore as the star. Many familiar names appear in the cast, including Henry Kolker, Christine Mayo, Joseph Kilgour, Lottie Briscoe, Edward Abeles, Pauline Welch, Maggie Western, Nellie Parker-Spaulding, W. D. Fichter, Sidney Bracy, Kempton Greene, and Morgan Jones. Without unduly accentuating unpleasant situations the director has succeeded well in turning the finer points of the story to account, and Katherine Harris Barrymore has given a splendid portrayal of a character which, regardless of its human tendency to err, upholds the dignity of moral womanhood.

The story in brief tells the tale of an orphan who lives with an aunt who constantly reminds her of the necessity of making a wealthy marriage. Her extravagance and carelessness regarding her matrimonial future causes her aunt at her death to leave her penniless. Her love of luxury together with her aunt's admonitions causes her to discourage the attentions of a lawyer of moderate circumstances who has always professed love for her. In the course of events she is placed in a compromising position by the husband of a friend who, knowing that his wife is to be absent, invites her to dine at his home. At this point of the story husband and wife become familiar with the fact that each is in love with another. In attempting to befriend the wife of the man who has compromised her she becomes an outcast, and at the point of chloroforming herself she is rescued and becomes betrothed to her lawyer lover.

"IN JUDGMENT OF"

Story and Scenario by George D. Baker Given Splendid Screen Presentation in Metro Production.

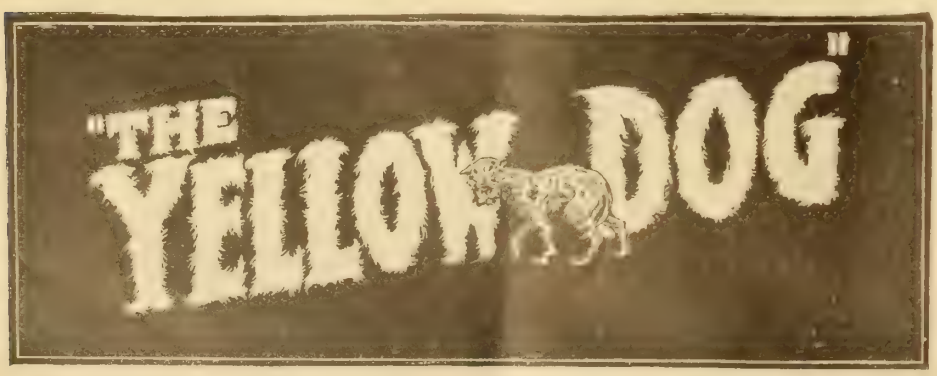
Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

ONE of the most absorbing of present day screen plays is the five-part Metro production "In Judgment Of," based on the story and scenario of George D. Baker and directed by Will S. Davis. It is a production that is good because it is good. One is impressed with a sensation of all 'round excellence. When you have finished looking at "In Judgment Of" you have lost any special interest which you may have had in individual names connected with the picture and you settle back in your chair with a sigh of relief at having viewed a production of a story of life as it really can happen—a story with a big situation presented consistently and artistically.

In case we forget to mention it the featured players are Anna Q. Nilsson, Franklin Farnum and Herbert Standing, the latter exhibiting remarkable finesse in the interpretation of the role of Judge Brainard. The supporting cast consisted of Edward Alexander, Lydia Knott, Harry Northrup, Spottiswoode Aitken and Katherine Griffith.

The story is a tremendously human one in which a young woman of wealthy parentage and possessed of second sight accidentally meets and invites to her home a young doctor who has never known either parent, and has been educated by means of funds supplied from a mysterious source. At the young woman's home he meets Judge Brainard, an elderly man who is noticably disturbed at sound of the doctor's name. The audience at this point is let into the secret that the old man is the father of the young man, forming the mysterious source from which his college funds have come. A peculiar circumstance now enters the story in which a college pal of the doctor's uses illegal means to get his friend's signature on a check for $5,000 after he has through eavesdropping learned the Judge's secret and also the fact that he has deposited $50,000 in the bank for the son he fears to own for political reasons and because his mother was the daughter of a murderer. The big scene of the production occurs when the father, having unintentionally caused the death of the forger, sits in judgment on his son, who has been accused of the murder of the man on circumstantial evidence. Not until the jury has brought in a verdict of "Guilty" does the old man find the courage to confess. A pretty love story adds a romantic touch to the production.

"INSIDE THE LINES"



Earl Derr Biggers' Stage Success Makes Fine Six-Reel World Picture.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

NOT every stage success makes good in moving pictures, but "Inside the Lines," with Lewis S. Stone and Marguerite Clayton in the leading roles, makes a screen drama that will carry the interest of the average observer at high pitch. The opening scenes are developed in a leisurely way, which provides Mr. Stone with some fine opportunities to display his quite finished style of acting. The minor characters are not so well brought out, but they serve the plot demands when their turn comes in an acceptable way. Miss Clayton as the girl has but little to do in the way of acting, but makes an agreeable impression whenever she appears.

This subject, which was produced by Pyramid Film Corporation under direction of David M. Hartford, deals with the present world war. The hero, who first appears in Berlin, where he is known as Spy No. 1932 in the Wilhelmstrasse, receives orders to go to Alexandria, Egypt. Here he is to make away with an English officer, Captain Woodhouse, who has been assigned to duty at the Rock of Gibraltar. Spy No. 1932 is to take his place and work there with other spies to wreck the English fleet in the harbor.

Spy No. 1932 carries out the program set for him, but when it comes to putting the fleet out of business certain changes in the situation transpire which will prove very satisfactory to observers no doubt. The latter part of the production contains an abundance of interesting situations, and a fair amount of suspense has been achieved in connection with the same. The production is one that gains in realism to a certain extent in pictures, for the reason that actual scenes at Gibraltar and with the English fleet are shown. Monte M. Katterjohn adapted the play, which is presented by Inter-Ocean Film Corporation.

"THE GIRL FROM BOHEMIA"

Five-Reel Pathe Play Features Irene Castle in a Delightful Subject.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Astra-Pathe play is one of those all-around entertaining features of the entirely pleasant type which make good wherever shown. The story begins in Greenwich Village, which is set forth in some well-devised, characteristic scenes, then moves to a seaport town where great shipyards are busy turning out new ships for the merchant marine. An averted strike, a child saved from drowning, and a ship launching are all featured in an effective patriotic finale.

Irene Castle is particularly charming in this number, which gives her an interesting change from the girl detective roles she recently assumed. She appears in this as Alice Paige, a convert to the "Life Free," and is known in the village as Neiza, a name which she declares matches the vibrations of her soul. A typical Pagan rout is featured in the Greenwich Village scenes, and Bobby Edwards, who gives an authoritative touch to most village functions, appears a number of times with his ukelele. These scenes are pleasingly handled, and have been kept within proper bounds.

Alice, or Neiza, leaves the village for the seaport town of Mayport, where she has a wealthy aunt. She shocks the residents of the place with her ideas and entertainments, but in the course of the story arrives at the conclusion that freedom is not to be gained by flying in the face of the conventions. Not the least interesting feature of the number is Mrs. Castle's dive and rescue of the child from drowning.

"NO CHILDREN WANTED"

Second Oakdale Production Featuring Clever Little Gloria Joy.

Reviewed by C. S. Sewell.

LITTLE GLORIA JOY, in "No Children Wanted," the second of the Oakdale Productions distributed by General Film Company, in which she is featured, demonstrates to an even greater extent than in her first picture her cleverness as a child star. While the story lacks strength and the situations are not always convincing, the little player is provided with ample opportunities to show her ability in pathetic situations, in comedy and in the performance of many childish pranks, all of which she handles with perfect naturalness and distinct evidences of ability.

Dot Jarvis, neglected by her wealthy father, a society author, and her mother, a fashionable butterfly, is disconsolate. Finally, when her parents decide to move into an apartment where no children are allowed, she is sent to a boarding school where she is blamed for all of the girls' pranks. Unable to stand it, she runs away, is found by the police and taken back to the parents, who are not glad to see her. In the meantime her father has caricatured a newspaper editor, Chase, in one of his novels, and this editor discovers that the author has financed an attempt to smuggle arms into Mexico and theatrens to expose him. Dot, hearing the family minister say that they must ask God to help them out of their trouble, starts out to find God, and as she is asking a policeman a reporter for Chase's paper comes along and takes a snapshot, turning it in for a human interest story. Chase, recalling his own son, now dead, orders the Jarvis story killed just as Jarvis enters the office intent upon killing him. He explains that the photograph is responsible, and the parents, thoroughly chastened, endeavor to make up for the neglect of their child.

The clever child star is assisted in a number of scenes by a remarkably well-trained goose and also by an attractive little boy, even younger than herself. The adult members of the cast, all of whom handle their roles satisfactorily, include Ethel Hitchie as Dot's mother, R. Henry Grey as her father, Edward Jobson as Robert Chase, together with Neil Hardin, H. R. Archer, Ruth Lackaye and Daniel Gilfether. Director Sherwood McDonald deserves especial credit for the manner in which he has brought out the talents of his youthful player.

"THE SOURCE"

Paramount Presents Wallace Reid in a Story of Lumber Camp Life.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

CHARACTERIZED by some picturesque effects, "The Source" is finely typed. Wallace Reid, Ann Little, Theodore Roberts, James Cruze, Noah Beery, Raymond Hatton and Charles Agle forming a combination hard to beat in character portrayal. They are given opportunity by the playwright and play up to it at every angle. The story has a vital motif, the conservation of war resources, and it is generally well constructed, but it is almost lacking in the highest picture value, that of suspense, the quality which compels attention from first to last in screen products of every kind.

Wallace Reid interprets with skill the role of a confirmed drunkard who is pressed into service at a lumber camp. His conversion is swift and remarkable. He is cured of alcoholism without delirium and rapidly asserts a manly character, winning the confidence of his employer and loyal employes, finally leading in a battle of lumberjacks for the opening of a dam which has been deliberately closed by German influences to prevent the spring drive. He also wins an estimable young woman and becomes associated with the business, receiving a check for twenty thousand dollars for his services.

It is relief to have the hero do something worth while, even if the story adheres closely to the conventional in other respects. He is depicted as a real man, struggling and suffering, and the other characterizations are good, in that they are complex without losing individuality. With all this merit to the credit side of the release, there is visible an influence hard to place, one which insists on reiteration of what has already been done over and over again. It may be that the playwright has been compelled to adhere too closely to a story written to read, or it may be the director's fault. With so many good qualities it should win—its faults probably lie in story selection.

"CACTUS" CRANDALL

Roy Stewart, a Triangle Star, in Wide-Awake Western Melodrama.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

AUTHORSHIP of "Cactus Crandall," a five-part Triangle western melodrama with Roy Stewart as the star, is credited to the actor himself. The scenario was made by George Elwood Jenks, and the production directed by Cliff Smith. "Cactus" Crandall is a satisfactory picture anyway you want to look at it. Frankly melodramatic in theme, it has the swift rush of events, the mad dashes on horseback and the rough-and-tumble fighting that belong to this class of stories. There is a beautiful heroine to be rescued from the clutches of the Mexican bandits, and a well set-up hero to do the job. All the picturesque life of the Southwest, with its background of cattle range, dance hall and locations across the Mexican border, are reproduced with Cliff Smith's customary skill, to rejoice the heart that loves the open and the simple souls that inhabit the land of the cowboy and the cactus.

Bob Crandall's foreman and five hundred head of steers having disappeared, the owner imagines that his cattle has fallen into the hands of Mexican bandits led by a handsome but rather too conceited gentleman named Mendoza. Bob crosses the Rio Grande and goes to the bandit's headquarters at Texico. He doesn't find his steers but he does discover an American girl who is forced to work in the bandit chief's saloon or have her father killed by Mendoza.

The chief is trying to force her to marry him when Bob hits the town. This is Bob's cue to get busy, and when he has finished Mendoza is as dead as he'll ever be in this world, his band nicely riddled with bullets and scattered along the trail and the heroine and her father safely housed at the Crandall ranch. There are even indications that the girl will soon become Mrs. "Cactus." As the song in "The Mikado" has it: "All is right as right can be."

Roy Stewart impersonates Bob Crandall or is Bob Crandall, whichever way you want to put it, and, either way, is a proper and heart-breaking hero. Marion Marvin, his new leading woman, is an attractive young person and worth all the fighting it cost "Cactus" to win her. Pete Morrison, William Ellengford and Joe Rickson are useful members of the cast. Steve Rounds was the cameraman.

"SHIFTING SANDS"

Unstable Plot Weakens Triangle Photoplay Featuring Gloria Swanson.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel

IN THE Triangle photoplay, "Shifting Sands," the author, Charles T. Dazey, has introduced a loosely constructed plot and shifted his incidents around with too great freedom to obtain any real dramatic strength. Marcia Grey, the heroine, played with real feeling and much personal charm by Gloria Swanson, is beset by no end of misfortunes; but the attention of the spectator is never held firmly nor does the story carry the conviction that makes even a middle-class melodrama entertaining. For the most part built of familiar material, this, in itself, would not have prevented "Shifting Sands" from becoming a fairly pleasing picture. Little skill is shown, however, in giving the story a dramatic handling. A capable cast has been reasonably well directed by Albert Parker, and the camera work, by Pliny Horne, is up to the same standard.

At the beginning of the story, Marcia Grey is trying to support herself and an invalid sister by her paintings. Possessing but little talent for the work, she is reduced to her last penny when she is accosted on the street by a young German named Von Holtz. He follows her home and manages to bring a false charge of theft against her. Sent to Blackwell's Island for three months, Marcia is about to attempt suicide when she is rescued by the Salvation Army.

She joins the ranks, meets a wealthy young social reformer, is married to him and once more comes face to face with Von Holtz, who is disguised as an English nobleman. Marcia's husband has government secrets, and Von Holtz is after them. Marcia recognizes the German spy, but he threatens to expose her past. Like a sensible woman she defies him and tells her husband the truth, and Von Holtz is carted off to prison.

Joe King as John Stanford, Harvey Clark as Von Holtz, Leone Carton as Minnie Grey, Lillian Langdon as Mrs. Stanford and Arthur Millett as Willis are the prominent members of the cast.

"THE GREAT LOVE"

Griffith's First Artcraft Production Is Worthy His Past Reputation.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

ONE of the unique qualities of a Griffith picture is the way the shadow of its creator falls across every scene. In "The Great Love" the director appears in person for an instant, one of the idle throng that saunters past the tables in front of a Paris restaurant, but his artistic domination of the picture is so complete that his presence is felt in every foot of film. His first Artcraft production, "The Great Love," is worthy the past reputation of the foremost motion picture director. It does not bulk large in massiveness of sets or in the number of its reels; but it has the human appeal that is the first requisite of the story-teller and the fine art expression that is always associated with a Griffith photoplay.

Certain features of its construction show an advance in technic that is to be commended, a breaking away from the overemphasis that mars so many screen stories. A tale of the great war, its director has wisely chosen not to weigh it down with an atmosphere of gloomy hysteria and exaggerated apprehension. The men and women engaged in battling on the field and in the workshop against the Hun are "armed so strong in honesty" they can still smile, still pursue their daily task with steady nerves and a calm faith in the triumph of our cause.

It is in this spirit the story is told—a love story with the war for a background and the introduction of a number of English social leaders, several with titles, thrown in for good measure. Less skillfully molded and fashioned, "The Great Love" would not have risen above dozens of other stories that have found their way to the screen. Portions of it are melodrama, pure and simple. Its treatment is episodic, not epical, and in the telling Director Griffith has adopted the quick, nervous staccato style of the French novelist. This method is very effective and marks a decided advance in screen art.

Another notable innovation is the tableau effect of a portion of its scenes. Groups of characters are shown that register but one thought, sometimes with the immovable concentration of plastic creations. As in "Hearts of the World," the man who popularized the cut-back on the screen makes such slight use of it in his latest picture it is practically not used at all.

The acting of Henry Walthall comes in the catalogue of the unusual. His method is often that of the pantomimist, his emotion being expressed by swift, broad gestures, rather than by the lines of his face or the glance of his eye. The result of all this departure from familiar rules of screen procedure is excellent, and lends a touch of novelty and fresh interest to the picture that vastly enhances its value. D. W. Griffith is still the master mind of the screen.

Jim Young, of Youngstown, Pa., is the hero of "The Great Love." Early in the war he enlists in a Canadian regiment and reaches the front by way of England. While training near London he meets the little Australian girl, most entertainingly played by Lillian Gish, who promises to be his wife at the end of the story. Before this happens, however, she is married to Sir Roger Brighton, a dissolute nobleman who becomes entangled with a band of German spies and is almost tricked into betraying his country. Jim Young prevents him from guiding an air raid on a great munition plant. This is the big "effect" of the picture and is extremely well managed. The brooding mystery and dread of the hovering Zeppelins is impressed on the spectator with almost perfect realism.

Mention of the sub-titles should not be omitted. They are as direct and free from any attempt at fine phrasing as is the speech of Jim Young, a part that Robert Harron makes so likable and thoroughly American that everyone is bound to feel he represents the best type of soldier we have sent to fight our battles in France. Grade A performances are given by Gloria Hope as Jessie Hallowell, George Fawcett as the Rev. Josephus Broadplains, Rosemary Theby as Mademoiselle Corinthee, Maxfield Stanley as John Broadplains, and George Siegmann as Mr. Seymour. Henry B. Walthall is particularly well suited to the character of Sir Roger Brighton.

Among the English titled folk that appear briefly in "The Great Love" are Queen Alexandra, the Princess of Monaca, the Countess of Drogheda, Lady Irma Manners, Miss Elizabeth Asquith and Miss Violet Keppel.

THE WINNING OF THE MOCKING BIRD (Broadway Star Feature Company).—Taken from one of the Wolfville stories of Alfred Henry Lewis, the material of cowboy abduction, lynching and rescue by the maiden is so outworn that the story lacks vitality, though it is fairly well visualized.

Greater Vitagraph, Inc.

WILD PRIMROSE (Vitagraph), Aug. 12.—Gladys Leslie is star of a most entertaining and wholesome American story pictured in interesting episodes and produced adequately. The story deals with a Tennessee girl who goes to New York on the bidding of her father, to be educated and reared in accord with high society customs. The father has not seen his child since she was a baby, and is of the opinion that she has grown to be a boy-denish mountain waif. Determined to have some measure of vengeance upon her father for having deserted her mother the girl decides to masquerade as the "wild girl" her father now believes her to be. Complications, unravelled in logical sequence, plus the interesting nature of the main plot, supply entertainment of excellent class. Miss Leslie is conspicuously competent and artistically effective as a most ingratiating star of the occasion.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

BOUND IN MOROCCO (Arteraft), Aug. 5.—The task of supplying Douglas Fairbanks with suitable vehicles for his acrobatic comedy achievements still remains no problem at all. Each production seems to equal all demands, and "Morocco Bound" is no exception. Here is another as good as the others. What matters if the thread of plot is scant and probabilities are frequently challenged it's Douglas Fairbanks, afoot and afield, leaping, jumping, tumbling, ambling and cavorting, that we want to see, and here he is.

THE SUMMER GIRLS (Paramount-Mack Sennett), Aug. 26.—The new Mack Sennett comedy "The Summer Girls," is well described by its title. There is an abundance of pretty summer girls and lively chasing around a big summer hotel, but the story is of the stereotyped kind and is of no special merit. Some of the best scenes in it are in and about the swimming pool of the hotel which show some exceedingly graceful diving. A curious pelican furnishes some amusing scenes. Much of the comedy is reminiscent of other film farces.

Jewel Productions, Inc.

THE FORBIDDEN BOX (Jewel).—A six-part production featuring Mildred Harris with Henry Woodward playing opposite to her. The picture made by Lois Weber and Phillips Smalley is attractive and deals with the story of a young woman's discontent. It is based on a story by E. V. Durling. A full review will be found elsewhere.

A PAIR OF CUPIDS, July 29.—Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne are featured in this thoroughly enjoyable farce comedy, which has many amusing situations. The story hinges on an old man's scheme to bring two young people together and make them forget their selfish views of life. In this he succeeds through the expedient of renting two babies and having one placed on the doorstep of each of his charges.

THE HOUSE OF MIRTH, Aug. 5.—A five-part production featuring Katherine Harris Barrymore with an all-star support, and based on the novel of Edith Wharton. The picture is more than passably entertaining and has been cleverly directed by Albert Capellani. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Mutual Film Corporation.

THE HIGH COST OF WEDDINGS (Strand), Aug. 13.—The second of the Elinor Field comedies and of entertaining quality. The comedy is of course very light but its laughs get over. It concerns the successful attempt of a father to avoid the expense of a big wedding for his daughter. The couple are frightened into eloping, after which the girl's father divides the difference between $5, which the elopement cost, and the $2,000, which the wedding would otherwise have relieved his pocket of, between himself and the young people.

HIS BIRTHRIGHT (Haworth).—The first of the Sessue Hayakawa productions under the Haworth brand does not do the star justice. The picture drags somewhat and has a badly constructed plot which fails to get anywhere. The production can, however, boast much artistic excellence with regard to backgrounds and will be found entertaining if not compared with former successes. A full review will be found elsewhere.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 45 (Mutual), Aug. 7.—Interesting items of this issue show scenes from where the American soldiers have recaptured a French town, General Passaga decorating soldiers of our 104th with the Croix De Guerre for gallantry in field of battle, inspecting of the motor transport of the 101st Infantry, Vassar students taking up farm work to help win the war, and scenes about a big military bake oven.

A DAM CATASTROPHE (Outing-Chester), Aug. 11.—An entertaining number in which some excellent closeups of the beaver building his dam and repairing breaks made by inconsiderate humans form the opening scenes. Then we are treated to a series of views obtained with a honeymoon pair who try to imitate the beaver in the matter of living the simple life. Scenes on an improvised raft, which capsizes in the middle of a ravishingly beautiful stream are wonderfully inspiring. The picture is well subtitled in a comedy vein.

DAMAGED GOOD (Lyons-Moran), Aug. 19.—Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran appear in this as a salesman and buyer who smash each other's hats before becoming acquainted. Their wives afterward mix in at a hat sale and later all meet at dinner, when the riot begins again. The humor is pretty rough, but there is a good deal of human nature in this and it will no doubt be well received.

Directed by Harley Knoles and George Kelson.

The Story: John Le Page, trusted clerk of an old jeweler, is about to take poison that his daughter may gain the insurance money, when burglars break into the store. One drinks the poison and dies. The other is captured and sentenced to jail for the theft of jewels Le Page has taken. Twelve years later the world war is declared. Le Page, drifting about the world, has become a German secret agent and with Baron Kurdman, of the same service, plans to obtain the sealed orders held by Admiral Gaveston, U. S. N. They plot to get Mrs. Gaveston into the toils by conducting a gambling house. To conceal her tremendous losses she is required to steal the orders from her husband. Gaveston's brother determines to obtain the orders and learns that they are in possession of Le Page, who is about to take them to Berlin via balloon. Meantime the sentenced burglar is also trailing the man to whom he owed his incarceration, and has become his chaffeur. With Le Page's daughter the two men start in the balloon, but in a terrific fight over the channel they fall from the basket and the girl turns over to Lieut. Gaveston the orders, still sealed.

The Story: Patience, despite her legacy of hard work on the farm, grew up to be a beautiful, lovable girl. Her father's aloofness and crusty disposition debarred her from the pleasures of the community. Always near was the hired man, "John, the Hand," who loved her, and Patience returned his love. One day John asked Patience's father for her, but he became enraged and discharged him. Soon after a rich widower appeared, but Patience did not welcome him, and no longer sang at her work as she previously did when John was about. Finally, Patience could stand it no longer and, turning a riderless horse out of the barn to create the impression that she had disappeared, she slipped away and met John and they were married by the squire, while her father and his henchmen scoured the hills to find her.

The Story: Nina Girard, prima donna with an opera company, is beautiful and loves everyone who is nice to her. When she arrives at the South American town of Macuto everyone, including the president, are captivated, all but Johnny Armstrong, an American, who is a woman hater. Suddenly Nina disappears, and Johnny, while wandering through the mountains, hears a wondrous voice. He finds Nina like a goddess with worshipping Indians at her feet. She whispers that she is a prisoner, and he helps her to escape. Now, she is no longer the Nina of old, but an exalted priestess to be worshipped, and Johnny worships. On the next lower level she becomes more human, lovable and approachable, but as the sea level is reached she returns to her natural self. Johnny leaves her, but returns later when one last look finishes his romance, as he sees her perched on a table surrounded by plutocrats, the air thick with smoke and floor wet with wine.

The Story: Upon the separation of Justus Druce and his wife each takes one of their twin daughters, aged two years. Sixteen years later, Dorothy, now a beautiful girl, has been raised in solitude in the Catskills, her pets having been her only playmates. She has erected a little shack on an island which she calls the "Inn of the Blue Moon." Justine, who remained with her father, has become a society belle, and as her engagement to Charlton Sloane is announced, her father discovers that he is a bankrupt. Druce writes to his wife for money, which she refuses. Justine gives the family jewels to Sloane to pawn, and a jealous woman makes it appear that he has stolen them. Sloane is arrested. Justice finds the letter from her mother and determines to go to her. McMahon, an attorney whom she engaged to help Sloane, meets with an accident and is cared for by Dorothy. From this point on several complications ensue, due to mistaken identity, each of the twins being taken for the other. However all ends happily, the two pair of lovers are united, and Druce and his wife reconciled.

Feature Doris Kenyon, who plays the dual role of Dorothy and Justine Druce, and Crauford Kent as Charlton Sloane.

Program and Advertising Phrases: True Love Finds a Way to Reunite Fond Hearts Mistakenly Estranged.
Strange Guests of the Inn of the Blue Moon.
Lust for Gold and Influence Wrecks Happiness.
Excitement and Adventure Featured in Mountain Romance.
Doris Kenyon, Youthful Screen Queen, in Charming Role.
Intrigue and Jealousy Thwarted In Purpose by True Love.

Advertising Angles: Advertise Miss Kenyon and play up the fact that this story is the first original screen story written by an author whose name is known to practically all readers. Many of his stories have been screened from their magazine form, but rouse interest in his first attempt at a direct scenario. Tell the high lights of the story briefly in your newspaper work, but leave the climax to be guessed at, taking the story only as far as the mix up over the two girls.

Advertising Aids: Two one sheets, two three sheets, one six-sheet. Eight 8x10 black-and-white, eight 11x14 sepia, and one 22x28 colored gelatin photos. Three one-column, one two-column, and one three column production cuts, and one one-column, one two-column, and one three-column "ad" cuts. Publicity photos and slides.

Released August 11.

"THE LIAR"

William Fox Presents Virginia Pearson in the Startling Story of a Girl Who Was Charged with Being a Mulatto.

Cast.

Sybil Houston.....Virginia Pearson
Hugh Houston.....Alexander Franck
Franklyn Harvey.....Edward F. Roseman
John Carter.....Victor Sutherland
Jimmie Marsh.....Eugene Borden
Sam Harris.....Albert Ricardi
Mammy Lou.....Myra Brooke
Mrs. Elliott.....Mrs. Matilda Brundage
Mary Elliott.....Liane Held Carrera

Directed by Edmund Lawrence.

The Story: Hugh Houston has a violent temper and one day strikes Sam, a negro, injuring him permanently. He then arranges for Sam to come to him each week, and gives him an allowance. Houston becomes ill and sends for his daughter, who is in England, to return. She reaches his bedside just before he dies. Harvey, Houston's manager, wishes to wed Sybil, but she repulses him. In revenge he makes use of the secrecy of Sam's visits and concocts a story that Houston had an affair with a mulatto and that Sybil has negro blood. Going to England, he confronts Sybil with this statement on the eve of her wedding to an aristocratic Virginian. How she disproves this charge provides an interesting climax.

Feature Virginia Pearson as Sybil Houston, Edward F. Roseman as Franklyn Harvey, and Victor Sutherland as John Carter.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Great Photodrama That Cuts to the Core of Human Love and Sacrifice.
Gripping Problem Plus Tremendous Solutions.
Photodrama Embodying Love, Intrigue, Revenge and Retribution.
Gripping Screen Drama Exposing a Cross-Section of Woman's Soul.
How a Bride Struggled to Save Her Honor and Good Name.

"HIGH TIDE"

Triangle Presents Harry Mestayer, Jean Calhoun and Yvonne Pavis in the Story of a Modern David Garrick in New York's Smart Literary Set.

Cast.

Hudson Newbrook.....Harry Mestayer
Barbara Edwards.....Jean Calhoun
Polly Staire.....Yvonne Pavis
Grandma Edwards.....Julia Jackson
Bob Edwards.....Jack Rollens
Richard Reed.....Leo Rierson

Produced by Gilbert Warrenton.

The Story: Hudson Newbrook, an author, has fought his way to recognition. He is interested in Polly Staire, leading woman in his new play, but she is not his ideal. Barbara Edwards writes him an appreciation of his work, confessing that she, too, has literary aspirations. The letter charms him and the writer is still more charming when they meet. Barbara comes to New York to keep house for her brother, Bob, and Polly, jealous, captivates Bob and leads him to dissipate, hoping to strike both Newbrook and Barbara. Newbrook confesses his love for Barbara, but a medical friend shows him that his life of dissipation has unfitted him for matrimony and takes him to a children's hospital, where he sees the helpless, crippled kiddies whose parents married unwisely. He decides that it would be unfair to Barbara to marry her and marries Polly as a solution of the double problem, after disillusioning Barbara. He and Polly are drowned when a boat in which they are sailing capsizes and Barbara marries the right man after all.

Feature Harry Mestayer as Hudson Newbrook, Jean Calhoun as Barbara Edwards, and Yvonne Pavis as Polly Staire.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Photo-drama Based on the Fury of a Woman Scorned.
Wild Jealousy Blind the Eyes of Discretion and Leads to Trouble.
Life and Love In New York's Literary Circles.
Fate Strangely Unites Fond Hearts After Trying Separation.
Country Girl With Literary Aspirations Sees Life in New York.
Inside Workings of New York's Famous "Bohemian" Quarter.

Advertising Angles: There are several good angles to work from, the best being the responsibility to the unborn children of a possible marriage. As a complement to this there is the wrecking of a career through dissipation. Use both of these in your newspaper work and interest any eugenic society that may exist in your town. For the sensation side use "Are you fit to marry?" "Does love mean all there is to marriage?" and similar questions in advertising and throwaways, suggesting that the reader see High Tide for the solution. One effective line might read: "Don't get married until" (date of playing) and add in smaller type, "for then you may see High Tide at (house). It may change your intention."

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released August 18.

"THE GHOST FLOWER"

Triangle Presents Alma Rubens in a Colorful Story of the Italy That Was Before the War and the Country She Is Today.

Cast.

Guilia.....Alma Rubens
La Farge.....Charles West
Tony Cafarelli.....Francis McDonald
Palo.....Dick Rosson
Duke De Chaumont.....Emory Johnson
Laserena.....Naida Lessing
Ercolano.....Tote Ducrow

Directed by Jack McKenzie.

The Story: The Ghost Flower is Guilia, the daughter of a Neapolitan wine seller, who escapes from home to avoid the attentions of Tony Cafarelli, an agent of the dreaded Camorra. She is adopted by La Farge, a French author, who has her educated. He loves the girl, who sees in him a man who might have been her father. Her stage debut brings her again to the attention of Tony, who kills her benefactor in an effort to assassinate De Chaumont, her fiance. Tony declares that he will yet kill De Chaumont and to save the man she loves passionately Guilia tells him that she is going to marry Tony and that she does not love him. She passes out of his life, but the war brings great changes, and it is Tony who at last brings together the woman he covets and the man she loves.

Features Alma Rubens as Guilia and Charles West as La Farge.

Program and Advertising Phrases: How the Child of An Italian Wine Shopkeeper Comes to Affluence and Happiness Over Adversity's Road.
Strange Career of a Lowly Italian Girl Under Fate's Guidance.
Intensely Dramatic Story Teeming With Thrills and Sensations.
Picturing Plots and Intrigues of the Italian Camorra.
How World War Changed the Course of Destiny for Italian Girl.

"BREAD"

Universal Presents Mary MacLaren in the Romance of a Chorus Girl Who Found Herself—and Others—Out Through the Loss of a Loaf of Bread.

Cast.

Candace Newby.....Mary MacLaren
Estelle Payne.....Gladys Fox
Arnold Train.....Edward Cecil
Dick Frothingham.....Kenneth Harlan
Emil Krause.....Louis Morrison

Directed by Ida May Park.

The Story: Candace, living among the narrow-minded people of Middelburg, is enchanted with Estelle Payne, a neighbor, who is apparently a successful actress, and longs to get away from her surroundings. A legacy left by her uncle gives her the opportunity. She goes to the city, and Estelle when she finds she has money takes her to Krause, a theatrical manager, who, because of her beauty, showers attentions upon her and finally becomes insulting. Train, a playwright rescues her. Estelle upbraids her for leading Krause on, while Candace protests that she did not mean to do so. She leaves Estelle, and her money is soon spent. Finally she has only enough to buy bread. On leaving the bakery with a curiously misshapen loaf, she slips and loses the bread which means life to her. In a vision she sees what she may become, surrounded with luxury. Passing a restaurant she sees her loaf of bread decked in flowers, with a hilarious crowd around it. Madly she rushes in and attempts to seize the bread. Recognizing as a member of the party Frothingham, who is her ideal, she faints. Train picks her up, and when she regains consciousness she realizes that she loves Train, and her troubles are over.

Feature Mary MacLaren as Candace Newby and Edward Cecil as Arnold Train.

Program and Advertising Phrases: The Heroine of "Shoes" Now Comes To View In Another Sociological Photodrama.

What Happened to A Demure Country Girl In Life Upon the Stage.

Great Sociological Problem Play Of Force and Purpose.

Mary MacLaren, Heroine of "Shoes," Seen in Sociological Photodrama.

Battling Against Odds Country Girl Wins Victory In Great City.

How the Lights of Broadway Failed to Dazzle Girl With Pure Heart.

Advertising Angles: Hook up with the bakeries as a change from the department stores with cards along the line of "One loaf of bread saved a chorus girl from disaster. Our bread is not as good as that—but it's good bread. Try our bread and see the Bijou's "Bread" (date). Both are excellent." Get grocery stores to announce the brands of bread they carry and add that your house also will sell Bread on a certain date. Get up a throwaway to be wrapped with all loaves sold a day or two before you open and for the run. It is best printed on colored paper. Play up the star and tell that it is the story of a small town girl who ran away to go on the stage.

Cast.

Renee Benoit.....Clara Kimball Young
Jacques Benoit.....Edward M. Kimball
Jean Lerier.....Milton Sills
Aimee Ducharme.....Marcia Manon
Prince Menelek.....Clyde Benson

Directed by Edmund Mortimer.

The Story: Renee is mistaken by a native prince who thinks she is the reincarnated spirit of the Queen of Sheba, and tries to capture her. She escapes, but is shot accidentially by Lerier, who nurses her back to health and takes her to Paris. He soon tires of her and turns to his former love, Aimee. Renee in a rage destroys a valuable curio and then goes to Abyssinia to get another one. Lerier goes back to the spot where he met Renee and is captured by the fanatic prince, who prepares to sacrifice him to the sprit of the queen. Renee appears and saves him. The natives mistake her for the queen and flee in terror.

Feature Clara Kimball Young as Renee Benoit and Milton Sills as Jean Lerier.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Best of All Clara Kimball Young's Intensely Dramatic Offerings.

How the Queen of Sheba Came to Life and Thwarted Villainy.

Queen of Motion Picture Stars in Her Greatest Photodrama.

Translating a Savage Woman to a Parisian Ball Room.

Leopard Skins and Flowing Hair Sets New Fashion in Society.

izing that he really wants her, schemes to destroy Dodge's faith and force Toni to turn to him. He stages a play in his private theatre in which the characters are recognizable as himself, Toni and Dodge, the worst explanation being given to Toni's conduct. Dodge is invited to witness the play, and D'Arcy, during the performance, goes to Toni, tells her what he has done and that Dodge's love for her has been destroyed. Toni realizes she really cares for Dodge. Just then he appears. D'Arcy asks how he liked the play. He declines to discuss it, pleading that his wife is tired, and D'Arcy leaves. Then—but to tell what happened next would spoil your interest in the denouement.

Feature Mildred Harris as Toni Wylde and Lewis J. Cody as Rolin Van D'Arcy.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Intensely Dramatic Offering Appealing to Husbands, Wives and the Whole Family.

She Married for Vengeance and the Biter Was Bitten.

Mystifying Plot That Baffles Solution to the Last Scene.

Here's A Dramatic Treat for the Whole Family Despite Its Title.

"For Husband's Only"—But Bring Along the Wife and Family.

Produced by Lois Weber—"The Belasco of the Screen."

Advertising Angles: Make the fullest possible use of the title in a clean fashion. The press sheet line, "For Husbands Only, but bring your wife with you," is an excellent example of how to work the title. Don't try to get too sensational with it. You'll not please the sensation seeker and you will lose those who would appreciate the play. Play up the name of the producer, which has a box-office value, and you can safely say that this is one of the most perfect scripts technically she has ever produced. Invite photoplaywrights in your town to come and study the technique. If your admission price is 15 cents advertise that husband and wife can come for a quarter if they come together. Do a little extra advertising for this. It will pay.

Advertising Aids: Three one sheets, two three sheets, one six-sheet, and one 24-sheet. Two three-column cuts, six two-column cuts, and two three-column cuts.

"MARRIAGE"

Frank A. Keeney Presents Catherine Calvert in a Story by Guy Bolton, Author of "Polly with a Past," "Very Good Eddie," Etc.

Cast.

Eileen Spencer.....Catherine Calvert
Jack Spencer.....David Powell
Carter Ballantyne.....Thomas Holding
Mrs. Stoddard.....Ida Darling
Tommy Latimer.....Walter Hiers
Dolly Page.....Hazel Alden

The Story: Eileen is a member of a bridge-playing coterie. Her husband, a supposedly prosperous broker, neglects her and she prepares to elope with Ballantyne, a novelist. Her husband informs her he is bankrupt, his eyes are afflicted and can only be cured by an expensive operation. Conscience stricken, she dismisses Ballantyne. Dolly, her friend, comes to borrow money. Eileen confesses her financial condition, and, urged by Dolly, they fit up an apartment and make money by cheating at cards. Ballantyne finds them and threatens exposure unless Eileen will accept him as a lover. Eileen's husband returns, the operation having been successful. Going to Eileen's apartment, he finds Ballantyne, who is awaiting her return, and, thinking himself an intruder, he leaves. Eileen, knowing Ballantyne will carry out his threat, accuses herself of being a cheat at a dinner party. Her husband, who has stolen to the door of the room to shoot Ballantyne, hears Eileen's confession, and a reconciliation is effected.

Feature Catherine Calvert as Eileen Spencer and David Powell as Jack Spencer.

Gambling Partnership Between Society Queens Explodes In Scandal.

Picturing the Details of Life in New York's Exclusive Set.

Dramatic Outcome Of A Gambling Adventure in High Society.

Famous Stage Success Now Revealed in Gripping Photodrama.

Advertising Angles: A good slant to take at this picture is the evil wrought by gambling among women. Work along this line in your newspaper advertising. Play up the fact that the story is an original plot by a well-known dramatic author, and double this if any of his plays have been seen in your town recently. For a throwaway try "Would you cheat at cards for your husband's sake?" Tell part of the story and announce that the outcome can be learned at your house.

Advertising Aids: Two one sheets, two three sheets, one six-sheet. Eight 8x10 black-and-white, eight 11x14 sepia, and one 22x28 colored gelatin photos. One three-column, one two-column, and three one-column production cuts. One each one-column, two-column, and three-column "ad" cuts. Publicity photos and slides.

"WINNING GRANDMA"

Pathe Presents the Inimitable Marie Osborne in the Charming Story of Baby Hands That Wrung an Ancient Heart.

Cast.

Little Marie Reading..Baby Marie Osborne
Will Reading.....Morris Foster
Mrs. Reading.....Ruth King
Luther Parrish.....William Quinn

Directed by William Bertram.

The Story: Mrs. Jasper Reading, a stern woman, makes things so unpleasant for her son Jasper and his wife that they leave. She then asks her other son, Will, to come and live with her and bring his wife and little daughter, Marie. Marie is a mischievous child, always indulging in pranks with little black Sambo, and she and her grandmother do not get along well. Marie's mother, though innocent, is compromised by a plotting scoundrel, and she goes back to the old home, taking Marie. Soon the grandmother becomes lonely, and realizing that she really loves the child, she goes after the mother, and, stealing into the bedroom, takes little Marie in her arms. Here her two sons and their wives discover her. She confesses that she has been too stern and asks that she be permitted to live in happiness with them, and her wish is granted.

Feature Baby Marie Osborne as Little Marie Reading.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Baby Marie Osborn Plays Role of Peacemaker In Family of Many Troubles.

Aristocratic Grandmother Steels Her Heart Against Kindly Influence.

Story of An Unusual Family Who Differ On Unusual Topics.

How a Little Child Softened the Heart of Stern Grandparent.

Intriguing for a Million Comes to Naught When Baby Interrupts.

Clever Child Actress Plays Role That Will Delight All "Fans."

Advertising Angles: If your patrons like Baby Osborne the mention of her appearance will be sufficent, but be sure that the announcement is made sufficiently prominent to reach all admirers. Tell also that the clever little negro boy is in the picture. In the advertising work along the lines of the child's appeal to her grandparent with such catch phrases as "What woman can resist her grandchild?" Make it plain, through telling part of the story that it is a departure from the timeworn foundation this title might fit.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three-sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 11x14, both in sepia and color; also 22x28. Slide. Campaign book. Cuts.

Released August 18.

"GREEN EYES"

Thomas H. Ince Presents Dorothy Dalton in the Thrilling Story of a Man Who Was Jealous of His Younger Brother.

Cast.

Shirley Hunter.....Dorothy Dalton
Pearson Hunter.....Jack Holt
Morgan Hunter.....Emery Johnson
Margery Gibson.....Doris Lee
Alexander Chapman.....Robert McKim
Jim Webb.....Clyde Benson

Directed by R. William Neill.

The Story: A man becomes jealous of his pretty wife, and she leaves him after a quarrel, but returns and a reconciliation occurs. Again he becomes jealous, this time of his younger brother, who thrashes a scoundrel who is later strangled by a revengeful negro. Finding the body later he confesses his supposed crime to his sister-in-law. To shield the boy, the wife tells her husband she invited him to her room; then the husband attempts to kill himself. The wife averts the tragedy, and as the younger brother confesses, word is brought that the real murderer has confessed. A reconcilation then occurs between husband wife.

Feature Dorothy Dalton as Shirley Hunter and Jack Holt as Pearson, her husband.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Dorothy Dalton Star in Newest Paramount Enacts Intensely Dramatic Role.

Green Eyes of Jealousy Are Strangely Opened to See the Truth.

Plot and Counterplot Holds Interest Intense to the Climax.

With Jealousy the Theme Photoplay Teems With Thrills.

Atmosphere of the South Clings to Dorothy Dalton's Latest Play.

Jealousy and the Countless Woes It Inflicts Theme of Photoplot.

Advertising Angles: The jealousy theme will be the strongest to play up. Work such lines as "If you are jealous see Green Eyes before you kill yourself" and "Even if your wife is pretty, she can be true to you." The cuts and paper tell nothing of the story, so if you use these be sure that your text gets the big idea over, using portraits in preference to the scene cuts.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

Sure Fire Helps to Success

The CHALMERS PUBLISHING CO., publishers of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD and CINE MUNDIAL, the leading trade papers devoted to the Motion Picture Industry, are also publishers of the only library of practical text books dealing with the cinema art adapted to the every-day needs of those already engaged in the business or about to engage in it.

These text books, six in number, have been written by men carefully selected for their proven knowledge of the subjects to be covered, being almost without exception veteran members of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD'S editorial staff; entirely without exception these men are at present actively engaged in the motion picture business—they are not dreamers or theorists.

Each text book has been written to provide real help to the individual who reads it—consistent with the unswerving policy of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD—a genuine "Dedication to Service."

Motion Picture Handbook

for Managers and Operators

By F. H. RICHARDSON

Third Edition

The most complete, exhaustive and instructive work ever published on the projection of moving pictures. Contains complete instruction with detail illustrations on all leading makes of American projection machines and practical information on wiring, lenses, carbon settings, screens, theatre equipment, etc., etc. 700 pages and over 300 illustrations, $4.00, postage paid.

Picture Theatre Advertising

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

A real help and business builder for exhibitors, theatre managers and owners. It tells all about theatre advertising, type, printing and paper, house programs, lobby displays, newspaper advertising, posters, heralds, etc., etc. 300 pages. $2.00, postage paid. P. S.—Mr. Sargent conducts a weekly department in this same style in the Moving Picture World, which contains many up-to-date business-getting ideas.

Motion Picture Electricity

By J. H. HALLBERG

An up-to-date work on the electrical equipment of picture theatres by a practical electrical expert. Contains chapters on electricity, D.C. and A.C. current, resistance and resistance devices, electric service, wiring, lighting, etc. Also contains practical suggestions and all necessary reference tables on wire sizes and capacity, weights and measures, heat units, etc., etc. 260 pages, illustrated. $2.50, postage paid.

Modern Theatre Construction

By EDWARD BERNARD KINSILA

Our newest book is one that will fill a long-felt want to those contemplating the building of a theatre. This is a very complete and exhaustive work by an architect with many years of practical experience in theatre and studio construction. Fully illustrated, with considerable data as to requirements, construction cost, building laws, etc. $3.00, postage paid.

Technique of the Photoplay

By EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Third Edition

Complete instruction in photoplay writing, including study of plots, how to obtain and how to develop; writing the synopsis; studio requirements; script preparation and marketing; technical terms; examples of actual scripts in facsimile typewriting, etc. 400 pages. $3.00, postage paid.

Screencraft

or the Making of a Photoplay

By LOUIS REEVES HARRISON

A comprehensive and thought-provoking treatment of the subject in a series of chapters, similar to a university course of lectures, by a successful writer of photoplays. Also contains a complete working scenario and several sample pages of manuscript. 150 pages; illustrated. $2.00, postage paid.

Bausch and Lomb Projection Lenses have long been considered standard equipment by the leading motion picture machine manufacturers. The product of America's greatest lens specialists, who have been producing high grade lenses of one type or another for 65 years, they are unexcelled in the clear-cut, evenly illuminated pictures they produce on the screen.

Because of the demand made upon our resources for some of the Government's most important military needs, we are unable to make projection lens deliveries for the present. While proud to be of such service in this world crisis, we shall expect to serve our other patrons even more efficiently than before, when the world is again at peace.

MOTION PICTURE CARBONS
FOR ALTERNATING CURRENT PROJECTION

The exacting demands of modern motion picture projection require extreme care in the selection of the light source. The light must be such that the finest variations of high lights and shadows shall be perfectly recorded on the screen and every object depicted perfect in every detail. The flexibility must be great enough to compensate for the varying densities of films made under different light conditions.

The White A. C. Special Carbons fulfill these requirements in every particular. They give a strong, pure white light of high intensity, noiseless operation and absolutely flickerless illumination that eliminates eye fatigue.

COLUMBIA-SILVERTIP COMBINATION

SATISFACTORY SERVICE

IS

Worth Many Dollars Difference in First Cost

WHEN we looked around for Motor Generators and electrical accessories for moving picture theatre installation, it did not take us long to discover the wonderful success and service obtained with "HALLBERG" motor generators, transformers and other specialties.

While we had practically all other make competing apparatus under consideration, it was the consensus of opinion of our branch managers and engineers, who had sold and installed all other make motor generators and electrical apparatus in the past, that the "HALLBERG" apparatus was most favorably known and accepted as the STANDARD by which others are judged and compared among operators and exhibitors.

In consequence of this opinion, we secured the exclusive distribution of the "HALLBERG" motor generators and other apparatus for moving picture theatres in the United States and Canada, in preference to all other makes.

The wisdom of our selection has been proven by the enormous sales during the past year and the SATISFACTION expressed by all users of the HALLBERG MOTOR GENERATOR—The demand for this machine is constantly increasing, and the up-to-date exhibitor is replacing other less efficient and satisfactory motor generators with our "HALLBERG."

Remember, the HALLBERG MOTOR GENERATOR is the "DOUBLE ARC MOTOR GENERATOR WHICH GIVES DOUBLE THE AMPERES FOR SINGLE ARC." This means that, with the "HALLBERG" Double Arc Motor Generators, the arc lamps are NOT CONNECTED IN SERIES, as this limits the ampere output when one arc is burning to one-half of what it is with the "HALLBERG."

We consider this a most important feature because it permits the operator to DOUBLE THE AMPERES IF NECESSARY at the arc for a dark film.

Our HALLBERG TWIN UNIT Motor Generator system is UNSURPASSED; it is the last word from the viewpoint of EFFICIENCY and SERVICE, and we will be glad to explain it to you.

THIS LETTER IS TO THE POINT

Dear Sirs:—
Would you kindly send book on Hallberg motor generator set?
Have used this set for the last two years and find it satisfactory in every way.
Hoping for an early reply, I am

Respectfully yours,
(Signed) H. WARDROP.

Projectionist Ray says

"It's Power's Cameragraph for mine every time.

"The success of your projection depends more on the Intermittent Movement than on any other thing; and the Power's movement is the best on earth. It's like this:

"In the projection of a film subject each individual picture must remain stationary upon the screen for a period of time. The longer this period, the better the eye can get the details.

"The Power's movement holds each picture on the screen nearly 7% longer than any other movement; and, believe me, I've used 'em all.

"That's why you get better definition with a Power's; that's why, as I say of the Cameragraph, —its repeat will get you more money than an imitation's first showing !

The day on which the best imitation of "The KAISER, the Beast of Berlin," was released the value of this Original and Only Artistic Triumph as a repeat was advanced tremendously. Because every Exhibitor who saw the imitation knew instantly that his one best bet was to play the Original not only as a First Showing but also as a Repeat on every open date in his calendar.

Ponder this for a moment! The best advertised play on the best advertised subject in the whole wide world—and this free publicity growing, growing, growing—why, Man! its repeat will get you more money than an imitation's first showing! Take your two eyes and your check-book to your nearest JEWEL Exchange today. Settle that "repeat business" now.

"THE KAISER

—The Beast of Berlin

Thanks for the Trouble on "Triple Trouble"

To Whom It May Concern:

Essanay feels that it owes a debt of gratitude to its competitors for spreading broadcast statements in regard to our NEW Charlie Chaplin picture, "TRIPLE TROUBLE."

Knowing the motive for these statements, the interest of exhibitors all over the country has been aroused.

They have looked for, and found, our irrefutable arguments.

But what is more vital, they have learned what other exhibitors, who have run "TRIPLE TROUBLE," have done in the way of box office returns.

Particularly, they have learned what M. J. Weil, manager of the Castle Theatre, a first run Chicago house, did.

Mr. Weil said: "'TRIPLE TROUBLE' played to the biggest business ever done at the Castle Theatre, and I broke a rule of the house and ran the picture a second week, because my patrons demanded it."

The exhibitor knows that what one theatre has done, his can do; what one audience likes, another will.

He knows the opinion of another exhibitor is unbiased, because he has nothing to gain by making it.

Interest has been aroused to such a pitch, exhibitors have thronged the George Kleine exchanges, at our invitation, to see the picture for themselves. You can count on the exhibitor knowing what he wants when he sees it. The result is, bookings have been coming in faster than we dreamed of.

We knew the picture would go big, because we had a GOOD Chaplin comedy and a NEW one. But we could not have advertised it so extensively and done so much in so short a time had it not been for this unintentional cooperation. We thank you.

Focusing America's Attention on the "Better Motion Pictures"

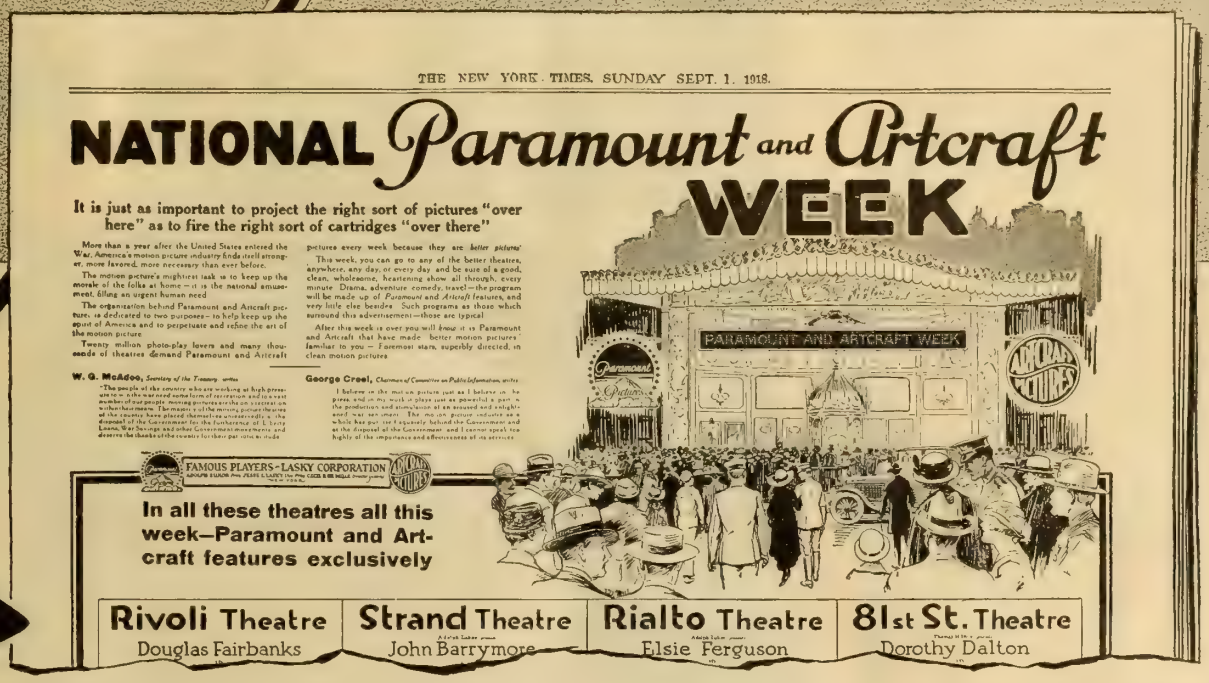
IN thousands of theatres in the week of September 1st, nothing but Paramount and Artcraft Pictures will be shown. It will be a week of showing America just what the motion picture is today—the national amusement, a vital part of America's seething life.

It will be a week of building of good will, a week in which the theatres will show the whole country just what better motion pictures are.

Such a week would be worthless unless the theatres of America show, first, pictures bearing trade marks so well known that th crowds will come to see them; second, pi tures so good that they can stand the test this concentrated demonstration.

The only company in the industry that h the producing and distributing organizatio to furnish the quality of motion pictur necessary for such an important test of t worthwhileness of the industry is the Famo Players-Lasky Corporation.

The only pictures that the exhibitor impli itly can trust always to make good to the pu lic are Paramount and Artcraft Pictures.



And so if you are not already booked solid, get in on it quick! You, at your theatre, for your profit, for the National Week, for th industry of which you are a part—now and for the years to come.

THE SATURDAY EVENING POST

Here → NEXT WEEK IS Paramount

It is just as important to project the right sort of pictures "over here" as to fire the right sort of cartridges "over there."

More than a year after the United States entered the War, America's motion picture industry finds itself stronger, more favored, more necessary than ever before.

The motion picture's mightiest task is to keep up the morale of the folks at home—it is the national amusement, filling an urgent human need.

The organization behind Paramount and Artcraft pictures is dedicated to two purposes—to help keep up the spirit of America and to perpetuate and refine the art of the motion picture.

Twenty million photo-play lovers and many thousands of theatres demand Paramount and Artcraft pictures every week because they are better pictures.

This coming week, you can go to any of the better theatres, anywhere, any day or every day, and be sure of a good, clean, wholesome, heartening show all through, every minute. Drama, adventure, comedy, travel—the program will be made up of Paramount and Artcraft features, and very little else besides. In many cases nothing else. Such programs as that right here in front of your eyes—that one is typical.

We named that theatre Alhambra merely as an example. It might just as well be Strand, Rialto, Palace, Rivoli, Empire, Crescent, Globe, Cascade, Court, or the name of the theatre nearest you.

After this coming week is over you will know it is Paramount and Artcraft that have made "better motion pictures" familiar to you: —"Foremost stars, superbly directed, in clean motion pictures."

FAMOUS PLAYERS-LASKY CORPORATION

ON the evening of Thursday, August 29th, in the best homes in your town, the folks are going to be reading, in the Saturday Evening Post, the double page advertisement, a small reproduction of which is shown above.

The banker, the station agent, the druggist, the grocer, the mayor and their wives and children will be reading it.

Everybody who is anybody in your town reads the Saturday Evening Post. You know that.

And after they've read it they'll have new respect for the industry of which you are a part, and they'll say, each of them: "Isn't that a fine idea! Wonder where we'll find these Paramount and Artcraft Pictures this week?"

Is the answer going to be the name of your theatre—or the other fellow's?

Why Quality Producers release thru Hodkinson Service

SOME confusion formerly existed in the mind of the trade in reference to the W W HODKINSON CORPORATION

By confusing the distributing organization of W W Hodkinson with the product it sells, many have entirely lost sight of the fact that this corporation is the only independent distributing channel in the industry absolutely unhampered by those entangling producer or exhibitor ties which by strangling independence, forbid the impartial, fair and equitable business dealings with both sides that characterize the Hodkinson method of doing business

This fact and a knowledge of Mr. Hodkinson's principles and record of achievements has made the far sighted producers now releasing through Hodkinson realize that his present organization spells big success for them because it is basicly right and entirely just in every way.

More than that, the comprehensive consolidation of the exhibitors buying power throughout the country by means of the Hodkinson Co Partnership Plan offers them a safe assured and continuous market for quality product

Hodkinson Service is being moulded to fit the needs of exhibitors and is being sold to them on a basis of profit to the exhibitor and producer

J. WARREN KERRIGAN FEATURES

July 25th, 1918.

W. W. Hodkinson, Esq.,
527 Fifth Avenue
New York City, N.Y.

Dear Mr. Hodkinson:

J. Warren Kerrigan's first production under my management is being forwarded to you. Your distribution of this production will be, I am sure, the beginning of an enjoyable and profitable business association.

It has been three years almost to a day since I first talked with you about producing. Through all the changes and turmoil of those three years, I have retained my original viewpoint -- that the business needs new ideas and more ideals and that both are commercially possible with you at the head of a great distributing company. Your breadth of vision, ability, fairness & honesty will, of course, make for success.

I selected your organization because of my belief that the policy you have adopted for exhibitors will, in the long run, prove most satisfactory to all interests - exhibitor, distributor and producer.

With best wishes,

Very sincerely,

Lillian Walker Pictures Corp.
501 Fifth Avenue — LETTER DARK — PRESIDENT — New York city

August 7, 1918.

Mr. W. W. Hodkinson,
President, W. W. Hodkinson Corp.,
527 Fifth Avenue,
New York.

My dear Mr. Hodkinson,

I feel it would be a serious personal lapse to let the consummation of our contract for the distribution of the eight Lillian Walker pictures, pass without an expression of my satisfaction in having effected this releasing arrangement with you.

As you know, I have been working for more than a year with exhibitors in an effort to develop some sort of practical co-operation between exhibitor and producer.

When I say to you, therefore, as I do, that I believe your plan is the only logical, business policy, now before the industry, that will gain genuine co-ordination between exhibitor and producer, I trust you will accept the assertion, not alone as a personal tribute, but as a plain statement of facts by one who has been in the closest touch with all the co-operative plans in the field.

In placing the series of Lillian Walker pictures in your hands for distribution, therefore, it is my honest belief that I have not only served the interests of my own company best, but that I am doing "my bit" along lines that have a most vital bearing on the interests of the exhibitors of the country as a whole.

Very sincerely yours,

Dressing Your House Program

"CLOTHES make the man" it is said Opinion may differ as to the exact truth of this quotation but it is true that a program, just like a man may be greatly improved by judicious "dressing."

The cut below is a most attractive design for the first Kathleen Clifford Plaza Picture "Angel Child." It will add to the selling value of your program a good deal.

We are ready to supply it in various sizes to meet the requirements of the average program. This cover design may also by careful mortising of type matter, be used as a stock cover for all Plaza Pictures.

Intensive selling is the order of the day. Don't neglect any item—they all count in the final analysis at the box office.

NOW

You can truthfully advertise official films that really show real fighting—

The New York American says:

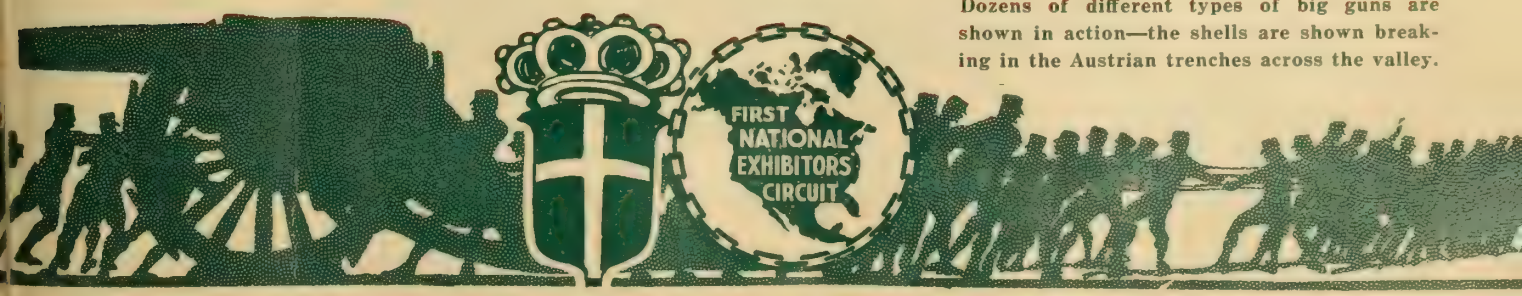
For exciting action and cumulative dramatic interest "Italy's Flaming Front" is unquestionably the most remarkable ever filmed; its authenticity is self-evident.

6 reels full of variety, full of thrills, full of fight.

"Italy's Flaming Front"

The First Films of a Whole Battle

The New York Journal of Commerce says:



The Official Italian War Pictures at the Rivoli are creating an extraordinary amount of enthusiasm.

The New York World says:

Purchased from the American representatives of the Italian Government by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Inc.

Another Big "First National" Money Maker

Dozens of different types of big guns are shown in action—the shells are shown breaking in the Austrian trenches across the valley.

Battleships belching broadsides—shells from shore batteries bursting around them and hurling huge pillars of water skyward.

"Italy's Flaming Front"

The First Films of a Whole Battle

Actually shows in clear photography, the following—

Mountain fighting: Bombarding enemy's trenches with big guns in preparation for infantry charge. Italian "75" hit by Austrian shell—smithereens! Italian artillery's hot reply—you never saw prettier work. Close ups of dozens of different types of big guns, from 40 centimeters to trench "bombards" in action.

Men crouching low in trenches, bullets spatting on sand-bags overhead. They go over the top, advancing in short sprints, taking advantage of every bit of cover. The final rush, hand-to-hand bayonet fighting, victory! bringing back hordes of prisoners.

Italian grand battle fleet in bombardment of Austrian stronghold near Trieste. From Dreadnoughts to submarine chasers hurling tons of shell at enemy. Close-ups and panoramic views of entire action.

First complete air fight ever photographed. Austrian bombing plane attacks fleet. Six Italian sea planes give chase (two carrying enlisted cameramen). Shrapnel from Austrian batteries bursting around Italian planes (caught by Italian cameramen in planes). One Italian plane's engine disabled by shrapnel and plane is forced to descend to sea under fire of Austrian batteries. Italian plane rescues aviators and destroys the plane to prevent its capture by Austrians. Austrian drops bombs at fleet, their explosions hurl huge pillars of water and spray skyward; a submarine chaser hit, you see the explosion and the craft capsize from quarter mile distance—Italian planes close in, Austrian, in desperation, does daredevil tail dive to sea and saves his life but is captured by Italian torpedo boat.

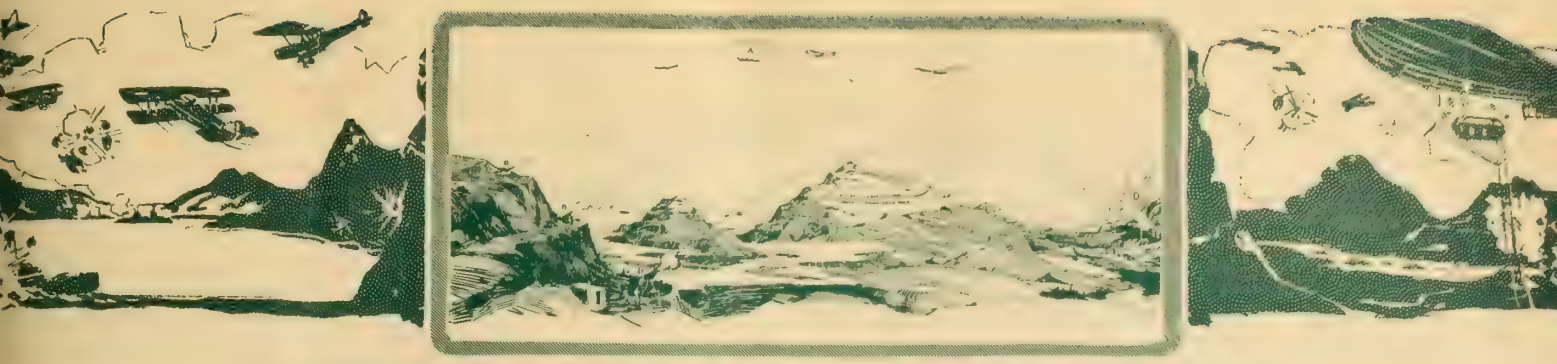
Italian monitors and floating gun carriages each mounting one great gun, in action.

In General:—

Fighting above the clouds. Italy's spider men on skis, the wonderful aerial cable communications, unbelievable feats of patience and hardihood bridging mountain torrents and dragging great guns by hand to lofty positions where tractors, even mules are unable to go.

The eyes of the night. A night bombardment of Austrian positions showing effect of shrapnel fire on barb-wire entanglements. Giant search lights in operation, one of war's marvels.

Many other thrilling and interesting scenes not described here because of lack of space.



I have seen these films and can personally vouch for the truth of the above statements.

It's easy to convince the Public you've got the goods when the press backs an attraction like this

New York Daily Newspapers:

N. Y. Sun, March 18, 1918

"Italians storming an Austrian trench in a hail of shrapnel are shown as one of the incidents in the official Italian War Pictures at the Rivoli this week. They are also shown building bridges and carrying on the great mechanical work necessary to fight the Austrians over the mountains. They are the most vivid battle pictures that have been shown here in many months."

N. Y. World, March 25, 1918

"Official Italian War Pictures at the Rivoli attracted crowded audiences last week. The victory of an Italian aviator over an Austrian flyer, with the fall of the latter, and other graphic scenes of real fighting were shown."

N. Y. Globe, April 22, 1918

"There are most thrilling incidents in the Italian War Pictures and they are the sort to keep the people in the audience on the edge of their seats until the final storming of the Austrian trench is over."

Brooklyn Times, March 18, 1918

"At the Rivoli the representative of the Italian Ministry Mission to the United States, the Consular staff, and the commercial representative of Italy gave Sunday night's performance the air of a diplomatic function and there were so many Italians in the audience that these war pictures called forth incessant applause culminating in the wildest enthusiasm when their countrymen went 'over the top'."

Motion Picture Trade Papers:

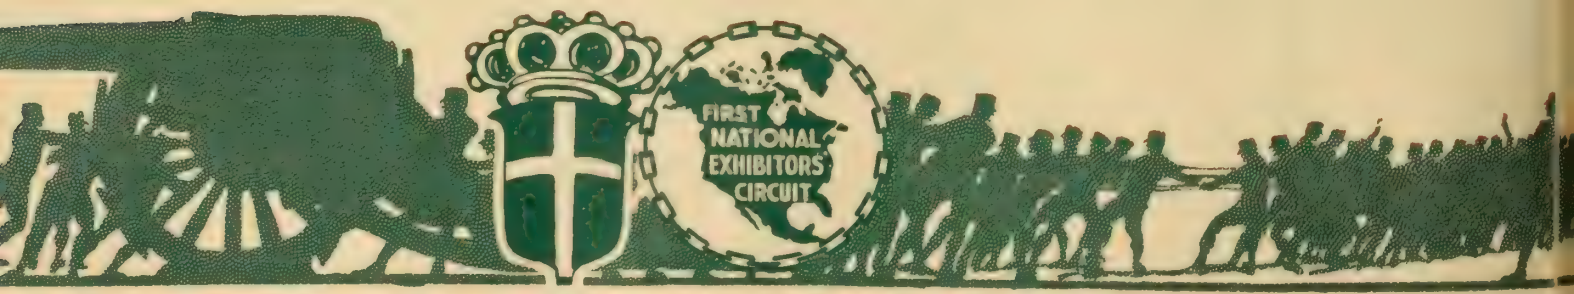
Moving Picture World, April 13, 1918

"An Austrian battleplane pursued by Italian fliers and forced to capitulate. The bombardment of Hermanda, overlooking the Adriatic. The hurling of smoke bombs and the infantry going into action under shrapnel fire protected by smoke clouds. The thrilling capture of hundreds of Austrian prisoners."

Exhibitors' Trade Review, April 6, 1918

"They are quite the best stuff of its kind that has been shown here. This week's films present in all their exciting detail an aerial and naval attack on an Austrian stronghold. One of the big features is a fight between Italian hydroplanes and an Austrian airship. This is a truly wonderful bit of motion picture photography taken by a cameraman in one of the battleplanes."

Motion Picture News, Page 2216



"ITALY'S FLAMING FRONT" shows the most remarkable fighting pictures that have ever been shown, beginning with flocks of Italian aeroplanes taking the observations, the preparations in the trenches, going 'over the top' and finally the capture of droves of Austrians. . . . . Time after time the audiences broke into applause, loud cries came from the galleries again and again, and then at the end, when the torn Italian flag is shown waving over the battlefield where shells are still bursting well, the scene at the Rivoli is one you will never forget."

J·Stuart Blackton
ANNOUNCES
"The Common Cause"

A Special Super-Feature in Eight Reels. Produced Under the Auspices of and by Collaboration With the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission.

Its Aim: To aid recruiting in all branches of the service—to further stimulate the wave of patriotism that is now sweeping the country.

Its Theme: The bringing together of all the allied nations now fighting for humanity—the cementing of that "Brotherhood in Arms."

IT IS AN ENTIRELY DIFFERENT WAR STORY WITH "A LAUGH, A THRILL AND A THROB"

Its authors are: J. Hartley Manners, Ian Hay Beith and Percival Knight.
The Scenario by Anthony P. Kelly

The All-Star Cast

Herbert Rawlinson
as "Captain Palmer"
Mr. Rawlinson enjoys world-wide popularity as one of the most intelligent and forceful stars of the screen. In "Smashing Through" he scored a Broadway success, and will appear shortly as leading man with Geraldine Farrar.

Lawrence Grossmith
as "Private Tommy Atkins"
Lieutenant Grossmith, the famous comedian of the English and American stage, makes his screen debut in "The Common Cause," having been detailed to play the role by the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission.

Philip Van Lorn
As a Poilu. French actor who has achieved success on stage and screen

Louis Dean
as "Captain Bach"
Clever character actor who portrayed the Kaiser in Vitagraph's "Over the Top" and "My Four Years in Germany."

NOTICE OF DISTRIBUTION

I HAVE looked over the entire field of motion picture distributors for the company best equipped to give "The Common Cause" the distribution its aim and theme deserve.

Measured by actual accomplishment, I have selected Vitagraph and its Distributing Organization as the most thoroughly equipped company in the picture field to present "The Common Cause" to the exhibitors, and through them to the people of America.

I know what Vitagraph has accomplished with "The Battle Cry of Peace," with "Over the Top," with "Womanhood, the Glory of a Nation," "Within the Law," "The Girl Philippa," "The Fall of a Nation" and other special productions. I know how thoroughly Vitagraph has covered the field and how splendidly it has served the exhibitors of the country with these productions.

With this first-hand information, I have arranged with Albert E. Smith, president of the Vitagraph Company of America, for the marketing through that organization of "The Common Cause."

Assured therefore of the highest efficiency in the matter of distribution, all that I am putting into the production of the "The Common Cause" will be well worth while, for I know that its message will reach to the farthest corners of the continent—into the smallest hamlet and cross roads.

J. STUART BLACKTON

The All-Star Cast

Sylvia Breamer
as "Mrs. Orrin Palmer"
Miss Breamer is the beautiful and talented young Australian actress whose superb performance of the heroine in J. Stuart Blackton's "Missing" won exceptional praise, and was one of the triumphs of her phenomenal career on the stage and screen.

Mlle. Marcel
as "Celeste"
Well known French actress who made an individual success in "The Fall of the Romanoffs."

Huntley Gordon
as "Edward Wadsworth"
One of the best known leading men on the stage or screen. His next appearance will be as Ethel Barrymore's leading man in "Our Mrs. McChesney."

Chas. & Violet Blackton
as "Two Little Refugees"
Clever child stars who scored in "The Battle Cry of Peace," "Country Life Series," etc. Charles also made an emphatic hit in "Missing"

A special musical score is being written for "The Common Cause" by the eminent composer, Manuel Klein, who was for ten years musical director and composer of the New York Hippodrome.

as a Wink!

EVERY man, woman and child of us wants to see just what happened when the Lusitania went down—just how she went down—how many torpedoings there were—how the maddened passengers flung themselves from the decks—what the boats did in saving life—who the famous men and women were who lost their lives—the whole history of the Great Catastrophe from beginning to end.

IT'S all here—every bit of it! Absolutely authentic in every detail and—it will burn in your brain forever.

MADE from 25,000 separate drawings on gelatine by the famous artist, Winsor McCay, requiring 22 months of work. Book it now for the most exciting, thrilling, absorbing single reel sensation ever shown in your house.

Gaumont

Individuality characterizes every picture produced by this world-famous house.

The showing of a Gaumont production assures the theatre-goer of clean but intensely interesting entertainment.

All Gaumont pictures—dramas, comedies, educationals, even its great independent News Service—are noted for their distinctive features.

This is especially true of the latest Gaumont production, the EXTRAORDINARY PHOTO-SERIAL:

The HAND of VENGEANCE

This serial contains only ten episodes of twenty reels.

But it contains double the number of startling situations found in the ordinary serial twice as long!

There is something new—something different—THE GAUMONT INDIVIDUALITY—in every scene.

Wise motion-picture men who have seen this serial in its entirety call it the big money-maker of 1918.

"Cupid Angling" with Ruth Roland

The crowning achievement in natural color motion photography.

The First Douglass Natural Color Pictures

This is the production that created such a furore in San Francisco at the Imperial Theatre and ran to big houses for one week.

This is the production that inspired the first three-color newspaper advertisement in Los Angeles for the Kinema Theatre.

Many of the scenic wonders of the West, including the Grand Canyon, Yosemite Falls, Yellowstone Park, California poppy fields, etc., etc., are interwoven around a beautiful love story.

Douglass Natural Color Pictures represent a tremendous advance in motion picture photography and are bound to be an additional protection to the exhibitor's investment.

Timely Suggestions To Producers:

Never, in the history of the industry, has a substantial, efficient organization been so necessary to the successful marketing of productions in foreign territory. War time conditions make exacting service a paramount necessity. Our facilities for the sale, exploitation, routing, shipping, collecting, insuring, etc., of film are the result of years of experience in foreign fields. We would be glad of the opportunity to show you how the house of ROBERTSON-COLE can better serve you.

The scope of our sales organization is broad enough to meet the requirements of the most extensive producers who have to get big round sums for their pictures; and at the same time is so constituted that it can give the same painstaking, result-getting attention to the less pretentious pictures.

Stars Come Through for Fourth Loan

Chairman Zukor of the National Association's Committee Reports the Work of His Confreres Greatly Simplified by the Alacrity and Enthusiasm Displayed by the Leading Screen Players in Putting Over Thousand-Foot Liberty Specials

THE invitation extended by Frank R. Wilson, director of publicity for the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign, to the stars of the motion picture industry to make short Liberty Loan pictures has been accepted with alacrity and enthusiasm by practically all of those whose aid was solicited. As a result, the committee appointed by the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry, of which Adolph Zukor is chairman, finds its work simplified to a great extent and is now engaged chiefly on the details of distribution.

It was the original intention of the Zukor committee to supply the stories to the various companies and stars, but after due consideration it was decided it would be better to outline the character of stories desired, leaving the details to the originality of the stars and their scenario writers. This method has been followed and is proving extremely successful.

So enthusiastic is Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe, that he has issued specific instructions to the various departments of the company as to the methods to be pursued, supplementing them with the following statement:

"We propose to bend every effort in assisting the Government in making the next Liberty Loan Drive the success it deserves to be. All the Pathe stars, including Pearl White, Frank Keenan, Fannie Ward, Ruth Roland, Harold Lloyd, Bebe Daniels, Baby Marie Osborne and other, are going to bend their shoulders to the wheel and work for Uncle Sam. The services of these stars are at the disposal of the Government and the Pathe company is ready and willing to co-operate along any other lines that the Government may suggest."

President Samuel Goldfish, of Goldwyn, has notified the committee that Mabel Normand and Mae Marsh will start work on their picture as soon as suitable stores are worked out, while Willard Mack, Goldwyn's scenario chief, begged the privilege of making a thousand foot picture starring Pauline Frederick and including a number of other well-known Goldwyn players. This offer was immediately accepted and the picture is now in the making.

Griffith Will Direct a Lillian Gish Picture.

Mr. Zukor has received a telegram from D. W. Griffith, stating that he will personally direct the picture in which Lillian Gish is to appear. All of the other stars connected with the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation who were requested to make pictures have responded to the invitation and are either now at work on their productions or are having their stories written for them. Speaking for Jesse L. Lasky, vice president in charge of productions, Whitman Bennett stated that pictures will be made by Billie Burke, George M. Cohan, Marguerite Clark, Elsie Ferguson, Wallace Reid, Fred Stone, Enrico Caruso and John Barrymore, from all of whom definite acceptances have been received. Others now out on location have not been heard from yet, but there is no doubt as to their willingness.

Thomas H. Ince has written Mr. Zukor that in addition to separate pictures featuring Enid Bennett, Dorothy Dalton and Charles Ray there will be a special Thomas H. Ince picture in which the director himself will give on the screen his idea of the proper way to sell Liberty Bonds. Two comedies also have been pledged by Mack Sennett, who promises that each will carry a punch that will be compelling as a bond-selling argument.

Albert E. Smith, president of Vitagraph, in a long letter to Chairman Zukor, has placed every facility of his company at the disposal of the committee, and further states that pictures will be made by the following Vitagraph stars: Earle Williams, Alice Joyce, Gladys Leslie, Harry Morey, Corrinne Griffith, Bessie Love and William Duncan. Mr. Smith and the entire Vitagraph scenario staff are now busily engaged in providing suitable stories and nothing will be permitted to stand in the way of completing the pictures on time.

From Lewis J. Selznick and Nicholas Schenck it is learned that Alice Brady, Norma Talmadge and Clara Kimball Young, Select stars, have accepted the invitation to make pictures.

In addition to Mme. Nazimova and Ethel Barrymore, both of whom will start work this week on their contributions, Metro announces that Harold Lockwood, Emily Stevens and Edith Storey have completed pictures.

Doug and Bill Have Finished Theirs.

Douglas Fairbanks and William S. Hart have already completed their pictures. While no definite word has yet been received from Mary Pickford, the committee believes it a foregone conclusion that she will not overlook the present opportunity.

Another acceptance received last week was that of Sessue Hayakawa, and both William and Dustin Farnum, the former with the Fox organization and the latter with the Sherman Pictures Corporation, telegraphed that their pictures have already been completed and are now in the process of being assembled.

William L. Sherrill, president of the Frohman Amusement Corporation, wrote a letter to Arthur Brisbane requesting that he write the story for the picture in which Jack Sherill is to be starred. Mr. Brisbane not only wrote the story but wrote a column editorial commending the plans of the Zukor committee.

Charlie Chaplin Will Contribute.

Charlie Chaplin will make a picture, as his telegram to Frank R. Wilson, director of publicity, Treasury Department, indicates:

> "Your letter at hand and I will make with pleasure a picture for the Fourth Liberty Loan and rush same as soon as possible to committee headed by Mr. Zukor."

To this message Mr. Wilson replied:

> "We are certainly greatly pleased to receive your communication saying that you will make a film for Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. Your work in last campaign was very beneficial to loan, and I am sure you will be able to do a great deal to help us in the forthcoming drive. We have notified Mr. Zukor, who is in charge of production and distribution of these films. Best personal regards."

The Drews Will Work at Famous Players Studio.

Especially worthy of comment is the acceptance of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew, one of the first to be received, for it will be recalled that Mr. Drew is the father of S. Rankin Drew, the first prominent American member of the motion picture industry to be killed in France. Mr. and Mrs. Drew, who are now appearing on the legitimate stage, wrote that they would be glad to make a picture, but owing to the fact that they were not now connected with any producing organization and had no studio to work in someone would have to lend them one. The Famous Players-Lasky Corporation immediately proffered the use of either of its Eastern studios to the Drews and they have agreed to have their contribution ready on time.

The title presentation of all the pictures will be uniform and will bear the official imprint of the Treasury Department, together with an inscription to the effect that the picture was made and distributed through the co-operation of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry. Owing to the fact that such an enormous number of prints must be made of these pictures in order that every theatre in the country may be served in the short space of three weeks, it is absolutely necessary that the pictures be completed as soon as possible. All of the negatives and one positive print of each picture must be in the hands of the committee by August 25, and the stipulation that no pictures will be accepted after that date will be rigidly enforced.

As previously announced, the pictures will be booked to the exhibitors of the country free of charge, and it is planned to have the exhibitors run a different picture every day of the drive. The handling of the distribution, it is expected, will be a comparatively simple matter, as there are to be three thousand prints in circulation. Walter W. Irwin has charge of this part of the committee's work and announcement of his plans in detail may be expected some time this week.

New York Operators Submit Scale

Creel Lifts Ban on Air Photographs

Government Will Also Permit, Under Official Supervision, Taking Pictures of Construction.

ONE of the most important Government decisions relating to film news is that by which the ban was lifted this week from the taking of photographs of airplane operations. It affects the whole field of news pictures, including newspaper photography as well as motion picturedom. It will provide an unusually valuable supply of news pictures to appease the public appetite for such things, which has grown enormously.

The Universal, which operates Current Events, Animated Weekly and Screen Magazine services, and which has been striving for months to get the right to take aviation pictures, acted quickly when permission was finally flashed forth. The ban lifting notice was issued by Captain Lawrence Rubel, of the Committee on Public Information.

Inside of a few minutes Jack Cohn, in charge of Universal's news pictorials, telegraphed orders to all his men within striking distance of the twenty-six aviation camps, to get busy quick on good big aviation films.

The decision permits film men to take pictures, under official supervision, of course, of airplane construction as well as the actual flying affairs.

Film men express the belief that the tremendous aid they have given to the Liberty Loan Committee, Food and Fuel Administrations, Departments of Labor and Agriculture, Red Cross and the war-making services of the country in general has influenced the Government in modifying its restrictions.

Not a day goes by that does not bring to the film news desk a request from some department of the Government for a particular picture to reveal a particular war message on the screen. This relation between the Government and the news pictorial producers has become systematized to the last degree. As a result of this condition the news pictorial has risen from the plan of trailer and to that of special feature. And from a historical standpoint, the news films have become a storehouse of information. The Universal has a library of news pictures collected through the four years of war, that is worth many thousands of dollars to the Government. It was from this library, in fact, that the Universal was able to mobilize material for the feature film, "Crashing Through to Berlin," which Jewel Productions, Inc. has purchased.

EILEEN PERCY PLAYING FOR METRO.

Eileen Percy has been engaged by Metro to play opposite Bert Lytell in "Making Good," the story of which was written by Mr. Lytell in collaboration with George D. Baker, manager of production of Metro's west coast studios. Miss Percy's theatrical career dates back ten years. At that time she played child parts in road productions traveling all over the country.

Four years after her entrance into the drama, Miss Percy joined the Ziegfeld Follies. It was while appearing in the Follies that she was induced to have a "test" picture made and she photographed so beautifully that she was at once given a contract to play opposite Douglas Fairbanks in a series of his pictures.

Here Are Figures in "Crusaders" Contest

Now You Estimate for Yourself Your Standing in the Race for the Splendid Trophy Offered by the Moving Picture World to the Exchange Showing the Largest Relative Bookings for "Pershing's Crusaders"

HERE are the official figures to be used in determining the winner of the huge bronze trophy that presently is to decorate the office of the exchange manager whose staff shows the greatest amount of hustle in getting "Pershing's Crusaders" before the public. These figures are official and are given for all First National Exchanges. The figures for the territories occupied by the State Committees of Defense are not yet announced, but will be given later. Working with these figures, there is a close race between ten of the eighteen exchanges, with plenty of time in which to change the figures. It should be remembered that to count in this contest all contracts should be reported before September 1, but they need not be for showings prior to that date. It is "bookings" and not "showings" upon which the contest is to be decided.

There is another heavy advance all along the line, as is shown by the advertising pages where the latest definite results are recorded. Last week you were given a table of bookings to that date. To get the new bookings, merely count the starred names and add these to the totals shown last week.

We think Des Moines must have been swanking us—to employ Allied slang—when they asked that the trophy be sent on at once without the mere formality of waiting for a count-up. They have 1,557 houses to draw to, and it is evident that a lot of towns are not going to see the film. This is a pity, because it is something that every man, woman and child in America should see. When you read that the raincoat companies are charged with turning out inferior product it is a comfort to turn to the film and to realize that raincoats are but a small feature of the great work being done. It takes all sorts of men to make a nation and it will cheer your heart to see how most of the men are plugging away at their bit. The manager who passes over a single issue of these Government films is neither a patriot nor wise. To show them is a patriotic duty and to handle them right is to make money.

Of course you cannot merely book the film and then kick because Secretary Baker does not send a regiment from the nearest cantonment to bayonet the people into your house. That's the way it is done in Germany, not over here; but if you make the right sort of announcement and follow it up you'll be surprised to find that you can make as much money as you can with an one of the fifty-seven varieties of Chaplin films. Get the Boy Scouts out, coax the local band. Fake up some sort of a "production" and you'll get enough money to pay for the program feature you have had to shelve and you'll still show a profit.

J. J. Schuester, for example, has a house in Wagner, S. D. He put on the film properly with some tableaux and a lot of germane noise and he did so well that he is already asking for the next film in the series for two days instead of one and he wants it right out of Minneapolis. He showed to more than 1,000 persons for "Pershing's Crusaders," and he realizes that if he holds the film over the first day's audience is going to go out and press-agent the rest of the town.

It has been pretty hot in New York the past few weeks, yet the Cohan theatre has been crowded with paid admissions, and you hear more talk of "America's Answer" along Broadway than you do of the thousand and one "patriotic" films. One night, for example, the house was packed by the Knights of Columbus, then holding a convention here. A few days later the Mystic Shriners took the entire seating capacity, and another night was filled in by the Rotary Club. You can do the same thing in your own town with "Pershing's Crusaders." You can sell seats by the block instead of singly, and you can keep your house filled.

Lee L. Goldberg, of Louisville, reports that even the tanks and the mining camps are handling the picture at a profit. All you have to do is to create the right sort of an atmosphere and the film will do the rest. You can get the local notables to make speeches, you can call in the singers and musicians and have the biggest time since the circus was in town, and you will be making money and you'll have the handsome Government-awarded Victory Screen Pledge to hang in your lobby and show that you have done your bit. Have a little local pride. Help out your local exchange. If the salesman does not get around to you in time, telegraph in. Don't wait. Do it today if you did not do it yesterday. And remember, it is not to help the First National. It's to help your country.

We present below the latest figures on the standing of the contestants, giving the total bookings to date, so far as they have been recorded and approved. It will be seen that New Orleans is getting busy now and Chicago has taken a decided jump. Almost all of the exchanges have advanced their figures and even Washington is showing more ample bookings, though the District and Maryland and Delaware combined still show but 15 bookings out of a quota of 322. But a very respectable total of 1,727 houses has been played, and the returns are still incomplete with several districts open.

House to Lay 5 Per Cent. Rental Tax

Ways and Means Committee Also to Recommend Doubling of Annual Impost on Theatres.

MOTION PICTURES are to pay a much larger share of the war expenses during the coming year, if the provisions of the proposed new war revenue bill, tentatively agreed to by the members of the House Ways and Means Committee are later adopted by the House itself and by the Senate. It is expected the committee will conclude its deliberations and present a bill and its report and recommendations August 19. There will probably be some changes made in the House of Representatives, but substantially it will be adopted in the lower house as reported by the committee.

Congress has to raise eight billion dollars. To do so, it is said by the financial experts of the Government, necessitates doubling present taxes and the institution of new methods of revenue-raising because of changes that must be made to smooth out the laws. The film industry will, unless the business takes a slump as a result of the extra burden, pay more than double what it is now called upon to provide.

When the committee representing the whole industry was here some time ago it recommended the adoption of a rentals tax to be paid by the exhibitor, presumably to replace the present footage tax. The congress committee has seized upon the idea and has figured out a rate of 5 per cent of the amount paid by the exhibitor for his films to go into Uncle Sam's coffers. At present it is the contention of the exhibitors that the manufacturers make a profit on the 15 cents a reel a day assessment made upon them to meet the footage tax. This means a total of 75 cents upon a five-reel show. The contention has been that this is burdensome, particularly on the cheaper shows, but it will not be half as burdensome as the 5 per cent tax. While the exhibitors whose daily rentals are under $15 will benefit by the new plan, the exhibitor who is in the habit of paying $50 a day for his films will have to come across with $2.50, more than three times his present tax cost. The manufacturers get out from under.

Would Double Annual Tax.

Theatres, including moving picture shows, museums and concert halls having a seating capacity of not over 250 will be called upon to pay $50 per annum, instead of as at present $25; where the seating capacity is between 250 and 500 the rate is increased from $50 to $100; where between 500 and 800 to $150 from $75, and where the capacity is over 800, the tax is jumped from $100 to $200.

As tentatively agreed upon, the admission taxes are doubled and, further, a one-cent tax is to be imposed upon all admissions which do not exceed seven cents.

As stated above, all of the taxes are doubled or more than doubled, and the exhibitors will have to pay taxes of the same nature as they are paying now. There are the levies on freight and express shipments, railroad transportation, telephone and telegraph messages, and many others, all of which go to increase the overhead cost in theatre operation.

If the industry is to do anything toward easing up this burden, the problem should be taken up by a committee of exhibitors—for it is the exhibitors who are vitally interested—with the members of the Senate Finance Committee. It is declared that many theatres will darken their doors under so heavy a burden as this. Congress wants to get $8,000,000,000, but not at the risk of closing up any industry—it does not want to kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Film Now May Be Exported to Sweden

War Trade Board Will Consider Applications for Licenses Subject to Specified Regulations.

EXPORTERS interested in the movement of merchandise to Sweden are being informed that the War Trade Board will now consider applications for the exportation of all commodities to that country. Exporters in the United States, before filing applications for export licenses, must obtain from the prospective importer in Sweden advice that there has been issued by an appropriate importing association or by the States Handel's Kommission a certificate covering the proposed consignment. The number of the certificate should be forwarded by the importer in Sweden to the American exporter. This number should be specified on Supplemental Information Sheet X-104, which must be duly executed and annexed to the application for an export license.

Applications for licenses to Sweden of commodities for which a Handel's Kommission certificate or an importing association certificate is required will be considered only in the event that the said certificate has been issued subsequent to June 14. Certificates issued prior to that date will be treated as void.

Porto Rico Has a Censorship Rumble

Moral Crusade Sweeping Over Island Aims a Shot at Two Motion Pictures But Fails to Score Hit.

San Juan, Porto Rico, August 1.

THE moral crusade that has been sweeping over San Juan of late seems to have led to an outcry against some of the films exhibited in the theatre and resulted, on Saturday, in the seizure of two films by orders of Insular Chief of Police Shanton, who had them placed in charge of Municipal Judge Castejon, at the same time making a statement to the court of just why the films had been seized.

On Saturday afternoon, at the suggestion of Judge Castejon, a party of about twenty well-known persons gathered at the Cine Luna to witness an exhibition of the films in question and to act as a censorship committee, in conjunction with Judge Castejon and Colonel Shanton and to assist them in determining as to whether the moral tone of the picture plays in question is detrimental to the public morals.

The general consensus of opinion expressed by members of the committee was that the pictures were perfectly proper. The opinion was expressed that the pictures were intended for grown ups, and perhaps might not be suitable for young girls and boys not familiar with the ways of the world, in just the same way that many books now published and found in public libraries are not intended for young people. But there is nothing essentially indecent or immoral in the scenes depicted. The suggestion was made that, in these days when pictures to be shown are so well advertised in the press, it is more a matter for parents to determine whether or not their children shall visit the houses where such pictures are exhibited.

The two films that were seized are "One Hour," which was shown to large audience at the Park Cine a few nights ago, and "The Victim," a powerful picture of the melodrama type that has been largely advertised. Both of these photoplays have been passed by the censors on the mainland.

Upon the findings of the special committee, Judge Castejon decided to release the films and they will accordingly be exhibited.

Colonel Shanton made the statement that his action in seizing the films was based upon the fact that both Governor Yager and himself had received a number of complaints from persons who had seen the pictures to the effect that they were of a high immoral character and not fit to be seen by girls and young women.

"My Four Years in Germany" is being widely advertised throughout the island and one or two private exhibitions have been given prior to its public release here. The film is being shown by West Indies Films, Inc., represented here by Raphael P. Martin.

Judging from the popularity of "The Kaiser," "My Four Years in Germany" will have big business.

BOARD OF REVIEW PRAISES "SALOME."

In a special report, the National Board of Review of Motion Pictures has declared, following a private screening of "Salome," that the Fox-Theda Bara drama "should rank with the best screen productions." The report of the board was as follows:

"We wish to advise you that the majority comment on your photoplay 'Salome' was as follows: Entertainment value, excellent; educational value, good; technical handling, good; costuming, fine; atmospheric quality, scenic setting, convincing; historical value, considerable; moral effect, good. General comment: In the opinion of those present this production was a serious and dignified portrayal of the story of Salome, imaginative and dramatic, and presented in a way that should rank with the best screen productions."

LOCKWOOD COMPANY GOES TO SAENGER STUDIOS.

The Harold Lockwood Company, one of Metro's producing units, has changed its base of operations and has moved from the Bacon Backer studios, which it occupied since its arrival in the East, early last month, to the Saenger studios, at 134th street and Park avenue, New York, where it will remain for the remainder of its eastern stay.

Ruffner Uses Butte Fire Department

By Epes W. Sargent

Western Manager Uses City Fire Department to Ballyhoo Daily for Selig "Still Alarm" and Works In "House of Hate"

CERTAINLY it has to be handed to Ralph R. Ruffner, of the Rialto Theatre, Butte, Mont. He used the city fire department of Butte to ballyhoo for his presentation of Selig's "The Still Alarm" and he did it for three days hand running. More than one manager has borrowed a policeman or fireman for lobby work, and marines have "plugged" for "The Unbeliever" and other propaganda plays, but we think Mr. Ruffner is the first to use the fire department of a regular town for ballyhoo purposes for the full three days of a run.

When he saw Selig was releasing a five reel version of the play that was one of the forerunners of the "practical props" school of melodrama he thought he saw a chance to do something real for a change. He had seen the play back in 1890—"when I was a very small boy," to quote his own words—and he got busy. About a month ahead of the showing he had the picture sent to the house and he ran it before a select gathering including Chief Martin, of the Fire Department; the Mayor of Butte, the State Fire Marshal, the City Council and other city officials. Chief Martin was the man he was after, but he got them all in that none might be offended. Then he sent the reels back and booked them for a three-day showing after he had convinced the fire chief that here was a chance to show the citizens of Butte what a fine department they had. Just to be a good sport he was willing to have a crowd in front of the Rialto, since that was a good place to see from, and he would let them have it just before the matinee, because there would be a lot of people down that way, anyhow, coming to the matinee. The Chief and the Mayor seemed to feel the same way about it, and anyhow Ruffner was a good fellow, and so they took the scheme in. They got together and laid out a program. An alarm was to be turned in, the apparatus would roll up and they would see how long it would take to get to the top of the five story theatre and throw a stream. Then Ruff would have someone in readiness to be "rescued" and the people could see how that was done. It is not recorded that Ruff told them that the Hooded Terror would be the one to be rescued, but probably he had it in mind all the time.

Ralph R. Ruffner.

Then Ruff went to work on his advertising campaign. There were two daily papers and so both carried full pages on the opening day. Throughout it was announced as an "exhibition" by the Fire Department, and not as a ballyhoo. Of course the galloping horses and the flaming letters helped along the display, but there possibly are still some people in Butte who think it was fortunate that Ruffner happened to have a fire play about the time the Fire Department decided to have a display.

Just to help things along, the city hall is only a block away, and the old fire bell was used to sound the alarm, "Box 61" being that nearest the house. The crowds were tremendous and packed the sidewalks long before the box was pulled. Trucks and a pumping engine dashed up, the aerial ladder was raised, with a fireman perched on the top rung, others stood in readiness to run up the hose and inside of 90 seconds from the start of the ladder there was a stream playing upon an imaginary fire on the roof of the building, which equals in height the average six story building.

Of course some water came down on the crowd, but that only helped the fun along, and presently a shout arose as a diminutive "hooded terror" appeared in a window on the fourth floor with agonized appeals to be saved. The crowd roared as he was carried down the ladder by a stalwart fireman, for "The House of Hate" is a Rialto serial, and the town has been worked up over the identity of the masked villain.

Then a fleet of small boys, each dressed as a hooded terror, appeared in the crowd, for Ruff had advertised that every small hooded terror could collect one silver dollar if he showed up at the box office in proper attire, which is a stunt other exhibitors can copy even if they are unable to borrow the local fire department. But there is no reason why other departments should not be used, now the way has been paved. It is a good advertisement for the city executives and the department and splendid practice for the men, particularly in cities where they are not often called to large conflagrations.

Levy Tries New House Plan in Seattle

Western Manager Turns His 2100-Seat Orpheum Into a Home for Long Runs with Big Features.

THERE has been a great deal of discussion of late on just how long motion pictures would continue to attract the public as a source of amusement. There is little comparison in the motion pictures of yesterday and to-day in regard to stories, productions and stars—yet there is little doubt that the motion pictures of the future will be large and stupenduous productions put out on the road, in the same manner as a legitimate show, carrying their own advance agents, managers and probably orchestras.

D. W. Griffith and William Fox were the first big producers to start this movement, and they have been handsomely rewarded for their pioneering along this line. Naturally the next step would be where and how these productions could be played. The motion picture theatres are usually booked so solid that there is little chance to break into them on a percentage basis, while the larger legitimate houses are so situated that they cannot juggle their bookings in order to accommodate the picture.

Eugene Levy, manager and owner of Levy's Orpheum, Seattle, Wash., has looked into the future in regard to this matter and has practically changed the policy of his million-dollar theatrefi with a seating capacity of 2100 seats, into an amusement house for handling only the biggest films on the market either by buying them outright, playing on a percentage basis or renting the theatre.

Mr. Levy started his new policy with D. W. Griffith's "Hearts of the World." So great was the success that the production ran to its fifth week, smashing all records in Seattle for a long engagement. Mr. Levy has installed a forty-piece orchestra under Frank Alderman.

Levy Believes in Display Advertising.

Mr. Levy is also a great believer in large display advertising. He secured the services of Vic Gauntlett, who started off the campaign on "Hearts of the World" by taking a double page advertisement in the Sunday Times of Seattle. He then followed it up with a series of advertisements that has hammered the public from all angles, with the result that capacity houses attended every showing of "Hearts of the World."

Mr. Levy has booked to follow "Hearts of the World" Theda Bara's latest screen offering, "Salome," and there is little doubt there will be another record broken.

In regard to the new policy of his theatre Mr. Levy says: "I am after the biggest productions on the market and will pay any price in order to secure the ones I want. I feel that Seattle is now willing to pay a nominal admission price to see the best motion picture offerings, as they have already shown in 'Hearts of the World.' If the motion picture companies would turn out more big productions, more picture houses throughout the country would adopt the policy I have, for really, when you stop to think, the motion picture business of the future will be along these lines. Although I am pioneering I feel confident that I will blaze the trail clear enough so that there will be a number of other houses throughout the United States follow my example."

ANNUAL DIRECTORS' MEETING HELD.

Following a luncheon at the Palace Hotel, San Francisco, the United Motion Picture Industries of Northern California held its annual directors' meeting on July 31, which resulted in the unanimous re-election of the officers. They are: President, Louis Reichert; vice president, Eugene Roth; secretary, Norman Eisner; treasurer, Sam Levin; directors, M. J. Cohen, Eugene Roth, Howard J. Sheehan, Louis Reichert, J. A. Partington, Sam Levin, Norman Eisner and Herman Wobber. Problems pertaining to the industry were discussed, and in spite of war pressure the business and accomplishments of the year were considered satisfactory.

Semi-Annual New York Trips Necessary

So Declares John Hazza of Alberta, Who Comes a Distance to Pick up the Latest Angles.

AMONG the well-known men from out of town who visited New York during August was John Hazza, general manager of the Northwest Theatres Company, Limited, of Edmonton, Alberta, and member of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, Limited, of Canada.

Mr. Hazza's visit to New York was for the purpose of getting into personal touch with business conditions at headquarters, and to attend to several important metropolitan film premieres liable to help him in arranging his own plans for the coming season.

"I find a semi-annual trip to New York absolutely indispensable to a proper comprehension of the business of exhibiting pictures in a high class way," said Mr. Hazza in the course of a brief interview. "Important events in the film industry occur so frequently and conditions change so rapidly that one must keep in touch with New York ideas to maintain his place in the procession."

As the proprietor of the Empress and the Bijou Theatres in Edmonton, Mr. Hazza can speak from the practical viewpoint of the experienced showman in this connection.

"We recently played Ambassador Gerard's 'My Four Years in Germany' for a full week to record business," Mr. Hazza went on. "This was during the hottest week ever known in the northwest—the same spell of weather you New Yorkers were suffering under when I arrived here. It is only once or twice a year we are able to keep a picture on a full week at Edmonton, but in the case of 'My Four Years in Germany' the patronage grew steadily from day to day. Prior to the regular opening we gave a special exhibition of the picture for Lieutenant-Governor Brett of the Province of Alberta and his staff and a number of local newspaper editors. As a result, public interest in the production was keyed up highly, despite the terrific heat."

Mr. Hazza made some interesting comment on the daylight saving law as it is applied in his part of the world. "There was really no necessity for putting the plan into operation in the Canadian northwest," he stated, "as we naturally have very long days and short nights throughout the summer months. But I suppose it was inevitable, so long as the rest of Canada and the United States had adopted it. The moving pictures suffered considerably at first, as people spent the extra hour of daylight after supper gardening or playing outdoor games, and forgot about the pictures. But now conditions are getting back to normal again."

A native of Toronto, Mr. Hazza has made his home in Edmonton for several years past, although retaining substantial property interests in Toronto.

WIDEAWAKE EXHIBITORS USE PHONOGRAPHS.

Many progressive exhibitors have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity afforded them by a graphophone company which is announcing the production of a record containing "Pershing's Own Voice from the Battlefields" and "Ambassador Gerard's Address on Loyalty."

When showing "Pershing's Crusaders" or "My Four Years in Germany," several alert First National exhibitors have been quick to take advantage of the opportunity presented to install a phonograph on the stage or in the lobby to run this timely record.

In many of the towns the newspaper publicity received for the innovation has amply repaid the exhibitors for the small extra expense involved.

BROOKS EXPLOITATION MANAGER FOR PATHE.

Paul Brunet, vice-president and general manager of Pathe Exchange, Inc., announces the appointment of Edgar O. Brooks as exploitation manager, a new office, which promises to be of benefit to exhibitors of Pathe pictures. Mr. Brooks, who has had many years' experience in the motion picture and theatrical business and is connected with Pathe's sales department, comes to this important task qualified in every way to give the exhibitor hints on how to cash in with their motion picture programs.

BLACKTON TO TAKE OVER HIS OWN STUDIO.

J. Stuart Blackton, who is producing "The Common Cause," a big propaganda special, under the auspices of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, will this week take over his studios in Brooklyn. While in California during the past winter Commodore Blackton sub-let his plant to William Fox. This contract has expired.

The Motion Picture Exhibitor

Schaefer and Rembusch Get Together

Everything Points to a Successful Convention of the Whole Trade—More Strictly, a Great Business Conference.

FRANK J. REMBUSCH, secretary of the convention committee, of the A. E. A. National Convention, came into Chicago Tuesday evening, August 13, and one of the first important things he did was to hold a conference with Peter J. Schaefer, president of the M. P. E. L. of A. The initial meeting took place Wednesday and was continued the following day.

Both men are good friends, of ten years' standing, and while many things were discussed it need scarcely be stated nothing was given out at this time, except that President Schaefer has agreed to address the national convention at one of its sessions and to act as toastmaster at one of the daily luncheons.

The convention committee has mailed a letter to every state president and secretary of the M. P. E. L. of A. and of the A. E. A., requesting them to participate in the approaching convention and to bring with them reports of the conditions in each state, with the object of ascertaining how a national organization can be most helpful to the industry as a whole.

As previously stated in these columns, the leading men in the trade—including producers, distributors and supply men—have been invited to attend, and it is also hoped by the convention committee that exhibitors from all parts of the country, irrespective of affiliation with either organization now existing, will come on to take part in this great business conference of the industry.

The object and the plan of this convention, it is again emphasized, are wholly away from those formulated and carried out at any preceding convention. Everyone in the moving picture business, who has a message to deliver for the general good of the industry, is cordially invited, and he will be given an opportunity to voice it and a respectful hearing.

Secretary Rembusch announces that prominent speakers will positively appear at fixed hours each day, and that the balance of the time will be devoted to a general discussion of the trade by those present. In other words, the convention will be a great get-together meeting, where important topics will be amicably discussed for the good of all concerned.

During the first four days the proceedings will be confined strictly to the discussion of business and its condition, and politics will be positively excluded.

On Friday, September 6, there will be an open business meeting for exhibitors, whether they belong to an organization or not. Some of the subjects to be discussed on that day are the tax question, Sunday opening, censorship, better pictures, efficiency and economy in production, distribution and presentation of pictures; the organization of the industry so that it shall become more powerful, active and representative in a national sense; advertising, technical art of the picture, etc.

Some of the prominent men in the trade who have already promised to attend and address the convention are William Fox, William A. Brady, Walter W. Irwin, Samuel L. Rothapfel, Frank Buehler, manager of the Stanley circuit of theatres, Philadelphia; Frank Newman, owner of the Royal Theatre, Kansas City, Mo., and Barrett McCormick, manager of the Circle Theatre, Indianapolis.

Charles E. Hart, director of the Division of Films, will also come on from New York to address the convention.

Many other prominent men in the various branches of the trade whose names can not yet be given will also deliver important addresses.

Messrs. Frank and Rembusch assured the writer that everything concerning the convention had been arranged at the time this article was written. They left for New York, Friday, August 16, for a stay of one week. Their headquarters will be at the Hotel Astor. While there Mr. Rembusch will call on well-known men in the trade, whose presence at the convention is most essential to insure a truly representative gathering. J. S. McQ.

MARYLAND EXHIBITORS HOLD PICNIC.

The picnic which was held by the Maryland Exhibitor's League at Monument Park, Baltimore, on Saturday, August 10, was very much of a success, when it is taken into consideration that the night was cloudy and started out with a heavy rain and also that only one of the film celebrities who were scheduled to be present appeared upon the scene. About 1,500 people gathered at the picnic to meet the stars scheduled to appear. A dancing pavilion was filled with eager moving picture fans.

After a wait of twenty minutes, during which Cupero's New theatre band gave selections, June Caprice was escorted to the band stand by Frank A. Hornig, president of the league; L. A. De Hoff, secretary, and several others.

The success of the affair financially and otherwise is principally due to the hard work of L. A. De Hoff and Frank A. Hornig, Irvine Levine, and others on the committee, including Eugene B. McCurdy, J. Louis Rome and Thomas D. Goldberg.

War Demands Give Exchanges Concern

Down in Dallas Managers Are Training Women to Fill Places of Department Men.

WITH scores of Dallas film exchange employees wearing Uncle Sam's uniform managers are in a quandary in regard to securing help. The selective draft age increase appears likely to take many of their experienced men, and already they are planning for the future.

Dozens of women have been employed by local film exchanges during the past few weeks and are being trained to fill the places of men going to war.

Manager Ned Depinet of Consolidated, seven of whose men have donned uniform during the past two or three months, and Manager J. B. Dugger of Vitagraph Co., whose office has given nine men to the army and navy, are of the opinion that all road men will have to be brought into the offices in the near future. Business then would be done through telephone calls or letters to exhibitors. The dimensions of the Southwestern territory will make telephoning a pretty costly business.

News of Los Angeles and Vicinity

By A. H. GIEBLER

One Hundred Comedies in One Hundred Weeks.

ON August 19 the Christie Comedy Company rounded out a period of 100 weeks, during which time a hundred comedies were produced and released. The hundredth comedy bears the title "Does Your Husband Flirt?" The Christie Brothers are rather proud of their record, and of the fact that they have actual financial proof that their comedies are steadily gaining in favor.

The Christie films feature the loves and tragedies of youth. The near-tragic incidents that happen to every pair of lovers before and after marriage are treated in a serio-humorous manner that recalls the exaggerated woes of the early romances of the elderly couples and anticipates the coming troubles of the young lovers who view the films.

During the past few months three of the Christie leading men have gone to war—Harry Ham, Neal Burns and Jimmy Harrison. Jay Belasco expects to be called at any time, and Harry Edwards and Bobby Vernon have just enlisted in the Navy.

Clarine Seymour is a new member of the Christie forces and will make her bow opposite Bobby Vernon in an early release.

Paton Celebrates Birthday.

Stuart Paton, directing Diando western companies, was presented with a platinum chain by W. A. S. Douglas and Leon T. Osborne and with a gold watch by members of the company on the occasion of his birthday, which was celebrated at the home of Howard Crampton, and which was attended by a large number of film celebrities.

Seven Companies Working at Brunton Plant.

Seven film producing companies are now installed at the Robert Brunton studios and are working on productions. Paralta has two companies, one with Louise Glaum, and the other with Bessie Barriscale. Mme. Yorska is working on her first film for the Matzene corporation. Helen Keller, the famous blind girl, is also at work on her first feature for the Helen Keller Film Corporation. Sessue Hayakawa, an old-timer at the plant, is making his third picture for the Haworth Pictures, and Frank Keenan is doing Pathe features. The seventh company is headed by Marie Dressler, who is working on comedies.

Kerrigan Moves to Hollywood.

J. Warren Kerrigan has moved from the old Selig studios at Edendale to the Willis and Inglis studios in Hollywood, where work is progressing on "Three X Gordon," a story by Kenneth Clarke. Later an Alaskan story by the same author will be filmed. Wallace Kerrigan, brother of the star, is seen in his old capacity around the plant, as studio manager, and Lois Wilson is playing the opposite lead in the picture. Negotiations between Jesse Hampton, business manager for Kerrigan, and Mrs. Richard Harding Davis are being made for the film rights of "Soldiers of Fortune" and "Ranson's Folly."

Harold Bell Wright Productions Coming.

Harold Bell Wright, noted novelist, has organized a company for the production of his best sellers for the screen, and sets have been erected in a studio in Hollywood for certain scenes to be made for the first picture, "The Little Shepherd of the Hills," the exterior scenes to be made on the mountains beyond Pasadena.

George McDaniel, who has played leading roles in Lasky and Fox productions during the past two years, has been engaged by Mr. Wright as leading man in the first production. Mr. McDaniel has appeared in the Victor Herbert Opera Company in New York, and in stock companies, also in New York. After finishing "The Little Shepherd of the Hills, work will be started on "The Calling of Dan Matthews."

Jesse L. Lasky in Town.

Jesse L. Lasky, vice president of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, arrived in Los Angeles the first week in August, to remain his usual six weeks. Mr. Lasky is quoted as saying that Los Angeles is to be the haven of motion picture producers this winter. The schedule of the Famous Players-Lasky stars has been arranged so that while all of them may not be here at any one time, they will all be here at some time or other during the winter, excepting Caruso, he says.

Howells Confers with Tally.

David Howells, foreign representative for the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, has been in Los Angeles the past week in conference with T. L. Tally, vice president of the organization, regarding future plans for the foreign bookings of the Circuit's productions.

Film Producers to Pool Extras.

In order to comply with the "work or fight" ruling, the motion picture producers in Southern California have evolved a plan whereby the men employed as extras at the different studios will be secured through a central agency, which will have on its list only a sufficient number to protect the interests of the motion picture industry. This plan will give practically steady employment to about four hundred men, whereas the original number of men who found occasional work in big productions, or in mob or crowd scenes, has been estimated at 1,200. Draft board officials announced that they would not recognize the organization, but they would co-operate so that the picture concerns would be protected as far as possible. The new plan will necessitate longer working hours for the extras in most cases.

Lightless Nights in Los Angeles.

Monday and Tuesday night of each week have been designated as light saving nights for the city of Los Angeles. Motion picture theatres are not permitted to use display lights or electric signs, nor more light in the lobby than is necessary to conduct business on those two nights. One violation of the rule the first night the law went into effect was witnessed in a Broadway playhouse. The proprietor was warned not to commit a second offence, as he would make himself liable to punishment, which would probably be the loss of all lighting privileges for a certain period.

Theatre Attendant Killed by Negroes.

Emerson Schooler, 16 years old, doorkeeper of the Angelus Theatre, was stabbed by two negro boys whom he had ordered to leave the house because they had slipped in by another entrance and had taken seats near the front of the house. Young Schooler noticed the boys and made them leave by a rear door. The boys heaped abuse on him and dared him to come out. A few minutes later a patron coming that way saw the boy lying near the rear entrance and the two negro boys running down the alley. Schooler was taken to a hospital, but all attempts to revive him failed, and he died. The negro boys were captured and admitted having fought with the theatre attendant, but denied that they had stabbed him.

Godwin Repairs Wrong.

R. M. Godwin, the director of the School of Expression, who was accused of having swindled several young women out of various sums of money in not keeping his promise to teach them the art of acting before the camera and to find them work in film studios, appeared in court and testified that he had been called in the draft and that he had not intended to perpetrate any fraud. He agreed to turn over part of his army pay until the young women were reimbursed for the money he had collected from them.

Film Stars Aid War Exhibit.

At the Allied War Trophy Exhibit held in Exposition Park from August 1 to 11 a number of film stars from the various studios assisted in entertaining the multitudes of people that daily formed the audiences that viewed the sham battles, critically examined the big guns, the war tank and the souvenirs that were captured from the Huns.

Mary Pickford, besides impersonating Miss Los Angeles on the opening day and receiving the service flag given to the city by the Government, made an address in behalf of the various war stamps and bonds. Helen Keller, most famous blind girl in the world, and now a film star as well, also made a patriotic speech that was enthusiastically received. On other days, such as Naval Day and Children's Day, Douglas Fairbanks and Charles Chaplin appeared and delivered addresses.

A benefit given by the Stage Women's War Relief at the residence of Mrs. Estelle Dowling, was attended by the following film stars, who appeared in sketches, dances and other entertaining acts: Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ray, William Desmond, Bert Lytell, Harry McCoy, Bessie Barriscale, Howard Hickman, Lillian and Dorothy Gish.

The big movie masked ball to be given as a benefit for the War Hospital soon to be erected by the Motion Picture War Service Association at Shrine Auditorium has been postponed to August 17.

At War Benefits and Red Cross Shops.

The Stage Women's War Relief gave a big war fund benefit on August 10 at the Alexandria, at which a number of film stars took charge of booths and other forms of entertainment. Ralph Lewis was in charge of the dancing pavilion and Vera Lewis was mistress of the national marquee, which was decorated in red, white and blue and had all sorts of national emblems for sale. Gladys Brockwell peddled cigarettes; Charlie Ray presided at the paddle wheel, and Charlie Murray and Bryant Washburn auctioned off autographed photographs of Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, who was in town filling a vaudeville engagement at the Orpheum.

Theodore Roberts delighted the patrons of the Red Cross Shops at Eighth and Alvarado streets, on Tuesday, with a monologue and humorous "tea tales."

William S. Hart and other film stars attended the War Work Emergency Drivers' benefit given at the Rex Arms on Friday.

Louise Glaum, Katherine MacDonald, Mildred Harris, Winifred Weston, and Mr. and Mrs. Sessue Hayakawa appeared at Red Cross Headquarters on Saturday.

War Notes.

Kenneth Harlan, now in training at Camp Kearney, has been transferred to the 143d Artillery, Mary Pickford's own regiment.

Russell E. Smith, former scenario and publicity writer for the Betzwood Film Company, has joined the army.

The four stars in the new service flag at the Kinema means two Filipino boy ushers, Jack Loranger, former manager, and H. McQuestion, doorman.

A Present for Chaplin.

T. L. Tally, vice president of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, has a novel gift all ready to present to Charles Chaplin. The gift is a handsomely bound souvenir of Chaplin's first picture, "A Dog's Life," in which the comedian opened his engagement with this association. The book includes copies of advance advertising, colored plates, autographed letters from members of the Circuit who ran the picture, and a large number of criticisms and clippings.

Film Star Obtains Divorce.

Mae Murray, Bluebird star, known in private life as Mrs. Mae O'Brien, obtained a divorce from James O'Brien, a New York broker, in Los Angeles last week. Miss Murray was married to O'Brien on December 19, 1916, and the pair separated on January 3, 1917. Miss Murray testified that her brief married life began unhappily with a quarrel on the very night of the wedding, when she refused an intoxicating drink that her husband ordered for her at the wedding supper.

Picture Show at Balloon School.

The Army Balloon School at Arcadia, Cal., will be able to see moving picture shows in the future, as the camp has been provided with a projection machine by the Y. M. C. A., and moving pictures will be a permanent feature of the entertainments provided for the students of aviation. Wednesday has been set aside as educational day, when only films of an educational nature will be shown, in addition to lectures on various educational topics.

Hart to Take Active Part in Fourth Loan Drive.

William S. Hart is preparing to do his bit in the coming Fourth Liberty Loan drive by making a featurette, for which he wrote the story himself, and by making arrangements to drop all cinema work during the drive to go on a speaking tour as he did during the Third Liberty Loan drive.

Picture Previews.

Quinn's Rialto gave a private showing of "To Hell With the Kaiser," one morning last week, and invited as guests some eight hundred sailors and soldiers to view the film, filling up the remainder of the house with city officials and newspaper folk.

The first two of the Sessue Hayakawa features, "His Birthright" and "The Temple of Dusk," were given a private showing to a number of invited guests in the projection room of the Brunton studios.

Winter Headquarters.

Harry Aitken, president of Triangle, who has just arrived in Los Angeles from the east, predicts that nearly all the big picture stars of the country will make their winter headquarters in Southern California this year.

Entertained by Cowboy Soldiers.

Leon T. Osborne, vice president and treasurer of the Diando Film Corporation, was entertained at Camp Kearney recently by Art Acord and other cowboy-actor soldiers in training at the camp.

New Members to Miller Theatre Company.

Several northern capitalists have become interested in the new Miller Theatre that is going up on Broadway, owned by Fred and Roy Miller and Harry Leonhardt. J. L. Gottstein of the Greater Theatres Company, of the Northwest, and Messrs. Aronson and Davis have become partners to some extent in the new theatre, which promises to be one of the most up-to-date and modern on the west coast. Robert Bartleson has been engaged as secretary and assistant manager of the house.

Clune's Auditorium Renovated.

A thorough process of renovating and beautifying has been going on at Clune's Auditorium in preparation for the run of D. W. Griffith's new Artcraft picture, "A Great Love," which began an engagement on August 12. Bert St. John, manager of the house, and Theodore Newman, general manager of the Clune interests, have not overlooked the least little thing in the way of added comforts and pleasures for the patrons of the house.

New Theatre for Hill Street.

A new theatre is being planned by Alexander Pantages to be erected on the lot at Seventh and Hill Streets, adjoining the Los Angeles Athletic Club, which may cost all the way up to a million dollars. Mr. Pantages has not decided yet whether to make the building five or twelve stories, but he wants nine store rooms and the theatre a thing of classic beauty.

Service Star is Admission.

The Los Angeles Herald, an evening paper, was host to mothers, sweethearts and sisters of soldiers and sailors at the Kinema Theatre one afternoon last week between the hours of 12 and 5, during the run of "The Service Star," with Madge Kennedy in the leading role. All that was required of the guests was that they show their service star and pay the war tax.

Kehrlein Finds Business Good.

Emile Kehrlein, of the Kehrlein Kinema Circuit, which includes theatres in Oakland and Fresno, has returned from a visit to those two cities, and declares that although he found no place of amusement where people were being turned away, business conditions were good, and none of the exhibitors he spoke to were losing money.

The Alhambra Theatre boasts a splendid new augmented orchestra, which has been engaged to play afternoons and evenings during the run of the war films, such as "Pershing's Crusaders," which have been and will continue to be a feature of this house.

Jack Curtis, former assistant manager of Clune's Auditorium, has left for New York, motoring with friends as far as San Francisco.

Rubbernecking in Filmland

Personally Conducted by Giebler.

LADIES and Gentlemen, on a day a little more than four years ago two young men, weary and foot sore from tramping here and there in our fair city and its environs in search of a suitable location for their enterprise, stood on this corner casting their eyes across the street. Placing their respective left hands between the third and fourth buttons of their respective vests, they raised their right hands to the high heavens in a fine dramatic gesture and cried in a thankful and simultaneous voice: "Eureka! On yonder spot we will build our studio!"

One of these men, my friends, was named Jesse L. Lasky and the other Cecil B. De Mille.

On that fateful day, the block which you now see ornamented to the uttermost inch with buildings of various dimensions, all devoted to the making of movies, was the location of nothing more important than a small garage, a collection of weeds, wild geraniums and a gopher village. Now look at it!

The song that the gopher sang to his mate at eventide is replaced by the voice of the director's megaphone. The noise of the back firing of the disabled autos has long been stilled by the dull thud of the typewriting machines in the scenario and publicity departments.

Observe the long line of autos that are parked at the curb for the distance of the entire block, and not a flivver among them. All these machines belong to the people who work here.

All of which teaches us that the way to make money in the movies is to erect a studio on a plot of ground formerly occupied by a garage and a gopher village. That being accomplished, all that is necessary is to make pictures of the same class as the Lasky pictures and success and the income tax collector will be following you from early morn to dewey eve.

The Lasky plant is so large that it would take an entire week to give it anything like a comprehensive once over, but we will nevertheless go inside and see what we shall see.

The little room to the left houses the publicity department. The picture of the bearded gentleman hanging on the wall is a portrait done in oil of the late Ananias, the patron saint of all press agents.

The young man with the dreamy air and the large pipe is Kenneth McGaffey, head of the publicity department. The coupling of the words pipe and dreamy was not intentional.

Across the hall is the office of Adam Hull Shirk, whose name is not unknown to the pages of our periodical literature. In spite of the implication suggested by his cognomen, Mr. Shirk is one of the hardest workers around the place.

Down at the end of the hall is the office of the chief mover of all these works, Jesse L. Lasky. Owing to the fact that he has just arrived on the coast, and is very busy, we will not be able to meet him in person.

On this stage you will see a distinct novelty. The play being staged here is a movie of a movie. The story deals with life and work of the actors, and Donald Crisp, the director wearing the open-work effect straw hat, is going to take the lid off and show an eager and curious public some of the shameful tricks of the trade.

The young lady with the verdant gown and blond curls is Rhea Mitchell. The other lady to the right wearing a similar dress and similar curls is no lady at all but Fred Stone, the regular stage comedian, who is making a few movies during his vacation.

Fred is wearing the same kind of a costume as Miss Mitchell because the plot of the story requires him to double for her in a skating scene. But for the fact that Fred's style of beauty is somewhat more rugged, you will observe a strange resemblance between him and Miss Mitchell.

The other lady nearby is Winnifred Greenwood, and over to the left is Charles Ogle and Philo McCullough. The man with the faint crop of whiskers is Noah Beery, and seated near Noah is Raymond Hatton.

The somewhat stout player on the platform is Clarence Burton, one of the most affable villains of the movies. The small chap with the camera is Henry Katoni, the only Nipponese cameraman in the pictures who claims to be a sea-going cowboy.

This long open space, or run-way between the business offices of the studio and the stages, is a most interesting place. It is known as the Players' Promenade—a place where the actors can stretch their legs and smoke their cigarettes.

Today it presents a pretty and an appealing scene. Many of the people walking up and down here are actors who have finished their day's work and are waiting for the whistle to blow that they may grab their dinner pails and hie them to their humble bungalows, there to do up the chores and seek an early couch that they may be up betimes for the morrow's work.

The tall and willowy person smoking the cigarette is Wallace Reid. The other man near, equally tall and willowy, is Casson Ferguson. Crossing the promenade further down with dignified mien is that reliable wheel horse of the screen, Theodore Roberts.

The two ladies ascending the steps are Mayme Kelso and Nina Byron. Standing near the third door to the right you see two of the most celebrated figures of the film, the De Mille brothers, Cecil and William. Approaching them is Bryant Washburn, now being directed by Cecil De Mille. Ushering himself through the door near the steps is Elliott Dexter.

The little lady entering the scene from the stage is Frances Marion, writer of movie plays and author of the film we have just seen being worked out on yonder stage by Donald Crisp called "The Goat."

"The Goat" is the name of the play, Lady. Far be it from us to apply such an opprobious epithet to our old friend Don.

Observe the person with the manuscript in his hand and the air of deep concentration on his classic brow. This is Monte M. Katterjohn, who, together with General Lew Wallace, George Ade and J. Whitcomb Riley, has helped to make Indiana celebrated for things other than hoop poles and punkins.

Crossing the open space to the extreme right is Lila Lee, the latest star in the Lasky constellation, said in the vernacular of the movies to be a "comer."

The lady near the entrance to the stage to the right is Mary Anderson and approaching her is Anna Q. Nilsson. No, Lady, your assumption is wrong. "Cute" begins with a C. We do not know what the Q in Miss Nilsson's name stands for.

The man with an air of being in a hurry is James Cruze, an actor of note and a master of the mysteries of make-up.

This, Ladies and Gentlemen, will conclude our rubbernecking for today.

Little Thrills of the Week

FILMDOM has been thrilled to its innermost core by the report that Theda Bara is to be married. Theda denies the soft impeachment and hands out the usual "will never be wedded to anything but my Art."

The gentleman in the case is said to be named Palmer, but whether or not his first name is Arthur cannot be learned at this writing.

Charles Chaplin rises to remark that the story of his reported engagement to Mildred Harris has no foundation, and adds "We are just good friends, that's all."

• • •

Bessie Barriscale has a Jap servant, than whom no other domestic was ever half so good. Emissaries from other households tried to lure him away. Bessie got him to sign a new contract, increased salary—name on screen and all that. Jap is now negotiating for a personal representative, press agent and everything.

• • •

Mary Pickford is going to move. She has rented a simple little cot with fifteen rooms and five baths at 56 Fremont place. This will make Mary a near neighbor to us. She will be living on one side of Westlake Park and we on the other, the only difference being that rents are a shade higher on Mary's side of the park. We hope she will drop in often, and we plan to run over and have many pleasant little chats with her. Knowing as we do the difficulties of setting up housekeeping in a new place we offer to lend Mary a cup o' salt, our tack hammer, and other little things until she gets her menage in working order.

Studio Shorts

NILES WELCH, who has played opposite nearly all the movie stars in the eastern studios, has arrived in Los Angeles and will begin work at the Lasky studio, playing leading roles with the stars of the west coast productions for Paramount and Artcraft.

Frank Campeau, the villain, has adopted a three-year- old French orphan.

Mary Pickford has taken up golf, and with Louis Barrien to teach her the game, will hereafter often be seen chasing the ball on the links of the Brentwood Country Club.

Henry King has had the Bill Russell company out at Santa Inez making exterior scenes. The company lived in tents during their stay, and the thermometer registered 120 in the shade—wherever there was any shade.

Harold Lloyd, not to be outdone by other male stars of the screen who bring back fish stories from Catalina Islands, went himself to the fishing and hunting grounds while on a short vacation last week, and now can tell as long a fish story as any of them.

Henry B. Walthall, as soon as he will have finished his engagement at the Ince studios as star of "The False Faces," will leave for New York, where he will be starred in a big stage production.

Lila Lee at the Lasky studio has begun on "The Secret Garden," which is an adaptation of the Frances Hodgson Burnett novel, under the direction of G. Butler Clonbough, formerly known as Gustav von Seyffertitz.

Olive Thomas, who has been in New York for several weeks, stocking up on new clothes and visiting her sailor husband Jack Pickford, has returned to Los Angeles and will soon resume her labors at Triangle.

Dan F. Whitcomb, photoplaywright at the American studios in Santa Barbara for some time, has resigned his position with that company and has returned to his Hollywood home.

Douglas Fairbanks has engaged an instructor to teach the French language to any member of his organization who wants to learn it. Classes are held three times a week.

Anna Q. Nilsson has been engaged to play the part of Lady Diana in Cecil B. De Mille's big production of "The Squaw Man," with Elliott Dexter in the part made famous by Dustin Farnum.

Gladys Brockwell has received notice that her soldier husband, Harry Edwards, former film director, has been promoted to the rank of Corporal at Camp Lewis.

Taylor Holmes has begun on his first Triangle feature, "A Regular Fellow," under the direction of Christy Cabanne.

"Shoulder Arms," the new Charles Chaplin film, is scheduled for release by the First National Exhibitors on September 8.

William Conklin, for the past year with the Ince forces, is now playing leads at Universal City.

Marie Dressler celebrated her -th birthday last week. The reason that exact figures cannot be given is that Miss Dressler omitted the candles on the cake.

House Peters will soon reappear in pictures under the management of Harry Garson, manager of Clara Kimball Young, Blanche Sweet and others.

W. S. Van Dyke, director of the Al Jennings picture, has gone on a mountain trip, reconnoitering for the prospective big game season that opens soon.

A. G. Kenyon is a new scenario writer at Metro's west coast studios in Hollywood. Kenyon is a brother of Charles Kenyon, the playwright.

Dagmar Godowsky, daughter of Leopold Godowsky, pianist of note, has been given a part in a forthcoming Hayakawa production. Miss Godowsky visited the studio with her father when he was in Los Angeles recently on a concert tour, and her engagement resulted from the visit.

John Fairbanks, Doug's brother and business manager, motored to the Yosemite for a two weeks' vacation.

Hampton Del Ruth, who left the Mack Sennett organization recently, is forming a company of his own to produce high class five-reel comedies.

Bryant Washburn is working at the Morosco studio on his first Paramount vehicle, "The Gypsy Trail," after having played the leading male role in a Cecil De Mille production for Artcraft at the Lasky studio.

H. B. Keeler, one-time scenario writer at Paralta, but lately a free lance writer, has disposed of both stage and screen rights to a new play he has just finished.

Constance Talmadge, just back after a two months vacation in New York, is working at the Morosco studio in a Select picture in charge of Robert Vignola.

Dorothy Gish has begun her second production, called "The Hope Chest," for Paramount.

Thomas Nash, for seven years manager of Selig productions made in the west, is temporarily in charge of Universal City while Henry McRae is taking his vacation.

Claire Du Brey is visiting kinfolks in San Francisco between engagements in J. Warren Kerrigan pictures.

Bebe Daniels took a movie camera along when she went to Big Bear Valley on a short vacation a few days ago.

Wellington Cross, former musical comedy star and vaudeville headliner, will soon make his debut on the Triangle program in "The Gray Parasol."

Organize Large Exchange In Canada

Stevens, Lennon and Cohen Form National Film Incorporation, Limited, with Several Offices.

A DISTINCT surprise was sprung in Canadian film circles last week by the withdrawal of two officials from prominent Canadian organizations to establish a brand new exchange for the handling of special productions throughout the Dominion. The two men are Charles Stevens, general manager of Superfeatures, Limited, Toronto, and F. R. Lennon, assistant general sales manager of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, Toronto. Associated with them in the new enterprise is Arthur Cohen, formerly president of the Globe Films, Limited, Toronto, and the owner of three Toronto moving picture theatres, the Globe, Rialto and U-Kum.

Mr. Cohen holds the Canadian rights for Paralta releases and a number of state right productions. Mr. Stevens recently returned from New York City, where he secured the Canadian rights for the special release, "The Still Alarm." Mr. Cohen will be the president of the new company, which will be known as the National Film Incorporation, Limited.

It is the announced intention to open offices of the company in Montreal, Winnipeg and other Canadian cities. These are to be established before September 1. The company proposes to specialize with state right productions and special releases of various kinds.

J. R. McKenney becomes assistant general sales manager of the Canadian Universal in succession to Mr. Lennon. Mr. McKenney has been a star salesman of the Universal for a number of years and lately assumed office duties in Toronto. Mr. Lennon was with the Canadian Universal for ten years, being first employed by Jules and J. J. Allen when they controlled the Canadian Universal rights.

Incidentally, J. A. Kirkpatrick has joined the sales force of the Canadian Universal at Toronto and will cover the northern Ontario territory. L. A. Crume of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario, has also sold his Princess theatre in order to be associated with Mr. McKenney in the Toronto office.

Good Cheer from the "Bread Basket"

James V. Bryson Sees New York and Talks of Prosperity In the Wheat Belt.

JAMES V. BRYSON was a welcome visitor at the office of the Moving Picture World during the past week. It was the film man's first look-in on the new quarters, which shows it has been some months since he was in New York. Mr. Bryson was for eight years known in the Northwest territory as the head of the Laemmle Film Service of Minneapolis. More recently he has been working independently in Minnesota, Wisconsin, North and South Dakota and Montana booking "Twenty Thousand Leagues Under the Sea" and "Come Through." As his territory is pretty well cleaned up he has made a trip to New York, accompanied by Mrs. Bryson, with the view of taking on new productions.

The Brysons made the trip from Minneapolis by automobile, eighteen days being covered by the journey. Stops were made of three days in Chicago, four in Detroit and three in Toronto. These visits enabled the Northwesterner to get the eastern angle on the market and verify the observations he has made in his own territory.

"Out in the Northwest the exhibitors are more than enthusiastic," said Mr. Bryson. "Of course, there everything is based on the viewpoint of the farmer—and the farmer is happy. He is having a remarkable season. The sun has shone when he wanted it to shine and the rain has fallen when most he desired it. The farmer will get right down to brass tacks with you and count the grains on a stalk to show you that this year is a banner year. Just for an illustration as to financial conditions in the agricultural districts I might remark that I have seen in New York more Ford cars than I have noticed recently in the farming sections. The man of the soil is driving big cars these days—and expensive ones, too.

"Up in Canada conditions look good—that is, so far as they may be judged from what I saw in Toronto and Hamilton. Exhibitors seem to have more faith in the future. I can note the difference between the present and a year ago. They are fixing up their houses and expanding generally.

"The exchangemen you meet have brighter faces. They have got back their confidence. The war tax for a time knocked the heart out of many exhibitors. In the Northwest territory 25 cents general admission is a common thing in practically all towns. Exhibitors are beginning to appreciate the value of advertising and of the twenty-four sheet, of the necessity for having boards on which to place these. You will notice the marked increase in the number of boards.

"In the smallest towns you would be surprised to find the number of first class houses depending on the farmer—and likewise the class of machines you see lined up in front of the houses. The exhibitors no longer are afraid of the fifty-sixty dollar a day feature, and having got it they know how to go out and advertise it. In practically all the smaller towns these large features are taken on two or three times a month.

"And as to the star problem? My opinion is that the salvation of the industry lies in the star."

Mr. Bryson, who will be in town for another week, is stopping at the Hotel Markwell, Forty-ninth and Broadway.

Shows Woman's Land Army at Work

Universal Makes Picture for Private Exhibition, but May Give It General Release.

HARRY LEVEY, director of the industrial department of Universal, has official word from New Jersey that the players who figured in "Girls to the Rescue, or the Salvation of a State," were actually the heroines in a real life drama, and that the scenes were vital in the affairs of New Jersey. The picture is New Jersey's unit of the Woman's Land Army at work. The women are shown at work in the fields.

If it weren't for the Woman's Land Army the crop of New Jersey would be lost. This is the message reported by Miss Constance Allen, field secretary of the "Army," who was one of those who helped make the picture. Officials of the State Departments of Agriculture have notified the Woman's Land Army leaders that their work has been the means of saving the state's crop.

New Jersey farmers have proved themselves this season to be intensely patriotic. They planted vastly greater acreage than ever before. Meantime the young men of the farms have vanished into military or munition plant manufacturing service.

As matters were approaching a crisis in the last few weeks, state officials sent out a plea to the women. There was a response that amazed the farmers.

The Universal film shows the women volunteering on a particular farm, and the camera follows them after they get the job. It shows, for one thing, that women are as capable in the garden as men. Although the Land Army film had been intended for release independently to clubs and women's societies for private showing, Universal officials declare there is a strong probability it may be placed on the market for regular distribution.

Exhibitor Merger Now Seems Assured

Peter J. Schaefer, Louis H. Frank and Frank J. Rembusch Meet in Chicago and Important Statement Is Issued.

SINCE mailing the convention article which appears in this issue under the Motion Picture Exhibitor heading, the following statement was given out from the headquarters of the American Exhibitors' Association, this city, Thursday afternoon, August 15:

"Louis H. Frank and Frank Rembusch called upon Peter J. Schaefer, president of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League of America, to invite the League to attend the convention of the American Exhibitors' Association which will be held in Chicago, September 3, 4, 5, 6 and 7.

"Mr. Schaefer stated that it was the consensus of opinion at the Boston convention that there should be an amalgamation of both the national organizations.

"Messrs. Rembusch and Frank stated that there was nothing in the way now to prevent amalgamation and that the American Exhibitors' Association would welcome such action.

"Mr. Schaefer agreed to call a meeting at once of the executive committee of the League in order to take whatever action is necessary to bring about harmony between all concerned.

"All parties agreed that a new organization and by-laws would be necessary, and that both organizations would receive equal representation in the new body.

"It was the unanimous opinion that all side issues, trade shows, expositions, booking circuits, etc., should have no place in a national organization, but that the purpose of the new organization should be to protect the industry from adverse legislation, censorship, unjust taxation, and to work for constructive objectives that effect the entire industry, and especially the motion picture exhibitor.

"American Exhibitors' Association,
"FRANK J. REMBUSCH, National Secretary."

This statement affords the most cheering and gratifying news for the trade generally which has been announced for years past, and hearty congratulations are extended Messrs. Schaefer, Rembusch and Frank for showing a way out of the vexatious difficulties which have seriously affected the business for some time past. It is fervently hoped that the way will lead up to a permanent settlement of the differences between the rival organizations, and that it will end in the formation of a single body which will represent not only the interests of exhibitors but of every other department of the moving picture industry.

It is obligatory on the entire business in these days of war stress that everybody engaged in it should form a united body to assist the Government in every way possible to bring the war to a close in the shortest time possible. Enthusiastic, concerted and prolonged action is needed by the Government from the people in our industry, and since moving picture screens throughout the country afford the most effective means for government propaganda work it is the patriotic duty of every exhibitor to do his best in this respect. Let every exhibitor, therefore, become a member of the exhibitors' organization that will be formed during the A. E. A convention in September.

The last paragraph of the statement signed by National Secretary Rembusch outlines a notable departure from the policy of former national organizations of exhibitors. "All side issues, trade shows, expositions, booking circuits, etc." are to have no place in the new national organization, which will work for the interests of the entire trade and especially for the exhibiting department.

This policy, when carried out, will give the exhibitor a new standing. He cannot help holding his head higher. Why should he go begging for stars to make his show a success? And why should be expect producers to undergo great loss of time and expense to make his show a success? Also why should he cheapen his business by bringing the public in contact with the photoplayers, who cannot fail to lose some of their attractiveness on the screen by being "exhibited" to the mob?

Yes, indeed, this will be a departure devoutly to be wished by the whole moving picture industry.

I called on President Schaefer, of the M. P. E. L. of A., Friday noon, Aug. 16, and found him in a happy mood. He returned from his vacation Monday, August 12, which has lasted since the Boston convention adjourned, and looked fit for any undertaking, strenuous or otherwise.

He spoke of the social and friendly chats with Mr. Rembusch which led up to the writing of the statement given out, and said that no differences whatever existed between Mr. Rembusch and himself. He also informed me that he had many good friends in the A. E. A., who will be glad to work with him on any conditions.

Mr. Schaefer's attitude toward the A. E. A. is distinctly friendly. That was very plain to me, judging from the conversation. As I was leaving he said that in order to bring about the amalgamation of the two organizations he was willing and ready to make any concessions possible, so long as they were fair to his friends in the League.

Mr. Schaefer told me before leaving that a meeting of the executive committee of the M. P. E. L. of A. will be held Labor Day, Monday, September 2, to take whatever action is necessary to bring about harmony between the two organizations. The proceedings of the meeting will be read before the convention of the A. E. A., the time to be fixed by the executive committee of the latter organization.

Lucien C. Wheeler Talks of His Duties

Interesting News About the Work of Mr. Hoagland and Himself for the Divison of Films.

IN the latest issue (July 18) at hand of the Bioscope, London, considerable space has been devoted to an interview with Lucien C. Wheeler, representative in that city of the Divison of Films of the Committee on Public Information. The Bioscope article states that in France alone 30,000 feet of negative are now being taken every week by the United States Signal Corps. These negatives are being sent weekly to Washington, where they are developed and positive prints made and assembled for distribution.

It was also announced, at the time the article was written, that "America's Answer to the Hun," the story of the Paris showing of which already has been printed in the World, would be presented in London in the near future, under the auspices of the British Ministry of Information, in accordance with an arrangement made by Mr. Wheeler with the British Ministry's Cinematograph Department.

"So far," says Mr. Wheeler in the article, "we (meaning Herbert Hoagland and himself) are highly pleased with the result of our work in London. By the officials of the Ministry of Information, and particularly by Sir William Jury and his assistants, we have been received with the utmost cordiality. Every suggestion we have put forward has been met with the fullest and most generous response and Sir William Jury's department is co-operating with us in the most enthusiastic, whole-hearted and effective manner."

Friedman in Charge of Foursquare

Celebrated Players Film Corporation Will Release Not Less Than Twelve Feature During Coming Year.

JOSEPH L. FRIEDMAN, president of Celebrated Players' Film Corporation, informs me that the interests of Foursquare Pictures, Inc., will be in charge of his organization, dating from August 15.

George Backer, president of Foursquare Pictures, Inc., and also of the Bacon-Backer Film Corporation, visited the city last week, and during his stay made arrangements for turning over the Foursquare office to the Celebrated Players' Film Corporation. He also made arrangement with Mr.

Friedman to handle the future productions of the Bacon-Backer Film Corporation and of the Harry Rapf Films, Inc.

Under these arrangements the Celebrated Players' Film Corporation will release not less than twelve features of the super-feature type during the coming year.

Mr. Backer and Holmes C. Walton, his personal representative, who has been in Chicago for several days looking after Foursquare interests, returned to New York August 16.

A Fish Story on George Kleine.

An amusing fish story has leaked out in which George Kleine was the principal victim. Mr. Kleine has been dividing his time these broiling days between work at his executive offices on East Adams street, and in fishing at Eagle Lake, Wis.

One morning he and his party left a certain landing by rowboat, at 3 o'clock sharp, to reach another lake which connects with Eagle by a narrow channel, choked for most of its length by grasses and sedge weed. Progress was slow and strenuous for the rowers, as the oar blades had only weeds and grass to furnish resistance to the strokes. What with the added disadvantage of handling oars that were wrapped in masses of weeds, the party took about an hour and a half in making the short trip, and morning had succeeded dawn.

Hastily the fishers got ready for the killing. The early morning's sport was intended to be a "live" baiting fest, for the finny tribe in those waters scorn decoys, however tempting.

Where is the bait? asked George, with just the tinge of fear in his customary bass voice, and the vestige of a pallor that soon o'erspread his face.

Great heavens! It had been left behind on the landing, between which and them stretched the strangled channel. But not all the fair promise of a bountiful fish harvest could tempt the party to make the round trip twice the same day!

Ruling on Light for Lightless Nights.

The conservation department of the Fuel Administration for Illinois recently announced the following rules on the light to be used outside of each picture theatre at night, during the period of lightless nights which took effect July 29 and 30:

For safety reasons only each theatre is limited to 500 watts to light the lobby and the box office. No lights are permitted outside of the building for signs or advertising purposes, either on the front or top of the building. When a theatre uses the front doors for exits, the lights over these exits must be included in the 500 watts allowed.

Political Candidates Must Favor Pictures.

The committee on political action, of Chicago Local, M. P. E. L. of A., will meet Tuesday and Thursday of every week until the primary election takes place. All candidates desiring to run slides in picture theatres must appear before this committee and state their attitude toward moving pic tures and the industry as a whole.

Joseph Hopp American's Chicago Representative.

Joseph Hopp has been selected to act as representative of the American Film Company releases in Chicago and tributary territory. His headquarters will be at the Pathe's Chicago office, fourth floor, Consumers Building. Mr. Hopp will be assisted by experienced salesmen, who are now being selected for the work.

Mr. Hopp's long connection with the distributing business in Chicago eminently fits him for this position. He is one of the oldest exchangemen in the city, having founded the Standard Flm Exchange in 1907. This exchange continued to do a flourishing business until October 6, 1915, when Mr. Hopp sold out to Universal.

"The Great Love" Packs Orchestra Hall.

D. W. Griffith's Artcraft picture, "The Great Love," broke all records for this season at Orchestra Hall, so manager Hill has informed me. Several times during the week, both in the afternoon and evening, waiting lines were to be seen, a very unusual happening at this house of over 2,500 seats. The admission was 25 cents, the customary summer price. The attraction will be retained for another week, but it would crowd the hall for many weeks to come. The management, however, is restricted to one week, as a rule, by the releasing company.

George Kleine's Italian Film at Playhouse.

"Behind the Lines in Italy," the six-reel feature made by an Italian producing company, on the request of the Italian ministry of Arms and Munitions, the exclusive American rights being purchased by George Kleine, will begin an indefinite engagement at The Playhouse this city, Sunday, August 18.

Twentieth Century Changes Ownership.

The Twentieth Century Theatre, Forty-seventh Street and Prairie Avenue, was recently acquired by Henry Ottenstein, owner of the Vista Theatre. The house has been renovated for the opening under the new management, which took place Saturday evening, August 17. A high class program was offered for the occasion.

Randolph Will Be Finished November 1.

Adolph Linick, of Jones, Linick & Schaefer, state that work on the Randolph Theatre, their new house on Randolph Street, near State, will begin September 1, and it is expected that the building will be finished about November 1. The site has a depth of 180 feet and a width of 40 feet. Architect Newhouse has the plans prepared and they have received the approval of the owners. Mr. Linick mentioned incidentally that the ventilating system will be the same as that installed in the Orpheum and Rialto, the other two "Loop" houses owned by his company. Throughout the hottest summer a steady temperature of 68 degrees can always be found in these houses .

Prominent Film Concerns Change Headquarters.

Paramount will remove headquarters in this city from the nineteenth floor of the Consumers' Building, on State Street, early in September, to its new building at Ninth Street and Wabash Avenue.

The Select Pictures Corporation will move into the quarters vacated by Paramount in the Consumer's Building, from the fifteenth floor, where its present quarters are located.

"The Master Crook" to be Released Soon.

The Celebrated Players' Film Corporation will release early in September "The Master Crook," featuring Edmond Breese and Alma Hanlon. President Friedman of the organization considers this production a very strong picture of the "Raffles" type.

"Around the Clock with a Rookie"

Y. M. C. A. Subject Shown in Screen Magazine Has a Real Film Actor in Title Role.

A REAL film actor, picked up accidentally for the purpose, is the star of "Around the Clock with a Rookie," a special release for Universal's Screen Magazine. This picture, directed by H. E. Hancock of the Y. M. C. A. War Service Council, and photographed by George Coudert, reveals the adventures of an American soldier in work and play from reveille to taps, and traces his development from a rookie with two left feet to the status of a crackerjack fighting man. The picture was taken at Camp Devens, Ayer, Mass., with incidental scenes from other sources touching on the war subject.

Mr. Hancock, when he went among the rookies looking for a "type" for his head character, was after a regular rookie—one if possible, who possessed the time-honored "nothing but thumbs" and left feet of the awkward squad. He found a "type" that answered all requirements. Then it developed that the "star" was really a young fellow who previously had served time as a player in the Lubin studios.

But, though the rookie knew the technique of film playing, he did precious little acting in this film. The trouble was he didn't know how to handle a gun, and this spoiled all his chances of putting art into the action. But the results delighted the director. The picture portrays all the important bumps and as well as the good times that are cast in the lot of a soldier.

Considerable attention is paid in the film to the recreation division of a soldier's life. It shows how his leisure moments are filled with comforts and facilities to enjoy himself. Glimpses of the Y. M. C. A. huts and the reading rooms, etc., are given. There are twenty-five huts at Camp Devens, and the provision of fun for soldiers constitutes a big undertaking done in a big way.

It is shown that recreation, in fact, must necessarily be a matter of leading importance to the soldier. The soldier is free to enjoy himself from 4 p. m. to 10 p. m., and with the exception of the dinner hour, he passes much of the time in the Y. M. C. A. hut.

One of the most interesting scenes of the "Around the Clock with a Rookie" is that taken in the Eagle Hut in London. This is set in historic surroundings, and is one of the most important recreation institutions on the other side.

Educational Films Branching Out

Vice-President Hammans Tells What His Company is Doing in Coming Year—Three Subjects a Week

E. W. HAMMONS, vice president and general manager of the Educational Films Corporation of America, announces a notable expansion of activities for the season of 1918-19. The precepts of the Federal Government to conserve everything for war efficiency are being kept steadily in view. Indeed, all the work of the Educational will be of the useful kind.

"Within the year half a million feet of the Educational's films have been sold to agencies connected with the Government for exhibition in foreign countries or the entertainment of the Expeditionary Forces on the transports or in France," said Mr. Hammons. "This will serve as an indication of how closely we are working in harmony with the great American purpose overseas, while at the same time we are catering to amusement needs over here.

"We shall offer for the coming season of 1918-19, beginning September 1, 156 short subjects a year—that is, three a week—besides occasional multiple-reel features of great public interest such as 'Your Fighting Navy' and 'When the Giant Wakes.' In adition to these the Robert C. Bruce 'Scenics of Adventure in the Northwest' will be continued with an entirely new series descriptive of the Yosemite Valley and Lake Tahoe, the Mount Shasta Range, the Yellowstone Park, Jackson's Hole and Teton Mountains in Wyoming, and many hitherto unexplored locations in Oregon and Washington. The distribution of the fifty-three pictures made by Raymond L. Ditmars under the fascinating title of 'The Living Book of Nature' will be maintained and carried forward, much of it in virgin territory. These Bruce and Ditmars series have been no small factors in the policies that have won unexampled success for the Rothapfel and the Strand theatres, respectively, and they are rapidly being introduced into the high-class houses throughout the country.

Pagoda, Nikko, Japan.

A Native Indian Drama

"George D. Wright's 'Mexico Today,' twelve pictures now being released, descriptive of the land and the people, will be followed by a new series depicting the political and industrial life of Mexico. Mr. Wright is now working on this subject, with every facility afforded to him both at Mexico City and in the Tampico oil fields by President Carranza's government. E. M. Newman's travel abroad in the Allied countries this summer will supplement with a series of war-time films the able Newman Travels he has already furnished us, of life in the Far East and in the American possessions.

"A distinct novelty of the 1918-19 season will be a series of tabloid native Indian dramas prepared by the Northwestern Film Corporation at Sheridan, Wyo. The company is using native Indian actors exclusively and promises the first truly realistic representation of aboriginal life among the scenes made famous in the history of America's western frontier. The primal release of the Dwight L. Elmendorf foreign pictures will be another interesting event of the season. Mr. Elmendorf has turned over to us 50,000 feet of his original negatives forming a picturesque record of Oriental lands and of the monuments of pre-war Europe. This has never before been available for motion picture houses, but is now being edited and titled with a view to popular requirements. A number of other individual travel, scenic and scientific novelties will be announced by us a little later.

Will Release Cartoon Comedies Weekly.

"The demand for the International black and white cartoon comedies has greatly increased since that concern chose the Educational as its agent about four months ago. New comedies will be released at the rate of one a week throughout the year. Besides the Happy Hooligans and the famous Kids, Gregory La Cava is now taking Tad's Silk Hat Harry cartoons as the subject of a new series, and the first release thereof took place on August 19. Some have wondered why these cartoon burlesques have found a place among the Educational's more serious work, but the obvious answer is that the clientele of any good theatre requires a medium of farce and fun alongside the more solid elements of its program. Audiences like the meat and the gravy, but they want the spice and the dessert, too.

"The problem of wider distribution," concluded Mr. Hammons, "which has exercised us considerably in the past, is now being happily solved, thanks to the organization of the Educational Distributing Corporation which has recently been established by outside capital with my friend Charles A. Dean as the active head. To the even dozen of Educational exchanges now doing a flourishing business have already been added three others founded by the new company in the important centres of Chicago, Cleveland and Detroit.

Educational Opening New Exchanges.

"Exhibitors of the Chicago district can be assured of the best service and the fullest co-operation from the Distributing Corporation's Chicago agent, R. C. Cropper, at 220 South State street. In Detroit, Harry Abbott is opening up the Michigan territory by a new branch office located at 63 East Elizabeth street. Picture managers of northern and central Ohio who have been long seeking Educationals will be glad to learn that offices at 322 Euclid avenue, Cleveland, have now been equipped to fill their needs, with Robert McLaughlin, the popular ex-manager of the Colonial theatre there, as the representative.

"Cigars for Kings and Millionaires"

"Mr. Dean went this week on a trip to Cincinnati, St. Louis, Kansas City and likely Dallas and New Orleans to establish additional branches in the West and Southwest. With the strong representation that we already have in the eastern cities, New York State, Minneapolis, and the three strategic centres of the Pacific Coast—San Francisco, Seattle and Los Angeles—it is only a question of weeks when the Educational service of instructive and entertaining motion pictures will be available to practically every exhibitor within the length and breadth of the United States."

HAMISH McLAURIN WITH RED CROSS.

Hamish McLaurin, who has been publicity man for S. L. Rothapfel since the opening of the Rialto, has resigned to take a position with the Red Cross publicity bureau at Washington. Mr. McLaurin's assistant, Louis Geffen, will succeed.

No Scarcity of Operators in Toronto

Membership, Now 160, Is Recruited from Returned Soldiers Instructed under Government Auspices.

THERE is not likely to be a scarcity of moving picture projection machine operators in Ontario," is an announcement that President Charles A. Dentelbeck of Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local 173 of Toronto has just made.

President Dentelbeck points out that the membership of the Toronto is now at the high water mark, about 160 operators being actively associated with the local. Incidentally some sixty members of the local are overseas with the Canadian Army or have already done their bit. Thirty-nine members of the local are actually in France or England. The membership now also includes sixteen returned soldiers, some of whom were not operators before their service with the Canadian forces. The latter took up projection work as a new occupation and received instruction in vocational and re-educational institutions under the auspices of the Government. Just as soon as one of these returned men finishes his course and is able to qualify for an operator's license he joins the Toronto local. This remaking process for returned men has only just practically started.

The Toronto local has assured the authorities that only returned soldiers will be employed anywhere as operators' assistants.

Practically all the members of the local are married men with dependents, excepting those who have gone to war or have been rejected for physical reasons. Three members of the local have been officially reported killed in action and two others have been unofficially reported killed.

The Toronto local is said to be the first branch of the I. A. T. S. E. to arrange for the conferring of honorary memberships on members who don the uniform of the army. The soldiers are kept in good standing until they return to their work or take up other occupations after serving.

There are about 160 members in the Toronto local and the number of theatres in Toronto is approximately 85. There are now two operators in a great many Toronto theatres as a result of educational work on the part of the union. The Toronto union has a number of out-of-town members.

Conditions in Toronto are apparently quite satisfactory and the operators are evidently making an honest effort to deliver the goods. The subject of projection is seriously studied from all angles and many members are continually trying to work out new ideas of their own.

Uncle Sam to Appear as War Worker

At Thirty-five State Fairs in Twenty-three States He'll Show Film of His Own Making.

UNCLE SAM will show himself as a war worker to those of his nephews and nieces who gather at some thirty-five state fairs in twenty-three states during the fair season which is just opening. The presentation will be made through motion pictures taken by the Government and developed and printed in its own laboratories.

These pictures show military work in the activities of the army engineers constructing heavy pontoon and spar bridges, mining and demolishing enemy defenses; the types of horses and their training needed for cavalry and artillery; and the logging and milling of timbers for ship construction. Federal road building as another part of the development of transportation facilities is shown in various stages from foundations to the final crowning of the road.

A large part of the films will show the part played by the man behind the man behind the gun—the producer of food and clothes and shelter. Such films portray poultry and hog raising, the grazing of sheep and cattle on the National Forests for the production of wool, leather, and meat.

Six First Run Houses Open in Detroit

By September 1 All Will Be in Full Swing—McGee of Majestic for Open Booking.

BY Labor Day every first-run theatre in Detroit will be in full operation. C. H. Miles, of the Regent, announces that the definite opening date of that house is September 1, while M. W. McGee, managing director of the Majestic theatre, plans to open August 25.

As we have several times noted Mr. McGee of the Majestic is going to adopt a rather unique policy—that of absolute open booking. He will probably open with a Pathe feature with Frank Keenan, "More Trouble," running it two weeks, and following it with "To-day," a state right feature owned for Michigan by Joe Horwitz, of the Foursquare Exchange. It is Mr. McGee's contention that there will be plenty of good film attractions and that he will surround each show with other good attractions so that, after all, the feature will not be more than thirty per cent of the consideration.

Mr. Miles is also of the belief that there will be available plenty of good pictures and that he is in no hurry to sign up, although he has already contracted for some fifteen or twenty Paramount pictures, and will likely open with a Paramount picture with Jack Barrymore.

There is now some talk that Messrs. Cohen and Warren, of the Colonial theatre, Woodward and Sibley Streets, are seriously contemplating changing the policy of that theatre, making it a first or second run theatre, running all pictures a full week. If they adopt this proposed policy it will increase Detroit's list of first-run theatres to six.

Reissues Are Liked in San Francisco

Several Downtown Houses Offering Them, the Only Complaint Being Against Change in Titles.

THE film reissues that are being handled by several exchanges in San Francisco are meeting with a splendid reception and are being offered on the bills of some of the largest downtown houses. Many of these, with their new titles, and in rearranged form, are superior to the original productions and are proving fully as satisfactory from the box-office standpoint. The only phase to which exhibitors are voicing an objection is the change in name that has been made in some of these. In communities where the original picture was not shown this camouflage is of no moment, but in other places patrons sometimes resent being shown the same production under two names. One of the leading local downtown houses that has been strongly featuring a series of Chaplin reissues gives the name of the old production, as well as the new title, in its newspaper advertising. For instance, "The Pugilist," is featured as adapted from "The Knockout."

Business during the past few months has been none too active, especially in the interior, where many theatres have been closed for the summer and others are operating on a greatly reduced schedule. The reissues that have been offered have given exhibitors an opportunity to secure service at reduced rates, a feature that has been very attractive to them, and at the same time permit them to offer some of the finest productions of the past. Some are free to confess that their ability to secure reissues featuring prominent stars, at the reasonable rental prices that have been named, has alone enabled them to continue in business during the summer months.

JUNE ELVIDGE HANGS UP A RECORD.

June Elvidge, a World Picture star, is taking a well merited vacation of three weeks, having just completed a five reel photoplay by Clara S. Beranger under the direction of Travers Vale. Miss Elvidge during the past year has completed fourteen subjects. In addition to these appearances she was employed in the making of "Stolen Orders."

Fifteen productions in twelve months is a record that no other moving picture star has ever reached in five reel pictures. In these same twelve months Miss Elvidge was never late one day at the studio. She never held up a scene or delayed the work by dilatory tactics.

DALLAS EXPRESS SERVICE UNSATISFACTORY.

Dallas film men with hardly an exception have forwarded to the Federal Express Company complaint blanks stating that service given by the merged express company is not satisfactory. The principal complains are that the express company takes no pains in routing films by the most direct route and that many delays are occurring. They also complain that the wagons will take no late afternoon shipments.

All the film exchanges are making their express shipments days in advance to insure delivery on time. This naturally is inconvenient.

WALTER COUGHLIN BOOSTING AMERICAN FILMS.

Walter A. Coughlin, northwestern representative of the American Film Company, Inc., has established headquarters at Spokane in the offices of the Pathe Exchange and will boost American productions in that territory. Mr. Coughlin is well known to exhibitors of the Northwest, having been connected with the Mutual exchange for a number of years.

Spokane's Liberty to Increase Prices

Manager Cohn Taking His Public Into His Confidence Against Expected Raise in Federal Tax.

SPOKANE picture patrons can pull their belts up another notch and clench their fists with the new determination to do another bit—almost two bits, meaning 25 cents out here—toward winning the war. If the amendments to the war tax act go through admission prices in some of the picture theatre are due to go up, and will probably run from 40 cents for boxes to 24 cents for general admission. Manager Sam W. B. Cohn of the Liberty Theatre has been tentatively adjusting his admission scale to fit the new tax demands, and will put the new scale into effect when the amendments become law. He is taking the public into his confidence to explain why increased prices must necessarily follow.

The present Liberty prices are: General admission, 18 cents, plus 2 cents war tax, or 20 cents; children, 9 cents, plus 1 cent war tax, or 10 cents; boxes, 31 cents, plus 4 cents war tax, or 35 cents.

Liberty prices when the new taxes become operative will be: General admission, 20 cents, plus 4 cents war tax, or 24 cents; children, 8 cents, plus 2 cents war tax, or 10 cents; boxes, 32 cents, plus 8 cents war tax, or 40 cents.

Increased admission taxes are not the only way the moving picture houses are hit by the proposed amendments. To-day they pay a war tax of 15 cents a reel a day for all their pictures. Under the amendments they will pay instead of the reel a day tax 5 per cent of the rental price of films. This, Manager Cohn says, will have the effect of increasing their film tax several hundred per cent.

In addition, theatres, like all corporations, are subject to the income tax and the excess profit tax, if there are any excess profits. They have been allowed a small margin of profit, according to Manager Cohn, and the proposed new assessment will take about 33 1/3 per cent of their net profits. On top of all is the annual government seating tax, based on capacity, which in the case of the Liberty Theatre amounts to $100 a year.

Liberty Now Paying Over $26,000 Annually.

"The Liberty is collecting and paying to the United States government between $26,000 and $30,000 annually," said Manager Cohn. "The government has held that the theatre is an essential business, and each theatre is a licensed government collector of taxes. The picture theatres have become an essential agency for propaganda, through their screens, Four-Minute Men and film trailers. We are informed that during the Fourth Liberty Loan the government will furnish every exchange with film trailers with famous stars, and these will be attached to all further productions. Patrons will not be able to enter a theatre and not see or listen to some of the government's propaganda.

"Hereafter the government will deal directly with the picture theatres in placing its official war pictures. We have already asked to submit bids on government pictures of various types.

"The picture theatres are not complaining and are doing all they can willingly in keeping up the morale of the people at home. We only ask that the public understand the increased cost under which we are forced to operate. The Liberty salary list is 100 per cent higher than it was a year ago. Carbons are up 500 per cent. Condensers are much higher. Film service costs us from 50 to 250 per cent more than a year ago. Printing, advertising and all supplies are soaring. If the new tax plan goes through 50 per cent of the small-town houses will be forced to close their doors within six months."

CINCINNATI EXHIBITORS NOT WORRYING.

The prospect of a tax on theatre admissions just twice that now prevailing, with a tax as well on the admissions at houses charging less than 10 cents, is not viewed with any great enthusiasm by exhibitors in Cincinnati. On the other hand, very few believe it will effect attendance to any great extent. They point to the fact that the present 10 per cent tax has had virtually no effect on attendance, as far as anybody can determine, and are for the most part of the opinion that the imposition of an additional tax of a cent or two to help Uncle Sam win the war will be accepted by the public cheerfully and willingly. It is admitted that the high-priced "legitimate" theatres, already hit by the tax, will probably suffer still more, as a 20 per cent tax amounts to something with them; but photoplay exhibitors, as a rule, feel that in their case there is little to worry about.

Exchangemen Aid Wounded Soldiers

Washington Managers Offer Personal Service in Cases of Sick or Injured Film Boys.

THE exchange managers of the national capital are going ahead with their plans to assist the sick and wounded soldiers, now numbering 2,100, confined to the Walter Reed General Hospital. A sub-committee from the association, consisting of Oscar A. Morgan, S. E. Kent and Clarence L. and Bertram F. Linz, made an initial vist to the institution to ascertain what the men want most among the list of articles that are not supplied to them by the Government or the American Red Cross.

The sub-committee had previously purchased a large quantity of cigarettes for the boys, as well as a thousand souvenir postal cards of Washington to be used by the invalids in keeping their parents informed of their condition.

"There is an excellent chance for exchange managers and exhibitors all over the country," declared Mr. Morgan, who is secretary of the Washington Exchange Managers' Association, "to do good work along this line. There are forty-four Red Cross Convalescent Huts—one at each of the large camps and cantonments—where there are boys who would welcome a visit such as we made to Walter Reed Hospital and the donation of a few smokes, picture postal cards of the city, games and puzzles. We are going to ask the exhibitors in this territory that are interested to assist us in keeping the Walter Reed Hospital invalids supplied with these little things."

"If there are parents or friends of any film boys confined to Walter Reed Hospital desirous of knowing of their condition or of sending a more personal message to them," said Mr. Kent, "our committee will be only too glad to perform such a mission and see to it also that copies of the film trade journals reach them."

The committee is willing to undertake any reasonable personal service as outlined above, and interested persons in the film industry can communicate with the Washington office of the Moving Picture World, or to Mr. Morgan, at the Famous Players Exchange, or Mr. Kent, at the exchange of the Triangle Distributing Corporation.

Operators' Jobs Have a Sudden Value

Building Commissioner in Cincinnati Reports Rush of Applicants for Licenses Following "Essential" Decision.

THE fact that draft ages will soon be greatly extended, probably in both directions, coupled with the announcement of the authorities that moving picture operators are held to be engaged in an essential work, has resulted in a regular stampede in Cincinnati of would-be draft exempts for jobs in operating booths. This, at least, is the report of Building Commissioner Rendigs, who supervises the issue of licenses.

The requirements for passing the examination will be strictly adhered to, the Commissioner declares, stating that he will not permit men to pose as operators without due qualification merely in order to escape the draft or work in some useful occupation. Formerly two or three men a month applied for licenses, whereas shortly after the "work or fight" rule went into force, with exemption for operators, nine men took the examination in one day.

Shifts Among Kansas City Managers

Changes and Promotions, Coupled with Demands of War, Bring New Men Into the Field.

A GENERAL shift has taken place among the managers of the Kansas City branches of several film exchanges. I. F. Mantzke, of the Kansas City office of the Mutual Film Corporation, has been appointed special representative for the Mutual and has left on a brief trip to Oklahoma City. Mr. Mantzke will make his headquarters in Kansas City for the present.

G. R. Sirwell, manager of the General Film Company, Inc., has resigned. H. B. Brennan, traveling auditor for General, is in the city and will temporarily take charge of the office.

Milton Feld, for the past eight months manager of the Universal Film Exchange office in Kansas City, has left to join the army. Mr. Feld is now a sergeant in the Quartermaster's department at Camp McArthur, Texas. L. B. Douglas, assistant manager, takes Mr. Feld's place. Mr. Douglas was with Universal five years ago, then manager of the Mutual exchange at Wichita, Kan., for a year and a half, returning to Universal in Kansas City about a year and a half ago.

Good Pictures and Music for Soldiers

At Camps Near New York Men Will Hear the Soloists from Manager Edel's Strand.

THROUGH the patriotic co-operation of Harold Edel, managing director of the Strand theatre, New York, it has been made possible to secure the Strand's soloists at the camp near New York when pictures are being played. The following have offered their services gratis: Grace Hoffman, coloratura soprano; Rosa Lind, dramatic soprano, formerly with the Grand Opera Company of Brussels; Alys Michot, coloratura soprano; Herbert Waterous, basso, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera Company; Cora Tracey, contralto, and Mary Zentazy, violinist.

Contracts for "Hearts of the World" have been signed for camps Upton, Custer, Lee and Meade, and confirmation for the camps in the Southwest is expected to be received any day.

"To Hell With the Kaiser" has been meeting with success at all the Liberty theatres. Official orders were issued by General French at Camp Jackson to the Commission on Training Camp Activities to secure this picture for free showing to the men.

"Pershing's Crusaders" has been the big hit in Camps Grant, Custer, Pike and Travis, and will be played on the entire Liberty theatre picture circuit.

Douglas Fairbanks in "Say, Young Fellow" opened Monday at Camp Upton's Buffalo theatre as a picture feature on the vaudeville bill. William Hart in "Shark Monroe" will play the last half of the week.

General to Issue "Our Bridge of Ships"

Government Two-Reeler Shows How Workingmen Are Peopling Shipyards with Enthusiastic Hosts.

JUST when another Liberty Loan is coming along, here is "Our Bridge of Ships," a two-reel subject that should sell "oodles" of dollars' worth of Uncle Sam's securities to those who have taken shares in the early issue and to those who have held off through suspicion (or some other motive) created by doubts as to how the billions are being spent. "Our Bridge of Ships" is convincing proof of the tremendous activities that are being rushed to a victorious climax under the direction of Charles M. Schwab, director general, Emergency Fleet Corporation, and Richard N. Hurley, chairman, United States Shipping Board.

The two reels shown August 19, in the Kineto projection room, Masonic Temple Building, give brief and convincing "shots" at activities in a score of shipbuilding plants, with construction work in various stages of advancement. Steel and wooden shipbuilding is pictured and there are no end of impressive "shots" at great crowds of enthusiastic workingmen employed in squelching the atrocious Hun.

General Film Company will start at once to release "Our Bridge of Ships" through its various agencies, and exhibitors who wish to arouse local enthusiasm, stir patriotic action and help immeasurably in putting the proper spirit into the "man behind the man behind the gun" will see to it that this newest Government film is flashed upon their screens.

Crandall Advises Legislators on Tax

Washington Exhibitor Says Care Should be Taken Not to So Weaken Industry as to Make It Non-Operative.

THAT the many taxes proposed for the motion picture and other theatres in the bill being whipped into shape by Congress will have a serious effect upon the smaller houses especially was pointed out by Harry M. Crandall, of Washington, to a number of Congressmen during a visit to the Capitol. He showed the legislators that it will be impossible to keep down to present figures the charges for admission, and predicted that the fifteen-cent houses will be asking twenty-five cents (tax included) if saddled with the heavy burden proposed.

Now the people are called upon to pay a tax of two cents upon each fifteen-cent admission. If this tax is doubled it will mean the gross admission charge will mount to nineteen cents. In Washington, while conditions are different than in most of the cities, the pay of musicians alone has jumped up to $35 weekly, and other costs have mounted in proportion, and with a doubling of the seating capacity tax and the imposition of a rental-price tax, added to the others, the advance in operating costs will reach several more cents. In fact, it is figured that the fifteen-cent admission will, in round figures, total twenty-three and one-half cents—and the exhibitor will charge twenty-five cents.

Mr. Crandall was careful to point out that the exhibitors of the United States were not asking to be exempted from taxation they are willing to do their share but he urged that care be taken not to so weaken the industry as to practically make it non-productive. Heavily burdened it can yield little or no revenue, he declared.

Film Offerings at New York Theatres

Programs for the Week of August 18 at Some of the More Prominent Local Picture Houses.

STRAND.—Ethel Barrymore in a screen version of her stage success, "Our Mrs. McChesney," was the star of the picture program at the Strand the week of August 18. The Edna Ferber stories about the travelling saleslady have many popular features. The latest official War Review, a Christie comedy entitled "Know Your Neighbor," another number of the Outing-Chester bird pictures and the Strand Topical Review completed the screen bill. Grace Hoffman and Mery Zentay were the soloists.

RIALTO.—"Her Only Way," a Select picture with Norma Talmadge featured, was at the head of the Rialto list. George Scarborough is the author, and Sidney Franklin directed the production. The Animated Magazine, a comedy and a scenic were also shown. The soloists were Greek Evans and Mlle. Madeline D'Espinoy.

RIVOLI.—Elsie Ferguson in "Heart of the Wilds," an Artcraft picture, was the leading player on the Rivoli program. Josephine Garavelli was the soloist. A comedy, a scenic, the Animated Pictorial and the Official Allied War Review were also included in the screen numbers.

EIGHTY-FIRST STREET.—First half, Gloria Joy in "The Locked Heart." Latter half, Mabel Normand in "Back to the Woods."

FORTY-FOURTH STREET.—Griffith's "Hearts of the World" continues to fill the theatre.

GEORGE M. COHAN'S.—"America's Answer."

ALLEN HAS HONOR ROLL OF 34 NAMES.

Eighty-one employes of six theatres of Calgary, Alberta, have enlisted with the Canadian and American forces for service overseas against the Hun. This total is an indication of the great number of moving picture theatre employes of Canada who have joined the colors for the big fight during the four years that the Dominion has been at war. The Calgary branch of the Canadian Universal Film Company, Limited, has also seven representatives in the Army, and this fact is evidence of the manner in which exchange employes have taken up arms.

According to the statistics recently compiled in Calgary the Allen Theatre heads the list with thirty-four names on its honor roll. The Pantages Theatre has seventeen maple leaves on its service flag while fourteen employes of the Princess Theatre have joined the fight. The Regent Theatre, Calgary, has furnished six soldiers, while the Empress and Bijou Theatres each have five men in uniform.

McMAHAN TO BUILD THEATRE IN NEWTOWN.

Definite information that the Cincinnati Development Company, in which I. W. McMahan, of McMahan & Jackson, is largely interested, is planning to build a good-sized moving-picture house at Newtown, near the site of the vast Government nitrate plant now under construction, has been made available. As there will be fully 10,000 persons employed in the plant when it is finished and under way, and as their families will nearly all live nearby, it can be seen that there will be ample business for one or several theatres. The same company will also operate other business enterprises in Newtown, as well as handling the development of a tract of land for residence purposes. The enterprise which led Mr. McMahan to jump promptly into the real estate business when the site of the Government was settled bids fair to net him a substantial fortune, judging by the increasing activity of the realty market in the section referred to.

HULSEY BREAKS HIPPODROME HOODOO.

E. H. Hulsey, who owns more moving picture shows than any other man in Texas, has broken the hoodoo which has stayed with the Dallas Hippodrome for years. Manager after manager has failed at the theatre. Hulsey took it over early in August, and through judicious advertising and the staging of high-class features is literally packing the big theatre. On the opening day when Griffith's "The Greater Love" was featured the lobby of the Hippodrome was a bower of roses sent by Dallas merchants who are anxious for Hulsey's success.

Enlarged Music Department for World

George W. Beynon, Its Editor, Realizes His Ambition to Give Service to the Music Director.

FOR some months George W. Beynon, who conducts the department of the Moving Picture World headed "Music for the Picture," has been working upon a new plan for the presentation of that very interesting and essential subject. Always a leader in the matter of real service to the exhibitor the Moving Picture World years ago started a music department at a time when very little attention was given to that factor of exhibiting. Much of the progress that has been made in the way of associating music and the picture has been due to the advice and guidance thus provided to musicians who were playing the pictures.

George W. Beynon.

In its several steps along the road of progress in this particular branch of picture presentation it is probable that the most fruitful effort was in securing the services of Mr. Beynon as editor of the music department. Being a musician and leader of high accomplishments and widely recognized as such by musical directors throughout this country, Mr. Beynon at once brought to his support many of those who knew and respected his work. Through communication with his numerous friends engaged in directing the music of picture theatres he soon discovered the true needs of the musician and is now prepared to give them the proper form of service.

Backing up Mr. Beynon's efforts the Moving Picture World presents with this issue the first installment of "Music for the Picture" in its new form. Mr. Beynon feels confident that it is what the musical director wants and it looks good to us. We hope our readers will like it, for it surely is the most comprehensive presentation of the subject that has yet been offered.

Whitman Will Campaign with Films

New York Governor and State Secretary Appoint Harry Levey to Supervise Screen Exploitation.

THE political campaign in New York State will be waged to a great extent through the films. A step was made in this direction by the appointment of Harry Levey, director of the Universal's industrial department, to have charge of the film campaign for Governor Whitman and Secretary of State Francis Hugo.

Mr. Hugo instructed Mr. Levey to produce a special picture to be entitled "My Four Years in Albany," which will review all the important activities of both the Secretary of State and the Governor during the tenure of office. The film is likely to be one of the chief campaign enterprises of the Republican forces.

It will be remembered that Mr. Hugo has previously figured as an active sponsor of the motion picture message carrier. He had a big part in causing the production of the feature, "Careless America," by the Universal, in advancement of the Safety First campaign.

Prepare New Scenario Writing Courses

Extension Division of University of California Finds Much Interest in Work Among Students.

THE course in scenario writing that was featured last term by the extension division of the University of California, under the direction of Earle Snell, proved so popular that new courses in the subject were prepared for the summer and fall terms and classes are now receiving instruction. The new courses are designed to fill the needs of those who have expressed a desire to enroll, and many who are already on the waiting list. The elementary technique of scenario construction is being taken up along the same general lines as those covered by the previous courses and in addition there is an advanced class for those who have mastered preliminary technique; it will include the building of a complete motion picture story.

Some of the leading exhibitors in the San Francisco bay district have offered the facilities of their theaters to the university, and members of the class will be given the freedom of their houses whenever pictures conducive to analysis are presented. Exhibitors express the opinion that the need of the industry is for more good stories from authors trained in the technique of the screen. The offices of the extension division of the university are located at 62 Post street, San Francisco.

Migratory Star a Diminishing Light

Louise Huff Says It Is Shortsighted Policy on the Part of Player Continually to Change Employers.

"The motion picture star who shifts from one company to another after every picture or two not alone injures herself, but causes suffering from a monetary point of view to the exhibitor," says Louise Huff, who has just completed her second picture, "The Sea Wait," for World Pictures.

"It is a short sighted policy for any young woman who has been fortunate in having her name elevated to stellar position," says Miss Huff, "to move from one company to another. It is true that for the moment she may be able to demand more money for making the shift, but in the end she loses her drawing power because she confuses the exhibitor who, being unable to keep up with her migrations, continues himself to exploiting her in the stereotyped way. To maintain her popularity the star must have the benefit of concentrated publicity. She also must have the advantage of discrimination in selection of stories. She must also be in sympathy and accord with the director and camerman. If she keeps jumping from pillar to post, no one will take any particular interest in her and in the end she will be the recipient of lukewarm co-operation and her pictures will offer nothing to the public but just ordinary values. Soon after this the star will be relegated to the discard.

"A star can make her name a trade mark just like a popular brand of crackers or cigarettes, but she can do this only by sticking to an organization. What she temporarily sacrifices in the way of financial remuneration she more than makes up by longevity of box office value and this, in the long run, makes the greatest aggregate amount of money to her for her work."

Gerard Film Doing Remarkable Business

In Its Twentieth Week in Boston and Over 100,000 Persons See It in Month in Cincinnati.

WITH more than two hundred persons waiting in line at 10 o'clock at night for the last show to start, the small town of Medina, Ohio, established a remarkable record when it showed to 1,750 persons out of a total population of only 2,000 a few days ago. The attraction was "My Four Years in Germany," and Manager Branch of the Princess Theatre utilized several good publicity ideas of his own in addition to material furnished by the First National.

At the Tremont Theatre in Boston Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" is in its twentieth week and still showing to capacity. The Boston Advertiser recently declared that this picture has established itself as one of the greatest successes ever shown on the screen. Naval officials have been special guests of the theatre management and have also asserted that this picture has been a tremendous aid to recruiting throughout New England.

Showing to more than 100,000 persons in 168 performances broke the established new turnstile figures during a phenomenal four weeks' run at the Grand Opera House in Cincinnati, Ohio. E. M. Franklin, publicity man for the Grand, stated that "My Four Years in Germany" was undoubtedly the most talked about picture ever shown in Cincinnati. It played to a gross of $23,401.75. A special performance was given for the University of Cincinnati and one night was utilized in co-operating with the local naval recruiting officers.

Restoring One Year of Business Life.

The World reporter who interviewed Jacob Wilk on the subject of Hiller & Wilk for a recent issue took a whole year of business life away from that firm without so much as an apology. Hiller & Wilk, as a matter of fact, started business August 1, 1915, instead of two years ago as stated in The World's interview.

British Notes

By J. B. Sutcliffe.

THE reply of the Chancellor of the Exchequer to the petition recently presented by the Exhibitors' Association for a reduction of the entertainment tax in its application to lower priced admissions has been made with a promptness not usually associated with Governmental transaction. The aim of the petition was to secure administrative readjustments of the import to allow an increase in price of seats without incurring the increased tax rather than financial concessions. Under the present scale such is impossible. For a twopenny seat the patron pays two-pence-halfpenny, the halfpenny being tax. Should the showman find it necessary, as many have been compelled to, to increase the price of his cheapest seats to two-pence-halfpenny he burdens his patrons with just double the former amount of tax. Exhibitors, particularly in poorer districts where the cheap seats furnish the staple receipts were not long to realize the inequality and through the Association's efforts the welcome announcement was made last week of readjustments in the working of the tax. These are: Upon seats not exceeding 2½d, tax ½d; exceeding 2½d, but not exceeding 4d, tax 1 d; exceeding 4d, but not exceeding 7d, tax 2d. There is no material sacrifice in tax revenue in any or all of the alterations, but they meet the purpose intended by permitting the exhibitor making a slight increase in his charges without encountering the next grade on the tax scale. The readjustments are scheduled to be operative October 1, but it is highly probable that they will be available in August.

As evidence of the general interest being taken in the Tideal company's moving picture biography of the Prime Minister, Lloyd George, the introduction of the matter into Parliamentary discussion is a thing of noteworthy interest. It arose from a question in the House of Commons asking if it was an official film. It is not. It is entirely the private enterprise of the Ideal Film Company, assisted by Lloyd George's brother, William Lloyd George, and by Sir Sidney Low of London University (Imperial and Colonial History), who has prepared the script.

The Provincial Kinematograph Exhibitors' Federation, a northern organization of exhibitors, condemns in unmistakable terms the growing practice of the smaller independent exchanges in releasing feature films expressly for the convenience of a leading kinema in the locality. It frequently happens, they aver, that a subject exhibited exclusively at a city kinema in this manner does not fulfill its second engagement for a fortnight or three weeks later during which time it may have been shown at several halls outside the city area.

Now that the merging alignment of interests has been consummated in the new London producing combine, National Kinema Productions, Ltd., it is possible to definitely corroborate previous assumptions on the policy and aims of the undertaking. The capital of the company is approximately half a million dollars. The president is J. Benson, an owner of extensive theatrical properties, and the managing director Will Barker, a moving picture producer of twenty years standing. The affiliated companies, which will each continue to produce independently of each other but which will release under the one banner, are the British Actors Film Company, and that first milestone in the history of our trade, Barker Motion Photography, Ltd. The N. K. P will more or less be devoted to the preparation of super-pictures, multi-reel dramas, both of the spectacular and social type or both. The personnel of the two companies already working will remain almost unaltered. Thomas Bentley, our Dickensian specialist, will still direct for the British Actors Company and Will Barker, now that he has resigned from some of his trade organization offices, will still find time to supervise affairs at the "old shop" in Soho Square.

For lack of other scope the most brilliant players ever heard in the world are now playing in kinemas," he says.

A few weeks ago exhibitors at Sheffield threatened to refuse to show any film that had previously been shown in the city at any hall other than a regular moving picture theatre. The position was precipitated by the appearance of "The Garden of Allah" (Selig) at a local public hall. To eliminate any possible misunderstanding the exhibitors of Sheffield, 95 per cent of whom are members of the Exhibitors' Association, are anxious to state that this resolve is one in principle and execution to apply to any film so exploited to their detriment and bore no special application to the production above mentioned.

Film Booking Offices, Ltd., reports heavy bookings of Ambassador Gerard's visualized narrative, "My Four Years in Germany," and the release date is months away yet. This, the first moving picture of a state document, had a notable send-off, sponsored by many celebrities in divers walks of life. More ambassadors, foreign ministers and dignitaries of the state, church, law and industry attended the New Gallery Kinema trade view than would be found at the highest society functions.

Glasgow exhibitors are justifiably annoyed at the admission of the general public—that is, to be specific, individual members of the general public—to the private trade and press viewings of forthcoming features. Not that the complaint is peculiar or confined to the Scottish capital; in the eye of the exhibitor the exchangeman is notoriously generous with his trade show invitations. It is a liberality born of fear, a fear that as Messrs. So and So are holding a trade show the same day he will have no audience. To insure against this he very often distributes his pasteboards broadcast to his friends and to his friend's friends with what result? A public performance that may deprive some exhibitors of patrons. At least one London renter I know of is averse to encroaching upon his customers' territory by allowing none but genuine exhibitors or their accredited representatives and pressmen access to tradeshows. Adoption of this plan might alloy the Glasgow grievance! Meanwhile local exhibitors are hesitating whether to close their books to subjects screened at trade shows where the public has been admitted.

Upon the subject of trade shows is another controversy current, this one among the exchangemen and manufacturers agents. The exchangeman regards the trade show of a picture as his special right and privilege seeing that upon him devolves the sale and distribution of the film to the ultimate consumer, the exhibitor. But of recent months the manufacturer, or if he be abroad his London selling agent, has favored an elaborate trade show before disposing of the film to any exchange and for a motive fairly obvious. To create for his goods a publicity value. Whether it is policy to ask the renter to pay for that value, sometimes inflated, in the price of the film is another matter

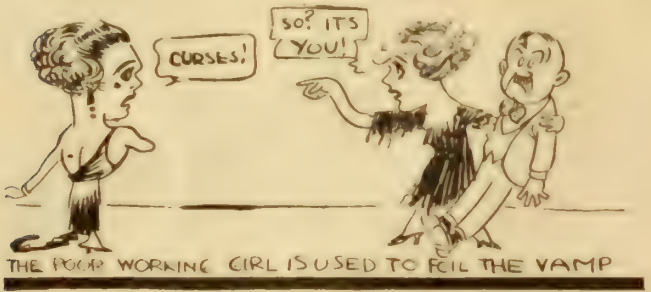
It is many moons since "Enlighten Thy Daughter" started its successful career in the States, but it was only screened in London a few days ago. Mrs. J. D. Walker, who operates an independent exchange on her own account, has purchased the subject for this country.

Vamping Is Now a Pursuit and a Verb

While Precedence Seems to Go to the Vamp the Lady Is Not Particularly Well Defined.



AMONG the current ladies of Filmdom, especially those most in vogue, precedence seems to go to the Vamp. She is not particularly-well defined. She is some sort of a mysterious compound of Louise Glaum, Dorothy Dalton and Theda Bara, with a dash of Gay Parree. Her mission in life is to bleed young bloods in dress suits when they are genially alcoholed.

Vamping has become a pursuit and a verb.

I vamp. Thou vampest. SHE vamps.

"She" is often represented to be "French," and she is about as "French" as American accent on "Give me some bread."

"Donny mow doo pang!"

Amateur playwrights from Macon, Georgia, and Racine, Wisconsin, represent her to be a "New Yorker," whatever that is, and no one has ever been able to find out.

These dramatists from Racine and Macon are supercynical.

New York ladies may not all be members of the Y. W. C. A., nor even all subscribers to the Ladies Home Journal and Butterick's Patterns, but they are not a bad lot for all that, as many eminently respectable former men-about-town can, without naming them, attest.

Ah, Joe, Bill, Harry, Mac, Jim and others too numerous!

The Lady of the Lure is of no especial nationality.

She is of all times, all places, all conditions.

Opposite her, for purposes of contrast, plays the colorless ingenue of many curls, bright ways and general imbecility, though it be she who embraces the wild young Wall Street millionaire "at last." Or perhaps the "poor working girl," Geraldine Farrar or Elsie Ferguson, in rags and tatters, is used to foil the insidious Vamp and wear just as becoming creations as SHE does in the last act.

Where on earth is the American girl we marry?

And where is the one we ought to marry? Oh, where?

It is a safe bet that the Vamp gets more "mash notes" than either the Ingenue or the Poor-Working-Girl, though this may not speak well for the future of our noble race, at least so it would appear at a glance. But let us not judge the sex skirmish superficially.

The ladies of Filmdom may not be representative.

These impersonations are becoming to lose flavor.

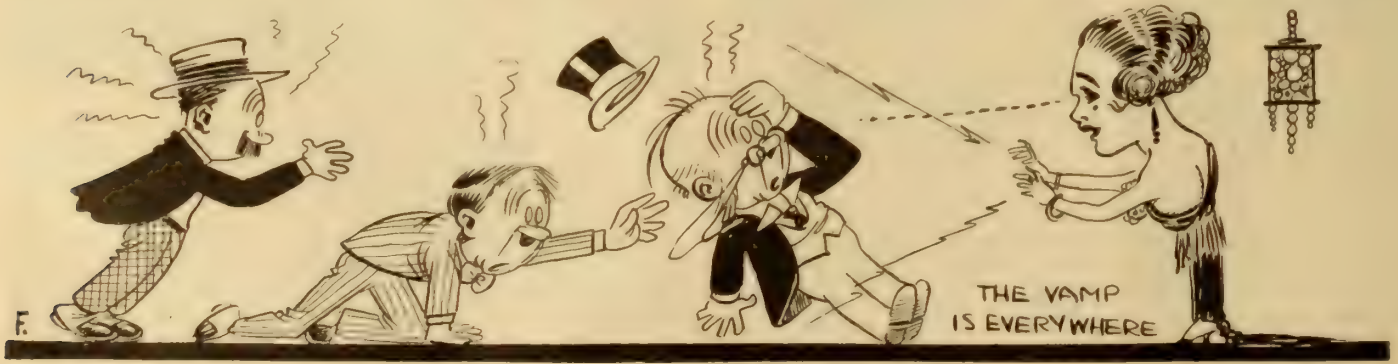
They are served up from the delicatessen menu.

What is called fresh from the American gardens and orchards would be far more palatable, but puzzled producers of pure and uncommercialized purpose do not seem to know where to find it, so embittered is their love of the drama by hatred of paying a royalty.

They have much to learn from detested sources.

The American girl who dances on a table strewn with flowers and champagne glasses at 3 A. M. is a weird creation of Atlantic City idealism. She is more likely sound asleep after a chocolate-ice-cream-soda at the corner drug store, but chuck full of dramatic possibilities. Beneath her embroidered "nightie" are more ardent emotions, delicate sensibilities, capacity for making trouble and extricating herself skillfully from it than in all the vamps, ingenues and working-girls put together, with a beautiful-stenographer-headed-for-ruin thrown in.

The American girl has dazed all Europe and some husbands.



As light as froth in skimming over the surface of things in peaceful days, she has swiftly adapted herself to complex conditions in war times to the amazement of all, herself included. It is not easy to name her strongest characteristic. Let us say she is "congenially emotionalized." Her impulses for good and bad are staggering in results, according to the way she happens to feel at the time. She makes our hair stand on end, or turn gray, or strokes it with gentle hand in such swift succession that we never know exactly what to expect. We are in a panic of joy or fear whenever she mixes in.

As complex as love, the embodiment of life, when may we see this Lady Contemporary on the screen?

Hodkinson Program Promises Variety

Corporation Believes with Latest Additions of Contributing Companies It Can Supply Any Type of Production.

WITH the addition of the Lillian Walker Productions to its program the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation believes it can supply any type of star and picture, thereby offering the exhibitor several series of pictures possessing individuality. Lillian Walker brings the Hodkinson Service a series of "happy" pictures, the first of which, "The Embarrassment of Riches," by Louis K. Anspacher, is a comedy drama of New York life.

J. Warren Kerrigan, so far the only made star on the Hodkinson program, will be presented by Jesse D. Hampton in stories of romance and adventure, such as his current release, "Burglar for a Night," which has been well received by both critics and public. "Prisoners of the Pines," the Kerrigan-Hampton release for September, is a story of the Wisconsin-Canadian woods adapted from Kenneth B. Clarke's story, "The Swamper."

Louise Glaum, believing war time unpropitious for tragedy, has wrapped her calculating temptresses up in their scarlet gowns and put them away. Her future Paralta-Hodkinson plays will be strong dramas providing her with sympathetic roles, such as "A Law Unto Herself," a story of France and Miss Glaum's best effort.

Because of her versatility, Bessie Barriscale adds spice and piquancy to her appearance in being one moment a comedienne and the next an emotional actress. However, her future Paralta plays are to be mostly intense dramas. "The White Lie" is such a picture, telling the story of a woman who lied to bring happiness to her husband and then almost lost his love because of her deed.

The brand new Plaza pictures present Anita King in outdoor stories of love and adventure. Miss King is a girl who does things and, as a suffragette in "Petticoats and Politics," her first Plaza-Hodkinson release, she keeps not only herself, but a whole town in action.

Kathleen Clifford, petite and sprightly, gives a child delineation in "Angel Child" that is as novel as it is refreshing. Miss Clifford is also a Plaza star.

The Douglas Natural Color pictures fill out the Hodkinson Service program with scenic pictures in Nature's own colors. "Cupid Angling," which has already enjoyed hearty ovations given it on the Pacific Coast, where it was given pre-release showings, combines story and scenery. Ruth Roland is the star.

The schedule of prices instituted by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation for its product is believed to be a new one, based, as it is, on the tested and proved box office value of each star in each and every section of the country instead of on census population.

It is the belief of Mr. Hodkinson that this way of scheduling the price of stars is the only fair and equitable one not for only the exhibitor, but the producer as well.

Fleckles Gets Back Into the Game

Well-Known Exchangeman with A. Weinberg Forms Screencraft Pictures and Leases Thanhouser Plant.

THE Screencraft Pictures Incorporated, which has been quietly forming for the past few months with several of the best known men of the industry at the helm, is now launched as a full fledged and active concern. Executive offices have been established in the Longacre Building. A deal has been consummated whereby the company takes over on a long lease the Thanhouser studios in New Rochelle for the production of their pictures. The director has been engaged and the story selected for the first production.

The officers of the company are Maurice Fleckles, president, and A. Weinberg, secretary and treasurer. Both of these men are well known in the industry, having been associated with it for many years.

Mr. Fleckles through his wide exchange connections and manufacturing affiliations has a knowledge of the film business that dates back to the early days of the industry. He has had extensive dealings with the independent exchange owners throughout the country, who have placed their confidence in him in many large deals in the past. With Mr. Weinberg's association with the Famous Players the Screencraft Pictures, Incorporated, is officered by men who enjoy a wide knowledge of the film business and are thoroughly familiar with conditions and the market.

Realizing the failure of the majority of most of the new companies that enter the field has been due to not possessing the proper market Mr. Fleckles before launching into the manufacturing of film spent several months visiting the various important exchange centers, with the result that his company is going forward with a definite plan to make pictures which they know in advance will find a ready market among both exchanges and theatres. Screencraft has already arranged for an independent market.

The story for the first production has been selected. It is of the clean society type scenario with sprinklings of comedy situations which are so desirable to-day. The company has not decided upon any certain length for its pictures, but will make them in natural length.

Frank Reicher, whose many successes are well known in the picture field, has been secured to direct Screencraft productions. Mr. Reicher during his connection with the Lasky Corporation staged more than thirty of that company's pictures. Well known principals will be employed in the pictures and negotiations are going forward at this time with players whose ability, drawing power and popularity are unquestioned.

Work on the first production will start immediately.

Mutual Brings Sliter to New York

Former Manager of Albany Branch Is Succeeded Up State by Jerome Safron.

FRED G. SLITER, manager of the Albany branch of the Mutual Film Corporation, has been selected by President James M. Sheldon of the Mutual as manager of the New York Exchange, succeeding M. J. Sullivan resigned. Mr. Sliter assumed charge of the office August 4. Jerome Safron of the sales force of the Philadelphia branch has been promoted to branch manager at Albany, assuming charge July 31. Mr. Sliter's promotion comes after three years of successful sales work in the Mutual ranks, and is in line with President Sheldon's policy of selecting men from within his own organization for important vacancies which occur.

Fred G. Sliter.

Mr. Sliter entered the Mutual service in 1915 as salesman at Albany. The next year he became branch manager at Albany, where he has remained since.

Prior to his entrance into the distribution of motion pictures Mr. Sliter was for years in the theatrical business and the exhibition end of pictures. He was for a long time associated with his father, known professionally as Colonel Stanton, in the management of theatrical enterprises, notably for Thomas E. Shea and with Fox and Ward's minstrels. Colonel Stanton operated the Central Square theatre at Lynn, Mass., and Sliter, Jr., built and opened the New Broadway at Schenectady.

Mr. Safron has been with the Mutual organization for three years, most of the time as a member of the sales force at Philadelphia.

DAVISON TO PADDLE HIS OWN CANOE.

T. H. Davison, the well-known British film agent and salesman, until recently general manager of the Trans-Atlantic Film Company, Ltd., the European branch of the Universal, has severed his connection with that corporation in order to undertake the control of important Anglo-American film interests.

Mr. Davison has opened offices at 171 Wardour street, London. He is personally acquainted with every buyer in the United Kingdom, and has also an extensive clientele in all the Continental and Colonial markets, besides being one of the best known men in the trade.

He is well known on this side of the Atlantic, having paid several visits to America on film matters.

He is open to undertake the European agency for American productions.

Quickly Breaks Into Officer's School

Luther Reed, Metro Scenarioist, Is Yanked Out of Yaphank Within Twenty-four Hours.

LUTHER A REED, until recently a member of Metro's scenario staff, has broken all records among draft men for reaching an officers' training camp. Like the citizen who arrived at Camp Dix one evening and found himself on a transport bound for France the next morning, without even getting a peek at Dix in day time, Reed, within twenty-four hours after his induction into Upton, at Yaphank, Long Island, was headed for Camp Lee, Va., one of the latest officers' training camps established by Uncle Sam.

And three weeks before he was drafted he hung up something of a record in a studio for scenario work. He wrote and adapted "A Pair of Cupids" for Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne with his right hand and with his left made the screen version of Edna Ferber's "Emma McChesney" stories from George V. Hobart's stage adaptation of them for Ethel Barrymore. Between this work and his preparations for his journey to Berlin, he dashed off "Thirty Days," which will be May Allison's next starring vehicle for Metro, and "The Grizette" for William Fox.

Luther A. Reed.

Prior to his entrance into pictures Cadet Reed was successively reporter, ship news editor, and dramatic critic of the New York Herald. He enjoys the distinction of being the only reporter that ever ingratiated himself into the affection of the diffident Sir James M. Barrie to the extent of Sir James breaking an engagement with the late Charles Frohman to keep a luncheon date with Reed.

Reed is a graduate of Columbia University. He was prepared for engineering, but his abilities along these lines were shelved after a year in newspaper work, which he "took to" as he has just taken to the army. Now, however, his knowledge of mathematics, particularly the mil system, which is an essential of most army work, will stand him in good stead. He is the only son of Dr. and Mrs. William A. Reed of New York City.

"Salome" Slated For a Thousand Houses

Through the K. and E. and Shubert Circuits Bookings Are Being Made Over Twenty Routes.

WITH contracts coming in daily the Fox Film Corporation announces that more than 1,000 first-class dramatic theatres throughout the country have already sent in contracts for showings of "Salome," the great Theda Bara production of the life and love of the daughter of Herodias.

Bookings are being made over twenty routes through the K. and E. and Shubert theatrical circuits, and high class theatres in every large city and town in the country have either already booked this attraction or expect to get it soon. Several well-known theatrical agents are out in advance of the twenty road shows which William Fox has sent out on this play, and reports are being received daily at the Fox home office of more bookings on one dollar top price scale.

"Salome" opened at the Orpheum Theatre, Seattle, to capacity, according to a telegram received by the Fox offices from the manager of the theatre. The theatre seats 2,000.

"Salome" will open at the Teck Theatre, Buffalo, August 25, and at Ford's Theatre, Baltimore, August 26.

Other places where "Salome" will open in the near future are Portland, Ore., September 7; Detroit, September 7; Providence, September 9; Lincoln, Neb., September 9; Los Angeles, September 9; New Orleans, September 15; Albany, September 23; Kansas City, September 22; St. Louis, at the William Fox Liberty Theatre, September 29; Omaha, September 30, and San Francisco, September 30.

Numerous other places will have openings soon, including: Fall, River, Worcester, Stamford, Bridgeport, Schenectady, Trenton, Wichita, Topeka, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Norwalk, Ohio; Marietta Davenport, Iowa City, Muskateen, Washington, Centerville, Burlington, Keokuk, Oldwein, Iowa; Terre Haute, Canton, Joliet, Champagne, Galesburg, Mattoon, Centralia, Cairo, Marion, Benton, and many other cities.

Unhonored and Unsung Is Film Editor

That Is, Usually, but Such Is Not the Situation with Lee Dougherty at World Pictures.

IN the navy the unsung hero is the man who deep down in the bowels of the ship keeps the steam at the proper gauge. He has the least chance of any to save his life when a torpedo finds a vital spot. So in the motion picture industry the one man who is chiefly responsible for the success or failure of a picture is the film editor. All that a director knows plus that of the scenario writer and continuity creator must be within the knowledge of the man who cuts, rearranges, re-edits and assembles the bits of photograph material so that it will fit, each in its place to make a story that the audience will appreciate and approve.

World Pictures is fortunate to have such a man in Lee Dougherty, who began with the industry when it wasn't. He will tell you that there is no set rule to turn out successes, that each picture must be treated from an entirely different standpoint. It is not generally known that film editors must go over and over a picture sometimes as many as fifty times before arriving at the right proportion of length for the scenes and just how they should be patched together.

Not alone must he have a knowledge of direction and editing, but he is compelled to have a good working knowledge of the laboratory end and of just how the development must be made, when the negative should be over and under toned and how it should be treated to get the best light effects. If the story was honestly told of many of the great hits instead of directors and stars getting the credit the film editor would be entitled to all the praise and glory.

Hunter Bennett Is "Doing His Bit"

Motion Picture Man, Formerly Associated with Frank Hall, Mutual and World Film, Joins the Army.

HUNTER BENNETT, personally known to a large number of exchangemen and exhibitors throughout the country, is now a member of the Twenty-first Infantry (Regular Army), stationed at San Diego. At the time of his enlistment Mr. Bennett was associated with Frank Hall in the handling of special features. For two years he was exchange supervisor and at one time sales manager of Mutual Film Corporation. Prior to his connection with Mutual he was assistant general manager of World Film Corporation, to which position he was promoted from branch manager of the New Orleans office.

Mr. Bennett has been selected to go to the Officers' Reserve School and expects to leave at any time. Carlyle Robinson, formerly press agent for Cahrles Chaplin, who is also in the Twenty-first, has already left for the Officers' School at Camp Pike, Little Rock. Mr. Bennett states that the Twenty-first is camped in beautiful Balboa Park, where the exposition buildings are still standing.

NEW HODKINSON REPRESENTATIVE APPOINTED.

C. E. Shurtleff, general manager for the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has just returned from a trip to Washington and Baltimore and reports representative exhibitors in those cities interested in the Hodkinson co-partnership plan.

P. N. Brinch has installed S. J. Stoughton as special representative of Hodkinson Service in Chicago, and H. J. Bayley, recently manager of Goldwyn's Chicago branch in Minneapolis, has gone to Omaha, where Joe Levy has been appointed special representative.

John A. Stevenson, Hodkinson division manager in the South, has introduced Max Heine to the New Orleans territory as special representative and Hoyt G. Morrow in the same capacity at Dallas.

Other appointments of special representatives are W. H. Bradley in Boston, C. E. Fielder in Cleveland, Robert F. Werth in St. Louis and George W. Christoffers in Buffalo, in addition to A. S. Abeles in New York and C. W. Perry in Detroit, as previously announced.

Vitagraph to Issue Blackton Production

"The Common Cause," Screen Version of "Getting Together," Already Half Completed—Release Date Unset.

THE production which Commodore J. Stuart Blackton is making under the auspices and with the co-operation of the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission, "The Common Cause," is to be released through the Vitagraph distributing organization. The date of release has not been decided upon, although the production is about half completed.

In an authorized statement to the exhibitors of the country relative to his distribution plans Commodore Blackton says: "I have looked over the entire field of motion picture distributors for the company best equipped to give 'The Common Cause' the distribution which its aim and theme deserve."

Commodore Blackton declares that "The Common Cause" will be the greatest effort of his career. It certainly has everything in its favor. To begin with, the story is the joint work of three famous writers—J. Hartley Manners, Major Ian Hay Beith and Percival Knight. Mr. Manners is the author of "Peg O' My Heart," "Out There" and other plays which have won renown on Broadway. Major Beith wrote "The First Five Hundred Thousand," one of the greatest books called forth by the war, while Percival Knight, the third member of the trio, is a well known actor and playwright.

The scenario was written by Anthony P. Kelly, and in the production of the play Commodore Blackton has unlimited financial means and every facility, including the use of troops, guns, fighting tanks, etc., for making a great picture.

"The Common Cause" is to have an all-star cast, headed by Herbert Rawlinson and Sylvia Breamer. Others will be Lawrence Grossmith, Louis Dean, Mlle. Marcel, Hunley Gordon, Philip Van Lorn, and Charles and Violet Blackton, the son and daughter of Commodore Blackton.

Bluebird Announces Season's Players

Stars Include Misses Clfford, Myers, Roberts, Mersereau and Hansen and Messrs. Salisbury and Mulhall.

BLUEBIRD announces this week a schedule of strong features and the particular stars to be featured in rotation during the coming season. The productions are declared among the best that have appeared on the Bluebird program for a long time.

The official designation comprises Ruth Clifford, Monroe Salisbury, Carmel Myers, Edith Roberts, Violet Mersereau and the team of Juanita Hansen and Jack Mulhall.

Miss Clifford, whose second film was "Fires of Youth," is at work on "The Bargain True," an original story by Nalbro Bartley, directed by Elsie Jane Wilson. Salisbury appears in the first picture set for September release. The latter is "That Devil, Bateese," a story of the Canadian north woods. Following this he will be seen in "Hugon the Mighty."

Carmel Myers' next release is "The Borrowed Duchess," written by Perley Poore Sheehan. R. Sturgeon is directing her.

Miss Roberts, the youngest of the stars, who appeared in "The Deciding Kiss," will appear in "A Billion in Beans." The story was written by John B. Clymer and is directed by Jack Dillon.

Miss Mersereau, well known for many successes, is at work on a picture the title of which has not yet been decided, directed by O. A. C. Lund.

Miss Hanson and Mr. Mulhall, as soon as they finish the Universal serial "The Brass Bullet," will be starred in a series of five reel Bluebird comedy dramas.

NATHANSON REPORTS GOOD BUSINESS.

This is the best summer on record, according to N. L. Nathanson, managing director of the Regent Theatre Company of Toronto. Business during the present season has been far ahead of last season, according to Mr. Nathanson. This opinion is interesting in view of the fact that Mr. Nathanson represents interests that control fourteen moving picture theatres in Canada.

WILLIAM FAIT, JR., TO MANAGE LIBERTY THEATRE.

William Fait, Jr., manager of the Avon Theatre, Utica, N. Y., since April 1, 1916, has been selected as manager of the Liberty Theatre at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio, and will begin his duties September 1. Mr. Fait applied for service at the Liberty Theatre and finally secured the appointment. He then made a trip to Buffalo to discuss the matter with the officers of the American Motion Picture Company, owners of the Avon. It will be remembered that Mr. Fait went to Utica four months after the Avon opened, succeeding W. B. Foster. He is a member of the Utica branch of the Motion Picture Exhibitors League and was the treasurer of the American Exhibitors' Association.

DALLAS FOURTH DISTRIBUTOR, SAYS DEPINET.

Ned Depinet of the Consolidated of Dallas is determined not to let Douglas Hawley of the First National put anything over on him as a luncheon club orator. Depinet was called on for an address before the Dallas Rotary Club at its mid-August meeting. He told what the motion picture industry was doing toward winning the war and declared that Dallas now ranked as the fourth greatest motion distributing center in the United States.

EDWARDS MANAGING GENERAL'S KANSAS CITY.

A new branch manager at Kansas City is announced by General Film. The appointee is no stranger to General Film's friends in that territory, since he is C. S. Edwards, who was one of the company's very first exchange managers at Kansas City. Mr. Edwards was with General dating from the organization of the company until two or three years ago, when he became affiliated with Pathe as manager at St. Louis and at Kansas City. He has now taken charge of his old office and begun some important activities.

BARRONS DRIVES MOTOR TRUCK "OVER THERE."

Oswald Curtis Barrons, formerly salesman in New York territory for Artcraft, is now driving a motor truck in France. He would like to hear from his New York friends among the exchange men and exhibitors. Write today and address your letter to him: "Private Oswald C. Barrons, A. P. O. 713, Supply Company 314, A. E. F." You may not know what a letter means to your pals who have gone over to fight the Hun, but if you want to find out, just write to some of them. Commence with Barrons today.

SEVENTEEN REICHENBACHS IN SERVICE.

First Sergeant Joseph Reichenbach, brother of Harry L. Reichenbach, has arrived in France. Reichenbach was manager of the Eldee Film Corporation before enlisting. Walter and Howard Reichenbach, two other brothers, are soon to leave for camp, and Harry goes within the next few weeks in a Government civilian capacity. There are seventeen from Reichenbach's immediate family relations now in service.

GRIFFITH DOES HIS BIT IN RUSSIA.

A postal from the International Committee Y. M. C. A. states: "Latest information from Herbert S. Griffith indicates that he has been doing very successful work among the Czecho-Slovak soldiers who are now stationed in Vladivostock."

Mr. Griffith was formerly with the Nicholas Power Company.

OMAHA HAS PRODUCING COMPANY.

The Ak-Sar-Ben Film Company has been incorporated with a capital stock of $25,000, and is now located at Thirtieth and Newport avenue, Omaha. A large outdoor stage, laboratory and office building have been constructed. W. T. Warren, formerly connected with the moving picture business in Chicago, is president and director of the company.

MOTION PICTURES ENLIGHTEN COURT.

At the hearing of the paper manufacturers held before Judges Hough, Ward, Rogers and Manton at the Hotel McAlpin, New York, Thursday, August 15, for the purpose of ascertaining the proper price for print paper in an appeal from the decision of the Federal Trade Commission, motion pictures of the paper-making process were shown.

FUEL COMMITTEE IN WASHINGTON.

The Fuel Conservation Committee of the N. A. M. P. I., consisting of Marcus Loew, chairman; P. A. Powers, Samuel L. Rothapfel, Harold Edel, J. H. Hallberg, B. S. Moss, Sidney S. Cohen and William Brandt, left for a conference in Washington on Monday evening, August 19. Secretary Elliott was one of the party.

SULLIVAN GOES TO DIVISION OF FILMS.

Dennis J. Sullivan, recently assistant general manager of the Mutual Film Corporation, has been appointed manager of domestic distribution, Division of Films, Committee of Public Information, to succeed J. A. Berst.

Dentelbeck Is an Operator and More

President of Local 173 and Chief of Toronto's Strand Is Keen for Refining Accessories.

THE projection at the Strand theatre, Toronto, shows signs of gradual improvement all the time due to the personal interest taken in projection room matters by Charles Dentelbeck, chief operator, who also happens to be president of the Moving Picture Machine Operators' Local 173 of Toronto.

Dentelbeck has worked out a buzzer attachment to warn the man in charge that a reel is becoming exhausted. This device consists of a roller which functions with the film on the upper reels. This roller drops down as the reel becomes unwound until a contact arm touches the opposite pole of a dry battery circuit, causing the sounding of a buzzer. The alarm continues until it is switched off by the operator who then has two minutes in which to prepare for the switch to the other machine. When the buzzer is disconnected from one projection machine the switch becomes aligned with the connection for the other projection machine.

Another innovation consists of shaded incandescent lamp bulbs inside the "carbon compartments" of the machine to throw direct light on the inside of these boxes when carbons are being changed or when any special adjustments are being made.

At the Strand the operator does not have to rely upon his own watchfulness to keep the picture at full brilliancy because the chief usher on the orchestra floor has a push button which operates a buzzer in the projection room to warn the operator of a possible misframe or dark spot. This warning signal was installed at the request of Mr. Dentelbeck himself.

Operator Dentelbeck has also reduced the size of apertures through which the pictures are projected and also the operator's windows. One glance is sufficient to show how much vagrant light is caught by the reduced apertures. All electric lights in the projection room are fitted with special shades to throw all rays from the apertures and windows. Incidentally, these windows are fitted with glass panes.

An exhaust fan was recently installed in the ceiling of the Strand projection room and during the recent hot spell the temperature of the room never went above 84 degrees.

Dentelbeck has a work bench that would honor a toolmaker. Along the back of the bench is a long row of machinist's and electrician's tools and practically all repairs or attachments can be made on the spot.

Still another Dentelbeck innovation is a string and pulley attachment which facilitates switching from one machine to the other. When the beam of light is shut off on one machine, this cord opens the door between the arc and the film on the other machine and vice versa. This cord crosses one machine to the other at a height several feet above the head of the operator.

GLADISH.

Unfeelingly Crack Canada's Blue Laws

That's What Allen Theatre Interests Did When They Showed "Hearts of the World" to Convalescent Soldiers.

THE Allen Theatre interests of Toronto broke the Blue Laws of Canada respecting the observance of the Sabbath twice during the present month for the sake of entertaining returned soldiers who are now convalescing in military hospitals.

"Hearts of the World" was presented at the Davisville Hospital on Sunday, August 4, before several hundred ex-warriors, the majority of whom have lost either a leg or an arm. Great excitement prevailed as the story progressed and the soldiers had one of the most enjoyable afternoons of their hospital life.

On the following Sunday, the 11th, a party journeyed from Toronto to Whitby by automobile to present "Hearts of the World" to the many soldiers who are in the Whitby Convalescent Hospital. The picture was presented with full orchestral accompaniment, the Allen Theatre orchestra making the trip for the occasion. The big feature was shown in the up-to-date picture theatre which has been provided by the Canadian Government for the amusement of the soldiers in this hospital.

HOT WEATHER DOESN'T STOP SWAAB.

Lewis M. Swaab, 1327 Vine Street, Philadelphia, Pa., who is the exclusive distributor for Simplex machines in Eastern Pennsylvania, Delaware and Southern New Jersey, is one of the most progressive supply men in the industry.

The importance of printed matter as a vital means to the growth of his business has been evident from the time Mr. Swaab entered the accessory field. He not only uses mediums of national circulation, although he sells within a limited territory, but he reaches his public through house organs, large quantities of envelope inserts and advertising in local publications.

Neither does he relax in the so-called dull spell of summer. He believes in keeping exhibitors informed of the fact that he is selling machines during all seasons.

St. Louis Officials to See "Salome"

William Fox Will Entertain Them at Private Showing Night Before Opening of His Liberty Theatre.

PRELIMINARY to the opening of the new William Fox Liberty Theatre September 29 in St. Louis, there will be a private screening of the opening attraction, "Salome," the night before in the theatre with Mayor Christman and more than 500 city officials and their friends as guests of the management.

According to an announcement by John Zanft, managing director of the William Fox Circuit of Theatres, who has been in charge of arrangements for the opening, the first public opening of the new theatre will be Sunday, September 29. "Salome," the great Theda Bara super film production, has been booked for an indefinite engagement, inaugurating a policy of high-class pictures which will put the William Fox Liberty Theatre among the leading playhouses of the country.

Renovations on the Liberty Theatre are progressing apace. Workmen have practically completed the installation of the $12,000 pipe organ, the changes and redecorating in the interior of the house are nearly completed, and the lobby has been enlarged and transformed until now the Liberty has room for some of the finest lobby displays in any house in the Middle West.

JOHN BLACKWOOD IN NEW YORK.

John H. Blackwood, personal representative for Jesse D. Hampton, is in New York, making his headquarters at the office of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Mr. Blackwood announces production satisfactorily progressing on J. Warren Kerrigan's first Hampton pictures, "Prisoners of the Pines," and states that other good stories are in hand from the pen of the same author, Kennet B. Clarke. One of the objects of Mr. Blackwood's visit is the selection of more stars for J. D. Hampton for distribution by Hodkinson Service.

GENERAL FILM TO AID W. S. S.

In co-operation with the National War Savings Committee, General Film Company has instructed its twenty-eight exchanges in the United States to give energetic attention to the War Savings Stamp campaign. Arrangements have been made to send at least fifty animated W. S. S. cartoon trailers to each exchange, these to be attached to the most active film and kept working. At the same time the committee will be kept informed by General Film of the subjects that carry these "Thriftette" trailers and also the houses displaying them.

MARGUERITE CLARK MARRIES.

Marguerite Clark, Famous Players-Lasky star, and Lieutenant H. P. Williams of the Engineering Corps, U. S. A., were married Thursday morning at the First Methodist church at Greenwich, Conn., by the Rev. Harvey Dalley. Lieutenant Williams is stationed at Washington.

New Quick Changing Sign on the Market

Southern Concern Offers Novel Idea in Electric Signs for Theatre Fronts.

ELECTRIC signs for theatre fronts have been lacking in the chief essential of ease in changing, but A. Greenwood, of the Greenwood Advertising Co. of Knoxville, Tenn., has been in town the past few weeks with a sign that can be completely changed in a few minutes.

Two Views of the Quick Changing Sign.

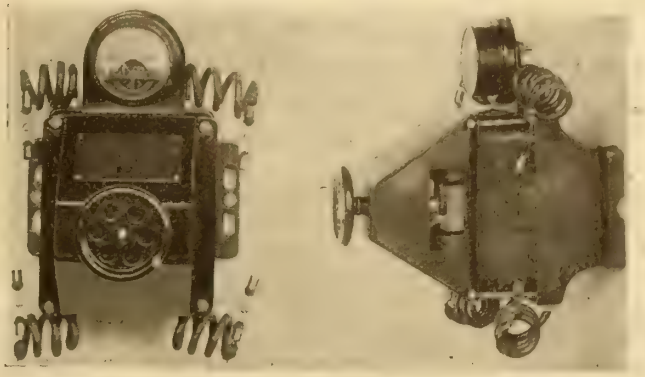
This sign was mistakenly credited to one of the purchasers of a sign by a trade publication recently, but the sign is already in limited use in Tennessee and promises to gain a wider field because of its handy construction. As will be seen from the cut, the sign consists of a two-bank space for lettering and an oval for a portrait or trademark. The insert shows a sign at night, while the body of the cut shows it in daylight use. The letters are set into panels which may be detached for changing, or the letters may be changed without removal. A font of 250 letters come with the sign. These are cut from heavy gauge galvanized metal and are provided with wire pins top and bottom. These pins fit into holes drilled in the panels, being inserted into the upper holes first, when the lower pins can be dropped into their proper spaces and rest against a ledge which preserves the alignment. The ovals are made of similar sheet metal soldered onto wire gauze. The backing is a shallow box painted in white enamel and illuminated by concealed lights in the rim of the sign, 130 ten-watt lights giving an illumination equal to electric letters. A flasher may be cut into the circuit or two or more systems of colored lights installed. The only glass in the entire sign is the light bulbs, and when dusty the sign may be washed down with a hose without danger of breakage. One of the signs is to be installed by S. L. Rothapfel on the marquee of the Rialto, if a license can be procured, and Mr. Greenwood's visit to New York will probably result in their installation elsewhere.

Spends $2,000 for Five-Foot Dissolve

Worsley of Paralta Shows Cement Base, the Emplacement of Huge Dummy Gun and Then Its Discharge.

WALLACE WORSLEY, who directed "A Law Unto Herself," the latest Louise Glaum Paralta play, is authority for the statement that he has filmed in this picture the costliest dissolve yet made in film history. The making of the five feet of film, which flash by in five seconds on the screen, cost approximately two thousand dollars. It may be the highest-priced, five-foot strip of film on the market.

This cost was necessitated by the fact that a huge cannon, an exact reproduction of the 42-centimeter which was so popular with the Hun at the beginning of the war, was called for in this dissolve. It had to be taken from the studio to a location in a vineyard in the town of Sierra Madre. Here a cement foundation had been prepared for it. The dissolve shows one of the characters of the story gazing at the foundation before the gun is upon it, and before him appears the vision of the gun which is to be placed there in later years.



The camera was set first to take the empty foundation, and then it was left rigidly in place, with the cameraman standing guard over it to see that no one moved it, for two hours and a half while the heavy gun was brought up in trucks and mounted on the emplacement. Then came the other part of the dissolve showing the monster cannon being fired.

A Helpful Assistant for the Operator

General Electric's New Compensarc for Current Regulation of Mazda Projection Lamps is Compact and Efficient.

TO give the close regulation of current essential for Mazda motion picture projection lamps the General Electric Company has developed a new Compensarc which will be known as the Type I, Form B. Protection is afforded against over current and regulation to within one-tenth ampere is obtained.

It operates on the reactance principle and is furnished for standard A. C. voltages and frequencies in ratings of 20 and 30 amperes, corresponding to the Mazda lamps now on the market for this purpose.

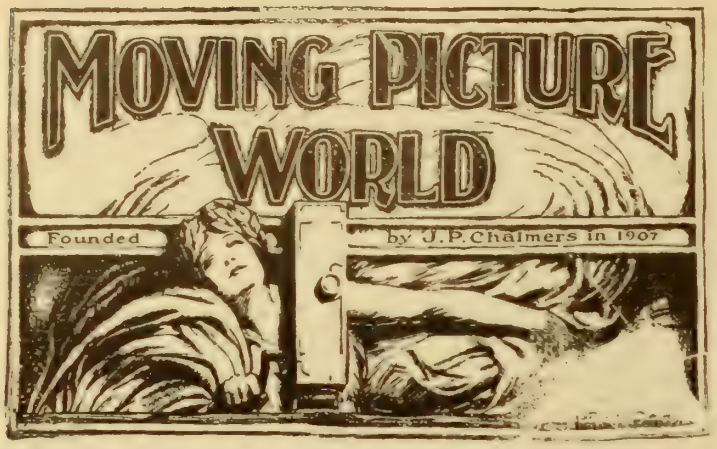
Owing to its compactness, it may be installed convenient to the operator, who can watch the ammeter and control the current by the hand wheel shown in the illustration.

This Compensarc is made up of a two-coil auto transformer stacked with standard transformer punchings within a raw hide housing, the complete wiring of which forms the line side with the lamp terminals tapped across one coil. The coils are stacked so that room is left between them for an iron leakage plug in each side of the magnetic circuit. Turning a hand wheel on the shaft of the iron plug moves it in and out between the two coils giving a very close adjustment for the lamp. Maximum reactance is obtained when the plug is all the way in. The only noise is a slight humming when the plugs are being withdrawn; this ceases when they come to rest.

The net weight of the Compensarc is 32 pounds, and its dimensions are 8 3/16 inches wide by 11 7/16 inches high by 10⅞ inches deep.



Further information regarding the compensarc may be obtained by addressing the General Electrical Company, Schenectady, N. Y., and mentioning the fact that you saw the description of the apparatus in the Moving Picture World.

"BUSTER" KEATON ON HIS WAY.

"Buster" Keaton, one of the brightest lights in the Paramount-Arbuckle comedies, once a member of the vaudeville family of Keatons, is now wearing khaki, and what is more is on his way with Company C, 159th Infantry of Uncle Sam's forces.

On the eve of Keaton's departure for camp a dinner in his honor was given at Seal Beach, which included a minstrel show, with Arbuckle as interlocutor, Lou Anger, Al St. John, Buster Keaton and Eddie Cline as end men. Before the affair closed a wallet was presented to the department comedian which, on opening, he found contained $100, the gift of the company to defray his camp expenses.

Buster Keaton was a great favorite with all who knew him, as well as a most capable performer, and his presence will be missed by his former comrades of the Paramount-Arbuckle force.

Facts and Comments

IF REASON prevail there will be no effort made at the Chicago convention of the American Exhibitors' Association to instruct Congress on the subject of taxation, as has been suggested, but on the contrary resolutions should be adopted pledging the utmost support of the exhibitors present to whatever plan the wisdom of our lawmakers devises, and thereafter to do all within their power to meet the requirements of all laws enacted for the successful prosecution of the war for the preservation of human rights. At this time there can be no other course for loyal Americans. We can imagine a pro-German pacifist association rearing up on its individual hind legs and voicing a mighty protest against everything that the Government at Washington might do that touched its members adversely, but we cannot imagine an association of motion picture theatre owners doing anything of the sort. Incidentally there are no pro-German pacifist organizations in this country that one can notice, and the exhibitors who meet in Chicago in September are not preparing to qualify as such.

Exhibitors should not get the idea that there is any discrimination against them in the matter of taxation for war purposes. The Congressional committee charged with the task of raising something like thirty billions of dollars, estimated as needed to pay our war bill for the coming year, faces no small task. They are human beings and may make mistakes, but they are not making mistakes for the fun of it. Every precaution has been taken to prevent mistakes that will work hardship upon any class or trade. It was for that purpose that a committee of representative motion picture men went to Washington and had a talk with the members of the Ways and Means Committee on the subject. From the information elicited the committee has reached certain conclusions which seem likely to become component parts of the War Revenue bill when it is finally reported. There is no evidence that the members of the committee acted without careful consideration of the information placed at their disposal by the delegation of motion picture men who appeared before them. There is no evidence that they were influenced by press agents' yarns or by an antipathy to the motion picture business. To intimate such is the case is merest twaddle and unworthy a second thought. It is not within belief that a gathering of motion picture exhibitors will take any such view of the situation.

We deny that the war tax has had detrimental effect upon the motion picture business. The records do not show that picture theatres have closed or producing companies have ceased operations because of the war tax. Nor do we believe that the increase will work any hardship upon the industry, either individually or collectively. It is a credit to the motion picture industry that it is not numbered among the profiteers; it is to its credit that it has aided the Government whenever and wherever its assistance was asked. Through its close touch with the people it is in position to be of still greater assistance to this Nation in its greatest need. In the face of this record, who among us is going to have the temerity to quibble over the few paltry pennies which we are asked to give toward winning the war? Last week the MOVING PICTURE WORLD printed a list of about 800 names of men who have left good positions in the trade to go into the war. Some of them will give their lives for the cause of humanity. Our money is needed to back them up. Shall we give it? What do you think?

READERS of the MOVING PICTURE WORLD who are interested in music for pictures will find in this issue a real music department, compiled by a musician who knows what the orchestra leader wants to know about a picture and who is capable of giving him just that information. George W. Beynon, who has conducted the Music Department for some time past, has made a study of the matter of cue sheets and believes that he now has the proper form to give the best service to the orchestra leader or musician who makes use of that guide to playing the pictures. In the course of his investigations Mr. Beynon has consulted a large number of leaders and has acted upon their suggestions to a considerable extent, until now he believes that he has what is most suited for the purpose intended. An attractive feature of the new department is the manner in which it is put together. It will be noticed that all advertising in any way associated with music is assembled in the department. We believe that this innovation will appeal to the advertisers of instruments and compositions as the best place in which to place their product before musicians.

REGARDING the list of motion picture men who have signed up for the war, just mentioned in the foregoing paragraph, we desire to emphasize the fact that it contains probably one-tenth of the total number. We want the rest of them, and would thank all our readers to send us the names of those not already mentioned. Look the list over and then get busy. There are a lot of theatre men who could not be reached, but the list is not closed, so get them in for the next installment. It will be a matter of record.

* * *

IT has been definitely settled by the directors of the Motion Picture Exposition Company that there will be an exposition of the trade in New York in October next. Something more than $30,000 in contracts are already in hand and a full representation of the industry is assured. Many interesting and instructive features are promised, so that the public will be given a real treat. The meeting at which this decision was reached was one of the most enthusiastic gatherings of picture men that has been held in some time.

Sardou and the Screen

By Edward Weitzel.

SARDOU has not fared well at the hands of the adaptors for the screen. The qualities that were the French dramatist's greatest asset have been almost wholly deleted from his plays; and the newer generation, that is not familiar with his works in the original, are wondering how he won his past reputation. In spite of the sneers of that clever stage novelist and fountain-head of smart small talk, George Bernard Shaw, the man who wrote the Porte St. Martin dramas for Sarah Bernhardt knew his business and could put more thrills, not dependent upon physical action, into a play than any other man of his time.

And it is the thrill that is the supreme achievement of the theatre, whether the appeal be emotional or intellectual. The subjective has no place in the scheme of the dramatist.

"Fedora" is the latest of the Sardou plays to be photo-novelized. In "La Tosca" the physical action of the last act—the execution of Mario and the death of Tosca—kept the dramatic tensity at the right pitch. The scene of the killing of Scarpia, which is played almost entirely between two people, was not sustained and brought up to its proper climatic force. "Fedora," which contains but little physical action in the original, but possesses a wonderfully built up mental conflict, has proved a greater stumbling block for the present method of screen adaptation. The pictured interpretation is on the same level as are the efforts of a mechanical piano-player. All the points are brought in, but there is no skilled arrangement of incident, no mountain peaks of dramatic strength, to thrill the beholder.

When screen fiction first came into being an attempt was made to transfer stage dramas to the screen without changing their construction. The result was anything but satisfactory. A new method of drama construction was required for the new medium of art expression. Then came the screen novel that carefully—sometimes, painfully—explained each incident of the plot, and had only occasional flashes of the suspense that is the soul of real drama.

Suspense Means But One Thing.

And suspense means but one thing—keeping ahead of the spectator's ability to anticipate the action.

In the stage play of "Fedora" the sordid and commonplace situation of the illicit relations between Fedora's intended husband and the wife of Loris Ipanoff is explained in a few, brief words; and almost the entire action is devoted to the consequences of Fedora's vow to bring to justice the one who killed the man she loved. The picture version gives one-third of its length, at the opening, to relating the details of the intrigue, and the artistic balance is completely destroyed.

Novelizing the Stage Play.

The photo-novel has its rightful place on the screen. But why take dramas that depend entirely upon mental action for their thrill and turn them into screen novels that are only weak imitations of the spoken plays?

The demand for the thrill that should accompany all true drama will eventually force the writers for the screen to evolve a technic that will develop a form of pictured story worthy to be called a photoplay. When this very important advancement in the art of the motion picture is an assured fact the screen will be much nearer its highest form of expression; and physical action, now its most useful and impressive factor, will be relegated to the production of melodramatic themes.

The motion picture will come into a loftier sphere of artistic endeavor when it formulates its own process of climax and suspense, and gives birth to a drama that is as skillfully articulated as are the plots of "Othello" and "Macbeth."

Game, Square and White

By E. T. Keyser.

IN THE last issue of the Moving Picture World we published the names of eight hundred and fifty moving picture men who had thrown their business to the winds at the call of Uncle Sam. The list was far from complete, but such information as we acquired was literally dragged out by the heels.

The general attitude of the picture trade was that it was all in the day's work and nothing out of the ordinary to do what they could to make as good a showing in men as they had in contributions of time, money and publicity to the public cause.

When the moving picture industry raised millions for the three Liberty Loans and over a million in the New York district alone for the Red Cross nobody, outside of the contributors, had anything but a vague idea as to the amount contributed, and when it became evident that some rapid and graphic medium was needed to reach out to each nook and corner of the country with Liberty Loan and W. S. S. appeals the producers and exhibitors joined forces and put over a campaign of popular publicity such as the world had never before seen.

And what the picture industry has refrained from doing is almost as much to its credit as is its already long list of patriotic accomplishments.

The shoes that formerly cost three and four dollars now sell for five, six and seven; when the Government increased the internal revenue on tobacco the five-cent cigar went to six and seven, the fifteen-cent cigarette to twenty, and the tobacco which had retailed at ten cents for two ounces sold at fifteen for one and a half ounces.

Automobiles went up with a jump; clothes shed their wool and climbed in price and restaurants halved the portion and doubled the price. Railroad fares went from two to three cents a mile and letter postage has gone from two to three cents, and the poorer and the more unreliable the humble safety match the more one pays for it.

Taxes, shortage of labor, increased cost of material have all been used as profiteering excuses, and what an opportunity the picture trade had to boost prices with equal reason only the picture men know.

But, despite taxes on raw stock, finished negatives, incomes and profits, also the tax on each admission costing over five cents, the exhibitor is paying about the same for his attractions as he did in pre-war days, while the audience gets past the box office at the same old rate plus exactly the admission tax on his seat.

And, of all the industries which are furnishing the Government with supplies and material, the motion picture manufacturers are the only ones who are billing their goods at about net cost of production.

While the picture industry is enthusiastically waving the flag, it is not doing it to make an opportunity to insert the disengaged hand into some one's pocket.

Posing

By Robert C. McElravy.

EXTREME naturalness upon the screen is a difficult thing to acquire, and the work of a performer who does accomplish it stands out with great distinction. The layman, who vainly tries to sit for a photograph at intervals of five or ten years, appreciates the difficulty of the continued posing of the moving picture actor. Reflecting over his own attempts to look pleasant without playing the genial idiot he is able to forgive the lapses of the screen performer when they occur.

Complete mastery of self before the camera is tremendously difficult. There is always the tendency to strain for effect, to look at the camera, to make false gestures, to move about awkwardly, to appear ill at ease. To be sure, the performer has a keen and discerning director to help him over the difficult places, but after all the director cannot give him poise and assurance, for these things come from within—and they are the qualities by which the extent of his gift as a performer will be measured.

It is probable that supreme naturalness before the camera is found only among animals. They are so apparently devoid of all borrowed emotions, they never strut or pretend or smile vacuously into the camera. A cow upon the screen is just a plain cow, as kindly and complacent as you please. A dog is a dog, a kitten is a kitten, a rat is a rat. If an animal exhibits fear, it is real fear, not the "fireman-save-my-child" variety that some of our melodramatic friends give us. Nor are animals subject to the delusions that occasionally afflict the human actor. If the monkey suddenly finds the spotlight turned his way he does not immediately get the idea that he is a lion: the inborn humility that all good monkeys have makes him content to continue in his own role.

But the comparison is after all unfair, for as a matter of fact nothing is expected of an animal except to be itself. The human performer has no such happy lot, however great his natural humility or sense of his own limitations. He is never permitted to be merely himself; it is his business to completely submerge his own being and project his consciousness upon the screen in the role of another! An actor named George Jones might find it a simple thing to appear as George Jones upon the screen; but when he is expected to be Julius Caesar today and Mr. Micawber a couple of weeks later and perhaps Peter Ibbetson the next time, his difficulties loom up distinctly. The marvel of the acting profession is that so many performers are able to carry to us the illusion of these manifold personalities, presenting them in many instances with astonishing naturalness and ease.

Posing, when effectively done, is a sublime art. It is by no means the artificial trick that many people assume it to be. Even where an actor appears frequently in his own proper person, without the aid of makeup, the demands upon his skill are great, perhaps even greater than when he has the advantage of outside aids.

Take Francis X. Bushman for instance. There is perhaps not a screen performer in the field who is more frequently accused of mere posing in the invidious sense of the word. The critics who fling off this easy assertion would have us believe that the people who have enjoyed Mr. Bushman's portrayals of gentlemen of leisure and similar types all these years have been deceived. They would give us to understand that Mr. Bushman cannot really act and that he merely walks through his parts.

Well, Mr. Bushman does walk through his parts, but he does it with a singular command of whatever role he is playing. He appeared not long since in a little story called "Social Quicksands." In this he played the role of a young man on a vacation, who falls in love with a girl in the usual way. But Mr. Bushman did not act in the usual way. His portrayal of the fashionable young vacationist was exactly what one would wish it to be. He did a lot of posing, but it was not conscious posing; although he used no makeup or other aids, he carried the idea of being quite lost in the character he was playing. In this, as in other offerings, he carried to success methods that might well have failed in less skillful hands.

However much we may dislike the word, it is not posing which displeases, but the sort of posing which does not quite come up to the mark.

DAVISON THANKS NATIONAL ASSOCIATION.

That the American Red Cross fully appreciated the splendid aid which has been rendered to it by the motion picture industry is shown in a letter which has just been received by President William A. Brady of the National Association of the Motion Picture Industry from Henry P. Davison, Chairman of the War Council of the American Red Cross. "I wish to thank you for this additional proof of your sympathy with and faith in the Red Cross," writes Mr. Davison. "A tremendous responsibility has been placed upon us, and to us it is of the utmost importance that you aid us in making a proper accounting to the people of America, who have given to the Red Cross without stint."

KENT DANIELLS GETS LIEUTENANTCY.

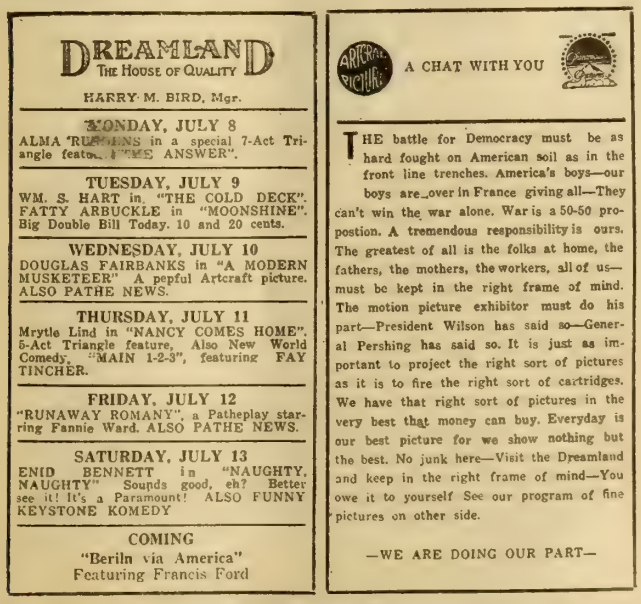
Kent Daniells, a well known poster artist, formerly employed by the World Film Corporation, who enlisted in the camouflage division of the Engineers and now doing duty "Somewhere in France," has been promoted to a lieutenantcy. The camouflage division has been separated from the engineers and is now a distinct unit with the American Expeditionary Forces.

Mr. Daniells was made a sergeant a few weeks after he volunteered and his present promotion comes six months after his arrival in France.

Advertising for Exhibitors

Conducted by EPES WINTHROP SARGENT

Getting It Right.



LATELY the Rivoli and Rialto theaters, in New York, got out a four-pager with the title of "Telling Our Patrons the Truth." S. L. Rothapfel is credited with the authorship. It makes no mention of any special film, but offers a forceful presentation of the house policy. It tells that superlatives are not freely employed "for the commonsense reason that by their constant use they lose their effectiveness," and admits that sometimes the programs are slightly below par because of lack of material, but adds: "In any case, if our pictures are not up to standard, we will not attempt to make up their deficiencies by extravagant advance notices or misleading advertisements." We wish that could be thrown up on a three sheet and hung in every motion picture theater in America. The art of advertising properly is not to make every bill appear to be the best ever. The true art is to slide gracefully over the poor films that you may be believed when you say you have a good offering. And even better is this on patriotic pictures:

> We earnestly deplore the prevailing tendency to make capital of the patriotic fervor which imbues the American people at the present moment, as evidenced in the production of crudely conceived and badly executed pictures in which an ill-concealed attempt is made o commercialize our love of country. There is no room on our screens for such films nor for any news pictures whose captions have been written in a swaggering vein of braggadocio entirely foreign to the spirit which animated the men who are actually on the firing line for us. Contrasting our efforts along patriotic lines with such productions as those just mentioned, Mr. Dayton Stoddard, of The Sun, said in a recent review, "The sort of thing that is really a patriotic stimulus is the type of cinema that is being shown at The Rialto this week. 'Fighting Along the Paive' is the name of the picture, which has to do with the activities of Italian troops along that section of the front where the battle raged last week." An appreciation of that sort means more to us than any possible box office returns which we might receive by exploiting a sensational and flamboyant "patriotic" picture.

If all theaters were run on these same lines, we believe that the pictures would be received with greater respct. If you want war material, use the authentic pictures from the fronts. You can clean up with a pseudo-patriotic picture that is nothing but cheap melodrama with a Kaiser in it, but you can't hold the patrons you win this way and you may lose many of your old-time regulars. Mr. Rothapfel has the right idea.

A CHAT WITH YOU

THE battle for Democracy must be as hard fought on American soil as in the front line trenches. America's boys—our boys are over in France giving all—They can't win the war alone. War is a 50-50 propostion. A tremendous responsibility is ours. The greatest of all is the folks at home, the fathers, the mothers, the workers, all of us—must be kept in the right frame of mind. The motion picture exhibitor must do his part—President Wilson has said so—General Pershing has said so. It is just as important to project the right sort of pictures as it is to fire the right sort of cartridges. We have that right sort of pictures in the very best that money can buy. Everyday is our best picture for we show nothing but the best. No junk here—Visit the Dreamland and keep in the right frame of mind—You owe it to yourself See our program of fine pictures on other side.

—WE ARE DOING OUR PART—

The Two Faces of the Dreamland Program, Maryville, Tenn. The Sheet is but 3¼ by 6 Inches.

The two faces of the Dreamland program etc. etc. handled, and is reproduced here that it may offer suggestion to others. The "Nojunk" text runs:

"NOJUNK."

It is not the name of some strange ape just discovered by an Artcraft exploring party, but it is the single word that can best describe the Dreamland policy as to the grade of pictures it shows. Under NO circumstances will we handle what is known as "junk" film. We say emphatically "NOJUNK." We have had films of the "junk" sort offered us at our own figure, but in every instance have declined to do business with the folks making the offers. We will not offer junk films to our patrons because it not only causes dissatisfaction to you but loss of patronage to us. All features you see here are made by recognized companies, all comedies and short reels are late and up-to-date. Nothing but the best for Dreamland patrons and you will do us a favor to let us know how else we can serve you. If you have a friend who would like to receive our program each week, kindly leave their name at box office and a copy will be mailed them.

This can be adapted to suit, but furnishes a foundation for any changes you may wish to make.

A Fullerton Campaign.

Gordon F. Fullerton, of the Jensen and Von Herberg houses in Seattle, sends in a part of his campaign for "You Can't Have Everything," and adds that as far as it has gone, it would appear that the film will be up to the record mark. His opening gun was a full page in the Sunday paper. Note the arrows that lead from the boxes to the title. No less than six selling points are used in this single display. We don't quite like that "and five others that space will not permit naming," in the lower left hand corner. It seems to us that many will argue there was at least room for ten point mention. The second display shown is a ten-inch drop across the page, evidently used for an advance. That type title stands up much stronger than the drawn design on the full page. Type nearly always excels the drawn design for clearness of lettering and therefor legibility. It is seldom that the drawn design pays in a lettered panel. It's use is better in a full page than in smaller spaces, but it is better to use type for all lettering of importance except the house signature, the design of which is well known. The last example shows a two elevens, three fifteens and four seventeens. In the smaller space an arrow is again used to connect a speech with the speaker. We think this the most attractive advertisement of the three. In the middle display the title is crowded too closely by the type. Note in the right hand display how differently the upper cut looks when compared with that in the left hand example. The paneling has suggested another cut. This last is also an advance advertisement. Cut it off from its fellows by covering the others with a slip of paper and study it by itself. At first glance it looks a little too formal, but you'll find that it looks better as you keep on looking. It is exceedingly well done and a good example of intelligent panel work.

A Full Page from the Colliseum, Seattle, Note How the Arrows Link the Boxes with the Title.

A Ten-Inch Drop Across the Page. Compare the Title with the Drawn Design in the First Example. The Reduction Scale is the Same.

Dangers of Experting.

George A. Bleich, of the Empress, Grand and Queen theaters, Owensboro, Ky., sends in some samples of advertising and asks:

> Take a slant at the cross page ads sent you under separate cover and tell me if you think this sort of layout a bad one. The "ad" sharp in another of the journals pans this method "sumpin' fierce." He said it was even repulsive—repulsive, mind you. Honest, now, I want to know and am quite willing to be taught the right way to do these things, but I can't take the same space, say 28 inches, and make it look as well, to my eyes, in three nines as it does in seven fours. It is absolutely necessary that I advertise my entire week's list of shows in the two Sunday papers because of the fact that these Sunday editions cover the entire country and the dailies do not, and I derive quite a large patronage from the ruralites. Again, the Sunday papers are read by the families in town leisurely and I know it to be a fact that the amusement page is turned to—not just found accidentally. This accounts for my giving nearly equal prominence to each day's show throughout the week. But look at the Sunday layout of June 2 and compare it with the others arranged cross page. Do you think it as attractive? Consider also that I make up the pages of two editions of our Sunday papers. The readers and cuts are supplied and used gratis, I might add. No one crowds or overshadows my space with other amusement advertising. And, by the way—do you know many other towns the size of this with two papers granting a full page each week for news of the pictures?

The rigid application of a few elementary rules is unwise. It may be a basic rule that a full week should not be advertised at once, but there are exceptions to the rule, just as there are exceptions to other rules, such as an advertisement containing too much copy. We take it that the function of advertising is to get business. If it gets all the business available, then it is good advertising, no matter what the rules may say. We have several times reproduced Mr. Bleich's advertising as a model for others, and this advertising, as shown in the first example, has been used for so long that it is practically a trade mark. Where conditions require that the entire program be advertised, we know of no better or more orderly arrangement than that used by Mr. Bleich and we do not at all consider it repulsive. We reproduce two pages, one showing the familiar form and another giving more the effect of segregated advertisements. We think that the result will speak for itself to practical managers. For getting the entire message the cross-page cut is more orderly and more effective. It is not a good plan to advertise all of the program on Sunday as a general thing. It is better to hold to the next attraction, but there are innumerable instances where it is good policy to do so, and practical experience outweighs the book-taught specialist. It is the same specialist, by the way, who declares this to be "easily one of the most artistic advertisements" he has ever seen. It may be artistic, but we question whether an advertisement without a line of selling talk will make for business. If people are determined to see Miss Talmadge, they probably will, but we do not think that much business is actually created by flossy drawing.

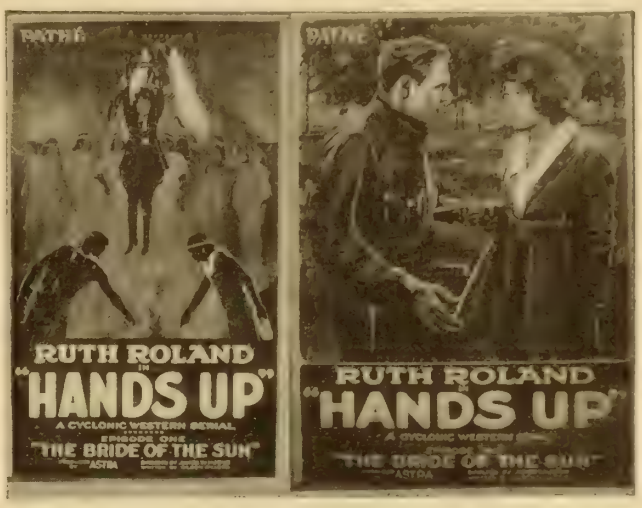
A So-Called "Artistic" Advertisement that is Devoid of Pull.

An Odd Condition.

The Photogram, the house organ of the Star theater, Bellingham, Wash., calls attention to an odd condition of affairs in a note by Mr. Arnold in an old program just to hand. He writes:

> Several persons have asked, "Why are so many Hart pictures being shown at one time?" Perhaps you have wondered too. Would you like to know the inside story? All right! There are two film exchanges in Seattle, each of whom have a set of the same two-reel Hart pictures. One set was gotten out with new titles, evidently to fool the people into believing that they were new Hart pictures. The other set was gotten out under their original titles to allow the Hart fans who wished, to see again the films that made him popular. We booked the latter set. An opposition manager, who had the other set of Hart pictures booked, came to me Friday, the 12th, and said, "Neither of us can make any money on these Hart pictures if we play them on the same days, or too often. You play one a month and I will play one a month." We advised him that our contract called for a Hart picture every Sunday and Monday and that we would be compelled to show them in that order. After saying that it would be unprofitable for us to play them on the same day, or too often, do you think this opposition manager played a Hart picture the very next Sunday and Monday, and every day during the following week to make morey or do you think it——well what do you think?

Mr. Arnold is using the original titles, for that is the sort of a man he is, but the opposition seems to work on the renamed reissue. In the same issue the program announcement merely states, "This is one of Hart's short features." The reissue question is still a muddle, but use of both a new and an old title in the same town is going to raise trouble for someone.



Pathe Paper.

Here are two examples of the paper the Pathe Exchange is getting out for the new Astra serial, "Hands Up." The big stand should make a particularly attractive stand, but all three specimens work out well and in the smaller sizes they will be issued for each part of the story, giving new paper for each instalment of the serial. Good paper is particularly necessary for serials to keep the interest alive, and it would seem that Pathe is prepared to meet the demand.

One Sheet for Each Chapter on the Pathe Serial.

Hyman is Hustling.

Edward L. Hyman, who used to manage the Victoria, Buffalo, sends in a program of the Liberty theater, Camp Gordon, Ga. It has all of the Hyman earmarks. The first page starts off with "Let's go. C'mon in fellas and take a dip in the pool of music and on-the-level happiness." Beneath the house name is the slogan, "No lonesome minutes there," but we think "here" would be better. Below the shield is "Boys It's the place with letters of fire in front." Inside he points out that since it costs 30 cents carfare to get into Atlanta, the soldier's half dollar seat costs him only twenty cents. The theater uses musical comedies. Mr. Hyman is working just as hard to get the soldiers in as he ever did to get the Buffalo people, which is why he is a success in camp. He does not merely run the house, he manages it.

Projection Department

Conducted by F. H. RICHARDSON

Manufacturers' Notice.

IT IS an established rule of this department that no apparatus or other goods will be indorsed or recommended editorially until the excellence of such articles has been demonstrated to its editor.

Important Notice.

Owing to the mass of matter awaiting publication, it is impossible to reply through the department in less than two to three weeks. In order to give prompt service, those sending four cents, stamps (less than actual cost), will receive carbon copy of the department reply, by mail, without delay. Special replies by mail on matters which cannot be replied to in the department, one dollar.

Both the first and second sets of questions are now ready and printed in neat booklet form, the second half being seventy-six in number. Either booklet may be had by remitting 25 cents, money or stamps, to the editor, or both for 40 cents. Cannot use Canadian stamps. Every live, progressive operator should get a copy of these questions. You may be surprised at the number you cannot answer without a lot of study.

From Atchison, Kansas.

John W. Creamer, formerly of Chillicothe, Mo., writes from above city. He says:

> Was in charge of projection room Empire theater, Chillicothe, Mo., when last I wrote. Had two Simplexes. Later set up two new 6-B's at the Majestic, same city. Was there six months. Am now running two Motiographs. They put on a very good picture. Have a 70 ampere, 70 volt Northwestern motor generator (mean the Martin, don't you? Ed.) which certainly is a dandy. Ammeter is on switchboard at rear of room. Bad location, but I get around that by placing a condenser lens in a frame and locate it in front of the ammeter. It acts as a magnifying glass, and I can read friend ammeter from working position easily. The Motiographs sound like threshing machines when running with film in. Noise seems to come from lower loop. It is the same whether running with small or large loop. Have you any idea as to cause of the noise. Intermittent sprocket teeth are worn quite a bit. I noticed a projectionist was bothered by squeaky noise in his Power's motor drive. Think he will find it is caused by lack of lubrication between end of tension set screw and end of shaft carrying metal disc. As to reprinting the questions, I think a new set would be better. So many have studied the old questions and have saved the answers that they would not be benefited. Use 50 amperes D. C., M-Bi-C condensers, half size projection lens, and a special shutter blade which, in my case at least, gives practically no flicker at 60 feet per minute. How do you tell how many degrees wide a blade is? As to left hand projector, by all means let us have them. They will be a step forward, and I hope the Simplex will be first to take it. How about it, Mr. Porter? In the Handbook you tell us to use clean photographic plates in the lens ports. Have tried them thoroughly, and have yet to find one which does not distort the picture even if it is but slightly. Use clean negative plates given me by a photographer. What was that handwheel under Brother Codding's Simplex? Notice projectionists in this part of the country are not punching film as much as they used to, also the film is not so oily. Have run "Ad" films through my machines for a month without getting a bit of oil on them. When I receive film with a great many punch holes I usually cut out the strip they are in. If there are but few I paste a 3/16-inch sticker over each hole. The stickers serve as a change-over sign, but are not so objectionable as the hole. In June 29 issue you ask for our views as to "The projection room and its requirements." For one projector I would suggest not less than 6 feet square, with 7-foot ceiling. For two projectors, 9 feet square, and 8-foot ceiling, with 3 feet additional width for each added projector, stereo, or spotlamp. The official designation of the room should be, as you say, "Projection Room." Only those things necessary to the work should be allowed in the projection room. Shelves should be constructed of galvanized iron, with covering of sheet asbestos. Work bench should under no conditions be allowed inside the room, but should be conveniently adjacent thereto. Standard of ventilation should be 2½-foot vent flue, with slightly smaller fan, and with fresh air intake at or near floor line. Minimum size of observation ports should be 12 inches square. Only brick, hollow tile, or concrete construction should be allowed. Floor standard should be 4 to 6 inches of concrete, with covering of linoleum to prevent dust. Fire shutter and fuse link system should be same as described in third edition of Handbook.

Likes the Westinghouse.

An Ohio reader of this department roasts the editor for not stopping to pay him a visit while on the last trip West, and continues as follows:

> Read the "World" from cover to cover every week, and when something in our department looks good I try it out. Regarding Westinghouse motor generator set, I have one, and they certainly are worth their weight in gold. On the 11th day of November, 1915, I started it running, and it is still running nine hours a day, six days a week. Have had no trouble with it at all. My motto is: If it is working all right, let it alone. All the repairs it has had are new brushes. This is NOT a glad-hand for the Westinghouse, but just plain truth. I have a fine equipment, as follows: Two Power's 6-B, motor driven, and Westinghouse as above. Get good picture (14 feet 8 inches) at 90 feet; Mirror screen. Can get almost anything I want from 20 to 50 amperes at friend arc. Don't touch field rheostat to do it either. Have this arranged under each machine. Wish you best of health and fortune. Next time you come this way, stop.

Offered to stop in such towns as might write requesting it. Did not hear from yours. Now whatta y' gotta say, huh? The Westinghouse you have is not the kind I examined at Pittsburgh and am waiting to examine again when it is finally ready for the market. If yours is good the new one will surely be a peach. Why didn't you tell us how you have that resistance arranged?

New Catalogue of Specialties.

Eberhardt Schneider, New York City, orders a Handbook and says:

> Have never had the opportunity of reading your Handbook, but intend to take time now. Am, as you know, an old time projectionist myself. Had to make my own machines and films at that time in order to get and fill engagements, as none could be bought. And now my license card has run out, and I'm out of a job (Mr. Schneider is a manufacturer of motion picture specialties, special lenses, etc., so his "out of a job" is by way of a jest.—Ed.). I read the projection department with interest every week. Am often astounded at the questions therein propounded and the many fantastical optical diagrams brought before you. Often had my pen all wet with ink to comment on some of them, but I am interrupted so much that writing is extremely difficult. I have just issued a little catalogue of specialties which I have invented, make, and sell. Am attaching one for your examination.

Mr. Schneider has done much work in the construction of special machines and devices in connection with motion picture invention work. The catalogue contains 35 pages, and is profusely illustrated. His anti-static device should interest cameramen, and certainly his single-illuminant dissolving stereopticon should interest projectionists. He makes and sells the Miror Vitae condensing lenses, both plano convex and M-bi-C. We would, of course, heartily welcome any comment Friend Schneider might care to make on matters optical.

Condenser System and Its Complications.

In a paper read before the Society of Motion Picture Engineers by C. Francis Jenkins, Washington, D. C., same contained in printed transactions of last meeting of that body, are statements with which we are unable to agree. He says: "Sharpness of image on the screen depends, therefore, on those rays of light which meet most nearly in a point at or near the shutter position, and in the exact axis of the projection system. All other rays tend to blur the image on the screen, though adding to the illumination."

Without some further explanation as to what Mr. Jenkins deems the "shutter position," the statement, as above, is decidedly ambiguous. But, for Mr. Jenkins' information, projectionists can supply the information that at the shutter position (correct shutter position, I mean) the surface of the front condenser is in focus and the effective light ray has the area of the condenser image, which same varies widely under different conditions of projection. As a matter of fact if Mr. Jenkins' statement that the screen image depends for sharpness upon those rays at the axis of the projection system is true, then sharpness depends on a relatively extremely small proportion of the rays. That this is not true may be proven conclusively, as the writer has proven it by covering all but a small portion of the outer surface of the condenser, or the projection lens, whereupon there will be a quite sharp picture remaining on the screen, though its brilliancy will be much diminished. This holds good with ordinary lenses, but not with lenses of unusually short focal length. In our experiments we have found that, with good grade lenses throughout, the entire surface of the light ray at aereal image of condenser gives sharp definition, but that those rays outside the actual aereal image add illumination, but detract from the sharpness of the screen image. This has been set forth several times in this department, and is the basis of our repeatedly given advice to reduce the lens port to actual size of effective light ray, or, better still, to reduce to actual size of aereal image of condenser at, or as nearly as possible, its position. Mr. Jenkins says: "In proof of the first proposition one has but to shift the position of the light source considerably to one side of the axis of projection, while still keeping the aperture fully illuminated, a position which gets no picture at all upon the screen; and in proof of the second proposition, to observe that a light source of large area will not, even with the best lens, put as sharp a motion picture on the screen as a point source."

Mr. Jenkins here, it seems to me, confuses several things. What the shifting of the light source to one side has to do with the matter I fail to see. If his argument is based on a projection system which is out of line, well and good, but we are not, as I understand it, considering that kind of a proposition. It is a well understood fact that the projection system must be exactly in line from crater to screen in order to get excellence in screen results. This is because if the crater be out of line with the aperture and projections lens, the film image will be projected to the projection lens in an out-of-center position, thus imposing a heavy strain on that part of the optical system, and one which is not intended to and will not stand. In other words the lack of definition caused by crater being out of center with projection axis is caused by strain imposed on the projection lens. It is possible that Mr. Jenkins really had this in mind when he wrote. If so, then his wording needs revision to be understood with any degree of certainty by the average man. As to his second proposition, it is a well known fact that nothing could equal a point source of light for definition, since with that there is practically no work for the lens system to perform, or at least the work is so slight that no strain is imposed on the optical system at any point.

In connection with the paper Mr. Jenkins supplies a sketch of a condenser system having a small bi-convex lens set in a larger reflecting cone. This he says gives surprising results in light conservation. That is doubtless true since it is but an adaptation of the long since discarded Boylight concentrator, with which I have seen a marvelously beautiful 12-foot picture projected on a plain, cloth screen with 12 amperes D. C. The device gave astouding results when adjusted exactly right, but the least movement threw the whole thing out and ruined the screen result. In other words, while it was a stem-winding wonder in the conservation of light, it was too delicate to be practical. I believe the same thing would apply with the Jenkins scheme, which is not nearly so efficient in light conservation as was the Boylight concentrator.

Mr. Jenkins speaks at length of the heavy loss through use of thick lenses which absorb a tremendous percentage of the light. He says that inasmuch as the motion picture frame is less than one inch square, a two-inch diameter condenser would be quite ample. With this we are unable to agree. The crater projects rays in every forward direction, and the intensity of light at condenser position will not vary greatly, though some, at any poit of the area of a 4.5-inch condenser lens. This means that with an 2-inch lens we would only have available that proportion of the light which strikes its surface, and this loss would far more than counterbalance the difference in absorption by the thick and thin lens, assuming each to be of the same quality of glass. This may be somewhat modified by the fact that an arc of given amperage could probably be located more closely to a thin 2-inch lens than to a thick 4.5-inch one. Just what the actual result of such reduction in condenser diameter would be I cannot say with certainty, but in my opinion there would be enough less light to preclude the projection of a modern theatre picture with the small lens.

Mr. Jenkins lays stress upon the loss through absorption and reflection between light source and aperture, but says not one word about the serious loss between aperture and lens, which would lead one to suppose his experiments with the projector optical system have not covered that important item.

Mr. Jenkins lays stress upon the importance of having all rays from the light source meet at a common point, a proposition which is disputed by some of our most able practical projectionists. Personally I am not prepared to say with any degree of assurance who is right.

Mr. Jenkins lays great stress upon the loss of light at the spot, due to difference in area of spot and aperture opening. While he does not say this can be materially reduced, he has observed that the man who says a thing cannot be done has his heels trodden upon by the man who does it. Yes, but does Jenkins know that the use of the waste light might not be desirable, unless a corrected condenser be used, which same might and might not set up another even more serious trouble. Many of our best projectionists use an extra large spot because they secure better projection by reason of eliminating the impure light at outer diameter of spot.

But here is the gem of it all. In a nine-line paragraph Mr. Jenkins tells us the optical system of the projector is really not at all complex—is indeed very simple. If this is true, then why does brother Jenkins bother writing papers on it at all. As a matter of fact, the projector optical system is very far from simple. I flatly dispute Mr. Jenkins on this point. The optical system of the modern projector has many interlocking elements, each one of which affects all others. Here are some of them: (A) Variable size of crater, which sets up many and very complicated difficulties; (B) difference in curvature of crater and angle to lens, which affects focus of its image at front conjugate foci point, hence affects definition on screen; (C) amperage and kind of carbons, which affect distance from lens to crater, hence has much to do with light loss; (D) kind and diameter as well as thickness (aside from thickness necessary to give desired curvature) of condenser lenses; (E) polish of lenses, which has to do with reflection; (F) spacing of condenser lenses, which is highly important since it alters E. F. of combination; (G) distance from condenser to aperture, which is immensely important in light conservation and in definition of picture on screen; (H) size of spot, which affects light conservation and purity of light; (I) distance from aperture to projection lens, which is controllable, to an extent, by proper selection of lenses (when there is any selection, which there is not at this time); (J) diameter of projection lens, which has to do with light loss and affects revolving shutter in very short or long focal length lenses; (K) distance from lens to shutter, which is highly important unless lens be very short focal length; (L) stopping down of light ray, preferably at aereal image of condenser which has to do with sharpness of image on screen and other things.

And to show how these various things interlock when you, for instance, alter distance of condenser from aperture you also alter shutter position, alter distance crater to lens, add or reduce light loss between aperture and lens and affect other things.

Then, too, there is the revolving shutter, with its immensely important problems, which vary with local conditions. The shutter is, properly speaking, an integral part of the optical system of the projector, as is also, in a way, the screen itself.

And C. Francis Jenkins says all this is "very simple." Well, I am far from agreeing with him. In my opinion it is a very complicated and difficult thing, and one which may be made the subject of much improvement.

No Registered Projectionists.

D. E. McCauley, Moravia, Iowa, wants to know where to apply to become a registered operator.

There is no such thing as a "registered projectionist." Presumably you mean a license projectionist (operator). I am not certain whether or no Ottumwa, Iowa, which you are not far from, has a license law or not. You can find out by addressing the city clerk, enclosing self-addressed, stamped envelope. If not, then surely Des Moines has, and that would be your next nearest city. You would have to go to the city you propose applying in, make application, pass an examination and pay a fee. Better find out all particulars from city officials, by mail, before making application.

"Co-operating in Marketing." (Universal)

A FEW scenes incorporated in this subject found in the 85th release of the Screen Magazine acquaints us with the methods followed by a group of 1,780 farmers on the Pacific coast who decided to cut down expense in the marketing of their product. The land tilled by them comprises a tract about 14 miles square, which is owned by the members of the association. That side of their work shown in the film was photographed during the berry harvest at which time 15,000 pickers are employed. The picking of the raspberries, the crating of them for the market, and the twenty-two car berry special on its way to eastern markets is shown in the picture.

"Psychology of Song." (Paramount-Bray)

The first of a series of motion pictures made in conjunction with the Committee on Public Information and dealing with phases of wartime activities with which the public is but very little acquainted, appears in the 133d release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph.

Realizing that a man makes the best soldier or sailor only when he is happy, Uncle Sam has stopped at nothing to make his boys not only comfortable physically, but comfortable mentally.

"Keep 'em singing and nothing can lick 'em," says Uncle Sam, and he aims to have a song on every man's lips all of his work day because he knows that a song is an inspiration.

Percy Hemus, former opera and concert star is the song leader at Pelham Bay Naval Training Station. Mr. Hemus passed up a fortune in engagements to sign on with Uncle Sam and he has made life at this great camp one of song and good fellowship.

It matters not a bit that a sailor has no more voice than a crow or that he cant' carry a tune. When the crowd gets going he joins in and shouts the words with a vim that at least helps swell the sound until the well-known welkin truly rings.

To encourage the men, "sing-song" contests between regiments are staged, and there is as great excitement over them as over any athletic contests. The men practice with an earnestness that betokens their keen interest.

"The Food Value of Milk." (Paramount-Bray)

The Bray Studios, Inc., through the co-operation of the Departments of Home Economics of Cornell University, selected a number of the best and most practical ways of using milk, filmed them and will show them on the screen to American housewives in the 133rd release of Paramount Bray Pictograph.

It is shown that cottage cheese produced from milk is easily made and that it can be served in many different forms. As a matter of fact, an entire meal from soup to dessert is possible. Such a meal is not only fully as nourishing and palatable as one is in which meats and vegetables are served, but decidedly less expensive.

The United States Food Administration wants every family to use milk freely. There is plenty of it and its nutritive value is recognized as of the highest. Coincident with these advices from Mr. Hoover, practically every college and university in the United States has set to work through their home economics department, to increase its use on American tables.

"Doing the Dips in a Dory." (Ford Motor Company)

This reel of film takes one on a delightful trip through the Ausable Chasm. In subtitle the story of this lovely spot is told, and of course the feature of the picture is the ride on a dory through the rapids of the Ausable river. The scenes have been well photographed and the picture throughout is entertaining.

"Britains' Far-Flung Line." (Official Government Pictures, Inc.)

The Rivoli Theatre, New York City, exhibited during the week of August 4 a series of views commemorating England's entry into the war. These pictures compiled by Charles Urban covered naval, aerial, cavalry and infantry preparations, and scene of actual fighting.

"Aerial Warfare"

E. Dean Parmelee of the Bray Studios Explains by Means of Animated Drawings the Fighting Technique of the Flying Fighter.

THE feature of the 133d release of the Paramount-Bray Pictograph is an animated drawing entitled "Aerial Warfare," which illustrates in a graphic manner the many startling tricks resorted to by the aerial fighter in overcoming his adversary.

No branch of warfare has developed so rapidly as the air forces. Not only have planes been made capable of exceedingly rapid flight but the aviators are now such complete masters of their craft that they perform the most astounding turns and twists as part of their daily flights.

The superiority of the Allied Air Forces over that of the Huns is due to great extent to the greater daring and ingenuity of the aviators. Practically all of the tricks practiced in combat were first achieved by the flyers of France, England and Italy. The Huns, true to type, have copied their actions, but they are always a step behind, for new and more daring "stunts" are constantly being devised by their adversaries.

Few people know what these aerial acrobatics really are and Mr. Parmelee has faithfully drawn them. The tail spin, the loop-the-loop, riding the enemies tail, the side-slip and the other equally sensational tricks known by name only, are demonstrated so that a very clear idea of what these knights of the air do when in battle, is gained.

"A Dam Catastrophe"

Latest Outing-Chester Offering Combination of Natural History, Comedy and Scenic Beauty.

THE Mutual Film Corporation in its latest Outing-Chester offering presents to the public one of the most attractive of semi-educational subjects. The title which at first glance appears to savor of profanity, later clears its reputation when one of the busiest and most sagacious of animals, the beaver, appears on the scene repairing the dam which he and his mate have so carefully constructed after having been rudely impaired by interfering humans. The closeups in this picture showing the beaver at work adjusting the sticks and boughs in the most discriminating fashion are unusual. Some comedy has also been worked into some of these scenes. The remainder of the picture has to do with a couple of honeymooners who in imitation of the beaver have decided to try living the simple life. Their difficulties in piloting a homemade raft down a rapd running and beautiful river affords considerable amusement. The picture is interesting enough to please the most ordinary audience as well as the more intelligent.

BRADY AND LOEW ON MEMORIAL COMMITTEE.

Through the appointment of W. A. Brady and Marcus Loew the motion picture industry is represented upon the finance committee of the Mitchel Memorial Fund. The two men named are planning a campaign to secure funds from all those desiring to contribute, and in this work the local organizations of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' League will be instrumental.

Rambles 'Round Filmtown

With WALTER K. HILL.

Sugar Will Win the War.

SPOKANE, WASH.—When Evelyn Brent arrived from New York to assume her new duties with the Washington Motion Picture Corporation she was met by Larry Trimble, director of the company, who did a marathon from station to station as he was advised she would arrive at 6 A. M.—but he did not know which route. There were four trains arriving about that time at three different stations and Miss Bent had not fancied that Spokane had so many trains at one time.

She was rushed from the train to Hayden Lake, Idaho, for breakfast, where she fed the company's pet bear with sugar from her hand (rather gingerly as she later admitted), and after a dip in the lake (in a pretty Jersey bathing suit), she was whisked back to Spokane and to the Davenport Hotel, where she found the room filled with flowers and a box of candy on the dresser. Miss Brent said she was well pleased with Spokane to date, even if it was a change from Broadway, and was delighted with the northern Idaho pine forest through which she was taken on her trip to Hayden Lake.

After this episode Manager Farmer proceeded with arrangements for the fall and winter season of his theatre.

When Russia was a warring nation the Com. on Pub. Inform. was not in the film business. We hope, under the new activities, that there will come some moving pictures of battle scenes. We are c to k as follows:

Does the Russian cavalry, or Cossack, ride into battle, standing in their saddles and waving swords in wild circles over their heads?

Do they circle 'round the enemy hanging over the side of their mount with one foot hooked under the saddle-girth while they clip grass with their ear?

Do they sing the weird chant of the Wild West show as they cavort into action against the Lenineshiviki or Trotzkybol?

This latter question will be worthy of study for the music-cue sheeters who may be called upon to score the production of the battle of Bolsheviki.

THE RAMBLER.

Music for the Picture

Conducted by GEORGE W. BEYNON

Unity of Musical Purpose Brings Better Service

WE live in the age of unions. The keen competition in industrial lines has forced upon men the significance of the axiom, "United we stand, Divided we fall." The playing of the pictures has become an industry because of its magnitude of operation, and the essentiaility of the work.

At present, every leader is doing his own work in his own way, drudging out the hours of employment, which being long, preclude his learning of the advances made in his art. He has had no trade journal devoted to his interests, giving him up-to-date information. What they are doing in the big houses in the large cities, gets to his ears by inaccurate hearsay. This has a tendency to confuse him. In spite of these drawbacks, it is remarkable how much progress has been made in the musical interpretation of pictures. But we feel that the time has come when there should be a greater unity of purpose, feeling and brotherhood in the ranks of the picture playing musician.

The Moving Picture World realizes the importance of the problem of uniting the theatre musicians in such a way that will be advantageous to them and the picture industry in general. We have spent the last six months in searching out the detached and distant musician with the view to ascertaining his needs in his chosen profession. From the data we have received, we believe that this department, in its enlarged form, will give better service in the future than in the past.

"Music for the Pictures" will henceworth contain an interesting and leading article dealing with the varied phases of picture presentation musically. It will give you the reviews of music rendered at the big New York picture palaces and other notable performances throughout the country. An educational feature of the department will be a thumb-nail history of our patriotic songs, telling you about the composer, the reason for the song and interesting facts connected with its birth and growth. There will be a page devoted to the lastest musical "hits" and a "Leader's Service Bureau" in which will be found answers to your many problems and a "Roll of Honor," calling attention to special musical numbers, well adapted to picture playing.

The cue sheet problem, which has become a bugbear to the leader, will be dealt with in a classified and larger form. Here you will find a cue sheet for every picture which has been released, alphabetically arranged and clearly comprehensible to every leader. It will not be necessary to use the entire book upon the rack. These sheets can be used separately and returned to the files for playing a "repeat date." The arrangement will be uniform and standardized, no matter what producer releases the picture. This new idea has been praised by all leaders who have seen it, and we anticipate every musician will welcome this progressive service.

There is no field in the musical profession where such great quantities of music are bought yearly and used so profusely. A pianist with a library of five hundred numbers, considers he is well equipped for his work, yet five hundred selections would not last a month even if it were possible to play them all in the picture theatre. Songs will bear almost a continuous repetition, but a leader dare not repeat his numbers too frequently.

One of the drawbacks with which every leader is familiar is the dearth of new music. His only way of securing such is by means of catalogues, which are not definite, or by personal search through publishing houses. Inasmuch as the large majority of the publishers are situated in New York City, the out-of-town director must rely on lists which may trickle through to him. We have been surprised and aghast at the musical antiques forced upon the people who visit the out-of-way theatres.

Our aim will be to bring to the attention of the picture playing musician all new numbers suitable for his use from the various publishing houses with a short review upon their picture possibilities. This should prove a wonderful boon to the leaders throughout the country.

Those things doled out to us by the hand of one in equal rank are regarded of greater worth than the advice emanating from the mealy mind of the efficient expert. Therefore, we shall be pleased to give space in our columns to interesting letters dealing with the solution of the leaders' problems. Give us the benefit of your experience that your brother may profit thereby. This will make for unity of brotherhood and create in this column a mutal confidence club, interesting and educational to all.

In this connection, it might not be premature to suggest the formation of a Picture Playing Club, the membership of which would consist of musicians who are earning a living playing for pictures. Let us hear an expression of opinion on this matter. We can assure you we are strongly for it. When we place our profession upon a more dignified basis in the picture industry, we reap for ourselves the rewards of better art.

The Moving Picture World in enlarging your department, officially recognizes the musician as a vital factor in the film industry. It extends the hand of welcome and friendship, offering itself as a medium for mutual mingling and friendly fraternizing. It joins the hand of the producer with that of the leader, delivering to him a service in cue sheets that heretofore has been anything but satisfactory. Its whole-hearted efforts, its unstinted expense, and its ever-prevailing progressiveness should receive the praise and popular support of all musicians in the country. Make the Moving Picture World your Bible and "Music for the Pictures" your best loved text.

Music At the Strand.

D. W. Griffith has rightly gained the name of "The Master of Filmcraft." His picture, "The Great Love," presented at the Strand during the week of August 11, shows his clever handiwork and artistic touches. Notwithstanding this fact the music poorly portrayed what Mr. Griffith tried to interpret in his wonderful picture.

Old and well-known songs were used as themes and suited the roles admirably. There was a lack of smoothness to the setting, which detracted from the picture considerably and we felt that the fault lay in poor modulation. At times there was no modulation whatsoever, while at other times only a drum-roll could be heard in joining two numbers of extraneous keys. It was evident that the music belonged to a score, the composers of which gained no credit for themselves for such slip-shod methods. The Synchrony was good, but the use of Il Guarny in the bedchamber scene was anything but appropriate.

The overture selection from "I'Pagliacci" by Leoncavallo was handled by Conductor Edouards. The rendition was traditional in every respect, and although the orchestra once in a while beat the conductor to the note, we are safe in saying that there could not be any exception taken to the interpretation.

The back-set showed a Venetian canal bordered with Italian foliage, half hiding the picturesque bungalows in the distance.

The Strand topical review followed and as usual was well fitted and played.

An innovation was used in the idea of community singing of "The Star Spangled Banner," led by Miss Cora Tracy, contralto.

In a recent issue of these columns we dwelt extensively upon the educational value and propaganda purposes of Community singing in the picture theatres. Our suggestion was that a slide be used in order that, by having the house darkened, the singing would be louder and more spontaneous. However, Mr. Edel has evolved a new feature by having a patriotic address, showing the history of our flag. This was followed by singing "The Star Spangled Banner" by the audience from a booklet donated by Hinds, Hayden & Eldredge. The booklet is a pocket edition with words and music and is exceptionally legible in spite of the condensed space. The idea is splendid and should be followed up in some form by every exhibitor in the country.

The performance closed with the usual excellent organ solo.

Music at the Rialto.

We dropped into the Rialto sufficiently early to get the first show, and although we were one of only a handful, the entire performance was gone through as if the house was crowded. This speaks well for the discipline of the theatre and the conscientious endeavors of its employees.

The overture was the selection from Rigoletto, conducted by Hugo Riesenfeld. Mr. Riesenfeld is always at his best, and his rendition of Rigoletto was masterly and in good musical taste.

The scenic, showing scenes in Pachuca, Mexico, was admirably fitted with excerpts from the Land of Joy. The Spanish flavor of this operetta was sufficiently light to hold the Mexican atmosphere without obtrusion.

Emanuel List sang Pinsuti's Bedouin Song. Mr. List has distinctly a voice of the basso profundo type and, owing to the wide range of this song (usually sung by a baritone), he was not altogether at home in it. However, the audience, because of its beautiful setting, liked the song. The Rialto has virtually three stages. The centre showed an Oriental interior with great red lanterns hanging before a blue background. On the right was a full moon in a blue sky being filled with myriads of glittering stars. It was indeed effective.

The animated magazine, personally edited by Mr. Rothapfel, was not only well set, but enjoyed perfect synchrony. The use of Old Lang Syne in a wintry scene, showing the frozen Hudson cloaked in snow, held a pretty suggestion. The scene following, in which we were shown swimmers enjoying a vacation, was fitted with a sort of patriotic fantasy introducing "Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, the Boys Are Marching," and a paraphrasing of the "Star Spangled Banner." We could not understand the analogy. "Keep the Home Fires Burning," sung by the orchestra, was a delightful innovation, while "Throw Out the Life Line" had no place in the scene showing the baptismal exercises. Nothing is gained by burlesquing a religious ritual, and much harm may come from it.

Josephine Garavelli sang "Caro Nome," from Rigoletto, in a fashion academic. She really is a dramatic soprano essaying colorature roles.

The feature "Green Eyes" was well played, but the Southern atmosphere was not sufficiently distinctive to be noticeable. The musical synchrony was good and at no time did the orchestra predominate over the feature.

The bill closed with selections from "Nobody Home," played by the orchestra, and the usual comedy and an organ solo, "March Romaine," by Gounod. Arthur Depew, the organist, played this number with fine feeling and true interpretation

Washington Society Hears "Blue Bird."

Tom Moore, of Washington, D. C., believes firmly that music and its related art, dancing, are mighty factors in putting over pictures. His recent presentation of the Paramount feature, "Blue Bird," showed unmistakably his forcefulness of purpose.

The complete presentation prologue was as follows:

Overture by the augmented symphony orchestra, featuring Clare Kummer's song, "The Blue Bird," with slow curtain revealing stage dimly lighted with blue tone, fleecy clouds drifting slowly by; "The Blue Bird" second chorus sung off stage. Gradually expanding light until stage, banked in flowers, is discernible; to dance in spotlight; ensemble flower ballet, at conclusion of which toe dancer again appeared, ending ballet with tableau picture. Foreword to the picture by Maurice Jarvis, as Father Time, at top of steps, back stage with Tyltyl and Mytyl in costume, with bird cage, etc. Scene then parted revealing barge under full sail, in which Father Time, Tyltyl and Mytyl started on the journey to Memoryland. Quick curtain and immediate projection of picture.

The picture was well fitted with excerpts from the "Blue Bird" music as used in the Shubert production of it, and the quaint but simple memory themes that were so appropriately chosen held the atmosphere. The people who came to see a picture heard a symphony of blended tones and lightings. They went away purified by the beauty of Art as exemplified in the combination of music and color.

Every picture is not so adaptable to such esthetic treatment, but every feature has its artistic possibilities.

"Home, Sweet Home."

Probably the sentiment most deeply implanted in the human heart is love of kindred and home. Someone has said that patriotism can and often does supplant it, particularly in time of war. But, in the last analysis, one's country is one's home in the larger sense.

When, in October, 1822, John Howard Payne sent to Sir Henry Bishop, composer of music for Covent Garden, a manuscript, he placed himself among the immortals. In the story the heroine elopes. Some time later she hears a band of strolling musicians singing one of her native airs. Its appeal sends her back to her parents. That song was "Home, Sweet Home." Rendered by Maria Tree's charming voice it was received with great enthusiasm. The singer ceased her work nearly a century ago, but the echo of the words still responds throughout the English speaking nations.

Payne wrote in Paris, and for a London audience, but the home for which his heart hungered had been lost to the wanderer since early childhood a little cottage on Long Island. The song won a wealthy husband for the singer and a modest fortune for the theatre and publisher. But the inspired genius of it all did not materially profit by its sale. Fame eventually came to him through this medium, but at the time of publication his name was not permitted on the title page.

The music was not his. Sir Henry Bishop had written it several years previously, calling it a Sicilian Air. There has been not a little dispute over its origin. Some authorities claim that it was borrowed from a group of Sicilian songs. However, when Donizetti wanted a distinctively English tune he chose it. That should dispose of the Italian theory, as it seems incomprehensible that Donizetti should not know the folk-song of his native land.

We have all known and sympathized with John Howard Payne as a sufferer of many vicissitudes, lonely, poor and dying in a strange land. Few seem to have heard that he was a very prominent figure in his profession. As a matter of fact he wrote and adapted over fifty plays and was the first American to make a reputation as an actor and playwright abroad.

He came of excellent parentage. The family name appeared in Eastham, Mass., as early as 1622. His father settled in East Hampton, L. I., became principal of Clinton Academy, and married Sarah Isaacs, the daughter of a convert from the Jewish faith. Payne's early childhood was spent in this home, and the house which he immortalized still stands.

Manifesting a passion for the stage while very young, his parents frowned on his aspirations and sent him to a clerkship in New York. This course had no effect on his ardor. Indeed, he spent practically all his wages in theatre tickets and in launching a dramatic paper, "The Thespian Mirror." He was then only fourteen years of age. Yet the articles were so ably written that the Evening Post announced that it would publish some of them. Fearing exposure and parental displeasure, Payne called upon the editor to protest. That gentleman was astonished at the extreme youth of the boy. But the handsome lad, with his charming manners and truly remarkable talents, made a lasting impression. As a direct result of this interview a fund was raised and Payne was sent to college.

Before he had finished his college course family reverses made it imperative that Payne should become self-supporting. So, in his seventeenth year, he made his debut on the stage of the Park theatre, New York. Through his ability the drama was a great success.

Two months later he acted Hamlet to a sold-out house. Subsequently he appeared on the London stage with equally flattering results. Unfortunately in a moment of weakness he decided to launch forth as a manager. His artistic temperament left no place for business acumen and he soon landed in a debtor's prison.

Fiction says Payne was starving in a garret when he wrote "Home, Sweet Home." History tells us that at the time he was busy writing adaptations for the stage that he was well remunerated and had every comfort. Home-sick he doubtless was. His letters to his brother prove that. He says: "Though I am naturalized to vagabondium, still it is vagabondism. I long for a home about me."

Eventually he returned to the United States and was appointed Consul at Tunis. There he died in 1852. After a lapse of thirty years his remains were brought to Washington and reinterred. The Regimental Band softly played "Home, Sweet Home." The President of the United States and his Cabanet escorted the body to its last resting place. The "exile" had come "home."

"The Common Cause" Score by Klein.

The musical setting for Commodore J. Stuart Blackton's propaganda picture, "The Common Cause," now in production, is being composed and arranged by Manuel Klein.

Mr. Klein was for ten years composer and conductor at the Hippodrome and was associated with its first managers, Messrs. Thompson and Dundy. He was also with David Belasco for a period of four years and with Daniel Frohman several seasons.

With his brother he collaborated on "Mr. Pickwick," a light opera, and on "His Imperial Highness," another musical success. His musical compositions and arrangements for the special releases of the "All Star Feature Film Company" are noteworthy and contained many adaptations of his brother's plays.

Mr. Klein has completed the music for "The Common Cause," and is now engaged on the orchestration. While his themes have naturally been suggested by the script, yet he has been a frequent visitor to the French village exterior, where Commodore Blackton has been filming scenes for the past three weeks. He says he wishes to absorb the atmosphere of the setting and the spirit of the characters by meeting the people portraying them. He feels that he receives more inspiration from seeing a scene taken than from viewing it when projected on the screen.

Mr. Klein's brother, Charles Klein, was lost on the ill-fated Lusitania. Despite the sorrow and bitterness caused by his brother's death Mr. Klein is too broad-minded to taboo all German music. He says: "What had the old composers to do with the war which began in 1914? They lived years ago. They were not Huns, but merely German by birth, many of them having no pride of country. Wagner, who died in 1883, lived most of his life in Paris, confessing that he hated Germany. Mendelssohn spent his mature life in Paris and London. But we should everywhere, in the most insignificant film theatres, as well as in the greatest opera house, taboo entirely the works of modern German composers. They are Germans of the Germans, whose music breathes the very spirit of war."

The propaganda theme of "The Common Cause" naturally appeals to Mr. Klein, and his musical setting is a reflection of his enthusiasm for the cause of war as expressed in this super-feature. The film is being produced through the British-Canadian Recruiting Mission.

Belwin, Inc., and Motion Picture Music.

The old adage that a "workman cannot work without tools" is ably demonstrated by musicians engaged in film interpretation. Whatever their ability may be they cannot interpret the screen action without appropriate music.

As reported in these columns a few weeks ago, a unique combination has just been formed of the entire catalogue of the Cinema Music Company. S. M. Berg, whose service to the film industry is well known, and Sol. P. Levy, whose compositions and arrangements compare favorably with those of America's foremost musicians, have now entire charge of the business and theoretical end of Belwin, Inc.

Already published under Belwin's copyright are a new series entitled "Berg's Descriptive Series," bearing such titles as "Silent Sorrows," "Peacefulness," "The Crafty Spy," "Battle of Ypres," "Turbulence," "Perpetual Motion," "Slimy Viper," all composed by that renowned musician, Gaston Borch. A charming and melodious composition by Gaston Borch entitled "May Dreams" has already created a furore where music is considered of importance.

Among the many other compositions already placed on the market by Belwin, Inc., may be mentioned "Impish Elves," "Over the Top, Boys," "Blue Devils," "Fighting Tommies," "Hunkatin," "Aces High," "Sinister Theme," "Two Characteristic Themes," "Indian Mysterioso," "Weird Oriental Theme," "Military Hurry," "Furioso" and "Hurry."

Belwin's compositions, which are now in the course of preparation, are interesting reading, because they comprise a variety of publications unique in the annals of musical literature. Particularly worthy of mention are "Poem Symphonic," "Serenade Romantic," "Flirty Flirts," "Birds and Butterflies," "Bleeding Heart," "Comedy Allegro," "Dramatic Suspense" and "Yankee Tars."

This progressive house has inaugurated a policy in which every musician engaged in the film industry should be interested. We refer to B. S. A., which signifies Belwin Service Account. This means that any musician or theatre manager who will extend the courtesy of the usual trade references will receive a credit account which guarantees that all their musical requirements, irrespective of whom the publisher may be, will be promptly supplied by Belwin at the lowest possible professional prices. Furthermore, all orders will be shipped the same day received. This assures to musicians such service as has never before been at their disposal.

To peruse the account ledger of Belwin, Inc., is figuratively surveying a list of the "400 of the motion picture industry." The service which Belwin, Inc., is able to give to its patrons is due to the fact that it is now carrying an international and representative stock of every other publisher's music which is adaptable and desirable for musical interpretation of the film.

"Mickey" Inaugurates Novel Campaign.

About a year ago "Mickey" was first introduced to the exhibitors and public through the trade papers.

Daniels & Wilson, music publishers, are putting out the composition "Mickey," adapted for the picture. The advertising campaign is allied with the national campaign on the photoplay, and the song is being widely exploited throughout the country. A million copies have already been disposed of and the publishers claim that at the rate they are now going five hundred thousand copies per month will be added to this amount.

Many prominent vaudevillians are singing "Mickey" with marked success. The Tivoli theatre in San Francisco featured this song and a famous vaudevillian sang it with a chorus slide. It was subsequently repeated at a number of other T. & D. houses, where it was equally well received. In fact Mr. Daniels advises us that the theatres are clamoring for the song—its popularity is so great wherever it is featured.

Because of this enormous popularity Mr. Daniels is arranging to send a full orchestration of "Mickey," with a set of slides, to all the largest theatres in the country. This is done that when the feature is released the public everywhere will be familiar with the name of "Mickey." They have also arranged to have 15,000 retail music dealers and all the Five and Ten-Cent Store Syndicates in the country devote a full window display to the song, together with some lobby display photos from the production. This plan will be carried out in each locality as the photoplay "Mickey" is released there.

The Columbia Graphaphone Company is making a dance record of "Mickey" played by one of the best known Jazz Bands in the city. They will also exploit this record throughout the country in connection with the national campaign on the photoplay.

A song record is being made by the Victor Phonograph Company and a piano roll by the Aeolian Company.

Simultaneously with the first release of the picture on Broadway, New York, these four music concerns will launch a campaign to link up with the photoplay.

Presentation of "The Americans Come."

All songs do not lend themselves readily to a forceful presentation in picture theatres, but "The Americans Come," by Fay Foster, published by J. Fischer & Co., of New York, holds wonderful possibilities in this line.

A suggestion offered recently by a well known musician is certainly worthy of repetition. Enthusiastically he outlined his idea as follows:

"Get a first-class baritone. Dress him as an old man, blind and upon crutches. Have him placed left-front with a good looking soprano by his side. The set should show the interior of European living room, having a large French window at the back a little to the right.

"Usual bits of furniture can be found about. Open with dark stage until the singer begins. Then gradually dim up in red, increasing with a white, until dusk effect is produced, and then by the use of side projection throw a strong light from the back through the window, indicating sunshine. If the theatre has side panels have a moving picture of marching soldiers thrown on them from the projection box during the refrain. See that your sunlight effect does not conflict with your projection of this.

"As the song draws to a close dim down on your sunlight, then dim your foots, closing in semi-darkness, but at the last note flood the house for applause effect. It will make the song and give the audience a real thrill."

There is no question about the wonderful power of patriotic propaganda inherent in this song, and if you present it properly it will prove a drawing attraction.

John McCormack Sings Great Ballad.

It has been said that the war has brought no great musical epic. The one who perpetrated such a pessimistic thought dwelt in the broad halls of Ignorance.

"God Be With Our Boys To-Night" will live in the future with all the great songs of the masters. There is a depth of feeling in the lyrics that appeals to the heart of every true American. The music is particularly melodious and catchy. This is made evident by the whistling of it upon the streets by precocious urchins. Its patriotic fervor is blended with a gentleness of spirit that permeates our being.

One would naturally suppose from these qualifications that it could not be anything but a popular "shoo-fly" number. It is nothing of the kind. It can be safely catalogued under the heading of classic, and the fact that it is printed by Boosey & Co. is sufficient evidence that there is nothing trashy in the music. Besides our famous and dearly loved John McCormack is singing it with immense success. This surely bespeaks merit.

"God Be With Our Boys To-Night" has been beautifully arranged for orchestra and should find a place in every leader's library. Typically a theme, it can be used for many other purposes effectively. The plaintive movement of the refrain will suit pathetic situations, while the verse part has a hopeful rhythm most adaptable to 'cello solos.

As a song it has been sung at all the big theatres with great success and the exhibitor who wants new material for effective propaganda purposes will do well to get this season's success.

Picture Playing Creates a New Industry.

Throughout the ages no occupation has been able to stand alone, and the profession of picture playing is no exception to the rule. It, in itself, was called into being through the requisition of the film and work allied to and contingent upon it has spung up.

We have the arranging of musical scores, the providing of cue sheets, the selling of photoplay music and the art of autographing. Little is known regarding the all-around efficiency of autographing, and until "Music for the Pictures" became of vital importance nothing had been heard of it. In the few short years since the exhibitors awoke to the fact that good music meant larger box-office receipts the autographing of scores has been brought to a high plane. In fact Charles Greinert, a pioneer in this industry, has built up a large and successful business along these lines.

Connected with G. Schirmer, Inc., he followed its growth from its earliest infancy, continually improving upon the old methods and experimenting with new fluids. Later branching out for himself he procured a suitable building for his needs and installed up-to-date machinery, and no longer is there the long delays in procuring printed music.

Mr. Greinert's assistance has proven invaluable in the compiling of some of the well known picture scores, as his long experience has given him a keen insight into the needs of the picture musician.

We can expect many great developments in the music of the future, but the art of autographing will always stand predominant as the mechanical stepping-stone to greater efficiency in picture playing.

Composer Inspired by Aurora Borealis.

Just as the Marseillaise came through the disturbed conditions of the eighteenth century, so "Pershing's March" was inspired in the lonely heart of a soldier's mother. Mrs. A. S. Watt, who has contributed her share of stewart scots to fight for democracy, is a musician of peculiar temperament. She lives by and for her music and writes only occasionally as inspiration impels.

One evening while she was visiting in the Thousand Islands a beautiful Aurora Borealis appeared in the north. Always a lover of the artistic she was held spellbound by its grandeur. Going to her piano she improvised the theme which is heard in her famous march. Her friends liked it and music critics implored her to publish it. The result has been that wide popularity accorded "Pershing's March."

The Greatest Song the War Has Produced

The opinion of everybody

The Americans Come!

By FAY FOSTER

Sung at the RIVOLI, New York, during the entire week of June 9th, by Greek Evans. S. L. Rothapfel, proprietor-manager of the RIVOLI and the RIALTO, volunteered the information that "Fay Foster's new patriotic song went over big."

EMMA CARUS selected "THE AMERICANS COME!" for her this season's big number and sang it for the first time at Proctor's, Newark, during the week of August 5th, with the result that it proved THE CLIMAX OF HER GROUP.

PUBLISHED IN THREE KEYS

High (Bb), Medium High (Ab), Low (F).....$0.60
Orchestral and Military Band parts are available.

QUARTETS TAKE NOTICE

"THE AMERICANS COME!" is also published in arrangements as follows:
Male Voices..12c. Women's Voices..12c. Mixed Voices..12c.

Leaders' Service Bureau.

Questions Answered—Suggestions Offered.

Q. WHERE can I procure some classical music that will fit pictures? I have been playing all the Hurrys and Agitatos that are sold, and I find that our patrons are desiring a better class of music. Please help me with your kind suggestions.

A. Almost any of the recognized music publishers can supply you with what you want. You have not stated the size of your orchestra or whether you need only piano or organ selections, and this makes it difficult to specify particular numbers suitable for picture playing. There are many works of Wagner, excerpts from Beethoven and Schubert, many standard Overtures, and practically all the Grand Opera selections, which provide an adequate musical setting for pictures. They can be obtained, for piano, organ or orchestra, from Schirmer, Ditson or Fischer.

Q. Help! My orchestra leader has decided to strike and call out his men. They are non-union and considered the best players in this little town. The leader realizes that he can demand any salary and get it or I shall be forced to dispense with my orchestra. This is not the first raise I have been forced into, and I would be pleased to know what you could suggest that would bring them to their senses.

A. Buy an organ. This will effectually cure the strike-bee sting. If you get an organ cut down your orchestra and play both. If the orchestra decide to leave, you will then not be placed in a position where you have no music. The organ in itself will find favor with your patrons, and if your orchestra behave and act in concert with the organist you will have a fine combinaton that will have an added box office value. Another method might prove effective if feasible. Try to get a Union orchestra. The rates are fixed and you will have no re-occurence of the dissension now prevailing.

Q. Kindly advise where I can get collection of music for pictures, any suggestions appreciated.

A. There has been formed the Belwin Music Co., which handles all classes of photoplay music and a large assortment of the standard pieces. They are a little cheaper than the publishing houses and yet they can supply you with everything that has been published. Their address is the Columbia Theatre Building, New York City.

Q. Could you tell me who were the great violin makers of the fifteenth century.

A. Stradavaris, Amati and Guarneri. Of the three, Stradavaris was regarded as the best, and his violins are almost priceless at the present day.

Q. What is a Tympanon?

A. This instrument dates back into the fourteenth century, and was played extensively in the days of Louis XIX. It is a cross between a harp and a xylophone in that it has the strings of the harp placed horizontally and is played much as the xylophone by striking the strings with small hammers. The leading exponent of today of the Tympanon is Sascha Votichenko.

Q. There does not seem to be any improvement in cue sheet service, although an article of yours in a recent issue brought to the attention of the producers the inadequacy of most cue sheets as prepared today. Truthfully, ninety per cent. of them are of no use whatever, and something should be done to either improve the service or else stop the waste of money. Can't someone get at the men "higher up" and point out to them the absolute uselessness of the so-called "service" they are paying for?

A. In almost every issue of the Moving Picture World we have hammered this subject of cue sheets, and yours is one of many like complaints. The most direct route to better service is to send your kick to the executives of the companies at fault. These men are busy men, and may never read all that is printed about cue sheets, and it is a "moral certainty" that the guilty offender is not going to bring the matter of his shortcoming to the attention of these executives. Although they are busy they will welcome any reasonable suggestion or just complaint that might tend to improvement in any of their service departments.

Q. I note in the papers Walter Damrosch is to take a symphony orchestra overseas to play at the rest camps under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A. Is it a fact that the musicians services are being contributed gratis as a patriotic act or are they in the pay of the Govern-

A. All expenses and salaries of the musicians who are going abroad are paid out of a fund for that purpose in connection with the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Walter Damrosch is contributing his services free.

Q. How are the back-stage effects worked and what do they consist of in productions like "Hearts of the World?"

A. Cues are given to the electricians, and by watching the screen action from behind the screen or from the wings they are able to exactly synchronize all the effect. The instruments used off stage are usually a big drum for shots, wind machine, water machine, sand blocks, and ratchet.

Q. I visited a picture house where the orchestra consists of piano, two first violins, and cello. The violins were not together, the cellist could not be heard, and the pianist was right there with the "drown-out" stuff. For four pieces could not a better combination be used, and what would you suggest? I am a violin leader, but I would hate to think my fiddle sounds as weird as the two "first" in that theatre.

A. This is a good combination of instruments for an orchestra of four, and because of their bad execution we can hardly blame the instrumentation.

HONOR ROLL

"GOD BE WITH OUR BOYS TONIGHT"

This is a fine ballad, admirably adaptable as a theme. Leaders will find it a most welcome addition to their libraries. It can be used as a violin, cello, cornet or flute solo with orchestral accompaniment.

Spokes from the Hub

By Marion Howard

SURELY all are interested in the Davenport family, as stage and screen players, so it is not pleasant to tell of the funeral I attended the other day of Edgar L. Davenport at Forest Hills, where his talented sister, Fanny, lies. He had been ailing for a long time, so that the end was foreseen by his immediate family, though a shock to others. Many floral tributes came from New York and elsewhere. Harry Davenport, the sisters—May Davenport Seymour and Blanche Davenport—were present. There is one daughter, Marjory, who greatly resembles her late Aunt Fanny, and who has recently become engaged to a young army officer.

Just had a chat with Anita Stewart over here, doing a picture at the exclusive North Shore, and it was good to seen Vernon Steele in support. The news has gone forth about her transfer from the Vitagraph to Louis B. Mayer of the Hub, who promises to do much for this star. Miss Stewart I found most unassuming, natural, and girlish, with no inclination to shine away from the screen. Some of the local interviews have been queer and no one mentioned "Hubby" Cameron, who is in the service, stationed around here at present.

An embarrassment of pictures has been ours of late, but space forbids the mention all deserve. "The Firefly of France" went strong, and everyone likes Wally Reid. Features were admirably written titles and fine support. No, Wally was not the Firefly, for that honor went to Raymond Hatton, the embodiment of versatility. We liked the way the story unfolded, the suspense of it all, and we did think Reid looked immense in his aviator uniform. Some punch in this offering! On the same program was "The Vamp," clever, well done by Enid Bennett and a selected cast. Charles French, our old friend, in "The Guilty Man," made good here, as did Melbourne MacDowell, who played a Hun spy. This is the very best picture seen with Miss Bennett. For a weekly we had thousands of troops at Gettysburg "waiting orders." If you recall this historic place you can imagine the effect on the audience when the men were disclosed making the word "Gettysburg" and then breaking ranks.

What a sparkling picture "Good Night, Paul" is! Yes, a bit risque, in a spot or two, and inconsistent, but good farce, and so well done by Constance Talmadge, Harrison Ford and that funny player, John Steppling! Fine summer picture, and after all, we must have the lighter stuff these trying days. This reminds me to ask why the weeklies show us wrecks, fires and floods, for nobody is interested, unless concerned directly. Mutt and Jeff continue to edify all, but we like best the pictures from France just now.

"Shark Monroe" displayed some extra fine titles in the first reels with a background of the ocean in motion. Several around me exclaimed, "how cool," for it was seen on one of the hottest nights of the season. Of course, W. S. Hart has his following, but I do wish he would give us a picture now and then with a different theme and done in the East. A sailor next me was a bit wrathy over the terms used during the storm at sea like "Furl the flying jib topsail," as if there was such a thing. This chap was up on matters nautical, and he was plainly disgusted at the captain's orders. However, few there knew the "dif," so there you are! There was some cave man stuff and the customary ending, hero winning out. Splendid Alaskan atmosphere. Best work next to the hero was that done by Bertholde Sprotte, Hart's pal, and "white' 'all through.

A very good friend of mine declared that she did not like "Cecilia of the Pink Roses," but I was agreeably disappointed, and found it not only wholesome, but well done, by that incomparable beauty, Marion Davies, with fine support. Picture is sure to go with the Catholic set, especially as it has religious touches and a splendid finale. They gave the star George Le Guere for her wayward brother, and here we had an illustration on snobs versus loyalty, in dealing with the paternal. Willette Kershaw made a pathetic wife, who went out of life too soon. It is a human, compelling story, well directed by Julius Steger.

The big hit over here of late was the Fairbanks picture, "Say, Young Fellow," for it had a new idea well worked out in double exposure stunts, the star posing as a little mentor or curb on impulses, etc. What most of us liked was the delicious romance of the village spinster and a bachelor, impersonated by James Neill, and his versatile wife, Edythe Chapman. It was a delightful change from Doug's swift athletics. Titles were excellent, causing hearty laughter.

* * *

On the same program was Clara K. Young in "The Claw," not especially convincing in spots and too much melodrama for this clever star.

* * *

"You Can't Believe Everything," a Triangle with little Swanson, had one or two novel features, like the "Neptune Dinner," the guests in effete bathing suits, disclosing some anatomy to cause big laughs. In "The Service Star," a stunning picture for Madge Kennedy, I saw Clarence Oliver for the first time, and doesn't he look like his father? This picture ought to be a go, for it has a motive, good lighting, and is so well cast. Following this was "How Could You, Jean?" very entertaining, "Little Mary," as usual, giving pleasure. During that week Mrs. Tyer gave us "Opportunity," a Metro picture for Viola Dana doing odd stunts like going to a prize fight, dressed as a boy, and running up against two men who don't "do a thing" to the little masquerader. There is too much running about in pajamas by the trio. It was some sight! Glad to see Edward Abeles, that sterling actor, now in the pictures.

* * *

"To the Highest Bidder" proved a novelty, and I have not seen anything funnier in a long time than Frank Norcross as the auctioneer! Why his name is not in the printed cast is beyond me, for he has ever done good character work for the Vitagraph. Alice Joyce and Percy Standing are the stars in this. Two other good Vitagraphs at the Fenway were "Tangled Lives," with the dependable Harry Morey, Betty Blythe, Eulalie Jensen and Charles Kent, and "The Girl in His House," featuring Earle Williams, Harry Lonsdale and Grace Darmond—fine picture, good for repeats. Splendid photography and all else.

"Everywoman's Husband," good picture, with lesson on domesticity and how to keep "hubby" happy at home in spite of mother-in-law. I caught many around me nudging each other when the lines and acts shot home. It was convincing, and showed that a house is not always a home. Good twist at the end of this.

* * *

Hayakawa has again scored in "The Bravest Way," and it was good to see his dainty little wife, Tsuri Aaki, with him. Florence Vidor was beautiful, but why the make-up? For a supposed Oriental, she was far removed in appearance. Winter Hall was the polished villain and the play ended well, despite the limps here and there. "Old Wives for New" had a long cast of Artcraft players. Here we had Florence Vidor again, but there was a lot of rough stuff, though the beauty parlor doings got the laugh, especially when Sylvia Ashton emerged more sylphlike and quite attractive by contrast with the "before" habit. Elliott Dexter did not seem to fit as the husband.

* * *

Well I take off my hat to Director Blache for giving us such good business in the Metro picture, "A Man's World," and to Rachel Crothers for writing the play on a timely theme—man's alleged supremacy in the world of morals, etc. Then we had some splendid comedy touches around the kid and his dog, who did quite a few stunts to make us all laugh. Except for a bad make-up of lips, Emily Stevens showed up to advantage and was well supported by the trio of Bohemians, including Walter Hiers and Frederick Truesdale, who played the "bad un," and left the field clear for the good boy. This was quite classy all through after the first reel, and wasn't Florence Short some Vamp! It is hard to believe that she played Nancy Hanks in the Lincoln pictures with the lamented Chapin. On the same bill we had dear little Minter, in "Social Briers," quite the best Mutual seen here in weeks; the small town stuff had new features and good character drawing. There is a nice little romance all through, and some comedy elements to make this a go anywhere. How we did laugh over the hero's roadster tuned to speed high lights, and his later efforts, like suddenly acquiring religion, in order to hear and see the heroine in church.

Manufacturers' Advance Notes

World Pictures Releases Five Subjects in September

DURING September World Pictures will release five big productions on the regular program. Each of these pictures is really a "special," and each of them possesses drawing power. First on the program comes June Elvidge with Frank Mayo in "The Power and the Glory." This picture has been filmed from the best selling novel of the same name by Grace MacGowan Cooke. Miss Elvidge appears in the role of Jonnie Consadine and Frank Mayo as Gray Stoddard. Others in the cast are Madge Evans, Albert Hart, Clay Clement, Jack Drumier and Johnny Hines.

An important picture scheduled by the World for release on September 9 is Louise Huff in "T'other Dear Charmer." This is Miss Huff's first picture for the World, and the story was written by Charles Sarver, scenario editor of the World. Miss Huff appears in the role of Betty Hallowell. John Bowers is her leading man. Other members of the cast are Charles Dungan, Eugenie Woodward, Valda Valkyrien, Florence Billings, and Ida Darling.

Carlyle Blackwell and Evelyn Greeley will be seen in "By Hook or Crook," which will be released on September 16. The story is an entertaining one, it is light and pleasing. Supporting are Jack Drumier, Henry Warwick, Lucia Moore, Nora Cecil, Frank Doane, and Alice Chapin.

"To Him That Hath" is the title of the September 23 release, and it stars Montagu Love. The picture has been filmed from the best selling novel of the same name by Leroy Scott. It tells of the manner in which a man takes another's blame for theft so that the guilty man's memory may be held in reverence by people of the mission which he has founded.

Supporting Mr. Love are Reginald Carrington, George Lessey, Gertrude McCoy, Ethel Kaye, Marion Barney, and Edward Elkas.

The final production for the month is the best picture that Ethel Clayton ever made for the World. It is "A Soul Without Windows," and it is a tense, gripping and tremendously interesting drama of the present day. Frank Mayo appears in this production in support of Miss Clayton.

Two Loop Houses Praise Essanay-Chaplin Picture

THE new two-part Charlie Chaplin comedy released by Essanay, "Triple Trouble," has just completed a two weeks' run at the Castle theatre and a week at the Playhouse, two of Chicago's first run Loop theatres, where it ran to packed houses.

The George Kleine releasing system reports that all of its offices throughout the country are doing unusually heavy bookings, and that in the cities it is being booked by first run houses and by chain after chain of theatres, while many of the smaller cities are billing the town with the picture. Everywhere it has been run it is reported the houses were crowded and the patrons enjoyed the picture.

Essanay has invited all exhibitors to view the comedy for themselves before booking. Many have taken advantage of this offer, while others who have not had the time to see the picture themselves are booking on the report of the large runs in the central location.

Wellington Cross to be Featured in Triangle Plays

WELLINGTON CROSS, favorably known as a vaudeville headliner, and also for good work in various musical reviews, has forsaken the glare of the footlights for the silent drama, and will make his initial appearance in screen work under the Triangle trade-mark. His first picture will be "A Grey Parasol," in which he will be jointly featured with Claire Anderson. The directing will be in charge of Lawrence Windom. The story is by Fred Jackson, a New York playwright of reputation.

Director Thomas Heffron has already filmed many of the first scenes in "Tony America," featuring Francis McDonald in the title role. Nearly one hundred extras were used in these opening sets and the atmosphere of picturesque Italy was reproduced. A competent cast, consisting of Yvonne Pavis, Mrs. Harry Davenport, Dorothy Giraci, Rae Godfrey, Herald Holland, John Rivers and Dick Loreno have been selected.

Director Jack Conway and his western company are at Triangle's Santa Monica ranch shooting the final pictures for "Desert Law." This story, by Louis H. Kilpatrick, was originally called "Mountain Law."

Director Hopper and the entire cast of "Mystic Faces," in which the little Japanese star, Jack Abbe, is to be featured, have been haunting the back alleys of the Los Angeles' Chinatown district for the past week, doing some "atmosphere" stuff.

"The Atom," with Pauline Starke and Harry Mestayer in the leading roles, is nearing completion, and Director Dowlan and company are away on location shooting that part of the scenario which calls for western "background" stuff—scenic and otherwise.

Albert Parker, who is handling the megaphone on "The Secret Code," featuring Gloria Swanson and Barney Sherry, has alternated between the Triangle studios and "locations" for practically the entire week, "shooting" the final scenes of the production.

Doris Kenyon Returns from Trip.

Doris Kenyon has returned this week from Kentville and Halifax, N. S., where, during the past three weeks she has been visiting relatives and, incidentally, entertaining soldiers. Miss Kenyon made the return trip by steamer, despite the fact that Hun U-boats were haunting the waters. In crossing the Bay of Fundy the steamer upon which she was making the trip picked up a number of survivors from a Japanese freighter that had been sent to the bottom by one of the raiders.

Stopping at Boston, Miss Kenyon attended the opening of "The Street of Seven Stars," the first picture produced by her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc. The picture began a week's run at the Park theatre, where Miss Kenyon appeared in person at the afternoon and evening performances on Monday, as was told in the World last week. Manager Soriero had advertised her coming, and the throngs that turned out to greet her were so great that for a time traffic on Washington street was blocked.

Many Novel Expedients Push "Pershing's Crusaders"

WHILE several novel ideas have been used by various exchange managers in the intensive booking campaign inaugurated for "Pershing's Crusaders" it remained for Douglas Hawley, new manager of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit at Dallas, and former news editor of the Times-Herald there, to introduce still another rather unusual and effective plan to secure bookings and at the same time bring the exhibitor and the local newspapers into closer co-operation.

When M. Hawley sent quotation cards on "Pershing's Crusaders" to the theatres in Texas and Arkansas he also sent a strong circular letter to the editors of 150 selected newspapers with an advance story enclosed on the United States Government's First Official War Feature. In the letter to the editors Mr. Hawley urged that they call upon the local exhibitor as a patriotic duty and request the exhibitor to book "Pershing's Crusaders" with the assured co-operation of their respective newspapers.

Portland, Ore., is another of the large cities in which the local newspapers have given columns of publicity to the big picture, and as a result it has been held over at the Hellig theatre for an additional week.

In Denver, "Pershing's Crusaders" was shown twice daily at the Broadway theatre under auspices of the Civic and Commercial Association. The band from Fort Logan played at the opening performance, and recruiting officers were on hand at all times.

During the second week's record run in Oakland, Cal., the entire force of the Moore Shipbiulding Company was in attendence one night accompanied by their own forty-piece band. The Sons and Daughters of Washington reserved another night, and these were all big events.

Right across the bay in San Francisco the officials of the Southern Pacific Railroad bought the Columbia theatre outright for one night for its employees.

The same story is repeated in hundreds of other cities, according to reports being received at the offices of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit, which demonstrates that when an exhibitor is alert in securing the co-operation of the newspapers and local civic and military organizations he is assured of a record-breaking business with a picture like "Pershing's Crusaders."

Farnum Begins "Man of Power."

William Farnum has just begun work on a new play at the Fox studios at Hollywood. The play is titled "Man of Power." It was written by Frank Lloyd, Mr. Farnum's director, and the production, of course, will be directed by Mr. Lloyd. The play is said to be one of exceptionally strong situations.

Scene from "The Wooing of Riley" (General Film).

Kate Price and Otto Lederer Put Over "Wolfville Tale"

TWO old-time screen favorites make their first appearance in a Wolfville Tale this week in "The Wooing of Riley," a brisk and entertaining comedy-drama of the real West, released by General Film Company. Kate Price, well known for her work in comedy parts, and Otto Lederer, another well known film player with a penchant for laughmaking stunts before the camera, play the chief comedy roles in this story.

Riley, a reckless cowpuncher, played by Lederer, sets out to satisfy his overpowering thirst, and in the midst of his joy-crusade becomes fascinated with the beauties of Sal, the wash-lady, who is portrayed by Kate Price.

The town is stunned when it learns that Riley has become engaged to its wash-lady, and Riley is, too, when he sobers up. The leading citizens frame up a deal to chase Riley out of town and thus relieve him of his difficult position. Four-Bar Bob volunteers to accompany him, but the chase suddenly becomes real when it is learned the latter has not played fair and has decamped with the post office money box. Under such circumstances the eloping roysterers are quickly caught, and Sal recovers her lost one.

De Luxe Now Has Second Subject Before Public

WITH the release on August 17 of "The Inn of the Blue Moon," by Louis Joseph Vance, Doris Kenyon, as the head of her own company, De Luxe Pictures, Inc., now has two productions on the market. The first, "The Street of Seven Stars," was released early in July. Reports from exhibitors are that it has been successful its patronage coming to not an inconsiderable extent from those who have read the story. Both pictures were directed by John B. O'Brien.

At a private showing given a few days ago of "The Inn of the Blue Moon," the general opinion appeared to be that the picture would make a decided hit, especially with those who like a clean, interesting story in which love plays a prominent part. In the dual role of twin sisters, one a country girl and the other a society belle of New York, Miss Kenyon takes full advantage of the opportunity to display her versatility. Her winsome personality fits admirably both the characters.

In a number of scenes in which she is shown simultaneously as both sisters especially interesting situations develop. Some of the exteriors in this picture are romantic and beautiful and the photography is distinctly out of the ordinary.

Fox August Bulletin Out.

The largest and most attractive number of the Exhibitors' Bulletin, published by the Fox Film Corporation, has just been issued for August. This number, which is printed in blue ink, has fifty-two pages, beautifully illustrated by drawings and photographs of Fox stars and events in the Fox organizations of interest to exhibitors. The cover design is a handsome drawing of Tom Mix, done by Nadherny of the New York Herald.

Among the strong features of especial interest to exhibitors are several pages showing how showmen in different parts of the country have adopted means to put pictures over successfully. There is a page article on Frank W. Buhler of Philadelphia, describing his methods. Another page is titled, "Says His Pocketbook to Your Pocketbook," being the testimony of different exhibitors on how they showed certain productions. A page of editorials gives helpful advice to exhibitors on the conduct of their business, and still another page is devoted to stories that fit under the caption, "What the Other Fellow is Doing." "Flares from the Film Trenches" is the caption of a page.

"Fires of Youth" (Bluebird).

"Fires of Youth," the Bluebird release for August 26, is a story of the failure that often attends the attempt of a man in the autumn of his life to mate with a girl in the spring of life's cycle. The scenario is by Fred Myton. Rupert Julian produced the film. Ruth Clifford plays the leading role as Lucile Linforth, wife of a man twice her age.

Lon Chaney, supporting Monroe Salisbury in Bluebird's production, "That Devil Lefevre," is establishing a record as a character actor. He has played every racial type from Hindu to Hottentot.

Billboard Campaign of Famous Players-Lasky On

THE national billboard campaign now being conducted by the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is attracting the attention of both public and exhibitors. Although the plan of renting billboard space to exhibitors calls for only a "fifty-fifty" expenditure on the total charge of the twenty-four sheet stands exhibitors are being allowed to take two-thirds of the space on the boards for their own announcement, the remainder of one-third of the space being taken up by the Paramount-Artcraft announcement. Thus the manager is given plenty of space to advertise the showing at his theatre of Paramount and Artcraft pictures, a space over the top of the stand also being allowed to fill in with the name of his theatre. As a result the entire twenty-four-sheet stand appears as a direct advertisement to the theatre which the exhibitor gets at one-half the cost of the twenty-four sheet figured on a special low rate because of the large scope of the campaign.

Exhibitors are renting this billboard space from the exchanges of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, just as if they were renting film. They apply at the local exchage for a certain number of stands and pay their charges for this space to the exchange, which in turn remits to the home office where the entire national campaign is paid for. This paper is the regular line of production six or three sheets. By using date strips or "snipes" the manager can bill four different Paramount or Artcraft pictures of daily change if desired.

With the advertising of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation in the newspapers, in the magazines and on the billboards, the Paramount and Artcraft product is truly living up to the slogan "nationally advertised." The entire drive of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation is so arranged that the exhibitor can directly tie up to it.

Ethel Barrymore Begins Work on "Lady Frederick"

ETHEL BARRYMORE'S newest Metro vehicle, "Lady Frederick," by W. Somerset Maugham, has been placed in production at the Metro studio under the direction of Herbert Blache. The scenes first photographed by George K. Hollister were those in Lady Frederick's drawing roon, and Lord Frederick's smoking room.

The cast of "Lady Frederick" reads like a small "Who's Who" of stage and screen. E. J. Ratcliffe has been engaged to play the part of Lord Frederick. H. E. Herbert will play the important role of Paradine Fuldes. Eugene Strong will play Lord Mereston's son. Joseph Kilgour, a "villain" who has no rival in the hearts of the public, has been given the part of Montgomery. Harold Entwhistle plays Lord Mereston. Maude Turner Gordon plays Lady Mereston. John Goldsworthy returns to Metro as Lord Beresford.

June Mathis and Katharine Kavanaugh have adopted "Lady Frederick" for the screen. P. Thad. Volkman is assisting Mr Blache.

Desmond and Pauline Stark Featured in Triangles

THE first Triangle release scheduled for the week of August 25 offers Pauline Starke in "Daughter Angele," a picture described as a melodrama with a pretty romance and a new war angle. It tells of the adventures encountered by Pauline Starke as Angele, who is hindered at a reconciliation with her wealthy grandparent through the efforts of his housekeeper who would win his estate for herself and her son. All become involved in a spy plot which is foiled through the vigilance of Angele's faith and her young lover.

In the cast with Miss Starke are two new Triangle players, Harold Holland, the heavy, and Lulu Warrenton. William Dowland directed this production, which was written by M. H. Sterns, with continuity by George Elwood Jenks. Elgin Leslie handled the camera.

Henry Otto directed William Desmond in "Wild Life," a play by M. V. Dearing, which is offered as a second release for the week. It is a western subject in which Desmond is offered as a "square gambler," and Josie Sedgwick, who supported him in his last two productions, "Hell's End" and "Beyond the Shadows," will again be seen as his leading woman.

S. S. Norton photographed this production, which has in the supporting cast Dot Hager, Ed Brady and Bill Patton.

Fox Printing 32,000-Word Serial on Pershing Story

AS ONE of the helps to exhibitors booking the great patriotic picture, "Why America Will Win!" the Fox Film Corporation has sent out, through a big newspaper syndicate, a 32,000-word serial story on the life of Gen. John J. Pershing, upon whose career "Why America Will Win!" is based. The serial will appear in 500 of the most prominent newspapers in the country.

Not only will this serial appear in these newspapers, but advertisements linking up the story to the film will appear in all the newspapers using the serial. The story will be widely advertised, and it is expected it will have a great box-office influence in the showing of the picture.

The serial is illustrated with exclusive copyrighted photographs obtained by the Fox organization in the course of long research into General Pershing's career, from his boyhood days in Laclede, Mo., up to the present.

This serial will soon be appearing in all the newspapers that have taken it. There are twenty installments, and it is believed that the story will make every newspaper reader in the country familiar with the life of the great American leader.

To obtain this unusual help to exhibitors, it is said the Fox organization employed several trained investigators who ransacked the files of the War Department, interviewed friends of General Pershing and went to various places to obtain first-hand information.

In addition to this story the Fox corporation is issuing more than a million striking window cards, to be placed by exhibitors booking "Why America Will Win!"

Roscoe Makes a Move.

Roscoe "Fatty" Arbuckle has removed his company to the Diando studio, Glendale, Cal., where his next Paramount comedy will be made. It will be a Mexican border story requiring space and an atmosphere unobtainable at Long Beach. However, the comedian retains his offices, home, and beach privileges in the latter city, and the move is only temporary, though the company may not return to the beach if other arrangements are made meantime. The organization has no connection whatever with the Diando Company other than to rent studio space.

Meanwhile, "The Cook" has been completed and is ready for release.

The new location is said to afford every facility for splendid scenic locations, being in the foothills with mountains for background and with much open country covered with undergrowth and with many old structures and heavy timber, as well as spaces where the prairies may be simulated if necessary.

Church Supports Kathleen Clifford.

Kathleen Clifford has Fred Church as her leading man in "Angel Child," her first Plaza picture, released September 9 by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation. Miss Clifford is the diminutive star from Charlottesville, Va., who is less than five feet tall and weighs ninety-eight pounds.

Scene from "Her Man" (Advance-Pathe).

Pathe's "Her Man" Is Story of Cumberland Mountains

IN intelligence and refinement she feels far above these men and women of the Cumberlands. She believes her mission in this life is to raise these people to her own standards of living. And yet—when the man she loves has learned to love—this uncouth mountaineer falls a victim to the feudist's bullet, the veneer of civilization vanishes—the girl becomes once again the cave-woman and, with Winchester in hand, she defends her man from the onslaught.

The above, in brief, is the lesson of nature taught by the photodrama, "Her Man," based on Charles Neville Buck's successful novel, "The Battle Cry," produced by the Advance Motion Picture Corporation. "Her Man" will be released by Pathe Exchange, Inc., September 8.

Ralph W. Ince has surpassed himself in directorship according to those who have seen private presentations of this drama of the mountains. A company of players went to the heart of the Cumberlands. Not only are the exterior scenes beautiful and correct as to detail, but all interior settings used are the interior of bona fide homes of mountain clansmen and many of these types appear during the action of the story.

No expense has been spared to make "Her Man" a special feature in every meaning of the word. Little touches are many and varied. Even the old-fashioned crazy-quilts and carpet-chain rugs are to be seen.

Elaine Hammerstein plays the difficult role of Juanita Holland, born to wealth and refinement, who finally battles in behalf of her man. W. Lawson Butt, the distinguished English actor who appeared in the stage production of "The Garden of Allah," enacts the part of "Bad Anse" Havey, leader of the clan, big, ungainly, bloodthirsty, and who finally is regenerated by the love of Juanita. Other players include George Anderson, Carleton Macy, Erville Alderson, Cecil Chichester, George Cooper and Josephine Morse.

Keeney's Fourth Subject Now in Finishing Stage

PREPARATIONS are being made by Frank A. Keeney to star Jewel Carmen, in spite of the fact that William Fox has announced he will begin injunction proceedings the moment she starts work with the Keeney forces. He intends to surround her with a strong company.

Mr. Keeney's scenario editor, Bennett Musson, is now engaged in editing and titling the fourth of the Keeney productions. It is entitled "The Uphill Path," and is by the late Paul Armstrong. It stars Catherine Calvert who is now appearing in "A Romance of the Underworld," another Armstrong story. "The Uphill Path" deals with the struggle of a girl to live down her past. It is dramatic and is full of human nature throughout.

The next Keeney release will be "Marriage," by Guy Bolton, who will be given to the public about the middle of September. Mr. Keeney is holding up the release in order to catch the better business of the fall. He is well satisfied with the success of his two releases thus far. They have done excellently, in spite of the handicapping effect of the summer weather. All the Keeney productions are distributed through the Sherry Service.

Simplex Sales Going Well on Coast.

Sales of Simplex projectors recently made on the Pacific coast indicate that warm weather has in no way affected the picture business there. The demand has been greater than in previous corresponding seasons. In the northwest a number of these machines have been installed by the Seattle Stage Lighting Company in various Government departments and training camps.

"Little Miss Moneybags" Chosen for Bushman-Bayne

A FIVE-ACT screen romance by Elaine Sterne, "Little Miss Moneybags," has been accepted by Metro Pictures Corporation for the use of Francis X. Bushman and Beverly Bayne, and work on the new production will begin at once, following the arrival of the co-stars from their honeymoon at Bushmanor. This is the first production of the stars since their recent marriage.

A notable cast will support Mr. Bushman and Miss Bayne, under the direction of Charles J. Brabin.

"Little Miss Moneybags" is being scenarioized by A. S. Le Vino, who has recently returned from Metro's Western studios at Hollywood, Cal. Mr. Brabin will be assisted by Bernard J. Durning, who has recently joined Metro's directorial staff. The story contains some unusual features, and Director Brabin promises some genuine surprises in connection with it. The scene is laid in and around New York City, though some of the characters are transplanted from the far West. Surprising as it may appear, "Little Miss Moneybags" will introduce some phases of metropolitan life that are new to the screen, and unrealized by those many miles from Broadway and Forty-second street. The release date will subsequently be announced by Metro.

"Italy's Flaming Front" Released by First National

ITALY'S FLAMING FRONT," latest and most impressive of all film productions to reach this country since the counter-stroke against Austria was so brilliantly executed by the armies of General Diaz, will be released by the First National Exhibitors' Circuit on August 26.

The production will be put out in six reels, having been carefully edited since its exhibition at the Rivoli theatre, New York, in weekly episodes, and in its revised form has been pronounced effective to the last degree by a committee of leading trade paper editors and film critics who recently witnessed a screening of the big spectacle at the Miles projection room.

Edited by a joint conclave made up of members of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and representatives of the Italian military authorities in this country, "Italy's Flaming Front" in the form that it will be shown to the public offers striking evidence of rare dramatic selection and good taste.

There are scores of scenes that raise the enthusiasm to fever heat, but not one that could arouse a sense of repulsion in the mind of the most impressionable. The inspiring and exciting side of the spectacular conflict being waged by the champions of democracy in the south is alone reproduced.

"In placing this film before our Allies in America," said Lieutenant M. M. Prochet of the Sixth Italian Fortress Artillery, now representing his country's film interests in this country, "we have been guided by the desire to show the citizens of this republic as many of the notable achievements of our military and naval forces as possible without forcing into the foreground the unpleasant elements in the task of smashing the Hun. This means that we want to place our cause before the greatest number of people possible, feeling that once Italy's aims and efforts are fully understood in America there will be no force strong enough to break the handclasp of good will and brotherhood now uniting the two countries."

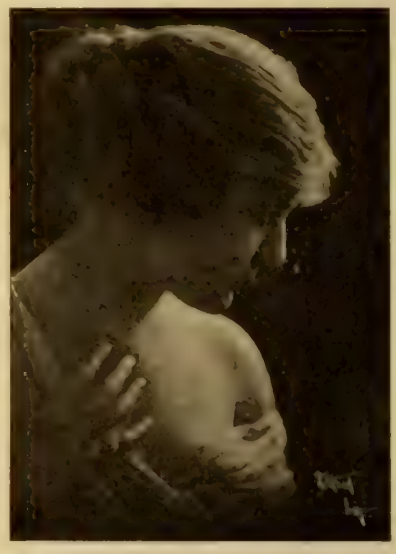
"Cleopatra" Continues Its Sensational Success

ALTHOUGH more than 5,000,000 persons already have seen "Cleopatra," the great Theda Bara portrayal of the love of the siren of the Nile, the Fox corporation states that more bookings for this drama are coming in daily. Several of these are for repeat dates.

"Cleopatra" has just played two weeks in Boston at Loew's Columbia and Orpheum theatres. It has also played the Bowdoin Square theatre, Boston.

Miami, Fla., has booked the production for this week, and Fort Wayne, Ind., has taken it for a week. Ten cities and towns in Michigan, Wisconsin and Illinois will see the picture through bookings made by the Fitzpatrick & McElroy and the Butterfield circuits.

Right on the heels of a showing at Kunsky's Washington theatre, Detroit, the Miles theatre of that city has been signed up for a week's stand.



"Cleopatra" opened Aug. 11 at the Colonial theatre, Akron, to sensational business, and it will play nineteen days in the Orpheum and allied houses in Cleveland. In the Texas territory, the Hancock opera house at Austin has just booked "Cleopatra," and the Isis in Denver has taken the production for a repeat booking.

Mary MacLaren In "Bread" Is Big U Special Attraction

MARY MacLAREN in the Universal's Special Attraction for August 26 plays with fetching effect the role of a country girl transplanted to life in the mad whirl of the city. The title is "Bread." Ida May Park wrote the scenario from a story by Evelyn Campbell. Miss Park also produced the film.

The scenes are laid in a small town and later amid theatrical agency and night life settings of the city. Miss MacLaren as Candace Newby finds existence a dull monotone in her home town of Middleburg. Her romance is only in dreams of the outside world. Those around her are the narrow-minded, gossiping creatures often found in rural communities.

Estelle Payne has provided the town with food for its gossip-mongering appetite. She leaves to hide her shame. The girl's mother after a long strain of worry and sorrow dies of heartbreak. Estelle is sent for. In the eyes of Candace Estelle has become a wonderful person. Her style and sophistication dazzle Candace. Finally a small legacy comes to the latter. Her dream is fulfilled. She goes to the city and joins Estelle. Candace then, under Estelle's guidance, applies at a theatrical agency for a chance on the stage.

Mary MacLaren.

Of the dull mockery of theatrical life in certain strata and of its deceptions and cruelties "Bread" gives vivid portrayal. A loaf of bread is the means of providing the turning point in the young girl's career and shows her the way to better things.

"His Bonded Wife" (Metro).

A Little Theatre, done in a futuristic checkerboard effect of black and white, is one of the features of Emmy Wehlen's "His Bonded Wife," in process of completion at Metro's Sixty-first street studio under the direction of Charles J. Brabin. This Little Theatre is used as the background for a fanciful treatment of the old pantomime of Harlequin and Columbine.

Several well-known Liliputians appear as dwarfs in this ultramodern handling of the favorite old masque, including Gus Alexander, Irving Emmett and Irving Burke. The charming Columbine is Dorothy Lee, a toe-dancer who appeared the past season with the "Chu Chin Chow" company. Graceful Pierrette is Helen Kohankie; Donald Sawyer is Pierrot, and Jack Williams the nimble Harlequin.

"Yellow Dog" Campaign Is Spreading Over Country

THE nation-wide campaign to spread the spirit of loyalty started by the Jewel Productions has attracted the support of many great commercial houses and business organizations throughout the country, as well as state and city officials.

The infectious spirit of Americanism engendered by Henry Irving Dodge's story, "The Yellow Dog," is remarkable in that the book is not a war story except in that it deals with social conditions as they apply to patriotism prevailing in the average suburban town of today. Yet, the appearance of the story in magazine and later in book form and then supplemented by the distribution of the literature prepared by Jewel Productions has aroused the fighting spirit of the civilian population of America.

It has conjured leaders from the most unexpected sources; men and women in all walks of life have stepped forward and are leading campaigns that are stamping out enemy propaganda, and it is safe to predict that when the Jewel Productions fires the last gun in the campaign to suppress Prussian propaganda by presenting the film version of the "Yellow Dog" the public will view the production to look upon the mongrel patriot as a bygone species.

Among the big commercial houses that have taken up the campaign are the Black-Clawson Company, manufacturers of paper and pulp mill machinery, Hamilton, Ohio; the Kewaunee Manufacturing Company, of Kewaunee, Wis., one of the biggest manufacturers of laboratory furniture; Cleveland Twist Drill Company, the Kempsmith Manufacturing Company, of Milwaukee, and the Toledo Exchange Club.

In Wheeling, West Virginia, the Yellow Dog Campaign is in the hands of Wheeling Commercial Association and is accomplishing great things. "Yellow Dog" clubs are forming in all sections of the country.

Matt Moore is Leading Man in Blanche Sweet Company

IN the production of Harry Garson's screen version of Rupert Hughes' story, "The Unpardonable Sin," which ran as a magazine serial and has just appeared in book form, Blanche Sweet will have as her leading man Matt Moore, who has just been added to the personnel of the Garson forces.

Mr. Moore's experience has been gained both on the speaking stage and in a wide range of motion picture work. Before his entrance into the photoplay field he spent six years on the stage in dramatic work. Since entering motion pictures his sterling work has attracted wide attention, having appeared with William Fielding in "The Wild Goose Chase," also with Mary Pickford in "The Pride of the Clan." His latest screen appearance was with Elsie Ferguson in "The Heart of the Wild."

"The Unpardonable Sin" will in all probability be followed by "Told in the Hills," the first of Marah Ellis Ryan's stories to be filmed.

Miss Sweet has practically completed the purchase of gowns and wardrobe and will return to the Coast within a week to start work on "The Unpardonable Sin." The picture will be made at the Sunset studio, which Mr. Garson has leased in Los Angeles.

Goldwyn Weeks in Middle West.

Omaha and Minneapolis are running a neck and neck race in staging "Goldwyn Weeks." Several weeks ago the Strand and Rialto theatres of Omaha played Goldwyn pictures simultaneously for an entire week. Now comes a great "Goldwyn Week" in Minneapolis and an equally successful engagement of two of Goldwyn's most popular stars. Starting August 6, the Strand theatre, of Minneapolis, played Madge Kennedy in her Goldwyn patriotic production, "The Service Star." Miss Kennedy played to large and enthusiastic audiences during a four-days' engagement. Following "The Service Star" the Strand featured another Goldwyn success, Mabel Normand in "The Venus Model," giving Goldwyn productions eleven straight days in one of the leading and most progressive houses in Minneapolis.

Scene from "Green Eyes" (Paramount).

Real Negro Camp-meeting in Dorothy Dalton Picture

THE trouble that sometimes ensues when a man past middle age weds a girl is depicted in "Green Eyes," Dorothy Dalton's new Paramount picture. This is an Ince picture, directed by R. William Neill, and is scheduled for release August 26.

The husband becomes insanely jealous of his young wife and disaster almost ensues. But through a strange climax the tragedy is averted and peace and happiness follow the turbulent period of the marital career.

"Green Eyes" is laid in the South and includes a real old-fashioned negro camp-meeting for "color." To make certain that this camp-meeting would be faithfully reproduced Ince engaged more than fifteen hundred colored people, all residents of Los Angeles and vicinity, and took them by a special train to the small town of Norwalk, where, in a shaded grove, a regular camp-meeting was held, with the exhorters, the colored choir, the pickaninnies clinging to the skirts of their "mammies," and the brothers and sisters who were supposed to "get 'ligion."

Director R. William Neill, who held the megaphone over the shoutings of the enthusiastic colored singers, had much difficulty in making the spoutings of an old colored minister at the proper moment, he might as well have tried to stop a Niagara. It was a scene that had all the "atmosphere" of the regulation camp-meeting. There were tables loaded down with "eats"; good-natured young colored fellows "sparked" saucy-eyed Ethiopian damsels, while the more staid of the colored aggregation at once took to the religious scenes with great interest and fervor.

Miss Dalton as the young wife is said to give a performance lacking nothing. Jack Holt as the husband is declared to have accomplished a splendid piece of work, while the remainder of the cast is apparently excellently chosen. Ella Stuart Carson wrote the story.

Maciste, "Cabiria" Samson, Coming in Screen Serial

MACISTE, the herculean Adonis of the screen, "discovered" by Gabriele D'Annunzio for the outstanding character in "Cabiria," and later the much-discussed star of "The Warrior," returns to the screen shortly in what Harry Raver terms "the most unusual serial ever offered the American fan." No announcement has been made as to the title of the "Maciste" serial.

When it is remembered that this Samsonic star enacted the role of "The Warrior" while serving as a soldier in the Italian army and that the Associated Press dispatches from Rome reported him killed in action cable advices from Turin disproved the report by stating that he was only wounded and was "enjoying his usual appetite." The new serial, according to Mr. Raver, has been in course of production since July, 1917, and was finished only three weeks ago, the delay being caused by the war activities of both "Maciste" and his director, Pastrone, while serving the colors.

No decision has been reached by Harry Raver in the matter of exploiting the serial. Mr. Raver says, however, that the picture would not be given a "Broadway run" at his expense, as the star, backed by the earning power of his previous productions, had sufficient prestige to put the serial over and, as "The Warrior" was sold outright after its run at the Criterion theatre last summer, Mr. Raver may decide to dispose of his North American rights to the new production without exploitation on his own part.

Many First Runs Signed Up by Goldwyn for New Year

ON Sunday, September 1, Goldwyn Pictures Corporation inaugurates its second releasing season with an output doubled from twenty-six to in excess of fifty productions and with an increase of three new stars of world-wide fame and drawing power.

As a prelude to its first big release, Geraldine Farrar in "The Turn of the Wheel," Goldwyn's domestic and international organization has since June been waging a big sales campaign, a-heving through its men a success and drawing into continued business relations with the company the large and more influential exhibitors.

Besides continuing in its second year in virtually every big theatre and every small theatre in which the first year Goldwyn productions were presented, the company under its new sales policy of Star Series has brought under its banner still other powerful exhibitors whose requirements Goldwyn is now enabled to fill through the doubling of its annual output.

Samuel Goldfish, president of Goldwyn, takes pride in the fact that Goldwyn stars again will be seen this year at the Strand theatre, New York. Of double importance also, both numerically and because of their great prestige for fine showmanship and quality productions, he is proud of the entry of Goldwyn Pictures into the Rialto and Rivoli theatres.

In Philadelphia Goldwyn Star Series productions are booked solid in the Stanley chain of theatres, controlled by Jules E. Mastbaum, with first-run presentation in the Stanley and Palace theatres, Philadelphia.

In Boston for the coming year all Goldwyn productions are booked solid in the Jacob Lourie Modern and Beacon theatres. In Buffalo Goldwyn has been booked solid at Shea's Hippodrome. Rochester's Regent has been booked solid, as have the Avon theatre, Utica. All of Harry M. Crandall's splendid Washington (D. C.) houses have booked Goldwyn solid, with the first-run scheduled for the new Crandall Metropolitan when it opens in the middle of October, and a temporary first-run in Mr. Crandall's beautiful Knickerbocker theater, which was opened last fall.

In Baltimore Goldwyn has been booked solid at the Parkway theatre. In Richmond and Norfolk the Jake Wells houses have booked Goldwyn solid, this making the company's second year of alliance. Goldwyn is booked solid in MacMahon & Jackson's Gift theatre, Cincinnati; C. W. Deibel's Liberty, Youngstown; E. A. Zorn's Temple, Toledo, H. C. Horater's Alhambra, Toledo, and the Schade theatre, Sandusky, O. In Chicago Jones, Linick & Schaefer's Orpheum and Randolph theatres and the complete chain of the Ascher Bros.-Schaefer houses are booked solid for all fifty Goldwyn productions.

Mr. L. Markowitz has booked Goldwyn solid at the Strand, San Francisco. In Los Angeles Emil Kehrlein, with his Kinema theatre, was the first Los Angeles exhibitor to close. In Texas E. H. Hulsey has booked Goldwyn solid at his leading theatres in Dallas, Houston, Waco and Galveston, with a similar contract being made for San Antonio by W. J. Lytle of the Empire.

Fox Issues Victory Pictures Book.

As one of the means for obtaining greater exploitation of the new William Fox brand of Victory pictures, the Fox Film Corporation is issuing a new style, special size press book.

The book is 11 by 8 inches and varies in the number of its pages from sixteen to twenty-four. These books will be sent to all Fox exchanges, to be issued to exhibitors who book the pictures made by Gladys Brockwell, Tom Mix and George Walsh, as well as the other productions that will be released under the Victory Pictures brand.

Several pages of scene cuts are given, mats of these cuts being furnished free. Besides that there are numerous pages of type advertisements, which are given as suggestions to exhibitors in showing the pictures. Advance, current and last-day notices, as well as several pages of publicity stories are also contained in the books.

Famous Players Starts New Year with a Rush

THE distribution department of the Famous Players-Lasky Corporation, under the direction of Walter E. Greene, is now making its final preparations for the opening month of its greatest year since the inception of the company. September will witness double the output of any previous month of this organization, twenty feature productions having been listed for release comprising fifteen new Paramount and Artcraft pictures and five Success Series reissues.

Six new Paramount and Artcraft stars will be seen for the first time under these trade-marks next month. They are Fred Stone, John Barrymore, Ethel Clayton, Lila Lee, Shirley Mason and Ernest Truex. Other players whose productions from the Lasky, Ince and Famous Players studios will be released next month are Mary Pickford, Douglas Fairbanks, Elsie Ferguson, Wallace Reid, Marguerite Clark, Dorothy Dalton, Vivian Martin, Charles Ray and Enid Bennett. In the Success Series films are Mary Pickford, Marguerite Clark, Pauline Frederick and Geraldine Farrar. "The Girl of the Golden West" will be a Special Success Series picture. The first of the Paramount-Artcraft Specials to be presented will also be released in September and is entitled "The Hun Within."

Each week in September there will be released three new productions and one Success Series reissue. John Barrymore, Elsie Ferguson, Wallace Reid and Mary Pickford start the new year in September first releases.

"Hands Up" Leads Pathe Program.

The Pathe program announced for release the week of September 1 is of unusual excellence, according to the statement of the company, which has made a special endeavor for the beginning of the fall months.

"The Phantom and the Girl" is the title of Episode No. 3 of the stirring Pathe serial "Hands Up," featuring Ruth Roland, supported by George Chesbro and an all star cast.

Harold Lloyd will present his latest farce comedy, "Two Scrambled." Winsome Bebe Daniels and Harry Pollard help him.

"After Twenty Years—Porto Rico," is the title of the Post Travel Series No. 12. Exclusive scenes of odd nooks and corners of Uncle Sam's island possession are presented.

Well Dressed Story is "Heart of Gold."

World Pictures have put in work Lucy Sarver's story, "Heart of Gold," which will be the third picture made with Louise Huff as the star. The continuity was made by Clara S. Beranger. Prominent in the cast are Johnny Hines, Robert Fisher, Tony Merlo, William Williams, Grace Barton and Marion Barney.

The theme of this photoplay has to do with dress conservation. The production has the support of the Federal Conservation Bureau. In order to add interest to the attraction one of the most famous dress ateliers in New York City has been secured for use in filming some of the interiors. In these scenes sixty mannequins will appear and display the latest style costumes.

Essanay's "Young America" Is in Assembling Room

THE new George K. Spoor feature taken from the Cohan and Harris stage success written by Fred Ballard, "Young America," has been completed as far as the taking of scenes, both interior and exterior. The assembling of the picture is rapidly being completed.

The play promises to be unusually striking in photography, as well as strong in plot and action. It is a timely play, touching on the spirit of young America in time of a crisis to the nation.

Charles Frohman Everett, who takes the leading role, interprets his part with exceptional skill, being a typical manly American boy and having had the experience of playing the same role on the stage.

He is ably supported by Madelyn Clare, Helen MacDonald, Howard I. Smith, William Wadsworth, Wilson Reynolds, Frances Raymond, and others, all picked specially for their parts from New York and Chicago playhouses.

Many Features in Pathe's Official War Review No. 8

A DREADNOUGHT of the air is one of the feature pictures in the Official War Review No. 8, produced by the Division of Films and released August 17 through Pathe Exchange, Inc. One of the giant Handley-Page bombing planes, used by the hundreds by the Allies in raids on munition plants, railway stations and aviation bases, is pictured. The late Sergeant Frank Baylies, the American ace killed over the enemy lines after accounting for his twelfth German flyer; an enemy battle-plane and its crew brought down within the French lines; Commander Fecamp of the French aviation department bestowing the Cross of the Legion of Honor on Lieutenant Ganos and Lieutenant Marshal, two famous air fighters, and Minister of War Clemenceau, "The Tiger of France," visiting the Aisne front, are other pictures presented in connection with the Allied aerial work.

The Official War Review also shows the great line of motor trucks carrying provisions from the American bases in France to the troops fighting gallantly in the front line trenches.

Fox to Make Big Drive On Kellerman Subjects

A SPECIAL drive will be made the latter part of August, it is announced by the Fox corporation, for bookings of "A Daughter of the Gods," the Annette Kellerman picture. The Fox corporation also will release early in September the Kellerman submarine phantasy, "Queen of the Sea," which will be put out on an individual booking basis. The picture will be shown in the biggest theatres throughout the country for months to come, and in the opinion of officials of the Fox corporation will undoubtedly attract even wider attention than "A Daughter of the Gods."

In offering the first Kellerman picture now, the corporation believes there is a splendid opportunity not only for those who have never played it but also for those theatres where it has made big money to clean up again on a repeat booking. Because of the wonderful production and the great publicity campaign soon to be projected in connection with "Queen of the Sea," Fox officials argue that both Kellerman pictures will prove moneymakers for the theatres that show them.

Coast Likes O. Henry.

Continued evidence of the popularity of the O. Henry stories is found in the fact that Quinn's Rialto theatre in Los Angeles has just signed a contract with General Film to screen the O. Henry stories as rapidly as they can be released. Initial showings of these subjects in the Rialto won instant favor.

For several months the O. Henry stories have been shown continuously at the Rialto theatre in San Francisco, where they have obtained an unusually large following. The Wolfville Tales, which are released alternately with the O. Henry stories, also are becoming regular features of the Rialto program, and are proving a hit.

Mae Murray Making "Scarlet Strain."

Mae Murray has begun work on another Universal special attraction. It is entitled "The Scarlet Strain." The photoplay is taken from a novelette by Lorine Fontaine and Katherine Robbins, which appeared in the All-Story Magazine. Frank Elliott plays opposite her, and the cast includes Royden Keith, Clarrisa Selwynn, Martha Mattox and Willard Louis. Mr. Elliott was formerly leading man with the Smalleys and recently supported Theda Bara.

Selig Tells How "Hoosier Romance" Came to be Filmed

WILLIAM N. SELIG, a pioneer of the film industry and one of the best known of the world's motion picture producers, who is responsible for the happy thought that resulted in dramatization of J. Whitcomb Riley's "Hoosier Romance," soon to be released by Mutual, tells most interestingly in an interview how he secured the picture rights to the poem.

"Of course Mr. Riley and I were old friends," said Colonel Selig. "I knew him for twenty years—from the time he wrote verses for little weekly papers round Greenfield, Ind., to the time when managers were fighting for his services on the lecture platform.

"I always considered 'A Hoosier Romance' his masterpiece. Riley didn't agree with me. I talked it over with him a number of times before either of us had any idea about picturizing the poem. Riley was really his own harshest critic. He found faults with his poems that nobody else discoverd. He pointed these out to me, but they were technical. I told Riley I didn't think he ought to bother about technique. He was a poet of the people, from the people and for the people, and the charm of his work lay in its simplicity.

"It was after Mr. Riley had become famous and quite rich—when he was a partner of Bobbs-Merrill & Co., of Indianapolis—that I went down to see him about picturing 'A Hoosier Romance.'

"Riley was dubious. He said he didn't see how the thing could be done. His idea was that the poem told too simple a story to permit its amplification for a five-reeler. I laughed. What I knew was that the poem contained the whole story of human life and love and motive. At the time of this talk Mr. Riley was ill and, in fact, he died before the picture was ready to show—a circumstance I profoundly regret. However, all the poet's surviving relatives have seen the picture half a dozen times and they are delighted with it.

"'Who's going to play old Jeff Thompson?' asked Riley, as we talked the matter over.

"'Well,' I said, 'some corking good actor that has the necessary qualifications. I don't know right now who I'll get, but anyway he'll be the man for the job.'

"'H'm,' mused Riley, 'he'll have to be an Indiana actor, wouldn't he, or the atmosphere would be lost?'

"'You leave the picture part to me,' I told him. 'I love the poem and I'm going to see that it gets the best there is in pictorial presentation. If you don't like the picture when its done we'll throw it away.'

"Then Riley smiled—that old-time smile of his, and got up out of the chair he was lounging in with one leg over the arm—a characteristic attitude when he was at ease.

"'Colonel,' he said, 'If you put in your best licks on that story I know it'll be a darned good story pictorially. I can't see it in picture myself, but you go as far as you like and I'm glad to have it in the hands of a man I know and who knows me.'

"I'll tell you the reason I was set on picturing 'A Hoosier Romance.' I have traveled a good deal and I know that what decent people think in a New York flat with a kitchenette and a creaky elevator is the same sort of thing that decent people think who live in Indiana or in the Australian bush or on the South African veldt or in the shires of England. Human nature is a whole lot alike. I know that Riley's poems were being read with quite as keen an appreciation in Gloucestershire and Warwickshire and in the counties of Scotland and among the fisher-folk of the Channel Islands as they were in the United States. Riley has become an international. He was a citizen of the world.

"I picked Thomas Jefferson for the old farmer part and Colleen Moore for the lead. Jefferson is a great actor, and if Riley could see him pull that Indiana stuff of the straw between his lips at the funeral I'm sure he'd indorse the selection."

Ebonies Reported to be Gaining.

Recent bookings of Ebony comedies have increased at its exchanges, it is stated by General Film Company, which is distributing these releases. The humor of the colored players is described as catching on, and is demonstrating a merit above sheer novelty.

The current Ebony release is "When You're Scared, Run." It has to do with the mishaps of a droll character who wanders into a prize fighter's training camp.

Exhibitors Who Booked Big Six Report Big Business

THE William Fox Big Six of 1918 continue to prove profitable for the exhibitors who booked them, it is shown by telegrams from exhibitors all over the country received by the Fox Film Corporation. In practically every case where theatres took the Big Six—"A Fool There Was," "The Two Orphans," "The Clemenceau Case," "The Bondman," "A Soldier's Oath" and "The Plunderer" capacity business was the rule.

W. A. McCarty, manager of the Princess theatre, Oil City, Pa., has telegraphed the following: "Have just finished playing 'A Fool There Was' and 'The Bondman' at advanced prices to the biggest business of any week so far this summer. The public remember the good ones."

John Hemrick, the Little theatre, Seattle, declared: "Played 'A Fool There Was' to capacity business, this in spite of extremely hot weather and unusually keen competition."

From George Zepper, Rex theatre, Wheeling, W. Va., came this wire: "I ran William Farnum in 'The Bondman' and it certainly did pull like the name—big."

Martin R. Toohey, manager of the Emery theatre, one of the principal motion picture houses in Providence, stated: "On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week I played Theda Bara in 'A Fool There Was' to sell-out business. 'I also just signed first run for Providence 'Cleopatra' and 'Les Miserables.'

"The biggest three days' business we have had in eight weeks," is the report of W. Ledoux, president of the Empress theatre Co. of Omaha, on the showing of Theda Bara in "A Fool There Was."

Get Run for Your Money In This Metro Production

THE Saratoga Special, in which Hannibal, a two-year-old chestnut, won $9,000 and a gold loving cup valued at $10,000 for his owner, is one of the interesting features of Hale Hamilton's best Metro starring vehicle, "Five Thousand an Hour," by George Randolph Chester. Six races in all will be viewed by those who see the Metro picture when it is released, including besides the Saratoga Special, the North American Steeplechase and the Champlain Handicap.

Cameramen William Black and Eugene Gaudio were taken to Saratoga by Director Ralph Ince. "Shots" of the grand stand, the club house, the score boards, the weighing in and out of the jockeys, the bugler, the starter, and trainer McNaughton were obtained, as well as the actual races themselves.

During the Steeplechase, one of the jockeys fell from his horse directly in front of the camera operated by Black, the horse romping home alone. That the horse was disqualified does not detract one wit from the interest of the "shot" to spectators of the screen play, as Black had the presence of mind to keep turning the crank and obtain all the "action."

The races form a vital part of the story in "Five Thousand an Hour," which has been scenarioized by June Mathis from the Chester story.

Pathe's July 4 Parade Going Strong All Over

FOLLOWING upon the very successful showing at the Rialto theatre, New York, during the week of the 4th, Pathe announces that "The Fourth of July in France" is being extensively booked in all the various branches.

The San Francisco office has been particularly active in placing this timely and patriotic two-reel picture. It reports having closed with the Cortelyou theatre in San Francisco for the full week of August 11. Other important bookings with the Turner & Dahnken theatre in Oakland and with well-known houses in Reno, Sacramento, San Jose, Berkley, Stockton, Richmond, Watsonville and Fresno also have been reported.

Observers who saw the screening at the Rialto report large audiences and much enthusiasm.

It is said at the Pathe offices that a record business for a two-reel picture is confidently expected and that the business now on the books justifies the optimism. The picture was obtained from the French Pictorial Service and was photographed by the cinematographic division of the French army.

Viola Dana Begins "Oh, Annice!"

Viola Dana has begun work before the camera in "Oh, Annice!" her latest photoplay, at the Biograph studio, a portion of which Metro has been obliged to lease owing to the large number of companies working at the firm's Sixty-first street studio.

The role of Annice gives the star more opportunity for light and shade in interpretation than she has had in a long time, and Miss Dana has begun her work with enthusiasm under the direction of John H. Collins. "Oh, Annice!" is by Alexine Heyland. Director Collins adapted the story. Albert H. Kelley is assisting him in the direction, and John Arnold is handling the photography.

Small Cast Supports Miss Barriscale.

Bessie Barriscale's next Paralta Play, "The White Lie," is a powerful drama written by William Parker and directed by Howard Hickman. The gripping situation is built around three characters, who, outside of baby Mary Jane Irving, are practically the only persons in the story. With the star, Charles Gunn and Edward Coxen make up the cast. Originally called "A Wife's Conscience," "The White Lie" will be released by the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation on September 2.

"Bonnie Annie Laurie" is Ready for Release

PEGGY HYLAND, in "Bonnie Annie Laurie," a Scottish tale of patriotism and love, is announced by the Fox corporation as the first release under the new brand of Excel Pictures. The picture will be released early in September.

"Bonnie Annie Laurie" was written by Hamilton Thompson and was directed by Harry Millarde. In the cast besides Miss Hyland are Henry Hallam, William Bailey, Sidney Mason, Dan Mason and Marion Singer.

Characters and Scene from Fox's "The Prussian Cur."

Lillian Walker Picture is Shown at Studio

THAT Lester Park, president of the Lillian Walker Pictures Corporation, has lived up to his promise to give exhibitors a series of "happy" pictures is said to have been demonstrated at a private showing of the first of these productions, "The Embarrassment of Riches," held at the Thanhouser studios in New Rochelle last week.

Edward Dillon, the director of the picture, and Roy Somerville, who picturized this former Broadway success of Louis Anspacker's, are said to have succeeded in blending that rarest of combinations in a picture—plenty of exciting action, with a delightful love theme—in a manner as refreshing as it is novel. The production is of the type that will multiply the fame of Miss Walker's dimples and smile.

The love story around which the picture is built is of that quality which leaves a good taste with the spectator. Its moral, that money does not always make for happiness, is developed in amusing fashion.

Carl Brickert, who has just completed a long engagement on Broadway as the stellar attraction of "Yes or No," is Miss Walker's leading man. Mr. Brickert is practically a newcomer to the screen.

"The Embarrassment of Riches," which, in common with all the new Walker pictures, will be distributed through the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, will be released September 23.

Big Reports from "Les Miserables."

The success established by "Les Miserables," the great film production made by William Farnum for Fox, continues to grow since it was put on an open rental basis Aug. 1, it is shown by reports being received daily by the Fox Film Corporation.

Not only are more cities booking this production, but several theatres that have already shown it have booked the picture for repeat engagements. And repeat bookings are the acid test of a picture's popularity. Philadelphia is a striking instance of the success which rebookings of "Les Miserables" have scored. In the Quaker City, the Victor Hugo picture had an initial engagement of two weeks at a downtown theatre. In these two weeks all house records were broken. But immediately after this run, "Les Miserables" played Philadelphia for eleven week stands, capacity audiences being the rule at each house.

Two-Reeler for Marie Walcamp.

Marie Walcamp has brought upon her young self a prospect of big tasks and many of them by the success she attained in "The Lion's Claws." The immediate result is that the Universal has arranged to release this star as soon as possible in a two-reel western drama, "The Whirlwind Finish."

Miss Walcamp has as many big chances for scoring in "The Whirlwind Finish" as she had in "The Lion's Claws," with a few additional ones. The action is rapid and full of effective situations. The story is of the race-track of the west.

Marin Sais Plays Opposite Hayakawa.

Marin Sais is playing opposite Sessue Hayakawa in his latest production, the third to be made by the Haworth Pictures Corporation for Mutual release. Miss Sais, it will be recalled, was Hayakawa's leading woman in the first of his new productions, "His Birthright," playing a heavy role. In the next picture she will also appear in a heavy part, but one which will afford her even more opportunity for displaying her emotional power as a screen artist. William Worthington, who directed the Japanese star in "His Birthright," is producing the third picture.

Government Backs Metro's "Kaiser."

In accordance with a government order Screen Classics' "To Hell With the Kaiser" will be shown in all the munitions plants throughout the country. This is a tremendous tribute to the patriot-building powers of the big feature screen drama, which was first introduced at the Broadway theatre, New York, in a run of several weeks, and has since taken the entire country by storm.

"To Hell With the Kaiser" has also been recommended to be shown in Uncle Sam's Liberty theatres, as an object-lesson to American soldiers of the brutality of the Hun. The picture has been officially recognized as increasing the loyalty and enthusiasm of the boys in khaki, making them realize their high privilege in being the defenders of democracy and world decency. A recommendation has come from the Intelligence Officer of Camp Jackson, S. C., to his commanding general suggesting that the subject be secured for all Liberty theatres.

Carmel Myers Back at Universal City.

Carmel Myers, who has just returned to Universal City after a month's vacation in the east, has managed with the aid of others to fulfill her promise made to thousands of soldiers in eastern camps. The young woman appeared at five training camps under the auspices of the Jewish Welfare Board, and agreed to bring back messages from the soldiers hailing from the coast to their relatives back home.

Miss Myers is now working on a new Bluebird under the direction of Paul Powell, a recent acquistion to the Bluebird directing staff. The picture is entitled "The Duchess of Dark Entry." It is adapted from a well known story by Perley Poore Sheehan, who was co-author with Robert Davis of "We Are French." Miss Myers' supporting cast includes Rodolpho de Valentina, Alfred Allen, R. Cummings and Harold Goodwin.

"The Midnight Burglar" (Oakdale).

Gloria Joy makes her fourth appearance in an Oakdale production in "The Midnight Burglar." It presents the little star in perhaps the most sympathetic and appealing role in which she has yet appeared, and is expected by General Film to duplicate the success won by the earlier subjects. Neil Hardin, Ethel Ritchie, Ruth Lackaye, Charles Dudley, Daniel Gilfether, Frank Erlanger, and other well known players appear with Gloria Joy. Bert Ensminger directed.

Two more Oakdale productions are promised, making a total of six to comprise the present series. For a newcomer little Gloria is reported to be making good beyond expectations.

Eight Fox Productions in Work, East and West

WITH announcement that William Farnum has begun work at Hollywood on "The Man of Power," the Fox Film Corporation points to eight companies now at work.

Besides the Farnum picture, those being made in the west are "The She-Devil," which is nearing completion under the direction of J. Gordon Edwards, and "The Two-Gun Man," which Tom Mix and his company are filming at Prescott, Ariz., under the direction of Lynn Reynolds. Gladys Brockwell has just completed the filming of "The Strange Woman," the picture version of the famous stage play of the same name which was written by William J. Hurlbut.

In the east, George Walsh, under the direction of his brother, R. A. Walsh, has begun work at the Eclair studio, Fort Lee, on "How Do You Get that Way?" a breezy, patriotic play. Director Richard Stanton has begun work on "Eyes of the Soul," an all-star production, and another company has started on a big picture. Peggy Hyland is progressing rapidly toward the completion of "Marriages Are Made," and Jane and Katherine Lee, under the direction of Arvid E. Gillstrom, are at work at the Victor studio on "Go Get Em." Virginia Pearson has finished "Queen of Hearts," under the direction of Edmund Lawrence.

Press Book for "His Birthright."

Mutual is issuing a complete and comprehensive press book on "His Birthright," first of the series of Haworth Pictures Corporation's Hayakawa specials. It will conform to the Mutual policy of extending every possible aid to the exhibitor in the exploitation of Mutual productions. The press book will contain every detail essential to the exhibitor in advertising and presenting the picture, from musical theme, especially prepared, to sample newspaper advertisements.

The press book will be printed in two colors and bound in a brown cover. It will be available to exhibitors at the Mutual branches.

Pathe Complimented on Poster.

The Metropolitan Museum of Art has passed an unsolicted comment on Pathe's 24 sheet exploiting its latest serial, "Hands Up," with Ruth Roland in the star role. The Metropolitan Museum of Art officials have requested Pathe for sample of this 24 sheet which is desired for the purpose of exhibition. The color scheme and pictorial are highly complimented. These 24 sheets on "Hands Up," Pathe announces, are being posted in all principal cities from the Atlantic to the Pacific and they are certain to prove a valuable aid to exhibitors who book the serial.

"The Hun Within" and First Paramount-Artcraft Special

THE Famous Players-Lasky Corporation will release early in September a big Paramount-Artcraft special entitled, "The Hun Within," a photoplay of unusual excellence presenting such popular screen players as Dorothy Gish, George Fawcett, Douglas MacLean and others. Daily revelations in the newspapers of the country of the subtle influences of German propaganda and the effect of enemy work within our own borders which is being exposed by the Secret Service Department is the subject of this production.

The production has been carefully guarded for months in California, great secrecy was thrown around the cast and no information concerning it has appeared anywhere. It was staged under the direction of Chet Withey.

The story tells of a young American boy who returns to this country after an education in Germany, where the influences of autocracy have completely unbalanced him. He falls an easy prey to the machinations of German agents in America and plots with them against his own country despite the protestations of his father, who is German born but who is loyal to the Stars and Stripes.

Dorothy Gish has a splendid role. George Fawcett plays the part of the old German-American who is loyal to the United States.

The subject is the first of the nine big Paramount-Artcraft Specials to be released during the coming year starting September 1.

Outing Editor Discusses Value of Chester Pictures

Albert Britt, editor of Outing, discussing the value of the Outing-Chester travel series as an educational and inspiration feast for lovers of the great outdoors, refers to them as affording sportsmen and lovers of camp life the most complete compendium of useful information ever assembled in any form.

"Nearly every man and nearly every woman in whom exists the spirit of adventure loves to go camping," said Mr. Britt. "In the Outing-Chester pictures there is shown at close range just what to do in every camp emergency, and, better still, just how to do it. Many persons believe that to build a camp-fire it is only necessary to drag a few sticks together, but actually camp-fire building is an art requiring experience. Any spectator of the Outing-Chester pictures who is a close observer may learn how to make camp, how to build a fire, how to cook, how to pack camp dunnage, and, generally speaking, get an education in outdooring."

The forthcoming releases of Outing-Chesters include "Pines Up and Palms Down,' an expedition into the wild pine and river country of the French-Canadian habitat—a land of camping and canoeing, of big moose and elk and wild game of all sorts, together with a contrasting journey through the palm-fringed Everglades of Florida, with alligators in full view and close up, snapping their great jaws and swirling their muscular tails.

Exceptional Pulling Power Sought by Goldwyn Posters

GOLDWYN has provided twenty-four-sheets of exceptional pulling power for the first six productions under the company's new Star Series booking plan. Special attention has been given "star personality" and the new twenty-four-sheets are arranged with a large and striking head of the star at the left end of each stand. Plain, striking lettering is used and it is of such mammoth size that the title of the picture and name of its star may be seen and read blocks away. Large portraits of the star fill the entire end of the stand and at the right end of each stand there is a frame to hold a six-sheet of the production. This six-sheet is the regular six of the production paper, to be inserted. Beautiful color schemes add to the effectiveness of the stands and the general combination is one that cannot help attract attention and admiration.

Goldwyn always has regarded its advertising paper as one of the most essential factors toward box-office success. In the last year exhibitors have commented on the class and quality of Goldwyn stands. With the adoption of the new Star Series policy the company determined to give its customers paper that would fully measure up to the high quality of the pictures themselves.

Goldwyn exchanges are now supplied with the new twenty-four-sheets and Goldwyn has extended a special invitation to exhibitors to call at the various branches and inspect this individualized paper. Some who already have seen it declare it is the most striking and beautiful in the market.

Bridegrooms Get Mixed in L-KO.

There is an interesting scene of bridegroom mixing in "Her Whirlwind Wedding," the L-KO comedy released by Universal September 4. It's as much as the eyes can do to keep up with the action as the two men who seek the same girl are switched back and forth in the wedding scene.

The cast is made up of Bob Mackenzie as the farmer; Chester Ryckman, his "eddicated" son; Porter Strong as Hector Hoot, Harry Loraine as Mr. Succotash, and Eva Novak as Sally Succotash.

First Schomer Production Will Be "Ruling Passions"

THE final scenes in the new photo-drama by Abraham S. Schomer, author of "To-Day," "The Yellow Passport," "The Inner Man," etc., are now being directed by its author. It will be released by the Schomer Photoplay Producing Company, Inc., of 1440 Broadway, under the title of "Ruling Passions," a name which indicates the theme selected for the new play.

In "Ruling Passions" Mr. Schomer deals with the elemental forces which impel human action. Directing the play with the same painstaking care that marks his writings, giving to each scene the full measure of his thought and ability, Mr. Schomer is said to have succeeded in telling his story in the forcible yet simple way that means entertainment in its highest degree and instruction in its highest form.

"Each one of my productions," Mr. Schomer declares in his announcement, "will be handled in a manner that will remove it as far as possible from the domain of machine-made pictures. We who write and direct should approach our work in a spirit of reverence and respect and with a resolve to give our utmost to the perfection of our labors. In my new play I have been splendidly aided by the hearty co-operation of Julia Dean, Edwin Arden, Claire Whitney and Earl Schenk, all of them artists and who have been untiring in their efforts and who have brought to their work not only great powers and ability, but a sincerity and will that have been more than pleasant to witness."

"Ruling Passions" will be released upon a state right basis, the Schomer Photoplay Producing Company, Inc., handling the New York territory through its own exchange at 1440 Broadway.

Tourneur a Firm Believer In Element of Surprise

MAURICE TOURNEUR, whose first independent production, "Sporting Life," will be released early in September through Hiller & Wilk, Inc., has a profound belief in the element of surprise as a factor in film success.

"Let audiences come to the theatre expectant, give them everything they expect—and a whole lot more," is M. Tourneur's axiom of success. "I am applying this idea to my first independent production, 'Sporting Life.' This Drury Lane melodrama is a romance of the turf, revolving around the annual British sporting classic, the Derby. All our press material and announcements concern themselves with these essential facts. I do not believe in telling the whole screen story, incident by incident. The whole element of surprise is immediately removed.

"Remember the expectancy with which you used to watch a stage melodrama," continues M. Tourneur. "That was due to the fact that the stage producers did not show every card. Many film producers have obliterated this persisting in telling everything ahead. All this is destroying screen interest. With 'Sporting Life' I am not telling the incidents, twists of plot or surprises. I want audiences to come expectant and go away pleasantly surprised, if possible. I trust that exhibitors will help me in my campaign to put surprise back into the film play.

"I fear for the photoplay unless we jealously guard this element of surprise. Let exhibitors watch their announcements, newspaper and program, and make careful use of stills so that the punch is not removed from a forthcoming production. Now, more than ever before, with the tragedies and complications of war facing us in every day life, must we grasp and hold an audience's interest. And the exhibitor must help the producer."

Elaborate Exploitation Campaign for "Mickey"

W. H. PRODUCTION COMPANY announce that simultaneous with the first release of "Mickey" on Broadway, New York, five prominent music concerns will launch their campaigns in connection with this picture, full details being published in this issue in department headed "Music for the Picture."

In addition, an elaborate twenty-four page campaign book in colors has been prepared on this production, covering every angle, and having portions devoted to its humor, pathos, adventure, and love. Other portions deal with advertising matter, posters, heralds, slides, newspaper advertisements, etc., with several pages devoted to special exploitation for exhibitors.

The W. H. Productions Company also announces that they will go a step further in the preparation of advertising matter. When required, for certain localities, special campaigns will be prepared to suit local requirements, so as to help each exhibitor to secure maximum results; and special service campaigns will be instituted when the picture is released in the first run theatres, so that exhibitors in every section may know how this production is being handled.

Several prominent exhibitors in different sections of the country have made direct inquiries to W. H. Productions for bookings, and in a number of instances have arranged to double or triple the number of days originally desired.

Gaumont News Reel Shows Woman's War Relief Work

GAUMONT GRAPHIC No. 20, released August 9, is about equally divided between news events of this country and Europe. The news from "over there" shows the opening of the American Officers' Club, in London; the inspection by the King and Queen of England of a big uniform factory, and the Women's Ambulance Corps; the honoring of Lieutenant-Aviator Fonck, who has won his fortieth air victory over the Huns; and many scenes showing the activities of the American soldiers. From "over here," we get pictures showing the launching of another destroyer; a demonstration of farm tractors and the means used by society favorites to raise money for war needs.

Gaumont News No. 21, released August 13, shows the work of the women of the national capital who have volunteered for war relief work. Mr. Thos. F. Walsh, Washington, D. C., asks for contributions of old gloves, or any other articles of wearing apparel, which will be useful in clothing those who have been impoverished by the war. The scenes show how shirts are made into dresses, and old stockings into warm jackets, the knitting of socks and sweaters from recovered yarn, and the making of aviators' jackets from old gloves. The first pictures of our soldiers wounded in the second battle of the Marne, who are rapidly recovering in this country, are also shown in this issue.

Other pictures show how the United States has made certain a sufficient supply of castor oil for airplane motors; the new dental car for army use; the making of toys by crippled French soldiers; how the Red Cross is salvaging waste material; and the launching of the "Invincible," in the record-breaking time of twenty-four days after the keel was laid.

Perret Completes "Lafayette, We Come"

The first offering of Leonce Perret Productions, "Lafayette, We Come" (Pershing '17), is fully completed, including cutting and titling, and Director and Mrs. Perret will enjoy a vacation of several weeks before beginning work on the second productions, which it is expected will be made on the Pacific coast. Dolores Cassinelli and E. K. Lincoln, who co-starred in "Lafayette, We Come" (Pershing '17), have been re-engaged for the leading roles in the new production.

Several Territory Sales on Gaumont Serial Announced

THE GAUMONT COMPANY is congratulating itself because it has succeeded within a short time in selling its new photo-serial, "The Hand of Vengeance," to hustling states-right buyers in various sections of the country.

It will be ready for exhibitors to begin showing about September 1, and distribution rights have been secured by the following independent exchanges: Louis Mayer and N. H. Gordon, Globe Feature Film Corporation, Boston, Mass., for the New England States. Rowland and Clark, First National Exhibitors Exchange, Pittsburgh, Pa., for Western Pennsylvania and West Virginia. Sidney B. Lust, Super-Film Attractions, Inc., Washington, D. C., for Delaware, Maryland, Virginia and the District of Columbia. R. M. Savini, Savini Films, Inc., Atlanta, Ga., for North and South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, and Northern Alabama. W. B. Towne, Hodupp-Towne Photoplay Co., St. Louis and Kansas City, Mo., for Missouri and Kansas. Joe L. Friedman, Celebrated Players Film Corporation, Chicago, Ill., for Illinois, Indiana, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska and North and South Dakota. Sol Lesser, All Star Feature Distributors, Inc., San Francisco and Los Angeles, Cal., for California, Nevada and Arizona.

"The Hand of Vengeance" is said to be filled almost to overflowing with startling situations, daring escapades, thrilling dangers and ingenuous escapes. It is a clean, red-blooded photo-drama, and the many exchangemen, exhibitors and theatre-goers who have seen the first episodes say it will be a great money-maker.

Louis Burstein to Film Musical Comedy Success

LOUIS BURSTEIN, well known to the motion picture public through his association with the King Bee and Vim companies producing comedies, has secured through the Authors Associated Agency, motion picture rights to George W. Lederer's musical comedy success "The Telephone Girl."

Unlike a number of musical comedies, "The Telephone Girl" which served to inaugurate this form of stage entertainment in the United States, has a consistent story and is full of dramatic situations, and should therefore make an interesting picture.

This production will probably be made on the Pacific Coast, and it is planned to have the cast consist of well-known players, many of whom have an international reputation. A prominent director has been engaged, and the work will be personally supervised by Mr. Burstein.

Arrow Film Company Active in Disposing of Reissues

THE offices of the Arrow Film Corporation have been the scene of great activity within the past few days, and the explanation is now forthcoming in the list published below which indicates the closing of a number of contracts for territorial rights to the productions which this company is handling.

"The Perfect Model," a reissue of "Inspiration," to John R. Van Arnum for northern New York, to Southwestern Film Company for Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma; to Big Feature Rights Company, for Kentucky and Tennessee, to Harry Sanwick for greater New York, to R. M. Savini for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, North and South Carolina, and to Keystone Distributing Company for eastern Pennsylavania.

"Fools of Fate" to Day Film Company for western Pennsylvania, and to W. M. Sipe Film Co. for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina; four Allison-Lockwood reissues to Day Film Company for western Pennsylvania to Criterion Film Service for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina; to Big Feature Rights Company for Kentucky and Tennessee.

Twelve two-reel Anna Little western reissues to Criterion Film Service for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina. "The Finger of Justice" to Joseph Goodstein for Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico; to Ohio Ivan Film Service for Ohio; "The Sunset Princess" to W. N. Sipe Film Company for Georgia, Florida, Tennessee, North and South Carolina; to H. P. Wolfberg for western Pennsylvania; to Al Posen for northern New Jersey.

"Her Aviator" to W. N. Sipe Film Company for Georgia, Florida, Alabama, Tennessee, North and South Carolina. "My Husband's Friend" to Southwestern Film Company for Texas, Arkansas and Oklahoma, and to Big Feature Rights Company for Kentucky and Tennessee.

"Suspicion" Deals With War But Has No Battle Scenes

CONSIDERABLE interest has been aroused in film circles by the announcement of "Suspicion" as the first M. H. Hoffman release. The story is by Thomas Bedding, and Grace Davison is starred in the production. Details as to the theme have not yet been divulged and it is said that they will cause great surprise. While it is a war-time drama, there are no battle scenes, sufferings or horrors; but there is love, patriotism, Hun machinations against this country, and other ingredients which it is promised make up a swiftly moving drama of 1918.

In speaking of this production, which is in six-reels, Mr. Hoffman says: "I consider this the best picture I have ever handled, and believe both the title and story have great drawing power. Suspicion is widespread just now. We are all more or less under suspicion, and like the hero of this picture, it is up to us in these times to show that we are above suspicion, that we are loyal in heart and mind and soul."

Lesser Extends Operations to Six Additional States

SOL L. LESSER, the enterprising state right operator on the Pacific coast, is branching out and has recently acquired the franchise of State Right Distributors, Inc., for the states of Missouri, Kansas, Iowa, Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas. For the present the headquarters for this territory will be in Mr. Lesser's recently opened Chicago office, from which "Hearts of the World" is being distributed for the above and five additional states. However, it is Mr. Lesser's intention to operate permanently in the six states mentioned, and in addition he will still continue handling productions in the far western territory in which he has been so successful.

Film Market Reports Sales on First Hoffman Picture

DURING the past week The Film Market, Inc., the new international film clearing house organized by Robert W. Priest, began its career by acquiring the world rights to M. H. Hoffman's six-part serial feature "Suspicion," starring Grace Davison.

The New York state rights have been sold by The Film Market, Inc., to Hy Gainsborg, of the M. H. Hoffman Exchange, 729 Seventh avenue, and the New England rights to the Four Square Exchange, Boston.

The entire foreign rights have been acquired by Robertson-Col Company.

"Suspicion" is the first feature to be sold on the open market through this new selling organization.

The Film Market, Inc., during the past week, also sold to The African Films Trust twenty-two one-reel comedies of the Jaxon brand for South Africa, and the rights to "Her Moment," starring Anne Luther, for the same territory.

No Broadway Run for New "Maciste" Film, Says Raver

HARRY RAVER announces that when the 1918 "Maciste" production which for several months past has been in the course of preparation in Turin, Italy, makes its initial bow to the American public, it will not be through a run at a Broadway theatre. While Mr. Raver is the man who brought "Cabiria" to this country and presented it at high prices, and also some months ago introduced "The Warrior," starring Maciste in the same manner, he states "Now things are different; 'Maciste' is a recognized star and his productions are in demand. It would be a waste of good money to finance a Broadway run."

Actors' War Fund Film Will Be Distributed by Lesser

SOL L. LESSER has acquired state rights to the Actors' War Fund Association's single reel production entitled "How Stars Twinkle Away From the Studios" which was originally made for this association which was formed for the purpose of providing for wounded soldiers upon their return from the battle-front. Ten per cent of the receipts from this film will, through the Lesser plan of distribution be donated to the association.

Mr. Lesser and his colleagues are working eagerly on this new offering, and already, distribution has been arranged for through the following exchanges: Supreme Film Company, Minneapolis; Louis B. Mayer, Boston; Masterpiece Film Attractions, Cleveland; De Luxe Feature Film Company, Seattle; Dawn Masterplays, Detroit; and Supreme Photoplay Productions, Pittsburgh.

This picture contains views of about twenty-five well known motion picture stars, among whom are Mary Pickford, Clara Kimball Young, Mildred Harris, Charlie Chaplin, Douglas Fairbanks, Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray and Director David W. Griffith.

Title of Fifth Petrova Picture Again Changed

TITLE of the fifth special Petrova production, which will soon be released, has been changed from "The Tiger Woman" to "The Panther Woman." This production is an adaptation of Gertrude Atherton's well known novel, "Patience Sparhawk and Her Times," and was originally announced as "Patience Sparhawk," then changed to "The Tiger Woman." It was found, however, that this title had already been used for another production, hence the change to "The Panther Woman," under which title it is announced the picture will be shown. Ralph Ince directed the production.

Perret Co-operating with Lafayette Day Committee

IT is announced that at the request of Leonce Perret, the Lafayette League, which is conducting a national campaign to perpetuate General Pershing's speech at the tomb of Lafayette, "Lafayette, We Come!" is co-operating with the National Defense Society and the Lafayette Day National Committee toward insuring the success of the celebration of the anniversary of "Lafayette's birth, on September 6, and a number of men prominent in American civic and official life will take part in the celebration on that date.

Week's Grist From Hoosier News Hopper

Company Formed to Produce Feature Pictures at State Capital, Using Home Talent When Practicable—Other Items Cover State-Wide Interest.

By Indiana Trade News Service, 69 Layman Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind.

Plan Films With Local Talent.

INDIANAPOLIS.—A new film producing company, to be known as the Innosenza Film Company, was organized here this week with Brooks J. Hibbitt as president and general manager and Charlotte I. Daviess as vice-president. Both Mr. Hibbitt and Miss Daviess have played in pictures. The latter recently came to Indianapolis from the East, where she was appearing for the Pathe Company. The new firm, which will produce features in which local talent will be used as far as possible, has established temporary headquarters at 17 West Thirty-fifth street.

Elkhart Orpheum's New Owner.

Elkhart.—Allardt Brothers, lessees of the Orpheum theatre, has disposed of their lease to Ezra Rhodes, owner of the La Salle theatre, South Bend, and the latter will take charge of the Orpheum about September 15. The new proprietor has planned to close the theatre for a few weeks while extensive improvements are made in the interior. Although nothing definite could be learned as to what the future policy of the theatre will be, it is understood that a mixed bill of vaudeville and motion pictures is to be arranged.

Students Win As Exhibitors.

Bloomington.—Over $300 has been turned into the Indiana University War Fund as a result of the net proceeds obtained from the receipts at the motion picture theatre conducted at the Student building, on the university campus, during the summer months. The show was closed down the first of the week and will remain closed until school opens in the fall.

Showing Them What They Own.

Terre Haute.—Approximately 450 stockholders and friends of the management of the new Terre Haute theatre, which has been built at Eighth street and Wabash avenue, were entertained at a luncheon at the Hotel Deming last week by F. H. Gruenberg, of Chicago, president of the Terre Haute Theatre Co., and his son, F. H. Gruenberg, Jr.

The guests were taken on a tour of inspection throughout the new building. Workmen are now putting on the finishing touches and it is the aim of the management to have the opening about the first week in September. The theatre is one of the most up-to-date and well-appointed theatres in the state. The second floor contains rest rooms for women, lounging rooms for employes and offices for manager and his assistants.

Everything is Rosy.

Marion.—Inspiring war news, cool weather, excellent wheat harvest, good outlook for a bumper corn crop and a great variety of better-than-usual shows combine in making the past week a very prosperous one for local motion picture exhibitors. With one of the theatres, the Royal-Grand, closed for redecoration, the three that were open had overflowing crowds.

In Her Own Home Town.

Indianapolis.—An Indianapolis actress graced the Circle theatre screen the first half of the week in a photoplay that proved to be one of the most interesting films that has been shown here this season. The star was Grace Valentine, and the play was "The Unchastened Woman." The showing of the picture was attended by unusually large crowds despite the fact that the mercury was up to the 103 mark.

Theatre Again in Commission.

Bluffton.—The Gaiety Theatre Co., operating the Grand theatre, which was damaged by fire a few months ago and now almost ready to be reopened, has booked a musical comedy attraction for the formal opening. The next attraction will be Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany," which will be exhibited on October 1, 2 and 3. Motion pictures and vaudeville will be alternated after those dates.

Adding to His Holdings.

Lafayette.—H. H. Hornback, of Monticello, Ind., has purchased from J. W. Boes the Lyric theatre, in this city, the consideration being $5,000. The new owner will take possession soon. He is the son of H. K. Hornback, a banker at Monon, and is buying up a string of motion picture theatres over the state. Mr. Boes will leave next week for a two weeks' vacation in St. Louis and other points.

"Pershing's Crusaders" Victorious.

Lafayette.—Capacity crowds attended the showing of the first of the official war films, "Pershing's Crusaders," at the Luna theatre, on the nights of August 12, 13, 14 and 15. The picture gave to the people of Lafayette their initial opportunity to grasp their first full idea of the achievement which places America in the front line of activities in the war. Manager Maurice was well pleased with the way Lafayette people turned out to view the films.

Another Liberty Theatre?

Indianapolis.—A Liberty theatre may be established at Fort Benjamin Harrison, the army post about ten miles north of here, according to an announcement made this week by Thomas P. Smith, district director for the War Department Commission on Training Camp Activities, who was here in conference with Col. R. S. Thomas, post commander. Mr. Smith said that the Government is now operating more than thirty theatres. In the past the soldiers stationed at Fort Harrison have been regular customers at the downtown motion picture shows—about the only form of amusement in Indianapolis during the summer months.

Machine Operators Scarce.

Elkhart.—Ralph Schlessner, manager of the Hippodrome, closed the theatre this week and announced that it will remain closed until he is able to procure a competent picture machine operator. Practically all of those following that vocation in Elkhart are of draft age and have either entered or are planning to enter the army or navy.

Theatre Has New Owner.

Goshen.—James Bourcas, former manager and owner of the Irwin theatre, in this city, and who has been operating a motion picture theatre in Warsaw for the last several months, has disposed of his interests to Edward Reuber, of Ligonier. Possession was given this week by Mr. Bourcas.

Nothing Like a Vacation.

Hammond.—James Wang Michelstetter, manager of the Orpheum theatre, will spend the remainder of the summer months on his farm at Port Washington, Wis. During his absence the theatre is being manager by his brother, Charles.

Labor Propaganda Film.

Huntington.—Z. T. Dungan, chairman of the farm labor reserve committee, has been notified that the motion picture film of the labor reserve, taken in Huntington recently, was a success and soon will be released by the Universal company. The pictures will be exhibited in Huntington theatres shortly.

Louisville Theatres in New Campaign.

The Louisville moving picture theatres will shortly aid in a new campaign in which four-minute speakers will be utilized in an effort to mobilize American industries and arrange for labor supplies for concerns working on essential war orders. This work will be handled in connection with the United States Employment Service Bureau.

Buffalo Citizens Awake to Patriotic Appeals

Lafayette Square Becomes Scene of Recruiting Drives for Marines and Sale of War Savings Stamps in Which Picture Interests Play Important Part.

By Joseph A. McGuire, 216 Carolina street, Buffalo, N. Y. Telephone, Tupper 1276-J.

Big Boost for W. S. S.

A PATRIOTIC rally to help the sale of W. S. Stamps was held at Lafayette Square, Buffalo, recently under the auspices of Local No. 233 of the Moving Picture Operators' Union of Buffalo. The arrangements were made by D. L. Martin representing that organization. There was music and speeches, the entire programme being of a patriotic nature. The film shown included those taken at the time when Glen Gaskill of this city made a speech from a lion's cage at a similar rally at the same location. City Councilman Malone had arranged for the erection of a suitable platform for the moving picture men. The lights in the vicinity of the square were dimmed so the pictures could be seen. Many thrift and war saving stamps were sold.

"The Unbeliever" Wins Recruits.

The U. S. Marines recruiting drive, in which the George Kleine production, "The Unbeliever," played a prominent part, closed here recently and was a marked success from every viewpoint. Sergt. Robert C. Graham, who delivered several lectures in connection with "The Unbeliever," was the promoter of the campaign. In connection with the event he "planted" several columns of good copy in the local and nearby newspapers. Nearly 1200 recruits were secured. The rallies were held at Lafayette Square, where "Col." Lillian Russell and Fay Templeton, famous stage stars, sang and spoke in a patriotic strain and aroused the enthusiasm of their audiences to the highest pitch. Newspapers have been persuaded and assisted by Sergt. Graham in getting out five different marine corps sections in this district.

Booking Keystone Reissues.

Manager Montgomery of the Triangle, Buffalo, reports that sixteen Keystone reissues, the majority featuring Mabel Normand and Fatty Arbuckle, are being booked rapidly in many of the best houses in this territory. The reissues are two, three and four reels in length.

E. O. Weinberg, Patriot.

E. O. Weinbeg, manager of the Elmwood moving picture theatre, Buffalo, is devoting plenty of space in his programme to deliver patriotic messages to his audiences. This week he is using the familiar cut showing an American soldier casting a Hun opponent into the Rhine.

Mr. Weinberg's caption for the drawing is: "Put the Boche where he belongs. Food will do it. Eat less. Send more across."

Buffalo Picture Men Loom Large.

Edward L. Hyman, who has been appointed head of the moving picture division for all the Liberty theatres throughout the United States, recently visited his home in Buffalo. He was the manager of the Victoria moving picture theatre here for three years. He is enthusiastic over the work in the camps and is particularly observant of the wonderful effect that proper amusement has upon the minds and morals of the men.

Mr. Hyman is assisted by Matt. Whitman, former manager of the Allendale moving picture theatre, this city. Whitman is stationed at Atlanta, Ga., and is known as the southeastern representative. Hyman, whose headquarters are at 1520 Broadway, New York City, went to Washington four months ago as a member of a quartermaster's reserve corps.

He enlisted as manager of a Liberty theatre, being placed in charge of the one at Camp Wheeler, Macon, Ga. He later was transferred to the government's large theatre at Camp Gordon, Atlanta, Ga. His duties there included the selection of moving picture programmes for nine other southeastern camps. This promotion was followed, after three weeks, by his latest appointment.

Faithfully Observing "Lightless."

Buffalo exhibitors are closely observing the latest "lightless order" covering Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evening of each week. Shortly after the order was first issued it was found that some of the local moving picture theatres had a few canopy or door lights outside. The proprietors were duly warned by Howard A. Foreman, Erie County fuel administrator, and thereafter they strictly observed the ruling. The staff of the local fuel office is not large enough to make a thorough inspection of the theatres and other places of business each night and is therefore aided in this work by members of the police department.

Foiling the Speculators.

Dr. P. C. Cornell, manager of the Majestic theatre, Buffalo, which showed "Hearts of the World," gave out the following "Open letter to the people of Buffalo" shortly before the opening date of that attraction:

"As ticket speculators have already started their work of sending messengers to the box office of the Majestic, it has become necessary to establish a rule that not more than six tickets will be sold to any one purchaser without credentials. D. W. Griffith, producer of 'Hearts of the World,' has telegraphed from Los Angeles, requesting that this ruling be made in justice to all patrons who attend one or more performances during the Buffalo engagement."

Despite the heat the film attracted crowded houses at every performance.

Theatre Has Local "Weekly."

Through an arrangement between the Strand moving picture theatre, Buffalo, and the Evening News of this city all events of local interest will be shown in pictures on the Strand screen. The service will be called the News-Strand Local Events. The first pictures of the service showed the recent rescue of James H. Harris and Gustave Lofbery near the brink of Niagara Falls. The News-Strand camera car was on the scene at the Falls shortly after news of the breaking away of the scow, on which were the two men, reached Buffalo. The views included the scow anchored on the rocks above the falls, the rapids and the cataract.

Films to "Save-a-Life."

Educational moving pictures will be shown at a series of band concerts in this city. The purpose of the films is to arouse interest in the child welfare campaign now under way in Buffalo and which throughout the United States is expected to save the lives of at least 100,000 babies during the coming year. Councilman Malone of Buffalo, who is providing the pictures, announces that while the films are being shown appropriate lullabies will be played by the band.

Cleveland Correspondence

By M. A. Malaney, 606 Belmont Building, Cleveland, O.

Film Exchanges Moving 'Round.

THE Fox exchange in Cleveland, now located on the fourth floor of the Belmont building, will soon move to the second floor, where it will occupy the entire area.

The Mutual exchange, now occupying the second floor of this building, will move into the quarters vacated by Fox.

The Kleine exchange has moved its offices into larger quarters on the fifth floor of the Sincere building.

Stars Shine in Charity Film.

"How Stars Twinkle Away From the Studios" is the title of a one-reel picture received by the Masterpiece Exchanges in Cleveland and Cincinnati. It has several stars in it, including Mary Pickford, Dorothy Dalton, Charles Ray, Fannie Ward. This picture is being rented for the benefit of the fund being raised for actors who are wounded in the war.

Boosting for War Slides.

Sam Bullock, secretary of the Cleveland Exhibitors' League, has sent a notice to theatres, pointing out that war slides and trailers will be put out by the government regularly and that it is the duty of every exhibitor to use them.

Promise of Wage Compromise.

That there will be a compromise wage scale agreed upon for operators of Cleveland theatres is indicated by the joint meeting of operators' committee and a committee from the Exhibitors' League. The committees expect to have one more meeting before September 1, when the scale will be settled.

Personal Mention.

W. K. Allen, well known roadman for the Standard Film service, is in Cleveland, filling in on Harry Hayman's job, while Hayman is on a vacation.

Lou Greenstein, former official of the Standard Film service, is in Cleveland for a ten days' furlough. Lou is now a sergeant, and is located at Camp Meigs.

Dayton Makes Report

By Paul J. Gray, Dayton Theatre Building, Dayton, O.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made last week that all the important officials of the Aircraft Board are to make their headquarters in Dayton, and a new building that is being erected will be turned over to the government for their use. The coming of the Aircraft Board to Dayton will bring many new people to this city and it is though that the theatres will be helped considerably.

Business Good, Heat Considered.

Programs in Dayton theatres afford variety of entertainment. Film houses here offered a bit of variety in the way of pictures here last week and all did good considering the terrific heat with which the Gem City has been "afflicted" for some time past.

The Dayton offered Taylor Holmes in

"A Pair Of Sixes." The Strand presented "Hit The Trail Holliday," a la temperance, with George M. Cohan distributing the Bevo. The Columbia offered Charles Ray in a "Nine O'Clock Town."

Sam Sax Carries "Bread" to Dayton.

Samuel Sax, manager of the Universal Exchange, Cincinnati, tripped through dear old Dayton town last week. Sam brought Universal's latest Mary MacLaren film entitled "Bread" for screening purposes. In spite of the name Sam states that many "loafed" around to see it when screened, although it didn't cost any "dough." Bert Fiala of the Alhambra theatre ventured the suggestion that if Mr. Baker (Goldwyn salesman) would take out the film what an appropriate thing it would be. Mr. Sax while in Dayton made arrangements for co-operation with all the leading bakers of the Gem City to the end that the film should get the "dough."

Specials Coming to the Dayton.

Managing Director Mark Gates of the Dayton theatre announced last week that Cleopatra, with Theda Bara, had been booked for early showing at the Dayton. He also said that Hewit Thomas, musical director of the Dayton, was already working on a music score for the showing that would put the picture over with a wallop. Mr. Thomas' work is well known throughout Ohio and many visit the Dayton to hear the symphony orchestra under his direction.

Mark Gates also said that "Tarzan Of The Apes" was booked for the Dayton, as well as "Les Miserables," with William Farnum.

Pittsburgh Paragraphs

By E. J. McGurty, 455 Union Arcade, Pittsburgh, Pa.

World Man Goes "Over There."

HENRY REICH, JR., who formerly handled the news for the World in Pittsburgh, has left for France with the first Radio detachment to be sent out of the country. He was in training in Pittsburgh for about four months and then went with a picked group to Camp Merritt, N. J. Within a short time after enlistment he became a corporal, and has steadily advanced in the service. He wishes his former friends and acquaintances in film circles the best of everything and expects to return some day to take up his regular work.

Film Man Joins the Host.

Another film man who recently sent word from "over there" is Art Meyers, who formerly traveled for Grelle in the territory. After some time in training at Great Lakes, he was sent across and can now be reached at the following address: Corp. Arthur Meyers, Company D, 32 Engineers, American Expedionary Forces, France.

Change in Leader Service.

The Leader Film Service has been purchased by the Steinberg Bros., one of them, Max, having been with Hollis & Smith for some time. They are acquiring new features of a State-right nature and expect to be in a position to supply exhibitors with pictures of more than ordinary merit within a few weeks. The former owner is said to have gone into the auto-truck line. The Steinberg Bros. are located in the Sauer Bldg., at 804 Penn Ave.

Adding to Their String.

The opera house at Johnsonburg, which was owned by George Long, has been added to the circuit of McCartney & Johnson, of Punxsutawney, Pa. The new proprietors have recently purchased the Jefferson theatre at Punxsutawney and the opera house at Ridgway, Pa., the latter having also been owned by Mr. Long at one time.

Theatre Manager Joins Colors.

Manager Flarity of the Columbia theatre has gone to war, and his position is filled by Mr. Harris, who has been connected with the theatre for some time.

It Don't Pay to Flout U. S. Lightless Rules

Philadelphia Theatre Manager Gives Red Cross "Half-a-Hundred" Because He Ignored Fuel Administration's Edict, and Promises to Be Good.

By F. V. Armato, 144 North Salford St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Red Cross Enriched.

HARRY RUSH, manager of the Fifty-sixth theatre, 56th and Delancy streets, was accused last week of showing outside lights in violation of regulations and after thinking the matter over, decided to comply with the decision of the County Fuel Administration and turned over $50 to the Red Cross. The County Fuel Administration issued further explanation of its ruling on "Lightless nights." No illumination of any description is allowed in jewelry store windows or on fruit stands, peanut stands, or in other stalls outside of buildings. In regard to moving picture places surroundings are taken into account. If there are municipal lights directly in front of the theatre, few lights will be permitted on the property other than those absolutely necessary for safety.

"America's Answer" Enthuses.

Great enthusiasm marked the opening presentation of "America's Answer," the United States official war film, at the Forrest theatre last week. The entire house for the initial showing here was taken over by John Wanamaker Store, the occasion being termed Wanamaker Patriotic Night, and the large theatre was packed from top to bottom with singing cheering employers of the big department store. Albert N. Hoxi, who has been leading the Marines in singing at League Island, took charge of the vocal part of the programme, and before the house was darkened for the pictures, led the large crowd in singing. The pictures depicted all the stirring details of American military efficiency.

"The Great Love" Liked.

D. W. Griffith's initial Artcraft release entitled "The Great Love" made its local premiere at the Arcadia theatre last Monday, August 12, and was highly lauded by both the press and the public.

Getting Ready to Open.

George W. Metzel, manager of the William Penn theatre, is making preparations for the opening of the new season with vaudeville and photoplays. The Stanley Booking Corporation will furnish the pictures for an early showing. Beginning Monday, August 26, "To Hell With the Kaiser," will be presented.

Talmadge Film Holds Over.

"The Safety Curtain" in which Norma Talmadge made a decided hit at the Stanley theatre upon its opening presentation, August 12, will be continued throughout the week. Frank W. Buhler, managing director of the Stanley and Central Market street theatres paid a fine compliment to "Smiling Bill" Parsons in the Capitol comedy which was also shown at the Stanley last week by remarking that it was "prolific of clean wholesome laughs and exceptionally up-to-the-minute."

The Psychology of Bonuses.

George Ames, manager of the Pathe Exchange, announces he anticipates an enormous amount of business in their next serial entitled "Hands Up" in which Ruth Roland will have the leading role, not only on account of the previous successes heretofore experienced on all of Pathe's serials but also due to the generous bonus in which all of the salesmen will participate to stimulative early bookings.

Help Is Scarce.

Many theatres in this city are experiencing considerable annoyance in not being able to secure any amount of adequate help throughout the house and many managers have had to give a good bit more than their regular services in order to keep their theatres looking smart and tidy.

Things Look Cheerful.

J. Blumberg of the United Theatres Equipment Association has just returned from his vacation and is looking forward to a prosperous season. During the past few weeks several Power motor driven machines have been sold to several of the leading theatres of the city.

Edwin Williams, Attention!

Lew Williams, assistant manager of the Family theatre, is anxious to hear from his brother Edwin who is supposed to be managing a theatre in San Francisco, California, and from whom he has not heard for over nineteen years. If his brother should happen to see this article he will be able to get into communication with Lew by addressing him at the Family theatre, 1329 Market st., Philadelphia, Pa. San Francisco newspapers and correspondents please copy.

By the Sad Sea Waves.

Mark Swaab, junior manager of the Lewis M. Swaab Supply House, has left for Atlantic City, where he will spend his vacation during the next week. His assistants Harry and "Doc" in the meanwhile are exerting every effort to get their orders for Simplex machines filled and delivered to the various theatres in order to relieve the congestion in the show rooms.

New Theatres to Open.

Cliff Stuart is building a new theatre in Brighton, Mich., to be known as the Rialto. It will open about the middle of August.

It looks as if the De Luxe theatre, Kercheval and Parkview, Detroit, will not open before the early part of November. There have been many unforeseen delays of materials.

The Lincoln Square theatre, Detroit, will open some time in September.

The Ferndale theatre, in Springwells, Detroit, is expected to open about the first of November.

Film Activities Throughout Great Dominion

Canadian Showmen Doing Big Things in Big Way With Feature Promotion and Profiting Accordingly—All Set for Annual Toronto Exposition.

By W. M. Gladish, 33 Mineva Avenue, Tor onto, Can.

Prepare for Gala Event.

TORONTO exhibitors, large and small, have once more arranged to put on a good front for the annual Canadian National Exhibition which is to be held in Toronto this year from August 26 to September 7. Local theatre managers yearly cater to the thousands of out-of-town visitors who take in Canada's large exposition by booking special productions and adding extra attractions. The two weeks of the annual fair are invariably two of the best weeks of the whole twelve months. Incidentally, the big local event is used by exhibitors as the opening period for the fall and winter season at their houses. New policies are advertised and frequently new brands of pictures are shown for the first time.

The Regent theatre, Toronto, is already inviting visitors from outside centres to attend a matinee performance in the cool and comfortable theatre and suggests to local hostesses that an enjoyable few hours may be spent at the Regent with guests.

Manager Roland Roberts of the Regent has announced that his special attraction for the first week of the Canadian National Exhibition will be the first of a series of Screen Classics, "To Hell With the Kaiser." This feature will probably be shown during the second week also.

Jules and J. J. Allen have arranged to present "Hearts of the World" in Massey Hall, the large local auditorium, during the two weeks of the fair, after the picture has played at the Allen theatre for four solid weeks. The Allen theatre will revert to a normal policy with the opening of the Exposition.

Manager Clarence Robson of the Strand theatre is also making special preparations to draw and handle large crowds during the Fair weeks.

Cohen Again Opens Exchange.

Arthur Cohen, proprietor of the Globe and U-Kum theatres, Toronto, has arranged to re-enter the film exchange business in Toronto. Mr. Cohen was formerly actively engaged with Globe Films, Limited, and controlled Paralta Plays, Billy West Comedies and a number of State Right features in Canada. Paralta releases were distributed during the past year by Regal Films, Limited, although Mr. Cohen retained control of the Paralta franchise. This arrangement has been discontinued and Mr. Cohen is resuming active interest in the exchange field.

Among the special attractions which Mr. Cohen has controlled in Canada are "The Warrior," "Lust of the Ages," "The Spoilers," "Redemption," "Birth," etc.

Griffith Feature In Demand.

"Hearts of the World" will be the opening attraction in at least three of the new moving pictures theatres in Canada controlled by Jules and J. J. Allen of Toronto. The Allens have secured six prints for Canada and two are to be held in reserve for emergency or future use. One print is now being used in a six weeks' run in the Allen theatre, Toronto, and Massey Hall, Toronto. A second print will be used for the opening of the new Allen theatre in Westmount, Quebec, on September 16. A third will be shown as the opening feature for the new Allen theatre in Edmonton, Alberta, and the fourth print will be started at the new Allen theatre in Regina, Saskatchewan. The houses at Edmonton and Regina are scheduled to open in September.

According to an announcement, "Hearts of the World" will be presented at each of the new Allen theatres at advanced prices, evening prices ranging up to $1.50. The runs at the various houses will be for two weeks at least. The Temple theatre, Hamilton, and the Majestic theatre, London, will have the Toronto print of the picture after the Toronto engagement terminates on September 14. Allen's Regent theatre, Ottawa, will get the Montreal print after the run at the new Allen theatre, Westmount. The Allens have twenty-one theatres in Canada and each of these houses will get the picture for an extended engagement before the feature is really placed "on the road."

Fine Point on Reserving Seats.

At the end of the second week's run at the Allen theatre, Toronto, Jules Allen admitted that a mistake had been made in reserving all seats of the theatre for every performance. It was pointed out that many people who could afford the best seats were reserving the cheaper seats in advance and patrons of moderate means were compelled at the last minute to pay more than their share in order to see the production. In view of this condition, the Allens decided to place 400 seats of the cheaper prices on sale immediately before each performance.

"This detail is one big thing that we have learned," admitted Mr. Allen, "and I do not mind telling other exhibitors about it."

Giving Wounded a Treat.

One hundred and twenty-five officials, managers and employes of Jules and J. J. Allen in Toronto, went holidaying to Whitby, thirty miles away, on Sunday, August 11, for the purpose of entertaining several hundred convalescing warriors in the Whitby Military Hospital. The large party made the trip in a cavalcade of automobiles and later in the day the thirty motor cars were used to take a large number of the returned heroes for a trip into the country.

One of the features of the programme was the presentation of "Hearts of the World" in the new and commodious moving picture theatre of the hospital. Musical accompaniment was played by the entire Allen theatre orchestra of thirty pieces. Incidentally, the man who projected the big picture at the hospital theatre was Mr. Barber, a returned soldier, who has charge of amusements for the patients. Mr. Barber took a course of instruction in moving picture projection under the auspices of the Canadian Soldiers' Re-Education Commission and served his apprenticeship at the Allen theatre, Toronto, after which he became operator at the Whitby Hospital theatre. The Griffith production aroused intense interest.

During the afternoon the Allen Theatre Baseball Team played an exciting fixture with the Hospital Nine and nosed out a 14-11 victory in the eleventh inning. The soldiers led up to the eighth inning. The soldiers weakened, the film swatters filled the bases, Walter Green came to bat and clouted out a three-bagger and the score became tied. Green is the publicity man of the Allen theatre.

During the evening the soldiers were also entertained by the rendering of several solos, Director Luigi Romanelli of the Allen theatre orchestra scoring a distinct hit with several violin specialties. Mrs. Stein also gave a pleasing vocal selection.

An interesting episode occurred when Major Archibald presented Messrs. Ben, Jules and J. J. Allen with a silver shield in behalf of the hospital patients in recognition and appreciation of the many favors which have been extended to the institution by the Allens during past months.

The Famous Players Film Service, Limited, Toronto, has donated the use of many recent releases for the entertainment of the convalescent soldiers.

William Cranston Joins the Allens.

William Cranston of Toronto, until recently the manager of the Basil Film Corporation, has become associated with Jules and J. J. Allen for the purpose of handling various important details in connection with the presentation of "Hearts of the World" in the many Allen theatres in Canada. The Basil Film Corporation formerly held the Canadian rights for "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance," which were recently secured by the Allens. Mr. Cranston will also attend to details in connection with the releasing of these features.

Interesting News "Shorts."

Three prints each of "The Birth of a Nation" and "Intolerance" have passed into the hands of Jules and J. J. Allen for release in Canada and starting in September these productions will be offered to Canadian exhibitors on a rental basis. Booking will be restricted to exhibitors who will charge a minimum admission of twenty-five cents. Both features have been presented in many theatres and as road shows under the management of William Cranston of Toronto.

"Cheating the Public," the Fox release, has been condemned by the Manitoba Board of Censors, according to an announcement by the Bijou theatre, Winnipeg, which had advertised the picture extensively as a coming attraction. The feature has already been shown in Ontario, British Columbia and elsewhere in the Dominion.

Charles L. Stevens, general manager of Superfeatures, Limited, Toronto, Montreal and other cities, has acquired the Canadian rights for "The Still Alarm." Mr. Stevens closed for this feature during a recent visit in New York City.

M. Brown and D. Cooper, who are associated with Superfeatures, Limited, have secured "Nine Tenths of the Law," for Canada. This feature will be released through Superfeatures, Limited.

"The Scorching Flame," a local five reel photoplay taken for the Montreal Firemen's Association by the Specialty Film Import, Limited, made such a hit at the Theatre Francais during the last week in July that it was repeated during the week of August 5. The picture replaced the annual amateur benefit performance and the fire-eaters made a lot of money out of the venture.

THE BEST "BUY" IN THE WORLD W.S.S.

Rochester Registers

By L. B. Skeffington, 61 Main St., East, Rochester, N. Y.

Flower City's Globe Trotter.

CHARLES J. ROSE, of the Pathe sales department, stopped in Rochester, on his way across the state in his high-powered buzz-wagon. Charlie always was in the habit of moving fast and since he got his latest car he has not changed any. At one time he was popularly known throughout this section as "General Rose," at that time being the representative of the General Film Company. Later he was with Pathe in the West, then came east first with Mutual and later joined Pathe again.

In his career in the theatrical and film business Mr. Rose has traveled in almost every section of the country, as well as having covered the principal points in the territories and Canada. He entered Alaska overland from Canada and worked his way down to the coast. Then, just to vary things he went to the Hawaiian Islands. He is considered an authority on certain problems in Alaska and has also been known to relate some wonderful alluring tales of the glistening sand beaches of Honolulu and of ukelele serenades under the soft rays of the Hawaiian moon.

Two Clever Slogans.

Slogans fit as well to the theatre as to anything else. Joe Stoffel, manager of the Grand, advertises that it is the place "Where Those Who Know Prefer to Go," while Manager Sanford, of the Princess, has decorated his section of the city with the legend that the Princess is "A Neighborhood House with a Down-Town Program."

She's Returning to Pictures.

Edna May Meisch, a Rochester girl, who as Edna Marn has won wide recognition on the speaking stage and in pictures, is visiting her parents in this city at 1254 Clinton avenue, North. During the past season she appeared as Angelina in John Cort's "Flo Flo." She will shortly enter the picture field again.

Chowder Party for the Movies.

The Moo Goo Guy Gang, an organization of the local journalistic fraternity, held an outing at Moss Park last Saturday and among other things posed for some original moving pictures, which will be shown in a local theatre.

Theatres Are Safe and Sane.

A representative of the Commission on Training Camp Activities was in town last week, looking over the means of amusement and relaxation afforded soldiers stationed at the Kodak Park School of Aerial Photography, the Flying School and the Mechanic Training School. His report gives proper credit to the local theatres, says that they are safe and proper places for Uncle Sam's men and also acknowledges special favors which certain theatres grant to the men in the service.

Three News Items.

The Rialto and the Family played to capacity most of the time this week with "To Hell with the Kaiser" as the attraction.

Basil Brady, local Pathe representative, has signed up half a dozen houses for Pathe's latest serial, "Hands Up," and has begun a local publicity campaign, after which he says he will be ready to pick off a few more bookings .

East Rochester, formerly known as Despatch, is now on the theatre map with some splendid attractions at the Rialto. The Allied war pictures are the latest features to be signed by this house.

Neosho Falls, Kan.—John T. Minton has taken the management of the Gem theatre.

Stillwell, Okla.—Dad Walker, of Siloam Springs, opened the moving picture show again at the Grand theatre, July 25. He installed a new moving picture machine.

Bumper Crops Bring Joy to Wheat Belt

Many Theatres in "The Bread Basket" Abandon Summer Darkness to Garner Coin That Has Begun to Flow—Others Prepare for Regular Season.

By William Edward Mulligan, Minneapolis Journal, Minneapolis, Minn.

Good Business Outlook.

DUE to the bumper crops and the consequent improvement in financial conditions generally, many moving picture theatres which closed for the summer months, especially in the smaller communities of the grain belt, are reopening. Money is plentiful and exhibitors look for a good business. Manager A. H. Fisher, of the Metro exchange, says that he closed contracts last week with a large number of exhibitors who are reopening earlier than they had planned because of the good business outlook. Other exchange managers report making similar contracts. However, the bulk of the houses which have been closed for the summer will open about September 1.

Yellow Dog Clubs in Vogue.

The Minneapolis Universal exchange is successfully pushing the organization of Anti-Yellow Dog clubs in the Northwest. As a final patriotic measure taken before he leaves to join Uncle Sam's khaki-clad forces, John L. Johnson, former representative of The Moving Picture World, took up the proposition with the Minneapolis Civic and Commerce Association and the Boy Scouts of America, and the outcome of his efforts will be the formation of two Anti-Yellow Dog clubs here and many clubs in other Northwest communities. Julius A. Schmahl, secretary of state of Minnesota, has given his support to the movement.

Harry Rathner Making Good.

Harry Rathner, manager of the Minneopils office of the Select Pictures Corporation, has taken four firsts out of a possible six in the Select contest for the greatest amount of business in proportion to allotted territory.

"The Spoilers" Back Again.

Benjamin Friedman, president of the Friedman Film Corporation, Minneapolis, made arrangements with W. N. Selig while in Chicago last week for the distribution in this territory of "The Spoilers." Mr. Friedman has purchased two new prints and a complete line of advertising matter. The constant demand of exhibitors for the production, which for some time has been off the market, moved Mr. Friedman to make the deal. "The Spoilers" will again be shown in Minneapolis in September.

Evans Takes Fox Exchange.

E. S. Flynn resigned this week as manager of the Minneapolis branch office of the Fox Film Corporation, and R. K. Evans, formerly manager of the Minneapolis exchange of the Jewel Productions, Inc., has been appointed to take Mr. Flynn's place. Mr. Evans has been in this territory for six months, coming here from St. Louis, Mo.

New Theatre Planned.

A. J. Kavanaugh, theatrical magnate of North Dakota and Minnesota, with moving picture houses at Grand Forks, Jamestown and Crookston, is planning the construction of another up-to-date theatre at Grand Forks, N. D. In Crookston Mr. Kavanaugh has followed successfully the plan of vaudeville on Sundays, high-class pictures week-days with occasional combinations.

"The Geezer" Coming Here.

Manager Louis H. Coen, of the Universal exchange, has contracted for the first two runs on "The Geezer of Berlin" in the Twin Cities. It will be shown at the New Palace theatres of St. Paul and Minneapolis.

Francis Joins Army.

L. H. Francis, secretary and treasurer of the Theatre Equipment Company, Minneapolis and Detroit, left for camp last week to enter the National Army.

First Rest in Three Years.

Charles J. Branham, manager of The Strand, was enjoying a hard-earned rest last week spending his first vacation in three years at Duluth, Minn.

Keough Quits Lyric.

J. A. Keough, manager of the Lyric for almost a year and one of the best known film theatre managers in the Northwest, resigned from his position last week. He was formerly manager of The Strand. Mr. Keough has not announced his plans for the future.

Ball Joins Radio Service.

Halbert Ball, shipper for the Universal exchange for more than a year, resigned recently to enter the radio division of the Dunwoody naval training institute here. He expects to leave within a few days for Cambridge, Mass., to complete his course.

Shipper Dons Khaki.

Fred Finnegan, another Universal shipper entering the service of Uncle Sam, entrained from Minneapolis Friday, August 9, for Jefferson Barracks, St. Louis, Mo., to join the National Army.

The Stork Visits Abrams.

Morris Abrams, formerly with the First National Exhibitors' Circuit and at present treasurer of the Gayety theatre in Minneapolis, became the father of an eight-pound baby girl this week.

Winnipeg Theatre Reconstruction.

An expenditure of $40,000 is entailed in the present remodelling of the Province theatre, one of the leading moving picture theatres of Winnipeg, Manitoba. The new details include a three-story front of handsome design, a balcony and ventilation plant. The work is being done under the personal direction of Manager H. N. Jernberg. The owner of the Province is J. A. Schuberg, formerly of Winnipeg and now a resident of Vancouver. He is also the owner of the Gaiety and Bijou theatres of Winnipeg. The Province is scheduled to reopen on September 16 with a new policy.

Benefit Sunday Despite Nashville's Mayor

Fiery Antagonist of Sabbath Shows Permits Performance in Aid of "Wool Fund" to Proceed Without Anticipated Interference from Any Official Source.

By J. L. Ray, Nashville Banner, Nashville, Tenn.

Get Away with Sunday Show.

ALTHOUGH anticipating a renewal of the fight on Sunday "movies" in Nashville, W. H. Wassman, manager of the Knickerbocker theatre, and the ladies of the Davidson County Council of National Defense braved chances of a "cyclone" and interference at the hands of the city fathers, headed by Mayor William Gupton, who has flatly put his foot down on Sunday "movies," and on last Sunday afternoon gave a motion picture performance at the Knickerbocker for the benefit of the Soldiers' Wool Fund, which is being raised under the auspices of the Council of National Defense, Woman's Division.

While the performance was widely advertised and largely attended, there was no interference from the rampant mayor, police or other authorities, doubtless due to the fact that the performance was for war benefit and any interference from any source would have been resented by the public at large as an interference with war work of the most urgent nature.

The feature film shown was "Navy Life" and talks were made by Lieut. Fred J. Walcott, U. S. N., and Chief Red Fox, who is touring the country under the auspices of the United States Government in the interest of navy recruiting. The chief appeared in full tribal regalia, did a regular war dance, paid a most beautiful tribute to the American flag and ended with an appeal for the wool fund for which a neat sum was realized.

Holman Joins "Y" Forces.

Joe Holman, large stockholder in the Crescent Amusement Co., which controls a big string of motion picture and vaudeville houses in Tennessee and Southern Kentucky, has enlisted in the army Y. M. C. A., and has been sent to San Diego, Cal. He will have charge of the architectural work of all army "Y" buildings at cantonments in the Southern department.

His Picture in the Paper.

The initial issue of "Old Hickory—The Powder Plant News," contained a photograph and short sketch of Tony Sudekum, president of the Crescent Amusement Co. The publication paid a high tribute to Mr. Sudekum's work in giving the powder planters the best movies possible and in placing a special representative at the Old Hickory Works to handle the shows for the thousands of fans at the enormous plant.

25,000 Picture Patrons.

An auditorium with a seating capacity of 2,000 has been constructed in connection with the Central Y. M. C. A. building at the Old Hickory Works, the world's largest powder plant located at this place where there are employed more than 25,000 workers in turning out powder to beat the Boche. This auditorium is equipped with a stage and within the next few days complete motion picture equipment will be installed. The powder plant workers are all "movie" fans, as is evidenced by the very heavy attendance at all the picture shows each night at the mammoth open-air theater located within the government reservation at Old Hickory. This theatre seats about 8,000 persons and some form of entertainment is put on each night with the exception of Sunday. Moving pictures form a big part of the program.

Films Educate Employes.

The du Pont Company has a number of its own films, showing how safety devices are worked and appealing to every employee to be ever on the alert for accidents to himself and his fellow workman. The company has shown several of these films in its educational campaign for "Safety First" and good results have been noted already. Many of the workers are foreigners, Polaks, Mexicans, some Indians, and the motion picture has proved the best medium of education for these people who cannot read nor write English, but who can thoroughly understand the "movie."

Movie Fans Are Powder Workers.

It is planned to give regular motion picture performances in the Y. M. C. A. auditorium when cold weather sets in and the amphitheatre will have to be done away with for the winter. It is also being planned to establish several moving picture theatres in the powder plant village which is being constructed by the du Pont Engineering Co., and which will be inhabited by some 25,000 to 30,000 employees and their families when the plant is in full operation. These theatres will be under government control and operated by the du Pont corporation as agents for the United States.

Several private moving picture promoters are preparing to start theatres in the two villages at Berryville and Powder Plant City, both outside the government reservation.

Kansas City Kicks In

By Kansas City News Service, 115 Railway Exchange, Kansas City, Mo.

"4-Minute Men" Awake.

THIRTY "4-minute" speakers addressed moving picture patrons August 9 on the subject, "Mobilizing America's Manpower." The talks explained the government's plan to supervise and expedite practically the employment business through state agencies in systematizing the relations of employer and employe. The proposed supervision is to eliminate waste of time and effort, speed up labor production, and help win the war.

Accessory Business Good.

The Kansas City Machine & Supply Company has made a number of alterations in theatres recently. The equipment installed in the Empress was put in by this company. The Warwick theatre has recently purchased a new 75-75 ampere transverter.

Recruits With Picture Machine.

Sergeant E. W. Castle, marine recruiting station, Ninth and Main streets, is a moving picture operator, formerly with the Gaumont News on the Pacific coast. Sergeant Castle has his own machine and also has charge of the publicity for marine recruiting at Kansas City. In his capacity as advertising man he takes many pictures, a recent film being of the National tractor demonstration at Salina, Kan., July 29.

Empress In New Hands.

The Empress theatre has recently been taken over by the S. A. Lynch Theatrical Enterprises with Frank Montgomery as manager. The theater has remodeled its moving picture equipment, increased by additional booth and projection machinery. A new metallic gold fiber screen has also been installed.

Short Items of News.

Kansas City, Kan.—The Gruebel Bros. theatre has drawn up plans for the remodeling of the theatre front.

Wichita, Kan.—Mr. and Mrs. Frank H. Powell, Jr., of Wichita, and now living in Ponca City, have sold their two moving picture theatres and will engage in Y. M. C. A. work.

Timely Texas Topics

By Phil E. Fox, Times-Herald, Dallas, Tex.

Theatre Lobby Recruit Station.

When Dallas started to organize a regiment of Texas cavalry for duty along the Mexican border Manager Herschel Stewart of the Old Mill offered the soldiers the use of his lobby as a recruiting depot.

The calarymen opened a stand in front of the theatre and during "Pershing's Crusaders" and other patriotic films enlistments have been brisk.

Dallas Has Many Visitors.

Among Texas exhibitors visiting Dallas film row during mid August were D. C. Carnes, Palace, Farmersville; W. J. Wilkie, Empress, Wichita Falls; L. M. Valdez, Royal, Laredo; J. M. Barnes, The Mission, Sulphur Springs; E. J. Lampkin, Colonial, Greenville; L. M. Harrell, Gem, Frederick, Okla., and Joe Davenport, Waxahchie Amusement Co., Waxahachie.

Ed Phillips, pioneer motion picture exhibitor of Fort Worth, paid a visit to Dallas during the second week in August.

Ceiling Movies In Hospital.

Army surgeons of the base hospitals of Camp McArthur, Waco; Camp Bowie, Fort Worth, and Camp Travis, San Antonio, are interested in the announcement made by the Texas war work organization that ceiling motion pictures are to be installed at the hospital buildings by the Y. M. C. A.

Pictures will be projected on the ceilings of the hospital wards by special projecting machines. Sick soldiers lying on their backs in the various wards merely have to look straight up to enjoy their favorite films. The plan is to be put into effect in September.

Changes In Kleine Offices.

J. F. Burhorn, of St. Louis, has taken the place of H. Graham as manager for the George Kleine offices in Dallas. He has been with Kleine for the past three years.

Mr. Burhorn ordered the remodeling of the Kleine offices, establishing an up-to-date reception room for exhibitors. He completely reorganized the local staff. He will push "Triple Trouble" and "Conquered Hearts," the two big Kleine features which will be released during September.

On the Honor Roll.

Seven men have left the Dallas offices of the Consolidated and joined Uncle Sam's forces. They are: E. B. Cannon, Jr., Camp Travis; Lyle Harris, Camp Travis; E. B. Graetz, Camp McArthur; R. J. Payne, Great Lakes Training School; Rex McCullough, Fort McArthur, Cal.; W. E. Evans, Great Lakes; Dave Motter, France.

George Little, Ira Johnson and Harry Mustard of Paramount are at Camp Travis, San Antonio. J. W. Hanlon of the same office is at Camp Gordon, Ga.

Eugene Cameron, son of R. L. Cameron, who owns the Crystal theatre of Dallas, has gone to Chicago for training as radio operator in the navy.

Holgar Jorgenson, owner of the Best theatre, Dallas, has gone to France with the A. E. F. I. D. McIlhern is managing the theatre for him.

A. W. Clews, formerly with Vitagraph in Dallas and later Vitagraph manager at New Orleans, writes his friends here that he has become an expert farrier and horseshoer. He joined the army and is now instructor in the remount depot at Camp Beauregard, La.

J. L. Butterfield, Southwestern director for the Community Motion Picture Bureau at San Antonio, has been summoned to New York. He expects assignment to overseas service. He has two sons "over there."

Theatre Notes and Changes.

E. C. Palmer has opened a new theatre at Ranger, Texas. He has named it the Liberty.

Wilburton, Okla., has a new motion picture theatre. It is the Cozy, which was opened by W. L. Perkins.

R. C. Carson of the Liberty theatre, Gainesville, has bought the Pickford theatre at Marietta Okla., and changed the name to the Victory theatre.

The Queen theatre at Trenton, Tex., has been bought by D. Legg, who has booked a Paralta program.

Roy Kintze has been appointed manager of the Queen theatre at Brownsville, Tex. He is booking all the big ones.

David Young of the Dreamland theatre, Brownsville, has gone to Colorado to spend the summer.

The Bijou theatre, Yoakum, Tex., is a new 700-seat house which was opened early in August by W. D. Evans.

O. Gill, of the Erie theatre, of Hugo, Okla., is out to corner the choice exhibition points in the Southeast corner of that state. He has bought theatres at Boswell and Antlers, Okla., and is looking for more.

Some Snappy Paragraphs.

Lew Remy of Goldwyn returned from a trip to the Rio Grande country, only to leave at once on a Northern business trip through Oklahoma.

C. E. Buchanan, Metro and First National shipping clerk, is back from a vacation spent at San Antonio. Theatre men there were successful in showing him a good time. Among those who extended the hospitality of the Almo City were W. J. Lytle, Dr. and Mrs. Box and Billy Pellitzer.

Harry Owens of Paramount has made a trip to San Antonio and Austin. He reports that after the division of soldiers at San Antonio left for France business fell off in that city the flash the arrival of new troops for training in the motion picture exhibitors are again turning 'em away.

Alex H. Wolfe, of Dallas, who formerly handled state-right pictures in Texas, is in France with an American tank company. He writes to his friend, J. B. Dugger, of Vitagraph, that he has been in close contact with the Huns and that he has received a furlough during which time he will visit Nice and Monte Carlo.

The Orpheum theater, Fort Worth, has changed hands. J. H. Riggles has sold this play house to Frank Lapham, of Dallas. Lapham is making good as a successful exhibitor.

Vitagraph salesmen were called into the Dallas offices from all parts of Texas during mid August by Manager J. B. Dugger. They held a get-together meeting, planning their important September releases.

Hundreds of motion picture theatres in Texas and Oklahoma have been rechristened Liberty or Victory theatres during the past few months. Film men of Southwestern districts challenge any other section of the United States to show as many theaters with patriotic names as does Texas.

News that Charlie Chaplin's "Shoulder Arms" is to probably be a five-reel feature has taken well with First National folks in Texas. They are looking forward with interest to this precedent in the line of Chaplin comedies.

Press showings of "Italy's Flaming Front" were given at the Hippodrome theatre, Dallas, during August. The war picture made a good impression and has been largely booked over the state.

"Over the Top" is the latest Texas army camp theatre. It was opened by Paul Baraca of Houston at Camp Logan, near that city, and is doing a land office business.

Detroit Sees Home-Made Feature Screened

The H. H. Nelson Company Gives Special Showing of Its Made-in-Detroit Photoplay—Brief Items of Local Concern from City of the Straits.

By Jacob Smith, 719 Free Press Building, Detroit, Mich.

NEARLY 1,000 people crowded into the Empire theatre, Detroit, on Thursday evening, August 8, to attend the trade showing of Detroit's first-made feature, "Souls Unmasked." The H. N. Nelson Co. produced and photographed it, while Sidney M. Golden directed it, the stars being Walter Miller, Paul Panzer and Edna Mason. The titles are being made and Mr. Nelson expects to dispose of the picture in New York shortly. Then he will start on his second picture. Satisfactory reports and comments were heard after the trade showing by those who attended.

He Will Play World Films.

Harry Angell, who is now on his fifth year of service in Michigan for the World Film Corporation, and who owns the Strand theatre in Miles, has just leased the new Lincoln theatre, Owosso, from Mrs. Fred Patterson. The lease is for ten years. Harry will put in a capable manager and continue serving the World.

Local Film Merger.

The State and Victor Film companies, in the Film building, Detroit, have been merged. Sam Ludwig, proprietor, will temporarily continue them under their former names, but expects to drop the name Victor and continue business as the State Film Co.

News Notes and Personals.

For State Fair Week, which starts September 2, the Miles theatre, Detroit, has booked World's special feature, "Eight Bells."

John H. Kunsky announces that starting September 1 he will issue a separate four-page program for each of his theatres instead of one program for all of them together, as he has been doing. This will give each theatre individuality. Harry R. Guest, editor of the Weekly Film News, will continue to handle the programs.

Joe Horwitz, of the Foursquare Exchange, left August 10 for New York City and Far Rockaway to celebrate his birthday with Mrs. Horwitz. Incidentally, Joe conferred with George Backer relative to future pictures which he will handle in Michigan and Ohio.

J. C. Fishman, of the Standard, announces that for the coming season his exchange will release more short reel subjects, besides fifteen to twenty features. Mr. Fishman believe the coming season will be a big one for short subjects, especially western dramas and comedies.

The Victory is the name of the new theatre opened in Hillsdale by George Brookins.

Crushing the Hun.

Another member of the Detroit Famous Players-Lasky exchange has joined the colors—John A. Daley of the accessory department—while Jimmie Dean, formerly of the shipping department, writes that he is now overseas.

Harry S. Lorch, formerly with the Butterfield circuit, and later manager of the State Film Company, is now manager of the New Liberty theatre at the cantonment recently opened in Nebraska.

L. A. Hardy, for a number of months with World Film, is now manager of the William L. Sherry Service. Mr. Hardy assumed management on August 10. George Lightman, in charge of the office for several weeks, has returned to Cleveland.

These are busy days at the Triangle exchange. Between putting on more business and getting ready to move into the new film building, Dave Prince, manager, has plenty to do.

James R. Shannon has been secured to lead the Majestic theatre orchestra during the coming season. He is a former Detroiter.

Live News Gleanings From the Golden Gate

San Francisco Makes Mention of Many Items Carrying Pacific Coast Interest—Screen Stars' Ball Excites Curiosity Commotion Among the Fans.

By T. A. Chures, 1597 North Street, Berkeley, Cal.

Theatre Has New House Magazine.

A new program, or picture movie magazine as the publisher terms it, has made its appearance at the California theatre. This is an attractive publication in pocket size, with twenty-four pages of live information concerning the California theatre, its organization, its program and moving picture stars in general. It contains such interesting departments as "This Week's Star from Starland," "California Comment," "Pen Pictures of Photo Players," "Where the Stars are Shining," "How and Where They Make 'Em" and a "Weekly Feature Page."

Community Singing Popular.

The San Francisco War Camp Community Service recently arranged for "a season of song" in local moving picture houses. Alexander Bevani had charge of the event and appointed leaders for the playhouses; the war songs of other days being featured as well as those of the present time. Singing has proved especially popular in the theatres that cater to the family trade, where young folks form a large part of the audience.

Turner & Dahnken Items.

Owing to the keen interest taken in the war developments the Oakland T. & D. are flashing war bulletins on the screen at the conclusion of every feature picture. Occasionally, when an unusual gain is made by the allied armies, the bulletins are shown in the middle of pictures.

Parents having sons in France are now entitled to free admission to the Oakland T. & D. upon presenting a letter postmarked from a military post office "Over There" and paying the war tax. The only provision is that with each weekly visit to the theatre parents must present a letter bearing a later postmark than the one previously presented.

United States Circuit Judge W. H. Hunt has handed down a decision awarding Alma A. Crowley, author of "My California Rose," $500, instead of $7,000, in her suit against Turner & Dahnken for infringement of copyright. Judge Hunt placed the value of the song at eight cents a copy instead of a dollar each as was the decision of the lower court.

Prisoners See "Hearts of the World."

The inmates of San Quentin prison, through the courtesy of Col. L. Lesser, were treated to a presentation of "Hearts of the World" on the morning of August 4, and its strong patriotic appeal made a wonderful impression on the prisoners. Following the performance visiting exhibitors, musicians and machine operators were the guests of Warden James A. Johnston at luncheon. The film was then returned to the Alcazar theatre for its afternoon presentation, when it began the seventh week of its engagement.

Screen Star Leads Grand March.

Margarita Fisher, the star of the American Film Company, led the grand march at the screen stars' ball, which was held at National Hall, Sixteenth and Mission streets, on the evening of August 10. A number of other moving picture stars were in attendance and local residents turned out en masse. As a prize to the best lady fox trotter a silver cup was donated by Mae Murray and an enlarged autographed photograph of William Farnum was auctioned off for the benefit of the Red Cross. The major portion of the receipts are to be turned over to the Red Cross and to the California Committee for Relief in Belgium and France.

Personals and News Briefs.

Douglas H. Bergh, personal representative of George Kleine, has just returned from a trip to Southern California and will shortly leave for Denver.

Charles Saliswoly, well-known here for his work in "The Unbeliever," has accepted the management of the Liberty theatre, at Camp Fremont.

Fred McClellan, formerly manager of "Hearts of the World" for the Pacific Coast, left for Chicago, where he will take charge of the sales and production of the big Griffith play for the territory west of the Mississippi.

H. J. Werner, president of the American Photo Player Company, is wreathed in smiles these days owing to the arrival of a young son at his home.

Baltimore Managers Face Wage Demands

Theatre Mechanics and Musicians Exact Increased Salaries Approximating 40 Per Cent., While Employers Consider Meeting Union Men Half Way.

By J. M. Shellman, 1902 Mt. Royal Terrace, Baltimore, Md.

Gerard Picture at Crescent.

GERARD'S "My Four Years in Germany" was booked at the Crescent theatre by J. J. Hartlove, the manager, for two days, beginning August 12. In conjunction with the showing he had a thirty-piece band from St. Mary's Industrial School march around the streets in the section with the Kaiser in the cage such as was used and originated by L. A. DeHoff. The band also played the picture on the first day. On August 19 and 20 Mr. Hartlove planned to run "Tarzan of the Apes" and will fix his lobby up with shrubbery to represent a jungle. He also plans to have boys dressed as monkeys in the cage to advertise the show.

Two Griffith Pictures.

Charles E. and John T. Ford, co-proprietors of Ford's opera house, booked Griffith's superb picture, "The Birth of a Nation," for one week beginning August 12. While this Griffith production was playing at Ford's Bernard Depkin, Jr., supervising manager of the Parkway, was showing Griffith's latest splendid production, "The Great Love." Thus Baltimoreans were given an opportunity of comparing two works of the recognized film genius. During the week of August 19, Lyman H. Howe's "Travel Festival" has been booked.

Managers Face Hardship.

A demand for about 40 per cent. increase in wages is said to have been made by the Musical Union in Baltimore for all musicians who play at the theatres in the Monumental City. It was only about a year ago that the theatre managers granted the theatrical mechanics an increase in wages for two years, and now another request has been forthcoming for more money. The managers of the Baltimore theatres met at Ford's opera house on Wednesday, Aug. 14, to decide what action should be taken in the matter. It is understood that the demands of the musicians and mechanics were considered. After the meeting had adjourned, Charles E. Ford, manager of Ford's opera house, acting as [illegible] for the assembled managers, said that two propositions had been framed for consideration of the mechanics. They were not made public. It is also said that musicians in orchestras have asked for a 40 per cent. increase and that the managers had offered them 25 per cent.

William Leicht, who formerly managed the Teddy Bear theatre, is now said to be doing his bid for Uncle Sam in a shipyard. He has joined the forces of the Baltimore Dry Docks and Shipbuilding Company, it is understood and is working in a riveting gang. It is also rumored that brother Leicht is pulling down $100 per week.

Baltimore Personals.

Jack Levine, formerly co-proprietor of the Little Pickwick theatre with his brother Irvine Levine, is now near the firing line in France according to his brother. He went to Camp Meade about May 5, and received training at Camps Upton and Hancock.

The affairs of the Mutual Film Company for the Baltimore and Maryland territory are now in the hands of Frank Price, Jr., who will act as their representative here. Mr. Price was formerly associated with Goldwyn, as their Baltimore representative. He is very affable and courteous and will prove a valuable addition to Mutual forces.

The Vitagraph Company is now being represented in Baltimore and Maryland by A. G. Buck, a pioneer in the film game who until recently has been in the Virginia territory for this company. Mr. Buck is well known in Washington and Philadelphia, having been associated with General Film in the former city and Select, Kleine and Hoffman Foursquare in the latter city.

Maritime Provinces Active

By Alice Fairweather, The Standard, St. John, N. B.

THE DATE for the "Talk It Over" meeting to be held by the Exchange Manager's Association and at which the exhibitors are invited to be present has been set for August 26. It is hoped that the discussions will be helpful to both sides and will clear the air regarding the aims and objects of the Exchange Manager's Association.

"Educational" Specialties.

There has been quite an interesting situation in St. John regarding the coming to the city of the Chautauqua. As we understand it, the Chautauqua regards itself as purely educational and asked tax exemption on those grounds. Out of the twenty-two items on the programme, thirteen were of the concert or opera nature and therefore it was regarded as competing with the regular theatres in the city.

Theatre Man Wide Awake.

The war tax was enforced and the regular license of $10 per day charged by the city. W. H. Golding wrote two letters to the press and the superintendent of the Chautauqua answered publicly from the platform stating that Chautauqua approved of the "movies" but did not try to compete with them as "Chautauqua is educational and ranks with schools, colleges and churches."

It was also said that the manager of the Imperial should not protest against an outside concern being patronized by St. John people as his own theatre was run by an American firm. Mr. Golding in answer to this showed that the cases were very different as the Imperial had a large payroll, pays all the taxes and employs many persons in the city. Undoubtedly his letters had an effect upon the people of St. John as the Imperial is a decidedly popular theatre and is the centre of almost every patriotic effort.

Nathan Looking Around.

A. Nathan of the Universal Film Company was a visitor in St. John last week. He has been in Montreal looking after changes in the Holman theatre of that city and while in St. John spent much of his time conferring with G. A. Margetts, manager of the Canadian Universal.

Bangor's Budget

From J. P. Flanagan, Bangor, Maine.

General Closes Bangor Branch.

BANGOR, ME.—The General Film Company, first among the big distributors to open a Bangor exchange, is this week closing it and transferring the accounts supplied to its Boston office. Seen at his office, Earle B. Tinker, branch manager, advised that the move is being made to further increase the efficiency of the organization and to give better service to the exhibitors which would be possible in a larger branch with larger stock and consequently greater variety of films. Mr. Tinker will be associated with the company in its Boston exchange.

McEvoy Boosting Pershing's Film.

E. L. McAvoy of the First National Exhibitors' Circuit of Boston, and holder of the New England franchise of the Billy West Comedies, is now in Maine placing the first official Government picture, "Pershing's Crusaders." The Maine exhibitors are without exception lining up the picture, knowing as they do that their Uncle Sam is getting the money.

From Woodstock and Frederickton.

Woodstock, N. B.—Maybelle Cole whose playing at the Hayden-Gibson theatre has been so much enjoyed has returned to St. John accompanied by her mother and is now playing at the Unique theatre, St. John.

J. Albert Hayden died at Woodstock recently. He was half owner of the theatre which bore his name (the Hayden-Gibson). F. G. Spencer of St. John now controls the Hayden-Gibson theatre.

Fredericton, N. B.—The Gem theatre Fredericton, (owned by F. G. Spencer of St. John), under the management of C. F. Stowe is said to be the first in the Maritime Provinces to provide facilities for photographing regularly matters of local interest and projecting them on the screen while still fresh in the public mind. Mr. Stowe states that the Gem's Pictorial Weekly will shortly be one of the most interesting portions of the programme. Recently a school parade and a garden party on the grounds of Lord and Lady Ashburnham were photographed. The printing and developing is all done at the Gem.

Norwich, N. Y., Has Fine New Theatre.

The Colonia theater, Norwich, N. Y., opened Monday, July 22, after having been entirely remodeled since the disastrous fire of early spring. Adam Tennis is manager of the house, assisted by his son, Louis Tennis, formerly operator at the Majestic theatre, Utica. The opening attraction was the Screen Classics, Inc., production, "To Hell with the Kaiser," which was followed, after a two-days' run, by "My Four Years in Germany," which also played for two days.

The Colonia is now one of the prettiest theatres in this part of the state for the size city it is located in. Among the innovations introduced at the opening were young lady ushers. They have been provided with uniforms made in Quaker style, trimmed with white collars and cuffs, and piping of old rose. The management of the Colonia is planning to run only the biggest of features, as is evidenced by their first opening bookings. Mr. Tennis and his son were formerly proprietors of the Hippodrome, Utica, which they conducted for four years.

Pictures will be run three days each week exclusively at the Majestic theatre, Austin, when the playhouse opens in September, so Manager McCormick announces. Mr. McCormick takes the place of S. Drake Warner, who is in the U. S. Army.

J. A. Stevenson, assistant manager of the W. W. Hodkinson Corporation, has left Dallas for Kansas City and Cincinnati, O.

T. F. McTyer, district manager of General, has left Texas for New Orleans and Atlanta.

Capital City Brevities of the Film Trade

Official French War Films to Be Shown at the Knickerbocker Theatre—Moore's Garden Theatre Being Improved.

By Clarence L. Linz, 622 Riggs Building, Washington, D. C.

Theatre for Allies' Use.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Harry M. Crandall has donated the use of the Knickerbocker theatre to the French High Commission for the private showing each week of the official French war films to the officials of the French Government stationed in this city. There are a great many French military and diplomatic officers here at the present time, and when they congregate in the theatre they represent a fair sized audience.

Arrangements have recently been completed whereby the official French pictures will be shown each week to the public at the Knickerbocker, the first films appearing on August 6 and 7, being "The Training of Animals in the War Zone." This is an exceptionally interesting study of animal life upon the battle-front of France.

Two More Join Colors.

Two more locally known men have been called to the colors. Everyone remembers friend Rodolph Berger, who presided over the destinies of the George Kleine offices here during the period of their existence, and who lately has been manager of the Philadelphia offices. He will be an early visitor in Washington inasmuch as he is undergoing the usual course of sprouts at Camp Meade, Md.

The other boy wearing the Uncle Sammy outfit is Charles Plunkett, late manager of the Strand theatre here. He has been sent to Clarksburg, W. Va., for active training. He is widely known as a rider of fast horses at the amateur meets, an amateur actor of some little ability, and a pretty good ballplayer—and his Uncle Sam can use all of these incident to the business of making war on the Hun.

Moore's Garden Theatre Improved.

The interior of Moore's Garden theatre is undergoing a complete overhauling and will remain dark during the week ending August 11. This is a rather unusual move under existing conditions, when there is hardly sufficient seating capacity in the downtown houses to accommodate at times the large crowds of people seeking admission to the motion picture theatres. A great deal of work is involved in the remodeling of the house. The seats were removed, the old flooring torn up and a new cement floor took its place. Then cleaners and interior decorators got busy and the last workmen to gain possession of the house were the chair people; the lower floor of the theatre being reseated on the plan of a wide center aisle instead of the two side aisles which formerly existed. The exit and entrance facilities are also being improved and a number of minor changes made.

Returning Films C. O. D. Illegal.

Exhibitors in the Washington, D. C., territory who are in the habit of returning films to the local exchanges subject to a C. O. D. charge for real or fancied wrongs are likely to find themselves in serious legal tangles, according to plans being considered by the Washington Exchange Managers' Association. These plans are said to have the approval also of a number of exhibitors who hold the opinion that credit and other business abuses practiced by a few react upon them to the end that they have to pay higher rentals than would otherwise prevail if the cost of doing business at the exchanges were lowered.

There have been a number of instances lately where the returning of films C. O. D. carry with them the liability to the sender of prosecution in the courts for receiving money under false pretences. It is understood that some very flagrant cases are being considered and evidence procured that will assist in such prosecution when the time comes. The exhibitor who sends back films in this manner by parcel post will find the situation even more serious, for it is rather an unhealthy game fooling with the mails.

Cooper Now With M. C. R.

Where once the title "Scenario Editor" adorned the name of Courtney Ryley Cooper, there now is a new affix, "Private, M. C. R." All of which means that Courtney Ryley Cooper has enlisted as a member of the Marine Corps and is now on duty at the Adjutant and Inspector's office at Marine Corps headquarters, Washington, D. C.

C. B. Price Has Charge of Fox Office.

C. B. Price is now in charge of the Washington, D. C., offices of the Fox Film, at 305 Ninth street, N. W. This is his first assignment with this company as its special representative. When seen by the Moving Picture World correspondent, Mr. Price stated that he expects to remain in Washington at least a couple of months reorganizing the exchange, systematizing its methods and starting in on the new Fox 1918-1919 very ambitious program.

Mr. Price has had a long experience in the film business, starting with the General Film in New York City eight or nine years ago. After a couple of years he joined the Mutual. For the Vitagraph company he opened all of the western offices when the company was first organized.

In 1914 Mr. Price rejoined the Mutual as its general manager in Canada. Returning to the United States he became district manager for the west, with headquarters in Chicago, for the Triangle Distributing Corporation, and about eighteen months ago he was brought back to New York as manager of the New York City exchange. About a month ago he resigned that position to go with his present employers.

Carl F. Senning, who has been manager of the exchange for several years, will remain in Washington and will cover the territory as special traveling representative.

W. H. Scott with the Engineers.

W. H. Scott, formerly employed at the Washington, D. C., Pathe exchange, is the latest addition to the Army from the film circle. He was called to the colors and sent to Camp Meade, but was later transferred to Washington Barracks for duty with the engineers.

Leon H. Caverly Wins Commission.

Leon H. Caverly, now in France with the American Expeditionary Forces, has been appointed a Second Lieutenant in the Marine Corps in accordance with the recommendation of General Pershing. Lieutenant Caverly, official photographer of the United States Marine Corps fighting in France, prior to his promotion held the grade of quartermaster sergeant.

Lieutenant Caverly enlisted as a private in the Marine Corps in April, 1917. Before entering the service he filmed a number of well known photoplays, including "Neptune's Daughter." He also saw film service with a number of companies putting out news reels. His work in France, it is said, has been commendatory and won for him his promotion. The pictures he has made have been released through the Committee on Public Information in Washington.

The film man's former home was in New York City. He is now in charge of the photographic department of one of the overseas divisions. His wife, May Elizabeth Caverly, lives at 729 Eighth avenue, New York.

"HER ONLY WAY"

Norma Talmadge's Latest Select Picture is a Dream Story That Entertains.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

GEORGE SCARBOROUGH is the author of "Her Only Way," a Select picture directed by Sidney Franklin, scenario by Mary Murillo. Norma Talmadge has the leading role. The story belongs to the ancient and honorable order of dream plays. They have always had a large and enthusiastic following, and "Her Only Way" is a worthy example of its class. It also has the very great advantage of Norma Talmadge's sincere acting. The story possesses little that is new, but with the aid of the dream device it has several effective dramatic scenes, and the happy ending which follows the heroine's awakening is like the sunshine after the storm.

The part played by Norma Talmadge is called Lucille Westbrook, a young girl reared in wealth and refinement, who is told by her guardian that her father left hardly any money when he died and that the home where she has always lived must be sold. Lucille loves Joseph Marshall, a man of little means but ambitious and able. She is also courted by Paul Belmont, who is weak morally but has a large bank account.

Influenced by her desire to save the property and her pique at a remark made by Marshall, the heroine decides to accept Belmont. While she is waiting for him to come for his answer she falls asleep and dreams she has become his wife. The experience is so unpleasant that she wakes up in terror of the man and gives him a determined refusal when he does arrive. In her dream Belmont neglects her for a fascinating widow and the pair plot to ruin her good name. Lucille is compromised with Marshall and her husband forces her into the divorce court. False witnesses swear away her reputation and Lucille follows her husband and kills him by a shot from a revolver.

At this point she wakes up. Lucille is so relieved to find that she has not made the mistake of marrying Belmont she settles the matter forever by accepting Marshall when he comes back to apologize for his remark.

Eugene O'Brien is a manly and earnest Joseph Marshall and Ramsey Wallace gives a finished impersonation of Paul Belmont. E. A. Warren and Jobyna Howland are excellent representatives of Judge Bates and Mrs. Randolph. The cameramen were Albert Moses and Ed Weynard.

"THE LOVE SWINDLE"

Edith Roberts Featured by Bluebird in Pleasing Story.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE average audience will be pleased with "The Love Swindle," a five-part Bluebird production based on a story by Rex Taylor. It features Edith Roberts and was directed by Jack Dillon. The plot has some originality, and its details have been presented with consistent realism. Fred Myton seems to have made a successful job of the scenario, and the dramatic moments of the story are well sustained. Others of the cast are Emmanuel Turner, Leo White, Reggy Morris and Clarissa Selwynne.

The story pivots about the desire of a rich young woman to escape from the uninteresting men of her set and marry a real man who will love her for herself and not for her money. By accident she meets an automobile agent, a young man of strong physique and character and falls in love with him. He runs shy of her, however, because of their difference in station, also having qualms concerning her evident cigarette and cocktail proclivities. To win her point she tells him she has a twin sister and asks him to deliver a message to her, which he does at the appointed hour, when she herself demurely dressed is on the spot to receive him. He falls in love with the twin sister, and is not aware until after the marriage takes place that he has married a rich girl.

"THE INN OF THE BLUE MOON"

Doris Kenyon Acts Twin Sisters in Pleasing Romance by Louis Joseph Vance.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

A WELL-ESTABLISHED custom is set aside in the latest production of De Luxe Pictures, Inc., "The Inn of the Blue Moon," starring Doris Kenyon in a dual role—the story was written originally for the screen by a celebrated novelist and will be put into printed form after being released as a motion picture. Louis Joseph Vance is the author of the scenario. He has chosen to give the leading actress two parts to play—twin sisters that are so much alike in appearance and character, the double impersonation is practically one. Doris Kenyon's wholesome and cheerful personality has a great deal to do in making the two sisters attractive, and she is given the agreeable task of being made love to by a pair of leading men. The only villain in the picture is a country chap, a victim of disappointed love who is not so very dangerous, after all. The law of contrast has not been sufficiently observed in the story to make it very dramatic. If Author Vance intended to be original in handling his theme at the expense of interest and vigor he has succeeded.

"The Inn of the Blue Moon" refers to a hut in the woods. The parents of Justine and Dorothy Druce separated when the twins were small girls and divided the children between them. Justine went with her father and was raised in the city with every social advantage. Doris remained with her mother, a straight-laced woman, who kept the girl secluded in the country and was shocked and surprised when she discovered her daughter had managed to secure a lover for herself, a city chap who is injured and is cared for by Doris at her hut. Justine and her young man arrive on the scene and the cases of mistaken identity are many. The story ends with the twins and their parents happily united and a pair of sons-in-law in immediate prospect.

There are a number of charming bits of rural scenes in the picture and John B. O'Brien has directed the production skillfully. The finish is particularly neat. Harry C. Browne, Crauford Kent, William Walcott, Harriet Ross, Lyn Donaldson and John Hopkins comprise an excellent support. The picture was photographed by W. S. Colly and J. Badaracco. It is released through the William L. Sherry service.

"THE SAVAGE WOMAN"

Clara Kimball Young Reverts to the Primitive in Colorful Jungle Romance.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

EVER since Rider Haggard wrote "She," the beautiful heroine clad in scanty but picturesque garb who inhabits some African jungle and casts her spell over a handsome young explorer, has been a favorite character in fiction. Francois Curel, the French novelist, wrote a story called "La Fille Sauvage," which furnished the groundwork for the Select picture, "The Savage Woman," in which Clara Kimball Young, at the head of her own company, acts the part of Renee Benoit, the daughter of a drunken African trader, who has been allowed to grow up as wild and uncivilized as one of the natives of the land. The scenario was made by Kathryn Stuart and the production directed by Edmund Mortimer.

The pictorial features of the photoplay are many, and the romance wanders along in the unreal but entertaining strain that belongs to tales of this sort. A little more skill in putting the picture together and bringing out its dramatic possibilities would have improved it considerably. The action of the five reels covers a great deal of ground, and there is no really big scene in the picture. The novelty of seeing Clara Kimball Young dressed in a leopard's skin and several strings of glass beads and running barefooted through the jungle after the manner of "Tarzan of the Apes" is one of its chief attractions, and the production shows care and good judgment.

Renee is happy and contented, playing with the monkeys in the jungle, until Jean Lerier, a French explorer who has been treated badly by a beautiful woman of the Paris underworld, takes her to France and introduces her to smart gowns and the ways of Bohemian society. The girl, now deeply in love with Jean, is forced by her still untamed nature to return to Africa and resume her old manner of living. Lerier also returns and Renee saves his life as he is about to be sacrificed by the natives. She is taken for the reincarnation of the Queen of Sheba and the tribe are afraid to disobey her. Lerier has treated her but lightly before, but he now realizes he loves her well enough to make her his wife.

Clara Kimball Young acts the young savage cleverly, and is excellently supported by Milton Sills as Jean, Marcia Manon as Aimee Ducharme, and Clyde Benson as Prince Menelek. Arthur Edison was the photographer.

"PLAYTHINGS"

Fritzi Brunette Featured in Bluebird Adaptation of Toler's Stage Melodrama.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE Sidney Toler play, "Playthings," in its screen version does not make what might be termed a huge appeal. The picture plays up injured womanhood in something of the sickly sentimental style, forming that type of melodrama which the ordinary audience loves. Fritzi Brunette is the featured member of the cast, with Myrtle Reeves, Charles Gerrard, Phil Dunham, Lewis Cody, Mary Anderson and Fay Turner supporting her.

The story tells of a shop girl who became entangled in an affair with the son of the owner of the store, loved not wisely but too well, and awakened too late to the fact that she had been used for a plaything. The picture spares the spectator that part of the story which deals with the death of the girl's child by falling from a window and satisfies itself with showing her becoming an inmate of the home of a friend, who shelters her in her distress. Later we find her teaching music and again meeting a lawyer who has loved her in her shop-girl days, and who, having become wealthy, tries to persuade her to marry him, finally winning her acceptance.

The strongest melodramatic thrill of the story happens when the villain reenters the scene and is about to elope with the lawyer's sister. In the course of the scenes which follow he is shot, and the story of his ill-doing and the girl's past is revealed.

"A HOOSIER ROMANCE"

Selig Adaptation of James Whitcomb Riley's Poem Released Through Mutual.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

A NEW star appears in the five-part Selig adaptation of the James Whitcomb Riley poem, "A Hoosier Romance." The production, which was released by the Mutual Film Corporation on August 18, is a pure old-fashioned romance and features Colleen Moore, young, pretty and talented. Next in importance in the cast are Thomas Jefferson and Harry McCoy. Others of the cast are Eugene Besserer, Edward Jobson and Frank Hayes. The picture was directed by Colin Campbell, and what it may lack in rapidity of action it makes up for in beauty and simplicity. Costumes of more than half a century ago add a touch of quaintness to the ensemble.

For those not familiar with the poem we will endeavor in brief to tell its story, which follows the love affair of Patience Thompson and John, "The Hand." After the death of her mother Patience, left to the guidance of a mean and grasping father, finds life's pathway difficult. Discovering the love affair of the young people, Jeff Thompson orders John from the house and sets himself to find a rich match for his daughter. Before he has made up his mind, however, a rich old widower becomes enamoured of Patience and asks her hand in marriage. On the night set for the wedding the Squire and his wife, old friends, plot to outdo Jeff Thompson and the aged bridegroom, and arrange to have the bride escape to their home, where her lover is waiting. Before the others arrive on the scene the young people are married.

"FIRES OF YOUTH"

Five-Reel Bluebird Features Ruth Clifford in Story of Mistaken Marriage.

Reviewed by Margaret I. MacDonald.

THE five-part Bluebird release for August 26, "Fires of Youth," is entertaining up to a certain point, where it fails on the side of consistency. The story, while it might be totally satisfying to some, is not of the calibre to win for the moving picture the highest praise of the public. Be that as it may, there is considerable entertainment to be gained from it. The cast is a small one, consisting of but three principal characters—the feminine lead, Ruth Clifford; Ralph Lewis and George Fisher.

The story tells of a young girl who married a man much older than herself, settled and unromantic in character. The girl, finding none of the romance which she has dreamed her marriage would bring her, becomes wearied of her ties and falls in love with a young man who has been sent to the town to be under the business guidance of her husband. The husband, seeing the turn his domestic affairs are taking, suggests that his wife take a trip to Florida, which means that she must bid adieu to the younger man, never to see him again. On the night before she is to leave the husband goes out of town and her lover visits her. At this point of the story a badly contrived plot to entangle the young man in a theft of valuable papers is dragged into the story. The end of the whole affair is that the husband, seeing the error of his own ways, decides to divorce his wife so that she may be free to marry the man she loves.

"THE CHANGING WOMAN"

Vitagraph Production of O. Henry Story Is Well Acted Without Star.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THAT master of the short story, O. Henry, returns to his South American stamping ground in "The Changing Woman," and the Vitagraph has produced a five-part screen version of the tale directed by David Smith. The cast is without a star, but the leading parts intrusted to Hedda Nova, Frank Glendon, Otto Lederer, and George Kunkel are excellently played. The entire production is kept at a reasonably well-sustained standard, and the story itself has much of the original humor and odd twists of plot that are always expected in the writings of Sidney Porter.

The finish is weak. This is brought about by the motive of the tale being extremely difficult to transfer to the screen. It refers to the subtle influence that danger and the vast solitudes of the mountains have upon the nature of a woman who is light and volatile when surrounded by the flattery and attention she constantly craves. The rest of the picture is made up of physical action that readily lends itself to the demands of the silent drama.

Nina Gerard is the prima donna of a small opera company touring South America. In the town of Macuto the company is nearly stranded, and is saved by the quick wits of its "Carmen." A young American, Johnny Armstrong, who imagines himself a woman-hater, falls under the girl's spell, and, when she is kidnapped by a band of Carabobo Indians, rescues her and returns her to the circle of admiring South Americans that has become her devoted slaves.

Danger and the strangeness of her surroundings change Nina into a serious-minded woman who looks upon Johnny with favor. Back in the old atmosphere the homage of the crowd is the only thing she craves. The screen version ends with Johnny determined to take his charmer back to the mountains and have them work their magic in her heart. The wedded bliss that the hero hopes for does not look very promising.

Hedda Nova is an animated and well-graced Nina, and Frank Glendon is a capital representative of the American, John Armstrong.

"ON THE QUIET"

Five-Reel Paramount Version of Famous Farce Features John Barrymore.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

A WHOLE lot of good, clean amusement has been brought to the screen in this Famous Players-Lasky version of Augustus Thomas' stage farce, "On the Quiet." John Barrymore makes a welcome reappearance in the films, being cast in the role of Robert Ridgway, the part which served as a success for William Collier on the legitimate stage. The new rendering of this production is one that should be seen by everyone, as the screen once more lends opportunities for additional realism.

The story is familiar to many people, but it will do no harm to recite some of its chief points. Robert Ridgway has been expelled from Yale for general wildness. He is very much in love with Agnes Colt, an heiress to twenty millions, but the match is opposed by her brother, Horace. By the terms of her father's will, Horace must give his consent before the girl can wed.

Horace is a stern, unrelenting man, and insists that Robert reform before marrying Agnes. The latter endeavors to do so, but not very successfully. The two lovers then decide to be married without the consent of Horace, and the ceremony is performed with a former bookmaker as the sole witness. A number of humorous complications follow, and the lovers finally take refuge in diving suits in the bottom of the sea, "alone at last." The piece begins slowly, but works up to a highly satisfactory finish.

The settings are very attractive throughout, and the cast is one of general excellence. Lois Meredith appears as Agnes and J. W. Johnston as Horace. Chester Withey directed.

"THE CRUISE OF THE MAKE-BELIEVE"

Paramount Presents Lila Lee in an Adaptation of the Story by Tom Gallon.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THE ship "Make-Believe" is an affair rigged up in the back yard of a poor lodging house mainly conducted by "Bessie," impersonated by Lila Lee. In this structure of board scraps Bessie steers with a wagon wheel and imagines she is on a cruse in the Orient. Next door is a young millionaire, living "down" among the "people" while writing a book on "masses and classes." He climbs over the fence to amuse himself with Bessie and finally decides to accord her one month of still greater illusion. He hands her dissolute father a large sum of money and arranges to give him full use of a magnificent summer home in "Dream Valley," under the pretense of all this being an inheritance, or a lucky speculation. He further arranges with his servants to obey orders from Bessie's father and goes away for a month leaving his beautiful home in full charge of a drunken sot in order to amuse the child for thirty days. The cheap boarding house is closed and Bessie's family moves to the young millionaire's superb country house.

At the end of a month the young millionaire returns to find Bessie exquisitely dressed and engaged in entertaining some poor children, her father getting very drunk with a lot of congenial spirits in the dining room. The girl must be undeceived, but the cruelty of the whole thing at last dawns on the young millionaire and he decides to make good by asking Bessie to be his wife. She consents, but she is indignant when disillusioned and returns to the "Make-Believe" ship in the old back yard. There the young millionaire finds her and they turn the old wagon wheel together in a final love scene. With this little actuality and almost no suspense a heavy burden is thrown on the actors. Miss Lee responds attractively and Raymond Hatton as her drunken father affords a very amusing characterization. The acting of these two and the beautiful settings are the chief values of the release.

"THE GHOST FLOWER"

Five-Reel Triangle Subject Featuring Alma Rubens Has Exceptional Merit.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THERE is a perfection of atmosphere, dramatic strength, and general detail about this subject which raises it to first rank. The story is practically flawless, and the cast of characters headed by Alma Rubens does excellent work. The production, in five reels, was made by Triangle-Kaybee under direction of Frank Borzage, the story being written by Madeline Matzen. The clear, sharp photography by Jack McKenzie contributes a great deal to the attractiveness of the number.

Alma Rubens is an excellent type for Giulia, a child of the poor districts of Naples, who finds herself marked by the agent of a criminal society to be "his woman." She has fine, expressive features, a pair of wonderful black eyes, and the close-up has no terrors for her. If anything, she gains by the nearer view. Her dramatic instinct is also true to form. She has the advantage of an excellent supporting cast, Charles West appearing as her artist guardian, Francis McDonald as the sinister Tony Cafarelli, Naida Lessing and Tote Ducrow as her parents, Dick Rosson as her hunchback friend, and Emory Johnson as her lover.

The story, which opens in picturesque Naples and then moves to Paris, is an absorbing one. The girl, after the death of her hunchback protector at the hands of Tony, flees from Naples. She finds a friend in LaFarge, who gives her a convent education. His friend, Duke De Chaumont, falls in love with the girl, but Tony appears on the scene and claims her. The reappearance of Tony is one of the best dramatic bits we have seen in the films for a long time. The close, where the girl is reunited with her lover, also has been skillfully handled.

The subject is one that would seem destined to succeed wherever shown.

"THE LIAR"

Virginia Pearson Presented by Fox in the Biggest Lie Ever Set to Continuity.

Reviewed by Walter K. Hill.

WE CONFESS, at the outset, that we have not seen all the mean men in motion pictures—but certainly the meanest man we ever saw was impersonated by Edward F. Roseman, in support and persecution of Virginia Pearson during the unreeling of "The Liar" in the Fox projection room. Here is a man who loved a girl so much that he made her as miserable as he could through five reels of Katherine Kavanaugh's story; persecuted her by his hateful presence and wound up by trying to convince the girl that she carried, in her blood, a strain of "tincture de negro."

In time to straighten matters out the villain is confronted and well thrashed by the girl's husband, and when the girl does a bit of suicidal "acting," confesses that he has lied. In a scuffle for the possession of a pistol the girl had found in a convenient desk-drawer, the villain is shot and definitely killed. The ruse practiced by the wife is a neat trick of direction and puts a bit of surprise into the closing scenes. And when it is all over the observer realizes out of what little substance may some moving picture plots be fabricated—for there is much more action than story in "The Lie."

The showing was held the morning after Anna Held's funeral, and there was a bit of unannounced realism in seeing Miss Held's daughter, Liane Held Carrera, playing an ingenue role, and playing it very well indeed. Very likely the "Carrera" will now drop from the girl's billing, and as Liane Held, daughter of Anna Held, her name should give extra advertising value to "The Lie." The demands of art upon Virginia Pearson are not so impelling that exhibitors need have compunctions in giving Liane Held's name some prominence. Miss Pearson will bring many other Fox productions that will be more to her histrionic credit, although one must not infer that she has not made the most of her every opportunity in "The Lie."

"OUR MRS. McCHESNEY"

Ethel Barrymore Wholesome and Amusing in Screen Version of Edna Ferber Stories.

Reviewed by Edward Weitzel.

THE magazine reading public know all about Emma McChesney and her creator, Edna Ferber. Last season the celebrated traveling saleswoman was transferred to the stage, with the help of George V. Hobart, and Ethel Barrymore was her worthy representative. The Metro Picture Corporation has now brought out a screen version of the stories that is quite as entertaining as the stage work. Ethel Barrymore is still the same wholesome and amusing embodiment of Emma McChesney and continue to endow the lady with a depth of feeling and refinement that add largely to her popularity. The business atmosphere that is seldom absent from the plot is so much a part of our modern life and exhibits human nature in so many different phases it is bound to have a strong appeal. While not exceptionally impressive on its dramatic side, "Our Mrs. McChesney" combines more than sufficient entertaining qualities to make it a success with any level headed spectator.

Ralph Ince directed the production. The result of his efforts is a credit to his reputation. The story is not at all complicated. Its first big incident is Emma McChesney's discovery that her son Jack has married a pretty young actress and raised a twenty-dollar check to one hundred and twenty in order to pay for the honeymoon. The mother's good sense in handling the situation starts the young couple off on the right track and leaves her free to tackle a new problem when she finds out that the firm of T. A. Buck is bankrupt. Emma's invention of a new skirt and her struggle to put it on the market occupies a large share of the rest of the action.

The leading parts among the supporting company are cleverly played by Huntley Gordon, Wilfred Lytell, Lucille Lee Stewart, John Daly Murphy, William H. St. James, Walter Percival and George Trimble.

"THE EAGLE'S MATE"

Paramount Reissues Story of Mountain Moonshiners with Mary Pickford.

Reviewed by Louis Reeves Harrison.

THIS is the story of a mountain clan formed largely of the Morne family, organized to pursue an illegal trade as distillers of the whiskey known as moonshine. Whether or not it will be acceptable to the American people at a time they are engaged in cleaning up even legalized distillers remains to be seen. The chief attraction of the story is not the materials used, for they were long ago outworn, but there is redemption in Miss Pickford's acting and in many of the outdoor scenes shown.

The moonshiners rescue their leader from jail by force, but one of their wounded is left with a Mrs. Breckenridge, who was a Morne before she was married. She has with her a niece named "Anemone," who is courted by Lancer Morne in secret and is carried off to the clan headquarters by Fisher Morne. These two men have a struggle for the girl which is won by Lancer, the more refined of the two, but he now has little Anemone in his power and uses cave methods to terrify her into marriage. She yields when a minister comes along, but with the understanding that she is to be "a wife in name only" until Lancer wins her love. When Lancer and the clan are in danger of being brought to justice she decides to save him and the whiskey-making clan and the story ends with her yielding to his embrace.

"MISS MISCHIEF-MAKER"

General Film Releases Five-Reel Oakdale Production Featuring Gloria Joy.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THIS five-reel Oakdale production introduces Gloria Joy in another of her interesting child roles, and a great deal of humor crops out as the story progresses. She plays the part of Sallie O'Brien, a child of the streets, who sells newspapers for a living. Her mother is very ill and dies during the early part of the story.

Sallie is an impish child, full of all sorts of tricks, but the fun is always uppermost. Gloria Joy's round, innocent countenance aids her in "putting over" many a prank that might seem annoying in some children; in other words she has a way with her and a very agreeable one. In this number she is called upon to play tricks that put her in a class with Peck's Bad Boy, but they are harmless and so laughable that she is readily forgiven.

The plot is of slight texture, but answers the purpose. After her mother's death the child is adopted temporarily by the keeper of a boarding house who makes her wait on the table and continue to sell papers as well. Later a Mr. Wilson, who had seen her selling papers, takes her into his home. Here she takes a hand in the daughter's love affairs. The daughter, Marjorie, is of a romantic turn and Sallie induces the son of the former boarding house keeper to pose as a visiting duke. In the course of time the deception is exposed.

In the assisting cast are Nell Saalman, Ruth Lackaye, Edward Jobson, Edward Saunders, Ethel Pepprell, Albert Rockett and Charles Dudley. Sherwood McDonal directed.

"HER MAN."

Six-Reel Pathe Special Feature A Strong Story of Kentucky Mountains.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

THE popular novel by Charles Neville Buck, entitled "The Battle Cry" has yielded strong material for this screen story in six reels. The production which was made by the Advanced Motion Picture Corporation, under direction of Ralph Ince, and is being released by Pathe, is in every sense an unusual one, and the slow, leisurely development only serves to accentuate the powerful dramatic effect of the final reel. Seldom does a screen feature achieve the convincing and stirring effects found at the close of this subject.

Elaine Hammerstein is cast as the heroine, Juanita Holland, and gives the role a quiet, forceful rendition. W. Lawson Butt, as the mountaineer hero, "Bad Anse" Havey, is an excellent type for this part. The other roles are of minor character, but fit in well with the story, one of the best being that of Charleton Macy as "Good Talbot."

This production differs from the ordinary mountain feud story, if not in subject matter at least in general effectiveness. It is not the usual run of loosely constructed action of a vehement, gun-shooting type, though there is plenty of that when the time comes. Rather, in this instance, the story proceeds to set forth something of the real life of the mountaineers in a sympathetic, understanding way. We follow the course of the heroine, who goes into the mountains to serve these people, with close interest. And when the dramatic moment comes when she throws off her years of civilization to fight with and for "her man," a real thrill of appreciation goes through the observer.

The number is unusually strong.

"THE POWER AND THE GLORY."

Five-Reel World-Picture Features June Elvidge In Mill Town Story.

Reviewed by Robert C. McElravy.

DESPITE certain crudities of construction visible in this number, it tells a story that is at times intensely interesting. There is more thought in it than is found in the average tale, and some excellent character touches. June Elvidge is at home in the part of Jonnie Consadine, the mountain girl who goes to a mill town to get funds with which to pull her family out of debt. Ned Burton is perhaps the strongest character in the production; his work as the scheming Pap Himes is very good throughout. Frank Mayo plays the hero; Clay Clement plays the villain, and other roles are in good hands.

The location and settings are in conformity with the story itself, the mountain views being attractive, though not always clearly photographed. But the scenes in the boarding house and mill town generally are much better than are usually shown. The mill town atmosphere is very strongly suggested.

The story was adapted by Hamilton Smith and Harry O. Hoyt from a novel by Grace MacGowan Cooke, and was directed by Lawrence C. Windom. It gives evidence of having strong plot material to draw upon, and even with certain weaknesses of construction the production is one that will hold an audience closely.

The story centers about the fortunes of the girl, Jonnie Consadine, who comes to the mill town. She is befriended by the hero and taken into a girl's "Uplift" society. The marriage of her mother to Pap Himes, who immediately puts the small children to work in the mills, is a well-handled feature. The action is good and keeps the interest alive, but the picture of mill town life and the character work generally are the strong features.

"HEART OF THE WILDS"

Elsie Ferguson Excellent in Artcraft Picture of the Canadian Northwest.

Reveiwed by Edward Weitzel.

EDGAR SELWYN'S stage success, "Pierre of the Plains," is the source of the Artcraft picture, "Heart of the Wilds," of which Elsie Ferguson is the star. The scenario is by Charles Maigne, and Marshall Neilan directed the production. Important changes in the construction of the story were necessary in order to bring the character of Jean Galbraith into a stellar position. Pierre, the devil-may-care French Canadian who dominated the original, has been written down and made the "heavy" of the cast.

Taken on its own merits, "Hearts of the Wilds" is a colorful romance of the Canadian Northwest, finely played by Elsie Ferguson and her support. Its love story has the combination of strong passion and tenderness that wins the sympathy of every good man and woman, and the character drawing and piecing together of incident are done skillfully. The locations have been chosen with keen judgment. They are all out of the ordinary, and most of them are rarely striking and picturesque. The spirit of the tale is reflected in the rugged expanses of untamed nature that serve as a background.

The love of Sergeant Tom Gellatly for the daughter of Peter Galbraith, a storekeeper near the Canadian border, who is not above turning a dishonest penny by selling liquor to the Indians, furnishes the main interest of the story. Jean has a brother of the reckless sort, who is greatly attached to her. An Indian chief named Gray Cloud helps to trap the elder Galbraith at liquor selling, and also angers Val Galbraith by wanting Jean for his squaw. The young fellow kills him in a sudden fit of rage, and it becomes the mounted policeman's duty to arrest the murderer. Sergeant Tom and Jean are torn between conflicting emotions, love and duty both struggling for the mastery. The finish brings them to the right understanding.

Aside from Elsie Ferguson and her consistently human and winsome impersonation of the heroine, Joseph Smiley as Peter Galbraith, Matt Moore as Val, Escamillo Fernandez as Pierre, Thomas Meighan as Sergeant Tom Gellatly and Sidney D'Albrook as Grey Cloud deserve more than a passing word of praise.

General Film Company.

THE FOURTH OF JULY IN PARIS.—This official Red Cross compilation of views, shows the American troops marching in Paris on July 4; also the exultant Parisian crowds, cheered and inspired by the presence of our men. It is a subject that will rouse any audience. Views of Washington's statue and the new Avenue du President Wilson are included.

MISS MISCHIEF MAKER (Oakdale).—An amusing five-reel juvenile subject, featuring Gloria Joy as an impish but lovable child. There are many laughable pranks in this number, which is certain to please the average audience immensely. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE MARQUIS AND MISS SALLY (Broadway Star Feature).—A two-reel O. Henry subject, directed by Allen Watts. This tells a typical Western story of the O. Henry type and has a pleasing humorous touch. The plot concerns a girl masquerading as a cowboy, who marries the "Marquis," who, while given this title in jest, turns out to have a right to it. The cowboy fun is of the best quality; the plot, while not of the strongest, is entertaining.

Bluebird Photoplays, Inc.

THE LOVE SWINDLE, Aug. 5.—A five-part adaptation of a story by Rex Taylor which has been produced by Jack Dillon in an artistic fashion with Edith Roberts in the stellar lead. The production which lives up to its title is reviewed elsewhere.

PLAYTHINGS (Bluebird), Aug. 12.—A five-part adaptation of the Sidney Toler play featuring Fritzie Brunette. The production will not be a particularly enjoyable one excepting to the more ordinary audienee, and is often lacking in artistic detail. It is the story of a girl who loved not wisely but too well. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Fox Film Corporation.

THE LIAR.—Virginia Pearson is star in five reels of story that deals largely with the villain's work in trying to tincture the blood of the heroine with negro strain. Of course it's all a lie, and the audience knows it, and it is this knowledge that will make the observer sit patiently through the operation of finally ridding the story of the villain. In the supporting cast is Liane Held Carrera, daughter of Anna Held. Much value should come to exhibitions of "The Lie" if the "Carrera" should be dropped from the girl's name and she were billed as Liane Held, daughter of the recently deceased French singer and actress of world renown.

Greater Vitagraph.

THE CHANGING WOMAN, Aug. 19.—An O. Henry product with Hedda Nova and Frank Glendon featured, this five-part picture has a South American background and much of its famous author's clever story telling. David Smith was the director. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

Famous Players-Lasky Corporation.

ON THE QUIET (Paramount), Sept. 1.—A splendid five-reel adaptation of Augustus Thomas' famous stage farce, with John Barrymore in the leading role, assisted by a strong cast. The screen version begins quietly but works up to a laughable climax and in some respects excels the original. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE GREAT LOVE (Artcraft).—The latest D. W. Griffith production is a war story told in about six reels. Cast, production and story make it a fine picture. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

HEART OF THE WILDS (Artcraft), Sept. 1.—Elsie Ferguson gives her usual fine performance in this five-part story of the Canadian Northwest, made from Edgar Selwyn's stage play, "Pierre of the Plains." The picture is good from every point of view. A longer review is printed on this page.

Metro Pictures Corporation.

OUR MRS. McCHESNEY (Metro), Sept. 9.—Ethel Barrymore has the title role in the screen version of the Edna Ferber stories. The picture is exceptionally entertaining. It is reviewed at length on another page of this issue.

IN JUDGMENT OF, Aug. 12.—A five-part production made from a story and scenario by George D. Baker, and directed by Will S. Davis. The picture is based on a splendid situation which has been ably handled. The featured members of the cast are Anna Q. Nilsson, Franklin Farnum and Herbert Standing. A full review will be found elsewhere.

Mutual Film Corporation.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 48, Aug. 13.—In this issue will be found a number of attractive scenes including a group of returned wounded soldiers being visited and congratulated by Secretary Baker at Washington, a baseball game at the Great Lakes Training Camp, riveting ships and a diver going below to accomplish an underwater job as well as other stirring scenes.

SCREEN TELEGRAM NO. 46 (Mutual), Aug. 11.—Interesting items of this issue include scenes showing the redeeming of coal from the river at Mauch Chunk, Pa., the launching of the "Quistonck," the first ship from Hog Island, sponsored by Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, installing a telephone system at the front, a lesson in wigwagging and heliographing, and various other events of note.

A HOOSIER ROMANCE (Mutual), Aug. 18.—A five-part adaptation of James Whitcomb Riley's poem of the same name. It was made by the Selig Polyscope company and features Colleen Moore with Thomas Jefferson. The production is clean and quaint, and is pleasing, but for the fact that it is a trifle longer than the story allows. A full review will be found elsewhere.

HER FRIEND THE ENEMY (Strand), Aug. 27.—A pleasing comedy featuring Elinor Field with Cullen Landis. In this number the girl friends of the heroine bet her that she cannot masquerade as a man

Talbot Sturgis, a Broker.....A. J. Herbert
Larry O'Malley, a Poet..William Davidson
Emile Kremer, a German Spy, Benjamin Deely
O'Leary.....Alfred Hickman

Directed by Chester Withey.

The Story: Polly Marsden, compelled by her father to make a choice between O'Malley, a poet, and Sturgis, a broker, announces she will start out in her racing car with an hour's handicap, and will marry the first one to capture her. After a short while she changes clothes with her maid and starts back home in a motorboat, then hires a taxicab, and, en route to a railway station, meets Mason, a wealthy secret service agent. On the train she attracts the attention of a German spy, and Mason decides to follow her. After various complications she meets the spy at a wireless station, unmasks his plot, and is captured by Mason. Sturgis and O'Malley arrive and seek to claim her, but she refers to Mason, saying she would wed the first man to capture her. Nothing loath, Mason takes her in his arms.

Feature Billie Burke as Polly Marsden and Thomas Meighan as Colby Mason.

"LAWLESS LOVE"

William Fox Presents Jewel Carmen in a Story of Furious Fighting and Desperate Escapades.

Cast.

LaBelle Geraldine.....Jewel Carmen
Black Jim.....Henry Woodward
Freddie Montgomery.....Edward Hearn

Directed by Robert Thornby.

The Story: A theatrical company is stranded in the West, and Geraldine, the leading lady, persuades her dancing partner, Freddie, to impersonate Black Jim, a notorious bandit, hoping to capture him and win the reward offered. The real bandit, however, appears, shoots Geraldine in the hand, takes her to his cottage, and his gang tries to make love to her. Freddie shows a yellow streak, while Jim protects her. In a row, the cabin is set on fire, and Jim and Geraldine dash through the flames to safety. Her love reforms Jim, and he tells her there is no joy in lawless living or loving.

Feature Jewel Carmen as LaBelle Geraldine and Henry Woodward as Black Jim.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Beautiful Woman in Imminent Peril of Life and Honor Brings Quick Wit Into Victorious Play.

Bad Man Risks Death to Save Girl Who Sought His Life.

Advertising Angles: Play up the star if she is a favorite with your patrons. For newspaper work offer the suggestion of the stage dancer when a band of bandits fight for her possession and her dancing partner proves a coward. Give the premise without the climax, and paint the situation vividly. For a throwaway try, "Girl! Did you ever have just one man fight for you? Think what it would be if a whole bunch of outlaws struggle for your favor! See 'Lawless Love' at (house) tonight."

Advertising Aid: One, three and six sheets, two styles of each. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Announcement slide. Cuts, mats and press sheets (cuts are made on special order at rate of 20 cents per column; mats and press sheets are mailed gratis).

Tom tells the Mounted Police that he accidentally shot himself. A cowboy is forced by Val to confess that he murdered the Indian, and Jen nurses Tom back to health.

Feature Elsie Ferguson as Jen Galbraith and Thomas Meighan as Tom Gellatly.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Pictures that Recall the Wilderness and Thrill with Excitement.
Gripping Narrative of Adventure in the Great Canadian Wilds.
Life and Adventure with the Canadian Mounted Police.
Love Struggles with Duty in Battling for the Law of Life.
Elsie Ferguson in Her Latest and Greatest Screen Success.

Advertising Angles: Capitalize Miss Ferguson's success in earlier play at your house, and tell that in this she has a vivid role which she handles admirably. In your newspaper work use such catch-phrases as, "Pistol bullet was Cupid's dart," "Shot man she loves to save her brother." Play up the fact that Miss Ferguson has an entirely new style of character to play, and get your readers interested to the point of coming to see how well she will play it.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. One 24-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Cuts from one to three columns on star and production. Advertising lay-out mats. Slides. Press book.

"THE GREEN GOD"

Greater Vitagraph Presents Harry Morey and Betty Blythe in the Odd Story of a Stolen Chinese Idol and the Way It Found Its Home Again.

Cast.

Owen Morgan.....Harry Morey
Muriel Temple.....Betty Blythe
Major Temple.....Arthur Donaldson
Robert Ashton.....George Majeroni
Limin.....Bernard Siegel
McQuade.....Robert Gaillard
Priest of Buddha.....Joseph Burke

Directed by Paul Scardon.

The Story: Major Temple vainly tries to purchase of the priests the Green God he sees on a visit to China. He commissions Robert Ashton to get it for him, promising him the hand of his daughter in marriage. Ashton steals the idol, and brings it to the Morgan home, demanding a cash bonus as well as the girl. Temple refuses, and vows that Ashton shall not leave the house alive unless he delivers the god. Muriel goes to his room that night to plead with him for release from the promise, but he is obdurate. In the morning he is found dead. Doors are locked, and the only clue is Muriel's handkerchief, which she dropped. She is suspected, as is Temple, but she is saved by Morton after stirring scenes in a Chinese temple to which he has been lured.

Feature Harry Morey as Owen Morgan and Betty Blythe as Muriel Temple.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Brave Girl Defies Father Who Would Barter Her for Gold and False Idols.
Curio Hunter Searches the World and Finds Greatest Curio is His Own Daughter.
Oddly-Conceived Photoplot Will Hold Attention by Mysterious Impulse.
Novelty in Photoplaying Provides Gripping Entertainment.

Vitagraph Presents Harry Morey and Betty Blythe in Gripping Photodrama.

Advertising Angles: The title and story lend themselves to a teaser campaign with such questions as, "What would you do with a Green God?" "Would you sell your daughter for a Green God?" etc. If you can pick up some old casts on the Billiken order paint them green, and use them to dangle from window cards. With some red and gold paint you can fake a shrine for the lobby for the god, using incense to help the ballyhoo on showing days. Before you begin your campaign post a Chinese announcement in the lobby, asking people to watch for the translation.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Window cards. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Heralds. Slides. Plan book. Press sheet.
Released September 2.

"A BURGLAR FOR A NIGHT"

Paralta Plays, Inc. Presents J. Warren Kerrigan in a Story that Starts in Hong Kong and Ends in the Whirl of New York.

Cast.

Kirk Marden ..... J. Warren Kerrigan
Daniel Marden ..... Robert Brower
James Herrick ..... Charles French
Wilbur Clayton ..... Herbert Prior
William Neal ..... William Elmer
Janet Leslie ..... Lois Wilson
Maggia, Janet's maid, Lydia Yeamans Titus
Ruby Fallon ..... Arma Roma

Directed by Ernest Warde.

The Story: Kirk Marden brings home from China William Neal, a man who has helped him in a row with the natives. He finds his father ill and in great distress because a raid is being made upon the railroad which he controls. Kirk promises him to get him back the road. The operations are being conducted by James Herrick, the president of the road, and Clayton, the road's attorney, who is engaged to Herrick's niece, Janet, who Kirk rescued as his yacht came into port. Neal takes Kirk to a thieves' college, where he learns to crack safes, and he goes to Herrick's to look into the safe there. Janet interrupts, and Kirk abducts her. Neal advises that he marry her, since a wife cannot testify against her husband. A fake marriage is provided for, and Janet returns to her uncle to announce her marriage, though she does not know that it was Kirk who married her. Just then Kirk walks in to denounce Herrick, and Janet announces him as her husband. There is a clash of wills in which Kirk is victor, and the plotters abandon their attack upon the road, while Janet and Kirk plan to ratify their marriage.

Feature J. Warren Kerrigan as Kirk Marden and Lois Wilson as Janet Leslie.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Love Laughs at Bolts, Bars and Combination Safes.
Sensational Outcome of a Street Fight in Hong Kong.
How Wall Street Magnate Was Saved from Ruin by His Burglar Son.
Promoting Science Out of Safe-cracking and Love-making.
Odd Photoplot Holds Attention Through Novel Arrangement of Episodes.
Paralta Photoplays Offer a Genuine Novelty in Photoplots.

Advertising Angles: Play up Kerrigan pictorially and in your advertising, and tell that he has become an expert safe breaker. Use such lines as, "See Warren Kerrigan crack a safe in 'A Burglar for a Night' at (house and date)." Announce him in a teaser campaign as "J. Warren Kerrigan, G. S. B.," and later explain that the initials stand for "Graduate Safe Blower." If you can borrow a prop or second-hand safe use it for a lobby display, telling that Kerrigan can open a safe like that with one hand tied behind him. Use the abduction as a side angle for one advertisement.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.

"'TILL I COME BACK TO YOU"

Jesse L. Lasky Presents Cecil De Mille's Newest Production with Bryant Washburn, Florence Vidor and Other Favorites.

Cast.

Captain Jefferson Strong, Bryant Washburn
Yvonne ..... Florence Vidor
Karl Von Krutz ..... G. Butler Clonbough
King Albert ..... Winter Hall
Jacques ..... Georgie Stone
Susette ..... Julia Faye
Margot ..... Lillian Leighton
U. S. Colonel ..... Clarence Geldart
Rosa ..... May Giracci
Rosa's Father ..... C. Renfeld
Stroheim ..... W. J. Irving
Hans ..... F. Butterworth

Directed by Cecil B. DeMille.

The Story: Yvonne, a young and beautiful Belgian girl, has married Karl Von Krutz, a German. When war breaks out and Belgium is invaded he discloses himself to her as a spy, and joins the colors. The time passes, and America comes into the war. Captain Jefferson Strong is detailed to enter the German lines to destroy a liquid fire base. He assumes the uniform and papers of Von Krutz, and is permitted to arrange a pretended escape with other German prisoners to divert suspicion. Inside the Hun lines he is decorated and given a furlough. He goes to the Von Krutz farm, where he locates the storage place for the explosive, and causes it to be mined from the American lines, but to save the lives of Yvonne and sixty-five young orphans she is caring for he cuts the wires and averts the explosion. He is tried by court martial, but freed at the plea of King Albert, and the death of Von Krutz opens the door to romance.

Feature Bryant Washburn as Captain Jefferson Strong and Florence Vidor as Yvonne.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Here's a War Play Without the Horrors of War with All the Thrills of Victory.
Bryant Washburn Star of Romantic Love Story with War Thrills.
Soul-Stirring Incidents with Thrills of War and Victory.
Sensational Episodes and Gripping Scenes Hold Tense Attention.
Latest Artcraft Feature Has Bryant Washburn as Dashing Hero.

Advertising Angles: Play up Bryant Washburn as the star if he is liked by your patrons, but also point out strongly that these special DeMille productions to which the director gives his name are first of all better than usual stories, with a good ensemble. You might even go so far as to predict that these are the first stories of the future in which the care in directing is more important than the star

"MONEY MAD"

Goldwyn Presents Mae Marsh, "The Girl with a Thousand Personalities," in One of the Strongest Plays in Which She Has Yet Been Seen.

Cast.

Elsie Dean.....Mae Marsh
William Gavin.....Rod La Rocque
Martin Ross.....John Sainpolis
Sima.....Macey Harlam
Rev. Wm. Gavin.....Alec B. Francis
Fanette.....Corinne Barker
Mrs. Ross.....Florida Kingsley

Directed by Hobart Henley.

The Story: Martin Ross, step-father of Elsie Dean, has married for money. He is devoted to the occult, and has in his household a Hindu servant, Sima, who is in part his master. Sima contrives the death of Mrs. Ross. Elsie is sent to school after her mother's death, and on her return finds Ross completely under the domination of Sima and a woman named Fannette. He taunts Elsie with eating the bread of charity. Elsie, with the aid of Billy Gavin, a childhood sweetheart, preys upon Ross' credulity and traps the trio into confession that brings with it drastic punishment and restores her to her own.

Feature Mae Marsh as Elsie Dean and Rod La Rocque as William Gavin.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Intensified Interest in the Life of a Girl Who Lived and Loved in a House of Lies.
Quick Wits and True Love Triumph Over Intrigue and Conspiracy.
Crime Committed for the Almighty Dollar Avenged by Pretty Girl.
Pretty Girl Detective Outwits and Captures Hardened Criminals.
Here's a New Kind of a Detective Story with Surprise Finish.
Conspiracy and Intrigue Frustrated and Exposed by Clever Girl Detective.

Advertising Angles: You can cash in most surely through the use of the star, but you can also win new interest among strangers by attractively presenting the sketch of the story. Recall the many frauds practised by pseudo occultists, and tell that in this play Miss Marsh shows how a clever girl can defeat them. Study the advertising plans offered in the press sheet. They cover the subject amply.

Advertising Aids: One one-sheet, two three sheets, one six and one 24-sheet. Rotogravure one-sheet. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Coming and current slides. Advertising and scene cuts. Photographic line-cut copy for ads. Press book.

"A LAW UNTO HERSELF"

Paralta Plays, Inc. Presents Louise Glaum in a Story of France That Begins Long Before the War and Ends with the German Occupation.

Cast.

Alouette DeLarme (Von Klassner), Louise Glaum
Kurt Von Klassner.....Samuel DeGrasse
LeSieur Juste DeLarme..Joseph J. Dowling
Bertrand Beaubien.....Edward Coxen
Stephanie.....Irene Rich
Fleurette D'Hermonville.....Elvira Weil
Fritz Von Klassner.....Roy Laidlaw
Bertrand Von Klassner (age 10), Burwell Hamrick
Bertrand Von Klassner (age 20), George Hackathorne
Bertha Von Klassner.....Peggy Schaffer
Old Servant.....Jess Herring

Directed by Wallace Worsley.

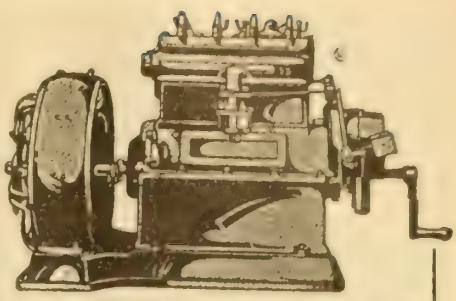
The Story: In the Champagne district of France twenty odd years ago, Juste De Larme, a prosperous wine grower, forces a marriage between his daughter, Alouette, and Kurt Von Klassner, a Prussian. Alouette has already married Bertrand Beaubien, her father's overseer, and does not know that it was Kurt who caused Bertrand's death. The years pass, and under Kurt's care the vineyards prosper. No one dreams that the Prussian overseer is even then preparing gun emplacements for German guns in the vineyards. When the war breaks out Kurt returns to Germany, but their son, in reality the son of Alouette and Bertrand, enlists in the French army. The Germans take the country, and Kurt shows them the emplacements. DeLarme is killed, but Alouette is unmolested because she is the wife of Kurt. For a time she is able to protect Fleurette, her son's betrothed, but not for long, and the poor girl is killed by her fiance at her own request to save her from German brutality. It is the harvest time of the devil, and both Fleurette and Bertrand are gathered by the evil sowers.

Feature Louise Glaum as Alouette De Larme and Edward Coxen as Bertrand Beaubien.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Death and Disgrace in the Trail of the Hun Avenged by Loyal Sons of France.
Gripping Story of Prussian Intrigue Foiled by French Bravery.
Side-lights on the World War Reflect Deeds of Heroism.
Love and Loyalty Save Fair Name of French Heroine.
Paralta Photoplays Offer Thrilling Story of Modern France.
Sensational War-Drama with Great Call to Patriotism.

Advertising Angles: Tell your patrons that this is a vivid side light on the world war, but not in itself a war drama. Play up Miss Glaum, and tell that she has an unusually strong role. In the newspaper work hammer on the German atrocities angle. Tell that this is just one of thousands of similar incidents. Try and get the local patriotic societies to attend in a body the opening night if you run two or three days. Do not offer it as propaganda, but as a drama.

Advertising Aids: Two designs each one and three sheets. One six-sheet. Thumbnail and one to three column cuts in electro or mats. Press book.



Released August 19.

The Story: Helen Martin comes West to take a position as ticket seller in some place of amusement. She finds to her horror that she is really intended for a dance hall girl, but she has to accept her fate, as she is helpless. Chick Ward, "a good friend and a bad enemy," attempts to kiss her on her first evening in the dance hall, and is repulsed. Mae, another of the girls, persuades the proprietor to make Helen a waitress. A love affair ripens between Helen and Chick, who promises to keep away from gambling, but the lure is too strong for him. He catches a man cheating, and turns him out, killing him only when his own life is threatened. Steve Barton, the dead man's pal, is also in love with Helen, and sees in the happening a chance to get rid of a rival, but fate works against him, and the love that was born in a dance hall is crowned in a rectory.

Feature William Desmond as Chick Ward and Josie Sedgwick as Helen Martin.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Thrills of Western Wilds Set in Open Beauties of Great Out-of-Doors.
Love and Life in Country of Straight Shooting and Wild Riding.
Sensational Episodes with Thrills of Wild Western Life.
Love as a Law Unit Itself Baffles Intrigue and Villainy.
Swift-Moving Scenes and Incidents in Interest-Impelling Story.
The Call of the West and Wilds Awakens Sensational Events.

Advertising Angles: Offer this as one of the vivid old-time Western stories. Do not lead your patrons to expect too much from the story. Make a generous newspaper display, but it will scarcely pay to try special stunts.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Special process art heralds. Lobby displays, 11x14 and 22x28. Photographs. Slides. Electros and mats. Triangle Magazine. Press sheet.

Released August 25.

"MERELY PLAYERS"

World-Pictures Presents Kitty Gordon Supported by Many Favorites in a Story that Proves that All the World's a Stage.

Cast.

Nadine Trent.....Kitty Gordon
Rodney Gale.....Irving Cummings
Hollis Foster.....Geo. MacQuarrie
Maude Foster.....Pinna Nesbit
Vera Seynave.....Muriel Ostriche
Sammy Meyers.....John Hines
Mrs. Seynave.....Florence Coventry
Adolph Forman.....Dore Davidson

Directed by Oscar Apfel.

The Story: Nadine Trent, a wealthy widow, is interested in amateur theatricals and has carried her passion to the point of building a private theatre in her home. She and Rodney Gale, a dramatic critic, become estranged because his harsh criticism of her protege has hurt the girl's career. Meantime, Gate is pursued by Mrs. Foster, while Foster annoys Nadine with his attentions. The jealousy of Mrs. Foster leads to a protest to Nadine, who promises to show her Foster in his true light. Mrs. Foster, knowing Gale's love for Nadine, bids him be present, and Nadine, unknown to them, arranges for other friends to be present. When Foster comes she leads him to the darkened stage, and there plays a strongly dramatic scene that electrifies her friends and precipitates a series of astonishing situations.

Feature Kitty Gordon as Nadine Trent and Irving Cummings as Rodney Gale.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Beautiful Kitty Gordon's Back in Another Screen Drama.
Kitty Gordon Gowned in Stylish Modes to Delight the Ladies.
How an Actress Made a Critic Revise His Printed Opinion.
How a Wealthy Society Woman Resorted to Tricks of Love to Win.
Entrancing Story of Stage and Society with Surprise Finish.

Advertising Angles: Make special appeals to the dramatic clubs if you have any in your town. Appeal to the women with the promise that Miss Gordon will show some ravishing new gowns. Subfeature the supporting players. In the newspaper work play up the theme of the play without giving the climax. Use the star's pictures for window work and lobby display.

Advertising Aids: Two styles each one, three and six sheets. Free advance poster. Lobby displays, 8x10, 11x14 and 22x28. Two-color heralds. One and two column cuts. Slides. Press sheet.

Released August 19.

"DAUGHTER ANGELE"

Triangle Presents Pauline Starke and Walt Whitman in an Up-to-the-Minute Story of Spies and Stratagems.

Cast.

Angele.....Pauline Starke
Mary.....Myrtle Rishell
Anthony Brenton.....Walt Whitman
Bob Fortney.....Philo M'Cullough
Frank Cumnige.....Gene Burr
Mrs. Cumnige.....Lulu Warrenton
Jimmy Shea.....Miles McCarthy
Mrs. Brown.....Mrs. Mackley
Hans.....Harold Holland

Directed by William Dowlan.

The Story: Anthony Brenton, though in reality a fine old man, elects to hide his benefactions and assume the mask of a hard-hearted old miser. He blames his benefactions on "Old Jimmie" Shea, an invalid under his protection. Mrs. Cumnige, his housekeeper, covets his fortune, and thinks she can persuade him to marry her. The arrival of Brenton's daughter, from whom he has been estranged, threatens to disrupt her plan, and she contrives to dismiss the daughter. But the granddaughter gains a place in the household as a Belgian refugee, and Mrs. Cumnige plans that she shall marry her son, Frank, before her identity becomes known to the old man. But a spy plot she directs against a possible rival boomerangs and in the end all is straightened out, but not before many vivid happenings.

Feature Pauline Stark as Angele and Walt Whitman as Anthony Brenton.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Mother and Son in Crafty Intrigue for Rich Man's Heritage Baffled by Strange Fate.
Back-wash of War Throws Strange Derelict on Fortune's Shore.
Belgian Refugee Finds Home and Happiness in Strange Circumstances.
Sensational Outcome of a Surprisingly Innocent Adventure.
Filled with Thrills, Photoplay Will Grip the Emotions.

PORTER EQUIPS THEATRE FOR GRIFFITH'S

SUPREME TRIUMPH "HEARTS OF THE WORLD." Installs Two UP to The Minute Type S SIMPLEX PROJECTORS with Robin TIME and SPEED INDICATORS in the 44th St. Theatre, New York. The Marvelous PROJECTION of this greatest picture of modern times is synchronized accurately to the fraction of a second with the beautiful music and effects.

B. F. PORTER, 729 7TH AVENUE, NEW YORK CITY, 11TH FLOOR

Intrigue and Cunning Baffled by Fate's Remorseless Rule.

Advertising Angles: The plot of the story deals largely with the spy scare. The housekeeper thinks that a stranger is the spy who is signaling a submarine, but discovers when it is too late that it is her own son. Make the most of this dual angle in your newspaper work and suggest questions along the lines of, "What would you do if you discovered that your son was a spy and you had already denounced him to the Government?" Hint that this story deals with a situation that has become a reality—the activity of the U-boats in American waters. With a few joints of stove pipe camouflaged with paint and some bits of mirror you can build a periscope for a lobby display that will do good work.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released August 25.

"THE UPHILL PATH"

Frank Keeney Presents the Distinguished Dramatic Star, Catherine Calvert, in the Story of a Woman Who Found the Way to Better Things.

Cast.

Ruth Travers.....Catherine Calvert
Daniel Clarkson.....Guy Coombs
Chadwick Blake.....Dudley Ayers
Howard Mason.....Frank Beamish
Gilbert Hilton.....Charles Craig
James Lawton.....Russell Simpson
Cecily Lawton.....Dorothy Dunn
Mrs. Clarkson.....Winona Bridges
Mrs. Blake.....Gene Lenot

Directed by James Kirkwood.

The Story: Ruth Travers, the young niece and ward of Howard Mason, elopes with Chadwick Blake to escape the importunities of Gilbert Hilton, whom her uncle seeks to force upon her to cover his embezzlement of Ruth's small fortune. Too late she discovers that Blake already has a wife. She drifts with the current of circumstance. But the death of Mason just after he has made a lucky gambling coup leaves her a little money, and she determines to escape. She seeks a small town where the interest of Daniel Clarkson, a minister, wins her the enmity of James Lawton, who seeks a marriage between Clarkson and his daughter. Blake turns up, and Lawton learns the story, denouncing Ruth to the minister, who, when he learns the truth, forgives her, and, knowing that he will lose his pulpit, he enlists, promising to return and marry Ruth when the war is over.

Feature Catherine Calvert as Ruth Travers and Guy Coombs as Daniel Clarkson.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Great Beauty a Lasting Curse to Girl Who Finds Happiness After Many Adventures.
Odd Tricks of Fate Turn Girl's Path from Misery to Happiness.
Thrilling Photo-drama Carries Interest-impelling Plot to Surprise Ending.
Sensational Scenes and Gripping Episodes Thrill and Entertain.
Chase for Happiness Carries Girl Through Sensational Episodes.
Thrills and Excitement Raise Sensational Photoplay to Entertaining Heights.

Advertising Angles: Boom the beauty and stage fame of the star. In your descriptive advertising play up the latter portion of the story, and contrast the action of the minister with the hypocritical behavior of Lawton. Work it carefully to avoid giving offense. Use photos for the lobby display.

Advertising Aids: Two one sheets, two three sheets, one six-sheet. Eight 8x10 black-and-white, eight 11x14 sepia, and one 22x28 colored gelatin photos. One three-column, one two-column, and three one-column production cuts. One each one-column, two-column, and three-column "ad" cuts. Publicity photos and slides.

"BOSTON BLACKIE'S LITTLE PAL"

Metro Presents Bert Lytell in an Interesting Screen Version of Jack Doyle's Famous Red Book Story.

Cast.

Boston Blackie, a gentleman crook, Bert Lytell
Mary, his business partner..Rhea Mitchell
Donald Lavalle.....Howard Davies
Martin Wilmerding.....Frank Whitson
Mrs. Wilmerding.....Rosemary Theby
Martin Wilmerding, Jr.....Joey Jacobs
Jackson, the butler.....John Burton

Directed by E. Mason Kepper.

The Story: Boston Blackie is a gentleman crook whose latest plans threaten the safety of Mrs. Wilmerding's jewels. Mrs. Wilmerding is a neglected wife who finds solace in the company of her little son, but she is beginning to take an interest in Donald Lavalle. To attend a dance with him one evening she refuses to go to their ranch with her husband, and they have their first open quarrel. The coast clear, Blackie is introduced into the house by his sweetheart-confederate. Little Martin interrupts him at his work on the safe. He is sleepless, and insists that Blackie come upstairs and play with him. Blackie gets the little chap to sleep and returns to his work just as Mrs. Wilmerding returns from the dance with Lavalle, who persuades her to elope with him. Then the memory of the kiddie stirs Blackie and—well a safe blower has to be resourceful.

Feature Bert Lytell as Boston Blackie and Joey Jacobs as Martin Wilmerding, Jr., his little pal.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Boston Blackie, Gentleman Crook, with His Own Methods of Robbery Incites Photodrama.
Sensational Scenes and Thrilling Episodes Predominate.
Baffling Plot Reveals Interest-Impelling Detective Story.
Gentleman Crook Revels in Wealth While Society Gasps.
Most Interesting of Detective Plots Baffles the "Screen Sleuths."
Popular Fiction Translated to the Screen in Gripping Episodes.

Advertising Angles: In your advertising recall the Red Book story and tell the theme without disclosing the climax. Work catch-phrases along the lines of, "Always know the husband of the woman you want to elope with. Donald Lavalle had never met Wilmerding—and it made trouble for him." For a window card stamp thumb and finger prints in the border, and tell that Boston Blackie left no finger prints when he cracked a safe as shown in the story.

Advertising Aids: Two each one, three and six-sheets. Press sheet. Filler sheet. Ten-minute novel. Slide. Heralds. Lobby displays, 8x10 sepia, 11x14 sepia, 22x28 colored. Cuts.

Released August 26.

"PLAYTHINGS"

Bluebird Presents Fritzie Brunette in Sidney Toler's Great Stage Success of Similar Title.

Cast.

Marjorie North.....Fritzi Brunette
Claire.....Myrtle Reeves
Trenwith.....Chas. Gerrard
Jerry Thompson.....Phil Dunham
John Hayward.....Lewis Cody
Gwendoline.....Mary Anderson
Jim Carter.....F. A. Turner

Directed by Douglas Gerrard.

The Story: Marjorie accepts the attention of her employer's son, Gordon Trenwith, believing him to be a good man, but is disillusioned when her nameless baby is born. Her friend, Thompson, an inventor, and his wife take care of her. Later, Hayward, a lawyer, seeks to marry her, but she declines. After three years, Marjorie's baby is killed. Thompson consults Hayward regarding his invention, and Hayward learns of Marjorie's whereabouts and goes to her. Marjorie learns that Trenwith is to marry Hayward's sister, and, in order to save her, confesses her shame to Hayward. In a terrific fight between Hayward and Trenwith the latter is killed by his secretary, who fires to avenge an old score in which his wife is concerned. Marjorie now finds happiness with Hayward, who is willing to forgive her.

Feature Fritzi Brunette as Marjorie North and Lewis Cody as John Hayward.

Program and Advertising Phrases: Age-old Question Asked of All Men—Should the Woman Tell?
Sunshine and Gladness Turned Into Sadness—Making a Plaything for Men.
Why Should a Man Live Two Lives While a Woman Must Live One?
Great Sociological Question Treated in Vivid Flashes.
The Question of How Much a Wife Should Tell Her Husband.
Famous Stage Play Wrought Into Vital Screen Problem Drama.

Advertising Angles: Play up the fact that this story is derived from the play of the same name. Present with a minimum of sensation the problem offered Marjorie North when she confesses her own shame to save the sister of the man she loves. Play it up as a social problem rather than as a sensation, and let the sensation end care of itself, as it will.

Advertising Aids: One design each one, three and six sheets. Stock one-sheet of star. Colored and black-and-white lobby displays. Slide. Heralds. Player cuts in three sizes. Scenes cuts one and two columns wide. Press book.

"CONQUERED HEARTS"

George Kleine Presents Marguerite Marsh in the Rialto Production of a Story of a Strange Girl Who Rose Above Weakness.

Cast.

Nora Carrigan.....Marguerite Marsh
Kate Corcoran.....Corinne Uzelle
Miss Brice.....Emma Lowry
Mrs. Carrigan.....Eileen Walker
Dan Murdock.....Richard Turner
Stone.....Harry Myers
The Earl of Barchester....R. Paton Gibbs
Mr. Chalmers.....Dean Raymond
Devlin.....Barney Gilmore
Mr. Carrigan.....Frank Evans
Reddy.....Sheridan Tansey

Directed by Francis J. Grandon.

The Story: Nora Carrigan was a girl born out of her sphere. She rose above the people by whom she was surrounded, and directness of purpose and a high sense of loyalty to herself brought her the crown of dominion of the screen. She has separated from her husband because she thinks her rights have been transgressed, and prepares to marry a titled Englishman, when, in a rush of events, she finds at last that love is more powerful than all other things combined.

Feature Marguerite Marsh as Nora Carrigan.

Program and Advertising Phrases: "Right is Right Since God is God and Right the Day Must Win."—Faber.
The Triumph of Inherent Rights Plus Power of Great Ambition.
Great Screen Drama of Intensive Sociological Problems.
Love Lives Through Chilling Frosts of Indifference.
Victory for Morality and Justice Over Villainy and Intrigue.
Moral Purpose, Unwavering, Wins Victory Over All Opposition.

Advertising Angles: It will be remembered that Miss Marsh is a sister of Mae Marsh, and was originally known to the screen as Marguerite Loveridge, and as such, for a time, was better known than her now more famous sister. For your newspaper advertising bear upon the unique character of Nora, and take for your catchlines phrases suggestive of her odd character. Bear, too, upon the power that love gained at last. Do not try to make too much use of her relationship to Mae Marsh.

Advertising Aids: Two one sheets, two three sheets, one six-sheet, one 24-sheet. Press book. Heralds. 8x10 photos. 11x14 and 22x28 enlargements. One and two column cuts. Announcement slides.

without being detected. She gets a position in a hotel as a bell boy and is taken for a spy by a young man who has previously admired her. In taking a message for a woman in the hotel, which consists of bringing from the repair shop an alarm clock, she is pursued by the young man up and down stairs, and is finally discovered by her friends when he pulls off her wig.

Pathe Exchange, Inc.

OFFICIAL WAR REVIEW, No. 8 (Pathe), Aug. 19.—Another number, full of live war scenes. This first pictures some of the new types of aeroplanes, then shows fighting in the Monte Grappa region of Italy, transportation of food to the front in France, and scenes on the British channel. Clemenceau, War Minister of France, and King George, of Britain, appear in certain scenes.

THE GIRL FROM BOHEMIA (Pathe Play), Aug. 25.—A fine five-reel subject, written by Lois Zellner and directed by L. B. McGill. Irene Castle appears as a girl from Greenwich Village, who goes to a seaport town, where she shocks the residents with her ideas. But the girl herself revises her erratic notions. The story is altogether pleasing in theme and development, and comes to a rousing patriotic finale.

EYES OF JULIA DEEP (American).—Mary Miles Minter, sweetly natural, radiant in the priceless flush of youth and beauty, is star of an exceedingly entertaining photoplay. The five reels are divided into speeding drama and swift comedy—the last two reels being almost exclusively devoted to merrymaking. Theatregoers will have every wish for pleasing entertainment gratified in this clever offering.

Select Pictures.

THE SAVAGE WOMAN, August.—Taken from a French romance by Francois Curel, it gives Clara Kimball Young an opportunity to dress as an untamed girl of the jungle, and to contrast it with a number of Paris gowns. Milton Sills is her leading support. Edmund Mortimer directed the production. A longer review is printed on another page of this issue.

Triangle Film Corporation.

THE GHOST FLOWER (Triangle), Aug. 18.—An exceptional five-reel offering, written by Madeline Matzen and directed by Frank Borzage, with Alma Rubens as the heroine. The story, which is located in Naples and Paris, is dramatic and generally appealing. It has been given excellent presentation. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

William L. Sherry Service.

THE INN OF THE BLUE MOON (De Luxe), Aug. 18.—Doris Kenyon plays twin sisters in this six-part picture, which was written by Louis Joseph Vance. The story is mildly dramatic but entertaining. It is reviewed at length elsewhere.

Universal Film Company.

WHEN PARIS GREEN SAW RED (Nestor), Aug. 26.—A three-reel subject by Geo. E. Marshall and Chas. Wilson, Jr. Neal Hart, Joe Rickson, Janet Eastman and Wm. Gillis are in the cast. The plot concerns an itinerant preacher who visits a western town. He is timid and retiring and much fun occurs at his expense. Later his soul and that of a local bad man become interchanged and he turns tables. This is slightly drawn out, but contains some very diverting western comedy and is quite entertaining in its way.

SMOKED OUT (Universal Special), Aug. 26.—The fourth episode of "The Brass Bullet" covers that period of the story immediately following the murder of Dr. Joy, and includes a struggle for mastery between the young playwright and Rosalind, and Rosalind's uncle and his party. The events are thrilling, and the episode closes with the enforced evacuation of the house in which they have taken refuge of the pursued pair by means of a tar smudge which fills the house with smoke.

BEATING THE LIMITED (Western Railroad Drama), Aug. 31.—A three-reel subject, by George Marshall, featuring Neal Hart, Janet Eastman, Howard Crampton and Joe Rickson. Neal Hart plays a wealthy young man, in love with the daughter of a rich man. The crooked secretary gets a hold on the father, but the hero outwits him. There is plenty of action in this, some of the scenes occurring in the East and some on a ranch. The auto chase after the train is well handled. Not an unusual subject, but enjoyable throughout.

THEIR SPORTING BLOOD (Nestor), Sept. 2.—A comedy number, by Harry Wulze, featuring Pat Rooney, Marcia Moore and others. Rivalry over a flirtatious village belle is the main motive. The horse race is the best feature, but as a whole the number lacks any very strong appeal.

A WHIRLWIND WEDDING (L-Ko), Sept. 4.—This comedy while it may get some laughs has just missed its mark as a burlesque. It follows its story of a courtship and wedding after the fashion of a burlesque on the filming of a moving picture story, and as such is not particularly amusing.

THE EXTRA BRIDEGROOM (Star), Sept. 7.—This is one of the best of the successful light offerings being made by Eddie Lyons and Lee Moran. In this case Lee plays the rejected suitor at a wedding. After the ceremony he has been drowning his sorrows too liberally and inadvertently gets into the newlyweds' home, where some laughable situations arise.

World Film Corporation.

INSIDE THE LINES (World-Picture), Aug. 26.—A splendid six-reel adaptation of Earl Derr Biggers' well-known spy play, put into screen form by Monte M. Katterjohn and directed by David Hartford. Lewis S. Stone has the interesting role of the spy, known as No. 1932, and Marguerite Clayton plays the girl. The number is certain to please. Reviewed at length elsewhere.

THE CROSS RED NURSE (Marie Dressler-World Picture).—A two-reel comedy, featuring Marie Dressler as nurse in a sanitorium. She is mistaken for an heiress by a number of men who proceed to become patients in order to be near her. The humor is rather forced at times, but there are some laughable moments. Marie's heroic treatment of the patients is the best feature.

Simplex

A large telephone company says: "The voice with the smile wins."

How true that is!

Let us apply that to YOUR business: "The screen with the smile wins."

Equally true, isn't it?

War prices have made discriminating buyers, and people won't continue to bring you their money if you make your screen scowl by pictures that quiver or jump or in other ways offend the eye.

But in the best, the most successful Houses, you'll find the Simplex Twins on the job—

—making the screen smile, a smile that is reflected in the faces and hearts of the audience, a smile of satisfaction that makes the House win.

Therefore we say:

The Simplex Twins turn a scowling screen into a smiling one—to your profit

Keep Your Liberty Bonds

HOLD to that bond. You invested to help send the boys across. They are over now, at grips with the German monster. You expect them to hold on—hold on till the last vestige of autocracy is crushed out of him. Then you, too, must hold on—must keep your enlisted dollars invested on the fighting line.

It isn't the hooray of a campaign that wins a war. It's the will to hang on, to make sacrifice today, that tomorrow may bring victory.

And your investment. Those bonds are the safest investment you ever made. Don't be lured into exchanging them for the "securities" of some suave get-rich-quick operator. Big returns may be promised, but the bigger the promised returns the bigger the risk.

If you have to have money, take your bond to any bank and use it as collateral for a loan. There is no security the banker would rather have—nothing on which he will lend more willingly.

Don't use bonds to buy merchandise. The average merchant, accepting your bonds in trade, sells them immediately, thus tending to lower their market price and taking away from the buyer of your bonds the ability to lend a corresponding amount of money to his Government. Liberty Bonds are meant to help your country at War; are meant for investment and to provide an incentive for saving and a provision for the rainy day.

Hold fast to your Liberty Bonds. Hold fast for the sake of the boys "Over There". Hold fast because it is good business.

July 10th, 1918.

Cine-Mundial,
516 Fifth Ave.,
New York, N. Y.

Gentlemen:

It is a pleasure to give praise where praise is merited. We therefore take pleasure in giving this tribute to Cine-Mundial.

When we were first approached regarding space in Cine-Mundial, we were skeptical as to the value of such advertising and several parties took particular pains to point out to us that such advertising would be wasted.

It is with gratitude that we acknowledge the fact that every sale we have thus far made in the Spanish and Portugese speaking film markets of South America, Central America and Europe is directly or indirectly attributable to the influence of Cine-Mundial advertising.

You will be glad to know that we have disposed, on our terms, of the rights to the FIRST NATIONAL MILLION DOLLAR CHAPLIN SERIES to all territories that you cover, except Brazil, Peru, Bolivia and Equador - and that in the short time since we first used your publication.

Very truly yours,

The Right Men in the Right Jobs Will Win The War

THE true American wants to work where he will help win the war. He wants to fit in. America needs the Right Men in the Right Jobs. Only when this comes about can maximum production be obtained to support our armies at the front.

The needs of all war industries can be anticipated and met by the Government if employers and laborers will avail themselves solely of the nation-wide machinery which is at hand. The length of the War depends directly on our Country's ability to supply all War Industry with the best workers the country can produce the moment they are needed.

The U. S. Employment Service is the official bureau of the Federal Government in charge of the distribution of labor. The President has declared that it is the official agency for recruiting and distributing unskilled labor for war work.

PRESIDENT'S STATEMENT

"Industry plays as essential and honorable a role in this great struggle as do our military armaments. We all recognize the truth of this, but we must also see its necessary implications—namely, that industry doing a vital task for the Nation must receive the support and assurance of the Nation."

* * *

"Therefore, I solemnly urge all employers engaged in war work to refrain after August 1st 1918, from recruiting unskilled labor in any manner except through this central agency [the U. S. Employment Service]. I urge labor to respond as loyally as heretofore to any calls issued by this agency for voluntary enlistment in essential industry. And I ask them both alike to remember that no sacrifice will have been in vain, if we are able to prove beyond all question that the highest and best form of efficiency is the spontaneous co-operation of a free people."

WOODROW WILSON.

It has over 500 branches throughout the nation, and 20,000 U. S. Public Service Reserve enrollment agents. Ask the local post office or newspaper for name and address of the nearest representative, or write to the U. S. Employment Service, Washington, D. C.

Those employers in war work who seek to get labor through their own or private recruiting agencies are interfering with the Government's machinery and preferring their interests to those of the nation. Only through strict compliance with the Government's program can the constant, restless shifting of labor from one war job to another, with the consequent diminution in production and efficiency, be prevented.

Above all, the Government urges every man engaged in war work to stick to his job until the Government recommends that he change. Any man not engaged in war work should put himself at the disposal of the nation by registering with the Public Service Reserve. This is a tremendously important duty! The war worker ranks with the fighter in the trenches. He will help beat the Hun.

"We Must Have New Plots"

By FREDERICK PALMER

President Palmer Photoplay Corporation, Los Angeles

PRODUCERS, directors and scenario editors face an actual shortage of good scenarios. Throughout the motion picture world is heard the cry for good material. Able writers, working at top speed, cannot keep up with present requirements. New scenarios must come from somewhere. And they must come now, and continuously. For the public's demand for entertainment must be supplied without intermission.

FREDERICK PALMER
(Creator of the Palmer Plan)

Endless Material is at Hand

It is time for producers to draw upon America's hundred million brains. There lie the stories and ideas—in these hundred million human minds. Thousands of Americans have tried to write scenarios—but rejection slips have dampened their ardor. Rejection slips, unfortunately, have been sent to writers of many a worthy plot because the plots were not constructed according to studio practice. Many a worthy plot has gone back wholly unread, for directors and editors haven't time to wade through reams of amateurish "literature" not suitably written for the screen. And directors and editors cannot be expected to give up precious time telling even the most promising writers how to construct their plots. So here we are—the country's fifth industry feeling a disastrous shortage of material—and with thousands craving the opportunity to supply it.

Good Ideas Plus Good Training

The time has come to draft the ideas of the masses. But, first, training must be given to the budding writers—training that will enable them to write acceptable scenarios. And training facilities are now available for the first time. Under my direction, the Palmer Photoplay Corporation is accepting enrollments of ambitious men and women who earnestly desire to learn how to put their scenario ideas into proper form for the screen.

The Palmer Photoplay Corporation hopes and expects to be successfully helpful to writers and producers. Advisory counsel and frank criticism are given under the Palmer Plan, which should not be confused with so-called schools or correspondence courses in scenario writing.

Our Free Booklet contains letters of indorsement from the foremost men and women in the motion picture industry.

The Palmer Plan assures to producers an elimination bureau where the life of mediocre scenarios will be cut short. The Palmer stamp of approval will be given only to scenarios which merit the attention of a producer.

I cannot tell our whole story in this space but my booklet, "The Secret of Successful Scenario Writing," relates our aims fully. This free book also contains many gratifying letters of indorsement from leaders in the motion picture world. The Palmer Plan is honest, sincere and thorough. Here are a few of our references:

Educate Your Audience to Help Fight Censorship

Introducing a bill providing for the Censorship of Moving Pictures is a favorite indoor pastime in legislative halls throughout the country. Eternal vigilance is the price of the Exhibitor's mere safety if not his success.

Presented in the proper manner, the Censorship of Moving Pictures is just as obnoxious to the Exhibitor's audiences as it is to the Exhibitor. And public opinion aroused in behalf of moving pictures and against their unfair and discriminatory control is the surest weapon to defeat Censorship.

We have prepared a series of nine different stereopticon slides which crystallize the argument against Censorship; one of the slides is shown herewith.

These slides shown repeatedly in any theatre cannot fail to influence public opinion in that locality against Censorship. They will line up the general public on the side of the Exhibitor.

You Ought to Be Showing Them Now! Legislatures Everywhere Are Convening

Set of Nine Slides, carefully packed, will be sent postpaid on receipt of $1.00.

Great Convenience to Every Exhibitor

MR. EXHIBITOR:—Do you realize the CONVENIENCE and ECONOMY offered to you by dealing through the branch offices of United Theatre Equipment Corporation?

We carry the MOST COMPLETE stocks of all your needs at our branch offices.

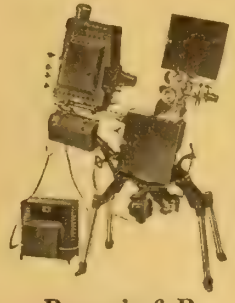
We just took an inventory last month, and it may interest you to know that our moving picture machine stock alone included more than 150 POWER'S 6-B CAMERAGRAPHS.

We can ship a machine from any of our branches within a few hours after receiving your order, thus saving you much time and delay, especially now under existing transportation difficulties.

We have thousands of LENSES—CONDENSERS—LUGS—SWITCHES—SNIPES — TICKETS —SIGNS—and SMALL SUPPLIES and ACCESSORIES on hand at all times.

Our stock of CARBONS is perhaps greater than all other sources of supply put together, so that you may feel safe in securing PROMPT DELIVERY when your needs demand immediate shipment.

We have told you time and again how we carry ONLY THE BEST, and you will find by experience in dealing with us that the best equipment and the highest grade accessories and supplies are the cheapest for you to use.



Our stock of HALLBERG MOTOR GENERATORS and TRANSFORMERS and other apparatus is also complete, and we brag about making PROMPTER SHIPMENT of apparatus of this kind than any other manufacturer or dealer.

We carry GARDINER VELVET GOLD FIBRE SCREENS of several sizes in stock at each of our branches—Therefore, if you make up your mind to buy one of these WONDERFUL screens, you do not have to wait six months until you get it, but WE SHIP PRACTICALLY ON THE SAME DAY YOUR ORDER IS RECEIVED.

It has taken years of experience and more than a year of hard, concentrated effort to bring about the complete establishment of our branch offices under the management of the MOST ABLE PROJECTION ENGINEERS and EXPERTS IN THE WORLD.

We never substitute except with your permission and, when you purchase our goods, ABSOLUTE SATISFACTION IS GUARANTEED OR MONEY REFUNDED.
